IV. He produces his own title first, and then Solomon's, to the crown; both were, undoubtedly, divine; such a title as no monarch on earth can make out; the Lord God of Israel chose them both immediately by prophecy, not providence, v. 4, 5. No right of primogeniture is pretended; Judah was not the eldest son of Jacob, yet God chose that tribe to be the ruling tribe; Jacob entailed the sceptre on it, Gen. 49: 10. The family of Jesse was not the senior house of that tribe; from Judah, it certainly was not, for Shelah was before Pharez; whether from Nahshon and Salmon, is not certain. Ram, the father of Nahshon, had an elder brother, 1 Chr. 2: 9. perhaps so had Boaz, Obed, Jesse; yet, 'God chose the house of my father.' [It was not known till David's time from which family in Judah the Messiah would descend. Scott.] David was the youngest son of Jesse, but God takes whom He likes, and likes whom He makes like Himself, as He did David, a man after his own heart. Solomon was one of the youngest sons of David, yet God chose him to sit on the throne, because the likeliest to build the temple, the wisest and best inclined.

V. He opens to them God's gracious purposes concerning Solomon, v. 6, 7. Thus he declares the decree, that the Lord had said to Solomon, as a type of Christ, Thou art my son, Ps. 2: 7. Of him, God said, as a figure of Him that was to come, 1. He shall build my house; Christ is both the Founder, and the Foundation, of the gospel-temple. 2. I will establish his kingdom for ever. This must have its accomplishment in the kingdom of the Messiah, which shall continue in his a 23:2. Josh. 23:2. 24:1.

---

b 27:16—22.
c 27:1—15.
d 27:25—31.
* Or, cattle.
† Or, and his sons.
e 27:32—34.
‡ Or, eunuchs.
f 11:10, &c.
g Gen. 48:2. 1 K. 1:47.
h 11:1—3. Deut. 17:15,20. Ps. 22:22. Heb. 2:11,12. i 17:1,2. 2 Sam. 7:1. 1 K. 8:47,18.
k 6:31. Ps. 132:3—5,8,14.
l Ps. 99:5. 132:7. Is. 66:1. Lam. 2:1. Acts 7:49.
m 18:7—11. 22:2—5,14.
n 17:4. 22:8. 2 Sam. 7:5—13. 1 K. 5:3. 2 Chr. 6:8,9.
§ Heb. bloods.
o 1 Sam. 16:6—13. 2 Sam. 7:8—16. Ps. 78:68—72. 89:16—27. p 5:2. Gen. 49:8—10. Ps. 60:7. 108:8.
q 1 Sam. 16:1.
r 1 Sam. 16:12,13. Ps. 18:19. 147:10,11.
s 3:1—9. 14:4—7.
t 22:9. 23:1. 29:1.
u 17:14. 1 Chr. 1:8,9. 2 Chr. 1:8,9. Ps. 72: title. 1, &c. Is. 9:6,7.
x 17:11—14. 22:10. 2 Sam. 7:13,14. Zech. 6:12,13. Heb. 3:3,6.
y Heb. 4:5.
z Ps. 89:28—37. 132:12. Dan. 2:44.
a 22:13. 1 K. 6:12,13. 9:4,5. 11:9—13.
‖ Heb. strong. 10. Josh. 1:6,7. 1 K. 2:2—4.
b 1 K. 8:61. 11:4.
c Deut. 4:6. Matt. 5:16. Phil. 2:15,16. Heb. 12:1,2. d Deut. 4:26. 29:10,15. Acts 10:33. e Ps. 119:4,10,11,27,33,34,44. Prov. 2: 1—5. 3:1.
f Deut. 4:1. 5:32,33. 6:1,2.
g Deut. 4:35. 1 K. 8:43. Ps. 9:10. Jer. 9:24. 22:16. 24:7. 31:34. Hos. 4:1,6. John 8:55. 17:3. Acts 17:23, 30. Rom. 1:28. 1 Cor. 15:34. 2 Cor. 4:6.
h Gen. 28:13. Ex. 3:16. 15:2. 1 K. 3:6. Is. 18:2. 89:26.
i 29:9,17—19. 1 K. 8:61. 2 K. 20:3. 22:2. Ps. 101:2. John 1:47.
k 2 Cor. 8:12. 9:7. 1 Pet. 5:2.
l 29:17. 1 Sam. 16:7. 1 K. 8:39. Ps. 7:9. Prov. 17:3. Jer. 11:20. 17:10 20:12. John 2:25. 21:17. Acts 1:24 Heb. 4:13. Rev. 2:23.
m Gen. 6:5. 8:21. Deut. 31:21. Ps. 139:2. Ez. 38:10. n 2 Chr. 15:2. Prov. 2:1—6. Is. 45 19. 55:6,7. Jer. 29:13. Matt. 7:7,8. Jam. 4:8—11. o Deut. 31:16,17. 1 K. 9:6—9. Ezra 8:22. Is. 1:28. Heb. 10:38,39. p 6. 22:16—19. 1 Tim. 4:16.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXVIII. V. 1. Princes.] 27:16—22.—Captains, &c.] 'I. e. those great commanders of 24,000 apiece, mentioned in the beginning of the foregoing ch. . . . The commanders of every one of those thousands, with the centurions, who commanded the several companies of 100.' Patrick. (27 the chief priests and l lem; but it is not ex sion.

15.)—Stewards, &c.] 27:25—31.—Many of tes generally resided with David at Jerusa ly said, that they were present on this occa SCOTT.

11 ¶ Then David gave to Solomon his son, [q] the pattern of [r] the porch, and of [s] the houses thereof; and of [t] the treasuries thereof, and of the [u] upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlors thereof, and of [x] the place of the mercy-seat,

12 And the pattern of all * that he had by the Spirit, of the courts of the house of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, of the treasuries of the house of God, and of [y] the treasuries of the dedicated things:

13 Also for [z] the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all [a] the vessels of service in the house of the LORD.

14 He gave of gold by weight for things of gold, for all instruments of all manner of service; silver also for all instruments of silver by weight for all instruments of every kind of service:

15 Even the weight for [b] the candlesticks of gold, and for their lamps of gold, by weight for every candlestick, and for the lamps thereof; and for the candlesticks of silver by weight, both for the candlestick, and also for the lamps thereof, according to the use of every candlestick.

16 And by weight he gave gold for the [c] tables of shew-bread, for every table; and likewise silver for the tables of silver:

17 Also [d] pure gold for the flesh-hooks, and [e] the bowls, and the cups: and for the golden basins he gave gold by weight for every basin; and likewise silver by weight for every basin of silver;

18 And for [f] the altar of incense refined gold by weight; and gold for the pattern of [g] the chariot of the cherubims, that spread out their wings, and covered the ark of the covenant of the LORD.

19 All this, said David, [h] the LORD made me understand in writing [i] by his hand upon me, even all the works of this pattern.

q 19. Ex. 25:40. 26:30. 39:42,43. 2 Chr. 3:3. Ez. 43:10,11. Heb. 8:5.
r 1 K. 6:3. 2 Chr. 3:4. Ez. 40:8,9,15, 48,49. s 1 K. 6:16—29. 2 Chr. 3:5—10. Ez. 41:13,&c. Heb. 9:2—8.
t 9:26—29. 26:20—27. Luke 21:1.
u 1 K. 6:5,6,10. 2 Chr. 3:9. Neh. 10: 38,39. 13:5. Jer. 35:2. Ez. 41:6,&c.
x Ex. 25:17—22. 40:20,21. 1 K. 6:19. 2 Chr. 5:7. Heb. 9:5.
* Heb. that was with him by.
y 26:26—28. 1 K. 14:26. 15:15,18. 2 K. 16:8. 18:15. z 24:1,&c. 25:1,&c.
a 9:29. Ezra 8:25—30,33.
b Ex. 25:31—39. 1 K. 7:49. 2 Chr. 4:7. Zech. 4:2,3,11—14. Rev. 1:12,20. 2:1. c Ex. 25:23—30. 1 K. 7:48. 2 Chr. 4: 8,19.
d 1 Sam. 2:13,14. 2 Chr. 4:20—22. e Num. 7:13,14. 1 K. 7:48—50. 10:21. f Ex. 30:1—10. 1 K. 7:48.
g Ex. 25:18—22. 1 Sam. 4:4. 1 K. 6: 23—30. Ps. 18:10. 68:17. 80:1. 99:1. Ez. 1:15—24. 10:2,&c. h 11,12. Ex. 25:40. 26:30.
i Ez. 1:3. 3:14,22.

God never casts any off, till they have first cast Him off. Here is one argument peculiar to Solomon; v. 10, 'Thou art to build a house for the sanctuary; therefore seek and serve God, that that work may be done from a good principle, in a right manner, and may be accepted.' 3. The means prescribed in order hereunto, and they are prescribed to us all. (1.) Caution. Take heed; beware of every thing that looks like, or leads to, that which is evil. (2.) Courage. Be strong, and do it. We cannot do our work as we should, unless we put on resolution, and fetch in strength from divine grace.

V. 11—21. As for the general charge David gave his son to seek God and serve Him, the book of the law was, in that, his only rule, and there needed no other; but, in building the temple, David was now to give him three things:

1. A model of the building, because it was to be such a building as neither he nor his architects ever saw. Moses had a pattern of the tabernacle showed him in the mount, Heb. 8: 5. so had David of the temple, by the immediate hand of God upon him, v. 19. It was given him in writing, probably, by the ministry of an angel, or as clearly and exactly represented to his mind, as if it had been in writing. But it is said, v. 12. He had the pattern by the Spirit. The contrivance either of David's devotion, or of Solomon's wisdom, must not be trusted to in an affair of this nature. The temple must be a sacred thing, and a type of Christ; there must be in it, not only convenience, but significancy: it was a kind of sacrament, therefore its contrivance must not be left to man's art or invention; but must be by divine institution. This pattern David gave to Solomon, that he might know what to provide, and might go by a certain rule. When Christ left with his disciples a charge to build his gospel-church, he gave them an exact model of it, ordering them to observe that, and that only, which he commanded. The particular models are here mentioned; Patrick supposes that, among other things, the tabernacle Moses reared, and all its utensils were laid up here; signifying, that, in the fulness of time, all the Mosaic economy, all the rites and ceremonies of that dispensation, should be respectfully laid aside, and something better come in their room. He gave him a table of the courses of the priests, patterns of the vessels of service, v. 13. and a pattern

---

Verses 11—13.

In what way soever this writing was made and sent to David, he gave it to Solomon just before his death: so that nothing was left even to 'the wisdom of Solomon,' but all was done by rule, even to the quantity of metal used in each vessel. (14—18.)—In vain do men of opposite sentiments contend for such uniformity in the circumstances of our worship, under the N. T. seeing it is manifest, that exact, precise, and express rules are nowhere to be found, in respect of every particular.—It is, however, most evident, that to model divine ordinances according to man's imagination, would have been the height of presumption even in Solomon himself. SCOTT.

Verses 14—16.

(M. R.—1 K. 7:48—51.) The candlesticks of silver, and tables of silver, are not elsewhere mentioned, and it is not known to what use they were put. 'The former' . . . (the candlesticks of silver) 'were less, to be carried in their hands from place to place, as there was occasion.' Patrick. It seems there were in the temple several tables of gold for the shew-bread, and the vessels belonging to that part of the stated service. (2 Chr. 4:19.) ID.

Verse 17.

The word, rendered basins, seems to be derived from the atonement made by the blood of the sacrifices, which was received into them till it was sprinkled. (Num. 7:13, 14.) SCOTT. A cut is given of flesh-hooks from the ancient Egyptian monuments. These monuments, repeatedly referred to, have been preserved (even to the colors) in the mild, dry climate of Egypt; and as being such undoubted relics of antiquity, their value in illustration and confirmation of Scripture is becoming more and more manifest. Notes, 2 Chr. 12: 8, &c. ED.

Verse 18.

The phrase chariot means doubtless nothing more than the stand (which was at first the lid of the ark) on which the cherubims were affixed, similarly to the segment on which the figure sits, cut, Ex. 25: 18. which segment, perhaps, had a name in Coptic corresponding to the Heb. here. We have a like word, probably, in the technical term, mounting, cradle, chair, or carriage. ED. It is not absolutely certain, that, amidst the many removals of the ark which had taken place, the cherubim had not been separated from it; and whether Solomon did any thing more than make two others in their stead. SCOTT.

Verse 19.

(11—13.) This comprises all the particulars, mentioned in the pre-

20 ¶ And David said to Solomon his son, [k] Be strong, and of good courage, and do it: [l] fear not, nor be dismayed: for the LORD God even my God, will be with thee; [m] he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work of the service of the house of the LORD.

21 And, behold, [n] the courses of the priests and the Levites, even they shall be with thee for all the service of the house of God: and there shall be with thee, for [o] all manner of workmanship, every [p] willing skilful man, for any manner of service: [q] also the princes and all the people will be wholly at thy commandment.

CHAP. XXIX.

David shows the princes and people what treasures he had prepared for the building and service of the temple, 1—5. After his example, and at his exhortation, they offer liberally, 6—9. He adores and blesses God, and prays for the people and for Solomon, 10—19. The people worship, sacrifice, and feast with joy; and then make Solomon king the second time, 20—22. He reigns in majesty and prosperity, 23—25. David's long and prosperous reign, and happy death, 26—30.

FURTHERMORE, David the king said [a] unto all the congregation, Solomon my son, [b] whom alone God hath chosen, is yet [c] young and tender, and the work is great: [d] for the palace is not for man, but for the LORD God.

2 Now [e] I have prepared [f] with all my might for the house of my God: [g] the gold for things to be made of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and the brass for things of brass, the iron for things of iron, and wood for things of wood; [h] onyx-stones, and stones to be set, glistering stones, and of divers colors, and all manner of precious stones, and marble-stones in abundance.

3 Moreover, because [i] I have set my affection to the house of my God, [k] I have of mine own proper good, of gold and silver, which I have given to the house of my God, [l] over and above all that I have prepared for the holy house,

4 Even three thousand talents of gold, of the [m] gold of Ophir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the houses withal:

5 The gold for things of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and k 10. 22:13. Deut. 31:7,8. Josh. 1:6—9. 1 Cor. 16:13. l Ps. 27:1,2. Is. 41:10,13. Rom. 8:31.

m Josh. 1:5. Heb. 13:5.
n 24: 25: 26:
o Ex. 31:3.
p Ex. 35:25,26,35. 36:1—4. Ps. 110 3.
q 22:17,18. Tit. 3:1.
a 28:1,8.
b 28:5,6. 1 K. 8:19,20.
c 22:5. 1 K. 3:7. 2 Chr. 13:7. Prov. 4:3. Jer. 1:6,7.
d 28:10. 2 Chr. 2:4,5.
e 22:3—5,14—16.
f 2 Chr. 31:20,21. Ec. 9:10. 2 Cor. 8:3. Col. 3:23. 1 Pet. 4:10,11.
g 28:14—18.
h Gen. 2:12. Ex. 28:20. 39:13. Job 28:16. Is. 54:11,12. Rev. 21:18—21.
i Ps. 26:8. 27:4. 84:1,10. 122:1—9.
k 21:24. Prov. 3:9,10.
l 22:4,5,14—16.
m 1 K. 9:28.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

While life continues, it is desirable to spend it in promoting the peace, prosperity, and spiritual good, of those who may remain behind. (Ec. 9: 10. 2 Pet. 1: 12.—15.)—In that monarchy, which God established in Israel, and sanctioned by his approbation, we see no traces of the unalterable right of primogeniture, or of ruling with absolute authority. It may be comfortable to us in a dying hour, to recollect the plans we framed to promote true religion, though we have been unable to accomplish them: hence also we may infer, that we are the chosen and called of God; as such designs prove, that He has given us a heart to account his service a delightful privilege, and to long and love to be employed in it. But, in the nature and measure of our services, we must learn acquiescence in his will, whose choice of us is the source of all our grace, comfort, or usefulness. But we should never forget, that the whole of the salvation for sinners, is of the Lord: the wondrous plan, the great and glorious Redeemer, and redemption, and the revelation of it in the scriptures of truth; the way of access, the ministry of the gospel, the throne of grace also, the public ordinances, the sacramental seals, and every thing pertaining to our reconciliation and walk with God, are from Him; and may not be modelled by human authority. Even mere circumstances, which must be regulated by man's discretion, and in which every society has a right to judge for its willing members, are not to be imposed on our brethren: and we are accountable to God, though not to man, for that judgment and practice which we ourselves form and adopt. We should therefore in every thing be circumspect, and not leave the Scripture in any particular, where it affords us directions; yet we should not endanger the peace of the church, for the sake of minute external regulations. Let us cease from self-confident boastings, and acrimonious controversies. Hitherto much has been amiss in every age, in every state, and in every division of the church: ere long our Prince of Peace, the Builder of the true temple, the Son of God, will come, and set all right SCOTT.

---

ceding vs.—'God made him to understand all this so plainly and distinctly, as if it had been written on his mind, as the ten commandments were on the tables of stone.' Patrick. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXIX. V. 1. Whom alone God, &c.] David by this expression declared, that God had chosen Solomon in preference to the rest of his sons; and that this was the sole reason of his succession to the throne, and not any partial affection of his own towards him. This would tend to satisfy the people, and to induce David's other sons to submit to the divine appointment. ID.

Verses 3—9.

David gave, from his own treasury, about 18,000,000 stg. of gold and silver.—The prosperity of Israel must have been immense, under the reign of David; and it seems there was also much true piety among the people, especially towards the close of his reign. We can scarcely form a conception of the magnificence of the temple and adjacent edifices, about which such immense quantities of gold and silver were employed. (Ez. 41:22.) But 'the unsearchable riches of Christ' excel the splendor of the temple, infinitely more than that surpassed the meanest cottage on earth.—The refined silver seems to have been used, in covering the inner walls of the chambers and other out-buildings; for those of the temple itself were plated with gold. (1 K. 6:21, 22.) Mine own proper good, Heb. (3) rendered a peculiar treasure, Ex. 19:5. special, Deut. 7:6. jewels, Mal. 3:17. (Tit. 2:14.) SCOTT.

With perfect heart, &c. (9) 'This is the virtue which Paul calls aplotes, singleness of heart; which hath respect purely to the service of God, the honor of religion, and the good of the church: 2 Cor. 8:2. 9:11, 13.' (2 Cor. 1:12—14. Eph. 6:5—9.)—'It was a singular comfort to David in his old age to see the people so well disposed, and his exhortation so effectual on their heart.' Patrick. ID.

for all manner of work to be made by the hands of artificers. And [n] who then is willing to [*] consecrate his service this day unto the LORD?

6 Then [o] the chief of the fathers and princes of the tribes of Israel, and the captains of thousands and of hundreds, with the rulers of the king's work, offered willingly,

7 And gave for the service of the house of God, of gold five thousand talents and ten thousand drams, and of silver ten thousand talents, and of brass eighteen thousand talents, and one hundred thousand talents of iron.

8 And they with whom precious stones were found gave them to the treasure of the house of the LORD, by the hand of [p] Jehiel the Gershonite.

9 Then the people rejoiced, for that [q] they offered willingly; because with [r] perfect heart they offered willingly to the LORD: and [s] David the king also rejoiced with great joy.

[Practical Observations.]

10 ¶ Wherefore [t] David blessed the LORD before all the congregation: and David said, [u] Blessed be thou, [x] LORD God of Israel, [y] our Father, for ever and ever.

11 Thine, O LORD, [z] is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and [a] the victory, and the [b] majesty: for [c] all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; [d] thine is the kingdom, O LORD, and thou art [e] exalted as head above all.

12 Both [f] riches and honor come of thee, and thou [g] reignest over all; and in thine hand is [h] power and might; and in thine hand it is to make great, and to [i] give strength unto all.

13 Now therefore, our God, [k] we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name.

14 But [l] who am I, and what is my people, [m] that we should †be able to offer so [q] willingly after this sort? for [r] all things come of thee, and ‡ of thine own have we given thee,

15 For [s] we are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: [t] our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none § abiding.

16 O LORD our God, [u] all this store, that we have prepared to build thee an house for thine holy name, cometh of thine hand, and is all thine own.

17 I know also, my God, that thou [x] triest the heart, and [y] hast pleasure in uprightness. As for me, [z] in the uprightness of mine heart have I willingly offered all these things: and now have I seen with [a] joy thy people, which are ‖ present here, to offer willingly unto thee.

18 O [b] LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, [c] keep n Ex. 25:2—9. 35:5,&c. Num. 7:2,3, 10—14,&c. Ezra 1:4—6. 2:68,69. 7: 15,16.

* Heb. to fill his hand.
o 27:1. Is. 60:3—10. p 26:21,22. Jehieli.
q Deut. 16:10,11. Judg. 5:9. Ps. 110: 3. 2 Cor. 8:3,12. 9:7,8.
r 17. 1 K. 8:61.
s Prov. 23:15,16. Luke 15:6. John 15: 11. Phil. 2:15—17. 4:1,10. 1 Thes. 3:6—9. t 20. 2 Chr. 20:26,27. Ps. 103:1,2. 138:1. 146:2. u 1 K. 8:15. 2 Chr. 6:4. Ps. 72:18,19. Ez. 3:12. Eph. 1:3. 1 Pet. 1:3.
x Gen. 32:28. 33:20.
y Is. 63:16. Matt. 6:9. Luke 11:2. Rom. 1:7. 8:15. Phil. 4:20. 2 Thes. 2:16.
z Dan. 4:30,34,35. Matt. 6:13. 1 Tim. 1:17. 6:15,16. Jude 25. Rev. 4:10, 11. 5:12,13. 7:9—12. 19:1. a 1 Sam. 15:29. Marg. Ps. 98:1. b Job 37:22. Ps. 29:4. 45:3,4. 104:1. 145:12. Is. 2:10. Heb. 1:3. c Gen. 1:1. 14:19,22. Ps. 115:15,16. Is. 42:5. 66:1. Jer. 10:10—12. 27:5. Dan. 4:32,34,35.
d Ps. 97:1. 99:1. 145:1,12,13. Dan. 4:3. Rev. 11:15.
e Neh. 9:5. Ps. 21:13. 46:10. 47:9. 57:5,11. 97:9. Is. 2:11. 12:4.
f Deut. 8:18. 1 Sam. 2:7,8. Job 42:10. Ps. 75:6,7. 113:7,8. Prov. 10:22. Luke 1:51—53. Rom. 11:35,36.
g Dan. 6:26.
h Job 9:19. Ps. 62:11. Is. 43:13. 46: 10. Dan. 5:18—21. Matt. 28:18. John 19:11. Eph. 3:20. Rev. 11:17. i 2 Chr. 16:9. Ps. 18:31,32. 28:8. 29:1,11. 68:34,35. 144:1,2. Is. 45: 24. Eph. 3:16. Phil. 4:13. Col. 1:11.
k Ps. 105:1. 106:1. Dan. 2:23. 2 Cor. 2:14. 8:16. 9:15. 1 Thes. 2:13.
l Gen. 32:10. 2 Sam. 7:18. Dan. 4:30. 1 Cor. 15:9,10. 2 Cor. 3:5. 12:9—11. m Ps. 115:1. Rev. 4:10.
† Heb. retain, or obtain strength.
q 9. Phil. 2:13. Jam. 1:17.
r Gen. 28:22. Ps. 50:10—12. Rom. 11:36. 1 Cor. 16:2.
‡ Heb. of thine hand.
s Gen. 47:9. Ps. 39:12. 119:19. Heb. 11:13—16. 1 Pet. 2:11.
t Job 14:2. Ps. 90:9. 102:11. 144:4. Ec. 6:12. Jam. 4:14.
§ Heb. expectation.
u 14. 2 Chr. 31:10. Ps. 24:1. Hos. 2:8. Luke 19:16.
x 28:9. Deut. 8:2. 1 Sam. 16:7. Ps. 7:9. 51:6. Prov. 16:2. 21:2. Jer. 17:10. Heb. 4:12. Rev. 2:23.
y Prov. 11:20. 15:8,9. John 1:47. z Acts 24:16. 2 Cor. 1:12. 1 Thes. 2:10. a 2. Philem. 7:20.
‖ Heb. found.
b Ex. 3:6,15. 4:5. Matt. 22:32. Acts 3:13. c Deut. 30:6. Ps. 51:10. 119:116,117. Jer. 10:23. 32:39,40. Phil. 1:6,9—11. 1 Thes. 3:11,12. Heb. 13:21.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—9. The due support and scriptural promotion of religion, is always more important, and in many cases more arduous, than the administration of civil government: because the honor of God, and the most essential interests of immortal souls, are concerned in it; compared with which all other interests are trivial. They alone, whom the Lord hath chosen for such a work, will prosper in it; and it is the duty of all to assist by every proper mean in their power.—Strong affection to God, and to all that relates to Him for his sake, will constrain men to the most disinterested, self-denying, and liberal services.—Those who would excite others to consecra e their service to the Lord, must set the example: and then a hint from them will go further, than a labored and eloquent oration from a man, who persuades others to those things, which he himself evidently does not practise.—Our holy joy in God will commonly bear proportion to the willingness, uprightness, and liberality, with which we devote our all to Him.—The bodily pain and infirmities of age, and the chilling hand of death, while they indispose us for all other enjoyments, or separate us from them, cannot preclude or extinguish this, which emulates that of angels, who 'rejoice over one sinner that repenteth.' SCOTT.

(4—7.) 'According to the usual estimates, the treasure accumulated for the temple, would be nearly £1,000,000,000, stg. There may be a corruption or error; we know not the comparative value of the precious metals then, nor of their means of procuring them, nor their degree of purity; several sorts of gold are mentioned in the SS. And if the "talent" here was Syriac, the amount would be only 7,000,000; if Babylonish, 30,000,000; or if the Arabic vers. of 1 Chr. 22:14. is correct, "gold 1000 talents, and silver 1000 talents," this would be 50, to 60 millions. Either estimate brings the amount within the bounds of probability. Eastern kings and princes have, in all ages, been accustomed to lay up vast quantities of gold and silver. Dow (Hist. of Hindostan) mentions princes possessing larger sums than either of the last three estimates. And when we consider David's successful wars with the nations around, we may be satisfied he would have been able to collect very large treasures. See W. Brown and T. H. Horne.' HENRY abr.

Verses 18, 19.

Lord God, &c. (18) or, 'JEHOVAH our Father, the God of Israel. In this view, the words may be considered, as the first instance in Scripture, of God being addressed in prayer, as 'Our Father.' (Matt. 6:9.) This is properly the language of the Spirit of adoption. (Rom. 8:14—17.)—All that treasure, they gave the Lord to build his temple, was his own before; if they had attempted to keep it, death would soon have removed them: so that the only use they could make of it this for ever [d] in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and [*] prepare their heart unto thee.

19 And [e] give unto Solomon my son a perfect heart, to keep thy commandments, thy testimonies, and thy statutes, and to do all these things, and to build the palace, for [f] the which I have made provision.

[Practical Observations.]

20 ¶ And David said to all the congregation, [g] Now bless the LORD your God. And all the congregation blessed the LORD God of their fathers, and [h] bowed down their heads, and [i] worshipped the LORD, and the king.

21 And they [k] sacrificed sacrifices unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings unto the LORD, on the morrow after that day, even a thousand bullocks, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, with their [l] drink-offerings, and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel;

22 And did [m] eat and drink before the LORD on that day with great gladness. And they made Solomon the son of David king [n] the second time, [o] and anointed d 28:9. Gen. 6:5. Ps. 119:113.

* Heb. stablish. Ps. 10:17. 2 Thes. 2: 16,17. 1 Pet. 5:10. e 28:9. Ps. 72:1. 119:80. Jam. 1:17.
f 2. 22:14.
g 16:36. 2 Chr. 20:21. Ps. 134:2. 135: 19—21. 146:1,2. 148:13,14, &c. h Gen. 24:26,48. Ex. 4:31. Ps. 29:1,2. 95:6.
i Ex. 14:31. 1 Sam. 12:18. Prov. 24: 21. 1 Pet. 2:17. k 1 K. 8:62—65. 2 Chr. 7:4—9. Ezra 6:17. l Lev. 23:13. Num. 15:5,7,10. m Ex. 24:11. Deut. 12:7,11,12. 16: 14—17. 2 Chr. 7:10. Neh. 8:12. Ec. 2:24. 3:12,13. 8:15. 9:7. 1 Tim. 6:17,18. n 23:1.
o 1 K. 1:35—39.

everlasting praise, the more we should speak the language, and do the work, of that world. In this address,

1. He adores God, and ascribes glory to Him, as the God of Israel, blessed for ever and ever. Our Lord's prayer ends with a doxology, much like this which David here begins with. This is properly praising God, with holy awe and reverence, and agreeable affection, acknowledging his infinite perfections; not only that He is great, powerful, glorious, &c. but that He is so in, and of, Himself; He is the Fountain and Centre of every thing bright and blessed. All that we can, in our most exalted praises attribute to Him, He has an unquestionable title to. His is the greatness, immense, incomprehensible; His is the power, almighty and irresistible; His is the glory; for his glory is his own end, and the end of the whole creation: His is the victory; He transcends and surpasses all, and is able to conquer and subdue all things to Himself; and his is the majesty; with Him is terrible majesty, inexpressible and inconceivable.

2. He acknowledges with thankfulness the grace of God enabling them to contribute so cheerfully, v. 13, 14. Note, The more we do for God, the more we are indebted to Him for the honor of being employed in his service, and for grace enabling us, in any measure, to serve Him. Does He therefore thank that servant? Luke 17: 9. No: but that servant has great reason to thank Him. It is a great instance of God's grace in us, to be able to do the work of God willingly. Ps. 110: 3. We must give God all the glory of all the good at any time done by ourselves or others; He works both to will and to do. Our own good works must not be the matter of our pride, nor the good works of others the matter of our flattery, but both the matter of our praise: for certainly it is the greatest honor and pleasure in the world, faithfully to serve God.

3. He speaks very humbly of himself, and his people, and the offerings they had now presented to God.

(1.) David was the most honorable person, and Israel the most honorable people, then in the world; yet thus he speaks of himself and them as unworthy the divine cognizance and favor. Angels in heaven are at home there, saints on earth but strangers here, v. 15. our days on earth are as a shadow. David's days had as much of substance in them as most men's; for he was a great, a good, a useful, and now, an old man; one that lived long, and to good purpose: yet he puts himself not only into the number, but in the front, of those who must acknowledge that their days on the earth are as a shadow; which intimates that our life is vain, dark, transient, a life that will have its period in perfect light, or perfect darkness. The next words explain it, there is no abiding, Heb. no expectation. We cannot expect any great matters from it, nor can we expect any long continuance of it. This is mentioned here, as that which forbids us to boast of the service we do to God: alas! it is confined to a scantling of time, it is the service of a frail and short life, therefore what can we pretend to merit by it!

(2.) Of thine own have we given Thee, v. 14. and again, v. 16. It cometh of thine hand, and is all thine own. 'We have it from Thee, as a free gift, therefore are bound to use it for Thee; and what we present to Thee, is but rent or interest from thine own.' 'In like manner' (says Patrick) 'we ought to acknowledge God in all spiritual things, referring every good thought, good purpose, good work, to his grace, from whom we receive it.' Let him that glories, therefore, glory in the Lord.

(3.) He appeals to God concerning his own sincerity, v. 17. It is a great satisfaction to a good man, to think that God tries the heart, and has pleasure in uprightness; that whoever misinterpret or contemn it, He is acquainted with, and approves the way of the righteous. David was neither proud of his own good work, nor envious of the good work of others.

(4.) He prays to God both for the people and for Solomon, that both might hold on as they began. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, were kept in their integrity, by the grace of God establishing their way; let the same grace that was sufficient for them, be so for us. Great consequences depend on what is innermost, and what uppermost, in our heart; what we aim at, and what we love to think of, v. 18. If any good have got possession of our hearts, or the hearts of our friends, it is good by prayer to commit the custody of it to the grace of God: Lord, keep it there, for ever there. David has prepared materials for the temple; but, Lord, do thou prepare the people's hearts for such a privilege; establish their hearts, so the margin. 'Confirm their resolutions; they are in a good mind, keep them so, when I am gone, them and theirs for ever.' He had charged Solomon, ch. 28: 9. to serve God with a perfect heart, now here (v. 19.) he prays to God to give him such a heart. He does not pray, 'Lord, make him rich, great, learned;' but, 'Lord, make him honest;' that is better than all. His building the house would not prove him to have a perfect heart, unless he made conscience of keeping God's commandments. Helping to build churches, will not save us, if we live in disobedience to God's law.

II. The cheerful concurrence of this great assembly in this great solemnity, v. 20. Whoever is the mouth of the congregation, those only have the benefit, who join with him, not by bowing down the head, so much as by lifting up the soul.

They paid their respects to the king, looking on him as an instrument in God's hand of much good to them; and in honoring him, they honored God.

They made Solomon king, the second time. He having been before anointed, in haste, on occasion of Adonijah's rebellion, it was thought fit to repeat it, for the greater satisfaction of the people. They anointed him to the Lord. Magistrates must look on themselves as set apart for God, to be his ministers, and must rule accordingly in the fear of God. Zadok also was anointed to be

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 10—19. Those, who are most 'zealous of good works,' will never boast of them, or trust in them. To them it appears an unspeakable favor, that a holy God will accept any worship or service from such polluted creatures; they are conscious that their best needs forgiveness, falls infinitely beneath his glorious majesty, and is utterly unworthy his acceptance. 'In like manner, we ought to acknowledge God in all spiritual things: referring every good thought, good purpose, good work, to his divine grace, from whom we receive it; beseeching him, as David doth, . . . to preserve it in us.' Patrick. Thus our best and most useful works will terminate in admiration of his inconceivable majesty, goodness, power, and holiness; in unfeigned praises and thanksgivings; and in the deepest self-abasement before Him. This is genuine grace.—While we bless the Lord for putting good desires into our hearts, or the hearts of others, we should never forget to pray to Him to preserve and fix them there, and to bring them to good effect.—When we feel that there is no abiding for us on earth, we should be peculiarly fervent in our prayers, that those who are to succeed us, or whom we consider as having profited by our instructions, may have their 'hearts prepared unto the LORD,' and disposed for the work to which they are called. Parents and ministers also, when they perceive any of their children or people under serious impressions, should 'travail in birth for them till Christ be formed in them,' by earnest, constant prayer, that 'the LORD would keep for ever in the imaginations of the thoughts of their hearts,' those good desires which He has excited, 'and prepare their hearts unto Himself.' (Gal. 4: 17—20. Col. 2: 1—4.) SCOTT.

to their own real advantage, was thus to consecrate it to the service of Him who gave it, and whose gracious acceptance of their oblation would add still more to their obligations. Nothing on this side heaven can be conceived, more humble, pure, evangelical, spiritual, devout, or exalted, than the praise, adoration, gratitude, confidence, love, zeal, and philanthropy, breathing through this address. SCOTT.

Verses 21—25.

As Abiathar was removed from the high priesthood, and Zadok substituted in his place, after David's death; it has been thought, that the second anointing of Solomon was also subsequent to that event. (1 K. 2: 26, 27.) The whole kingdom was peculiarly GOD's. We may suppose that every kind of personal accomplishment united with justice, him unto the LORD to be the chief governor, and [p] Zadok to be priest.

23 Then Solomon [q] sat on the throne of the LORD, as king instead of David his father, and [r] prospered; and [s] all Israel obeyed him.

24 And [t] all the princes, and the mighty men, and [u] all the sons likewise of king David, [*] submitted themselves unto Solomon the king.

25 And the LORD [x] magnified Solomon exceedingly in the sight of all Israel, and [y] bestowed upon him such royal majesty, as had not been on any king before him in Israel.

26 ¶ Thus David the son of Jesse reigned [z] over all Israel.

27 And the time that he reigned over Israel was [a] forty years: seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem.

28 And he died in [b] a good old age, [c] full of days, riches, and honor; and Solomon his son reigned in his stead.

29 Now [d] the acts of David the king, first and last, behold, they are written in the † book of [e] Samuel the seer, and in the book of [f] Nathan the prophet, and in the book of [g] Gad the seer, 30 With all his reign and [h] his might, and [i] the times that went over him, and over Israel, and over all the kingdoms of the countries.

p 1 K. 2:35.
q 17:11,12. 28:5. Ps. 132:11. Is. 9: 6,7. r 22:11. s Ec. 8:2—5. Rom. 13:1.
t 22:17. 28:21.
u 3:3—9. 1 K. 1:50—53. 2:24,25.
* Heb. gave the hand under. Gen. 24: 2. 47:29. 2 Chr. 30:8. marg. Ez. 17:18.
x Josh. 3:7. 4:14. 2 Chr. 1:1. Job 7:17. Acts 19:17. y 1 K. 3:13. 2 Chr. 1:12. Ec. 2:9. Dan. 5:18,19. Heb. 2:9.
z 18:14. Ps. 78:71,72.
a 3:4. 2 Sam. 5:4,5. 1 K. 2:11. b Gen. 15:15. 25:8. Job 5:26. Prov. 16:31. Acts 13:36.
c 23:1. Gen. 35:29. d 1 K. 11:41. 14:29. Heb. 11:32,33.
† Or, history. Heb. words.
e 1 Sam. 9:9.
f 2 Sam. 7:2—4. 12:1—7. g 21:9—11.
h 2 K. 10:34. 14:28. i Dan. 2:21.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 20—30. They, who render God due honor, will seldom fail duly to respect the instruments of his kindness to them, or to honor those whom He has placed over them.--All our obedience and communion with God must have a believing reference to that one great sacrifice, which infinitely more honors his law and justice, than all the oblations which shadowed it forth to ancient believers: thus, peace with Him, peace of conscience, and gladness of heart will make sacred ordinances pleasant; and even render our ordinary meals subservient to our spiritual improvement, and the honor of God; while they are attended with gratitude, temperance, liberality, and a heavenly mind.—Let us mark the difference between the spirit and character of the man after God's own heart, living and dying, and those of such worthless professors, as resemble him in nothing but his sin, and who apologize for their crimes by his example. Let us also compare him with those who profanely carp at the blemishes in illustrious scriptural characters; but never raise their minds to an idea of such exalted excellency, piety, and philanthropy, as David showed. SCOTT.

wisdom, and prosperity, in that royal majesty bestowed on Solomon, and by which God magnified him in the sight of Israel. (M. R.) SCOTT

(24.) Submitted.] 'Heb. "gave the hand under;" a beautiful orientalism to denote submission. See the man who wishes to submit to a superior; he stands at a short distance, then stooping, he keeps moving his hands to the ground, and says, "I submit, my lord." "Well, Kandan and Chinnan have settled their quarrel now, for Chinnan went to him last evening, and 'gave his hand under.'" "The Modeliar [an officer] is no longer angry with me, because I have put down my hand to the ground." "That rebellious son has, for many years, refused to acknowledge his father's authority, but has at last put his hand under," i. e. submitted to him, become obedient.' ROBERTS.

Verses 26—28

(M. R.) When we read 2 Sam. 12 ch. and the sequel, we could scarcely expect to behold David appear so illustrious in his closing scene, in which every thing heavenly and excellent is combined; and the people seem to have considered him with a veneration and affection, which language fails to express. But his repentance had been as remarkable as his sins; and his conduct, during his afflictions, and towards the end of his life, seems to have had more effect on his subjects, than all they had before witnessed.—It is indeed hard to say, which shines the brightest in this ch. the rising, or the setting sun: but it is better to rise behind clouds, and to be much obscured in the course of our lives, and to set, like David, with splendor; than with Solomon to rise very bright, and shine very splendid, and then to set behind an almost impenetrable cloud. (1 K. 11:42, 43.) SCOTT.

For a view of David's character, see at the end of 1 K. ED.

Verses 29, 30.

It is plain from these vs. that the contemporary prophets were the historians, or annalists, of God's people; and that they left far more copious records of public transactions, both in respect of Israel and the adjacent countries, than have come down to us. (2 Sam. 24:11.) Learned men may indeed regret the loss of these histories; but 'God knows better than we, what was most fit to be preserved for the use and benefit of his church.' Patrick. SCOTT.

TABLE OF THE MOST REMARKABLE PARALLEL PASSAGES OF THE BOOKS OF CHR. AND THOSE OF SAM. AND KINGS.

1 Chronicles with	1 Samuel.	2:	5: 15—32.	24: 1—14.	12: 1—16.
10: 1—12.	31:	3: }	6:	25: 1—4. 11:17—24.	14: 1—14.
	2 Samuel	4: }	7.	25: 27,28.	14: 19,20.
11: 1—9.	5: 1—10.	5: 2—14.6:7—10.	8:	26: 1,2.	14: 21,22.
11: 10—41.	23: 8—39.	7:11—22.	9: 1—9.	27: 1—3.	15: 33—35.
13: 1—14.	6: 3—11.	8:	11: 15—28.	28: 1—4.	16: 2—4.
14: 1—7.	5: 11—25.	9: 1—12.	10: 1—13.	29: 1,2.	18: 2,3.
17:	7:	9: 13—31.	10: 14—29.	32: 9—21.	18: 17—37.
18:	8:	10: 1. 11:4.	12: 1—24.	32: 24—31.	20: 1—19.
19:	10:	12: 2—11.	14: 25—28.	33: 1—10.	21: 1—10.
20: 1—3.	11: 1,12:30,31.	16: 1—6.	15: 17—22.	34: 1,2,8—28.	22:
20: 4—8.	21: 18—22.	18:	22: 2—35.	34: 29—33.	23: 1—20.
21:	24:	20: 31—37.	22: 41—50.	35: 18,20—25.	23: 22,23.
2 Chronicles with	1 Kings.	21: 6—10. with 2 Kings	8: 17—24.	36: 1.	23: 29,30.
1: 3—13.	3: 4—14.	22: 2—6.	8: 26—29.	36: 2—4.	23: 31—34.
1: 14—17.	10: 26—29.	22: 10—12. 23:	11:

As these books relate the same histories, they should be constantly read and collated together, to obtain a more comprehensive view of Jewish history, and also to illustrate or amend from one what is obscure in either.—Horne. HENRY abr.

AN EXPOSITION,

WITH

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS AND NOTES,

UPON THE SECOND BOOK OF CHRONICLES.

THIS book begins with the reign of Solomon, and the building of the temple, and continues the history of the kings of Judah thenceforward, to the captivity; and so concludes with the fall of that illustrious monarchy, and the destruction of the temple. That monarchy of the house of David, as it was prior in time, so it was superior in worth and dignity, to all those four celebrated ones which Nebuchadnezzar dreamed of. The Babylonian monarchy I reckon to begin in Nebuchadnezzar himself: Thou art that head of gold, that lasted but about 70 years; the Persian monarchy, in several families, about 130; the Grecian, in their several branches, about 300; and 300 more went far with the Roman, but as I reckon David a greater hero than any of the founders of those monarchies, and Solomon a more magnificent prince than any of those that were the glories of them, so the succession was kept up in a lineal descent throughout the whole monarchy, which continued considerable between 400 and 500 years; and, after a long eclipse, shone forth again in the kingdom of the Messiah, of the increase of whose government and peace there shall be no end. This history of the Jewish monarchy, as it is more authentic, so it is more entertaining and more instructive, than the histories of any of those monarchies. We had the story of the house of David, before, in 1 and 2 K. intermixed with that of the kings of Israel, which there took more room than that of Judah; but here, we have it entire. Much is repeated here, which we had before, yet many passages are enlarged upon, and divers added, which we had not before, especially relating to religion; for it is a church history, and written for our learning, to let nations and families know, that then, and then only, they can expect to prosper, when they keep in the way of their duty to God; for, all along, the good kings prospered, and the wicked kings suffered.

The peaceable reign of Solomon, we have, ch. 1—9. Rehoboam's blemished reign, ch. 10—12. Abijah's, short but busy, ch. 13. Asa's, long and happy, ch. 14—16. Jehoshaphat's, pious and prosperous, ch. 17—20. The impious and infamous reigns of Jehoram and Ahaziah, ch. 21, 22. The unsteady reigns of Joash and Amaziah, ch. 24, 25. Uzziah's, long and prosperous, ch. 26. Jotham's, regular, ch. 27. Ahaz's, profane and wicked, ch. 28. Hezekiah's, gracious and glorious, ch. 29—32. Manasseh's, and Amon's, wicked, ch. 33. Josiah's reforming reign, ch. 34, 35. and the ruining reigns of his sons, ch. 36. Put all these together, and the truth of that word of God will appear; They that honor Me, I will honor, but they that despise Me, shall be lightly esteemed.

HENRY.

THIS book continues the history, begun in the former; and concludes with an intimation of Cyrus's decree for the restoration of the Jews, and the rebuilding of the temple, about 480 years after.—Besides the additional practical instruction here afforded, especially in respect of the different effects of piety, or profaneness, in the affairs of nations favored with revelation; this history throws great light on the prophetical writings, which can by no means be well understood without constantly adverting to it. The prophecies contained in it, either were fulfilled soon after they were spoken, or coincide with those before considered: and it is not always easy to determine concerning subsequent scriptural references, whether they relate to this book or to the books of Kings.

SCOTT.

Whiston, in his chronology, suggests that the historical books written after the captivity, namely, the two of Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah, have more mistakes in names and numbers than all the O. T. besides, through the carelessness of transcribers: but though that be allowed, the things are so very minute, we may be confident, that yet The foundation of God stands sure.

HENRY.

B. C. 1015.

CHAP. I.

Solomon, established as king, calls on his nobles and people, to join in sacrificing at Gibeon, 1—6. The Lord appears to him there by night, and allows him to choose what blessing to ask: he asks wisdom, and is promised also riches and honor, 7—12. Solomon's forces, riches, and commerce, 13—17.

AND Solomon the son of David [a] was strengthened in his kingdom; and [b] the LORD his God was with him, and [c] magnified him exceedingly.

2 Then Solomon spake unto all Israel, [d] to the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and to the judges, and to every governor in all Israel, [e] the chief of the fathers.

3 So Solomon and all

a 1 K. 2:12,46.
b Gen. 21:22. 39:2,21. Ex. 3:12. 1 Chr. 17:8. Matt. 28:20. c 1 Chr. 29:25. Phil. 2:9—11.
d 29:20. 30:2. 34:29,30. 1 Chr. 13:1. 15:3. 28:1. 29:1.
e 1 Chr. 15:12. 24:4,31.

CHAP. I. V. 1—12. Here is,

I. Solomon's great prosperity, v. 1. He had a contested title, yet, God being with him, he was strengthened in his kingdom, his heart, hands, and interest in the people. God's presence will be our strength.

II. His great piety and devotion. His father was a prophet, a psalmist, and kept mostly to the ark; but Solomon, having read much in his Bible of the tabernacle Moses built, and the altars, paid more respect to them than, it should seem, David had done. Both did well, and let neither be censured. Let not the man whose zeal is employed chiefly in one religious direction, despise him whose zeal is employed chiefly in another. Let them not judge, or despise, one another.

I. All his great men must thus far be good men, that they must join him in worshipping God, v. 2, 3. Authority and interest are well bestowed on those, that will thus use them for the glory of God, and the promotion of religion. Solomon began his reign with this public, pious visit to God's altar, a very good omen. Magistrates are then likely to do well for themselves and their people, when they thus take God with them at their setting out.

2. He offered abundance of sacrifices to God there, v. 6. a thousand burnt-offerings, and perhaps a greater number of peace-offerings, on which he and his company feasted before the Lord. Where God sows plentifully, He expects to reap accordingly. David had left him flocks and herds in abundance, 1 Chr. 27: 29, 31. and thus he gave God his dues of them. The ark was at Jerusalem, v. 4. but the altar at Gibeon, v. 5. thither he brought his sacrifices; for it is the altar that sanctifieth every gift.

3. He prayed a good prayer to God: this, with the answer to it, we had before, 1 K. 3: 5, &c. God bade him ask what he would, that He might try him, what was in his heart. Men's characters appear in their choices and desires. As we choose, we shall have; and that is likely to be our portion, to which we gave the preference, whether the wealth and pleasure of this world, or spiritual riches and delights. Two things are here pleaded, which we had not in Kings: (1.) Thou hast made me reign in my father's stead, v. 8. 'Lord, Thou hast put me into this place; therefore I can in faith ask of Thee grace to enable me to do the duty of it.' But that is not all; 'Lord, thou hast put me into this place, in the stead of David, the great and good man that filled it up so well; therefore give me wisdom, that Israel may not suffer damage by the change. Must I reign in my father's stead? Lord, give me my father's spirit.' Note, The eminency of those that went before us, and the obligation that lies on us to keep up and carry on the good work they were engaged in, should provoke us to a gracious emulation, and quicken our prayers to God for wisdom and grace, that we may do the work of God in our day, as faithfully and well as they, in theirs. (2.) Let thy promise to David my father be estab-

the congregation with him, went to the high place that was at [f] Gibeon; for there was [g] the tabernacle of the congregation of God, which Moses [h] the servant of the LORD had made in the wilderness.

B. C. 1045. 4 But [i] the ark of God had David brought up from Kirjath-jearim, to the place which David had prepared for it: [k] for he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem.

5 Moreover, [l] the brazen altar that [m] Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, had made, * he put before the tabernacle of the LORD: and Solomon and the congregation sought unto it.

6 And Solomon went up thither to the brazen altar before the LORD, which was at the tabernacle of the congregation, and offered [n] a thousand burnt-offerings upon it.

7 [o] In that night did God appear unto Solomon, and said unto him, [p] Ask what I shall give thee.

8 And Solomon said unto God, [q] Thou hast showed great mercy unto David my father, and hast made me [r] to reign in his stead.

9 Now, O LORD God, [s] let thy promise unto David my father be established; for thou hast made me king over a people, † like the dust of the earth in multitude.

10 [t] Give me now wisdom and knowledge, that I may [u] go out and come in before this people: [x] for who can judge this thy people that is so great?

11 And God said to Solomon, Because [y] this was in thine heart, and thou hast not asked riches, wealth, or honor, nor the life of thine enemies, neither yet hast asked long life; but hast asked wisdom and knowledge for thyself, [z] that thou mayest judge my people, over whom I have made thee king;

12 Wisdom and knowledge is granted unto thee: and [a] I will give thee riches, and wealth, and honor, [b] such as none of the kings have had, that have been before thee, neither shall there any after thee have the like.

13 ¶ Then Solomon came from his journey to the high place that was [c] at Gibeon to Jerusalem, from before the tabernacle of the congregation, and [d] reigned over Israel.

14 And [e] Solomon gathered chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, which he placed in the chariot-cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.

15 And [f] the king ‡ made silver and gold at Jerusalem as plenteous as stones, and cedar-trees made he as the [g] sycamore-trees that are in the vale for abundance.

16 And § Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price.

17 And they fetched up, and brought forth out of Egypt, a chariot for six hundred shekels of silver, and an horse for an hundred and fifty: and so brought they out horses for all [h] the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, by their ‖ means f 1 K. 3:4. 1 Chr. 16:39. 21:29.

g Ex. 26:1,&c. 40:2,34. Lev. 1:1.
h Deut. 34:5.
i 2 Sam. 6:2,17. 1 Chr. 13:5,6. 15: 25—28.
k 1 Chr. 16:1. Ps. 132:5,6.
l Ex. 27:1—8. 38:1—7.
m Ex. 31:2. 1 Chr. 2:19,20.
* Heb. was there.
n 1 K. 3:4. 8:63. 1 Chr. 29:21. Is. 40:16.
o 1 K. 3:5—15. Prov. 3:5,6.
p Matt. 7:7,8. Mark 10:36,37,51. John 16:23. 1 John 5:14,15.
q 2 Sam. 7:8,9. 12:7,8. 22:51. 23:1. Ps. 86:13. 89:20—28,49. Is. 55:3.
r 1 Chr. 28:5. 29:23.
s 2 Sam. 7:12—16,25—29. 1 Chr. 17: 11—14,23—27. 28:6,7. Ps. 89:35—37. 132:11,12.
† Heb. much as the dust of the earth. Gen. 13:16. 22:17. Num. 23:10.
t Ps. 119:34,73. Prov. 2:2—6. 3:13—18. Jam. 1:5. u Num. 27:17. Deut. 31:2. 2 Sam. 5:2.
x 2 Cor. 2:16. 3:5.
y 1 Sam. 16:7. 1 K. 8:18. 1 Chr. 28:2. 29:17,18. Acts 5:4.
z 1 K. 3:28. Prov. 14:8. Jam. 3:13,17. a Matt. 6:33. Eph. 3:20.
b 9:22. 1 Chr. 29:25. Ec. 2:9.
c 3.
d 1 K. 4:24,25.
e 9:25. Deut. 17:16. 1 K. 4:26. 10:26.
f 12. 9:27. 1 K. 10:27. Job 22:24,25. Is. 60:17.
‡ Heb. gave.
g 9:27. Is. 9:10. Am. 7:14.
§ Heb. the going forth of the horses which was Solomon's. 9:28. 1 K. 10:28,29.
h 2 K. 7:6.
‖ Heb. hand.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

It would be a comely sight, to behold kings with their nobles, and the chief estates of their dominions, assembling together for the purposes of religious worship, stirring up each other by the fervency of their devotions, and giving evident demonstrations how generally and deeply their hearts were engaged in the sacred services. Alas! even in Christian countries such scenes are seldom, if ever, exhibited! But the example, the influence, and the exhortations of princes, who greatly fear and love the Lord, and who are eminent for piety and wisdom, may effect very great things; especially when one succeeds to another, walking before God in the steps of his predecessor: and those, who love the truths and service of God, should unite in praying, not formally, but fervently, for all in authority; that, being enriched with grace and wisdom, they may become instruments of extensive good.—To us the desires of men's hearts can be known only by their habitual conduct; but in themselves they as certainly distinguish characters, as actions do: and if the Lord see, that it is in our heart to desire wisdom and grace, more than riches, honor, or pleasure, He will delight to fulfil all our mind.—To know and to do our duty in the station of life assigned us, to the glory of God and the benefit of society, requires much wisdom, and is one principal exercise and evidence of it: and if we humbly feel our need of this wisdom, and faithfully ask it of God, He will give it liberally. (Jam. 1: 5—8.)—Secular employments, commenced by the worship and service of God, are likely to be well managed and prosperous: and as He 'gives grace and glory; so He will withhold no good thing from them that walk uprightly.'—But alas! prosperity is always dangerous, because our hearts are extremely deceitful: and it is with great propriety, that we pray, 'in all time of our wealth, . . . 'Good Lord deliver us,' from pride, ostentation, indolence, self-indulgence, and a worldly mind. Let us then improve our present talent, seek heavenly blessings, and be contented without those great things, which men generally covet, but which commonly prove fatal snares to their souls. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. I. V. 11. This was in thine heart. This does not occur in Kings: and it implies that the request of Solomon, as arising from a spiritual judgment and heart, was peculiarly acceptable to that God, who searches, regards, and demands, the heart. God promised Solomon all he had not asked, except the life of his enemies: but he was to be a peaceable king, a type of the Prince of peace. (12) SCOTT.

Verse 16.

Had horses.] 'This Moses expressly prohibited, by which future kings were forbidden to establish a body of cavalry; [see on Deut. 17: 16. and note * p. 599, vol. 1.] because this could not be effected without sending to Egypt, the most dangerous of all foreign commerce to true religion. When Solomon had violated this law, and multiplied horses to excess (1 K. 4:26.) it was soon attended with those fatal consequences the law foretold. For he having, likewise, in violation of another law of Moses, married Pharaoh's daughter, the early fruits of this intercourse; and then, by a repetition of the same crime, but by the transgression of another law, having espoused more strange women, (1 K. 3:1. 11:1.) they first, in defiance of a 4th law, persuaded him to build them idol-temples for their use; and, afterwards against a 5th law, still more fundamental, they induced him to erect other temples for his own. Now the origin of all this mischief was the forbidden traffic with Egypt for horses.' [Resist the beginnings of evil. WARBURTON. CLARKE. HEWLETT.

CHAP. II.

Solomon purposes to build the temple, and a palace, 1. His workmen, 2. He sends to Huram for skilful artificers, and for timber, 3—10. Huram's friendly answer, 11—16. Solomon employs strangers, as laborers and overseers, 17, 18.

AND Solomon [a] determined to build an house [b] for the name of the LORD, and [c] an house for his kingdom.

2 And Solomon [d] told out threescore and ten thousand men to bear burdens, and fourscore thousand to hew in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred to oversee them.

3 And Solomon sent to [e] Huram the king of Tyre, saying, [f] As thou didst deal with David my father, and didst send him cedars to build him an house to dwell therein, even so deal with me.

4 Behold, [g] I build an house to the name of the LORD my God, [h] to dedicate it to him, and [i] to burn before him * sweet incense, and for [k] the continual shew-bread, and for [l] the burnt-offerings morning and evening, on the sabbaths, and on the new moons, and on [m] the solemn feasts of the LORD our God. This is an ordinance for ever to Israel.

5 And the house which I build is [n] great: for [o] great is our God above all gods.

6 But [p] who is † able to build him an house, seeing the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain him? [q] who am I then, that I should build him an house, [r] save only to burn sacrifice before him?

7 Send me now therefore a man [s] cunning to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in iron, and in purple, and crimson, and blue, and that can skill ‡ to grave with the cunning men that are with me in Judah and in Jerusalem, [t] whom David my father did provide.

8 [u] Send me also cedar-trees, fir-trees, [x] and § algum-trees, out of Lebanon: for I know that thy servants can skill to cut timber in Lebanon; and behold, my servants shall be with thy servants,

9 Even to prepare me timber in abundance: for the house which I am about to build shall be ‖ wonderful great.

10 And, behold, [y] I will give to thy servants, the hewers that cut timber, twenty thousand measures of beaten wheat, and twenty thousand measures of barley, and twenty thousand [z] baths of wine, and twenty thousand baths of oil.

11 ¶ Then Huram the king of Tyre answered in writing, which he sent to Solomon, [a] Because the LORD hath loved his people, he hath made thee king over them.

a 1 K. 5:3.
b Deut. 12:5,11. 23:23. 1 K. 8:18,20. 1 Chr. 22:10. Matt. 6:9,10.
c 1 K. 7:1. 9:1.
d 18. 1 K. 5:15,16.
e 1 K. 5:1. Hiram.
f 2 Sam. 5:11. 1 Chr. 14:1.
g 1. 1 K. 8:18.
h 1 K. 8:63.
i Ex. 30:7.
* Heb. incense of spices.
k Ex. 25:30. Lev. 24:5—8.
l Ex. 29:38—42. Num. 28:3,4,9—11.
m Lev. 23: Num. 28: 29:
n 9. 1 K. 9:8. 1 Chr. 29:1. Ez. 7:20.
o Ex. 15:11. 1 Chr. 16:25. Ps. 86:8,9. 135:5. 145:3. Jer. 10:6. p 6:18. 1 K. 8:27. Is. 66:1. Acts 7: 48,49.
† Heb. hath retained, or, obtained strength.
q 1:10. Ex. 3:11. 2 Sam. 7:18. 1 Chr. 29:14. 2 Cor. 2:16. Eph. 3:8.
r Deut. 12:5,6,11,14,26
s Ex. 31:3—5. 1 K. 7:14. Is. 28:26, 29. 40:10.
‡ Heb. to grave gravings.
t 1 Chr. 22:15,16.
u 1 K. 5:6.
x 1 K. 10:11. almug-trees.
§ Or, algummim.
‖ Heb. great and wonderful. 5. 7:21 1 K. 9:8.
y 1 K. 5:11. Luke 10:7. Rom. 13:7,8 z 1 K. 7:26,38. Ezra 7:22.
a 9:8. Deut. 7:7,8. 1 K. 10:9.

CHAP. II. V. 1—10. Solomon's wisdom was given him, not merely for speculation to entertain himself, (though it is indeed a princely entertainment,) nor merely for conversation to entertain his friends, but for action; therefore to action he immediately applies himself. Observe,

I. He determined to build, first a temple, then a palace; a house, not so much for his own convenience, as for the kingdom, its honor among neighbors, and for the decent reception of the people, whenever they had occasion to apply to their prince; so that, in both, he aimed at the public good. Those are wisest that lay out themselves most for the honor of the name of the Lord, and the welfare of communities: we are not born for ourselves, but for God and our country.

II. The purport of his errand to Huram, is much the same here as we had it, 1 K. 5: 2, &c. only here it is more largely set forth: and the reasons more fully represented, for information to Huram, as well as for inducement.

He endeavors to possess Huram with great and high thoughts of the God of Israel, by expressing the mighty veneration he had for his holy name. Let not Huram think the God of Israel, like the gods of the nations, dwells in temples made with hands; no, the heaven of heavens cannot contain Him. The house is intended only for the convenience of the priests and worshippers, that they may have a fit place wherein to burn sacrifice before Him. He looked upon himself, though a mighty prince, as unworthy the honor of being employed in this great work. Who am I, that I should build a house? It is part of the wisdom wherein we ought to walk toward them that are without, carefully to guard against all misapprehension, which any thing we say or do may occasion, concerning God; so Solomon does here in his treaty with Huram.

His requests to him, are more particular here. 1. That Huram would furnish him with a good hand to work, v. 7. send me a man. He had cunning men with him in Jerusalem and Judah, whom David provided, 1 Chr. 22: 15. but send me a man to direct them. 2. With good materials to work on, v. 8, 9. for the house must be wonderful great, i. e. very stately and magnificent, no cost must be spared, nor any contrivance wanting in it.

Solomon's engagement to maintain the workmen, is in v. 10. He fed his workmen with plenty, and every thing of the best. They that employ laborers, ought to take care they be not only well paid, but well provided for, with sufficient of what is wholesome and fit for them. Let rich masters do for their poor workmen, as they would be done by, if the tables were turned.

V. 11—18. Here we have,—I. Huram's return to Solomon's embassy, in which he shows a great respect for Solomon, and a readiness to serve him. Less people may learn of those great ones to be neighborly and complaisant.

1. He congratulates Israel, on having such a king as Solomon was, v. 11. Note, a wise and good government is a great blessing to a people, and may well be accounted a singular token of God's favor. He does not say, Because He loved

NOTES.

CHAP. II. V. 1, 2. M. R.—Note, 1 Kings 5:13—18. SCOTT.

Verses 3—10.

Solomon, it appears, thought it no impropriety to speak freely and particularly on religious subjects, in treating with a heathen prince about secular business. ID.

(10.) Beaten wheat.] Perhaps that beaten out, after an ancient Egyptian method, with a stick, as being preferable to that trodden out by oxen, rams, &c. But Hewlett makes it 'probably a coarse kind of meal, made by crushing the grains of corn, without winnowing. Some Rabbis interpret it "fine flour."' ED.

12 [b] Huram said moreover, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, [c] that made heaven and earth, who hath given to David the king a wise son, * endued with prudence and understanding, that might build [d] an house for the LORD, and an house for his kingdom.

13 And now I have sent a cunning man, endued with understanding, [e] of Huram my father's,

14 [f] The son of a woman of the daughters of Dan, and his father was a man of Tyre, [g] skilful to work in gold, and in silver, in brass, in iron, in stone, and in timber, in purple, in blue, and in fine linen, and in crimson; also to grave any manner of graving, and to find out every device which shall be put to him, with thy cunning men, and with the cunning men of my lord David thy father.

15 Now therefore the wheat, and the barley, the oil, and the wine, [h] which my lord hath spoken of, let him send unto his servants:

16 And [i] we will cut wood out of Lebanon, † as much as thou shalt need; and we will bring it to thee in floats by sea to ‡ Joppa, and thou shalt carry it up to Jerusalem.

17 And Solomon [k] numbered all § the strangers that were in the land of Israel, [l] after the numbering wherewith David his father had numbered them; and they were found an hundred and fifty thousand, and three thousand and six hundred.

18 And he set [m] threescore and ten thousand of them to be bearers of burdens, and fourscore thousand to be hewers in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred overseers to set the people a-work.

thee, (though that was true, 2 Sam. 12: 24.) He made thee king, but because He loved his people. Princes must look on themselves as preferred for the public good, not for their own personal satisfaction, and should rule so, as to prove that they were given in love, not in anger.

2. He blesses God for raising up such a successor to David, v. 12. It should seem Huram was proselyted to the Jewish religion, and worshipped Jehovah, the God of Israel, (who was not known by that name to the neighboring nations,) as the God that made heaven and earth, and as the Fountain of power as well as being; for He sets up kings. Now that Israel kept close to the law and worship of God, and so preserved their honor, the neighboring nations were as willing to be instructed by them in the true religion, as they had been, in the days of their apostasy, to be infected with the idolatries and superstitions of their neighbors.

3. He sent him a very ingenious, curious workman, his mother an Israelite, (Huram thought of the tribe of Dan, v. 14. but, it seems, she was of the tribe of Naphtali, 1 K. 7: 14.) and his father a Tyrian; a good omen of uniting Jew and Gentile in the gospel-temple; as it was afterward when the building of the second temple was greatly furthered by Darius, (Ezra 6.) who is supposed to have been the son of Esther, an Israelite by his mother's side.

4. He engaged for the timber, as much as he would have occasion for, and undertook to deliver it at Joppa; and, withal, signified his dependence on Solomon for the maintenance of the workmen, as he had promised, v. 15, 16. This agreement we had, 1 K. 5: 8, 9.

II. Solomon's orders about the workmen. He would not employ the free-born Israelites, but proselyted strangers, who had no inheritance in Canaan, as the Israelites had, and therefore applied themselves to trades, and got their living by their ingenuity and industry: there was, at this time, a vast number of them in the land, v. 17. who, if of any of the devoted nations, perhaps fell within the case, and therefore under the law, of the Gibeonites, to be hewers of wood for the congregation; if not, yet being, in many cases, well provided for by the law of Moses, and put on an equal footing with the native Israelites, they were bound in gratitude to do what they could for the service of the temple; yet, no doubt, they were well paid; the law was, Thou shalt not oppress a stranger. The distribution of them we have here, v. 2. and again, v. 18. in all, 150,000. The expedient peculiar to this structure, of framing all before hand, left room for this vast multitude to be employed in it; for in Lebanon they might all work together, without crowding one another, which they could not on mt. Sion. And if there had not been such vast numbers employed, so large and curious a fabric, begun and ended in 7 years, might have been as long in building as St. Paul's.

CHAP. III.

The place of the temple, and the time when the building of it was begun, 1, 2. Its dimensions and ornaments, 3—7. Those of the most holy place, 8—10. The cherubim placed in it, 11—13. The veil, 14. The two pillars, 15—17.

THEN [a] Solomon began to build the house of the LORD at Jerusalem [b] in mount Moriah, ‖ where the LORD appeared unto David his father, in the place that David had prepared in the threshing-floor of [c] Ornan the Jebusite.

CHAP. III. V. 1—9. Here is,

1. The place for the temple: before determined, 1 Chr. 22: 1. which was an ease to Solomon's mind. (1.) Jerusalem was the place God had chosen to put his name there, and the royal city must be the holy city: there must be the testimony of Israel; for there are set the thrones of judgment, Ps. 122: 4, 5. It must be on mt. Moriah, the very place (so some) where Abraham offered Isaac, Gen. 22: 2. So the Targum expressly. That was typical of Christ's sacrifice of Himself; therefore fitly was the temple, likewise a type of Him, built there. It must be where the Lord appeared to David, and answered him by fire, 1 Chr. 21: 18, 26. Where God has met with me, it is to be hoped He will still. It must be in the place David had b 1 K. 5:7. 1 Chr. 29:20. Ps. 72:18,19. Luke 1:68. 1 Pet. 1:3. c Gen. 1: 2. Ps. 33:6. 102:25. 124:8. 136:5,6. 146:5,6. Jer. 10:11. Acts 4:24. 14:15. Col. 1:16,17. Rev. 4: 11. 10:6.

* Heb. knowing prudence, &c. 1:10 12.
d 1.
e 4:16.
f 1 K. 7:13,14.
g 7. Ex. 31:3,4.
h 10. 1 K. 5:11.
i 1 K. 5:8,9.
† Heb. according to all thy need.
‡ Heb. Japho. Josh. 19:46. Ezra 3:7. Jon. 1:3. Acts 9:36. 10:32.
k 2. 2:7,8. 1 K. 5:13—16. 9:20,21.
§ Heb. the men the strangers.
l 1 Chr. 22:2.
m 2.
a 1 K. 6:1, &c.
b Gen. 22:2,14.
‖ Or, which was seen of David.
c 2 Sam. 24:18—25. Araunah. 1 Chr. 21:18. 22:1.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

We ought always to attend to the work of God, in decided preference to our own indulgence or accommodation: and our hearts should be resolved for every service, that we may endure hardship, struggle with difficulties, and not yield to weariness or discouragement.—The greatest monarchs on earth are as nothing, in comparison with the God of heaven; and they should deem it their highest honor to be his servants, and to speak of his glorious majesty.—The genuine love of God, abounding in the heart, infuses the savor of piety into the ordinary concerns and converse of life. Indeed, we should be neither afraid nor ashamed, to embrace every opportunity of speaking honorably of Him, and of impressing the minds of men with a deep sense of his majesty and excellency, and of the importance of his favor, worship, and service. (Ps. 119: 46.)—It is a great part of our 'wisdom towards them that are without,' so to explain our meaning in every doctrine and ordinance, and so to guard our discourses about them, as may best prevent misapprehension or prejudice: and the neglect of this rule is not boldness or faithfulness, as some well-meaning zealots suppose, but indiscretion and folly.—In pleading the cause of God and religion, we should always speak humbly of ourselves; but, unless we be humbled, our temper and conduct will betray the hypocrisy of our self-abasing language. May the Lord Himself therefore 'clothe us with humility!'—Possessions, endowments, or royal authority, are given men for the sake of others; and a wise and pious king is an evidence of the Lord's special love to the people. Who then can express the greatness of his love to his people, in giving them his only begotten Son, to be their Prince and Savior!—Let us be unwearied in spreading the knowledge of his name and truth; and let us devote our several talents to his service; endeavor to be helpful to one another in this good work; and be thankful that poor heathens, and even slaves, may be usefully and acceptably employed by our great and gracious Lord!

SCOTT.

Verse 13.

Of Huram my father's.] Or, Huramabi. It seems that this man, being the most eminent in his line of business, was called father, or my father Huram. King Huram called him so, and Solomon did the same. (4:16.) For it is evident that the artist's name is here meant, and not that of the king's father. SCOTT.

Verses 14—16.

M. R.—My lord David. (14) An honorable title given by Hurum to David, expressive of veneration and affection: for, probably, he had derived his knowledge of the true God, and of his holy worship, from his intercourse with David, to whom on that account he looked up, as to a superior. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. III. V. 1, 2. It is thought, that the temple and its courts were situated, partly in the lot of Judah, and partly in that of Benjamin. (Deut. 33:12. Ps. 78:67—69.) ID.

2 And he began to build [d] in the second day of the second month, in the fourth year of his reign.

3 ¶ Now these are the things wherein [e] Solomon was * instructed for the building of the house of God. [f] The length by cubits after the first measure was threescore cubits, and the breadth twenty cubits.

4 And the porch that was in the front of the house, the length of it was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the height was an hundred and twenty: and he overlaid it within with pure gold.

5 And [g] the greater house he ceiled with fir-tree, which he overlaid with fine gold, and set thereon palm-trees and chains.

6 And he † garnished the house with [h] precious stones for beauty: and the gold was gold of Parvaim.

7 He [i] overlaid also the house, the beams, the posts, and the walls thereof, and the doors thereof, with gold; and [k] graved cherubims on the walls.

8 And he made [l] the most holy house, the length whereof was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits: and he overlaid it with fine gold, amounting to six hundred talents.

9 And the weight of the nails was fifty shekels of gold. And he overlaid the upper chambers with gold.

10 And in the most holy house he made [m] two cherubims of ‡ image-work, and overlaid them with gold.

11 And the wings of the cherubims were twenty cubits long: one wing of the one cherub was five cubits reaching to the wall of the house; and the other wing was likewise five cubits, reaching to the wing of the other cherub.

12 And one wing of the other cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house; and the other wing was five cubits also joining to the wing of the other cherub.

13 The wings of these cherubims spread themselves forth twenty cubits: and they stood on their feet, and their faces were § inward.

14 ¶ And he made [n] the veil of blue, and purple, and crimson, and fine linen, and ‖ wrought cherubims thereon.

15 Also he made before the house [o] two pillars of thirty and five cubits ¶ high, and the chapiter that was on the top of each of them was five cubits.

16 And he made [p] chains, as in the oracle, and put them on the heads of the pillars; and made [q] an hundred pomegranates, and put them on the chains.

17 And he [r] reared up the pillars before the temple, one on the right hand, and the other on the left; and called the name of that on the right hand  Jachin, and the name of that on the left †† Boaz.

d 1 K. 6:1.
e 1 Chr. 28:11—19.
* Heb. founded.
f 1 K. 6:2,3.
g 1 K. 6:15—17,21,22.
† Heb. covered.
h 1 Chr. 29:2,8. Is. 54:12. Rev. 21:19, 20. i Ex. 26:29. 1 K. 6:20—22,30. Ez 7:20. k Ex. 26:1. 1 K. 6:35.
l Ex. 26:33. 1 K. 6:19,20. Heb. 9:3,9. 10:19.
m 1 K. 6:26—28.
‡ Or, movable work.
§ Or, toward the house. Ex. 25:20. n Ex. 26:31—35. Matt. 27:51. Heb. 9:3. 10:20.
‖ Heb. caused to ascend.
o 1 K. 7:15—24. Jer. 52:21—23.
¶ Heb. long.
p 1 K. 6:21.
q 1 K. 7:20.
r 1 K. 7:21.
 That is, He shall establish.
†† That is, In it is strength.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Blessed be God, the sacred Scriptures are sufficient to render 'the man of God thoroughly furnished for every good work:' and all our mistakes and embarrassments, in matters of importance, arise from not knowing the Scriptures, or not attending to this our heavenly rule. Let us then search them daily; and beseech the Lord to enable us to understand, believe, remember, and obey his whole Word; that our way may be made plain before us. Let us endeavor, that all our works may be 'begun, continued, and ended in Him:' let us seek his grace to adorn our souls with the beauties of holiness, and his strength to establish us in faith and steady obedience, and to prosper our labors for his glory. Beholding God in Christ, his true Temple, infinitely more glorious than that of Solomon, may we too become 'a spiritual house, 'an habitation of God through the Spirit,' and 'an holy priesthood;' that here on earth we may begin to join the worship of cherubim and seraphim before the throne; and at length in his courts above, sing 'praises to Him, who sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb for ever and ever.' SCOTT.

Verses 3, 4.

The first measure.] 'I. e. the original cubit of Moses, not that of Babylon, used after the captivity, which was a palm or one-sixth shorter.' Wil. COND. COMM. 'The first measure' seems to mean the original plan. 'He projected the sanctuary, and the oracle, both together; and in their first description they were to be in length 60 cubits: that is, 40 for the sanctuary, and 20 for the most holy place.' Patrick. The height of the porch is not mentioned in Kings; but the description of the temple, in the exposition, [there,] takes in this account. SCOTT.

(4.) A hundred and twenty.] 'If this was the building mentioned 1 K. 6:2. it is there said to be 30 cubits high. Probably the letters in meah (100) are transposed for amah (cubit): if so the proper reading is 20 cubits. So the Syr. Arab. and Sept. (of Cod. Alex.) appear to have read, for they translate 20. This measure will be proportionate.' Dr. A. Clarke. But are we sure there was no substructure, rendered necessary by the uneven and narrow summit of Moriah, which, at least, in some parts, would have required the 120 ft. of building? Note, Matt. 4: 5—7. See Ezek. 8: 7—9. ED.

Verses 6—8.

(M. R.) It is not known on what account the gold, here mentioned, is called gold of Parvaim; that word not elsewhere occurring in Scripture: probably it was brought from a place so called. SCOTT. 'A place in Armenia.' Wil. Ceylon was called by the Phœnicians Taphparvan, which signifies 'the shore of Parvan.' BOCHART.

Verse 9.

Some, by the word rendered 'the upper chambers,' suppose the ceiling of the most holy place to be meant; but perhaps some of the upper chambers, on the outside of the temple, were thus decorated; the lower being used for more common purposes. (1 K. 5:5—10.) SCOTT.

Verses 10—13.

The meaning of the word, rendered 'image-work,' (10) is not well known; but it implies something highly ornamented. ID.

CHAP. IV.

The altar of brass, 1. The molten sea supported by twelve oxen, 2—5. The lavers, candlesticks, and tables, 6—8. The two courts of the temple, 9, 10. The vessels, furniture, and instruments of brass, 11—18. Those of gold, 19—22.

MOREOVER, he made [a] an altar of brass, twenty cubits the length thereof, and twenty cubits the breadth thereof, and ten cubits the height thereof.

2 Also he made [b] a molten sea of ten cubits from * brim to brim, round in compass, and five cubits the height thereof; and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about.

3 And under it was [c] the similitude of oxen, which did compass it round about: ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about. Two rows of oxen were cast, when it was cast.

4 It [d] stood upon twelve oxen, * three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.

5 And the thickness of it was an hand-breadth, and the brim of it like the work of the brim of a cup, † with flowers of lilies: and it received and held [f] three thousand baths.

6 He made also [g] ten lavers, and put five on the right hand, and five on the left, to wash in them: ‡ such things as they offered for the burnt-offering, they washed in them; [h] but the sea was for the priests to wash in.

7 ¶ And he made [i] ten candlesticks of gold [k] according to their form, and set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left.

8 He made also [l] ten tables, and placed them in the temple, five on the right side, and five on the left. And he made an hundred § basins of gold.

9 ¶ Furthermore, he made [m] the court of the priests, and the great court, and doors for the court, and overlaid the doors of them with brass.

10 And [n] he set the sea on the right side of the east end, over against the south.

11 And Huram made

God as they do it. The thought that we are worshipping Him before whom the angels cover their faces, will help to inspire us with reverence in all our approaches to God. Comp. 1 Cor. 11: 10. with Is. 6: 2.

2. The veil that parted between the temple and the most holy place, v. 14. This denoted the darkness of that dispensation, and the distance the worshippers were kept at; but, at the death of Christ, this veil was rent; for through Him we are made nigh, and have boldness not only to look, but to enter, into the holiest. On this he wrought cherubim, Heb. caused to ascend, i. e. made in raised work, embossed; or, on the wing in an ascending posture, to remind the worshippers to lift up their hearts, and to soar upward in their devotions.

3. The two pillars together were somewhat above 35 cubits in length, v. 15. about 18 cubits high apiece: see 1 K. 7: 15, &c. We there took a view of those pillars, Jachin and Boaz, establishment and strength in temple-work, and by it.

CHAP. IV. Vs. 1—10. David often speaks with much affection, both of the house of the Lord, and of the courts of our God. Both without doors and within, was that which typified the grace of the Gospel, and shadowed out Christ.

I. There were things in the open court, in view of all the people, very significant.

1. The brazen altar, v. 1. The making of this was not mentioned in Kings. On this, all the sacrifices were offered, and it sanctified the gift. Moses', in the tabernacle, was 5 cubits square, this, 20. God had greatly increased and enriched them, it was therefore fit they should enlarge his altars. Our returns should bear some proportion to our receivings. It was 10 cubits high, so that the people who worshipped in the courts, might see the sacrifices burnt, and their eye might affect their heart with sorrow for sin. They might thus be led to consider the great Sacrifice, which should be offered in the fulness of time. And, with the smoke of the sacrifices, their hearts might ascend to heaven in holy desires toward God and his favor. In all our devotions, we must keep the eye of faith fixed on Christ, the great Propitiation. How they went up to this altar, we are not told; but doubtless it was so that the end of the law, mentioned Ex. 20: 26. might be answered.

2. The molten sea. A very large brass pan, in which was water for the priests to wash in, v 2. 6. It was put just at the entrance into the court of the priests, like the font at the church-door. Filled to the brim, it would hold 3000 baths, as here, v. 5. but in common, only 2000 were in it, 1 K. 7: 26. The Holy Ghost by this signified, our great gospel-privilege, that the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin, 1 John 1: 7. and our great gospel-duty, to cleanse ourselves by true repentance from all pollutions of the flesh, and corruption in the world. They that draw nigh to God, must cleanse their hands, and purify their hearts, Jam. 4: 8. If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with Me; and he that is washed, still needs to wash his feet, to renew his repentance whenever he goes in to minister, John 13: 10.

3. The ten lavers of brass, in which they washed things offered for burnt-offerings, v. 6. as the priests must be washed, so must the sacrifices. We must not only purify ourselves in preparation for our religious performances, but carefully put away all those vain thoughts, and corrupt aims, which cleave to our performances themselves, and pollute them.

4. The doors of the court were overlaid with brass, v. 9. both for strength and beauty, and that they might not be rotted with the weather. Gates of brass, we read of, Ps. 107: 16.

II. There were things very significant in the a 1:5. Ex. 27:1—8. 1 K. 8:22,64. 9: 25. 2 K. 16:14,15. Ez. 43:13—16. b Ex. 30:18—21. 1 K. 7:23—26. Zech. 13:1. Tit. 3:5. Rev. 7:14.

* Heb. his brim to his brim.
c Ez. 1:10. 10:14. 1 Cor. 9:9,10. Rev. 4:7. d Matt. 16:18. Eph. 2:20. Rev. 21:14. e Matt. 28:19,20. Mark 16:15. Luke 24:46,47. Acts 9:15.
† Or, like a lily-flower.
f 1 K. 7:26.
g Ex. 30:18—21. 1 K. 7:38,40. Ps. 51: 2. 1 Cor. 6:11. 1 John 1:7.
‡ Heb. the work of burnt-offering. Lev. 1:9,13. Ez. 40:38.
h 2. Ex. 29:4. Heb. 9:14. Rev. 1:5,6. 7:14.
i 1 K. 7:49. 1 Chr. 28:15. Zech. 4:2, 3,11—14. Matt. 5:14—16. John 8:12. Rev. 1:20. k Ex. 25:31—40.
l Ex. 25:23—30. 37:10—16. 1 K. 7:48. Is. 25:6. Ez. 44:16. Mal. 1:12. 1 Cor. 10:21.
§ Or, bowls. Jer. 52:18,19. Zech. 14:20.
m 1 K. 6:36. 7:12.
n 1 K. 7:39.

NOTES.

CHAP. IV. V. 1, 2. This altar was 4 times as long and 4 times as broad, and above 3 times as high, as that made by Moses; (Ex. 27:1—8. Ezra 3:2, 3. Ez. 43:13—17.) and it formed a scaffold, above 11 yards square, and 5 yards high. SCOTT. Cuts are given, after Taylor's Calm. of the supposed form of the Altar and Sea. 'Calm. supposes the bowl or cavity held 2000 baths, and the foot or hollow, 1000 more. Taylor, however, suggests that this Sea resembled the Fountain of Lions in the Alhambra at Granada; that, as most Jewish purifications were made in running water—as the Jer. Talm. and Maimonides say, a pipe of water came into it from the well Etam, constantly—and as the phrase in 1 K. 7:26. is, it 'held 2000 baths,' and here both 'it held' and 'it received,' v. 5. are used—the sacred writer means, 'that the water necessary to supply the whole, (pipes, basin, and the 12 fountains pouring from the mouths of the oxen,) or what was received by the entire fountain when at work, was 3000 baths; while the basin alone held only 2000 baths.' Others suppose, one writer means dry measure baths and the other liquid-measure, or that the bath had varied since Solomon's time.' ROB. CALM. 'Oxen, (3) "Bekarim;" in 1 K. 7. it is "pekaim," knops, in the form of colocynths: the difference arises from a change of letters.' HENRY abr.

Verse 7.

Form.] Either the form, in which Moses had been taught to make the golden candlestick for the tabernacle; (Ex. 25:31—39. Cut 37:17—24. 1 K. 7:48—51.) or, according to the pattern David gave him. (1 Chr. 28:11—19.) SCOTT.

V. 10—12. M. R.—Pommels. (12) Or Globes. Called bowls, 1 K. 7: 41. Perhaps they were globes placed above the chapiters, which were

[o] the pots, and the shovels, and the * basins. And Huram † finished the work, that he was to make for king Solomon for the house of God:

12 To wit, [p] the two pillars, and [q] the pommels, and the chapiters, which were on the top of the two pillars, and the two wreaths to cover the two pommels of the chapiters which were on the top of the pillars;

13 And [r] four hundred pomegranates on the two wreaths; two rows of pomegranates on each wreath, to cover the two pommels of the chapiters which were upon the ‡ pillars.

14 He made also [s] bases; and § lavers made he upon the bases;

15 [t] One sea, and twelve oxen under it.

16 The [u] pots also, and the [v] shovels, and the [x] flesh-hooks, and all their instruments, did [y] Huram [z] his father make to king Solomon, for the house of the LORD, of ‖ bright brass.

17 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in the ¶ clay-ground between Succoth and [a] Zeredathah.

18 Thus Solomon made all these vessels in great abundance: for [b] the weight of the brass could not be found out.

19 And Solomon made [c] all the vessels that were for the house of God, [d] the golden altar also, and [e] the tables whereon the shew-bread was set;

20 Moreover [f] the candlesticks with their lamps, that they should [g] burn after the manner, before [h] the oracle of pure gold;

21 And [i] the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs, made he of gold, and that  perfect gold,

22 And the [k] snuffers, and the †† basins, and the spoons, and the censers, of pure gold: and [l] the entry of the house, the inner doors thereof for the most holy place, and the doors of the house of the temple, were of gold.

CHAP. V.

The temple is finished, and the dedicated treasures deposited in it, 1. The ark is brought into the most holy place, 2—10. While the Levites sing praises to God, a cloud fills the temple, 11—14.

THUS all the work that Solomon made for the house of the LORD was finished: and Solomon [a] brought in all the things that David his father had dedicated; and the silver, and the gold, and all the instruments, put he among the treasures of the house of God.

2 [b] Then Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, [c] the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD [d] out of [e] the city of David, which is Zion.

3 Wherefore all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto the king, [f] in the feast which was in the seventh month.

4 And all the elders of Israel came; and [g] the Levites took up the ark.

house of the Lord, into which the priests went only. All was of gold there. The nearer we come to God, the purer we must be, the purer we shall be.

1. The 10 golden candlesticks, according to the form of that in the tabernacle, v. 7. The written Word is a lamp and a light, shining in a dark place. In Moses' time, they had but one candlestick, the Pentateuch; but the additions, in process of time, to be made of other books of Scripture, might be signified. Light was growing. The candlesticks are the churches, Rev. 1: 20. Moses set up but one, the church of the Jews; but, in the gospel-temple, not only believers, but churches, are multiplied.

2. The 10 golden tables, v. 1. Tables whereon the shew-bread was set, v. 19. Perhaps every one of the tables had 12 loaves of shew-bread on it. As the house was enlarged, the house-keeping was.

3. A golden altar, v. 19. on which they burnt incense. Probably this was enlarged, in proportion to the brazen altar. Christ, who, once for all, made atonement for sin, ever lives, making intercession, in virtue of that atonement.

V. 11—22. We have here such a summary, both of the brass-work, and the gold-work of the temple, as we had before, 1 K. 7: 13, &c. Huram his father, v. 16. probably was a sort of a nick-name by which Huram was commonly known, Father Huram; the king of Tyre called him Huram Abi, my father; in compliance with whom Solomon called him his; he being a great artist, and father of the artificers in brass and iron. He acquitted himself well, both for ingenuity and industry. Solomon was very generous. Freely he has received, and he will freely give. When he had made vessels enough for the present, he would not convert the remainder of the brass to his own use; it is devoted to God, and shall be used for Him.

CHAP. V. V. 1—10. This agrees with what is said, 1 K. 8: 2, &c. of the solemn introducing of the ark into the new-erected temple.

1. No great solemnity was needed on bringing in the dedicated things, v. 1. They added to its wealth and perhaps to its beauty; but could not add to its holiness; the temple sanctified the gold, Matt. 23: 17. Solomon would be just both to God and to his father. Whatever David had dedicated he would by no means alienate. Children that would inherit their godly parents' blessing, must religiously pursue their pious intentions. Dedicated things must not be alienated. It is sacrilege.

2. But it was fit the ark should be brought in with great solemnity; and so it was, v. 4—7. All the other vessels were made new, and larger, in proportion to the house, than they had been in the tabernacle; but the ark, the mercy-seat, and the cherubim were the same; the presence and the grace of God are the same in little assemblies as in large ones, in the poor condition of the church, as in its prosperous estate; wherever two or three are gathered together in Christ's name, there is He as truly, as if there were two or three thousand. Unto this day, v. 9. does not mean the day when this book was written after the captivity, but when that was written, out of which this story was transcribed. It might be better read, they were there unto this day, the day of Jerusalem's desolations, that fatal day, Ps. 137: 7. The ark was a type of Christ, and, as such, a token of God's presence. That gracious promise, Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world, does, in effect, bring the ark into our religious assemblies, if we by faith and prayer put that promise in suit; and this we should be most solicitous and earnest for; Lord, if thy presence go not up with us, wherefore should we go up? The temple itself, if Christ leave it, is a desolate place, Matt. 23: 38.

3. With the ark they brought up the tabernacle, and all the holy vessels in it, v. 5. They were not alienated, because dedicated to God; not altered or melted down for the new work, because not needed; but they were carefully laid up as monuments of antiquity; probably as many of the vessels as were fit, were still used.

4. This was done with great joy, v. 3, 6. Note, (1.) The establishment of the public worship of God, according to his institution, and with the tokens of his presence, is, and ought to be, matter

o 1 K. 7:40,45.
* Or, bowls.
† Heb. finished to make.
p 3:15—17.
q 1 K. 7:41.
r Ex. 28:33,34. 1 K. 7:42. Cant. 4:13. Jer. 52:23.
‡ Heb. face of the.
s 1 K. 7:27—43.
§ Or, caldrons. 6.
t 2—5.
u 11. Ex. 27:3. 38:3. Zech. 14:20,21.
x 1 Sam. 2:13,14. 1 Chr. 28:17. y 1 K. 7:13,14,45. Hiram.
z 2:13.
‖ Heb. made bright, or scoured.
¶ Heb. thicknesses of the ground.
a 1 K. 7:46. Zarthan.
b 1 K. 7:47. 1 Chr. 22:3,14. Jer. 52:20. c 36:10,18. 1 K. 7:48—50. 2 K. 24:13. 25:13—15. Ezra 1:7—11. Jer. 28:3. 52:18,19. Dan. 5:2,3,23. d 26:16—18. Ex. 30:1—10. 37:25—29. Rev. 8:3. 9:13.
e Ex. 25:23—30. Lev. 24:5—8. 1 Chr. 28:16. f 7. Ex. 25:31—37.
g Ex. 27:20,21.
h 1 K. 6:5,16,17. 8:6. Ps. 28:2.
i 5. Ex. 25:31. 37:20. 1 K. 6:18,29,35.
 Heb. perfections of.
k Ex. 37:23. 1 K. 7:50. 2 K. 12:13. 25:14. Jer. 52:18.
†† Or, bowls.
l 1 K. 6:31,32.
a 1 K. 7:51. 1 Chr. 22:14. 26:26—28.
b 1. 2 K. 8:1—11. 1 Chr. 28:1.
c 1 Chr. 15:12. 24:6,31. 26:26.
d 1 4. 2 Sam. 6:12. 1 Chr. 16:1.
e 2 Sam. 5:7.
f 7:8—10. Lev. 23:34—36. 1 K. 8:2.
g Num. 4:15. Josh. 3:6. 6:6. 1 K. 8:3. 1 Chr. 15:2,12—14.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The furniture of the temple, compared with that of the tabernacle, plainly instructed God's ancient people, that his church would be gradually enlarged, and his worshippers immensely multiplied: and, blessed be God, in the person, sacrifice, and offices of Christ, there is an abundant sufficiency for any multitudes, however large, who can ever come to the Father through Him —May the preaching of the Gospel hold Him forth, as crucified for sinners, to all the nations of the earth; and may his Spirit prepare the hearts of all the inhabitants, to welcome his salvation; for all things else are now ready. SCOTT.

---

seen through the ornaments with which they were decorated. 1 K. 7:15—22.) SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. V. V. 2—5. M. H.—Levites. (4) Perhaps the Levites, of 5 And they brought up the ark, and [h] the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, these did the priests and the Levites bring up.

6 Also [i] king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel that were assembled unto him before the ark, sacrificed sheep and oxen, which could not be told nor numbered for multitude.

7 And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto his place, [k] to the oracle of the house, into the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims.

8 For the cherubims spread forth their wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and [l] the staves thereof above.

9 And they drew out the staves of the ark, that [m] the ends of the staves were seen from the ark before the oracle; but they were not seen without. And [*] there it is unto this day.

10 There was nothing in the ark [n] save the two tables which Moses put therein at Horeb, † when [o] the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of Egypt.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place; (for all the priests that were ‡ present were [p] sanctified, and did not then [q] wait by course:

12 Also [r] the Levites which were the singers, all of them of [s] Asaph, of Heman, of Jeduthun, with their sons and their brethren, being [t] arrayed in white linen, having [u] cymbals and psalteries and harps, stood at the east end of the altar, and with them [x] an hundred and twenty priests sounding with trumpets:)

13 It came even to pass, as the trumpeters and singers were [y] as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the LORD, and when they lifted up their voice with [z] the trumpets and cymbals and instruments of music, and praised the LORD, saying, For [a] he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever: that [b] then the house was filled with a cloud, even the house of the LORD;

14 So that [c] the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud: for [d] the glory of the LORD had filled the house of God.

CHAP. VI.

Solomon blesses the people, and praises God, 1—11. His prayer at the dedication of the temple, 12—39. He concludes by earnestly entreating the Lord's special presence and blessing, 40—42.

THEN said Solomon, [e] the LORD hath said that he would dwell in the thick darkness.

of great joy to any people. (2.) When Christ is formed in a soul, the law written in the heart, the ark of the covenant settled there, so that it becomes the temple of the Holy Ghost, there is true satisfaction in that soul. (3.) Whatever we have the comfort of, we must, by the sacrifices of praise, give God the glory of, and not be straitened therein.

V. 11—14. Observe here,

I. How God took possession of the temple, v. 13. 1. Thus He signified his acceptance of it, to be the same to Him, the tabernacle of Moses was, and assured them He would be the same in it; for by a cloud He made his public entry into that, Ex. 40: 34. 2. Thus He considered the infirmity of those to whom He manifested Himself; the dazzling lustre of the divine light, would have overpowered them; He therefore spreads a cloud upon it, Job 26: 9. Christ revealed things to his disciples, as they were able to bear, and in parables, which wrapped divine things as in a cloud. 3. Thus He would affect all that worshipped in his courts with holy reverence and fear, Luke 9: 34. 4. Thus He would intimate the darkness of that dispensation, by reason of which, they could not steadfastly look to the end of the things now abolished, 2 Cor. 3: 13.

II. When He took possession. 1. When the priests were come out, v. 11. This is the way of giving possession. All must come out, that the rightful Owner may come in. Would we have God dwell in our hearts? We must leave room; let every thing else give way. We are here told that, on this occasion, the whole family of the priests attended, and not any one particular course, v. 11. there was work enough for them all, when such a multitude of sacrifices were to be offered, and it was fit they should all be eye-witnesses of this solemnity, and receive the impressions of it. 2. When the singers and musicians praised God. This is very observable; the sacrifice of praise pleaseth the Lord better than that of an ox or bullock, Ps. 69: 31. All the singers and musicians were employed, v. 12. and when this part of the service began, the glory of God appeared. Observe, (1.) It was when they were unanimous; the Holy Ghost descended on the apostles, when they met with one accord, Acts 2: 1. Where unity is, the Lord commands the blessing. (2.) It was when they were lively and hearty, and lifted up their voice to praise the Lord. God is pleased with fervent service. (3.) It was when they were, in their praises, celebrating the everlasting mercy and goodness of God. As there is no one saying oftener repeated in scripture than this, his mercy endureth for ever, (26 times in Ps. 136. and often elsewhere,) so there is none more signally owned from heaven; it was not the expression of some rapturous flights the priests were singing when the glory of God appeared, but this plain song, He is good, and his mercy endureth for ever

This should endear those words to us. God's goodness is his glory, and He is pleased when we give Him the glory of it.

III. The effect. The priests themselves could not stand to minister, by reason of the cloud, v. 14 which, as it was an evidence that the law made men priests that had infirmity, so (as Patrick observes) it was a plain intimation, that the Levitical priesthood should cease, and stand no longer to minister, when the Messiah should come, in whom the fulness of the Godhead should dwell bodily. In Him the glory of God dwelt among us, but covered with a cloud. The Word was made flesh; and when He comes to his temple, like a refiner's fire, who may abide the day of his coming? And who shall stand when He appeareth? Mal. 3. 1, 2.

CHAP. VI. The glory of the Lord, in the cloud, having filled the house, by which God manifested his presence there, Solomon immediately improves

h 1:3. 1 K. 8:4,6.
i 2 Sam. 6:13. 1 K. 8:5. 1 Chr. 16: 1,2. 29:21.
k 4:20. Ex. 37:6—9. 1 K. 6:23—28. 8:6,7.
l Ex. 25:12—15. 37:3—5. Num. 4:6.
m 1 K. 8:8,9.
* Or, they are there: as, 1 K. 6:8. n Ex. 31:18. 32:15,16,19. 34:1. 40:20. Deut. 10:2—5. Heb. 9:4.
† Or, where.
o Ex. 19:5. 24:7,8. Deut. 29:1,10—14. Jer. 31:31—34. Heb. 8:6—13.
‡ Heb. found.
p 29:5,15,34. 30:15,17—20. Ex. 19:10, 14,15. Job 1:5.
q 35:4. 1 Chr. 24:
r 29:25. 1 Chr. 15:16—22. 16:4—6,41, 42. 23:5.30. 25:1—7. Ezra 3:10,11 s 1 Chr. 6:33,39. 25:6. Ps. 50: 62: 88. titles.
t 1 Chr. 15:27. Rev. 15:6. 19:8.
u Ps. 92:3. 149:3. 150:3—5.
x Num. 10:1—5. Josh. 6:6—20. 1 Chr 15:24. 16:6.
y Ps. 95:1,2. 100:1,2. Is. 52:8. Jer. 32:39. Acts 4:32. Rom. 15:6. Rev 5:8—14.
z Ps. 68:25,26.
a 7:3. 20:21. 1 Chr. 16:34,41. Ezra 3:11. Ps. 136:1,&c. Jer. 33:11. b Ex. 40:34,35. 1 K. 8:10—12. c 7:2. 1 Tim. 6:16.
d Ex. 40:35. Is. 6:1—4. Ez. 10:4 Rev. 15:8.
e Ex. 20:21. 24:15—18. Lev. 16:2. Deut. 4:11. 1 K. 8:12. Ps. 18:8—11 97:2. Neh. 1:3. Heb. 12:18.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The eye of our faith must, in every service, be primarily directed to the atoning sacrifice of Christ: but, in subordination to it, our sacrifices of praise and thanksgiving are peculiarly well pleasing unto God; if the harmony of our voices, or musical instruments, is really accompanied with the sweet melody of a humble and grateful heart.—The ministers of God should always be ready, both in body and soul, for every service, ordinary or extraordinary: and it has a very unfavorable appearance, even in the eyes of men in general, when they manifest an unwillingness, or even backwardness, to exceed that measure, which entitles them to their emoluments. (Mal. 1: 9—11.)—When the worshippers of God are of one mind, as well as in one place, they may expect his more immediate presence and blessing: if He take possession of our hearts to sanctify them, He will exclude whatever interferes with his design of filling them with his glory; and though darkness now rests upon our views of heavenly things, yet, in the temple above, 'the LORD Himself will be our everlasting Light,' and we shall know even as we are known. (Rev. 21: 22—27. 22: 2—5.) May He prepare us for that land of perfect knowledge, purity, and felicity! SCOTT.

---

the family of Kohath, carried the ark into the courts of the temple, and then the priests conveyed it into its proper place. (Num. 4:6—13. 1 K. 8:1—3.) SCOTT.

Verse 6.

'The observation of Victorinus Strigelius on this history is very pious: That nothing is more lovely in human things than such concord, as here appeared among all orders of men, both of teachers and learners, magistrates, soldiers, and people, who were all combined to promote the honor and service of God. Such unity ought to be studied by Christian people, that we may be all one, as our Savior prayed.' Patrick. SCOTT.

2 But [b] I have built an house of habitation for thee, and a place for thy dwelling for ever.

3 And the king [c] turned his face, and [d] blessed the whole congregation of Israel: and [e] all the congregation of Israel stood.

4 And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, [f] who hath with his hands fulfilled that which he spake with his mouth to my father David, saying,

5 [h] Since the day that I brought forth my people out of the land of Egypt, I chose no city among all the tribes of Israel, to build an house in, that [i] my name might be there; [k] neither chose I any man to be a ruler over my people Israel:

6 But I have [l] chosen Jerusalem, that my name might be there; and have [m] chosen David to be over my people Israel.

7 Now [n] it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

8 But the LORD said to David my father, Forasmuch as it was in thine heart to build an house for my name, [o] thou didst well in that it was in thine heart:

9 Notwithstanding, thou shalt not build the house; but [p] thy son which shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house for my name.

10 The LORD therefore hath [q] performed his word that he hath spoken; for [r] I am risen up in the room of David my father, and am set on the throne of Israel, [s] as the LORD promised, and have built the house for the name of the LORD God of Israel:

11 And in it have [t] I put the ark, wherein is the covenant of the LORD, that he made with the children of Israel.

12 ¶ And [u] he stood before the altar of the LORD in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and [x] spread forth his hands;

13 (For Solomon had made a brazen [y] scaffold, of five cubits * long, and five cubits broad, and three cubits high, and had set it in the midst of [z] the court: and upon it he stood, and [a] kneeled down upon his knees before all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven;)

14 And said, [b] O LORD God of Israel, there is [c] no god like thee in the heaven, nor in the earth; which [d] keepest covenant, and showest [e] mercy unto thy servants, that [f] walk before thee with all their hearts:

15 Thou which hast kept with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him; and [g] spakest with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

16 Now therefore, O LORD God of Israel, [h] keep with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, [i] saying, † There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit upon the throne of Israel; yet so that thy children take heed to their way [k] to walk in my law, as thou hast walked before me.

17 Now then, [l] O LORD God of Israel, [m] let thy word be verified, which thou hast spoken unto thy servant David.

[Practical Observations.]

18 But [n] will God in the opportunity, and addresses himself to God, as a God now, in a peculiar manner, nigh at hand.

V. 1—11. It is of great consequence, in all our religious actions, that we design well, and our eye be single. If Solomon had built this temple in the pride of his heart, as Ahasuerus made his feast, it would not have turned at all to his account. But he here declares on what inducements he undertook it, and they are such as not only justify, but magnify, the undertaking.

1. For the glory and honor of God, v. 10, 2. 'He has indeed, as to us, made darkness his pavilion, v. 1. but let this house be the residence of that darkness; for it is in the upper world that He dwells in light, such as no eye can approach.'

2. In compliance with the choice God had been pleased to make of Jerusalem, v. 6.

3. In pursuance of his father's good intentions, which he never had an opportunity to execute, v. 7. God approved of it, though He permitted him not to execute it, v. 8. Temple-work is often thus done; one sows, and another reaps, John 4: 37, 38. one age begins what the next brings to perfection; and let not the wisest think it any disparagement to them, to pursue the good designs of their predecessors, and build on their foundation. Every good piece is not an original.

4. He did it in performance of the word God had spoken, v. 9, 10. It is fit He who appoints the work, should appoint the workmen; and those may go on in their work with great satisfaction, who see their call to it clear.

V. 12—42. Solomon had, in the foregoing vs. signed, and sealed, as it were, the deed of dedication, by which the temple was appropriated to the honor and service of God. Now here he prays the consecration-prayer, by which it was made a figure of Christ, the great Mediator, through whom we are to offer all our prayers, and to expect all God's favors, and to whom we are to have an eye in every thing wherein we have to do with God.

We opened the particulars of this prayer, 1 K. 8. therefore shall now only glean up some few passages in it, which may be the proper subjects of our meditation. Here are,

I. Some doctrinal truths occasionally laid down. As, 1. That the God of Israel is a Being of incomparable perfection, v. 14. 2. That He is, and will be, true to every word He has spoken; and all that serve Him in sincerity, shall certainly find Him both faithful and kind: He will both keep covenant with them, and show mercy to them, v 14. 3. That He is a Being infinite and immense, whom the heaven, and heaven of heavens, cannot contain, and to whose felicity nothing is added by the utmost we can do in his service, v. 18. He is infinitely beyond the bounds of the creation, and infinitely above the praises of all intelligent creatures. 4. That He, and He only knows the hearts of the children of men, v. 30. All men's thoughts, aims, and affections, are naked and open before Him. 5. That there is no such thing as a sinless perfection in this life, v. 36. There is no man b 2:4—6. 2 Sam. 7:13. 1 K. 8:13. 1 Chr. 17:12. 22:10,11. 28:6,20. Ps. 132:5,13,14. John 4:21—23. Heb. 9: 11,12. Rev. 21:3.

c 1 K. 8:14.
d 29:29. Josh. 22:6. 1 K. 8:55—61. 1 Chr. 16:2. Luke 24:50,51.
e 1 K. 8:14. Neh. 8:5—7. Matt. 13:2.
f 1 K. 8:15. 1 Chr. 29:10,20. Ps. 41: 13. 68:4,32—35. 72:18,19. Luke 1: 68. Eph. 1:3.
g 1 Chr. 17:12. Ps. 138:1,2. Matt. 24: 35. Luke 1:70. h 2 Sam. 7:6,7. 1 K. 8:16.
i Ex. 20:24. 23:21. Deut. 12:5,11. Dan. 9:19. k 1 Sam. 10:24. 13:13,14. 15:23. 2 Sam. 7:15,16.
l 12:13. Ps. 48:1. 78:68—70. 132:13. Is. 14:32.
m 1 Sam. 16:1. Ps. 89:19,20. n 2 Sam. 7:2,3. 1 K. 5:3. 8:17. 1 Chr. 22:7. 28:2.
o 1 K. 8:18—21. Mark 14:8. 2 Cor. 8:12. p 2 Sam. 7:12,13. 1 Chr. 17:4,11,12.
q See on 4.
r 1:1. 1 K. 2:12. 3:6,7. 1 Chr. 29: 15,23. Ec. 1:4. 2:18,19.
s 1 Chr. 28:5.
t 5:10. Ex. 40:20. 1 K. 8:9,21. Heb. 9:4. u 1 K. 8:22. 2 K. 11:14. 23:3. Ps. 29:1,2. x Ex. 9:33. Job. 11:13. Ps. 28:2. 63: 4. 68:31. 141:2. 143:6. Is. 50:15. 1 Tim. 2:8.
y Neh. 8:4.
* Heb. the length thereof, &c.
z 4:9. 1 K. 6:36. 7:12.
a 1 K. 8:54. Ezra 9:5. Ps. 95:6. Dan. 6:10. Luke 22:41. Acts 20:36. 21:5. b Gen. 39:20. 35:10. Ex. 3:15. 1 K. 8:23. 18:36. 1 Chr. 29:10,20. c Ex. 15:11. 2 Sam. 7:22. Ps. 86:8. 89:6,8. Jer. 10:6,16. d Deut. 7:9. Neh. 1:5. Ps. 89:28. Dan. 9:4. Mic. 7:18—20. Luke 1:72.
e Ps. 103:17,18. Luke 1:50,54,55.
f Gen. 5:24. 17:1. 1 K. 3:6. 6:12. Luke 1:6. 1 Thes. 2:12. g 2 Sam. 7:12. 1 K. 8:24. 1 Chr. 22: 9,10. h Ez. 36:37. John 15:14,15.
i 7:18. 2 Sam. 7:12—16. 1 K. 2:4. Ps. 132:12.
† Heb. There shall not a man be cut off.
k Ps. 26:3. 119:1.
l 4,14. Ex. 24:10. Is. 41:17. 45:3.
m 2 Sam. 7:25—29. Jer. 11:5. n 1 K. 8:27. Ps. 113:5,6. Is. 57:15. 66:1. Acts 7:48,49. 17:24.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—17. It is a great mercy to be enabled to go through important services to the church, in simple obedience, and in dependence on the Lord; and to witness the accomplishment of them, with humble gratitude to the Giver of both the will and ability, with the success; adoring his power, faithfulness, and goodness in every part of it, without expressing self-importance or self-complacency, which rob God of his glory. Here then the main guard should be placed, by persons employed as instruments for the good of others: this, this above all the rest, should dictate their constant prayers; and all, who wish success to their attempts, should join in prayer for them, that they may be kept humble, and rendered more and more humble, in proportion as they are honored by God for usefulness. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. VI. V. 5, 6. Neither chose I, &c. The judges and Saul were chosen by God, for a season, to be rulers of Israel; but not to establish a permanent and hereditary authority over that people, as was the case with David.—Jerusalem. (6) This is not found in Kings.—Jerusalem was expressly marked out, by the building of the temple, to be the centre of the worship of Israel; as the Lord had before spoken by Moses. (M. R. l.—Deut. 12:5—7.) SCOTT.

very deed dwell with men on the earth? Behold, [o] heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain thee: [p] how much less this house which I have built!

19 [q] Have respect therefore to the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, [r] to hearken unto the cry and the prayer, which thy servant prayeth before thee:

20 That [s] thine eyes may be open upon this house day and night, upon the place whereof thou hast said that thou wouldest [t] put thy name there; to hearken unto the prayer which thy servant prayeth *toward this place.

21 Hearken therefore unto the supplications of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, which they shall † make toward this place: hear thou from [u] thy dwelling place, even from heaven; and when thou hearest, [x] forgive.

22 ¶ If a man [y] sin against his neighbor, ‡ and an oath be laid upon him to make him swear, and [z] the oath come before thine altar in this house;

23 Then hear thou [a] from heaven, and do, and judge thy servants, by [b] requiting the wicked, by recompensing his way upon his own head; and by [c] justifying the righteous, by giving him according to his righteousness.

24 ¶ And if thy people Israel be § put to the worse before the enemy, [d] because they have sinned against thee; and [e] shall return and confess thy name, and [f] pray and make supplication before thee ‖ in this house;

25 Then hear thou from the heavens, and [g] forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land [h] which thou gavest to them and to their fathers.

26 ¶ When [i] the heaven is shut up, and [k] there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; yet [l] if they pray towards this place, and confess thy name, and [m] turn from their sin, when [n] thou dost afflict them;

27 Then hear thou from heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, [o] when thou hast taught them the [p] good way wherein they should walk; and [q] send rain upon thy land, which thou hast given unto thy people for an inheritance.

28 ¶ If there be [r] dearth in the land, if there be pestilence, if there be blasting, or mildew, [s] locusts, or caterpillars; if [t] their enemies besiege them in the ¶ cities of their land; [u] whatsoever sore or whatsoever sickness there be:

29 Then [x] what prayer or what supplication soever shall be made of any man, or of all thy people Israel, when every one shall [y] know his own sore and his own grief, and shall [z] spread forth his hands  in this house:

30 Then hear thou from heaven thy dwelling place, and forgive, and [a] render unto every man according unto all his ways, whose heart thou knowest; (for [b] thou only knowest the hearts of the children of men;)

31 That they may [c] fear thee, to walk in thy ways, †† so long as they live in the land which thou gavest unto our fathers.

32 ¶ Moreover, concerning [d] the stranger, which is not of thy people Israel, but [e] is come from a far country for thy great name's sake, and [f] thy mighty hand, and thy stretched-out arm; [g] if they come and pray in this house;

33 Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for; [h] that all people of the earth may know thy name, and fear thee, as doth thy people Israel, and may know that ‡‡ this house which I have built is called by thy name.

34 ¶ If [i] thy people go out to war against their enemies [k] by the way that thou shalt send them, and [l] they pray unto thee [m] toward this city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name;

35 Then [n] hear thou from the heavens their prayer and their supplication, and [o] maintain their §§ cause.

36 ¶ If [p] they sin against thee, (q for there is no man which sinneth not,) and [r] thou be angry with them, and deliver them over before their enemies, and ||| they

2. Hear and accept the prayers made in, or toward, that place, v. 21. He asks not that God should help them, whether they prayed for themselves or no, but in answer to their prayers. Even Christ's intercessions do not supersede, but encourage, our supplications. When Thou hearest, forgive. Note, The forgiveness of sin makes way for all answers to our prayers.

3. Give judgment according to equity, on all appeals to Him, v. 23, 30. God sitteth on the throne, judging right.

4. Return in mercy to his people, when they repented and reformed, and sought unto Him, [t] 25, 27, 38, 39. This we also may, in faith, pray for, building on the repeated declarations God has made of his readiness to accept penitents.

5. Welcome the strangers to this house, and o 2:6. Ps. 139:7—10. Jer. 23:24. 2 Cor. 12:2. p 32:15. Job 4:19. 9:14. 25:4—6. Matt. 7:11.

---

q 1 K. 8:28. Ps. 74:20. 130:2. Dan. 9:17—19. Luke 18:1—7.
r Ps. 4:1. 5:1,2. 20:1—3. John 17:20. s 16:9. 1 K. 8:29,30. 2 K. 19:16. Neh. 1:6. Ps. 34:15. t 6. Deut. 26:2. Col. 2:9.

* Or, in this place. Dan. 6:10.
† Heb. pray.
u 30. Job 22:12—14. Ps. 123:1. Ec. 5:2. Is. 57:15. Matt. 6:9.
x Ps. 85:2,3. 130:3,4. Is. 43:25. Dan. 9:19. Mic. 7:18,19. Matt. 6:12.
y 1 K. 8:31,32.
‡ Heb. and he require an oath of him. Ex. 22:11. Lev. 5:1. Prov. 30:9. z Num. 5:19—22. Matt. 23:18.
a 21.
b Num. 5:27. Prov. 1:31. Is. 3:11. Rom. 2:9.
c Deut. 25:1. Prov. 17:15. Is. 3:10. Ez. 13:20. Rom. 2:10.
§ Or, be smitten. Lev. 26:17,37. Deut. 28:25,48. Josh. 7:8. 1 K. 8:33,34. Ps. 44:10. d Josh. 7:11,12. Judg. 2:11,14,15. 2 K. 17:7—18.
e Lev. 26:40—42. Deut. 4:29—31. 30: 1—6. Neh. 1:8,9. Prov. 28:13. Jer. 3:12,13.
f Ezra 9:5,&c. Neh. 9:1,&c. Is. 63: 64: Dan. 9:3,&c.
‖ Or, toward. 20.
g Ezra 1:1—6. Ps. 106:47. Jer. 33: 6—13. h Gen. 13:15. Ex. 6:8. Josh. 21:43.
i Lev. 26:19. Deut. 11:17. 28:23. 1 K. 17:1. Luke 4:25. k Is. 50:1,2. Ez. 14:13. Am. 4:4—9. Rev. 11:6. l Jer. 14:1—9. Joel 1:13—20. 2:15—17. m Prov. 28:13. Ez. 18:27—32. n 33:12,13. Hos. 5:15. 6:1.
o 1 K. 8:35,36. Ps. 25:4,5,8,12. 94:12. 119:33. Mic. 4:2. John 6:45. p Is. 30:21. Jer. 6:16. 42:3.
q 1 K. 18:40—45. Job 37:11—14. Ps. 68:9. Jer. 14:22. Joel 2:23. Zech. 10:1. Jam. 5:17,18.
r Lev. 26:16,25,26. Deut. 28:21—61. Ruth 1:1. 1 K. 8:37—40. 2 K. 6:25 —28. 8:1. s Ex. 10:12—15. Joel 1:4—7. 2:25. Rev. 9:3—11. t 12:2—5. 20:9—13. 32:1. Lev. 26:25. Deut. 28:52—57.
¶ Heb. land of their gates.
u 1 K. 8:37,38.
x Ps. 33:12,13. 50:5. 91:15.
y Prov. 14:10. z 12,13. Is. 1:15.
 Or, toward.
a Ps. 18:20—26. Jer. 17:10. Ez. 18:30. Matt. 16:27.
b 1 K. 8:39. 1 Chr. 28:9. 29:17. Ps. 11:4,5. John 2:25. Heb. 4:13. Rev. 2:23. c Ex. 20:20. 1 Sam. 12:24. Job 28:28. Ps. 128:1. 130:4. Acts 9:31.
†† Heb. all the days which they live upon the face of the land.
d Ex. 12:48,49. Ruth 1:16. 2:11,12. 1 K. 8:41—43. 10:1,2. Is. 56:3—7. Matt. 2:1. 8:10,11. John 12:20. Acts 8:27. 10:1—4. Eph. 2:12,13. e Ex. 18:8—12. Josh. 2:9. 9:9. 2 K. 5:3,8,15. Is. 60:1—10. Zech. 8:22. Matt. 12:42.
f Ex. 3:19,20. 13:14. Ps. 89:13. g Is. 66:20. Zech. 14:16,17. Acts 2:10. h 1 Sam. 17:46. 2 K. 19:19. Ps. 22:27. 67:2. 137:4,5. Is. 11:10. 49:6. 54: 1—3. Rev. 11:15.
‡‡ Heb. thy name is called upon this house. Num. 6:27. 1 K. 8:16.
i Deut. 20:1—4. Josh. 1:2—5. 1 K. 8: 44,45.
k Num. 31:2—6. Josh. 8:1—8. Judg. 1:1,2. 1 Sam. 15:3,18. l 14:9—12. 18:31. 20:6—13. 32:20,21. m 6. 1 K. 8:13. Is. 14:32. Dan. 6:10. n Dan. 9:17—19.
o Is. 37:21—36.
§§ Or, right. Ps. 9:4. Jer. 5:28.
p 1 K. 8:46,50.
q Job 15:14—16. Ps. 130:3. 143:2. Prov. 20:9. Ec. 7:20. Jam. 3:2. 1 John 1:8—10. r Lev. 26:34—44. Deut. 4:26,27. 28: 36,64—68. 29:24—28. 2 K. 17:6,18, 23. 25:21. Dan. 9:7—14. Luke 21:24.
||| Heb. they that take them captives carry them away.

Verses 22—40.

Turn from their sin. (26) All the prayers contained in these vs. for deliverance from suffering, imply that sin would be the cause of that outward anger, which inflicted the suffering, and are connected with prayers for the repentance and conversion of the sufferers. (24, 25, 36, 37, 39. 7:14.) The prophecies of Israel's restoration are all connected in a similar manner. (Is. 59:20, 21. Jer. 31:18—20, 33, 34. 32:37—41. Ez. 36:25—32. Mic. 7:14—20. Zech. 12.9—14. 13:1.)—Bethink themselves. (37) Notes, Ps. 119:57—63, v. 59, 60. Ez. 18:28. Hag. 1:5—11. Luke 15:17—19. SCOTT.

carry them away captives unto a land far off or near;

37 Yet [s] if they * bethink themselves in the land whither they are carried captive, and turn and pray unto thee in the land of their captivity, saying, [t] We have sinned, we have done amiss, and have dealt wickedly:

38 If they [u] return to thee with all their heart and with all their soul, in the land of their captivity, whither they have carried them captives, and [x] pray toward their land which thou gavest unto their fathers, and toward [y] the city which thou hast chosen, and toward the house which I have built for thy name:

39 Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling place, their prayer and their supplications, and maintain their † cause, and [z] forgive thy people which have sinned against thee.

40 Now, [a] my God, let, I beseech thee, [b] thine eyes be open, and let [c] thine ears be attent unto the prayer ‡ that is made in this place.

41 Now therefore [d] arise, O LORD God, into [e] thy resting place, thou, and [f] the ark of thy strength: let [g] thy priests, O LORD God, be clothed with salvation, and let [h] thy saints rejoice in goodness.

42 O LORD God, turn not away the face of [i] thine anointed: [k] remember the mercies of David thy servant.

CHAP. VII.

God testifies his acceptance of Solomon's prayer by fire from heaven; The glory of the Lord fills the temple, and the people worship, 1—3. Solomon's numerous sacrifices at the dedication, 4—7. The congregation keep the feast of tabernacles, and the feast of the dedication, fourteen days, 8, 9. He dismisses the people joyful, and is prospered, 10, 11. God again appears to Solomon, and makes a covenant with him, 12—22.

NOW [a] when Solomon had made an end of praying, [b] the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt-offering and the sacrifices; and [c] the glory of the LORD filled the house.

2 And [d] the priests could not enter into the house of the LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD's house.

3 And when all the children of Israel saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the LORD upon the house, [e] they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worshipped, and praised the LORD, saying, [f] For he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

4 Then the king and all the people offered sacrifices before the LORD.

5 And king Solomon offered [g] a sacrifice of twenty and two thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep: so the king and all the people [h] dedianswer their prayers, v. 33. for if there be in duty, why should there not be in privilege one law for the stranger, and one born in the land, Lev. 24: 22.

6. That God would, on all occasions, own and plead the cause of Israel, against all opposers, v. 35; and again, v. 39.

Lastly, He concludes this prayer with some expressions, learned of his good father, and borrowed from one of his psalms, v. 41, 42. we had them not in Kings. The whole Word of God is of use to direct us in prayer; how can we express ourselves in better language to God, than that of his own Spirit? But these words were of use, in a special manner, to direct Solomon, because they had reference to this very work he was now doing. We have them, Ps. 132: 8—10. He pleads two things, v. 42. [1.] His own relation to God, as one anointed, and God's covenant with his father: Remember the mercies of David thy servant; the piety of David toward God, so some, and so the word sometimes signifies. See Ps. 132: 1, 2, &c. Or, the promises of God to David, which were mercies to him, his great support and comfort in all his troubles. We too may plead, in the name of the Lord Jesus, thine Anointed, thy Messiah, so the Word is; thy Christ, so the LXX. Him thou hearest always, and wilt never turn away his face. We have no righteousness of our own to plead, but, Lord, remember the mercies of David thy servant. Christ is God's Servant, Isa. 42: 1. and is called David, Hos. 3: 5. Lord, remember his mercies, and accept us on account of them, Isa. 55: 3. Acts 13: 34. This must be all our desire, and all our hope, all our prayer, and all our plea, for it is all our salvation.

CHAP. VII. V. 1—11. Here is,

I. God's gracious return immediately made to Solomon's prayer. The fire came down from heaven, and consumed the sacrifice, v. 1. So God testified his acceptance of Moses, Lev. 9: 24. of Gideon, Judg. 6: 21. of David, 1 Chr. 21: 26. of Elijah, 1 K. 18: 39. and, in general, to accept the burnt-sacrifice, is, in the Hebrew phrase, to turn it to ashes, Ps. 20: 3. Let us apply this, 1 To the sufferings of Christ. That sacrifice was consumed, that we might escape: Here am I, let these go away. 2. To the sanctification of the Spirit, who descends like fire, burning up our lusts and corruptions, which must be sacrificed, or we are undone; and kindling in our souls a holy fire of pious and devout affections, always to be kept burning on the altar of the heart. The surest evidence of God's acceptance of our prayers, is the descent of this holy fire on us; Did not our

* 1—3. Luke 15:17.
† Heb. bring back to their heart.
s Ezra 9:6,7. Neh. 1:6. 9:26—30. Job 33:27,28. Ps. 106:6. Is. 64:6—12. Jer. 3:12—14. 31:18—20. Dan. 9:3—11. Luke 15:18,19. u Deut. 30:2—6. Jer. 29:12—14. Hos. 14:1—4. Joel 2:12,13. x 33:11—13. Dan. 9:3,4.
y 34.
† Or, right. 35. Zech. 1:15,16. z Ps. 25:18. Mic. 7:18—20.
a Ps. 7:3. 13:3. 22:1,2. 88:1. b 7:15. 16:9. 1 K. 8:52. Ps. 34:15. Is. 37:17. Dan. 9:17—19. c Ps. 17:1. 31:2. 116:2.
‡ Heb. of this place.
d Ps. 132:8—10,16.
e 1 Chr. 28:2.
f Josh. 3:13. 6:4,5. Ps. 110:2. Rom. 1:16.
g Is. 59:16—18. 61:3,6,10. Rom. 13:14. Gal. 3:27. Eph. 4:22—24. Rev. 19:8,14. h Neh. 9:25. Is. 65:18,19. Phil. 3:3. 4:4.
i 1 K. 1:34. Ps. 2:2. Is. 61:1. k Ps. 132:1. Is. 55:3. Acts 13:34. a 1 K. 8:54. Is. 65:24. Dan. 9:20. Acts 4:31. 16:25,26.
b Gen. 15:17. Lev. 9:24. Judg. 6:21. 1 K. 18:24,38. 1 Chr. 21:26. c 5:13,14. Ex. 40:34,35. Lev. 9:23. 1 K. 8:10,11. Is. 6:1—4. Ez. 10:3,4. 43:5. 44:4. Hag. 2:7—9. Rev. 21:23. d 5:14. Ex. 24:17. Is. 6:5. Rev. 15:8.
e Ex. 4:31. Lev. 9:24. Num. 14:5. 16:22. 1 K. 18:39. 1 Chr. 29:20. Ps. 95:6.
f 5:13. 20:21. Ezra 3:11. Ps. 103:17. 136:1,&c. Is. 63:7. Jer. 33:11. Luke 1:50. g 1:6. 5:6. 15:11. 29:32,33. 30:24. 35:7—9. 1 K. 8:62,63. 1 Chr. 29:21. Ezra 6:16,17. Ez. 45:17. Mic. 6:7.
h 2:4. Num. 7:10. 1 K. 8:63. Ezra 6:16. John 10:22.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 18—42. The more we know of God and religion, spiritually and experimentally, the more humbly we shall think of ourselves and of all our performances; the more reverentially we shall adore the infinitely glorious God, and the more entirely we shall trust to his covenant of mercy and grace, made with believing sinners in Christ.—We may and ought, unworthy as we are, to expect large answers to all our prayers, which we present for ourselves and others, through the Savior's intercession.—JEHOVAH has made our nature his resting place for ever, in the person of Emmanuel; and through Him He dwells and delights in his church of redeemed sinners. May all his ministers, of every name, be clothed with righteousness and salvation; may all his saints be made joyful in his goodness; may the numbers of both be continually increasing, till the boundaries of his church extend as wide as those of the human species! May the heart of the writer and of every reader become his resting place; may Christ dwell in us by faith, casting out every idol, cleansing us from all filthiness, consecrating us as his temples, and shedding abroad his love in us. SCOTT.

Verses 41, 42.

The temple was called the resting place of the ark, because it there had a permanent settlement. The temple likewise typified the human nature of Christ, 'in whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily;' the ark typified his meritorious obedience and sufferings, by which the holy law was magnified, and through which believing sinners approach, and hold communion with a reconciled God. The ark, the sacramental pledge of JEHOVAH's strength engaged for Israel's help, would not avail without his actual presence. This might be expected, and indeed would be visible in its effects, if 'his priests were clothed with salvation,' or righteousness. If they were partakers of salvation in their souls, and brought forth the fruits of it in their holy lives and conversation: then, their example, instructions, and ministrations, would be greatly blessed, and made very successful. Those who, as penitent believers, have obtained mercy, and are separated from the love and spirit of the world, by the influences of the sanctifying Spirit of God, are saints. Their edification, comfort, and joy, in subserviency to the glory of God, and in connection with the conversion of sinners, form the great object of religious ordinances: and the faith and piety of ministers, the purity and solemnity of their services, and the flourishing of true religion, cause them 'to rejoice in goodness,' even the goodness of the LORD; by enlarging and gratifying all their holy, pious, and benevolent affections.—These seem, therefore, the blessings peculiarly intended; though the outward protection and prosperity, of both priests and people, were also implied. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. VII. V. 1. No similar tokens of the divine acceptance attended the dedication of the second temple, after the captivity; nor was the ark restored to its place, but finally lost. (Ezra 3:12, 13. 6: 16—21.) ID.

Verses 4—10.

Solomon's blessing the people, when risen from his knees; praising cated the house of God.

6 And [i] the priests waited on their offices: [j] the Levites also with instruments of music of the LORD, [k] which David the king had made to praise the LORD, [l] because his mercy endureth for ever, when David praised by their * ministry: and [m] the priests sounded trumpets before them, and all Israel stood.

7 Moreover Solomon [n] hallowed the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings, because [o] the brazen altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt-offerings, and the meat-offerings, and the fat.

8 Also at the same time Solomon [p] kept the feast seven days, and all Israel with him, [q] a very great congregation, from [r] the entering in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt.

9 And in the eighth day they made a † solemn assembly: for they kept the dedication of the altar [s] seven days, and the feast seven days.

10 And on the [t] three and twentieth day of the seventh month he sent the people away into their tents, [u] glad and merry in heart [x] for the goodness that the LORD had showed unto David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people.

11 Thus [y] Solomon finished the house of the LORD, and the king's house: and [z] all that came into Solomon's heart to make in the house of the LORD, and in his own house, he prosperously effected.

hearts burn within us? Luke 24: 32.

II. The grateful return to God, v. 3, 4, 5. They now increased their sacrifices. Tokens of God's favor to us should enlarge our hearts in his service, and make us to abound therein more and more. The king's example stirred up the people. Good work is then likely to go on, when the leaders of a people lead it. Rather than any sacrifice should be turned back, (though we may suppose the blood of all was sprinkled on the altar,) the flesh of the burnt, and fat of the peace offerings, were burnt in the midst of the court, v. 7. which Solomon either hallowed for that service, or by it. The priests too did their part, and the singers and musicians theirs, v. 6. with the instruments David made, and the hymn David had put into their hand, as some think it may be read, meaning that, 1 Chr. 16: 7. Or, as he employed, directed, and encouraged, them in this work of praising God; their performances were accepted as his act, and he is said to praise by their ministry.

The whole congregation expressed the greatest joy and satisfaction. They kept the feast of the dedication of the altar seven days, from the 2d to the 9th; the 10th day was the day of atonement, when they were to afflict their souls for sin, and that was not unseasonable in the midst of their rejoicings; then, on the 15th day, began the feast of tabernacles, which continued to the 22d, and they did not part till the 23d. We must never grudge the time that we spend in the worship of God, and communion with Him; nor think it long, or grow weary of it. Solomon then went on in his work, and by God's grace prosperously effected all he designed, v. 11.

V. 12—22. That God accepted Solomon's prayer, appeared by the fire from heaven. But a prayer may be accepted, and yet not answered in the letter; therefore God appeared to him in the night, as He did once before, ch. 1: 7. and after 12 ¶ And [a] the LORD appeared to Solomon by night, and said unto him, [b] I have heard thy prayer, and [c] have chosen this place to myself, for [d] an house of sacrifice.

13 If [e] I shut up heaven that there be no rain, or if [f] I command the locusts to devour the land, or if [g] I send pestilence among my people;

14 If [h] my people, ‡ which are called by my name, shall [i] humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and [k] turn from their wicked ways; then [l] will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will [m] heal their land.

15 Now [n] mine eyes shall be open, and mine ears attent unto the prayer § that is made in this place.

16 For now [o] have I chosen and sanctified this house, that [p] my name may be there for ever: and [q] mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

17 And as for thee, [r] if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, and do according to all that I have commanded thee, and shalt [s] observe my statutes and my judgments;

18 Then [t] will I establish the throne of thy kingdom, according [u] as I have covenanted with David thy father, saying, There [x] shall not ‖ fail thee a man to be ruler in Israel.

19 But [y] if ye turn away, and forsake my statutes and my commandments, which I have set before you, and [z] shall go and serve other gods, and worship them;

20 Then [a] will I pluck them up by the roots out of my land which I have given them; and this house, which I have sanctified for my name, will I cast out of my sight, and will make it to be [b] a proverb and a by-word among all nations.

21 And [c] this house, which is high, shall be [d] an astonishment to every one that passeth by it; so that he shall say, [e] Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and unto this house?

22 And it shall be answered, [f] Because they forsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them

i 1 Chr. 16:39,40. 24:1—3.
j 29:25. 1 Chr. 6:31,32. 15:16—21. 16: 4—6,41,42. 25:1—7.
k Am. 6:5.
l See on f. 3.—1 Chr. 16:34. Ps. 106. 1. 107:1. 118:1—4. 138:8.
* Heb. hand. Is. 52:6. m 5:12. Num. 10:1—10. Josh. 6:4. 1 Chr. 13:8. 15:24. 16:6,42. n 36:14. Num. 16:37,38. 1 K. 8:64. Heb. 13:10—12.
o 4:1.
p Lev. 23:34—43. Num. 29:12—38. Deut. 16:13—15. 1 K. 8:65. Neh. 8: 13—18. Zech. 14:16—19. John 7:2, 37—39.
q 30:13.
r Gen. 15:18. Num. 34:5—8. Josh. 13: 3—5. 1 K. 4:21—25. Am. 6:14.
† Heb. restraint. Lev. 23:36. Deut. 16:8. Neh. 8:18. Joel 1:14. margins.
s 30:23. 1 K. 8:65.
t 1 K. 8:66.
u 29:36. 30:26. Deut. 12:7,12,18. 16: 11,14. Neh. 8:10. Ps. 32:11. 33:1. 92:4. 100:2. 105:3. 106:5. Acts 2: 46. 16:34. Phil. 4:4. x 6:41. Ex. 18:1.
y 2:1. 1 K. 9:1.
z Ec. 2:4,10,11.
a 1:7. Gen. 17:1. 1 K. 9:2. b 2 K. 20:5. Ps. 10:17. 66:19. Luke 1:13. Acts 10:31. 1 John 5:14,15. c 16. Deut. 12:5,11. Ps. 78:68,69. 132: 13,14.
d 2:6. Deut. 12:6.
e 6:26—28. Deut. 11:17. Job 11:10. 12:14. Luke 4:25. Rev. 3:7. 11:6.
f Ex. 10:4—6. Ps. 105:34. Joel 1:1—7. 2:25. g Num. 14:12. 16:46,47. 2 Sam. 24: 13—15. Ez. 14:19—21.
h Is. 63:19.
‡ Heb. upon whom my name is called.
i 6:37—39. 33:12,13,18,19. Lev. 26:40, 41. Deut. 4:29,30. 30:1—6. Ez. 33: 11. Jam. 4:9,10. k Prov. 28:13. Is. 55:6,7. Ez. 18:27—30.
l See on 6:39.
m Ps. 60:2. Jer. 3:22. 33:6. 51:9. n 6:20,40. Deut. 11:12. Neh. 1:6. Ps. 65:2. 130:2. 1 Pet. 3:12.
§ Heb. of this place. 6:40.
o Deut. 12:21. 16:11. 1 K. 8:16,44,48. Ps. 132:14. Zech. 3:2. p See on 6:5,6,20. 33:4—7. 1 K. 8:35. 9:3. 2 K. 21:4,7,8.
q See on 15.—Matt. 3:17. John 2:19—21. Col. 2:9.
r Deut. 28:1,&c. 1 K. 2:3. 3:14. 8: 25. 11:38. 1 Chr. 28:9. Zech. 3:7. s Deut. 4:40. Ps. 105:45. Ez. 36:27. John 14:21. 15:10. t See on 2 Sam. 7:13—16.
u Ps. 89:28—40. 132:11,12.
x 1 K. 9:5. Jer. 33:20,21,25,26.
‖ Heb. be cut off to thee. 6:16.
y Lev. 26:14,&c. Deut. 28:15,&c. 1 Sam. 12:25. 1 Chr. 28:9.
z See on Deut. 4:23—27. Josh. 23:15, 16.—1 K. 9:6,7. 12:4—8.
a 2 K. 17:20. Ps. 52:5. Jer. 12:17. 18: 7. 31:28. 45:4. Jude 12. b Deut. 28:37. 1 K. 9:7. Neh. 4:1—4. Ps. 44:14. Jer. 24:9. Lam. 2:15,16.
c 1 K. 9:8.
d 29:8. Jer. 19:8. 49:17. 50:13.
e Deut. 29:24—28. 1 K. 9:8,9. Jer. 5:19. 13:22. 16:10—12. 22:8,9,28.
f Judg. 2:12,13. Jer. 1:16. Lam. 2:16, 17. 4:13—15. Ez. 14:23. 36:17—20.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The mercies of God to sinners are communicated in a manner suited to impress all who receive them, with the most profound reverence of his majesty, justice, and holiness; thus leading them to unite humble confidence with fear of offending so holy a God. Especially, whoever beholds, with true faith, the divine Savior agonizing and dying for man's sin, will, by that view, find his godly sorrow enlarged, his hatred of sin increased, his soul made more watchful, and his life more holy; and they are speculating hypocrites, who profess to expect salvation by the cross of Christ, while the world has their hearts, and sin is allowed in their habitual conduct.—In the best state of nations favored with revelation, there has hitherto been a succession of prosperity, ingratitude, corrections, repentance, forgiveness, renewed mercies and prosperity, and renewed ingratitude and forgetfulness of God. SCOTT.

God for performing his promises to them; and praying that God would incline their hearts to obedience, that all the earth might know that JEHOVAH alone is God; are here omitted. (1 K. 8:54—61.) SCOTT.

Verses 11—22.

(M. R.)—If I shut, &c. (13) This is not in Kings. Solomon connected the repentance of the people, with their deliverance from divine judgments, in his prayers; and God does the same in his gracious answer. SCOTT.

Which is high.] Some say the second temple was in some parts built up 700 ft. from the valley. Note, Matt. 4: 5—7. ED.

TADMOR (PALMYRA) IN THE WILDERNESS.—S Chron. 8:4. Page 445.

forth out of the land of Egypt, and laid hold on other gods, and worshipped them, and served them: [s]therefore hath he brought all this evil upon them.

CHAP. VIII.

The cities built by Solomon, 1—6. The remnant of the devoted nations are subjected to tribute, and the Israelites employed in honorable services, 7—10. Pharaoh's daughter removes to her house, 11. Solomon's daily sacrifices, and those on festival days, 12, 13. He appoints the priests and Levites to their services in order, 14, 15. The work of the house of God is finished, 16. Solomon's navy brings gold from Ophir, 17, 18.

B. C. 992. AND it came to pass [a] at the end of twenty years, wherein Solomon had built the house of the LORD and his own house,

2 That [b] the cities which Huram had restored to Solomon, Solomon built them, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there.

3 And Solomon went to [c] Hamath-zobah, and prevailed against it.

4 And [d] he built Tadmor in the wilderness, and all the store-cities, which he built in Hamath.

5 Also he built [e] Beth-horon the upper, and Beth-horon the nether, fenced cities, with walls, gates, and bars;

6 And [f] Baalath, and all [g] the store-cities that Solomon had, and all the [h] chariot-cities, and the cities of the horsemen, and * all that Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, [i] and in Lebanon, and throughout all the land of his dominion.

7 ¶ As for [j] all the people that were left of [k] the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which were not of Israel,

8 But of their children who were left after them in the land, [l] whom the children of Israel consumed not, them did Solomon make [m] to pay tribute until this day.

9 But [n] of the children of Israel did Solomon make no servants for his work; but [o] they were men of war and chief of his captains, and captains of his chariots and horsemen.

10 And these were the chief of king Solomon's officers, even [p] two hundred and fifty, that bare rule over the people.

11 ¶ And Solomon [q] brought up the daughter of Pharaoh out of the city of David, unto the house that he had built for her: for he said, My wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, because the places are † holy, whereunto the ark of the LORD hath come.

12 ¶ Then Solomon offered burnt-offerings unto the LORD, [r] on the altar of the LORD, which he had built before the porch;

13 Even after a certain rate [s] every day, offering according to the commandment of Moses, on the sabbaths, and on the new moons, and on the solemn feasts, [t] three times in a year, even in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles.

14 And he appointed, according to the order of David his father, [u] the courses of the priests to their service, and [x] the Levites to their charges, to praise and minister before the priests, as the duty of every day required: [y] the porters also by their courses at every gate: for ‡ so [z] had David [a] the man of God commanded.

15 And [b] they departed not from the commandment of the king unto the priests and Levites concerning any matter, or concerning [c] the treasures.

16 Now [d] all the work of Solomon was prepared unto the day of the foundation of the g 36:17. Dan. 9:12.

a See on 1 K. 9:10.
b See on 1 K. 9:11—13.
c Num. 13:21. 34:8. 2 Sam. 8:3. 1 K. 11:23—25. 1 Chr. 18:3.
d 1 K. 9:17—19.
e Josh. 16:3,5. 1 Chr. 7:24.
f Josh. 19:44. 1 K. 9:18.
g 4. 17:12. 1 K. 9:19.
h 1:14. 1 K. 10:26.
* Heb. all the desire of Solomon which he desired to build. 1 K. 9:19. Ec. 2:10. i 1 K. 7:2. Cant. 4:8.
j See on 1 K. 9:20—22.
k Gen. 15:19—21. Deut. 7:1. l Judg. 1:21—36. Ps. 106:34.
m 2:17,18. 1 K. 5:13,14.
n Ex. 19:5,6. Lev. 25:39—46. Gal. 4:26,31.
o 1 Sam. 8:[illegible]2.
p 2:18. 1 [illegible] 5:16. 9:23.
q 1 K. 3:[illegible] 7:8. 9:24.
† Heb. holiness. Ex. 3:5. 29:43. Ez. 21:2 4 Pet. 1:18.
r 4:1. 1 Chr. 28:11. Ez. 8:16. Joel 2:17 s Ex. 29:38—42. Lev. 23: Num. 28: 29: Ez. 45:17. 46:3—15. t See on Ex. 23:14—17. Deut. 16:16.—1 K. 9:25. u 5:11. 23:4. 31:2. 1 Chr. 24:1—19 Luke 1:5,8.
x 35:10. 1 Chr. 6:31,32,&c. 15:16—22 16:4—6,42. 23: 24:20—31. 25: Ezra 6:18.
y See on 1 Chr. 26:1—19.
‡ Heb. so was the commandment of David.
z 2 Sam. 23:2. 1 Chr. 28:19. Acts 13 22,36. a See on Deut. 33:1. 1 K. 13:1. b See on 30:12. Ex. 39:42,43.
c 1 K. 7:51. 1 Chr. 9:29. 26:20—26.
d 1 K. 5:18. 6:7.

NOTES.

CHAP. VIII. 1—3. Perhaps Hamath-zobah had revolted: but Solomon regained possession. SCOTT.

Verse 4.

Tadmor.] 'Josephus says, "Solomon, making an incursion into the desert, possessed himself of it, and (as in this place only water was to be had) there built a very great city, which he encompassed with strong walls, and gave it the name of Thadamora, by which the Syrians called it in his day. He states, that it is one day's journey from the Euphrates, two from Upper Syria, and six from Babylon." Probably Solomon built it to facilitate his commerce with the E. Alexander conquered it, and changed its name to Palmyra: Its intermediate position between Mesopotamia and Syria, made it an excellent place of interchange for the commerce of the Mediterranean and the Indian Ocean. The protection of its deserts for a long time secured its independence, and enabled it to maintain a friendly intercourse with each of the neighboring and rival empires. It submitted to the Romans in A. D. 130. and continued in alliance with them nearly 150 yrs. Its magnificence and prosperity under its queen Zenobia, and utter subversion by Aurelian (who took her prisoner), A. D. 275, are related by Roman historians. Its advantageous position soon restored its prosperity: it was, however, sacked a second time by the Saracens, after which it gradually sunk to an obscure town and trifling fortress: Burckhardt gives it 1000 inhabitants.'

'It is scarcely possible to conceive any thing more magnificent than the view of its ruins, when they burst upon the eye, as seen from the Valley of the Tombs. On which side soever we look, the earth is strewed with vast stones, half-buried, with broken entablatures, mutilated friezes, disfigured reliefs, effaced sculptures, violated tombs, and altars defiled by the dust. The view (p. 234) is taken from the N. E.' [See the engraving and note, 1 K. 9:18.] HORNE.

Verse 10.

300 overseers, omitted in one place, are added in another, completing the same number. (Comp. 2:18.) SCOTT.

Verse 11.

If there were no open idolatry or profaneness in her court, there might be many things inconsistent with spiritual religion. Perhaps Solomon wanted resolution wholly to suppress all that he did not entirely approve. ID.

house of the LORD, and until it was finished. So the house of the LORD was perfected.

17 ¶ Then went Solomon to [e] Ezion-geber, and to [f] Eloth, at the sea-side in the land of Edom.

18 And [g] Huram sent him, by the hands of his servants, ships, and servants that had knowledge of the sea; and they went with the servants of Solomon to Ophir, and took thence four hundred and fifty talents of gold, and brought them to king Solomon.

CHAP. IX.

The queen of Sheba's visit to Solomon; her admiration of his wisdom and magnificence; her presents and return, 1—12. Solomon's annual revenue in gold, 13, 14. His golden shields and targets, 15, 16. His ivory throne, and rich vessels of gold, 17—21. The honor paid him by other kings, 22—24. His stalls, horses, and chariots, 25. The extent and wealth of his dominions, 26—28. He dies, and is succeeded by Rehoboam, 29—31.

AND [a] when the queen of [b] Sheba heard of [c] the fame of Solomon, she came to prove Solomon [d] with hard questions at Jerusalem, with a very great company, and [e] camels that bare [f] spices, and gold in abundance, and precious stones: and when she was come to Solomon, [g] she communed with him of all that was in her heart.

2 And Solomon [h] told her all her questions: and [i] there was nothing hid from Solomon which he told her not.

3 And when the queen of Sheba had [k] seen the wisdom of Solomon, and [l] the house that he had built,

4 And [m] the meat of his table, and [n] the sitting of his servants, and the attendance of his ministers, and their apparel; his * cup-bearers also, and their apparel; and [o] his ascent by which he went up into the house of the LORD; [p] there was no more spirit in her.

5 And she said to the king, It was a true † report which I heard in mine own land of thine ‡ acts and of thy wisdom:

6 Howbeit [q] I believed not their words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it: and, behold, [r] the one half of the greatness of thy wisdom was not told me: for thou [s] exceedest the fame that I heard.

7 [t] Happy are thy men, and happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and hear thy wisdom.

8 [u] Blessed be the LORD thy God, [x] which delighted in thee to set thee on his throne, to be king for the LORD thy God: [y] because thy God loved Israel, to establish them for ever, therefore made he thee king over them, [z] to do judgment and justice.

9 And [a] she gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and [b] of spices great abundance, and precious stones: neither was there any such spice, as the queen of Sheba gave king Solomon.

10 And the servants also of Huram, and the servants of Solomon, [c] which brought gold from Ophir, brought [d] algum-trees, and precious stones.

CHAP. IX. Solomon here continues to appear great, both at home and abroad. We had this account of his grandeur, 1 K. 10: nothing is here added; but his defection, ch. 11. is here omitted; and the close of this ch. brings him to the grave with an unstained reputation. Perhaps no ch. of Chr. agrees so much with a ch. in Kings, as this does with 1 K. 10. verse for verse, only that the first two vs. there are put into one here, and v. 25. here is taken from 1 K. 4: 26. and the three last vs. here from 1 K. 11: 41—43.

V. 1—12. This passage of story, our Savior having proposed as an example to us in our inquiries after Him, Mat. 12: 42. we must not pass it over, without observing briefly, 1. Those who honor God, He will honor, 1 Sam. 2: 30. Solomon had greatly honored God, in building, beautifying, and dedicating, the temple: all his wisdom, and all his wealth, were employed to make that a consummate piece: and now God made his wisdom and wealth to redound greatly to his reputation. The way to have both the credit and comfort of all our endowments, and enjoyments, is, to consecrate them to God, and use them for Him. 2. Those who know the worth of true wisdom, will grudge no pains or cost to compass it. Heavenly wisdom is that pearl of great price, to purchase which, if we part with all, we make a good bargain. 3. Solomon was communicative. Freely he had received, freely he gave. Let them that are rich in wisdom, as well as wealth, learn to do good, and be ready to distribute. Give to every one that asketh. 4. Good order in a family, (v. 4.) a great family, especially in the things of God, and a regular discharge of the duties of religious worship, e 20:36. Num. 33:35. Ezion-gaber. 1 K. 9:26. 22:48. f Deut. 2:8. 2 K. 14:22. 16:6. Elath.

g 9:10,13.—See on 1 K. 9:27,28. 10:22. Hiram.
a See on 1 K. 10:1,2. Matt. 12:42. Luke 11:31.
b Gen. 10:7,28. 25:3.
c 1:1,12. 1 K. 4:31.
d Is. 49:4. 78:2. Prov. 1:6. Matt. 13:11,35. e Ps. 72:10,15. Is. 60:6.
f 9. Matt. 2:11.
g 1 Sam. 1:15. Ps. 142:2. Matt. 12:34. h Prov. 13:20. Mark 4:11,34. John 15:15. i 1 K. 3:12. 4:29. Col. 2:3. Heb. 4: 12,13.
k See on 1 K. 10:3,4. Acts 11:23.
l 3: 4: 1 K. 6: 7:
m 1 K. 4:22,23. Prov. 9:5. John 6:53 —57. n 1 K. 10:5. Luke 12:37. Rev. 3:20.
* Or, butlers. Neh. 1:11. o 23:13. 2 K. 16:18. 1 Chr. 9:18. Ez. 44:3. 46:2. p Ps. 119:81. 143:7. Cant. 5:8. Dan. 10:17. Rev. 1:17.
† Heb. word. See on 1 K. 10:6.
‡ Or, sayings.
q John 20:25—29.
r See on 1 K. 10:7.—Ps. 31:19. Zech. 9:17. 1 Cor. 2:9. 1 John 3:2. s 5. 1 K. 4:31,34. Cant. 5:9—16.
t Deut. 33:29. 1 K. 10:8. Ps. 27:4. 84:10—12. Prov. 3:13,14. 8:34. 10: 21. 13:20. Luke 10:39—42. 11:28. u 1 Chr. 29:10,20. Ps. 72:18,19. 2 Cor. 9:12—15.
x 2 Sam. 15:25,26.—See on 1 K. 10:9.—Ps. 18:19. 22:8. Is. 42:1. 62:4. y 2:11. Deut. 7:8. 1 Chr. 17:22. z 2 Sam. 8:15. 23:3. Ps. 72:2. 99:4. Is. 9:7. 11:1—5. 32:1,2. Jer. 33:15, 16. Heb. 1:8,9.
a 24. 1 K. 9:14. 10:10.
b See on 1.—Gen. 43:11. Ex. 30:34.
c See on 8:18. 1 K. 9:27,28. 10:22. d 1 K. 10:11. almug-trees.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Some difficulty or conflict must be expected in every state on earth: but those whom the Lord loveth, will prevail; and in heaven their peace will be perfect and eternal.—We shall never be satisfied with our possessions, enjoyments, or achievements; unless we limit our desires by the precept and the providence of God: yet, He indulges his people in things indifferent, as far as this is consistent with their real good.—His 'service is perfect freedom;' all else is bondage: but if we, poor, condemned criminals and strangers, are brought nigh, pardoned, and employed by our merciful Lord, we shall surely render Him our tribute of praise and grateful obedience, though the lowest and most laborious service in his house be allotted to us.—It is hard to keep up a proper distinction between things sacred and common, in the palaces of the great, or in the courts of kings: and it sometimes requires more wisdom and resolution to govern a large family in the fear of God, without conniving at evident evil, than it does to govern a large kingdom with reputation, and in prosperity: (1 Tim. 3: 4, 5.) and the difficulty is increased, when by any means a man has got a hinderance, instead of a helper, in the wife of his bosom. But we ought to offend or grieve any one, rather than disobey God and grieve his people, by allowing his ordinances to be profaned. —Leaving the children of this world to contend for its toys, may we, as the children of God, 'lay up our treasure in heaven, that where our treasure is, there our hearts may be also!' SCOTT.

Verse 18.

Ships, &c.] The materials perhaps were ready prepared, [and carried over land,] and the workmen sent, that the ships might be constructed there; [as the great thoroughfare of trade was from Rhinocolura, in Philistia, to Elath; see Robertson, Jahn. &c. ED.] Vessels could not sail from Tyre to Ezion-geber, or Eloth: as there was no communication by water [for ships], between the Mediterranean and Red seas, on which these seaports were situated. SCOTT

NOTES.

CHAP. IX. V. 1—11. (1 K. 10:1—12.) 'The hard questions, she came to ask, were not the curious inquiries into the secrets of natural things, or new political matters, but about things pertaining to piety and the service of God. For our Savior saith, she came to hear "the wisdom of Solomon," and should therefore rise up in judgment against that generation, which would not learn of Him. And in 1 K. 10:1. it is said, the fame that she heard of Solomon was "concerning the name

11 And the king made of the algum-trees * terraces to the house of the LORD, and to the king's palace, and * harps, and psalteries for singers: and there were none such seen before in the land of Judah.

12 And king Solomon gave to the queen of Sheba, [f] all her desire, whatsoever she asked, beside that which she had brought unto the king. So she turned, and went away to her own land, she and her servants.

13 ¶ Now [g] the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred and threescore and six talents of gold, 14 Besides that which chapmen and merchants brought. And all the kings of Arabia, and † governors of the country, brought gold and silver to Solomon.

15 And king Solomon made [h] two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred shekels of beaten gold went to one target.

16 And three hundred shields made he of beaten gold: three hundred shekels of gold went to one shield. And the king put them [i] in the house of the forest of Lebanon.

17 Moreover the king made [k] a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure gold.

18 And there were six steps to the throne, with a footstool of gold, which were fastened to the throne, and ‡ stays on each side of the sitting place, and [l] two lions standing by the stays:

19 And [m] twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps. There was not the like made in any kingdom.

20 And all [n] the drinking vessels of king Solomon were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of § pure gold: ‖ none were of silver; ° it was not any thing accounted of in the days of Solomon.

21 For the king's ships went to [p] Tarshish with the servants of Huram: every three years once came the ships of Tarshish bringing gold, and silver, ¶ ivory, and apes, and [q] peacocks.

22 ¶ And king Solomon [r] passed all the kings of the earth in riches and wisdom.

23 And all the kings of the earth [s] sought the presence of Solomon, to hear his wisdom, that [t] God had put in his heart.

24 And they brought [u] every man his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, harness, and spices, horses and mules, a rate year by year.

25 And Solomon had [x] four thousand stalls for horses and chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen; whom he bestowed in the chariot-cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.

26 And he [y] reigned over all the kings, from  the river even unto the land of the Philistines, and to the border of Egypt.

27 And [z] the king †† made silver in Jerusalem as stones; and cedar-trees made he [a] as the sycamore-trees that are in the low plains in abundance.

28 And they [b] brought unto Solomon horses out of Egypt, and out of all lands.

29 ¶ Now [c] the rest of the acts of Solomon, first and last, are they not written in the ‡‡ book of [d] Nathan the prophet, and in the prophecy of [e] Ahijah the Shilonite, and in the visions of [f] Iddo the seer against Jeroboam the son of Nebat?

30 And [g] Solomon reigned in Jerusalem

V. 13—31. I. Here is Solomon reigning in wealth and power, in ease and fulness, such as, for aught I know, could never since be paralleled by any kings whatsoever; the most illustrious of them were famed for their wars, whereas Solomon reigned 40 years in profound peace. 1. Never any prince appeared in public with greater splendor than Solomon, which to those that judge by the sight of the eye, as most people do, would very much recommend him, v. 15—19. This lustre was typical of the spiritual glory of the kingdom of the Messiah, and but a faint representation of his throne. Solomon's pomp was all artificial; therefore our Savior prefers the natural beauty of the lilies of the field: Matt. 6: 29. 2. Never any prince had greater plenty of gold and silver, though there were no gold or silver mines in his own kingdom. v. 13, 14—21. 3. Never any prince had such presents from all his neighbors, v. 14. Not as tribute extorted, but as free-will offerings to procure his favor, or in exchange for productions of his husbandry, corn, or cattle. All the kings of the earth brought him presents, i. e. all in those parts of the world, v. 24, 28. because they coveted his acquaintance and friendship. Herein he was a type of Christ, to whom the wise men of the east brought presents, Matt. 2: 11. and to whom all that are about Him must bring presents, Ps. 76: 11. Rom. 12: 1. 4. Never any prince was so renowned for wisdom, v. 23. natural philosophy, skill in physic, state policy, or rules of prudence, or perhaps the principles of his religion, and the reasons of it. The application kings made to Solomon to hear his wisdom, will aggravate, shame, and condemn, men's general contempt of Christ, and his Gospel. 1 Cor. 2: 8, 14.

* Or, stays. Heb. highways.
e See on 1 K. 10:12. 1 Chr. 23:5. 25: 1. Ps. 92:1—3. 150:3—5. f 1 K. 10:13. Ps. 20:4. Eph. 3:20.
g 1 K. 10:14,15. Ps. 68:29. 72:10,15.
† Or, captains.
h 12:9,10.—See on 1 K. 10:16,17.
i 1 K. 7:2.
k See on 1 K. 10:18—20.—Ps. 45:8. Rev. 20:11.
‡ Heb. hands.
l Gen. 49:9,10. Num. 23:24. 24:9. Rev. 5:5. m Matt. 19:28. Rev. 21:12. n 1 K. 10:21. Esth. 1:7. Dan. 5:2,3.
§ Heb. shut up.
‖ Or, there was no silver in them.
o 27. Is. 2:22. Jer. 31:5. p See on 1 K. 10:22. 22:48. Tharshish.
¶ Or, elephant's teeth.
q Job 39:13.
r 1:12. 1 K. 3:12,13. 4:30,31. 10:23, 24. Ps. 89:27. Matt. 12:42. Col. 2:2,3. s 6,7. 1 K. 4:34. Is. 11:2,10. t 1:10—12.—See on 1 K. 3:28.—Prov. 2:6. Dan. 1:17. 2:21—23. 5:11. Luke 21:15. 1 Cor. 1:30. 12:8. Eph. 1: 17. Jam. 1:5,16,17. 3:17. u 9. 1 Sam. 10:27. 1 K. 9:14. 10:10, 25. Job 42:11.
x 1:14. Deut. 17:16. 1 K. 4:26. 10:26. y 1 K. 4:21,24. Ps. 72:8—11. Dan. 7: 14. Rev. 19:16.
 That is, Euphrates. Gen. 15:18. Ex. 23:31. Josh. 13:2—7. z 20. 1:15. 1 K. 10:27. Job 22:24,25.
†† Heb. gave.
a 1 Chr. 27:28. Ps. 78:47. Is. 9:10. Am. 7:14. Luke 19:4. b 25. 1:16. 1 K. 10:28. Is. 2:7,8. 31:1. c See on 1 K. 11:41,42.
‡‡ Heb. words.
d 2 Sam. 7:1—3. 12:1,25. 1 K. 1:8,10 11,22—27,32—38. 1 Chr. 29:29.
e 1 K. 11:29. 14:2.
f 12:15. 13:22.
g 1 K. 11:42,43.

---

of the Lord;" which moved her to this journey.' Patrick.—The throne on which Solomon reigned, was the throne of God: for he was God's vicegerent, and thus 'king for the LORD his God,' to promote his glory and support religion. (2:11, 12.) SCOTT.

Verse 12.

'In 1 K. 10:13. . . . the words are, 'besides that which Solomon gave her of his royal bounty,' . . . here explained to have been done, to requite her for the great presents she made the king.' Patrick. ID.

Verse 18.

Footstool.] Cut, Ps. 110:1. ED.

Verse 21.

Apes.] The imports here mentioned indicate, that prosperity had enervated the minds of Solomon and his subjects, and led them to love things curious and uncommon, though useless in themselves: and indeed the East Indian trade has helped to render every nation luxurious and self-indulgent, which has prospered in it, from the beginning to this day. SCOTT.

Verse 24.

Raiment.] Oriental kings have, 'in their wardrobes, garments for thousands, the loose robes equally fitting all.' Note, 1 K. 10:25, &c. ED.

Note, 1 K. 10:23. ID.

Verses 29—31

In the book, &c. (29) 'It appears by this, that the prophets . . . were also historians, who gave an account of what passed in their times; over all Israel forty years.

B. C. 975. 31 And Solomon [h] slept with his fathers, and he was buried in the city of David his father: and Rehoboam his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. X.

The Israelites, at Shechem, make Rehoboam king; and with Jeroboam require him to lighten their yoke, 1—5. Rehoboam, rejecting the advice of his father's counsellors, and consulting with the young men, answers very roughly, 6—15. The ten tribes revolt, kill Hadoram, and drive away Rehoboam, 16—19.

AND [a] Rehoboam went to Shechem: for to [b] Shechem were [c] all Israel come to make him king.

2 And it came to pass, when [d] Jeroboam the son of Nebat, (who was in Egypt, whither he had fled from the presence of Solomon the king,) heard it, that Jeroboam returned out of Egypt.

3 And [e] they sent and called him. So Jeroboam and all Israel came, and spake to Rehoboam, saying,

4 Thy [f] father made our yoke grievous: now therefore ease thou somewhat the [g] grievous servitude of thy father, and his heavy yoke that he put upon us, and we will serve thee.

5 And he said unto them, [h] Come again unto me after three days. And the people departed.

6 And king Rehoboam [i] took [k] counsel with the old men that had stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, saying, [k] What counsel give ye me to return answer to this people?

7 And they spake unto him, saying, [l] If thou be kind to this people, and please them, and [m] speak good words to them, they will be thy servants for ever.

8 But [n] he forsook the counsel which the old men gave him, and took counsel with the young men that were brought up with him, that stood before him.

9 And he said unto them, [o] What advice give ye that we may return answer to this people, which have spoken to me, saying, [p] Ease somewhat the yoke that thy father did put upon us?

10 And the young men that were brought up with him spake unto him, saying, [q] Thus shalt thou answer the people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it somewhat lighter for us: thus shalt thou say unto them, [r] My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 For whereas [s] my father [*] put a heavy yoke upon you, [t] I will put more to your yoke: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with [u] scorpions.

12 So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king bade, saying, [x] Come again to me on the third day.

13 And the king [y] answered them roughly; and king Rehoboam h See on 2 Sam. 7:12. 1 K. 1:21. 2:10. a 1 K. 12:1. 1 Chr. 3:10. Matt. 1:7. Roboam.

b Gen. 12:6. Sichem. 37:12,13. Josh. 20:7. 24:1. Judg. 9:1.
c 1 K. 4:1. 1 Chr. 12:38.
d 1 K. 11:26,28,40. 12:2.
e 1 K. 12:3.
f 1 Sam. 8:11—18. 1 K. 12:4. Is. 47:6. Matt. 11:29,30. 23:4. 1 John 5:3.
g Ex. 1:13,14. 2:23. 1 K. 4:20,25. 9:22.
h 1 K. 12:5. Prov. 3:28.
i Job 12:12,13. 32:7. Prov. 27:10. Jer. 42:2—5,20. k 2 Sam. 16:20. 17:5,6.
l 1 K. 12:7,8. Prov. 15:1. m Gen. 49:21. 2 Sam. 15:2—6. n 25:15,16. 2 Sam. 17:14. Prov. 1:25. 9:9. 19:20. 25:12. Ec. 10:2,3,16.
o 6. 2 Sam. 17:5,6. 1 K. 22:6—8.
p See on 4.
q 2 Sam. 17:7—13. Prov. 21:30. Is. 19:11—13. r 1 K. 12:10,11. Prov. 10:14. 13:16. 14:16. 18:6,7. 28:25. 29:23.
s See on 4.
* Heb. laded.
t Ex. 1:13,14. 5:5—9,18. 1 Sam. 8:18. Is. 47:6. 58:6. Jer. 23:13,14. Matt. 11:29. u Luke 10:19. Rev. 9:3,5,10.
x 5. 1 K. 12:12—15.
y Gen. 42:7,30. Ex. 10:28. 1 Sam. 25:10,11. 1 K. 20:6—11. Prov. 15:1.

I. Here is Solomon dying; stripped of his pomp, leaving all his wealth and power, not to one concerning whom he knew not whether he would be a wise man or a fool, Eccl. 2: 19. but who, he knew, would be a fool. This was not only vanity, but vexation of spirit, v. 29—31.

It is very observable, that not even a hint is here given of Solomon's departure from God in the latter days. 1. Because the Holy Ghost would teach us not to delight in repeating the faults and follies of others. Why can we not do as the sacred historian here does, speak largely of what in others is praise-worthy, without saying any thing of their blemishes, yea, though they have been gross and obvious. This is but doing as we would be done by. 2. Because his sin was repented of, and pardoned, and so became as if it had never been. Scripture-silence sometimes speaks. I am willing to believe its silence here intimates, that none of the sins he committed were mentioned against him, Ezek. 33: 16. When God pardons sin, He casts it behind his back, and remembers it no more.

CHAP. X. This ch. is copied almost verbatim from 1 K. 12: 1—19. where it was opened at large. Solomon's defection from God was not repeated, but the defection of the ten tribes from his family is, in this ch.; where we find, how just and righteous God was in all this, v. 15. whereby his counsel was fulfilled. With Him are strength and wisdom; both the deceived and the deceiver (the fool and the knave) are his, Job, 12: 16. i. e. are made use of by Him, to serve his purposes. Observe,

V. 1—11. 1. The wisest and best cannot content every body. No man is perfectly wise. Probably it was when Solomon had declined from God and duty, that his wisdom failed him, and God left him to himself to act thus impoliticly. Even Solomon's treasures were exhausted by his love of women; and, probably, it was to maintain them, their pride, luxury, and idolatry, that he oppressed his subjects by taxes.

2. Turbulent and ungrateful spirits will find fault with government, and complain of grievances, for very little reason. Had they not peace in Solomon's time? Never plundered by invaders, nor put in fear by the alarms of war, nor obliged to jeopard their lives in the high places of the field. Had they not plenty? Meat enough, and money enough? What would they more? O but too happy, if they knew their happiness! If any complain thus of the yoke of Christ, we are sure He never gave them any cause to complain, whatever Solomon did.

3. Many ruin themselves, and their interests, by trampling on and provoking their inferiors. Rehoboam thought, because he was king, he might do what he would, and carry all before him. But though he wore his father's crown, he wanted his father's head-piece; such a wise man as Solomon may, perhaps, do as he will, but such a fool as Rehoboam must do as he can. It was Job's wisdom, as well as virtue, that he despised not the cause of his man-servant or maid-servant, Job 31: 13. but heard their reasons, and gave them a soft answer. And the like tender consideration of those in subjection, and a forwardness to make them easy, will be the comfort and praise of all in authority, in the church, in the state, and in families.

4. Moderate counsels are generally wisest. Gentleness will do what violence will not. Good words cost nothing but a little self-denial, and yet purchase great things.

5. God often fulfils the counsels of his own wisdom, by infatuating men, and giving them up to the counsels of their own folly. No more needs be done to ruin men, than to leave them to themselves, and their own pride and passion.

V. 12—19. We may learn here,

1. When public affairs are in a ferment, violent proceedings do but make bad worse. The pilot

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

In proportion as we possess true wisdom, we shall perceive its excellency, and labor to obtain an increase of it: and in the same proportion we shall become more indifferent about worldly wealth, and more liberal in our use of it to good purposes, if God has bestowed it on us. For true wisdom and happiness are inseparably combined: but no such alliance is formed between riches and the enjoyment even of this present life. (Luke 12: 15—21.) It is therefore far more desirable to be connected with those who can teach us wisdom, than with those who can give us wealth: let us then acquaint ourselves with the divine Savior, that, becoming his disciples and servants, we may 'find rest for our souls;' and we shall in that case see more glory, experience more pleasure, and appropriate more riches, than our hearts can previously conceive. Next to this, let us value the acquaintance of those who love and serve Him, that we may hear the wisdom that 'God hath put into their hearts:' and let us follow them as far as they follow Christ, but no further whatever may be their reputation in the church. SCOTT.

---

out of whose work this short history was extracted.... These three did not join to make one book, but severally and distinctly gave an account of such things as occurred to their knowledge; out of which, it is probable, Ezra took many things which he hath supplied in this book.' Patrick. (M. R.—Preface to 1 K.—1 K 11:41. 14:19. 1 Chr. 29:19, 20.) SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. X. V. 1—19 M R ID.

[a] forsook the counsel of the old men,

14 And answered them after [b] the advice of the young men, saying, [c] My father made your yoke heavy, but I will add thereto: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 So the king hearkened not unto the people: for [d] the cause was of God, [e] that the LORD might perform his word, which he spake by the hand of [f] Ahijah the Shilonite, to Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

16 ¶ And when all Israel saw that the king would not hearken unto them, the people answered the king, saying, [g] What portion have we in David? and we have no inheritance in [h] the son of Jesse: every man to your tents, O Israel: and now, [i] David, see to thine own house. [k] So all Israel went to their tents.

17 But [l] as for the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent [m] Hadoram, that was over the tribute; and the children of Israel [n] stoned him with stones, that he died. But king Rehoboam * made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.

19 And [o] Israel rebelled against the house of David [p] unto this day.

CHAP. XI.

Rehoboam, preparing to reduce Israel, is forbidden by the prophet Shemaiah, 1—4. He builds and fortifies several cities, 5—12. The priests and Levites, being cast off by Jeroboam, resort to Jerusalem, attended by other pious Israelites, 13—17. Rehoboam's wives and children, 18—23.

AND [a] when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he gathered of the house of Judah and Benjamin [b] an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against Israel, that he might bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam.

2 But the word of the LORD came [c] to Shemaiah [d] the man of God, saying,

3 Speak unto Rehoboam the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and [e] to all Israel in Judah and Benjamin, saying,

4 Thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not go up nor fight [f] against your brethren: [g] return every man to his house; [h] for this thing is done of me. And [i] they obeyed the words of the LORD, and returned from going against Jeroboam.

5 ¶ And Rehoboam dwelt in Jerusalem, and [j] built cities for defence in Judah.

6 He built even [k] Beth-lehem, and [l] Etam, and [m] Tekoa,

7 And [n] Beth-zur, and [o] Shoco, and [p] Adullam,

8 And [q] Gath, and [r] Mareshah, and [s] Ziph,

9 And Adoraim, and [t] Lachish, and Azekah.

10 And [u] Zorah, and Aijalon, and [x] Hebron, which are in Judah and in Benjamin, fenced cities.

11 And he fortified the strong-holds, and put [y] captains in them, and store of victual, and of oil and wine.

12 And in every several city he [z] put shields and spears, and made them exceeding strong holds, [a] having Judah and Benjamin on his side.

13 ¶ And the priests and the Levites that were in all Israel † resorted to him out of all their coasts.

a 8.
b 22:4,5. Prov. 12:5. Dan. 6:7.
c See on 10,11.—Prov. 17:14. Ec. 2:19. 7:8. 10:16. Jam. 3:14—18. 4:1,2. d 25:16—20. Deut. 2:30. Judg. 14:4. 1 Sam. 2:25. 1 K. 22:20. Acts 2:23. 4:28. e See on 1 K. 11:29—39. John 12:37—39. 19:24,32—36.
f See on 9:29.
g 2 Sam. 20:1. 1 K. 12:16,17.
h 1 Sam. 20:27,30,31. 22:7,9,13.
i 2 Sam. 7:15,16. 1 K. 11:13,34—39. 1 Chr. 17:14. Ps. 2:1—6. 76:10. 89: 29—37. 132:17. Is. 9:6,7. 11:1. Jer. 33:20,21,25,26. Ez. 37:24,25. Am. 9: 11. Luke 1:32,33. 19:14,27. Acts 2: 30. 1 Cor. 15:25. Rev. 22:16. k 19. Judg. 8:35. 2 Sam. 15:13. 16: 11. John 6:66. 7:53.
l 11:1. 1 K. 11:36. 12:17.
m 1 K. 4:6. 5:14. Adoniram. 12:18. Adoram.
n 24:21. Acts 7:57,58.
* Heb. strengthened himself.
o 16. 13:5—7. 1 K. 12:19,20. 2 K. 17: 21—23. p 5:9. Josh. 4:9. Ezra 9:7.
a See on 1 K. 12:21.
b Ps. 33:10,16. Prov. 21:30,31.
c 12:7,15. 1 K. 12:22—24.
d 8:14.—See on Deut. 33:1.—1 Sam. 2: 27. 1 Tim. 6:11.
e Gen. 49:28. Ex. 24:4. 2 K. 17:34. Phil. 3:5. Rev. 7:4—8.
f Gen. 13:8. 2 Sam. 2:26. Acts 7:26. 1 Cor. 6:5—8. Heb. 13:1. 1 Pet. 3:8. 1 John 3:11—13.
g 10:16. 1 K. 22:36.
h See on 10:15. Gen. 50:20.—1 K. 11: 29—38. Hos. 8:4.
i 25:7—10. 29:9—15.
j 8:2—6. 14:6,7. 16:6. 17:12. 26:6. 27:4. Is. 22:8—11.
k Gen. 35:19. 1 Sam. 17:12. Matt. 2: 5,6. l Judg. 15:8. 1 Chr. 4:32.
m 20:20. 2 Sam. 14:2. Neh. 3:5,27. Jer. 6:1. Am. 1:1. n Josh. 15:58.
o Josh. 15:35. Socoh.
p Josh. 12:15. 15:35. 1 Sam. 22:1. 2 Sam. 23:13. Mic. 1:15. q 1 Chr. 18:1. r Josh. 15:44.
s Josh. 15:24. 1 Sam. 23:14,19. Ps. 54: title.
t 32:9. Josh. 10:5,11. 15:35,39. u Josh. 15:33. Zoreah. 19:41,42. Ajalon.
x Gen. 23:2. Num. 13:22. Josh. 14:14. 20:7. 2 Sam. 2:11.
y 23. 17:19.
z 26,14,15. 32:5. 1 Sam. 13:19,22.
a See on 1.
† Heb. presented themselves to him.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The wisest of mere men in some things act imprudently, especially when, by sin, they provoke God to leave them to themselves: nay, the most equitable princes may be betrayed into partial, oppressive, or unwarrantable measures; and this is the general consequence of being drawn, by their favorites, or their passions, into lavish expenses. Thus, some cause of complaint must exist in every kingdom, of which turbulent and ambitious men will avail themselves. (2 Sam. 15: 1—6. P. O. 1—12.) For, while we all need so many allowances for ourselves, we are naturally indisposed to make allowances for others. Indeed, very many would be dissatisfied, even if God were to place over them perfectly wise and righteous governors: for do they not murmur against his own most righteous dispensations?—Being so culpable ourselves, we should learn to bear with the perverseness of others, and to prefer lenient to violent measures; and experienced, to inexperienced counsellors.—No man can bequeath his prosperity, any more than his wisdom, to his heirs; though our children will generally be affected by our conduct. Let us then seek those good things which will be our own for ever; and implore the blessing of God on our posterity, in preference to wealth or worldly exaltation.

SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XI. V. 5—12. (M. R.) The Lord did not permit Rehoboam to wage war against the newly erected kingdom of Israel; yet it was allowable and prudent for him to take all proper measures, for the defence of his remaining dominions: this he did by repairing and fortifying several cities.—Etam (6) belonged to Simeon, (1 Chr. 4:32.) and Zorah and Aijalon (10) to Dan. (Josh. 19:40—42.) So that some cities of the other tribes, beside Judah and Benjamin, remained under Rehoboam.

SCOTT.

Verses 13—17.

Probably all the priests and Levites unanimously protested against Jeroboam's idolatry. As Jeroboam established no other idolatry than 14 For the Levites left [b] their suburbs and [c] their possession, and came to Judah and Jerusalem: for [d] Jeroboam and his sons had cast them off from executing the priest's office unto the LORD.

15 And he ordained him priests for the high places, and [e] for the devils, and [f] for the calves which he had made.

16 And [g] after them, out of all the tribes of Israel, such as [h] set their hearts to seek the LORD God of Israel, came to Jerusalem, [i] to sacrifice unto the LORD God of their fathers.

17 So they [k] strengthened the kingdom of Judah, and made Rehoboam the son of Solomon strong three years: for [l] three years they walked in the way of David and Solomon.

18 ¶ And Rehoboam took him Mahalath the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David to wife, and Abihail the daughter of [m] Eliab the son of Jesse;

19 Which bare him children; Jeush, and Shamariah, and Zaham.

20 And after her he took [n] Maachah the daughter of [o] Absalom; which bare him [p] Abijah, and Attai, and Ziza, and Shelomith.

21 And Rehoboam loved Maachah the daughter of Absalom above all his wives and his concubines: (for he took [q] eighteen wives, and threescore concubines; and begat twenty and eight sons, and threescore daughters.)

22 And Rehoboam [r] made Abijah the son of Maachah the chief, to be ruler among his brethren: for he thought to make him king.

23 And [s] he dealt wisely, and [t] dispersed of all his children throughout all the countries of Judah and Benjamin, unto [u] every fenced city: and he gave them victual in abundance. And he desired * many wives.

cially a war, contrary to the will of God. God calls him, v. 3. the son of Solomon, to intimate that this was determined for the sin of Solomon, and it would be to no purpose to oppose a decree that was gone forth.

2. Like a discreet man, he fortified his own country. A few good words might have prevented their defection, but now all the force of his kingdom cannot bring the revolted back. It was probably by the advice and consent of the old men that he fortified and furnished his frontiers, and many principal cities, for whose defence no care had been taken in Solomon's peaceable reign, v. 11, 12. Because God forbade him to fight, he did not therefore sit down sullen, and say he would do nothing for the public safety.

V. 13—23. See here, I. How Rehoboam was strengthened by the accession of the priests and Levites, and all the devout and pious Israelites.

1. Jeroboam cast them off; i. e. set up such a way of worship as he knew they could not, in conscience, comply with, and at the same time would not allow them to go up to Jerusalem, to worship there; so he totally cast them off from the priest's office, v. 14. And very willing he was they should turn themselves out of their places, that room might be made for those mean and scandalous persons he ordained priests for the high places, v. 15. Comp. 1 K. 12: 31. No marvel if he that cast off God, cast off his ministers.

2. They, thereupon, left their suburbs and possessions, v. 14. It was a comfort to them, that the law so often reminded them that the Lord was their inheritance, and therefore they should find Him, when turned out of their possessions. But why did they leave them? (1.) Because they saw they could do no good among their neighbors, in whom, (now that Jeroboam set up his calves,) the old proneness to idolatry revived. (2.) Because they themselves would be in a continual temptation, to some base compliances, and in danger of being drawn insensibly to evil. If we pray, in sincerity, not to be led into temptation, we shall get and keep as far as we can out of its way. (3.) Because, if they retained their integrity, they had reason to expect persecution from Jeroboam and his sons. No secular advantages whatsoever should draw us, or detain us, where we are in danger of making shipwreck of faith and conscience.

3. It was a mercy to them, that they had a place of refuge to flee to, (v. 14, 15.) and were not forced into the lands of the heathen. It was an evidence they loved their work better than their maintenance. Better live on alms, or die in a prison, with a good conscience, than roll in wealth and pleasure with a prostituted one. Conscientious refugees will bring a blessing with them to the countries that entertain them, as they leave a curse behind with those that expel them. Open the gates, that the nation which keepeth truth, may enter in; it will be good policy. See Is. 26: 1, 2.

4. When they came, all the devout, pious Israelites of every tribe followed. Such as set their heart, to seek the Lord God, that made conscience of their duty, and were sincere and resolute in it, left the inheritance of their fathers, and went and took houses in Jerusalem, to have free access to the altar of God, and be out of the temptation to worship the calves, v. 16. Note, That is best for us, which is best for our souls; and in all our choices, advantages for religion must take place of all outward conveniences. Where God's faithful priests are, his faithful people should be. When the ark removes, remove ye, and go after it, Josh. 3: 3.

b Num. 35:2—5. Josh. 21:20—42. 1 Chr. 6:66—81. c Lev. 27:30—54. Num. 18:21—28.
d 13:9. 1 K. 12:28—33. 13:33.
e Lev. 17:7. Deut. 32:17. 1 Cor. 10: 20,21. 1 Tim. 4:1. Rev. 16:14. f Ex. 32:4—8,31. 1 K. 12:28. 14:9. Ps. 106:19,20. Hos. 8:5,6. 13:2.
g 15:9. 30:11,18,19. Josh. 22:19.
h Ex. 9:21. marg. Deut. 32:46. 1 Sam. 7:3,4. 1 Chr. 22:19. Job 34:14. Ps. 62:10. 108:1. Dan. 6:14. Hos. 4:8. Hag. 1:5. Marg. Acts 11:23. i Deut. 12:5,6,11,13,14. 1 Chr. 16:29. 22:1.
k 12:1.
l 1:1—12. 7:17—19. 8:13—16. Hos. 6:4. Matt. 13:20,21.
m 1 Sam. 16:6. 17:13,28. 1 Chr. 2:13. 27:18. Elihu.
n 21. 13:2. Michaiah the daughter of Uriel.
o 1 K. 15:2. Abishalom.
p 12:16. 1 K. 15:1. Abijam. Matt. 1:7. Abia.
q 23. Deut. 17:17. Judg. 8:30. 2 Sam. 3:2—5. 5:13. 1 K. 11:3. 1 Chr. 3: 1—9. Cant. 6:8,9.
r Deut. 21:15—17. 1 Chr. 5:1,2. 29:1. s 10:8—15. Luke 16:8.
t 21:3. Gen. 25:6. 1 K. 1:5,6.
u 11.
* Heb. a multitude of wives. See on 21.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

It is commonly more prudent to manage moderate possessions well, than to risk losing them by grasping at greater advantages: and when an egregious error has exposed us to heavy loss, it is generally wisest to sit down by it, lest we be betrayed into still more fatal mistakes.—It is in vain to contend with the purpose of God, when He makes it known unto us: and, as his Word declares, that none shall enjoy durable peace in the practice of wickedness, it is madness to expect it; yet, by this rule of judgment, what a world of madness and folly do we live in!—In seasons of prevailing ungodliness and public disturbances, the ministers of religion will be exposed to peculiar trials; on these great occasions, God peculiarly calls on them to bear testimony to his truth, and to protest, at all events, against enormous evils, by whomsoever patronised.—Untried faith is not much to be depended on: but when we have been proved, and it appears, that we are willing to renounce worldly interests, as far as called to it, for the sake of Christ and the Gospel, we have got one good evidence that we are truly his disciples. SCOTT.

---

that of the calves; the language here employed teaches us, that the worship paid to them was actually rendered to devils; though he professed, and probably intended, by them to worship the God of Israel. For it was in a way He had expressly prohibited, and which was infinitely dishonorable to Him; therefore it was acceptable to Satan alone, and his detestable associates in rebellion. (Lev. 17:3—7, v. 7.) —The word rendered devils, in the texts of the N. T. referred to, is demon; (M. R. e.) which often, in heathen writers, has a good sense; i. e. it is used for the objects of their worship: but these were evil spirits; and the word has always a bad meaning in Scripture, and denotes abominable idols, and evil spirits as worshipped under their names. Holy angels are never called demons.—It is not certain whether Jeroboam had deprived the priests and Levites of their dues, to maintain his new priesthood. In the days of David and Solomon, they had become generally attached to the worship of God at the sanctuary, as well as to the royal family of Judah: and, as a body, they seem to have been more pious and zealous, than at any other period. Probably, scarcely a priest or Levite remained behind, for we read nothing of them in the subsequent history of Israel. This must be allowed to have been as noble a testimony for the cause of God, against apostates and idolaters, as any history has recorded of a whole body of professed ministers.—It is not probable, Solomon would have been thus joined with David, as the good pattern which Rehoboam and his subjects followed, if he had persevered and perished in his apostasy. SCOTT.

Verses 18—21.

Daughter of Eliab. (18) Eliab was David's eldest brother; yet more than 80 years had elapsed, since David, at the age of 30, began to reign. Abihail must, therefore, have been grand-daughter, or great-grand-daughter to Eliab, and this shows the latitude in which the words son and daughter are used in Scripture, for a descendant, even after several intervening generations. (Notes, Ruth 4:18—22. 1 Chr. 1: 7.)—The daughter of Absalom. (20) It is said of Abijah, that 'his mother's name was Michaiah the daughter of Uriel of Gibeah.' (13:2.) Gibeah belonged to Benjamin, and probably Absalom, here mentioned, was a Benjamite. (1 K. 15:1—3.) ID.

Verses 22, 23.

Rehoboam acted from partial affection, and by his own authority, in advancing Abijah above his elder brethren: whereas, God Himself chose Solomon to be king, in preference to David's other sons. (1 Chr. 29:1.) ID.

CHAP. XII.

Rehoboam forsakes God, and Shishak king of Egypt invades Judah, 1—4. Rehoboam and his princes, being warned by Shemaiah, humble themselves; and, though spoiled, are not destroyed, 5—12. Rehoboam's reign and death. Abijah succeeds him, 13—16.

AND it came to pass, [a] when Rehoboam had established the kingdom, and had strengthened himself, [b] he forsook the law of the LORD, and [c] all Israel with him.

2 And it came to pass, that, in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, [d] Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, [e] because they had transgressed against the LORD,

3 With [f] twelve hundred chariots, and threescore thousand horsemen: and the people were [g] without number that came with him out of Egypt: the [h] Lubims, the Sukkiims, and the [i] Ethiopians.

4 And he took [k] the fenced cities which pertained to Judah; and [l] came to Jerusalem.

5 Then came [m] Shemaiah the prophet to Rehoboam, and to the princes of Judah that were gathered together to Jerusalem because of Shishak, and said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, [n] Ye have forsaken me, and therefore have I also [o] left you in the hand of Shishak.

6 Whereupon the princes of Israel and the king [p] humbled themselves; and they said, [q] The LORD is righteous.

7 And when [r] the LORD saw that they humbled themselves, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves; therefore I will not destroy them, but I will grant them [*] some deliverance; [s] and my wrath shall not be poured out

a 13. 11:17.
b 26:13—16. Deut. 6:10—12. 8:10—14. 32:15. 1 K. 9:9. Jer. 2:31. Hos. 13: 1,6—8.
c 11:3. 1 K. 12:17. 14:22—24. 2 K. 17:19. Hos. 5:10,11. Mic. 6:16.
d See on 1 K. 11:40. 14:25,26.
e 7:19,20. 36:14—19. Judg. 2:13—15.

5. They strengthened Judah, v. 17. not only by the addition of so many persons to it, who, it is likely, brought what they could of their effects with them, but by their piety and prayers. See Zech. 12: 5. It is the interest of a nation to protect and encourage religion and religious people, and adds more than any thing to its strength, [and how low must a government be sunk, which rejects a candidate from office simply because he is religious!] They made him and his people strong, three years: for so long they walked in the good way of David and Solomon; but when they forsook that, the best friends they had, could no longer strengthen them. We retain our strength no longer than we cleave to God and duty.

II. How Rehoboam was weakened by indulging his pleasures. He desired many wives, as his father did, v. 23. yet, he does not appear to have married strange wives. The wives mentioned here were not only daughters of Israel, but of the family of David, v. 18, 20. In this, he was more happy than his father, that he had many sons and daughters; whereas we read not of more than one son that his father had. One can scarcely imagine he had no more; but if he had, they were not worth mentioning; whereas several of Rehoboam's are here named, v. 19, 20. as men of note, and such active men, that he thought it his wisdom to disperse them throughout the countries of Judah and Benjamin, v. 23. either, 1. That they might not be rivals with his son Abijah, whom he designed for his successor; or, rather, 2. Because he confided in them, to preserve the public peace and safety; he took care to have the fenced cities well-victualled, that they might stand him in stead, in case of an invasion. Thus he that acted foolishly at first, dealt wisely afterward. After-wisdom is better than none at all; nay, they say, 'Wit is never good till it is bought;' though his was dear bought, with the loss of a kingdom

CHAP. XII. This ch. gives us a more full acf Judg. 4:13. 1 Sam. 13:5. 2 Sam. 10: 18. g 14:9. Judg. 6:5. Rev. 9:16.

h 16:8. Ez. 30:5. Nah. 3:9.
i 14:12. 16:8. Is. 43:3. Dan. 11:43. Nah. 3:9. Cushim. Heb. Gen. 10: 6—8.
k 11:5—12. Is. 36:1. Jer. 5:10.
l 2 K. 18:17. Is. 8:8. 10:11.
m 11:2. 1 K. 12:22.
n See on 1,2.—15:2. Deut. 28:15,&c. Judg. 10:9—14. 1 Chr. 28:9. Jer. 2: 19. 4:18. 5:19. 23:33.
o 2 Sam. 24:14. Ps. 37:33. p 32:26. 33:12,19,23. Ex. 10:3. Lev. 26:40,41. 1 K. 8:37—39. Ps. 78:31, 35. Jer. 44:10. Dan. 5:22. Hos. 5: 15. Luke 18:14. Jam. 4:10.
q Ex. 9:27. Judg. 1:7. Job 33:27. Ps. 129:4. Lam. 1:18. Dan. 9:14. Rom. 10:3.
r Judg. 10:15,16. 1 K. 21:28,29. Jer. 3:13. Luke 15:18—21.
* Or, a little while. 2 K. 13:4—7,23. Am. 7:6—8. s 34:21,25. Ps. 79:6. Is. 42:25. Jer. 7:20. Rev. 14:10. 15:2—17.

NOTES.

CHAP. XII. V. 1. Rehoboam's religion seems to have proceeded wholly from his fears of being given up into the hands of Jeroboam: when become strong, he became openly rebellious and idolatrous. (1 K. 14:22—24.) The leading men also, and the bulk of the nation, so generally and openly renounced the worship of God at the temple, that it was adjudged a national apostasy.—The ten tribes had before apostatized with Jeroboam; and when Rehoboam, with Judah and Benjamin, followed their example, 'all Israel,' as a nation, 'had forsaken the law of the LORD;' and the pious remnant formed only a few exceptions. SCOTT.

Verse 2.

(Note, 1 K. 14:25—28.) Probably, Shishak was of another family than Pharaoh, whose daughter Solomon had married; and was excited to this invasion by the reports of the immense treasures that prince had collected at Jerusalem, [and so the Rabbins,] with the division in his dominions, and the weakness of Rehoboam's administration. But the Lord gave him power because of the people's transgressions. ID.

Verses 3, 4.

(M. R.) The Lubims inhabited Lybia, adjoining Egypt on the W. the Sukkiims are supposed to have been the people called Troglodytes, because they dwelt in caves: and the Ethiopians, probably, were the inhabitants of Ethiopia, S. of Egypt.—It is likely several of Rehoboam's sons were slain, or taken captive, by Shishak, when he took the cities they governed. (11:22, 23.) ID.

(3.) Horsemen.] 'The battle scenes in the temple of Karnac (note, v. 8, &c.) represent individuals, of routed nations, on horse-back, mounted sideways. They had no saddles, but always bridles. The Numidian cavalry had neither.' WILKINSON. Patrick remarks that Sukkiim means the same as Troglodytæ, [which the Sept. and Vulg. have here] i. e. 'dwellers' en traglois, 'in caves or dens.' ED. 'The statement of Herodotus, that Sesostris was the only Egyptian monarch who ruled in Ethiopia, is utterly devoid of foundation, as several other Pharaoh's not only extended their conquests, but erected temples and other buildings in that country, both before and after Sesostris' time, the remains of which still exist, and that too in Upper Ethiopia . . . Remeses II, (as appears by the Pharaonic sculptures at Bait-el Wellee, Nubia,) reduced the revolted Ethiopians (Cush), and also the Shorii, an eastern nation, apparently of Arabia Petræa, formerly tributaries, also. . . . . Strabo says "the Ethiopians above Syene, consisted of the Troglodytæ, Blemmyes, Nubæ, and Megabari." The Megabari and Blemmyes inhabited the E. desert, N. of Mëroe to the frontiers of Egypt, and were under the dominion of the Ethiopians; the Troglodytæ, on the shore of the Red Sea, from Berenice southwards. The Nubæ, a Lybian nation, were on the left bank, and independent of Ethiopia. . . It does not appear, that the monarchs after the 18th dyn. continued to extend or even to maintain their conquests in this country, and few of them appear to have included Lower Ethiopia, between the first and second cataracts, within the limits of their Egyptian territory.' WILKINSON.

Verses 5, 6. (M. R. p.) SCOTT.

Verses 7—11.

Probably, Shishak had intended to give up the city to be plundered by his army: but God suddenly disposed him to greater moderation and clemency, than could possibly have been expected from such a man in his circumstances; so that he did not proceed to rob the temple of its sacred vessels. Neither did he deprive the inhabitants of their private property; but perhaps he exacted a sum of money, in token of their becoming his servants. Bp. Patrick. SCOTT.

(8.) 'At Karnac [note and cut, 1 K. 7:2—12.] appeared all the Pharaonic magnificence, all that men have imagined and executed of the most grand. All that I had yet seen at Thebes, all that I had enthusiastically admired on the left bank [of the Nile], appeared to me miserable in comparison with the gigantic conceptions which surrounded me. I shall be very careful not to undertake to describe any thing; for, either my expressions would not come up to the thousandth part of what should be said in speaking of such objects, or if I should indeed trace out a feeble sketch of it, even very much out of color, I should be taken for an enthusiast, perhaps even for a madman. It suffices to add that no ancient nor modern people has conceived of the art of architecture upon a scale so sublime, so broad, so grandiose, as did the ancient Egyptians; their conceptions are those of men 100 feet high, and the imagination which in Europe soars far above our columned porticoes, checks itself and falls powerless at the foot of the 140 columns of the pillared (hypostyle) hall of Karnac. [Comp. Ezek. 30: 18, and note there]. In this marvellous palace, I have contemplated the portraits of most of the ancient Pharaohs, known for their great acts, and they are veritable portraits, [and so Wilkinson,] represented a hundred times in the bas-reliefs of the walls, interior and exterior: each one preserves a peculiar physiognomy, and one which has no relation [or particular resemblance] to that of his predecessors or successors [i. e. is not a mere repetition of the same features, air, &c.]; there, in the colossal pictures, of a sculpture truly grand and altogether heroic, more perfect than can be believed in Europe, we see Mandouei battling nations the enemies of Egypt, and re-entering his country in triumph; farther on, are the campaigns of Rhamses-Sesostris; elsewhere Sesonchis is seen dragging to the feet of the Theban triad (Amon, Mouth and Khons) the chiefs of more than 30 conquered nations, among whom I have discovered, (as was to be expected, of course,) letter for letter, Ioudahamalek, [IOUDH. MALK and another character] the kingdom of the Jews, or of Judah. Thus the identity we have established between the Egyptian Scheschonk, the Sesonchis of Manetho, and the Sesac or Scheschok of the Bible, [note 1 K. 14:25] is confirmed in the most satisfactory manner.' Champollion Le Jeune. 'According to the Bible, Sesonchis attacked and took upon Jerusalem by the hand of Shishak

8 Nevertheless, [t] they shall be his servants; that [u] they may know my service, and the service of the kingdoms of the countries.

9 So [v] Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, and [x] took away the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he took all: he carried away also [y] the shields of gold which Solomon had made.

10 Instead of which, king Rehoboam made [z] shields of brass, and committed them to the hands of [a] the chief of the guard, that kept the entrance of the king's house.

11 And when the king entered into the house of the LORD, the guard came and fetched them, and brought them again into the guard-chamber.

12 And [b] when he humbled himself, the wrath of the LORD turned from him, that he would not destroy him altogether: and [*] also in Judah things went well.

13 So king Rehoboam strengthened himself in Jerusalem, and reigned: for [c] Rehoboam was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, [d] the city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, [e] to put his name there. And his mother's name was Naamah, [f] an Ammonitess.

14 And he did evil, because [g] he [†] prepared not his heart [h] to seek the LORD.

15 Now the acts of Rehoboam, [i] first and last, are they not written in the [‡] book of [k] Shemaiah the prophet, and of [l] Iddo the seer concerning genealogies? And there were [m] wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam continually.

16 And Rehoboam [n] slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David: and [o] Abijah his son reigned in his stead.

t Is. 28:13.
u Deut. 28:47,48. Judg. 3:1,2. Jer. 18:24. Hos. 8:10.
v 1 K. 14:25,26.
x 1 K. 15:18. 2 K. 16:8. 18:15,16. Lam. 1:10.
y 9:15,16. 1 K. 10:16,17.
z 1 K. 14:27,28. Lam. 4:1. a 2 Sam. 8:18. 23:23. 1 Chr. 11:25. Cant. 3:7,8.
b See on 6,7.—Lam. 3:22,33,42.
* Or, yet in Judah there were good things. 19:3. Gen. 18:24. 1 K. 14:13. Is. 6:13.
c 13:7. 1 K. 14:21.
d See on 6:6.—Ps. 48:1—3. 78:68,69. e Ex. 20:24. Deut. 12:5,11. Ez. 48:35.
f Deut. 23:3. 1 K. 11:1. Neh. 13:1,26.
g 11:16. 19:3 30:19. 1 Sam. 7:3. 1 Chr. 29:18. Ps. 78:8.
† Heb. fixed. Ps. 57:7. 78:37. 1 Ccr. 15:58. 16:16. h Ps. 105:3,4 Is. 45:19. 55:6,7. Matt. 7:7.
i 9:29.
‡ Heb. words.
k 5. 1 K. 12:22.
l 13:22.
m 1 K. 14:30.
n See on 1 K. 14:29—31.
o 13:1. 1 K. 14:31. Abijam. 1 Chr. 3:10. Matt. 1:7. Abia.

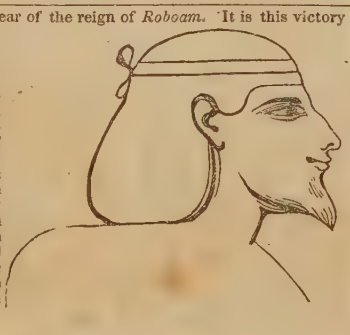
PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

It is a very common but most lamentable case, that men, who, in distress or danger, or apparently near death, seem very much engaged in seeking God, often throw aside their religion when they have received a merciful deliverance. But the warning, 'Sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee,' deserves the most serious consideration of all, who are tempted to such base ingratitude. When there are merely external appearances of contrition, our merciful God will often grant respites, in order to encourage true penitents by showing his readiness to forgive. This is especially the case in his dealings with sinful nations: for a general external humiliation before God, under national judgments, is a good evidence that their iniquities are not yet full. When the Lord is pleased to show mercy, He can dispose the hardest hearts to compassion; the most rapacious, to moderation; and the most impious, to fear profaning sacred things: for He rules the impetuous lusts of men, as He does the raging ocean, saying, 'Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further.'—It is good to be convinced by any sufferings, short of eternal misery, that by forsaking the Lord we are cruel to ourselves; and that his service, which is but another name for liberty, peace, and felicity, cannot be renounced, without our becoming the miserable slaves of the worst of tyrants and oppressors: and whenever the heart is truly humbled, the afflictions will be removed, or alleviated and counterbalanced by divine consolations. SCOTT.



Jerusalem in the 5th year of the reign of Roboam. It is this victory which the bas-relief of Karnac refers to. It is copied in the cut here given. The kingdom of Judah is here personified, and doubtless with that fidelity to physiognomy remarked in all the ancient works of art of the Egyptians, in reference to the foreign nations which they have represented upon their monuments: in the cut there is found the physiognomy of the Jewish people, in the 10th century before the Christian era, according to the Egyptians. Indeed, Rehoboam himself, perhaps, sat for the original of this picture.' Champollion Figeac, Lettres D'Egypte. We see too in the cut the badges of the 'service' spoken of in this verse! ED.

Verse 9.

Shields.] These seem anciently to have been hung round upon the walls, as a glittering battlement; at least, the pictures of fortifications on the most ancient monuments of Egypt, represent the battlements in the shape of shields. ID.

Verse 12.

We read no more of Shishak, who, by one mean or other was kept from coming to extort any further tribute or services. SCOTT.

Verse 13.

One and forty.] 'Houbigant brings many arguments to prove this a mistake, and thinks he wes but 16. At 10:8. ten young men brought up with him, are spoken of, of course he must have been young then. In 13:7. Abijah calls him tender-hearted then, and no man could be reputed young and tender-hearted, quite devoid of experience, who was above 40 years old.' DR. A. CLARKE.

CHAP. XIII.

Abijah reigns; he and Jeroboam, with vast preparations, engage in war, 1—3. Abijah shows the justice of his cause, 4—12. Judah, relying on God, gains a signal victory, with immense slaughter of the Israelites, 13—19. Jeroboam dies, 20. Abijah's wives and children, 21, 22.

NOW [a] in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam began Abijah to reign over Judah.

2 He reigned three years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was [b] Michaiah the daughter of Uriel of [c] Gibeah. [d] And there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam.

3 And Abijah [*] set the battle in array with an army of valiant men of war, even [e] four hundred thousand chosen men: Jeroboam also set the battle in array against him, with [f] eight hundred thousand chosen men, being mighty men of valor.

B. C. 957.

4 ¶ And Abijah stood up upon mount [g] Zemaraim, which is in mount Ephraim, and said, [h] Hear me, thou Jeroboam, and all Israel;

5 [i] Ought ye not to know, that [j] the LORD God of Israel gave the kingdom over Israel [k] to David for ever, even to him and to his sons by [l] a covenant of salt?

6 Yet Jeroboam the son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, is risen up, and hath [m] rebelled against his lord.

7 And there are gathered unto him [n] vain men, [o] the children of Belial, and have strengthened themselves against Rehoboam the son of Solomon, when Rehoboam was [p] young and tender-hearted, and [q] could not withstand them.

8 And now ye think to withstand [r] the kingdom of the LORD in the hand of the sons of David; and ye be [s] a great multitude, and there are [t] with you golden calves, which Jeroboam made you for gods.

9 Have ye not [u] cast out the priests of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and have [v] made you priests after the manner of the nations of other lands? so that whosoever cometh to † consecrate himself [x] with a young bullock and seven rams, the same may be a priest of them that are [y] no gods.

10 But as for us, [z] the LORD is our God, and we have not forsaken him; and [a] the priests, which minister unto the LORD, are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites wait upon their business:

11 And [b] they burn unto the LORD, every morning and every evening, burnt-sacrifices, and [c] sweet incense: the [d] shew-bread also set they in order upon the pure table; and [e] the candlestick of gold with the lamps thereof, to burn every evening:

a See on 12:16.—1 K. 15:1.
b 11:20. Maachah the daughter of Absalom. 1 K. 15:2. Abishalom.
c Josh. 18:28. Gibeath. Judg. 19:14, 16. 1 Sam. 10:26.
d 1 K. 15:6,7.
* Heb. bound together. 1 Sam. 7:1—3.
e 11:1. 14:8. 17:14—18. 26:12,13. 1 Chr. 21:5.
f 14:9.
g Gen. 10:18. Josh. 18:22.
h 15:2. Judg. 9:7.
i Neh. 5:9. Prov. 1:29. 2 Pet. 3:5.
j Judg. 11:21—24. Jer. 27:5—7. Dan. 4:25—32. 5:18. k 1 Sam. 16:1,12. 2 Sam. 7:12,16. 1 K. 8:20. 1 Chr. 17:11,14. 28:4,5. Ps. 89:19—37. Jer. 33:21,22,26. Luke 1: 31—33.
l Lev. 2:13. Num. 18:19. Ez. 43:24. Mark 9:49,50.
m 10:19. 1 K. 11:26. 12:20,27.
n Judg. 9:4. 11:3. 1 Sam. 22:2. Job 30:8. Ps. 26:4. Prov. 12:11. 28:19. Acts 17:5. Tit. 1:10.
o See on Deut. 13:13. 1 K. 21:10,13. p 12:13. Ec. 10:16. Is. 3:4. 1 Cor. 14:20. Heb. 5:12.
q 11:1—4.
r 9:8. Ps. 2:1—6. Is. 7:6,7. 9:6,7. Luke 19:14,27.
s 14:9—11. 20:6,12. Ps. 32:16.
t See on 11:15. 1 K. 12:28. 14:9.—Hos. 8:6.
u 11:14,15.
v 1 K. 12:31—33. 13:33.
† Heb. fill his hand. Ex. 32:29. Lev. 16:32. 1 Chr. 29:5. margins.
x Ex. 29:1,35. Lev. 8:2.
y Deut. 32:17. 2 K. 19:18. Jer. 2:11. Hos. 8:6. Acts 19:26. Gal. 4:8.
z 11:16,17. Ex. 19:5,6. Zech. 13:9.
a Ex. 29:1,&c. Num. 16:40. 18:1—7.
b See on 2:4. Ex. 29:38—42.
c Ex. 30:1—10. Lev. 2:1—3. Num. 16:6,7,46,47. Luke 1:9. Rev. 8:3,4. d Ex. 25:30. Lev. 24:6.
e Ex. 25:31—39. 27:20,21. Lev. 24:3,4.

NOTES.

CHAP. XIII. V. 3. The numbers brought into the field here were immense: but when every man was a soldier, small kingdoms could raise very large armies upon any great emergency. SCOTT. 400,000. . . 800,000.] 'The Hebrews then brought all from 20 to 50 years of age into the field. Many copies, says Kennicott, read 40,000 . . . 80,000. So, at v. 17. the Vulg. has 50,000 instead of 500,000.' ED.

Kennicott, Clarke, Hewlett, &c. would read 40,000 and 80,000, after ancient versions. ID.

Verses 4—12.

Abijah bears a bad character in Kings; (1 K. 15:1—4.) yet on this occasion he spoke religiously; and he seems to have had a strong confidence in God, grounded on the maintenance of his ordinances, and the number of pious worshippers, in his kingdom. The basis of his address was truth; but there was much false coloring in his manner of stating it, according to the too general custom of eloquent orators. For the covenant respecting the kingdom over Israel, made with David in behalf of his posterity, (except as it related to the Messiah,) was conditional; and neither Solomon, Rehoboam, nor Abijah, had been attentive to the restipulations.—Jeroboam had indeed acted very wickedly in his manner of seizing and governing the kingdom of Israel: yet it had been granted to him by God Himself, and Abijah never mentioned that circumstance.—The persons, who revolted from Rehoboam and made Jeroboam king, had acted with great precipitation and ingratitude; but perhaps it was not candid to call them indiscriminately 'vain men, the children of Belial.' Rehoboam had given them no small provocation; he was surely old enough to have behaved more wisely, if he had not been actuated by a proud, domineering disposition; and it was not so much owing either to his lenity, his timidity, or his weakness, that he had not prosecuted his pretensions by war, as to the divine prohibition. (1 K. 12:9—24.)—But Abijah's words were more forcible, when he exposed the apostasy and idolatry of the kingdom of Israel; their impiety and sacrilege in excluding the priests of the Lord from their possessions; and the shameful manner, in which any worthless man was made a priest, who could and would bring the sacrifice appointed by way of consecration. But what Abijah urged, concerning the state of true religion in Judah, was not strictly just; and, as spoken by him, it savored of ostentation. Abijah himself was not a godly man; and idolatry was evidently connived at in his days. Yet it was true, that the men of Judah had the priests, ordinances, and worship of God among them; that there were numbers of pious worshippers in the land; that theirs was the more righteous cause; that the LORD was on their side, and their Captain, while the Israelites fought against Him; and that the presence of the priests blowing the sacred trumpets, according to the law, was a token of his presence with them and favor to them. (Num. 10:2—10.)—The expression, 'after the manner of the nations,' (9) shows that the laws of Moses were not made according to the customs of the gentiles, as many suppose; but entirely distinct from them: and that the similarity which in many instances has been traced, actually arose from the CHAP. XIII. We have here a much fuller account of the reign of Abijah, the son of Rehoboam, than in Kings. There we found his character no better than his father's, 1 K. 15: 2, 3. But here we find him more brave and successful in war. He reigned but three years, and was chiefly famous for a glorious victory over the forces of Jeroboam.

V. 1—12. Abijah's mother was called Maachah, the daughter of Absalom, ch. 11: 20; here, Michaiah, the daughter of Uriel: probably she was a grand-daughter of Absalom, by his daughter Tamar, 2 Sam. 14: 27. and her immediate father this Uriel.

I. God gave him leave to engage Jeroboam, and owned him in it, though He would not permit Rehoboam to do it, ch. 11: 4. Jeroboam, probably, was now the aggressor; happening to survive Rehoboam, he claimed the crown of Judah by survivorship; at least, hoped to get it from this young king, on his accession. It was brave and necessary, then, in Abijah to take up arms, and God stood by him. Now that Jeroboam had discovered what manner of man he was, by setting up the calves, and casting off the priests, Abijah is allowed to chastise him; and it does not appear that he intended any more; whereas Rehoboam aimed at the utter reduction of the 10 tribes, which was contrary to the counsel of God.

II. Jeroboam's army was double Abijah's, v. 3. he had ten tribes to raise an army out of, Abijah for [f] we keep the charge of the LORD our God; but ye have forsaken him.

12 And, behold, [g] God himself is with us [h] for our Captain, and [i] his priests with sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you. O children of Israel, [k] fight ye not against the LORD God of your fathers; for [l] ye shall not prosper.

[Practical Observations.]

13 ¶ But Jeroboam caused [m] an ambushment to come about behind them: so they were before Judah, and the ambushment was behind them.

14 And when Judah [n] looked back, behold, the battle was before and behind: and they [o] cried unto the LORD, and [p] the priests sounded with the trumpets.

15 Then the men of Judah gave a shout: and [q] as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass, that [r] God smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah.

16 And the children of Israel fled before Judah: and [s] God delivered them into their hand.

17 And Abijah and his people slew them with a great slaughter: so there fell down slain of Israel [t] five hundred thousand chosen men.

18 Thus the children of Israel were brought under at that time, and the children of Judah prevailed, [u] because they relied upon the LORD God of their fathers.

19 And Abijah pursued after Jeroboam, and [x] took cities from him, Beth-el with the towns thereof, and Jeshanah with the towns thereof, and [y] Ephraim with the towns thereof.

20 Neither did Jeroboam recover strength again in the days of Abijah; and [z] the LORD struck him, and [a] he died.

21 But Abijah [b] waxed mighty, and married [c] fourteen wives, and [d] begat twenty and two f Gen. 26:5. Num. 9:19,23. Ez. 44:8, 15. 48:11.

g Num. 23:21. 1 Sam. 4:5—7. Is. 8. 10. Zech. 10:5. Rom. 8:31.
h Deut. 20:4. Josh. 5:13—15. Ps. 20: 7. Heb. 2:10. i Num. 10:9. 31:6. Josh. 6:20. k Job 15:25,26. 40:9. Is. 45:9. Acts 5:39. 9:4,5. l 24:20. Num. 14:41. Deut. 28:29. Job 9:4. Is. 54:17. Jer. 2:37. Ez. 17:9.
m 20:22. Josh. 8:4. Prov. 21:30. Jer. 4:22. n Ex. 14:10. Josh. 8:20. Judg. 20:33—43. 2 Sam. 10:8—14.
o 14:11. 18:31. Ps. 50:15. 91:5.
p See on 12.
q 20:21. Josh. 6:16,20. Judg. 7:18—22. Ps. 47:1,5.
r 14:12. Num. 32:4. Josh. 11:3. Judg. 4:15. 2 K. 5:1. Ps. 118:4—7. Is. 37:36. s Gen. 14:20. Deut. 2:36. 3:3. Josh. 10:12. 21:44. Judg. 1:4. 11:21. 1 Sam. 23:7.
t 3,12. 28:6. Is. 10:16—19. 37:36. Nah. 1:5. 1 Cor. 10:22.
u 16:8,9. 20:20. 2 K. 18:5. 1 Chr. 5: 20. Ps. 22:4,5. 146:5. Dan. 3:28. Eph. 1:12. x Josh. 10:19,39. 11:12. 1 Sam. 31:7.
y 15:8. Josh. 15:9. Ephron. John 11:54.
z 1 Sam. 25:38. 26:10. Ez. 24:16. Acts 12:23.
a 1 K. 14:20. 15:9.
b 2 Sam. 5:12,13.
c See on 11:21.
d Judg. 8:30,31. 9:5. 10:4.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—12. The promptness of mankind to war, lamentably proclaims the depravity of our nature, and the influence that the great murderer of bodies and souls possesses over the minds of men, even in the determinations of senates and in the cabinets of kings. Nor can vain-glorious commanders more delight in seeking renown, power, or revenge, by the destruction of the human species, than many of their inferiors do, in listing under their banners, seconding their aims, and rushing on danger and death, that they may attempt the slaughter of those who never injured or even saw them. [Introd. note g, p. 12. vol. I.] Such stubborn facts stand in the page of every history, a confutation of the absurd encomiums, which self-flattering speculators have passed on the philanthropy * of the human heart, and the sufficiency of human reason, for every purpose of virtue and religion. The annals of mankind form one continued narration of blood shed in the most wanton and unnecessary manner, in pursuit of honor and dominion, or in seeking to wrest the sword of vengeance from the hands of the Supreme Judge. The millions, who have thus perished miserably, 'hateful, and hating one another,' exceed almost imagination: and, to crown the whole, the chief actors in this bloody tragedy have engrossed almost the whole applause of their fellow mortals; or shared it with the poets, orators, and historians, who have excited them by infamous panegyrics to such destructive pursuits! Compare the whole with the short command, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself;' and then bring in an impartial verdict concerning the heart of man, and the state of human nature. (Lev. 19: 18.)—Yet all the blood thus shed must be one day accounted for, as murder, on whomsoever that load of guilt may fall!—But, it is easy to speak on these topics without the fear of God possessing the heart. Many palliate the offences of their own party, while they aggravate the misconduct of their adversaries. These are not only the arts of those, who purposely frame manifestos to varnish their ambition with the show of equity; but are often employed by such as really have justice on their side, yet forget that genuine beauty is disgraced and rendered suspected, by being painted. It is obvious, however, that ungodly princes have often prospered, because their enemies have been still more abandoned; because they had justice on their side; because many of their subjects were pious; because more external honor was paid to the truth and ordinances of God among their subjects; or because the appeal to Him, and professed reliance on Him, was more openly made in the decision of the contest. SCOTT.

* That there is more or less of philanthropy, or benevolence, in every human being that ever lived, is true; but that it is a ruling motive of action in many, (compared with the millions on the earth,) history and every day's experience teach us to deny. Ed.

---

idolaters, in several particulars, adopting or imitating the usages of Israel. Zemaraim. (4) A city allotted to Benjamin: but mt. Zemaraim, no doubt adjacent to it, was in mt. Ephraim, on the borders of the two tribes. (Josh. 18:22.) SCOTT.

Verses 13—22.

Abijah, though destitute of piety, seems to have possessed great vigor and capacity, and during his short reign he became very powerful. (M. and M R. c.—1 K. 15:1—8.) SCOTT.

sons, and sixteen daughters.

22 And the rest of the acts of Abijah, and his ways, and his sayings, are written in the *story of the prophet [e] Iddo.

CHAP. XIV.

Abijah dies, and Asa succeeds him, I. He abolishes idolatry, 2—5. Enjoying peace, he fortifies his kingdom, and establishes a large army, 6—8. Being attacked by Zerah, with an immense army of Ethiopians, he calls on God, is victorious, and acquires much spoil, 9—15.

SO Abijah [a] slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and [b] Asa his son reigned in his stead. In his days the land was quiet ten years.

2 And Asa did that which was [c] good and right in the eyes of the LORD his God:

3 For [d] he took away the altars of the strange gods, and the [e] high places, and [f] brake down the †images, [g] and cut down the groves:

4 And [h] commanded Judah to [i] seek the LORD God of their fathers, and [k] to do the law and the commandment.

5 Also he took away, out of all the cities of Judah, the high places and the ‡images: and the kingdom was quiet before him.

6 And [l] he built fenced cities in Judah: [m] for the land had rest, and he had no war in those years; because [n] the LORD had given him rest.

7 Therefore [o] he said unto Judah, Let us build these cities, and make about them walls and towers, gates and bars, [p] while the land is yet before us; because we have sought the LORD our God, [q] we have sought him, and [r] he hath given us rest on every side. So they built and prospered.

17. more; it is said, than ever we read of in any history to have been killed in one battle; but the Lord would thus chastise the idolatry of Israel, and own the house of David. But see the sad effect of division: it was the blood of Israelites that was thus shed like water by Israelites, while the heathen, their neighbors, to whom the name had formerly been a terror, cried Aha, so would we have it!

IV. The consequence of this was, that the children of Israel, though not brought back to the house of David, yet, for that time, were brought under, v. 18. Many cities were taken, and remained in the possession of the kings of Judah; as Beth-el particularly, v. 19. What became of the golden calf there, when it came into the hands of the king of Judah, we are not told; perhaps it was removed to some place of greater safety, and, at length, to Samaria, Hos. 8: 5. yet in Jehu's time we find it at Beth-el, 2 K. 10: 29. Perhaps Abijah, when it was in his power to demolish it, suffered it to stand, for his heart was not perfect with God; and not improving what he had got for the honor of God, he soon lost it all again.

Jeroboam never looked up after this defeat, v. 20. The Lord struck him, either with some bodily disease, of which he languished; or with melancholy and trouble of mind, his heart was broken, and vexation brought his head, probably, a hoary head, with sorrow to the grave.

Abijah waxed mighty upon it. What number of wives and children he had before, does not appear; but now he multiplied his wives to 14 in all, by whom he had 38 children, v. 21. It seems, he had ways peculiar to himself, and sayings of his own, which were recorded with his acts in the history of those times, v. 22. Perhaps he was too much lifted up with his victories, therefore God would not let him live long to enjoy the honor of them.

CHAP. XIV. In this and the two following chs. we have the history of the reign of Asa; a good reign, and a long one.

V. 1—8. I. Here is, Asa's general character, v. 2. 1. He aimed at pleasing God: studied to approve himself to Him. Happy they that walk by this rule! 2. He saw God's eye always upon

* Or, commentary.

a 9:31.—See on 1 K. 2:10. 14:31.
b 1 K. 15:8. 1 Chr. 3:10. Matt. 1:7,8. c 31:20. 1 K. 15:11,14. Luke 1:75. d Deut. 7:5. 1 K. 11:7,8. 14:22—24.
e 15:17. Lev. 26:30. 1 K. 15: 12:14. f 34:4. Ex. 34:13. Deut. 7:5,25.
† Heb. statues. 2 K. 23:14. marg.
g Judg. 6:25—28. 2 K. 18:4. 23:6,14.
‡ 29:21,27,30. 30:12. 33:16. 34:32,33. Gen. 18:19. Josh. 24:15. 1 Sam. 3: 13. Ezra 10:7—12. Neh. 13:9,19—22. Ps. 101:2—8. h See on 11:16.—30:19. Is. 55:6,7. Am. 5:4.
i Neh. 10:29—39. Ps. 119:10. k Heb. sun images. 34:4. marg.
l 8:2—6. 11:5—12.
m Judg. 3:11,30. 5:31. 1 K. 5:4. 1 Chr. 22:9.
n 15:15. Job 34:29. Ps. 46:9.
o 32:5. Acts 9:31.
p John 9:4. 12:35,36. Heb. 3:13—15.
q See on 4.—1 Chr. 28:9. Ps. 105:3,4. Jer. 29:12—14. 1 Pet. 3:12.
r See on 6.—Josh. 23:1. Matt. 11:28,29.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 13—22. The wise politicians of the world, generally treat with contempt, all arguments grounded on the state of religion, and the favor of God toward his worshippers: their whole dependence is 'on an arm of flesh,' and if their confidence be disappointed, they ascribe it to fortune, or to the chance of war! To triumph in those contests, which, [besides the fearful demoralization they necessarily promote,] cause so many thousands and hundreds of thousands of the human species to expire in agony, and their immortal souls to be sent to the tribunal of God and an eternal state, [shocks a feeling heart;] but his justice, and faithful care of his people, are seen and adored in them. And least of all, can success in civil wars, which are commonly conducted with the most unrelenting rancor and most tremendous slaughter, give satisfaction to any benevolent mind. Nor are the victories acquired in those fierce contests which rend the church of Christ, to the disgrace of the common cause, and joy of the common enemy to be more rejoiced in. But to conquer our own passions, to prevail against the tempter and the world, and overcome evil with good, are victories to be gained by faith, patience, and prayer, in which we may safely and purely rejoice. And when the conquerors and conquered, in bloody battles, will join in execrating their own and each other's madness; 'when the earth shall disclose her blood, and no more cover her slain;' then shall we receive the unsullied palm, the conqueror's noblest crown. SCOTT.

(22.) Story.] 'The marg. "commentary" is right. This, as far as I recollect, is the first place where a midrash, (so the Heb.) or commentary is mentioned.' Dr. A. CLARKE.

NOTES.

CHAP. XIV. V. 1. Jeroboam, and his son Nadab, remained quiet during the short time they reigned over Israel, after Abijah's victory. Baasha began to reign before the close of Asa's third year; but though 'there was war between him and Asa all their days;' (1 K. 15:16.) it did not for some time occasion much disturbance to the peace of Judah, through the enfeebled state of Israel. SCOTT.

V. 2—5. The high places, where JEHOVAH was irregularly worshipped, were not removed, though the idolatrous altars were. (15:17. 1 K. 15:14.) Id. High places.] Qu. Were these the mounds (found all over the world) of earth (cut) or stones, used for sacrifices, burying places, &c. (note, 2 K. 9:13.)? Some (as in Mexico, St. Louis, U. S. &c.) are square, with steps or a slope. Several are sometimes found together, perhaps one for each federate tribe assembled. Some in Minorca have projecting stones to ascend spirally (cut); others a spiral way. A cut is given from Vallancey, of the section of a circular mound, with its altar, (cromleach or BEALagh) and its circumvallation, (579 ft. in diam.) near BELfast, Ireland. The banks are 45 ft. high, and 12 broad, at top. Similar intrenchments are found in the U. S. &c. see Archæologia Americana. The Parsees, near Bombay, still expose their dead on circular high places (cut); conspicuously located, to birds of prey, and the elements. See Forbes, and Hyde. Pr. Pallas gives a plate of a Tartar temple (Siberia) surrounded by mounds with flags on them (cut). ED.

(5.) Sun images, marg.] 'Connected with the worship of Baal, 34:4. So the Heb. in Is. 27:9. and Ez. 6:4. This, in addition to the Peor and Lingam, confirms the identity of Baal and Siva [the Destroyer, or changer of forms, or Regenerator]. The "sun images" are principally, if not exclusively, kept in the temple of Siva [of India]. They are made of black granite, in the shape and about the size of a man. There are, however, many of them with only a head, having a halo or coruscation to represent the orb of day. Thus in the houses of the rich natives may be seen, near a niche, on one side, the representation of the sun, and on the other, the crescent moon. The temple images are placed on the east side.' [Comp. note, 29:6, 7.] ROBERTS.

Meteoric stones seem also to have been early connected with sun worship; as well as the oval, hard, black stones (1 to 2 ft. in length) covered with the arrow head character, delicately cut, found at Persepolis. This stone worship, as connected with Baal, the Sun, extended to Ireland, and the centre stone of Stonehenge is black. Moore (Hist. of Ireland) mentions ancient 'sun images' found in Ireland 'of black wood, covered and plated with thin gold, the chased work on them in lines radiated from a centre.' Note, Gen. 28:18. ED.

V. 6—8. The union of piety and prudence, in Asa, is worthy of notice and commendation. We may suppose his army generally served in divisions by rotation, but could be marshalled all together on occasion. (1 Chr. 27:1—15.) Various concurring events formed the second cause of this rest, (6) both from external wars and internal disturbances; but the Lord, the GREAT FIRST CAUSE, directed and over-ruled all, to effect his own merciful purpose to Asa and Judah. This Asa saw, and piously acknowledged. (7) SCOTT.

V. 9. Zerah the Ethiopian.] 'Called Zara, by the Vulg. Zare, by the Sept. and Zaraios by Jos. Champollion finds his name on Egyptian monuments, thus inscribed; Amnmai OSRKN. This Pharaoh was the son and successor of Sheshonk, (Shishak) as is proved by Manetho, who with great probability calls him Osorchôn, a name which the copyists or abbreviators have improperly confounded with that of Osorthôn or Osorthôs. It is in Osorchon, 2d. king of the 22d dynasty, (Bubastite)

8 And Asa had an army of men that bare targets and spears: [s] out of Judah three hundred thousand; and out of Benjamin, that bare shields and drew bows, two hundred and fourscore thousand: all these were mighty men of valor.

9 ¶ And there came out against them [t] Zerah the Ethiopian with an host of a thousand thousand, and three hundred chariots; and came unto [u] Mareshah.

10 Then Asa went out against him, and they set the battle in array in the valley of [x] Zephathah at Mareshah.

11 And Asa [y] cried unto the LORD his God, and said, LORD, it is [z] nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with [a] them that have no power: help us, O LORD our God; for we [b] rest on thee, and [c] in thy name we go against this multitude. O LORD, thou art our God; [d] let not * man prevail against thee.

12 So [e] the LORD smote the Ethiopians before Asa, and before Judah; and the Ethiopians fled.

13 And Asa and the people that were with him pursued them unto [f] Gerar: and the Ethiopians were overthrown, that they could not recover themselves; for they were † destroyed [g] before the LORD and before his [h] host; and they carried away very much spoil.

14 And they smote all the cities round about Gerar; for [i] the fear of the LORD came upon them: and they spoiled all the cities; for there was [k] exceeding much spoil in them.

15 They smote also [l] the tents of cattle, and [m] carried away sheep and camels in abundance, and returned to Jerusalem.

CHAP. XV.

The encouraging prophecy of Azariah before Asa, 1—7. Asa puts away idolatry, assembles the people, and enters into covenant with God, 8—15. He removes his mother from being queen, for her idolatry; yet the high places are not taken away, 16, 17. He brings the dedicated things into the temple, and enjoys a long peace, 18, 19.

AND [a] the Spirit of God came upon Azariah the son of Oded:

2 And he went out ‡ to meet Asa, and said unto him, [b] Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin; [c] the LORD is with you, while ye be

s 11:1. 13:3. 17:14—19. 25:5.
t See on 12:2,3.—16:8. 2 K. 19:9. Is. 8:9,10. Ez. 30:5. Rev. 16:14. u Josh. 15:44. Mic. 1:15. x Judg. 1:17. Zephath.
y 13:14. 18:31. 32:20. Ex. 14:10. 1 Chr. 5:20. Ps. 22:5. 34:6. 50:15. 91:15. Acts 2:21.
z Lev. 26:8. Deut. 32:30. Judg. 7:7. 1 Sam. 14:6. 1 K. 20:27—30. Amos 5:9. 2 Cor. 12:9,10. a 20:12. Deut. 32:36. Is. 40:29—31.
b 32:8. 1 Sam. 17:35,36. Ps. 37:5. Prov. 18:10. Is. 26:3,4. 41:10—14.

differently armed, both offensively and defensively. The men of Judah guarded themselves with targets, the men of Benjamin with shields, the former much larger than the latter, 1 K. 10: 16, 17. [Cuts, Ps. 18: 2. Ex. 15: 4. 17: 10.] The men of Judah fought with spears, when they closed in with the enemy: the men of Benjamin drew bows, to reach the enemy at a distance. Different gifts and employments are for the common good.

V. 9—15. Here, 1. A formidable army of Ethiopians disturbs the peace of Asa's kingdom, (v. 9, 10.) that their faith in God might be tried, and that God might do great things for them. Now Asa found the benefit of having a good army ready raised against such a time of need.

2. The application Asa made to God, v. 11. He that sought God in the day of his peace and prosperity, could, with holy boldness, cry to God in the day of his trouble, and call Him his God. His prayer is short, but has much in it.

3. The glorious victory God gave him, v. 12. Asa and his soldiers took the advantage God gave them against the enemy. They destroyed them, took the plunder of their camp, and smote the cities in league with them, to which they fled for shelter, and despoiled them, v. 13. and they were not able to make any resistance, for the fear of the Lord came upon them, i. e. a fear God struck them with, to that degree that they had no heart to withstand the conquerors. Thus the wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just.

CHAP. XV. V. 1—7. Here was a prophet sent to Asa and his army, when they returned victorious, not to compliment and congratulate them on their success, but to quicken them to their duty; that is the proper business of God's ministers, even with princes and the greatest of men.

He told them plainly on what terms they stood with God: and set before them the dangerous consequences of forsaking God, and that there was no way of having grievances redressed, but by repenting, and returning to God. When Israel forsook their duty, they were overrun with a deluge of John 14:1,27. Rom. 8:31.

c 13:12,18. 1 Sam. 17:45,46. Ps. 20: 5,7. Is. 26:13. Acts 3:16. d Deut. 32:27. Josh. 7:8,9. 1 Sam. 2: 9. Ps. 9:19. 79:9,10. Jer. 1:19. Zech. 2:8. Matt. 16:18. Acts 9:4.
* Or, mortal man. Is. 2:22.
e 13:18. 20:22. Ex. 14:25. Deut. 28: 7. 32:39. Josh. 10:10. Ps. 60:12. 136:17,18. 1 Cor. 9:26. 15:57.
f 14. Gen. 10:19. 20:1. 26:1.
† Heb. broken.
g Job 6:9. 9:4. 2 Thes. 1:9.
h Josh. 5:14. 1 Sam. 25:28. 1 Chr. 12:22. Ps. 103:11.
i 17:10. 20:29. Gen. 35:5. Deut. 2:25. Josh. 2:9—11. 5:1. 1 Sam. 14:15. 2 K. 7:6. Job 15:21. Ps. 48:5,6. Is. 31:9. k 20:25. Judg. 14:19. 2 K. 7:7,8,16. Ps. 68:12. Is. 33:23. Rom. 8:37.
l 1 Chr. 4:41.
m Num. 31:9,30—47. 1 Sam. 30:20. 1 Chr. 5:21. a 20:14. 24:20. Num. 24:2. Judg. 3: 10. 2 Sam. 23:2. 2 Pet. 1:21.
‡ Heb. before Asa.
b 13:4. 20:15,20. Judg. 9:7. Is. 49:1, 2. Is. 7:13. Matt. 13:9. Rev. 2:7, 11,17,29. 3:6,13,22. c 13:12. 32:8. Deut. 20:1. Jam. 4:8.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Nothing will profit our own souls, except that religion, which induces us to 'do that which is good and right in the eyes of the LORD.' Indeed, this alone can prepare us for arduous and perilous services, and influence us to undertake, pursue, and accomplish, designs of usefulness.—In all our prosperity we should notice and acknowledge the hand of God: if He gives rest, none can cause trouble; and those who uprightly seek Him shall find peace and comfort. Our utmost watchfulness and diligence will not secure us from tribulation: but the consciousness of having heartily served the Lord in prosperity, will turn to us for a testimony, that we are indeed his people and He our God; and this will encourage our confidence in Him in the hour of trouble and temptation. SCOTT.

that we recognise (with Champ.) the Ethiopian of the SS. The monumental name, its Egyptian termination and vowels being abstracted, exactly corresponds with the Heb. here, ZRCH.

The identity of these two names, already conjectured by Desvignolles, is then established by the monuments. The collation of dates furnishes equally strong proof of it.' Greppo; who places Zerah's defeat in 941 B. C. So Wilkinson, who calls him, Osorkon 1. and remarks that the 21st. and 22d dyn. called by Africanus, respectively, Bubastites and Tanites, are also said to be both of Diospolitan kings. Perhaps Zerah was called 'the Ethiopian,' from his own or his father's conquests, or power, in Ethiopia (note, 12:3.); or his father called him so to flatter and quiet that people, as the title 'Prince of Wales' was given to the heir apparent to the British throne. Comp. Hist. note, end of Esth. ED.

Verses 9—15.

It is not certain, whether the Ethiopians or Cushites of Africa, or those near Arabia, are here intended, though it is more generally thought that the latter are meant; which Patrick thinks proved by the abundance of camels. But they who suppose the former, conjecture that Zerah had subjugated his neighbors, the Egyptians; had taken possession of the cities and territories bordering on Egypt; and intended still further to extend his conquest, when he had seized on the kingdom of Judah.—Asa's prayer is the genuine language of faith. He was conscious that his aim had been to glorify the Lord, and promote his worship, in the time of his prosperity; and this encouraged him to look upon God as his reconciled Friend and Father. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XV. V. 1—7. (Note, 8.) It is not easy to determine what times or events were intended by the prophet, in the following vs. Some think, he referred to the state of Israel, in the days of the judges, and this seems most satisfactory. Others again suppose the passage to be pro-with him; and [d] if ye seek him, he will be found of you; but [e] if ye forsake him, he will forsake you.

3 Now for [f] a long season Israel hath been without the [g] true God, and without [h] a teaching priest, and [i] without law.

4 But when they in their trouble did turn unto the LORD God of Israel, and sought him, he was [k] found of them.

5 And in those times there was [l] no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in, but [m] great vexations were upon all the inhabitants of the countries.

6 And [n] nation was [*] destroyed of nation, and city of city: for [o] God did vex them with all adversity.

7 Be [p] ye strong therefore, and let not your hands be weak: for [q] your work shall be rewarded.

8 ¶ And when Asa heard these words, and the prophecy of [r] Oded the prophet, he [s] took courage, and put away [t] the † abominable idols out of all the land of Judah and Benjamin, and out of [u] the cities which he had taken from mount Ephraim, and renewed [x] the altar of the LORD, that was before the porch of the LORD.

9 And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and [y] the strangers with them out of Ephraim and Manasseh, and out of Simeon: for [z] they fell to him out of Israel in abundance, when [a] they saw that the LORD his God was with him.

B. C. 941. 10 So they gathered themselves together at Jerusalem in [b] the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa.

11 And they [c] offered unto the LORD ‡ the same time, of the spoil which they had brought [d] seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep.

12 And [e] they entered into a covenant to [f] seek the LORD God of their fathers with all their heart, and with all their soul;

13 That [g] whosoever would not seek the LORD God of Israel should be put to death, [h] whether small or great, whether man or woman.

14 And [i] they sware unto the LORD with a loud voice, and with shouting, and [k] with trumpets, and with cornets.

15 And all Judah [l] rejoiced at the oath: for they had [m] sworn with all their heart, and [n] sought him with their whole desire; and [o] he was found of them: and [p] the LORD gave them rest round about.

16 ¶ And also concerning [q] Maachah § the mother of Asa the king, [r] he removed her from being queen, because she had made an ‖ idol atheism, impiety, irreligion, and all irregularity, v. 3. and were continually embarrassed with vexations and destroying wars, foreign and domestic, v. 5, 6. But when their troubles drove them to God, they found it not in vain to seek Him, v. 4. But what time does this refer to?

---

1. Some think it looks as far back as the days of the Judges, v. 3. These were sad times, when they were frequently oppressed by one enemy or other, and grievously harassed by Moabites, Midianites, Ammonites, and other nations, they were vexed with all adversity, v. 6. yet when they turned to God by repentance, prayer, and reformation, He raised up deliverers.

2. Others think it describes the state of the ten tribes, (now properly called Israel,) in the days of Asa. Now, since Jeroboam set up the calves, his idolatry has brought them to downright infidelity, they are without the true God, and no marvel, when they were without teaching priests; Jeroboam's priests were not teachers, and thus they came to be without law: it is next to impossible, religion should be kept up without a preaching ministry. In those times, there was no peace, v. 5. Their war with Judah gave them frequent alarms; so the late insurrection of Baasha, and other occasions not mentioned. Let Judah notice this, let their neighbors' harms be their warnings. Give no countenance to graven images, for you see what mischief they produce.

3. Others think the whole passage may be read in the future tense, and that it looks forward; hereafter, Israel will be without the true God, and a teaching priest, and they will be destroyed by one judgment after another, till they return to God, and seek Him. See Hos. 3: 4.

On this he grounded his exhortation to prosecute the work of reformation with vigor, v. 7. God's work should be done with diligence and cheerfulness, but will not be done without resolution. This should quicken us to the work of religion, that we shall be sure not to lose by it ultimately. How should it go unrewarded, when the work is its own reward?

V. 8—19. We are here told, what good effect the foregoing sermon had on Asa.

I. He grew more bold for God than he had been; his victory would inspire him with some new degrees of resolution, but this message from God with much more; now he ventured to destroy all the abominable idols, (all idolaters are abominable, 1 Pet. 4: 3.) as far as his power went. He also renewed the altar of the Lord, which, it seems, was gone out of repair, though it was not above 35 years since Solomon's head was laid, who erected it. So soon did these ceremonial institutions begin to wax old, as things which, in the fulness of time, must vanish away, Heb. 8· 13.

II. He extended his influence further than before, v. 9. He summoned a solemn assembly, and particularly brought the strangers to it. All strangers are to be helped, but those that cast themselves on God's good providence, purely to keep a good conscience, are worthy of double honor. Asa ordered the gathering of them together, v. 9. yet it is said, v. 10. they gathered themselves together, made it their own act, so forward were they to obey the king's orders. This meeting was held in the third month; probably, at the feast of Pentecost, which was in that month.

III. He and his people offered sacrifices to God, as his share of the spoil they had got, (v. 11.) by way of thanksgiving for favors received, and supplication for further favors. Prayers and praises are now our spiritual sacrifices. And so also he took care the temple should have its gold, v. 18. Will a man rob God, or make slow payment to Him, who is always ready to do us good?

IV. They entered into covenant with God, (v. 12—14.) repenting that they had violated their engagements to Him, and resolving to do better for the future. It is proper for penitents, for converts, to renew their covenants. It should seem, the motion came not from Asa, but from the people themselves: let every man be a volunteer that covenants with God. Thy people shall be willing, Ps. 110: 3. Observe,

1. The matter of this covenant. No vow or d 4,15. 33:12,13. Is. 55:6,7. Jer. 29: 13,14. Matt. 7:7,8.

---

e 12:1—3. 24:20. 2 K. 21:14. 1 Chr. 28:9. Rom. 11:1,2. Heb. 12:25. f 1 K. 12:28—33. Hos. 3:4.
g Jer. 10:10. John 17:3. 1 Thes. 1:9. 1 John 5:20.
h 17:8,9. Lev. 10:11. Deut. 33:10. Neh. 8:9. Ez. 44:21—23. Mic. 3:11. Mal. 2:7. Matt. 2:4,5. 1 Tim. 3:2.
i Rom. 2:12. 7:8,9. 1 Cor. 9:21.
j Deut. 4:29,30. Judg. 3:9,10. 10:10—16. Ps. 106:44. Hos. 6:1. 14:1—3. k 15. Is. 55:6. 65:1,2. Rom. 10:20. l Judg. 5:6. 1 Sam. 13:6. Ps. 121:8. m Matt. 24:6,7. Luke 21:25. n 12:15. 13:17. Mark 13:8. Luke 21: 9,10.
* Heb. beaten in pieces.
o 33:11. 36:17. Judg. 2:14. Ps. 106:41. Is. 10:6. Am. 3:6. Luke 21:22—24. p Josh. 1:7,9. 1 Chr. 28:20. Ps. 27: 14. Is. 35:3,4. Dan. 10:19. 1 Cor. 16:13. Eph. 6:10.
q Gen. 15:1. Ruth 2:12. Ps. 19:11. 58:11. Matt. 5:12,46. 6:1,4,6,18. 10: 41,42. Luke 6:35. Rom. 4:4,5. 1 Cor. 3:8,14. 9:17,18. 15:58. Col. 3: 24. Heb. 6:10. 10:35. 2 John 8.
r 1.
s 19:11. Is. 44:14. margine. Acts 28:15.
t Lev. 18:30. Deut. 27:15. Is. 65:4. Jer. 16:18. Ez. 8:10. 1 Pet. 4:3. Rev. 17:4,5.
† Heb. abominations. 1 K. 11:5,7. 2 K. 23:13.
u 13:19.
x 4:1. 8:12. 29:18. 2 K. 16:14. 18:22.
y 11:16. 30:1—11,25.
z 1 K. 12:19. 1 Chr. 12:19.
a Gen. 39:3. 1 Sam. 18:28. 1 K. 3:28. Zech. 8:21—23. Acts 7:9,10. 9:31. b Esth. 3:9.
c 14:13—15. Num. 31:28,29,50. 1 Sam. 15:15,21. 1 Chr. 26:26,27.
‡ Heb. in that day.
d 1:6. 7:5.
e 23:16. 29:10. 34:31,32. Deut. 29:1, 12. Neh. 9:38. 10:29. Jer. 50:5. 2 Cor. 8:5.
f See on 4.—Deut. 4:29. 10:12. 1 K. 8:48. Jer. 29:12,13.
g Ex. 22:20. Deut. 13:5,9,15. 17:2—5. 1 K. 18:40. h Gen. 19:11. Ex. 12:29. Deut. 29:18. Job 3:19. 34:19. Ps. 115:13. Acts 26:22. Rev. 6:15. 20:12.
i Neh. 5:13. 10:29.
k Ps. 81:1—4.
l 23:16—21. 29:10,36. Deut. 26:11. Neh. 8:9. Ps. 32:11. 119:111. Prov. 3:17. 2 Cor. 1:12.
m Ps. 119:106.
n See on 2,4.—Is. 26:8. 45:19 Phil. 1:23. o See on 4.
p See on 6.—Josh. 23:1. Job 34:29.
q 1 K. 15:13.
§ That is, grand-mother. 1 K. 15:2,10.
r 14:3—5. Ex. 32:27,28. Deut. 13:6—8. 33:9. Zech. 13:3. Mark 3:21,31—35. 2 Cor. 5:16.
‖ Heb. horror.

---

phetic of the Babylonish captivity, and even of the present dispersion and future conversion of the Jews, to which the words are doubtless applicable. Perhaps the prophet had some reference to God's general method of dealing with Israel in all ages, and then no wonder his expressions are descriptive of several distinct transactions. SCOTT.

V. 8. Perhaps the prophet was called Oded, as well as his father, (1) and Azariah by way of distinction: though some think, Oded confirmed his son's words by a prophecy to the same effect. As the calf was not removed from Beth-el, probably that city had been previously ceded to the king of Israel, or retaken by him. (13:13—22.) ID.

Verse 9.

Simeon, &c.] The situation of this tribe, in part of the lot of Judah (Josh. 19:1—9.) had not prevented them from joining the general revolt. But at this time many of them, with numbers from the other tribes, submitted to Asa, and probably a great part of the tribe of Simeon permanently adhered to Judah. SCOTT.

Verses 10, 11.

Fifteenth year, &c.] It is said, 'The land was quiet 10 years:' (1) hence it is concluded that Zerah's invasion was in the 11th year of Asa. Yet that the sacrifices from the spoil should not be offered from the spoil taken, till the 15th of Asa, can hardly accord to that supposition.—The same time.] 'Heb. "in that day," which the Targum takes to have been in the feast of weeks, . . . which was kept in the third month, called Sivan.' Patrick.—Some previous appointment, in a grove: and Asa [s] cut down her idol, and stamped it, and burnt it at the brook Kidron.

17 But [t] the high places were not taken away out of Israel: nevertheless [u] the heart of Asa was perfect all his days.

18 And he [x] brought into the house of God the things that his father had dedicated, and that he himself had dedicated, silver, and gold, and vessels.

19 And there was no more war unto the [y] five and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa.

CHAP. XVI.

Asa makes a league with Benhadad against Baasha, who is hindered from building Ramah; and Asa with the stones of it builds Geba and Mizpah, 1—6. Hanani the prophet reproves him for trusting in the Syrians, rather than in God, and is imprisoned by Asa, who at the same time oppressed some of his subjects, 7—10. When sick, Asa seeks to physicians, and not to God, 11, 12. His death and burial, 13, 14.

IN the six and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa, [a] Baasha king of Israel came up against Judah, and built Ramah, [b] to the intent that he might let none go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

2 Then Asa [c] brought out silver and gold, out of the treasures of the house of the LORD, and of the king's house, and sent to Benhadad king of Syria, that dwelt at * Damascus, saying,

3 There is [d] a league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father: behold, I have s See on 14:3.—34:7. Ex. 32:20. Lev. 26:30. Deut. 7:5,25,26. 9:21. 2 K. 23:6,12,15.

t 14:3—5. Deut. 12:13,14. 1 K. 3:2—4. 22:43. 2 K. 12:3. 14:4.
u 16:7—12. 1 K. 11:4.
x 1 K. 7:51. 15:14,15. 1 Chr. 26:20—26.
y 16:1. 1 K. 15:16,17,32,33.
a See on 1 K. 15:16—22.
b See on 11:13—17.—15:9. 1 K. 12:27.
c 28:21. 2 K. 12:18. 16:8. 18:15.
* Heb. Darmesek.
d 18:3. 19:2. Judg. 2:2. Is. 31:1 ¶. 2 Cor. 6:16.

promise could lay any higher obligation on them, than they were already under from the divine precept, yet it would help to increase their sense of the obligation, to arm them against temptations, and would be a testimony to the equity and goodness of the precept. And by joining all together in this covenant, they strengthened the hands one of another. Two things they engaged themselves to. (1.) That they would diligently seek God themselves, seek his precepts, his favor; seek Him as the God of their fathers, in the way their fathers sought Him, and in dependence on the promise ם their fathers; and that they would do it with all their heart, and soul; for those only seek God acceptably and successfully, that are inward with Him, intent on Him, and entire for Him, in their seeking of Him. We make nothing of our religion, if we do not make heart-work of it; God will have all the heart, or none; and when a jewel of such inestimable value as the divine favor is to be found, it is worth while to seek it with all our soul. (2.) That they would, to the utmost of their power, oblige others to seek Him, v. 13. They agreed, that whosoever would not seek the Lord God of Israel, i. e. would either worship other gods, or refuse to worship with them the true God, that was either an obstinate idolater, or an obstinate atheist, he should be put to death. This was no new law. See Deut. 17: 2, &c. If this law had been duly executed, there had not been so many abominable idols found in Judah and Benjamin, v. 8. Men may not now, under the Gospel, be compelled by such methods as these, to seek the Lord; the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, yet they are mighty.

2. They made this covenant, with great cheerfulness, and all possible expressions of joy; not secretly, as if ashamed of what they did, or afraid of binding themselves too fast; but with a loud voice, to express their own zeal, and to animate one another; they all rejoiced at the oath, v. 14, 15. they swore, not with reluctancy, but with all pleasure and satisfaction imaginable, as the bridegroom plights his troth to the bride in the marriage covenant. Every honest Israelite was pleased with his own engagements to God, and all with one another's. They rejoiced in it as a hopeful expedient to prevent their apostasy, and a happy indication of God's presence. Note, The times of renewing our covenant with God, should be times of rejoicing. National reformation cannot but give general satisfaction to all the good. It is an honor and happiness to be in bonds to God. They did it too with great sincerity, zeal, and resolution. Those only experience the pleasure and comfort of religion, that are sincere and upright in it. What is done in hypocrisy, is a mere drudgery. But if God have the heart, we have the joy.

Lastly, We are told its effect, v. 15. there was no war, for a long time after, v. 19. no open, general war, though there were constant bickerings between Judah and Israel on the frontiers, 1 K. 15: 16. National piety procures national blessings.

V. They carried the reformation so far, that Maachah the queen-mother was deposed for idolatry, and her idols destroyed, v. 16. This was bravely done, that Asa would not connive at idolatry in those nearest to him; like Levi, Deut. 33: 9. Asa knows he must honor God more than his grandmother. We may suppose Maachah so far convinced of sin, that she was willing to subscribe the association mentioned, v. 12, 13. and therefore was not put to death, as those were, who refused to sign it; but because she had been an idolater, Asa thought fit to divest her of her dignity and authority, and, probably, he banished her the court, and confined her to privacy, lest she should influence and infect others. But the reformation was not complete, the high places were not all taken away, though many were, ch. 14: 3, 5. Those in the cities were removed, but not those in the country villages; or those in the cities of Judah, but not those in the cities of Israel now reduced to the house of David; or those that were used in the service of false gods, but not those that were used in the service of the God of Israel; those he connived at, and yet his heart was perfect. There may be defects in some particular duties, where yet the heart, in the main, is upright with God; sincerity is something less than sinless perfection.

CHAP. XVI. This ch. concludes the history of the reign of Asa, but does not furnish so pleasing an idea of his latter end as of his beginning.

V. 1—6. How to reconcile the date of this event with the history of the kings, I am quite at a loss; Baasha died in the 26th year of Asa, 1 K. 16: 8. How then could this be done in his 36th year, when Baasha's family was quite cut off, and Omri on the throne? It is generally said to be meant of the 36th year of the kingdom of Asa, namely, that of Judah, beginning from the first of Rehoboam, and so it coincides with the 16th of Asa's reign. But then ch. 15: 19. must be so understood; and how could it be spoken of as a great thing, that there was no more war till the 15th year of Asa, when that passage immediately before was in his 15th year, ch. 15: 10. and after this miscarriage of his, here recorded, he had wars, v. 9. Jose-

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Prosperity and comfort should animate us to more diligent obedience; but we need the ministry of the Word to remind us of our duty, when successful, as much at least as when afflicted.—The history of the church in all ages, and the experience of every believer, demonstrate, that vexation and distress are the never-failing consequences of negligence and sin, even to those who are not left to final apostasy; and that humiliation before God, and diligent seeking Him, uniformly make way for peace and comfort. Hence the benefit of a teaching ministry, of the holy law, and of the blessed gospel.—The assured expectation of assistance, acceptance, and a gracious recompense, inspires the soul with courage and strength for present duty; and we ought to exhort and encourage one another, that we may be 'strong in the Lord,' when called to arduous and perilous attempts, for the honor of God, and to promote true religion.—Whatever the Lord gives should be employed according to his will: especially we should devote our bodies and souls unto Him, according to his everlasting covenant; by accepting of his salvation, and yielding ourselves to his service. Our devotedness to God our Savior should be avowed and professed, in the most solemn and public manner.—We are not called on to inflict death, or any secular punishment, on those who are guilty of impiety, apostasy, or idolatry; yet, they who neglect the great salvation of the Gospel, will by no means escape a more dreadful doom.—No relative affections are to be indulged, when they interfere with our evident duty to God: but where the heart is upright, there will be peace and acceptance, though we come short of the perfection proposed to us, and to which we should continually be pressing forwards. SCOTT.

---

however, evidently produced a much more general concourse on this occasion, than would otherwise have taken place. SCOTT.

Verse 17.

Out of Israel, &c.] Some have thought, that this only relates to the cities taken from Israel: but it is probable some high places at least were still connived at in Judah; perhaps as a human device, to render the people more willing to renounce idolatry. ID.

Verse 19.

Baasha died in the 26th year of Asa's reign: and, as there were wars between Asa and Baasha, (16:1. 1 K. 15:16, 17, 32, 33.) it seems impossible to reconcile this v. and the date of the ensuing ch. with the other history, except by allowing a trivial error of the transcribers, and reading the 25*th* instead of the 35*th*, in this v. and the 26*th* instead of the 36*th*, in v. 1. of the following ch. This very probable date Josephus affixes. Other ways of solving the difficulty have been proposed, but they appear liable to insuperable objections. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XVI. V. 1—6. Baasha seems to have meditated war against Judah from the beginning of his reign: and probably he had made some hostile attempts before; but he was not able to make any formidable attack, till the year preceding his death. At that time, he so sent thee silver and gold; go, [e] break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

4 And Benhadad [f] hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of [*] his armies against the cities of Israel; and they smote [g] Ijon, and [h] Dan, and Abel-maim, and all the [i] store cities of Naphtali.

5 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard it [j] that he left off building of Ramah, and let his work cease.

6 Then Asa the king took all Judah, and [k] they carried away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha was building; and he built therewith [l] Geba and [m] Mizpah.

7 ¶ And at that time [n] Hanani the seer came to Asa king of Judah, and said unto him, [o] Because thou hast relied on the king of Syria, and not [p] relied on the LORD thy God, therefore is [q] the host of the king of Syria escaped out of thine hand.

8 Were not [r] the Ethiopians and the Lubims † a huge host, with very many chariots and horsemen? yet, [s] because thou didst rely on the LORD, he delivered them into thine hand.

9 For [t] the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, ‡ to show himself strong in the behalf of them [u] whose heart is perfect toward him. Herein [v] thou hast done foolishly: therefore from [x] henceforth thou shalt have wars.

10 Then Asa was [y] wroth with the seer, and [z] put him in a prison-house; for he was in a rage with him because of this thing. And Asa § oppressed some of the people [a] the same time.

11 And, behold, [b] the acts of Asa, first and last, lo, they are written in the book of the kings [c] of Judah and Israel.

12 And Asa in the thirty and ninth year of his reign was [d] diseased in his feet, until his disease was exceeding great: yet [e] in his disease he sought not to the LORD, but to the [f] physicians.

13 And Asa [g] slept with his fathers, and B. C. 914. died in the one and fortieth year of his reign.

phus places it in his 26th year, and then we must suppose a mistake in the transcriber here, and ch. 15: 19. which, if we admit, the computation is easy.

This passage we had before, 1 K. 15: 17, &c. and Asa was several ways faulty in it. 1. He did not do well to make a league with Ben-hadad, a heathen king, and to value himself so much on it as he seems to do, v. 3. He should have relied more on his covenant, and his father's, with God. 2. Had he had a due regard to the honor of Israel in general, he would have found some other expedient to give Baasha a diversion, than by calling in a foreign force, and inviting into the country a common enemy, which, in process of time, might be a plague to Judah too. 3. It was, doubtless, a sin in Ben-hadad to break his league with Baasha, on no provocation, but merely through the influence of a bribe; and if so, certainly it was a sin in Asa to move him to it, especially to hire him to do it. The public faith of kings and kingdoms must not be made so cheap a thing. 4. To take silver and gold out of the house of the Lord for this purpose, was a great aggravation of the sin, v. 2. 5. It was well if Asa had not to answer for all the mischief the army of Ben-hadad did unjustly to the cities of Israel, all the blood they shed, and all the spoil they made, v. 4. Perhaps Asa intended not they should carry the matter so far. But they that draw others to sin, know not what they do, nor where it will end. However the project succeeded.

V. 7—14. Here is,

I. A plain and faithful reproof to Asa by a prophet of the Lord, for making this league with Ben-hadad. Hanani was the father of Jehu, another prophet, whom we read of, 1 K. 16: 1. 2 Chr. 19: 2. We observed several things amiss in Asa's treaty with Ben-hadad. But what the prophet here charges on him as the greatest, is, his relying on the king of Syria, and not on the Lord his God, v. 7. God is much displeased, when He is distrusted, and when an arm of flesh is relied on more than his power and goodness. By putting our confidence in God we honor Him, therefore He thinks Himself affronted, if we honor another instead. To convince him of his folly herein, (v. 9.) he shows him,

1. That he acted against his experience, v. 8. ch. 13: 18. 14: 11. Note, Our many experiences of God's goodness to us, aggravate our distrust of Him. But see how deceitful our hearts are! We trust in God when we have nothing else to trust to, when need drives us to Him; but when we have other things to stay on, we are apt to stay too much on them, and to lean to our own understanding; but a believing confidence will be in God only, when a smiling world courts it most.

2. That he acted against his knowledge of God and his providence, v. 9. Asa could not be ignorant that God governs the world in infinite wisdom, and that the creatures, and all their actions, are continually under his eye. He knew, that God governs the world for the good of his people; does all in pursuance of the counsels of his love concerning their salvation, all for Jacob his servant's sake, and Israel his elect, Isa. 45: 4. Christ is head over all things to his church, Eph. 1: 22. They then whose hearts are upright with Him, may be sure of his protection, and have all the reason in the world to depend on it. A practical disbelief of this, is at the bottom of all our departures from God, and double-dealing with Him.

3. That he acted against his interest. He had lost an opportunity of checking the growing greatness of the king of Syria, v. 7. His host is escaped out of thy hand, which otherwise would have joined with Baasha's, and fallen with it. He had incurred God's displeasure, and henceforth must expect no peace, but the constant alarms of war, v. 9. They that cannot find in their hearts to trust God, forfeit his protection, and throw themselves out of it.

II. Asa's displeasure at this reproof. Though it came from God by one known to be his messenger, though the reproof was just, and the reason-

---

[e] Gen. 20:9,10. Ex. 32:21. Josh. 9:19, 20. 2 Sam. 21:2. Ps. 15:4. Ez. 17: 18,19. Rom. 1:31,32. 2 Tim. 3:3.
[f] 1 Tim. 6:10. 2 Pet. 2:15.
[*] Heb. armies which were his.
[g] 1 K. 15:20.
[h] Gen. 14:14. Judg. 18:28,29. 20:1.
[i] 8:6. 17:12. 1 K. 9:19.
[j] See on 1.
[k] 1 K. 15:22.
[l] Josh. 18:24—26. Gaba. 21:17. 1 Chr. 6:60. Is. 10:29. Zech. 14:10.
[m] Josh. 15:38. 18:26. 1 Sam. 7:6,16. 10:17. Mizpeh.
[n] 19:2. 20:34. 1 K. 16:1.
[o] Ps. 146:3—6. Is. 31:1. 32:2. Jer. 17:5,6. Eph. 1:12,13.
[p] 13:18. 32:7,8. 2 K. 18:5. 1 Chr. 5:20.
[q] See on 8.
[r] See on 14:9—12.
[†] Heb. in abundance.
[s] See on 7.—Ps. 9:9,10. 37:39,40.
[t] 6:20. Job 34:21. Ps. 34:15. 113:6. Prov. 5:21. 15:3. Jer. 16:17. 32:19. Zech. 4:10. Heb. 4:13. 1 Pet. 3:12.
[‡] Or, strongly to hold with.
[u] See on 15:17. 2 K. 20:3.—Ps. 37:37.
[v] 1 Sam. 13:13. 2 Sam. 12:7—12. 1 Chr. 21:8. Job 34:18,19. Jer. 5:21. Matt. 5:22. Luke 12:20. 1 Cor. 15: 36. Gal. 3:1.
[x] 1 K. 15:32.
[y] 25:16. 26:19. 2 Sam. 12:13. 24:10—14. Ps. 141:5. Prov. 9:7—9.
[z] 18:26. Jer. 20:2. 29:26. Matt. 14: 3,4. Luke 3:20. Acts 16:23,24.
[§] Heb. crushed. Job 20:19. marg Is. 51:23. Jer. 51:34. Lam. 3:34.
[a] 2 Sam. 11:4. 12:31.
[b] 9:29. 12:15. 20:34. 26:22.
[c] 25:26. 27:7. 32:32. 33:18. 35:27. 1 K. 15:23.
[d] Matt. 7:2. Luke 6:37,38. Rev. 3:19.
[e] See on 9.—28:22. 1 Chr. 10:14. Jer. 17:5.
[f] Gen. 50:2. Job 13:4. Jer. 8:22. Matt. 9:12. Mark 2:17. 5:26. Col. 4:14.
[g] 1 K. 15:24.

---

fortified Ramah, on the frontiers of the land, that he not only prevented his own subjects from migrating into Judah, but stopped all travellers from passing: and this both hindered the Israelites from going over to the king of Judah, and was likely, it seems, to reduce him and his subjects to distress. SCOTT.

(3.) 'There is' is supplied by our translators; rather read 'Let there be a league,' &c. HOUB. BOOTHR. Dr. A. CLARKE.

Verses 7—10.

Asa's misconduct entirely originated from unbelief. His subsequent conduct seems to be without parallel in Scripture. No one decidedly pious man, as I recollect, is recorded to have so deeply resented a reproof from a prophet in the name of God, as to have used severity against him for it: yet the expressions concerning Asa's character are so strong, (14:2. 15:17.) that we must consider him as an exception; and a lamentable proof that there is no kind of sin, which a believer is not capable of committing, if left to himself: so that we must not form our judgment of men's characters from any detached actions, but the general tenor of their conduct.—It is probable, however, that he speedily released the prophet; and as he lived at least 15 years after this event, (for so long he lived after Baasha's death,) and as we do not find that he oppressed or persecuted any person, except on this occasion; we may conclude that he repented, and adhered to the service of God to the close of his life. But, having openly dishonored the Lord, the latter part of his reign was obscure, inglorious, and troublesome.—It is not said what wars he was engaged in; but probably they were more perplexing to him, than fatal to his people. SCOTT.

Lubims. (8) 'The people of Libya, or the Africans beyond Egypt.' Patrick. (Note, 12:3, 4.) This favors the opinion that the Ethiopians, commanded by Zerah, were those of Africa, not the Cushites in Arabia. (Note, 14:9—15.) ID.

(7.) Some think Hanani should be Ben-Hanani, 'the son of Hanani,' and that Jehu, 1 K. 16:1. 2 Chr. 19:2. 20:34. is meant. ED.

(10.) Prison-house.] Heb. 'house of stocks;' probably like such as were then in use in Egypt: consisting of two semi-elliptical bits of wood, with holes at the joining, on the straight side. A figure of one is seen in the character for r. cut, 14:9. Comp. also cut, Prov. 13:27. of modern oriental stocks. ID.

Verses 13, 14.

(M. R.) Some have considered this funeral, as an argument of the improper state of Asa's heart, even at death, supposing that he appointed it for himself, out of vain glory, and in conformity to heathen customs. But probably the pomp of his interment, which had nothing idolatrous or unlawful in it, was intended by the people as an expression of respect for his memory; (M. R.) for, notwithstanding the 14 And they buried him in [h] his own sepulchres, which he had [*] made for himself in the city of David, and laid him in the bed, which was filled with [i] sweet odors, and divers kinds of spices prepared by [k] the apothecaries' art: and they made [l] a very great burning for him.

CHAP. XVII.

Jehoshaphat succeeds Asa, reigns well, and prospers, 1—6. He sends priests and Levites, accompanied by princes, to teach the law throughout Judah, 7—9. God overawes the minds of Jehoshaphat's neighbors, so that they submit to him, 10, 11. His greatness, and his army, with the captains, 12—19.

AND [a] Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead, [b] and strengthened himself against Israel.

2 And he [c] placed forces in all the fenced cities of Judah, and set garrisons in the land of Judah, and [d] in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had taken.

3 And [e] the LORD was with Jehoshaphat, because [f] he walked in the first ways of † his father David, and [g] sought not unto Baalim; h 35.24. Is. 22:16. John 19:41,42.

* Heb. digged.
i Gen. 50:2. Mark 16:1. John 19:39,40. k Ex. 30:25—37. Ec. 10:1.
l 21:19. Jer. 34:5.
a 1 K. 15:24. 22:41. 1 Chr. 3:10.—Matt. 1:8. Josaphat.
b 12:1. 26:8. 32:5. 1 Sam. 23:16. Ezra 7:28. Eph. 6:10. c See on 11:11,12.
d 15:8.
e 15:2,9. Gen. 39:2,3,21. Ex. 3:12. 4:12. Josh. 1:5,9. Judg. 2:18. 6:12. 2 Sam. 5:10. 1 Chr. 22:18. Ps. 46:7, 11. Is. 8:10. 41:10. Matt. 1:23. 18: 20. 28:20. 2 Tim. 4:22.
f 2 Sam. 8:15. 1 K. 11:6. 15:3,4. 2 K. 14:3. 16:2. 18:3. 22:2. Ps. 132: 1—3.
† Or, his father, and of David. 14: 2—5,11. 15:8—13.
g Judg. 2:11. 8:33. Jer. 2:23.

ing fair, and all intended for his good, yet he was wroth with the seer, for telling him of his folly; nay, he was in a rage with him, v. 10. Is this Asa? Well, let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall. A wise man! and yet in a rage! An Israelite! and yet in a rage with a prophet! A good man! and yet impatient of reproof, and that cannot bear to be told of his faults! What is man, when God leaves him to himself? They that idolize their own conduct, cannot bear contradiction; and they that indulge a peevish, passionate temper, may be transported by it into impieties as well as into indecencies, and will, some time or other, fly in the face of God Himself. See what gall and wormwood this root of bitterness bore. He that abused his power to persecute God's prophet, was left to himself, further to abuse it to crush his own subjects, whereby he weakened himself and lost his interest. Most persecutors have been tyrants.

III. His sickness, v. 12. Which was the gout in a high degree. It was exceeding great; it came to the height, so some; it flew up to his head, so others; and then it was mortal. This was his affliction; but his sin was, that in his disease, instead of seeking to the Lord for relief, he sought to the physicians. His making use of physicians, was his duty; but trusting to them, and expecting that from them, which was to be had from God only, were his sin and folly. Some think these physicians were strangers to Israel, and a sort of conjurers, to whom he applied, as if there were not a God in Israel.

IV. His death and funeral, of extraordinary solemnity, v. 14. I am loath to think (as some do) that he himself ordered this funeral pomp, and that it was an instance of his vanity, that he would be buried like the Gentiles, and not after the way of the Jews. It is said, indeed, He digged the sepulchre for himself, as one mindful of his grave; but I am willing to believe it was rather an expression of the great respect his people retained for him, notwithstanding the failings and infirmities of his latter days. Let the faults of good men be buried in their graves, while their services are remembered over their graves. He that said, There is not a just man that doeth good and sinneth not, yet said also, The memory of the just is blessed; and let it be so.

CHAP. XVII. Here begin the life and reign of Jehoshaphat, one of the first three among the royal worthies, one of the best that ever swayed the sceptre of Judah, since David, a good son of a good father, so, at this time, grace ran in the blood, even the blood-royal. Happy the son that had such a father, happy the father that had such a son, and happy the kingdom blessed with two such kings, two such reigns, together!

V. 1—9. I. His wisdom; As soon as he came to the crown, he strengthened himself against Israel v. 1. Ahab had now been three years on the throne of Israel, an active, warlike prince; the vigor of his beginning falling in with the decay of Asa's conclusion, probably Israel had, of late, got ground of the kingdom of Judah, and began to grow formidable to it; so the first thing Jehoshaphat had to do, on that side, was to check the growing greatness of Israel, which he did so effectually, v. 2. and without bloodshed, that Ahab soon courted his alliance, and proved more dangerous as a friend, than he could have been as an enemy.

II. His goodness. An excellent character is here given him, and very observable:

1. He walked in the ways of David. In the characters of the kings, David's ways are often made the standard, as 1 K. 15: 3, 11. 2 K. 14: 3. 16: 2. 18: 3. But the distinction is nowhere else so strongly marked, as here, between his first ways and his last: his fall in the matter of Uriah, is mentioned long after as the bar in his escutcheon, 1 K. 15: 5. Though he happily recovered, yet perhaps he never fully retrieved the spiritual strength and comfort he lost by it. Jehoshaphat followed David, no farther than he followed God. Paul himself thus limits our imitation of him, 1 Cor. 11: 1. Follow me, as I follow Christ, not otherwise. Many good people have had their first ways, their best; their first love, their strongest. The words here will admit another reading; thus, He walked in the ways of David, (hareshonim,) those first ways; or those ancient ways; he proposed, for his example, the primitive times of the royal family, those purest times, before the corruptions of the late reigns came in. See Jer. 6: 16. The LXX leave out David, and so refer it to Asa; whom he did not imitate in what was amiss in him, toward the latter end of his time. It is good to be cautious in following the best men, lest we step aside after them.

2. He sought not to Baalim, but to the Lord God his father, v. 3, 4. The neighboring nations had their Baalim, one had one Baal, and another another; but he abhorred them all, and worshipped the Lord God of his father, and Him only; prayed to Him only, and inquired of Him only; both are included in seeking Him.

3. He walked in God's commandments, not only worshipped the true God, but worshipped Him according to his own institution, and not after the doings of Israel, (v. 4.) though their king was his neighbor and ally.

4. His heart was lifted up in the ways of the Lord, v. 6. or he lifted up his heart; i. e. he had a sincere regard to God in his work, Ps. 119: 32. He never thought he could do enough for God. He was lively and affectionate in his religion, enlarged

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Those, who, on some occasions, 'being strong in faith, glorify God,' and bring blessings on themselves and others by so doing; at other times show, that faith is lamentably out of exercise: (Gen. 12: 1—5, 11—16.) and whenever men waver, as to confidence in God, they grow negligent and heartless in waiting on Him, and serving Him, and in using proper means for their own defence or deliverance; and become ready to turn aside into by-paths, and employ sinful expedients. Well may we then be cautioned.—The self-sufficient are impatient of reproof or contradiction; and then the plain language of faithful ministers appears ill-nature, ill-manners, impertinence, or insolence. In this case, if power unite with haughty resentment, persecution will follow: so that they are not qualified, at all times, to deliver the messages of God, even to good princes, who are not ready to bear the cross. For, in general, 'the flatterer, who spreads a net for a man's feet,' and merits execration, may more reasonably expect a reward from men, than he who most affectionately labors for their present and eternal good, but who will, when needful, speak offensive truth, unreservedly, and in plain language. (Matt. 14: 3—11.)—But, notwithstanding incidental faults, we should honor the memory of those who have been useful in their generation, and that of our benefactors: leaving their eternal state to the heart-searching Judge.—In all our conflicts and sufferings, we have need especially to look to our own hearts, that they be 'perfect towards God,' in the exercise of faith, patience, and obedience: remembering that 'his eyes run to and fro, throughout the earth, to show Himself strong in behalf of them,' who thus trust and serve Him; being an ever-present, and all-sufficient Helper and Comforter. SCOTT.

---

blemishes recorded in this ch. he had been an excellent, valuable, and successful prince: and the state of Judah during his reign was most happy, compared with the distractions and miseries of Israel. (1 K. 16:23.) SCOTT.

(14.) 'The bed was probably a funeral pyre, and the body burnt [after the manner of the Greeks, Romans, &c.] by setting fire to odoriferous woods and spices.' Dr. A. CLARKE. 'I believe the bodies were actually burned on the funeral pile, (see 1 Sam. 31:12.) and that Asa's bed, and the sweet odors, and the spices, were exactly the same as are used in the east to this day.' ROBERTS. Some sepulchres 'digged' or hewn in the rock, are still shown as the 'tombs of the kings' near Jerusalem: and it was a common custom of antiquity to prepare such, which were sometimes of astonishing extent and magnificence. 'The bowels, &c. only, were burnt.' HENRY abr. ED.

NOTES.

CHAP. XVII. V. 1, 2. (M. R. a, b.) Probably Asa had been engaged in war with Israel, after the establishment of Omri on the throne, though no events occurred so considerable as to be recorded. SCOTT.

Verse 3.

The first ways, &c.] Jehoshaphat copied the example of David, by proceeding to reform the state of religion immediately on his accession to the throne; and in his zeal for the pure, orderly, and spiritual worship of God: but he carefully avoided those sins, into which David afterwards fell. This is the common explication of the expression.—But as David's piety and zeal never shone brighter than at the close of his life; perhaps the words might as properly be read, 'In the first ways, even those of David his father:' proposing him as his model,

4 But sought to the LORD God of his father, and [h] walked in his commandments, and [i] not after the doings of Israel.

5 Therefore [k] the LORD established the kingdom in his hand; and all Judah * brought to Jehoshaphat [l] presents: and [m] he had riches and honor in abundance.

6 And [n] his heart was † lifted up [o] in the ways of the LORD: moreover [p] he took away the high places and groves out of Judah.

[Practical Observations.]

7 ¶ Also in the third year of his reign [q] he sent to his princes, even to Ben-hail, and to Obadiah, and to Zechariah, and to Nethaneel, and to Micaiah, [r] to teach in the cities of Judah.

8 And with them he sent Levites, even Shemaiah, and Nethaniah, B. C. 912. and Zebadiah, and Asahel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehonathan, and Adonijah, and Tobijah, and Tob-adonijah, Levites; and with them Elishama and Jehoram, [s] priests.

9 And they taught in Judah, and had [t] the book of the law of the LORD with them, and went about [u] throughout all the cities of Judah, and taught the people.

10 ¶ And [x] the fear of the LORD ‡ fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Judah, [y] so that h Luke 1:6. 1 Thes. 2:12. 4:1.

i 1 K. 12:28,33. 13:33,34. 16:31—33. 2 K. 8:18. 17:19. Jer. 3:7,8. Hos. 4:15. k 2 Sam. 7:25,26. 1 K. 9:4,5. Ps. 127: 1. 132:12. 1 Pet. 5:10.
* Heb. gave.
l 32:23. 1 Sam. 10:27. 1 K. 4:21. 10: 25. Ps. 68:29. 72:10. 76:11. Matt. 2:11. m 1:15. 9:27. 18:1. 32:27—29. Gen. 13:2. 26:13,14. Deut. 8:13,14. Job 42:12. Matt. 6:33. n Deut. 28:47. Job 22:26.
† That is, was encouraged.
o Ps. 18:21. 119:1. 138:5. Hos. 14:9. Acts 13:10.
p 14:3. 15:17. 19:3. 20:33. 31:1. 34: 3—7. 1 K. 22:43.
q Deut. 4:5. Ps. 34:11. 51:13. Ec. 1: 12. 12:9,10. Is. 49:23. r 15:3. 30:22. 35:3. Deut. 33:10. Neh. 8:7,8,13,14. 9:3. Matt. 4:23. Mark 4:2. Luke 4:43,44. Acts 1:1. s Ezra 7:1—6. Mal. 2:7.
t Deut. 6:6—9. 31:11—13. Josh. 1:7,8. Is. 8:20. Matt. 15:2—9. 28:19,20. Luke 4:17—19. John 5:39,46. Acts 13:15. 15:21. 28:23. Rom. 3:2. 1 Pet. 4:11. u Matt. 10:23. 11:1. Acts 8:40. x See on 14:14.—Gen. 35:5. Ex. 15: 14—16. Josh. 2:9—11.
‡ Heb. was.
y 16:9. Ex. 34:24. Prov. 16:7.

in heart, fervent in spirit, cheerful and pleasant in it; he went on in his work with alacrity; as Jacob, who, after his vision of God at Beth-el, lifted up his feet, Gen. 29: 1. marg. He was bold and resolute in the ways of God, his heart was lifted up above the consideration of difficulties in the way of his duty, Eccl. 11: 4. Let us walk in the same spirit.

III. His great usefulness.

1. He took away the teachers of lies, so images are called, Heb. 2: 18. the high places and the groves, v. 6. It is meant of those in which idols were worshipped; (those dedicated to the true God only, were not taken away, ch. 20: 33.) nothing debauched the nation more than these idolatrous groves or images.

2. He sent forth teachers of truth. He found his people generally very ignorant, they knew not that they did evil; even in the last good reign, there had been little care taken to instruct them in their duty; therefore Jehoshaphat resolves to begin his work at the right end, and endeavors to have them well taught; in doing which work, he employed, (1.) His princes in the administration of justice, v. 7. Princes or judges on the bench have a great opportunity of teaching people their duty to God and man, and it is not out of their province, for the laws of God are to be looked upon as laws of the land. (2.) The Levites and priests with the princes, v. 8, 9. They were teachers by office, Deut. 33: 10. but, it seems, had neglected their duty. 'Well,' says Jehoshaphat, 'you shall go along with the princes, and they shall oblige the people to come and hear you; and then if they be not well instructed, it is your fault.' What an abundance of good may be done, when Moses and Aaron thus go hand in hand in doing it; when princes with their power, and priests and Levites with their scripture-learning, agree to teach the people the good knowledge of God and their duty! These itinerant judges, and itinerant preachers together, were instrumental to diffuse a blessed light throughout the cities of Judah. They had the book of the law of the Lord with them. For their own direction, that they might not teach for doctrines the commandments of men. For the conviction of the people, that they might see that they had a divine warrant, and delivered only what they received from the Lord. Ministers, when they go to teach the people, should take their Bibles.

IV. How happy he was, 1. In the favor of his God who signally owned, blessed, and established him, v. 3, 5.

2. In the affections of his people, v. 5. All Judah brought him presents, in acknowledgment of his kindness in sending preachers among them. The more there is of true religion among a people, the more there will be of conscientious loyalty [to government.] A governor that answers the end of government, will be supported. He had riches and honor in abundance. It is undoubtedly true, though few believe it, that religion and piety are the best friends to outward prosperity. Riches and honor prove to many a clog and a hindrance in the ways of the Lord, an occasion of pride, security, and sensuality; but had a quite contrary effect on Jehoshaphat, being oil to the wheels of his obedience; the more he had, (observe, it follows immediately,) the more was his heart lifted up in the ways of the Lord.

V. 10—19. Here is a further account of Jehoshaphat's great prosperity, and the flourishing state of his kingdom.

1. He had good interest in the neighboring princes and nations. The fear of the Lord fell so upon them, i. e. God so influenced and governed their spirits, that they all reverenced him, v. 10. so that while the princes and priests were instructing and reforming the country, none of his neighbors gave him any molestation, to take him off from that good work. Thus when Jacob and his sons were going to worship at Beth-el, the terror of God was upon the neighboring cities, that they did not pursue after them, Gen. 35: 5. and see Ex 34: 24. Many of them brought presents to him, v. 11. to secure his friendship. Perhaps it was a

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—6. It is a signal blessing, when the Lord raises up pious and able men, in church or state, to succeed one another. [While, therefore, we exert the power given us by the laws of the state, and the church covenant, to promote such to office,] it behooves us all to pray for a succession of useful men; and did all pious persons, with one accord and without intermission, unite in such prayers, [and exertions,] in behalf of the community, the church at large, and particular congregations; they would witness blessed effects, and brighter prospects would open before us.—It is happy when prudence, vigor, and piety unite in distinguished characters; when they carefully imitate the best parts of the conduct of eminent believers, and as carefully avoid their mistakes; and when the purest ages of the church are made the models of personal religion and public reformation. Indeed, we should all study to walk in those 'first ways' of Christians, when 'great grace was upon them all,' and not be satisfied with the current standard of modern profession: this would tend to the establishment of our hearts in peace and assurance, and to the prosperity of our endeavors to glorify God and to do good.—This exalted piety springs from genuine poverty of spirit: and a deep sense of the condescension of the Infinite God, in employing and accepting us, inspires the heart with renewed vigor in his service. SCOTT.

---

and not the succeeding princes, under whom idolatry had been introduced, tolerated, or but feebly opposed; and not being satisfied even with walking in the steps of his father Asa, but aiming to reduce matters to their ancient purity. SCOTT.

Verses 7—9.

While the priests and Levites neglected their duty, as public teachers, the people remained ignorant of the truth and law of God, and were easily seduced into superstition or idolatry: so that the reformations which took place were rather the result of authority than conviction and distinct knowledge; and thus only external and transient. Asa and his people had done well, in covenanting together to punish those who would not seek the Lord: (15:12—15.) for this was according to the tenor and intention of that introductory dispensation; under which the capital punishment of apostate Israelites was one divinely appointed method of preserving that people from sinking wholly into idolatry, till the coming of Christ. But Jehoshaphat did better, when he added the public teaching of the people from the law of God: for this not only tended to the same object, but promoted the salvation of souls, and the increase of spiritual worshippers, who would hand down religion to their posterity. The princes joined with the priests and Levites, probably acted as magistrates, and were men of known probity, piety, and acquaintance with the law of God; and the persons from among the priests and Levites, who were appointed to be the itinerant instructers, were doubtless selected, because they were known to be eminent for piety and ability. It has before been shown, that the prophets in the kingdom of Israel held stated assemblies for religious worship, on the sabbath-days, and on some of their solemn feasts. (2 K. 4:23.) And it is probable, that from this time it became gradually the practice of the priests and Levites in Judah, as far as they paid regard to their duty; but this alas, was but seldom done. Synagogues, as it appears from this history, were not yet regularly formed in Judah; and the book of the law seems to have been very scarce, and but little attended to by the people in general, or made known to them by their regular instructers (15:1—7, v. 3.) SCOTT.

(9.) Taught.] 'The princes perhaps taught the civil law and the constitution; the Levites, the temple service and ritual law; and the priests, the nature and design of their religion.' DR A. CLARKE.

Verse 10.

(Notes, Ex. 34 24. Lev. 26 3, 4.) SCOTT.

'No ruler but might read this ch. with advantage. 1. It shows, most forcibly, That true religion is the basis of the state; and that wherever it prospers there the state prospers. 2. That it is the wisdom of governments to encourage religion with all their power and influence; for if the hearts of the citizens be not influenced by true religion, vain they made not war against Jehoshaphat.

11 Also some of the Philistines [z] brought Jehoshaphat presents, and tribute-silver: and the Arabians brought him flocks, seven thousand and seven hundred rams, and seven thousand and seven hundred he goats.

12 And Jehoshaphat [a] waxed great exceedingly: and he built [b] in Judah * castles, and cities of store.

13 And he had [c] much business in the cities of Judah: and the men of war, mighty men of valor, were in Jerusalem.

14 And these are [d] the numbers of them according [e] to the house of their fathers: Of Judah, the captains of thousands; Adnah the chief, and with him mighty men of valor [f] three hundred thousand.

15 And † next to him was Jehohanan the captain, and with him two hundred and fourscore thousand.

16 And next him was Amasiah the son of Zichri, who [g] willingly offered himself unto the LORD; and with him two hundred thousand mighty men of valor.

17 And of Benjamin; Eliada, a mighty man of valor, and with him [h] armed men with bow and shield, two hundred thousand.

18 And next him was Jehozabad, and with him an hundred and fourscore thousand ready prepared for the war.

19 These waited on the king, beside those, whom the king [i] put in the fenced cities throughout all Judah.

tribute imposed on them by Asa, who made himself master of the cities of the Philistines, and the tents of the Arabians, ch. 14: 14, 15. With the 7700 rams, and 7700 he-goats, which the Arabians brought, there was, probably, a proportionable number of ewes and lambs, she-goats and kids.

2. He had very considerable stores laid up in the cities of Judah; he pulled down his barns, and built larger, v. 12. castles and cities of store, for arms and victuals. He was a man of business, and aimed at the public good in all his undertakings, either to preserve the peace, or prepare for war.

3. He had the militia in good order; it was never in better, since David modelled it. It is said, one of his great commanders, Amasiah, willingly offered himself unto the Lord, v. 16. He was the most eminent for religion; he accepted his place, not for the honor, or power, or profit, of it; but for conscience-sake toward God, that he might serve his country. It was usual for great generals then to offer their spoils to the Lord, 1 Chr. 26: 26. but this good man offered himself first to the Lord, and then his dedicated things.

The number of the soldiers under five generals, amounts to 1,160,000 men. A vast number for so small a compass of ground as Judah and Benjamin, to furnish and maintain.* Abijah could bring into the field but 400,000, ch. 13: 3. Asa not 600,000, ch. 14: 8. yet Jehoshaphat has almost 1,200,000. But it must be considered, God had promised to make the seed of Abraham like the sand of the sea for number; there had now been a long peace; Jerusalem, we may suppose, was very much enlarged; many were come over from Israel, ch. 15: 9. and Jehoshaphat was under a special blessing of God, which made his affairs to prosper greatly. The armies, we may suppose, were dispersed all the country over, and each man resided, for the most part, [like the Egyptian military caste,] on his own estate; but they appeared often, to be mustered and trained, and were ready at call whenever there was occasion; the commanders waited on the king, v. 19. as officers of his court, privy-counsellors, and ministers of state.

But, lastly, observe; It was not this formidable army that struck a terror upon the neighboring

* Some portions of China are said to have 400, and even 700 persons to the square mile. London, with 20 sq. ms., contains about 1,400,000. Commercial places, where 'much business,' v. 13. is done, grow with astonishing rapidity, especially in a peaceful state, surrounded by warring kingdoms. Judah seems now to have had many such cities. Peaceful Egypt, in Amasis' time, (B. C. 570) contained, says Pliny, 20,000 cities. Comp. also, notes, Ex. 12:37. Num. 1:44—47. Ed.

[z] See on 5.—9:14. 26:8. 2 Sam. 8:2. 2 K. 3:4.
[a] 18:1. 1 Chr. 29:25.
[b] 8:2—6. 11:5—12. 14:6,7. 26:6—9. 27:4. 32:5,27—29.
* Or, palaces.
[c] 26:10—15. 1 Chr. 27:25—31.
[d] Gen. 12:2. 13:16. 15:5.
[e] See on Num. 1:2,18.
[f] 11:1. 13:3. 14:8. 26:13.
† Heb. at his hand.
[g] Judg. 5:2,9. 1 Chr. 29:9,14,17. Ps. 110:3. 2 Cor. 8:3—5,12.
[h] 14:8. 2 Sam. 1:21,22.
[i] 2,12. 11:12,23.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 7—19. The public teaching of the Word of God forms, in all ages, the grand method of promoting the power of godliness: for by it the understanding is informed, the judgment regulated, the conscience awakened and directed, and the hopes, fears, and affections suitably excited; and, as far as the divine blessing is vouchsafed, religious worship is rendered a voluntary, reasonable, and spiritual service. Kings and princes, therefore, render a most essential service to the cause of God, when they use their influence to excite and countenance those, who 'labor in the word and doctrine;' and by their example and public declarations make it known, that they most approve of such as diligently attend on the instructions of such teachers. And though no violence must be done to any man's conscience, nor any one constrained to teach in contradiction to his judgment; yet surely they, who are publicly maintained as teachers of the people, may be required either to do their work, or to give place to those who will!—Notwithstanding the prejudices of mankind, and the indiscretions of individuals, an itinerant preacher, if duly qualified and sent forth, is one of the most honorable and useful characters, that can be found on earth: and there needs no other proof that, when this work is done properly and with perseverance, it forms the grand method of spreading widely, and rendering efficacious, religious knowledge, than the experience of the church in all ages; for great reformations and revivals of religion have generally been thus effected. It is especially sanctioned by the example of Christ and his apostles, and recommended as the divine method of spreading the Gospel through the nations of the earth; itinerant preaching having almost always preceded, and made way for, the stated ministry of regular pastors. But it is a work which requires peculiar talents and dispositions, and a peculiar call in Providence; and is not rashly and hastily to be ventured upon by every novice, who has learned to speak about the Gospel, and has more zeal, than knowledge, prudence, humility, or experience. An unblemished character, a disinterested spirit, an exemplary deadness to the world, unaffected humility, deep acquaintance with the human heart, and preparation for enduring the cross, not only with boldness, but with meekness, patience, and sweetness of temper, are indispensably necessary in such a service. They who engage in it should go on broad scriptural grounds, and dwell chiefly on those grand essentials of religion, in which pious men of different persuasions are agreed; plainly proving every thing from the Word of God, running nothing into extremes, and avoiding all disputes, however urged to it, about the shibboleths of a party. In this way itinerant preaching is a blessing which all, who love the souls of men, must wish to be vouchsafed to every part of every nation upon earth. And if those who are in authority, would employ select men of known and approved piety and ability, protected and countenaced by them, to go from city to city, and from village to village, teaching in every place the plain acknowledged truths and precepts of the Bible, immense good might be done. Those stated teachers, who have been grossly negligent or profligate, must either be disgraced or reformed; others might be stirred up to use greater diligence; and the instructions of stated faithful ministers would receive an additional sanction, which could not fail of producing a happy effect.—Thus it was in the days of Jehoshaphat; and thus it will be, wherever or whenever God shall please to stir up the hearts of kings, princes, and ministers, to teach the people in every part of their territories, according to the Word of God.—This is also the proper way of promoting public peace and prosperity; and it will prove a better protection of nations, than an increase of powerful armies or navies: yet it may very properly be connected with the ordinary methods of defence.—Persons in authority have 'much business,' to which they ought to attend: and they should consider that stable peace, and increasing numbers of well maintained and orderly subjects, are more honorable than the most successful wars: and whatever ability any man possesses, he should willingly devote himself to God, and serve Him with all that he has. SCOTT.

---

is the application of laws, fines, imprisonments, or corporal punishments. 3. A religious nation is ever a great nation; it is loved by its friends, it is dreaded by its enemies. 4. It is ever a peaceable and united nation: the blessings of religion, and a wholesome and paternal government, are so fully felt and prized, that all find it their interest to preserve and defend them. Harmony, peace, piety, and strength, are the stability of such times. May every nation know and value them!' Dr. A. Clarke, varied. ED.

Verse 11.

It is not certain, whether the Philistines and the Arabians brought these presents to Jehoshaphat, as submitting to his authority, or only as desiring to conciliate his friendship. SCOTT.

Verses 13—19.

It is probable that these troops served by rotation; (1 Chr. 27:1—15.) and some of them might be employed in the buildings and other business, which he had in the cities of Judah. (M. R.) ID.

Much business. (13) 'To settle religion, and purge out idolatry, as well as to provide for their safety, by fortifications, and whatsoever was necessary for the public tranquillity.' Patrick. ID

CHAP. XVIII.

Jehoshaphat joins affinity with Ahab, and agrees to go with him against Ramoth-gilead, 1—3. The false prophets assure them of success, 4, 5. At Jehoshaphat's request Micaiah is sent for, who foretells Ahab's death, and shows that his prophets were instigated by a lying spirit, 6—22. He is reviled and sent back to prison, 23—27. Ahab goes in disguise to the battle; where Jehoshaphat, in imminent danger, calls on God, and is preserved, 28—32. Ahab is slain by an arrow shot at a venture, 33, 34.

NOW Jehoshaphat had [a] riches and honor in abundance, and [b] joined affinity with Ahab.

2 And [*] after certain years [c] he went down to Ahab to Samaria. And Ahab killed sheep and oxen for him in abundance, and for the people that he had with him, and [e] persuaded him to go up with him to [f] Ramoth-gilead.

3 And Ahab king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat king of Judah, Wilt thou go with me to Ramoth-gilead? And he answered him, [g] I am as thou art, and my people as thy people; and we will be with thee in the war.

4 And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, [h] Inquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to-day.

5 Therefore the king of Israel gathered together of [i] prophets four hundred men, and said unto them, [j] Shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, [k] Go up; for God will deliver it into the king's hand.

6 But Jehoshaphat said, [l] Is there not here a prophet of the LORD † besides, that we might inquire of him?

7 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet [m] one man by whom we may inquire of the LORD: but [n] I hate him; for he never prophesieth [o] good unto [p] me, but always evil: the same is Micaiah the son of Imla. And Jehoshaphat said, [q] Let not the king say so.

8 And the king of Israel called for one of his ‡ officers, and said, § Fetch quickly Micaiah the son of Imla.

9 And the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat king of Judah, [r] sat either of them on his throne, [s] clothed in their robes, and they sat in a ‖ void place at the entering in of the gate of Samaria: and [t] all the prophets prophesied before them.

10 And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah had made him [u] horns of iron, and said, [x] Thus saith the LORD, With these thou shalt push Syria, until [¶] they be consumed.

11 And [y] all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper; for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

12 And the messenger that went to call Micaiah spake to him, saying, [z] Behold, the words of the prophets declare good to the king with one  assent: let thy word, therefore, I pray thee, be like one of theirs, and speak thou good.

13 And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, [a] even what my God saith, that will I speak.

14 ¶ And when he was come to the king, the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And he said, [b] Go ye up, and prosper, and they shall be delivered into your hand.

CHAP. XVIII. V. 1—3. The story of this ch. we had, just as it is here related, in the reign of Ahab, 1 K. 22: While his league with so good a man, as Jehoshaphat, redounds to the credit of Ahab more than any thing else recorded of him, it is a great blemish in the reign of Jehoshaphat. Jehoshaphat is here growing greater: his wealth and honor increased, (v. 1.) by piety and good management, but not wiser, else he would not have joined with Ahab, that degenerate Israelite, who had sold himself to work wickedness. I wonder what Jehoshaphat could promise himself by it. His religion forbade him to marry his son to a daughter of any heathen prince about him, and, having riches and honor in abundance, perhaps he thought it a disparagement to marry him to a subject. A king's daughter it must be, therefore Ahab's, little considering that Jezebel was her mother. Some think, by this policy he hoped to unite the kingdoms in his son, Ahab perhaps falsely flattering him that he would make him his heir.

This match drew Jehoshaphat, 1. Into an intimate familiarity with Ahab; he made him a visit at Samaria. And Ahab, proud of the honor, gave him a very splendid entertainment, v. 2. In this, Jehoshaphat did not walk so closely, as he ought, in the ways of his father David, for he hated the congregation of evil-doers, and would not sit with the wicked, Ps. 26: 5. nor desired to eat of their dainties, Ps. 141: 4. 2. Into a league with Ahab against the Syrians. Ahab persuaded him to join him in an expedition to recover Ramoth-gilead, a city in Gad, on the other side Jordan. Did not Ahab know that that, and all the other cities of Israel, belonged of right to Jehoshaphat, as heir of the house of David? With what face could he ask Jehoshaphat to assist him in recovering it for himself, whose title to the crown was usurped and precarious? Yet Jehoshaphat, an easy man, yields to go with him, v. 3. Some men's kindnesses are dangerous, as well as their society infectious. Ahab's feast was designed only to wheedle him into this expedition. The kisses of an enemy are deceitful.

V. 4—27. This is almost word for word the same we had, 1 K. 22: nor have we much to add, but may take occasion to think,

1. Of the great duty of acknowledging God in all our ways, and inquiring at his Word, v. 4. By particular believing prayer, by an unbiassed consulting of the Scripture and our own consciences, and by an observant regard to the hints of Providence, we may make such inquiries, and very much to our satisfaction.

2. Of the great danger of bad company even to good men; those that have most wisdom, grace, and resolution, cannot be sure they can converse familiarly with wicked people, and get no hurt by them. Jehoshaphat here, in complaisance to Ahab, sits in his robes, patiently hearing the false prophets speaking lies in the name of the Lord, v. 9. can scarcely find in his heart to give him a too mild and gentle reproof for hating a prophet of the Lord, v. 7. and dares not rebuke that false prophet who basely abused that faithful seer, nor oppose Ahab who committed him to prison. They who venture among the seats of the scornful, cannot come off without great guilt attaching to, at least, the omission of their duty, unless they have such measures of wisdom and courage as few can pretend to.

3. Of the unhappiness of those who are surrounded with flatterers, especially flattering prophets. Those do best for themselves, that give their friends leave, and particularly their ministers, to deal plainly and faithfully with them, and take it not only patiently, but kindly. That counsel is not always best for us, that is most pleasing.

4. Of the power of Satan, by divine permission, in the children of disobedience. One lying spirit can make 400 lying prophets, and use them to deceive Ahab, v. 21. The devil becomes a murderer by being a liar, and destroys men by deceiving them.

5. Of the justice of God in giving those up to strong delusions, to believe a lie, who will not receive the love of the truth, but rebel against it, v 21. Let the lying spirit prevail to entice those to their ruin, that will not be persuaded to their duty and happiness.

6. Of the hard case of faithful ministers, whose a 1:11—15.—See on 17:5,12.—Matt. 6: 33.

---

b 31. 19:2. 21:6. 22:2,3. 1 K. 16: 31—33. 21:25. 2 K. 8:18,26,27. 11: 1. 2 Cor. 6:14.
* Heb. at the end of years. 1 K. 17: 7. Neh. 13:6. margins.
c 19:2. 1 K. 22:2. d 1 K. 1:9. Is. 22:12,13. Luke 17: 27—29.
e 1 K. 22:4,20—22.
f Dent. 4:43. Josh. 20:8. 1 K. 4:13. 2 K. 9:1.
g See on 1 K. 22:4. 2 K. 3:7.—Ps. 139: 21. Eph. 5:11. 2 John 10,11.
h 34:26. 1 Sam. 23:2,4,9—12. 2 Sam. 2:1. 5:19,23. 1 K. 22:5,6. Ps. 27:4. Jer. 21:2. Ez. 20:3.
i 1 K. 18:19. 2 K. 3:13. 2 Tim. 4:3. j Jer. 38:14,&c. 42:2,3,20. k 14,20,21. Jer. 8:10,11. 23:17. Ez. 13:3—16,22. Mic. 2:11. 3:11. Rev. 19:20. l See on 1 K. 22:7—9. 2 K. 3:11—13.
† Heb. yet, or, more.
m 1 K. 18:4. 19:10.
n 1 K. 18:17. 20:42,43. 21:20. Prov. 9:8. Jer. 18:18. Am. 5:10. Mark 6: 18,19,27. John 7:7. 15:18,19,24. Gal. 4:16.
o Is. 30:10. Jer. 38:4. p 13. 2 K. 9:22. Ez. 3:17—19. Acts 20:26,27. q Prov. 25:12. Mic. 2:7.
‡ Or, eunuchs. 1 Sam. 8:15. 1 Chr. 28:1. margins. Is. 39:7. Dan. 1:3, 7,8.
§ Heb. Hasten. 25,26. 1 K. 22:9.
r See on 1 K. 22:10—12. Is. 14:9. Ez. 26:16. Dan. 7:9. Matt. 19:28. s 29. Matt. 6:29. 11:8.
‖ Or, floor.
t Jer. 27:14—16.
u Jer. 27:2. 28:10—14. Zech. 1:18—21. 2 Tim. 3:8.
x Jer. 23:17,21,25,31. 28:2,3. 29:21. Ez. 13:7. 22:28.
¶ Heb. thou consume them.
y 5:12,33,34. Prov. 24:24,25. Mic. 3 5. 2 Pet. 2:1—3. Jude 16. Rev. 16 13,14. 19:20.
z Job 22:13. Ps. 10:11. Hos. 7:3. Am. 7:13. Mic. 2:6,11. 1 Cor. 2:14—16.
 Heb. mouth. Josh. 9:2. marg.
a Num. 22:18—20,35. 23:12,26. 24:13. 1 K. 22:14. Jer. 23:28. 42:4. Ez. 2: 7. Mic. 2:6,7. Acts 20:27. 1 Cor. 11:23. 2 Cor. 2:17. Gal. 1:10. 1 Thes. 2:4. b 1 K. 18:27. 22:15. Ez. 11:9. Lam. 4:21. Am. 4:4,5. Matt. 26:45.

NOTES.

CHAP. XVIII. V. 1. Affinity, &c.] Perhaps pride and ambition had some influence in forming this fatal union: but probably Jehoshaphat was allured to it, by the hopes of cementing a durable peace between Judah and Israel, whom he wished to consider as brethren. (2 K. 8, 18.) Ahab perceived Jehoshaphat to be so strong, that he had no hopes of prevailing against him, and therefore courted his friendship. SCOTT.

15 And the king said to him, How many times [a] shall I adjure thee, that thou say nothing but the truth to me, in the name of the LORD?

16 Then [d] he said, I did see all Israel scattered upon the mountains, [e] as sheep that have no shepherd: and the LORD said, These have no [f] master; let them return therefore every man to his house in peace.

17 And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, [g] Did I not tell thee that he would not prophesy good unto me, * but evil?

18 Again he said, Therefore [h] hear the word of the LORD: [i] I saw the LORD sitting upon his throne, and [j] all the host of heaven standing on his right hand, and on his left.

19 And the LORD said, [k] Who shall entice Ahab king of Israel, that he may [l] go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one spake, saying after this manner, and another saying after that manner.

20 Then [m] there came out a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will entice him. And the LORD said unto him, Wherewith?

21 And he said, I will go out, and be [n] a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the LORD said, [o] Thou shalt entice him, and thou shalt also prevail: go out, and do even so.

22 Now therefore, behold, [p] the LORD hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of these thy prophets, [q] and the LORD hath spoken evil against thee.

23 Then [r] Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah came near, and smote Micaiah upon the cheek, and said, [s] Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

24 And Micaiah said, [t] Behold, thou shalt see on that day, when thou shalt go † into an inner chamber to hide thyself.

25 Then the king of Israel said, Take ye Micaiah, [u] and carry him back to Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

26 And say, Thus saith the king, [x] Put [y] this fellow in the prison, and feed him with [z] bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, [a] until I return in peace.

27 And Micaiah said, [b] If thou certainly return in peace, then hath not the LORD spoken by me. And he said, [c] Hearken, all ye people.

28 ¶ So [d] the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, went up to Ramoth-gilead.

29 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, [e] I will disguise myself, and will go to the battle; but [f] put thou on thy robes. So [g] the king of Israel disguised himself, and they went to the battle.

30 Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of the chariots that were with him, saying, [h] Fight ye not with [i] small or great, save only with the king of Israel.

31 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, It is the king of Israel: therefore they compassed about him to fight: but [k] Jehoshaphat cried out, and [l] the LORD helped him; and [m] God moved them to depart from him.

32 For it came to pass, that, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, they turned back again ‡ from pursuing him.

33 And [n] a certain man drew a bow § at a venture, and smote the king of Israel ‖ between the joints of the harness: therefore he said to his chariot-man, Turn thine hand, that thou mayest carry me out of the host; for I am ¶ wounded.

34 And the battle increased that day: howbeit the king of Israel stayed himself up in his chariot against the Syrians until the even; and about the time of the sun going down [o] he died ot it has often been to be hated, persecuted, and ill-treated, for being true to their God, and just and kind to the souls of men. But, as Micaiah, all may appeal to the issue, v. 27. The day will declare who is in the right, and who in the wrong, when Christ will appear, to the unspeakable consolation of his persecuted people, and the everlasting confusion of their persecutors, who will be a 1 Sam. 14:24. 1 K. 22:16. Matt. 26:63. Mark 5:7. Acts 19:13.

---

d Matt. 26:64.
e 33,34. 1 K. 22:17,34—36. Jer. 23:1, 2. Ez. 34:5,6,8. Zech. 10:2. 13:7. Matt. 9:36. Mark 6:34.
f 2 Sam. 2:7. 5:2. 2 K. 10:3.
g See on 7. 1 K. 22:18.—Prov. 29:1. Jer. 43:2,3.
* Or, but for evil.
h Is. 1:10. 28:14. 39:5. Jer. 2:4. 19:3. 34:4. Am. 7:16.
i 1 K. 22:19—23. Is. 6:1—5. Dan. 7:9,10. Acts 7:55,56. j Gen. 32:2. Ps. 103:20,21. Zech. 1:10. k See on 1 K. 22:20.—Job 12:16. Is. 6:9,10. 54:16. Ez. 14:9. 2 Thes. 2:11, 12. Jam. 1:13,14. l 25:8,19. Prov. 11:5.
m Job 1:6. 2:1. 2 Cor. 11:3,13—15. n 22. Gen. 3:4,5.—See on 1 K. 22:21, 22.—John 8:44. 1 John 4:6. Rev. 12:9. 16:14. 20:8.
o See on 19.—Judg. 9:23. Job 1:12. 2:6. Ps. 109:17. p Ex. 4:21. Ez. 14:3—5,9. Matt. 24:24,25. 2 Cor. 11:11—13. 2 Thes. 2:9—11. 1 Tim. 4:1,2. q See on 7,17.—25:18. Is. 3:11. Matt. 26:24,25. Mark 14:20,21.
r See on 10. 1 K. 22:23—25.—Is. 50:5, 6. Jer. 20:2. Lam. 3:30. Mic. 5:1. Matt. 26:67. John 18:22,23. Acts 23:2,3. s Jer. 29:26,27. Matt. 26:67,68. John 9:40,41.
t Is. 26:11. Jer. 28:16,17. 29:21,22,32.
† Or, from chamber to chamber. Heb. into a chamber in a chamber. 1 K. 20:30. Is. 26:20. u 8. Jer. 37:15—21. 38:6,7. Acts 24:25—27. x See on 15. 16:10.—1 K. 22:26—28 Jer. 20:2,3. Matt. 5:12. Luke 3:19, 20. Acts 5:18. 2 Cor. 11:23. Rev. 11:10.
y 1 Sam. 25:21. Matt. 12:24. Luke 23:2. Acts 22:22.
z Ps. 80:5. 102:9. Is. 30:20.
a Deut. 29:19. Ps. 10:5. Prov. 14:16 1 Thes. 5:2,3. b Num. 16:29. Acts 13:10,11. c Matt. 13:9. 15:10. Mark 7:14. Luke 20:45,46.
d See on 1 K. 22:29—33.
e 1 Sam. 28:8. 1 K. 14:2 6. 20:38. Job 24:15. Jer. 23:24.
f Ps. 12:2. Prov. 26:25.
g 35:22.
h 1 K. 20:33,34,42.
i See on 15:13. Gen. 19:11. Deut. 1:17.
k 13:14. 14:11. Ex. 14:10. Ps. 116:1, 2. 2 Cor. 1:9,10.
l 26:7. Ps. 46:1,11. 94:17. 118:13.
m Ezra 1:1. 7:27. Neh. 1:11. Prov. 16:7. 21:1.
‡ Heb. from after him.
n See on 1 K. 22:34.
§ Heb. in his simplicity. 2 Sam. 15:11.
‖ Heb. between the joints and between the breast-plate. 1 K. 22:34,35.
¶ Heb. made sick. 35:23.
o See on 16,19,27.—Num. 32:23. Prov. 13:21. 28:17.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Abundant riches and honor do indeed give large opportunities of doing good; but they are attended with such strong temptations, as very few who possess them are enabled to withstand. It is therefore a certain proof, that men are not well acquainted with the artifices of Satan, and the deceitfulness of their own hearts, and that they have much self-confidence, when they covet riches in order to do good; for they are far more likely to get harm by them. Among other evils, they often betray pious persons into improper marriages, for themselves or their children. It appears beneath them to join affinity with inferior families; but 'not many mighty or noble are called:' and so they are seduced to prefer titles and estates, to faith and holiness; and the effects are generally lamentable to themselves, to posterity, and to the cause of godliness.—We should follow peace with all men: but we ought to have no intimacies with the workers of iniquity; for their caresses, flatteries, and feasts, are more dangerous than their most imbittered rage; and in fact they are frequently the result of politic enmity, and at best proceed from mercenary self-love. Indeed, the most enormous wickedness is often veiled under a show of piety.—A very great majority of professed ministers, in many ages and places, have been teachers of lies: who, while they acted their parts with the name of God in their mouths, have secretly been prompted by Satan, 'deceiving and being deceived.' We should therefore not only be reminded to 'inquire of the LORD,' but careful likewise by whom we inquire of Him; and also that we inquire his will, before we commit ourselves, by engagements that may be contrary to it.—They who flatter the humors of the rich and great will in general be most favored; and those who offend the pride, or disturb the consciences, of such as are strangers to the power of godliness, will be hated, and may lay their account with hard usage: nay, such pious persons as associate with ungodly people, must often witness, and seem to approve of, very abominable things. The event, however, will show faithful teachers in their proper light. In the mean time, let them go on with confidence in God, simply declaring his whole message, and patiently bearing the cross; for 'great will be their reward in heaven.'—Satan is allowed to deceive those, who reject the testimony of God's prophets. SCOTT

Verses 28, 29.

It has been thought, that Ahab wished Jehoshaphat to fall by the Syrians, in expectation that the affairs of Judah would come under his management, as the father-in-law of Jehoram. SCOTT.

Verse 31.

God moved, &c.] In the extremity of danger, Jehoshaphat made the Lord his Refuge, who remembered his servant, though out of the path of duty; and, in answer to his prayer, inclined his pursuers to depart from him, by a secret but powerful influence on their minds. SCOTT.

V. 24. An inner chamber.] M. chamber in a chamber, as is described at 2 K. 9:2. Some make it the harem, or women's apartment ED.

CHAP. XIX.

Jehoshaphat, on his return, is reproved by Jehu the prophet, for joining alliance with Ahab; but commended in other respects, 1—3. He visits and reforms his kingdom, 4; and gives a charge to the judges, priests, and Levites, in the cities of Judah, and at Jerusalem, 5—11.

AND Jehoshaphat the king of Judah returned to his house [a] in peace to Jerusalem.

2 And [b] Jehu the son of [c] Hanani [d] the seer went out to meet him, and said to king Jehoshaphat, [e] Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that [f] hate the LORD? therefore [g] is wrath upon thee from before the LORD.

3 Nevertheless, there are [a] good things found in thee, in that thou hast taken away the groves out of the land, and hast [i] prepared thine heart to seek God.

4 And Jehoshaphat dwelt at Jerusalem: and he * went out again through the people from [k] Beer-sheba to [l] mount Ephraim, and [m] brought them back unto the LORD God of their fathers.

5 ¶ And [n] he set judges in the land, throughout all the fenced cities of Judah, city by city;

6 And said to the judges, [o] Take heed what ye do: for [p] ye judge not for man, but for the LORD, who is with you in the † judgment.

7 Wherefore now, [q] let the fear of the LORD be upon you; take heed and do it: for there is [r] no iniquity with the LORD our God, nor [s] respect of persons, nor [t] taking of gifts.

8 Moreover in Jerusalem did Jehoshaphat set [u] of the Levites, and of the priests, and of the chief of the fathers of Israel, for [x] the judgment of the LORD, and for controversies, when they returned to Jerusalem.

9 And he charged them, saying, Thus shall ye do [y] in the fear of the LORD, faithfully, and with a perfect heart.

10 And what cause soever shall come to you of your brethren that dwell in their cities, [z] between blood and blood, between law and commandment, statutes and judgments, ye shall even [a] warn them that they trespass not against the LORD, and so [b] wrath come upon you, and made to see in that day, v. 24. what they will not now believe.

V. 28—34. We have here, 1. Good Jehoshaphat exposing himself in his robes, thereby endangered, and yet delivered. The enemy had soon an eye on the robes, and vigorously attacked the unwary prince, who now, too late, wished himself in the habit of the poorest soldier, rather. He cried out, either to his friends, to relieve him; (but Ahab took no care of that;) or to his enemies, to rectify their mistake, and let them know he was not the king of Israel; or to God, for succor and deliverance; to whom else should he cry? And he found it was not in vain, the Lord helped him out of his distress, by moving the captains to depart from him, v. 31. God has all men's hearts in his hand, and turns them as He pleases, contrary to their own first intentions, to serve his purposes. Many are moved unaccountably both to themselves and others, but an invisible power moves them. 2. Wicked Ahab disguising himself, arming himself, thereby, he thought, securing himself, and yet slain, v. 33. No art, no arms, can save those whom God has appointed to ruin. What can hurt those whom God will protect?

CHAP. XIX. V. 1—4. I. Here is, God's great favor to Jehoshaphat, v. 1. Whenever we return in peace to our houses, we ought to acknowledge God's providence in preserving our going out and our coming in, and especially if we have been kept through more than ordinary dangers. He had been out on an expedition he could not well account for to God and his conscience, yet he returned in peace; God is not extreme to mark what we do amiss, nor does He withdraw his protection every time we forfeit it. It is a great mercy also to be made sensible of our faults, (v. 2.) and to be told, in time, wherein we have erred, that we may repent, and amend the error, before it be too late. It is the black character of wicked people, that they are haters of God, Rom. 1: 30. Idolaters are so reputed in the second commandment: therefore it is not for those that love God, to delight in them, or contract intimacy with them. Ps. 139: 21, 22. Those whom the grace of God has dignified, ought not to debase themselves.

God was displeased with him for doing this; 'There is wrath upon thee, and thou must, by repentance, make thy peace, or it will be worse for thee.' He did so, and God's anger was turned away. Yet his trouble, as recorded in the next ch. was a rebuke to him for meddling with strife that belonged not to him, and the great mischief his seed after him fell into by the house of Ahab, was the just punishment of his affinity with that house. Yet Jehu notices what was praiseworthy, as is proper for us when we give a reproof, v. 3.

II. Jehoshaphat's return of duty to God for this favor. He took the reproof well, and was not wroth with the seer as his father was, but submitted. Let the righteous smite me, it shall be a kindness. See the effect of the reproof. 1. He dwelt at Jerusalem, v. 4. minded his own business at home, and would not expose himself by making any more such visits to Ahab, Prov. 9: 8, 9. 2. To atone (as I may say) for his visit to Ahab, he made a pious, profitable visitation of his own kingdom; he went out through the people in his own person from Beer-sheba in the S. to mt. Ephraim in the N. and brought them back to the Lord God of their fathers, i. e. did all he could towards it. If we truly repent of our sin, we shall do our utmost to repair the damage we have any way done by it to religion, or the souls of others. We are particularly concerned to recover those that have fallen into sin, or been hardened in it by our example.

V. 5—11. Jehoshaphat having done what he could, (17: 7—9, &c.) to make his people good, is here providing, if possible, to keep them so by the influence of a settled magistracy. Probably there were judges up and down the country before, but either they neglected their business, or the people slighted them, so that the end of the institution was not answered; therefore it was necessary it should be new modelled, new men employed, and a new charge given them, which is here done.

I. He erected inferior courts in the several cities of the kingdom, v. 5. whose judges were to keep the people in the worship of God, punish violations of the law, and decide controversies. Here is his charge, v. 6. In which we have,

1. The means he prescribes to them to keep them to their duty; which are two: (1.) Great caution and circumspection, v. 6, 7. Judges, of all men, need be cautious, so much depends on their taking a thing right. (2.) Great piety and religion: 'Let the fear of God be upon you, that will restrain you from doing wrong, Neh. 5: 15. Gen. 42: 18. and encourage you to be active in doing the duty of your place.' Let destruction from God be a terror to them, as Job speaks, then they will be a terror to none but evil doers.

---

a 18:31,32.
b 20:34. 1 K. 16:1,7,12.
c 16:7.
d See on 1 Sam. 9:9.
e 18:3,28. 1 K. 21:25. Ps. 15:4. 139: 21,22. Prov. 1:10—19. Rom. 1:32. Eph. 5:11. 2 John 10,11.
f 19:7. Ex. 20:5. Deut. 5:9. 7:10. 32:41. 33:11. Ps. 21:8. 68:1. 81: 15. John 15:18,23. Rom. 1:30. 8:7. Jam. 4:4.
g 32:25. Ps. 90:7,8. Rom. 1:18. 1 Cor. 11:31,32.
h 17:3—6. 1 K. 14:13. Rom. 7:18. i See on 12:14.—30:19. Ezra 7:10. Ps. 57:7.

* Heb. returned and went out. 1 Sam. 7:15—17. k Gen. 21:33. Judg. 20:1.
l Josh. 17:15. Judg. 19:1. m See on 15:8—13.—29:10,11. 1 Sam. 7:3,4. Mal. 4:6. Luke 1:17. n 8. Deut. 16:18—20. Rom. 13:1—5. 1 Pet. 2:13,14.
o Josh. 22:5. 1 Chr. 28:10. Luke 12: 15. 21:8. Acts 5:35. 22:26. p Deut. 1:17. Ps. 82:1—6. Ec. 5:8.
† Heb. matter of judgment.
q Gen. 42:18. Ex. 18:21,22,25,26. Neh. 5:15. Is. 1:23—26. r Gen. 18:25. Deut. 32:4. Rom. 9:14. s Deut. 10:17,18. Job 34:19. Matt. 22:16. Acts 10:34. Rom. 2:11. Gal. 2:6. Eph. 6:9. Col. 3:25. 1 Pet. 1:17.
t Ex. 23:8. Deut. 16:19. Is. 1:23. 33: 15. Mic. 7:3. u 17:8. Deut. 17:8—13. 1 Chr. 23:4. 26:29. x Ex. 18:19—26. Deut. 21:5. 25:1. y See on 7.—Deut. 1:16,17. 2 Sam. 23: 3. Is. 11:3—5. 32:1.
z Deut. 17:8.
a Ez. 3:18—21. 33:6. Acts 20:31. 1 Thes. 5:14. b Num. 16:46. Josh. 22:18—20.

NOTES.

CHAP. XIX. V. 1. 'I suppose, as soon as the battle was over, he immediately went to Jerusalem, to return thanks to God for his wonderful preservation.' Patrick. SCOTT.

Verse 2.

Jehu was the son of Hanani, who was cast into prison by Asa for reproving him; (16:7—10.) yet he was not afraid of bringing a similar message to Jehoshaphat. Ahab's expedition was undertaken in defiance of the word of God, and attended with such circumstances, as rendered Jehoshaphat inexcusable in helping him. For this misconduct 'wrath was upon him from before the LORD:' not the wrath of an Enemy, or avenging Judge, but that of an offended Father; and the fatal effects of this affinity on his family and kingdom, were as awful evidences of this wrath, as could be experienced by one that did not finally perish. ID.

Verses 5—11.

(M. R. o—t. y.) 'It is most agreeable to the scripture to understand by the things of God, (v. 11) those which were defined by the law of God, and were to be judged of by that law: and by 'the king's matters,' such as, not being defined by the divine law, were left to the judgment of the king; of which kind were all deliberations about what was expedient, or not expedient.' . . . Grotius, quoted by Bp. Patrick. —Some interpret, blood and blood, of relationship and titles to estates; but it seems rather to mean causes concerning murder, maiming, or accidentally killing any one.—The judges were required to warn the people not to transgress; lest, beside other reasons, their brethren should be involved in the consequences of their crimes. SCOTT.

The LORD, who is with you in judgment. (6) Which the Talmud thus translates. 'Ye do not judge before the sons of men, but before the WORD of the LORD, and his glorious presence resides among you in the act of judgment; which is an illustrious testimony that the ancient Jews believed more persons than one in the Deity.' Patrick. ID.

(8.) Returned.] 'Patrick, Hallet, Ken. Boothr. and others read, upon your brethren: this do, and ye shall not trespass.

11 And, behold, [c] Amariah the chief priest is over you in [d] all matters of the LORD; and Zebadiah the son of Ishmael, the ruler of the house of Judah, for all the king's matters: also the Levites shall be officers before you. * Deal [e] courageously, and [f] the LORD shall be with [g] the good.

CHAP. XX.

Jehoshaphat, alarmed by an invasion of the Moabites, Ammonites, and others, proclaims a fast, 1—4. His prayer, 5—13. Jahaziel, the prophet, assures him of a signal deliverance, 14—17. Jehoshaphat and his people receive the promise with adoring thankfulness, 18, 19. He exhorts them to believe, and appoints singers to praise the Lord, 20, 21. The invaders destroy one another, and the people of Judah gather immense spoils, 22—25. They bless God at Berachah, return in triumph, and enjoy peace, 26—30. Jehoshaphat's good reign and acts, 31—34. He joins with Ahaziah in sending ships to Tharshish, which are wrecked, according to the prediction of Eliezer, 35—37.

IT came to pass [a] after this also, that [b] the children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with them other beside the Ammonites, [c] came against Jehoshaphat to battle.

c 1 Chr. 6:11.
d 8. 1 Chr. 26:30. Mal. 2:7.
* Heb. take courage and do.
e Josh. 1:6,9. 1 Chr. 22:11,16,19. 1 Cor. 16:13. 2 Tim. 2:1. f 6. 15:2. Ps. 18:25,26. John 14:23, 24. Rom. 2:4—13. Phil. 4:8,9.
g Ps. 37:23. 112:5. Prov. 2:20. Ec. 2:26. Luke 23:50. Acts 11:24.
a 19:5,11. 32:1.
b Ps. 83:5—8. Is. 7:1. 8:9,10. 16:6.
c 19:2. Jer. 10:24. Rev. 3:19.

2. The motives he would have them consider, to engage them to faithfulness: these are three, all taken from God. (1.) From Him they had their commission; his ministers they were. (2.) His eye was upon them: 'He is with you, to notice what you do, and call you to an account if you do amiss.' (3.) He is the great Example of justice to all magistrates: There is no iniquity with Him, no bribery, nor respect to persons. Magistrates are called gods, therefore they must endeavor to resemble God.

II. He erected a supreme court at Jerusalem, which was advised with, and appealed to, in all the difficult causes that occurred in the inferior courts, and gave judgment on demurrers, special verdicts, and writs of error. In Jerusalem were set these thrones of judgment, there they would be under the inspection of the king himself. Observe,

1. The causes cognizable in this court, were of two kinds, as with us in England. (1.) Pleas of the crown, called here the judgment of the Lord, because the law of God was the law of the realm. All criminals were charged with the breach of some part of his law, and were said to offend against his peace, his crown and dignity. (2.) Common pleas, between party and party, called here controversies, v. 8. and causes of their brethren, v. 10. differences between blood and blood. This refers to Deut. 17: 8. between the blood of the slain and that of the slayer. Since the revolt, all the cities of refuge, except Hebron, belonged to the kingdom of Israel; therefore, we may suppose, the courts of the temple, or the horns of the altar, were chiefly used as sanctuaries in that case, and hence the trial of homicides was reserved for the court at Jerusalem. If the inferior judges did not agree about the sense of any law or commandment, any statute or judgment, this court must determine the controversy.

2. The judges of this court were some of the Levites and priests most learned in the law, eminent for wisdom, and of approved integrity, and some of the chief of the fathers of Israel, persons of age and experience, that had been men of business, who would be the most competent judges of matters of fact, as the priests and Levites were of the sense of the law.

3. The two chiefs, or presidents, of this court. Amariah, the high priest, was to preside in ecclesiastical causes, to direct the court, and be the mouth of it, or perhaps to be last consulted in cases which the judges themselves doubted of. Zebadiah, the prime minister of state, was to preside in all civil causes, v. 11. Blessed be God both for magistrates and ministers; scribes and statesmen; men of books, and men of business.

4. The inferior officers of the court; some of the Levites (such as had not abilities to qualify them for judges) shall be officers before you, v. 11. They were to bring causes into the court, and to see the sentence of the judges executed. And these hands and feet were as necessary in their places, as the eyes and heads, (the judges,) in theirs.

5. The charge the king gave them. (1.) They must see to it that they acted from a good principle, the fear of the Lord, setting Him always before them, then they would act faithfully, conscientiously, and with a perfect, upright heart, v. 9. (2.) They must make it their great and constant care to prevent sin, to warn the people that they trespass not against the Lord, inspire them with a dread of sin, not only as [destructive to their happiness,]—hurtful to themselves and the public peace, but as offensive to God, and that which would bring wrath on the people if they committed it, and on the magistrates if they did not punish it. This do, and ye shall not trespass; this implies, that those who have power in their hands, contract the guilt of sin themselves, if they do not use their power to prevent and restrain sin in others. (3.) They must act with resolution. 'Deal courageously, and fear not the face of man in the discharge of your duty, and whoever is against you, God will protect you, The Lord shall be with the good.'

CHAP. XX. V. 1—13. I. A formidable invasion of Jehoshaphat's kingdom by the Moabites and Ammonites, and their auxiliaries, v. 1. Jehoshaphat was surprised with the intelligence of it, when the enemy had already entered his country, v. 2. What pretence they had to it, does not appear;—sea here means the Dead Sea, where Sodom stood. It should seem, they marched through the tribes beyond Jordan, who gave them passage through their borders; so ungrateful were they to Jehoshaphat, who had lately helped them recover Ramoth-gilead. Several nations joined this confederacy, but especially the children of Lot, whom the rest helped, Ps. 83: 6—8. The neighboring nations had feared Jehoshaphat, ch. 17: 10. but perhaps his affinity with Ahab had lessened him in their esteem, and they had some intimation that his God was displeased with him for it, which they fancied would give them an opportunity to make a prey of his kingdom.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Nothing but perils, wrath, and painful effects, can be expected from intimacies with ungodly men; and that in proportion to the degree of their avowed hatred to the character, worship, and service of God. We ought therefore to shun all needless familiarity with them, and to show them, and all the world, our disapprobation of their principles and conduct; whatever may be their rank, abilities, or accomplishments; or however political interests or relative ties may plead for a coalition. We should indeed bear them good will, and be ready to relieve their distress, and to help them in their most important interests: but we ought to be cautious of involving ourselves with their secular undertakings, and still more of concurring with them in any of their sinful projects. (Notes, 2 Cor. 6: 14—18. Eph. 5: 8—14. 2 John 7—11. P. O.)—The unmerited mercies of God are often united with severe rebukes and corrections; and these again are moderated by tokens of his approbation, where our conduct has been good in his sight: for He would not have those discouraged, who 'prepare their hearts to seek Him;' and when there are really good things found in us, He will mercifully forgive the evil which we allow not or repent of, and accept the good, through the Savior's advocacy. In these things, we should be followers of God: we must not 'hate our offending brother, nor suffer sin upon him; but in any wise rebuke him;' (Note, Lev. 19: 17.) but we should take more pleasure in commending what is evidently good; and bear much from those in whom 'good things are found.'—While ministers ought not to fear or respect the persons of men, or be intimidated by the sufferings of others in the same cause, but must deliver their whole message plainly; they should also endeavor to do it with forbearance, tenderness, and candor, which will render reproofs less offensive and more effectual.—The tendency of human nature to evil renders unremitting vigor necessary in all those, who would suppress abuses and effect reformation: for, on every relaxation, evils will revive and gather strength rapidly, and all will need to be done over again.—The ministry and the magistracy, when restricted to their distinct methods, may concur in promoting godliness, as well as preserving public peace: and all legal decisions should be expedited in a regular and easy method, and with little expense; that the poor may be placed, as nearly as possible, at an equal advantage with the rich, in obtaining their dues.—Magistrates are the vicegerents of the Governor and Judge of the world, and are therefore to be obeyed in all things lawful for the Lord's sake. (Notes, Rom. 13: 1—7.) But there lies an appeal from their decisions to a superior tribunal; and they should be constantly and solemnly reminded, that they will be exposed to condemnation, if they do not act uprightly in the fear of God, without respect of persons, or taking of gifts. And, besides executing the laws of man impartially, it is their duty also to warn men not to trespass against the Lord, lest wrath come on them and their brethren, (Note, 17: 7—9.) They should therefore take heed and deal courageously, not fearing the displeasure of man, but confiding in the protection of God, who is with them in the judgment; that He may indeed be with them for their good. May He provide increasing numbers of good ministers and good magistrates, to suppress vice, and to promote the cause of truth and holiness! SCOTT.

"and for controverted causes of the inhabitants of Jerusalem." They substitute yvshby for vyshbv. The Vulg. and Sept. justify this rendering; the latter has, "and to judge the inhabitants of Jerusalem." So Boothr. and Dr. A. Clarke.' COND. COMM.

NOTES.

CHAP. XX. V. 1, 2. (14:1—15. 31:20, 21. 32:1—8. 1 Sam. 7:1—7.) Jehoshaphat had so long enjoyed peace, that he seems to have neglected his military arrangements, and to have relaxed his vigilance.

2 Then there came some that told Jehoshaphat, saying, There cometh a great multitude against thee from [d] beyond the sea on this side Syria; and, behold, they be in [e] Hazazontamar, which is [f] Engedi.

3 And Jehoshaphat [g] feared, and set * himself to [h] seek the LORD, and [i] proclaimed a fast throughout all Judah.

4 And Judah gathered themselves together, to [j] ask help of the LORD: even out of all [k] the cities of Judah they came to seek the LORD.

5 And [l] Jehoshaphat stood in the congregation of Judah and Jerusalem, in the house of the LORD, before the new court,

6 And said, [m] O LORD God of our fathers, art not thou [n] God in heaven? and [o] rulest not thou over all the kingdoms of the heathen? and [p] in thine hand is there not power and might, so that [q] none is able to withstand thee?

7 Art not thou [r] our God, † who didst [s] drive out the inhabitants of this land before thy people Israel, and [t] gavest it to the seed of Abraham [u] thy friend for ever?

8 And they dwelt therein, and have [v] built thee a sanctuary therein for thy name, saying,

9 [x] If, when evil cometh upon us, as the sword, judgment, or pestilence, or famine, we stand before this house, and in thy presence, (for [y] thy name is in this house,) and cry unto thee in our affliction, then thou wilt hear and help.

10 And now, behold, the children of Ammon, and Moab, and mount Seir, [z] whom thou wouldest not let Israel invade, when they came out of the land of Egypt, but they turned from them, and destroyed them not;

11 Behold, I say [a] how they reward us, to come [b] to cast us out of thy possession, which thou hast given us to inherit.

12 O our God, [c] wilt thou not judge them? for [d] we have no might against this great company that cometh against us; [e] neither know we what to do: but [f] our eyes are upon thee.

13 And [g] all Judah stood before the LORD, with their little ones, their wives, and their children.

[Practical Observations.]

II. Jehoshaphat's preparation against the invaders. No mention is made of his mustering his forces, yet most probably he did, for God must be trusted in the use of means. But his great care was, to obtain the favor of God, which perhaps he was the more solicitous about, because he had been lately told there was wrath upon him from before the Lord, ch. 19: 2. 1. He feared; consciousness of guilt made him fear: those that have least sin, are most sensible of it; the surprise added to the fright. Holy fear is a spur to prayer and preparation, Heb. 11: 7. 2. He set himself to seek the Lord, and, in the first place, to make Him his friend. They that would seek the Lord so as to find Him, must do it with fixedness of thought, sincerity of intention, and the utmost vigor and resolution to continue seeking Him. 3. He appointed a day of humiliation and prayer, that they might join together in confessing their sins, and asking help of the Lord. Fasting from bodily refreshments on such extraordinary occasions, is a token of self-judging for the sins we have committed, and of self-denial for the future. Magistrates are to call their people to the duty of fasting and d Gen. 14:3. Num. 34:12. Josh. 3:16

e Gen. 14:7.
f Josh. 15:62. 1 Sam. 23:29. Cant. 1:14.
g Gen. 32:7. 11,24—28. Ps. 56:3,4. Is 37:3—6. Jon. 1:16. Matt. 10:28.
* Heb. his face.
h See on 11:16. 19:3.
i Judg. 20:26. 1 Sam. 7:6. Ezra 8 21—23. Esth. 4:16. Jer. 36:9. Joe 1:14. 2:12—18. Jon. 3:5—9. j Ps. 34:5,6. 50:15. 60:16—12.
k 19:5. Ps. 69:35.
l See on 6:12,13.—34:31. 2 K. 19:15—19.
m See on Ex. 3:6,15,16. 1 Chr. 29:18. n Deut. 4:39. Josh. 2:11. 1 K. 8:23 Is. 57:15,16. 66:1. Matt. 6:9.
o 1 Chr. 29:11,12. Ps. 47:2,8. Jer. 27 5—8. Dan. 4:17,25,32—35. p 1 Chr. 29:11,12. Ps. 62:11. Matt 6:13. q Acts 11:17.
r 14:11. Gen. 17:7. Ex. 6:7. 19:5—7. 20:2. 1 Chr. 17:21—24.
† Heb. thou.
s See on Ex. 33:2.—Ps. 44:2. t Gen. 12:7. 13:15. Josh. 24:3,13. Neh. 9:8. u Is. 41:8. John 11:11. 15:15. Jam. 2:23. v See on 2:4. 6:10.
x See on 6:28—30. 1 K. 8:33,37.
y See on 6:20. Ex. 20:24. 23:21. z Num. 20:17—21. Deut. 2:4,5,9,19 Judg. 11:15—18. a Gen. 44:4. Ps. 7:4. 35:12. Prov. 17:13. Jer. 18:20. b Judg. 11:23,24. Ps. 83:3—12. c Deut. 32:36. Judg. 11:27. Ps. 7:6,8. 9:19. 43:1. Is. 2:4. 72:4. Joel 3: 12. Rev. 19:11. d See on 14:11.—1 Sam. 14:6. 2 Cor. 1:8,9.
e 2 K. 6:15.
f Ps. 25:15. 121:1,2. 123:1,2. 141:3. Jon. 2:4.
g Deut. 29:10,11. Ezra 10:1. Jon. 3:5. Acts 21:5.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—13. Uninterrupted peace must not be expected in this world, even when we are most devotedly serving God.—In calamities or dangers, public or personal, our first business should be to seek help from the Lord. Hence the advantage of days appointed for national fasting and prayer. What then shall we think of those, who call themselves Christians and patriots, yet not only neglect, but ridicule or revile, this scriptural method of seeking help in danger, from our Almighty Friend, after an example so honored by God Himself? or of those, who give occasion to such reproach and contempt, by their absurd and manifest hypocrisy in these observances?—In all ages of the church, fasting has been deemed expedient on particular occasions, personal and public; being expressive of a mind abstracted from earthly things; conscious of having forfeited every enjoyment by sin; and attentive only to obtain the great objects which the soul is then pursuing.—When most indisposed to avenge themselves, and least able to ward off injuries, the dependence of believers on God will become more unreserved, and their prayers more fervent: and He will no more forsake those, who 'know not what to do,' but look up to Him alone for help; than a fond mother will desert her helpless infant, that clings to her bosom, and knows and seeks no other refuge. Indeed, this is the very frame of mind, to which He designs to form his people.—The covenant is made with believers 'for the good of their children after them;' and they should bring them, and the rest of their families, as soon as possible, to the ordinances of God, that they may be trained up in his house, and become truly a part of his family. SCOTT.

(17:10—19.) Perhaps his enemies observed this, and thought to take advantage of it.—This formidable armament were encamped in his dominions, at Engedi, (M. R. e, f.) before he was informed of their approach, or apprised of their intentions. This would prevent his mustering all his forces. SCOTT.

Verses 3, 4.

Probably, this invasion took place not long after Jehoshaphat's return from Ramoth-gilead; and he was afraid, that God was about to chastise his sin by permitting the devastation of his kingdom. A fast.] 'High living tends to inflame the propensities, while moderate and temperate living is more favorable to the calm action of the higher sentiments, and higher intellect: one, therefore, should regulate his diet, not only from immediate regard to health, but in reference to mental and moral condition.' S. Jones. ED. We have in the preceding books of scripture, read of private fasting with prayer; of 'afflicting the soul' at the day of atonement; of the people's fasting at the instance of Samuel the prophet; and of their fasting by common consent: (Notes, Lev. 16:29—31. Deut.) 9:18, 25. Judg. 20:26—28. 1 Sam. 7:5, 6. 2 Sam. 12: 16.) but the fast here mentioned was observed at the proclamation of the chief magistrate, who acted by the authority of his station, and not by the Spirit of prophecy: and the event of this measure, both warrants civil governors in times of distress to act in this manner, and encourages them to expect the most important benefits from it. Every one was called on to humble himself before God for his own sins, and the sins of the public, as the aggregate of the whole. Thus they united in expressing their sorrow and self-displacency for their sins; and they publicly honored God as the righteous Author of their calamity, and as their only Hope and Refuge in distress. Doubtless serious impressions would be made on many, who before had been inattentive; the pious affections of others would be revived, and rendered more fixed and lively; and in every way it would tend to the honor of God, and the good of his people. SCOTT

Verse 5.

New court.] It is not known what is meant: but, probably, Jehoshaphat had rebuilt some of the courts, or had added one to them SCOTT. 'There were but 2 courts (2 K. 21:5. 23:12.) and Jehoshaphat stood in one, which must be that of the people's, before the other, which must be that of the priest's, called the new court, because it had been lately renewed when the altar was renewed, (15:8.)' COND. COMM.

'What an instructive sight! The king offering in the congregation, without form or premeditation, one of the most sensible, pious, correct (and, as to its composition, one of the most elegant) prayers, ever offered under the O. T. dispensation.' DR. A. CLARKE.

Verses 6—9.

A careful examination of the M. R. will be found the best comment on this prayer. Thy friend. (7) A lover of Thee. (M. R.—John 15:12 —16. Jam. 2:22—29.) SCOTT.

Verses 10, 11.

The mention of mt. Seir, the country of Edom, shows what is meant in v. 1. by 'other beside the Ammonites.' ID.

Verse 12.

The language of this v. is peculiarly expressive of humble, genuine faith. ID.

Verse 13.

With their little ones.] M. R.—Neh. 8:1, 2. Joel 2:15—17.—Not only the women, and the children who were grown up, attended on this occasion, but the infants also: for it is probable the people intended their presence, as a silent plea with the Lord to have mercy on 14 ¶ [h] Then upon Jahaziel, the son of Zechariah, the son of Benaiah, the son of Jeiel, the son of Mattaniah, a Levite, of the sons of Asaph, [i] came the Spirit of the LORD in the midst of the congregation;

15 And he said, Hearken ye, all Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and thou king Jehoshaphat; Thus saith the LORD unto you, [k] Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for [l] the battle is not yours, but God's.

16 To-morrow go ye down against them: behold, they come up by the * cliff of Ziz; and ye shall find them at the end of the † brook, before the wilderness of Jeruel.

17 Ye shall [m] not need to fight in this battle: set yourselves, [n] stand ye still, and see the salvation of the LORD with you, O Judah and Jerusalem: fear not, nor be dismayed; to morrow go out against them: [o] for the LORD will be with you.

18 And Jehoshaphat [p] bowed his head with his face to the ground: and all Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, fell before the LORD, worshipping the LORD.

19 And [q] the Levites of the children of the Kohathites, and of the children of the [r] Korhites, stood up to praise the LORD God of Israel, with [s] a loud voice on high.

20 And they rose early in the morning, and went forth into the wilderness of [t] Tekoa: and, as they went forth, Jehoshaphat stood and said, [u] Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem; [x] Believe in the LORD your God, so shall ye be established; [y] believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper.

21 And when he had [z] consulted with the people, he [a] appointed singers unto the LORD, and ‡ that should praise [b] the beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army, and to say, [c] Praise the LORD; for his mercy endureth for ever.

22 And § when they began ‖ to sing and to praise, [d] the LORD set ambushments against the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, which were come against Judah; and they ¶ were smitten.

23 For the children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of [e] mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy them: and when they had made an end h Is. 58:9. 65:24. Dan. 9:20,21. Acts 10:4,31.

i 15:1. 24:20. Num. 11:25,26. 24:2. k 32:7. Deut. 1:29,30. 20:1,4. 31:6,8. Josh. 11:6. Neh. 4:14. Ps. 27:1,2. Is. 41:10—16. l 32:8. 1 Sam. 17:47.
* Heb. ascent.
† Or, valley.
m 22,23. Ex. 14:13,14,25.
n Ps. 46:10,11. Is. 30:7,15. Lam. 3:26.
o 15:2. 32:8. Num. 14:9. Ps. 46:7,11. Is. 8:9,10. 41:10. Am. 5:14. Matt. 1:23. 28:20. Rom. 8:31. 2 Tim. 4:22. p 7:3. Gen. 24:26. Ex. 4:31.
q 1 Chr. 15:16—22. 16:5,42. 23:5. 25:1—7.
r Ps. 44 :—49 : titles.
s 5:13. Ezra 3:12,13. Neh. 12:42,43. Ps. 81:1. 95:1,2. t 11:6. 2 Sam. 14:2. 1 Chr. 4:5. Jer. 6:1.
u See on 15.
x Is. 7:9. 28:3. John 11:40. 14:1. Rom. 8:31.
y Ex. 14:31. Luke 16:31. John 5:46, 47. 13:20. z 1 Chr. 13:1,2. Prov. 11:14. a 29:25—30. 30:21. Ezra 3:10,11. Neh. 12:27.
‡ Heb. praisers of.
b 1 Chr. 16:29. Ps. 29:2. 50:2. 90:17. 96:9.
c 5:13. 7:3,6. † Chr. 16:34,41. Ezra 3:11. Ps. 106:1. 107:1. 136:1, &c. Jer. 33:11.
§ Heb. in the time that, &c.
‖ Heb. in singing and praise.
d Judg. 7:22. 1 Sam. 14:16,20. 2 K. 6:17. Ps. 35:5,6. Is. 19:2. Ez. 38:21.
¶ Or, smote one another.
e Gen. 14:6. 36:8,9. Deut. 2:5. Josh. 24:4. Ez. 35:2,3.

1. The spirit of prophecy came on a Levite present, not in any place of eminency, but in the midst of the congregation, v. 14. The Spirit, like the wind, blows where, and on whom, He listeth. He was of the sons of Asaph, therefore one of the singers; that office God would honor: whether a prophet before this or no, is uncertain, most probably he was, which would make him the more regarded. There needed no sign; the thing itself, next day, would confirm his prophecy.

2. He encouraged them to trust in God, though the danger was very threatening, v. 15. 'Be not afraid; you have admitted fear enough to bring you to God, do not now admit that which will drive you from Him again. The battle is not yours, but God's, He does and will, as you have desired, interest Himself in the cause.'

3. He gives them intelligence of the motions of the enemy, and orders them to march toward them, with particular directions where they should find them. To-morrow, (the day after the fast,) go ye down against them, v. 16, 17. It is fit, He who commands the deliverance, should command the delivered, both as to time and place.

4. He assures them, they should be, not the glorious instruments, but the joyful spectators, of the total defeat of the enemy, v. 17. So Moses told Israel at the Red Sea, Ex. 14: 13. Let but the Christian soldier go out against his spiritual enemies, and the God of Peace will make him more than a conqueror.

5. They received these assurances with faith, reverence, and thankfulness. Jehoshaphat first, and then all the people, fell before the Lord, and worshipped, v. 19. An active faith can give thanks for a promise, though it be not yet performed, knowing that God's bonds are as good as ready money, Ps. 60: 6.

V. 20—30. We have here the foregoing prayer answered, and the foregoing promise performed, in the total overthrow of the enemy, and the triumph (rather than victory) of Jehoshaphat.

1. Never was army drawn out to the field of battle so as Jehoshaphat's. He had soldiers ready prepared for war, ch. 17: 18. no notice is taken of their military equipment, but he took care, 1. That faith should be their armor; then they should prosper and be established, v. 20. That is true courage, which faith inspires; nor will any thing contribute more to establish the heart in shaking times, than a firm belief of the power, mercy, and promise of God. In spiritual conflicts, this is the victory, this the prosperity, even our faith. 2. That praise and thanksgiving should be their vanguard, v. 21. He called a council of war, and it was resolved to appoint singers to go out before the army, to charge in the front, who had nothing else to do but to praise God. By this strange advance, Jehoshaphat intended to express his firm reliance on the word of God, to animate his own soldiers, to confound the enemy, them, for the sake of their helpless offspring. (Jon. 4:9—11.) SCOTT.

Verses 20, 21.

'Should praise the beauty of holiness :' i. e. according to some expositors, exactly as they used to do at his beautiful sanctuary. But perhaps the expression rather means, that they should celebrate the glorious excellences of God, which render Him 'the Perfection of beauty.' SCOTT.

Verses 22—25.

Some commentators, both ancient and modern, think that angels were employed on this occasion, who came on the invaders by sur-of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped * to destroy another.

24 And when Judah came toward the watch-tower in the wilderness, they looked unto the multitude, and, behold, [f] they were dead bodies fallen to the earth, and † none escaped.

25 And when Jehoshaphat and his people came to take away the spoil of them, [g] they found among them in abundance both riches with the dead bodies, and [h] precious jewels, which they stripped off for themselves, more than they could carry away: and they were three days in gathering of the spoil, it was so much.

26 And on the fourth day they assembled themselves in the valley of ‡ Berachah; for there they [i] blessed the LORD: therefore [j] the name of the same place was called, The valley of Berachah, [k] unto this day.

27 Then they returned, every man of Judah and Jerusalem, and Jehoshaphat in the §forefront of them, to go again to Jerusalem with joy; for [l] the LORD had made them to rejoice over their enemies.

28 And they came to Jerusalem [m] with psalteries, and harps, and trumpets, unto the house of the LORD.

29 And [n] the fear of God was on all the kingdoms of those countries, when [o] they had heard that the LORD fought against the enemies of Israel.

and to engage the divine blessing.

II. Never was army so unaccountably destroyed; not by thunder, hail, the sword of an angel, dint of sword, or strength of arm, or any surprising alarm, like that Gideon gave the Midianites; but the Lord set ambushments against them, either hosts of angels, or, as Patrick thinks, their own ambushments, whom God struck with such confusion, that they fell on their own friends [by mistake] as if they had been enemies, and every one helped to destroy another, so that none escaped. [Comp. note, Judg. 7: 22.] What ground there was for their jealousies one of another, does not appear, perhaps there was none: but so it was, that the Ammonites and the Moabites fell foul on the Edomites and cut them off, and then they fell out with one another, and cut one another off, v. 23. Thus God often makes wicked people instruments of destruction to one another. See the mischievous consequences of divisions, of the reason of which neither of the contending parties can give any good account.

III. Never was spoil so cheerfully divided, for Jehoshaphat's army had nothing to do besides; the rest was done for them, v. 24. See how rich God is in mercy to them that call upon Him in truth, and how often He outdoes the prayers and expectations of his people. They prayed to be delivered; and God not only did that, but thus greatly enriched them, v. 25. Now appeared God's end in bringing this great army against Judah; to humble and prove them, that He might do them good in their latter end. It seemed, at first, a disturbance to their reformation, but it proves a recompense of it.

IV. Never was victory celebrated with more solemn and enlarged thanksgivings. 1. They kept a day of praise in the camp, before they drew their forces out of the field; which gave a name to the valley, Berachah, i. e. of blessing, v. 26. The remembrance of this work of wonder was hereby perpetuated, for the encouragement of succeeding generations to trust in God. 2. Yet they did not think this enough, but came in solemn procession, all in a body, Jehoshaphat at their head, to Jerusalem; that the country, as they passed along, might join them in their praises, and give thanks for the mercy there where they had by prayer obtained it, in the house of the Lord, v. 27, 28. Praising God must not be the work of a day only; but be continued as our prayers were, when we were in the pursuit of mercy. While we have being, we must praise God, spending our time in that work in which we hope to spend our eternity. Public mercies call for public acknowledgments, in the courts of the Lord's house, Ps. 116: 19.

V. Never did victory turn to a better account than this, for, 1. Jehoshaphat's kingdom was hereby made to look very great abroad, v. 29. It begat in the neighbors a reverence of God, and a cautious fear of injuring his people. 2. It was made very easy and quiet at home, v. 30. They that 30 So the realm of Jehoshaphat was quiet: for [p] his God gave him rest round about.

31 ¶ And [q] Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah: he was thirty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Azubah, the daughter of Shilhi.

32 And [r] he walked in [s] the way of Asa his father, and [t] departed not from it, doing that which was right in the sight of the LORD.

33 Howbeit, [u] the high places were not taken away: for as yet the people [x] had not prepared their hearts unto the God of their fathers.

34 Now [y] the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, first, and last, behold, they are written in the ‖ book of [z] Jehu the son of Hanani, who ¶ is mentioned in the book of the kings of Israel.

B. C. 896. 35 ¶ And after this [a] did Jehoshaphat king of Judah join himself with Ahaziah king of Israel, [b] who did very wickedly:

36 And he joined himself with him to make ships to go to [c] Tarshish: and they made the ships in [d] Ezion-gaber.

37 Then Eliezer the son of Dodavah of Mareshah, prophesied against Jehoshaphat, saying, [e] Because thou hast joined thyself with Ahaziah, [f] the LORD hath broken thy works. And the ships were broken, that they were not able to go to Tarshish.

* Heb. for the destruction.
f Ex. 14:30. Ps. 110:6. Is. 37:36. Jer. 33:5.
† Heb. there was not an escaping. Ezra 9:14.
g Ex. 12:35,36. 1 Sam. 30:19,20. 2 K. 7:9—16. Ps. 68:12. Rom. 8:37.
h Ex. 3:22. Num. 31:51. Judg. 8:24—26. Prov. 3:15.
‡ That is, Blessing.
i Ex. 15:1—19. 2 Sam. 22:1. Ps. 103: 1,2. 107:21,22. Luke 1:68. Rev. 19:1—6.
j Gen. 28:19. 32:30. Ex. 17:15. 1 Sam. 7:12. Is. 62:4. Acts 1:19.
k 5:9.
§ Heb. head. 2 Sam. 6:14,15. Mic. 2:13. Heb. 6:20. l 1 Sam. 2:1. Neh. 12:43. Ps. 20:5. 30:1. Is. 35:10. 51:11. Rev. 18:20. m 2 Sam. 6:5. 1 Chr. 13:8. 23:5. 25: 6. Ps. 57:8. 92:3. 149:3. 150:3—5. Rev. 14:2,3. n 17:10. Gen. 35:5. Ex. 23:27. Josh. 5:1. 2 K. 7:6.
o Ex. 15:14—16. Josh. 2:9—11. 9: 9—11. p 14:6,7. 15:15. Josh. 23:1. 2 Sam. 7:1. Job 34:29. Prov. 16:7. John 14:27.
q 1 K. 22:41—44.
r See on 17:3—6.
s See on 14:2—5,11—13. 1 K. 15:11.
t 16:7—12. Ps. 18:21. 36:3.
u See on 14:3. 17:6.
q See on 12:14. 19:3.—30:19. Deut. 29:4. 1 Sam. 7:3.
y See on 12:15. 13:22. 16:11.
‖ Heb. words.
z 19:2. 1 K. 16:1,7.
¶ Heb. was made to ascend.
a 1 K. 22:48,49.
b 2 K. 1:2—16.
c See on 1 K. 10:22. Tharshish.
d 1 K. 9:26. Ezion-geber.
e See on 19:2.
f 16:9. Prov. 9:6. 13:20. Heb 12:6. Rev. 3:19.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 14—37. The Lord will surely speak peace to those, who seek Him in a due manner: and when his Word banishes our fears and calms our spirits, our prayers are answered in good measure, even previously to those providential deliverances, of which we have received a blessed pledge.—When vigorous faith receives the promises, their accomplishment is anticipated with humble gratitude. But alas! our faith is apt to waver, and then our joys decline: believers need frequent exhortations to persevering faith and hope in God; and it becomes the strong in this manner to animate the weak.—As we cannot know the truth and promises of God, except by his prophets and apostles; how can we believe in Him, unless we firmly credit their infallible testimony, as recorded in the sacred Scriptures?—Many things must remain imperfect in the church on earth; for there are many desirable regulations which the greatest reformers have not ventured to attempt, or have not been able to accomplish: and indeed, except men's 'hearts are prepared to seek the LORD,' magistrates and ministers can do nothing effectual. The zealous, however, will never labor in vain. Much good will be done, though not all which they desire. SCOTT.

prise, as from an ambushment, and slew some of them; but perhaps the Lord only left the several nations to a natural distrust and jealousy of each other. SCOTT.

Verses 26—28.

No undertaking, recorded in Scripture, was entered on, conducted, and concluded, in a more unexceptionable manner. ID.

Verse 36.

'Connecting this passage with 1 K. 22:48, 49. we have the complete account of this transaction. Jehoshaphat prepared a fleet to sail to Ophir in partnership with Ahaziah. As the ships were passing out of the port of Ezion-geber, a storm which God sent to punish this confederacy drove them upon the rocks, and they were lost. The station of the king's ships was thereupon removed to Elath, whence Jehoshaphat sent out another fleet, in which he would not permit Ahaziah to have any concern. Elath was lost in the revolt of the Edomites in the reign of Jehoram, recovered by Uzziah, and finally lost by Ahaz.' PRIDEAUX.

CHAP. XXI.

Jehoshaphat dies; Jehoram succeeds, slays his brethren, and reigns wickedly, 1—7. Edom and Libnah revolt, 8—10. He establishes idolatry, 11. Elijah's written prophecy against him, 12—15. The Philistines and Arabians invade and plunder his kingdom, and carry all his family captive, except Jehoahaz, 16, 17. Elijah's prophecy fulfilled in Jehoram's incurable disease and death; and ... 's interred without honor, 18—20.

NOW [a] Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers, and [b] was buried with his fathers in the city of David. And [c] Jehoram his son reigned in his stead.

2 And he had brethren, the sons of Jehoshaphat, Azariah, and Jehiel, and Zechariah, and Azariah, and Michael, and Shephatiah: all these were the sons of Jehoshaphat king of Israel.

3 And their father [d] gave them great gifts of silver, and of gold, and of precious things, with fenced cities in Judah: but the kingdom gave he to Jehoram; because he was the firstborn.

4 Now when Jehoram was risen up to the kingdom of his father, he strengthened himself, and [e] slew all his brethren with the sword, and divers also of the princes of Israel.

5 Jehoram was thirty and two years old when he began to reign, and [f] he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

6 And he walked [g] in the way of the kings of Israel, like as did the house of Ahab; for [h] he had the daughter of Ahab to wife: and he wrought that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD.

7 Howbeit [i] the LORD would not destroy the house of David, [k] because of the covenant that he had made with David, and [l] as he promised to give a * light to him and his sons for ever.

8 ¶ In his days [m] the Edomites revolted from under the † dominion of Judah, [n] and made themselves a king.

9 Then Jehoram went forth with his princes, and all his chariots with him: and he rose up by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him in, and the captains of the chariots.

10 So the Edomites

a 1 K. 22:50.
b 20.—See on 9:31; 12:16.
c 2 K. 8:16,17.
d 11:23. Gen. 25:6. Deut. 21:15—17.
e 17. 22:8,10. Gen. 4:8. Judg. 9:5, 56,57. 1 John 3:12.
f 2 K. 8:16,17.
g 1 K. 16:25—33.
h 18:1. 22:2. 2 K. 8:18. Neh. 13:25, 26.
i 22:11. Is. 7:6,7.
k 2 Sam. 23:5. Ps. 89:28—34,39. Jer. 33:20—26.
l 2 Sam. 7:12—17. 1 K. 11:13,36. 2 K. 8:19. Ps. 132:17,18. Luke 1:69, 79.
* Heb. lamp, or, candle.
m Gen. 27:40. 2 K. 8:20—22.
† Heb. hand.
n 1 K. 22:47. 2 K. 3:9.

Chap. XXI. Never surely did any kingdom change its king so much for the worse as Judah, when Jehoram, one of the vilest, succeeded Jehoshaphat, one of the best. Thus were they punished for not making a better use of Jehoshaphat's good government, and their disaffectedness (or coldness, at least) to his reformation, ch. 20: 32. They that knew not how to value a good king, are justly plagued with a bad one.

V. 1—11. We find here,

I. Jehoshaphat a very careful, indulgent father to Jehoram. He had many sons, here named, v. 2. and it is said (v. 13.) they were better than were displeased at the destroying of the images and groves, were now satisfied, and obliged to own, that since the God of Israel could deliver after this sort, He only is to be worshipped, and in that way only which Himself has appointed. If God give rest, who can give disturbance?

V. 31—37. We are now drawing toward the close of Jehoshaphat's reign, for a further account of which, they who lived when this book was published, were referred to an authentic history of it, written by Jehu the prophet, ch. 19: 2. then extant, v. 34. This was the general character of his reign, that he did what was right in the sight of the Lord; kept close to the worship of God himself, and did what he could to keep his people close to it. But two things are here to be lamented:

1. The people still retained a partiality for the high places, v. 33. Those erected to the honor of strange gods, were taken away, ch. 17: 6. but Jehoshaphat was loath to disoblige the people so far, as to take away those where the true God was worshipped, for as yet they had not prepared their hearts to the God of their fathers. They complied with Jehoshaphat's reformation, because they could not, for shame, do otherwise, but they were not hearty in it; the best magistrates cannot bring to pass what they would in reformation, when the people are cool in it.

2. Jehoshaphat himself still retained a partiality for the house of Ahab. He saw and knew that Ahaziah, the son of Ahab, did very wickedly, and therefore could not expect to prosper; yet he joined him in trade, in an East-India fleet bound for Ophir, v. 35, 36. Emphasis is laid on the time—after this, after God had given him not only victory, but wealth, after this, to go and join a wicked king, was very ungrateful. What could he expect but that God should be angry with him? Ezra 9: 13, 14. Yet He sends to him, to show him his error, and bring him to repentance, 1. By a prophet, who foretold the blasting of his project, v. 37. And, 2. By a storm, which brake the ships in the port before they set sail, by which he was warned to break off his alliance, and, it seems, took the warning; for when Ahaziah afterward pressed him to join him he would not, 1 K. 22: 49. See how pernicious it is to join friendship and society with evil-doers, it is hard to break off. A man may much better keep himself from the snare, than recover himself out of it.

II. Jehoram a most barbarous brother. Jehoram, it is likely, hated his brethren, and slew them, for the same reason that Cain hated Abel, and slew him; because their piety condemned his impiety, and won them that esteem with the people, which he had lost. With them he slew divers of the princes of Israel, who adhered to them, and were likely to avenge their death. The princes of Judah were those who had taught the good knowledge of the Lord, ch. 17: 7. here called princes of Israel, as before, fathers of Israel, ch. 19: 8. because Israelites indeed, men of integrity. The sword, the good father had put into their hands, this wicked son sheathed in their bowels. Wo unto him that thus foundeth a kingdom in blood, Hab. 2: 12. it will prove a foundation that will sink the superstructure.

III. Jehoram a most wicked king, who corrupted and debauched his kingdom, and ruined the reformation his good father and grandfather had carried on; he walked in the way of the house of Ahab, v. 6. made high places which the people were of themselves too forward to make, and did his utmost to set up idolatry again, v. 11. As for Jerusalem, where he kept his court, he easily drew them into his spiritual whoredom. The country people seem to have been brought to it with more difficulty; but they that would not be corrupted by flatteries, were driven by force, he compelled Judah thereto. He used that power for the destruction of the church, which was given him for the edification of it.

IV. When he forsook God and his worship, his subjects withdrew their allegiance. 1. Some tributary provinces abroad did so, as the Edomites, v. 8. and though he chastised them, v. 9. he could not reduce them, v. 10. 2. One of the cities of his own kingdom did so, v. 10. as of old it had a king of its own, Josh. 12: 15. The reason is here given; as he had forsaken the God of his fathers, they could not continue subject to him, without danger of being themselves also drawn

NOTES.

Chap. XXI. V. 2. The second Azariah, in the original, is called Azariahu.—King of Israel.] Jehoshaphat is called here 'the king of Israel,' not 'king of Judah;' as the whole nation sprang from Jacob, whom God surnamed Israel; and he reigned over a considerable part of it. (4. 23:19.) Scott. 'Israel is an error of the transcriber, and should be Judah. Houb. Dr. A. Clarke; so the Sept. Vulg. Arab. Syr. and 40 MSS.' Cond. Comm.

Verse 3.

Perhaps Jehoram had acted the hypocrite during his father's lifetime: but, even if he showed his evil disposition, Jehoshaphat, having no command from God, did not think it proper to set him aside; otherwise his brethren were better than he, more wise and more righteous. (Note, 18.) Scott.

Verse 4.

Some think, the princes were the magistrates whom Jehoshaphat had appointed. (19:5—11.) Id.

Verses 8—11.

All kinds of licentious and unnatural practices, to the extreme disgrace of human nature, were encouraged, and even held sacred, in the worship of these abominable idols, as may undeniably be proved even from pagan authors. [Notes, Lev. 26: 1, &c.] Id.

revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. The same time also did [o] Libnah revolt from under his hand; [p] because he had forsaken the LORD God of his fathers.

11 Moreover, [q] he made high places in the mountains of Judah, and [r] caused the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit [s] fornication, and [t] compelled Judah thereto.

12 ¶ And there came [u] a writing to him from [x] Elijah the prophet, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of David thy father; Because thou hast not walked [y] in the ways of Jehoshaphat thy father, nor [z] in the ways of Asa king of Judah;

13 But hast walked [a] in the way of the kings of Israel, and hast made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to go a [b] whoring, like to the whoredoms of the house of Ahab, and also [c] hast slain thy brethren of thy father's house, which were better than thyself:

14 Behold, with a great * plague will the LORD smite [d] thy people, and [e] thy children, and thy wives, and all thy goods.

15 And thou shalt have great sickness [f] by disease of thy bowels, until [g] thy bowels fall out, by reason of [h] the sickness day by day.

B. C. 884. 16 ¶ Moreover [i] the LORD stirred up against Jehoram the spirit of the [k] Philistines, and of the Arabians, that were near the Ethiopians:

17 And they came up into Judah, and brake into it, and † carried away all the substance that was found in the king's house, and [l] his sons also, and his wives; so that there was never a son left him, save [m] Jehoahaz, the youngest of his sons.

18 And after all this the LORD smote him in his bowels with [n] an incurable disease.

19 And it came to pass, that in process of time, after the end of two years, his bowels fell out by reason of his sickness: so he died of sore diseases. And his o Josh. 21:13. 2 K. 19:8. p 13:10. 15:2. Deut. 32:21. 1 K. 11: 31,33. Jer. 2:13. q Deut. 12:2—4. 1 K. 11:7. Ps. 78: 58. Ez. 20:28. r 1 K. 14:9,16. 2 K. 21:11. Hab. 2:15. Rev. 2:20. s 13. Lev. 17:7. 20:5. 2 K. 9:22. Ps. 106:39. Ez. 16:15,&c. Rev. 17:1—5. t 33:9. Dan. 3:5,6,15. Rev. 13:15—17. 17:5,6.

u Jer. 36:2,23,28—32. Ez. 2:9,10. Dan. 5:5,25—29.
x 2 K. 2:11.
y 17:3,4. 1 K. 22:43.
z 14:2—5. 1 K. 15:11.
a 1 K. 16:25,30—33.
b 11. Ex. 34:15. Deut. 31:16. 2 K. 9:22. c 4. Gen. 4:10—12. 42:21,22. Judg. 9: 56,57. 1 K. 2:31—33. Is. 26:21. Hab. 2:12. 1 John 3:12.
* Heb. stroke. Lev. 26:21.
d Hos. 5:11. Mic. 6:16.
e Ex. 20:5.
f 18,19. Num. 5:27. Deut. 28:61. Acts 1:23. g Ps. 109:18. Acts 1:18.
h 18. Deut. 28:27,35,59,67.
i 33:11. 1 Sam. 26:19. 2 Sam. 24:1. 1 K. 11:11,23. Ezra 1:1,5. Is. 45:5—7. Am. 3:6.
k 17:11.
† Heb. carried captive. Job 5:3,4.
l 22:1. 24:7.
m 22:1. Ahaziah. 6. Azariah.
n See on 15.

Verse 12.

This writing, coming in so extraordinary a manner, would have a peculiarly awful energy.—Some have not improbably conjectured, that Elisha, and not Elijah, is intended.—The opinion, found in Josephus, and elsewhere, that this letter was sent by Elijah from heaven, only shows, that the papists have not the honor of being the first inventers of such legendary tales. (Acts 19:35.) SCOTT.

Verse 13.

Better.] Jehoram's brethren seem to have been pious persons, and hated for the same cause as Abel was hated by Cain. 'This seems to signify that they were pious persons, who abhorred idolatry: and therefore his sin was the more heinous, in cutting them off, proceeding from enmity to God, as well as to them.' Patrick. (Gen. 4:8—9. 1 John 3:11, 12.) I.

Verse 14.

Many of the people had concurred in Jehoram's idolatry; and some of them must have been instruments in his base, unnatural murders They were therefore joined in his punishment. SCOTT.

Verses 16, 17.

The Philistines 'invaded him on the W. side of his kingdom, as the Arabians did on the E. Patrick. (17:11.) The spirit of these invaders was especially stirred up against Jehoram, and they do not seem to have done any great mischief to the country, or to Jerusalem. Having taken captive all his sons, except Jehoahaz, or Ahaziah, (names of similar meaning,) they put them to death. (Note, 22:1.)—Athaliah, the daughter of Ahab, was left by the invaders; but she proved a still further curse to the family of Jehoram. Probably she concealed herself and her youngest son. ID.

people [o] made no burning for him, like the burning of his fathers.

20 [p] Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem eight years, and departed * without being desired. Howbeit they buried him in the city of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kings.

CHAP. XXII.

Ahaziah succeeds Jehoram, reigns wickedly, joins Jehoram king of Israel, and is slain by Jehu, 1—9. Athaliah murders the seed royal, and usurps the throne, 10. Joash is preserved by Jehoshabeath, 11, 12.

AND [a] the inhabitants of Jerusalem made [b] Ahaziah his youngest son king in his stead: for the band of men that came with the Arabians to the camp had [c] slain all the eldest. So Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah reigned.

2 [d] Forty and two years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Athaliah the daughter of Omri.

3 He also walked in the ways of the house of Ahab: for [f] his mother was [g] his counsellor to do wickedly.

4 Wherefore he did evil in the sight of the LORD, like the house of Ahab: for [h] they were his counsellors, after the death of his father, to his destruction.

5 He [i] walked also after their counsel, and [k] went with Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel, to war against Hazael king of Syria at [l] Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians smote Joram.

6 And he returned to be healed in Jezreel, because of the wounds † which were given him at Ramah, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria. And [m] Azariah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down [n] to see Jehoram the son of Ahab at Jezreel, because he was sick.

7 And the ‡ destruction of Ahaziah [o] was of God by coming to Joram: for when he was come, [p] he went out with Jehoram against Jehu the son of Nimshi, whom [q] the LORD had anointed to cut off the house of Ahab.

8 And it came to pass, that [r] when Jehu was executing judgment upon the house of Ahab, and found the o 16:14. Jer. 34:5.

p 5.
* Heb. without desire. 23:21. Prov. 10:7. Jer. 22:18,19,28.
a 23:3. 26:1. 33:25. 36:1.
b 6. Azariah. 21:17. Jehoahaz. 1 Chr. 3:11.
c 21:16,17.
d 2 K. 8:26.
e 21:6. 1 K. 16:28.
f Gen. 6:4,5. Deut. 13:6—8. Judg. 17:4,5. Neh. 13:23—27. Mal. 2:15. Matt. 14:3—11.
g Gen. 27:12,13. Matt. 10:37.
h 24:17,18. Prov. 1:10. 13:20. 19:27
i Ps. 1:1.
k 2 K. 8:28,29.
l 18:3,31. 19:2. 1 K. 22:3,4. Dan. 5: 22,23.
† Heb. wherewith they wounded him.
m 1,7. Ahaziah. 21:17. Jehoahaz.
n 2 K. 8:29. 10:13,14.
‡ Heb. treading down. Mal. 4:3.
o 10:15. Judg. 14:4. 1 K. 12:15. 22: 20. Ps. 9:16. Is. 46:10.
p 2 K. 9:21.
q 1 K. 19:16. 2 K. 9:1—7.
r 2 K. 10:11—14.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The effects of sin may be very dreadful and durable, even when it does not prove finally destructive to him who committed it.—No means can ensure divine grace to our children; but intimate connections with atrocious sinners render their ungodliness almost certain.—We are reminded to bless God for equitable rulers, a mild administration, and a limited and well arranged constitution of government; and to pray for a continuance of these blessings; for, notwithstanding the most prudent regulations, we may be suddenly and irreparably bereaved of them, unless God mercifully protect us.—Ambition, envy, and jealousy destroy natural affection, and convert men into savage monsters, when they have obtained power, and are afraid of losing it, and when 'there is no fear of God before their eyes.' In the mystery of Providence, such persons prosper for a time, and murder much wiser and better men than themselves: but the Lord has righteous purposes in permitting these events; part of which may now be discerned, and all the rest will be discovered by the light of the eternal world.—The vilest characters are, in some way, connected in the great chain of causes and effects: and are reserved to be undesignedly instrumental in carrying on the purposes of God, and in fulfilling his promises to his church and servants: or they are spared a while, for the sake of their relation to those, whom 'He delighteth to honor.' But his plan will not long require them; their measure of iniquities will speedily be full, and then all their prosperity will end in ruin and despair.—The Lord, by one mean or other, awfully reminds offenders of their guilt, and warns them of their danger: and those, who despise these admonitions, will experience the truth of them when it is too late; for, if neither judgments nor respites bring men to repentance, destruction cannot be far distant.—The dreadful torments and deaths of some murderers, persecutors, and other haughty criminals, who defy human justice, proclaim, that 'verily there is a God, that judgeth the world;' and show what all such enemies of God and man may expect, in the day of wrath and righteous vengeance. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1. The Arabian [horde] seems to have taken Jehoram's family captive, in the prospect of a ransom: but some band of men in their camp slew them; and thus defeated their purpose, but accomplished that of God. (Note, 21:16, 17.) SCOTT.

Verses 2—4.

Ahaziah was born when his father was 18 years of age, yet he had several elder brethren: so that Jehoram must have been married to Athaliah when he was very young; and this circumstance rendered Jehoshaphat's conduct in this alliance still more blamable. (18:1.) ID.

Verse 5.

This tendency in human nature, not only to copy bad examples, but even to select the bad part of good characters for imitation, is an awful and conclusive proof of deep depravity. SCOTT.

Verse 6.

(2 K. 8:28, 29.) The name given the king of Judah in this v. though in the translation the difference is not great, yet it is greater in the original, and seems to have been a distinct name by which he was known. (Ahaziah, Azariah.)—It signifies the help of the LORD. ID.

Verses 7—9.

Ahaziah lay concealed in the kingdom of Samaria, though not in the city so called. When he had seen Jehoram slain, he fled and endeavored to conceal himself in some part of that country: but Jehu ordered him to be pursued, and at length he was taken at Megiddo, and brought to Jehu, who caused him to be put to death. ID.

princes of Judah, and the sons of the brethren of Ahaziah, that ministered to Ahaziah, he slew them.

9 And [s] he sought Ahaziah; and they caught him, (for he was hid [t] in Samaria,) and brought him to Jehu: and when they had slain him, they buried him: [u] Because, said they, he is [x] the son of Jehoshaphat, who sought the LORD with all his heart. So [y] the house of Ahaziah had no power to keep still the kingdom.

10 ¶ But when [z] Athaliah the mother of Ahaziah saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the seed royal of the house of Judah.

11 But [a] Jehoshabeath the daughter of the king took Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons that were slain, and put him and his nurse in a [b] bedchamber. So Jehoshabeath the daughter of king Jehoram, the wife of [c] Jehoiada the priest, (for she was the sister of Ahaziah,) hid him from Athaliah, so that [d] she slew him not.

12 And he was with them [e] hid in the house of God six years: and [f] Athaliah reigned over the land.

CHAP. XXIII.

Jehoiada takes proper measures, and makes Joash king, 1—11. Athaliah is slain, 12—15. Jehoiada subverts idolatry; restores the worship of God, and places Joash on the throne, to the great joy of the people, 16—21.

AND in the [a] seventh year Jehoiada strengthened himself, and took the captains of hundreds, Azariah the son of Jehoram, and Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, and Azariah the son of Obed, and Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat the son of Zichri, into [b] covenant with him.

2 And they [c] went about in Judah, and gathered the Levites out of all the cities of Judah, and [d] the chief of the fathers of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem.

3 And all the congregation [e] made a covenant with the king in the house of God. And he said unto them, Behold, the king's son shall reign, [f] as the LORD hath said of the sons of David.

4 This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part of you [g] entering on the sabbath, of the priests and of the Levites, shall be [h] porters of the * doors;

5 And a third part shall be at [i] the king's house; and a third part at [k] the gate of the foundation: and all the people shall be in the courts of the house of the LORD.

6 But let none come into the house of the LORD save the priests, and [l] they that minister of the Levites; they shall go in, for they are holy: but all the people shall keep the watch of the LORD.

7 And [m] the Levites shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand; and [n] whosoever else cometh into the house, he shall be put to death: but be ye with the king when he cometh in, and when he goeth out.

8 So [o] the Levites and all Judah did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest had commanded, and took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that were to go out on the sabbath: for Jehoiada the priest dismissed not [p] the courses.

9 Moreover Jehoiada the priest delivered to the captains of hundreds, [q] spears, and bucklers, and shields that had been king David's, which were in the house of God.

10 And he set all the people, every man having his weapon in his hand from the right † side of the temple to the left side of the temple, [r] along by the altar and the temple, by the king round about.

s 2 K. 9:27.
t 1 K. 13:32.
u 2 K. 9:28,34.
x 17:3,4. 21:20.
y 1,8. 21:4,17.
z 2—4. 2 K. 11:1,&c. a 2 K. 11:2. Jehosheba.
b Ex. 40:45,46.
c 23:1.
d 21:7. 2 Sam. 7:13. 1 K. 15:4. Ps. 33:10. 76.10. Prov. 21:30. Is. 65:8. Acts 4:28.
e Ps. 27:5.
f Ps. 12:8. 73:14,18,19. Jer. 12:1. Hab. 1:12.
a 2 K. 11:4,&c.
b 15:12. 1 Sam. 18:3. Neh. 9:38. c Ps. 112:5. Matt. 10:16. Eph. 5:15.
d 11:13—17. 1 Chr. 15:12. 24:6.
e 16. 2 Sam. 5:3. 2 K. 11:17. 1 Chr. 11:3.
f 6:16. 7:18. 21:7. 2 Sam. 7:16. 1 K. 2:4. 9:5. Ps. 89:29,36.
g] Chr. 9:26. 23:3—6. 24:3—6. Luke 1:8,9.
h 1 Chr. 26:13—16.
* Heb. thresholds.
i 2 K. 11:5,6. Ez. 44:2,3. 46:2,3. k Acts 3:2.
l 2 K. 11:6,7. 1 Chr. 23:28—32.
m 2 K. 11:8,9.
n Ex. 19:12,13. 21:14.
o 2 K. 11:9.
p 1 Chr. 24 : 25 : 26 :
q 1 Sam. 21:9. 2 Sam. 8:7.
† Heb. shoulder of the house. 2 K. 11:11.
r 6:12. Ex. 40:6. Matt. 23:35.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

No tongue can express, no imagination can conceive, the guilt and condemnation of those parents, who counsel their own children to do wickedly, and who thus become their murderers in the most awful sense. Yet, this fatal calamity, to families and to society, is frequently the consequence of contracting marriages with those who are irreligious and wicked. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXIII. V. 1, 2. These 'chief fathers of Israel' seem to have been the descendants of those priests and Levites from the ten tribes, and pious persons, who left their cities and joined themselves to Judah, in the days of Jeroboam. (Note, 11:13—17.) The word 'Israel,' however, is sometimes used as a general term for the nation, and so applied to the people of Judah. SCOTT.

Verse 6.

'The house of the LORD,' must mean the inner court; for no Levites, who were not also priests, entered the sanctuary. This shows, that on some occasions, the people were admitted into the inner courts; else the injunction had been needless. ID.

11 Then [s] they brought out the king's son, and [t] put upon him the crown, and gave him [u] the testimony, and made him king. And Jehoiada and his sons [x] anointed him, and said, * God save the king.

12 ¶ Now [y] when Athaliah heard the noise of the people running and praising the king, [z] she came to the people into the house of the LORD:

13 And she looked, and, behold, [a] the king stood at his pillar at the entering in, [b] and the princes and the trumpets by the king: and [c] all the people of the land rejoiced, and [d] sounded with trumpets; also [e] the singers with instruments of music, and such as taught to sing praise. Then Athaliah rent her clothes, and said, † Treason, Treason.

14 Then Jehoiada the priest brought out the captains of hundreds that were set over the host, and said unto them, Have her forth of the ranges: and [f] whoso followeth her, let him be slain with the sword. For the priest said, [g] Slay her not in the house of the LORD.

15 So they laid hands on her: and when she was come to the entering [h] of the horse-gate, by the king's house, they slew her there.

16 And Jehoiada [k] made a covenant between him, and between all the people, and between the king, [l] that they should be the LORD's people.

17 Then all the people went to [m] the house of Baal, and brake it down, and [n] brake his altars and his images in pieces, and [o] slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars.

18 Also Jehoiada appointed the officers of the house of the LORD, by the hand of the priests the Levites, [p] whom David had distributed in the house of the LORD, to offer the burnt-offerings of the LORD, [q] as it is written in the law of Moses, with rejoicing and with singing, as it was ordained ‡ by David.

19 And he set the [r] porters at the gates of the house of the LORD, that none which was unclean in any thing should enter in.

20 And he took [s] the captains of hundreds, and the nobles, and the governors of the people, and all the people of the land, and brought down the king from the house of the LORD: and they came through the high gate into the king's house, and set the king upon the throne of the kingdom.

21 And [t] all the people of the land rejoiced: and the city was quiet, after that they had slain Athaliah with the sword.

CHAP. XXIV.

Joash reigns well during Jehoiada's life, and zealously repairs the temple, 1—14. Jehoiada dies, and is honorably buried, 15, 16. Joash, seduced by his princes, turns aside to idolatry, and causes Zechariah, Jehoiada's son, to be stoned, for reproving him in the name of God, 17—21. Zechariah's dying prediction, 22. Joash is plundered by the Syrians, left sick, and then slain by his own servants, 23—26. Amaziah succeeds him, 27.

[a] JOASH was seven years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And [b] Joash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, [c] all the days wherein Jehoiada the priest instructed him.

3 And Jehoiada took for him two wives; and he begat sons and daughters.

4 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that Joash was minded to repair the house of the LORD.

5 And he gathered together the priests and the Levites, and said to them, Go out unto the cities of Judah, and gather of all Israel money to repair the house of your God from year to year, and see that ye hasten the matter. Howbeit the Levites hastened it not.

6 And the king called for Jehoiada the chief, and said unto him, Why hast thou not required of the Levites to bring in out of Judah and out of Jerusalem the collection, according to the commandment of Moses the servant of the LORD, and of the congregation of Israel, for the tabernacle of witness?

7 For the sons of Athaliah, that wicked woman, had broken up the house of God; and also all the dedicated things of the house of the LORD did they bestow upon Baalim.

8 And at the king's commandment they made a chest, and set it without at the gate of the house of the LORD.

9 And they made a proclamation through Judah and Jerusalem, to bring in to the LORD the collection that Moses the servant of God laid upon Israel in the wilderness.

10 And all the princes and all the people rejoiced, and brought in, and cast into the chest, until they had made an end.

11 Now it came to pass, that at what time the chest was brought unto the king's office by the hand of the Levites, and when they saw that there was much money, the king's scribe and the high priest's officer came and emptied the chest, and took it, and carried it to his place again. Thus they did day by day, and gathered money in abundance.

12 And the king and Jehoiada gave it to such as did the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and hired masons and carpenters to repair the house of the LORD, and also such as wrought iron and brass to mend the house of the LORD.

13 So the workmen wrought, and the work was perfected by them, and they set the house of God in his state, and strengthened it.

14 And when they had finished it, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiada, whereof were made vessels for the house of the LORD, even vessels to minister, and to offer withal, and spoons, and vessels of gold and silver. And they offered burnt offerings in the house of the LORD continually all the days of Jehoiada.

15 But Jehoiada waxed old, and was full of days when he died; a hundred and thirty years old was he when he died.

16 And they buried him in the city of David among the kings, because he had done good in Israel, both toward God, and toward his house.

17 Now after the death of Jehoiada came the princes of Judah, and made obeisance to the king. Then the king hearkened unto them.

18 And they left the house of the LORD God of their fathers, and served groves and idols: and wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass.

19 Yet he sent prophets to them, to bring them again unto the LORD; and they testified against them: but they would not give ear.

20 And the Spirit of God came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the LORD, that ye cannot prosper? because ye have forsaken the LORD, he hath also forsaken you.

21 And they conspired against him, and stoned him with stones at the commandment of the king in the court of the house of the LORD.

22 Thus Joash the king remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slew his son. And when he died, he said, The LORD look upon it, and require it.

23 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of the year, that the host of Syria came up against him: and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the princes of the people from among the people, and sent all the spoil of them unto the king of Damascus.

24 For the army of the Syrians came with a small company of men, and the LORD delivered a very great host into their hand, because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers. So they executed judgment against Joash.

25 And when they were departed from him, (for they left him in great diseases,) his own servants conspired against him for the blood of the sons of Jehoiada the priest, and slew him on his bed, and he died: and they buried him in the city of David, but they buried him not in the sepulchres of the kings.

26 And these are they that conspired against him, Zabad the son of Shimeath an Ammonitess, and Jehozabad the son of Shimrith a Moabitess.

27 Now concerning his sons, and the greatness of the burdens laid upon him, and the repairing of the house of God, behold, they are written in the story of the book of the kings. And Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

---

[s] 22:11. 2 K. 11:12.
[t] 2 Sam. 1:10. Ps. 21:3. 89:39. 132:18. Heb. 2:9. Jam. 1:12. 2:5. Rev. 4:4,10. 5:10. 19:12.
[u] Ex. 25:16. 31:18. Deut. 17:18. Ps. 2:10—12. 78.5. Is. 8:16,20. 49:23.
[x] 1 Sam. 10:1. 2 Sam. 5:3. 1 K. 1:39. Ps. 89:20. Acts 4:26,27.
* Heb. Let the king live. 1 Sam. 10:24. 2 Sam. 16:16. 1 K. 1:34. Matt. 21:9.
[y] 2 K. 11:13—16.
[z] 2 K. 9:32—37.
[a] 34:31. 2 K. 23:3.
[b] Num. 10:1—10. 1 Chr. 15:24.
[c] 1 K. 1:39,40. 1 Chr. 12:40. Prov. 11:10. 29:2.
[d] Judg. 7:8,18—22. 2 K. 9:13.
[e] 1 Chr. 15:16—22,27. 25:1—8.
† Heb. Conspiracy. 1 K. 18:17,18. 2 K. 9:23. Rom. 2:1,2.
[f] 2 K. 10:25. 11:8,15.
[g] Ez. 9:7.
[h] Neh. 3:28.
[i] 22:10. Judg. 1:7. Matt. 7:2. Jam. 2:13. Rev. 16:5—7.
[k] 15:12,14. 29:10. 34:31,32. Deut. 5:2,3. 29:1,10—15. 2 K. 11:17. Ezra 10:3. Neh. 5:12,13. 9:38. 10:29,&c.
[l] Deut. 26:17—19. Josh. 24:21—25. Is. 44:5.
[m] 34:4,7. 2 K. 10:25—28. 11:18. 18:4.
[n] Deut. 12:3. Is. 2:18. Zech. 13:2,3.
[o] Deut. 13:5,9. 1 K. 18:40. 2 K. 11:18,19.
[p] 1 Chr. 23 : 24 :
[q] Num. 28:2,&c.
‡ Heb. by the hands of David. 29:25. 1 Chr. 25 :
[r] 1 Chr. 9:23,24. 26 :
[s] 2 K. 11:9,10,19.
[t] 2 K. 11:20. Ps. 58:10. Prov. 11:10. Rev. 18:20. 19:2—4.
[a] 2 K. 11:21. 12:1. Jehoash. 1 Chr. 3:11.
[b] 25:2. 26:4,5. 2 K. 12:2. Ps. 78:36, 37, 106:12,13. Mark 4:16,17.
[c] 17—22.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The Lord commonly effects great and important changes by those persons whom He has furnished with wisdom, courage, piety, and integrity; and who intend to do his will and promote his glory, and not to advance their own interests.—Civil transactions should be managed with a regard to the Word and worship of God; and while men's hearts overflow with good wishes for their princes, commendations of them, or joy in their advancement; they should remember to conduct and terminate all in thanksgivings and praises unto God. This is peculiarly becoming, when persecuting tyrants and usurpers are removed, and equitable rulers come in their places: the work is the Lord's, whatever instruments He is pleased to employ. Such national mercies should be acknowledged by public reformations; and by a concurrence of all ranks, in solemnly yielding themselves up to be the Lord's people, and in establishing his worship and ordinances according to his Word. Where this is neglected, the joy and singing, which takes place upon great deliverances, or the accession of kings to the throne, will commonly be short-lived, and will terminate in complaints, and discords, and calamities. SCOTT.

Verses 12—21.

2 K. 11:13—20.—His pillar at the entering in, &c. (13) The king's pillar was at the entrance of the inner court; but the two pillars, Boaz and Jachin, stood at the porch of the temple. One of these therefore could not, as some have supposed, be the king's pillar. (M. R. a.—1 K. 7:21.)—Singers, &c. (13) (M. R.) It is observable, that this particular is noted in Chr. and not in K.; in which the appointment of the sacred Psalmody is not recorded. (Comp. 1 K. 8:1—11. with 2 Chr. 5:11—14.—1 K. 8:62—66. with 2 Chr. 7:1—10.)—Jehoiada, &c. (16) Jehoiada, as priest, and probably high priest, represented God in this solemn transaction.—The officers. (18) The arrangements made by David, as to the worship and attendance at the temple, had been wholly disregarded; but were restored by Jehoiada. (M. R.) SCOTT.

the days of Jehoiada the priest.

3 And Jehoiada [d] took for him [e] two wives; and he begat sons and daughters.

4 ¶ And it came to B. C. 865. pass after this, that Joash was minded to [*] repair the house of the LORD.

5 And he gathered together the priests and the Levites, and said to them, Go out unto the cities of Judah, and [f] gather of all Israel money to repair the house of your God from year B. C. 856. to year; and see that ye hasten the matter. [g] Howbeit the Levites hastened it not.

6 And the king called for Jehoiada the chief, and said unto him, [h] Why hast thou not required of the Levites to bring in out of Judah, and out of Jerusalem, [i] the collection, according to the commandment of Moses the servant of the LORD, and of the congregation of Israel, for the [k] tabernacle of witness?

7 For the [l] sons of Athaliah, [m] that wicked woman, had broken up the house of God; and also all the dedicated things of the house of the LORD [n] did they bestow upon Baalim.

8 And [o] at the king's commandment they made a chest, and set it without at the gate of the house of the LORD.

9 And they made a [†] proclamation through Judah and Jerusalem, to bring in to the LORD the [p] collection that Moses the servant of God laid upon Israel in the wilderness.

10 And all the princes and all the people [q] rejoiced, and brought in, and cast into the chest, until they had made an end.

11 Now it came to pass, that [r] at what time the chest was brought unto the king's office by the hand of the Levites, and when they saw that there was much money, the king's scribe and the high priest's officer came and emptied the chest, and took it, and carried it to his place again. Thus they did day by day, and gathered money in abundance.

12 And the king and Jehoiada [s] gave it to such as did the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and hired [t] masons and carpenters to repair the house of the LORD, and also such as wrought iron and brass to mend the house of the LORD.

13 So the workmen wrought, and [‡] the work was perfected by them, and they set the house of God [u] in his state, and strengthened it.

14 And when they had finished it, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiada, whereof were made [x] vessels for the house of the LORD, even [y] vessels to minister, and § to offer withal, and spoons, and vessels of gold and silver. And they [z] offered burnt-offerings in the house of the LORD continually, [a] all the days of Jehoiada.

B. C. 845. 15 ¶ But Jehoiada waxed old, and was [b] full of days when he died; [c] an hundred and thirty years old was he when he died.

16 And they buried him [d] in the city of David among the kings, [e] because he had done good in Israel, both toward God, and toward his house.

[Practical Observations.]

This account of Joash's good beginnings we had, as it stands here, 2 K. 12: 1, &c. though the latter part of this ch. concerning his apostasy, we had little of there. We shall here only observe,

1. It is a happy thing for young people, as Joash here, when setting out in the world, to be under the direction of those that are wise and good, and faithful to them; let them reckon it a blessing, not a burden and check; a mark of wisdom and discretion, not of weakness and subjection, to hearken to such. He that will not be counselled, cannot be helped. It is especially prudent for young people to take advice in their marriages, as Joash, who left it to his guardian to choose him his wives, because Jezebel and Athaliah had been such plagues, v. 3. That is a turn of life, which often proves either the making or marring of young people, and therefore should be attended to with great care.

2. Men may go far in the external performances of religion, and keep long to them, merely by the power of education, and influence of friends, who yet have no hearty affection nor inward relish for divine things. In the shows of devotion, those who have only the form of godliness, may outstrip those who have the power of it. Joash is more solicitous and more zealous about the repair of the temple than Jehoiada himself, whom he reproves for remissness herein, v. 6 It is easier to build temples than to be temples to God.

3. The repairing of churches is a good work, which all in their places should promote, for the decency and conveniency of religious assemblies. The learned tell us, that in the Christian church, anciently, part of the tithes were applied that way.

4. Many a good work would be done that now lies undone, if there were but a few active men to stir in it and put it forward. When Joash found that money did not come in as he expected one way, he tried another way; many have honesty enough to follow, that have not zeal enough to lead, in that which is good. Perhaps the very novelty of throwing money into a chest, through a hole in the lid, made it a successful expedient; a great deal was thrown in, and with a great deal of cheerfulness, v. 10. An invention to please people's humor may sometimes bring them to their duty. Wisdom herein is profitable to direct.

5. Faithfulness is the greatest praise, and will be the greatest comfort, of those who are intrusted with public treasure, or employed in public business, v. 12, 13.

V. 15—27. We have here a sad account of the degeneracy and apostasy of Joash. God had done great things for him; and he something for God; but now he proved ungrateful, and false. Here we find,

I. The occasions of his apostasy; when he did that which was right, it was not with a perfect heart; he never was sincere, never acted from principle; but in complaisance to Jehoiada, who had helped him to the crown, and because he had been protected in the temple, and rose on the ruins of idolatry. Therefore when the wind turned, he turned with it.

[a] Gen. 21:21. 24:4.
[b] Gen. 4:19. Matt. 19:4—8.
[*] Heb. renew. 5—7.
[f] 29:3. 34:8,9. 2 K. 12:4,5.
[g] 2 K. 12:6,7.
[h] 2 Sam. 21:3.
[i] Ex. 30:12—16.
[k] Num. 1:50. 17:7,8. 18:2. Acts 7:44.
[l] 21:17.
[m] 28:22—24. Esth. 7:6. Prov. 10:7. 2 Thes. 2:8. Rev. 2:20.
[n] Deut. 32:15—17. Ez. 16:17,19—21. Dan. 5:2—4,23. Hos. 2:8,9. o 2 K. 12:8,9. Mark 12:41.
[†] Heb. voice.
[p] See on 6. Matt. 17:24—27.
[q] 1 Chr. 29:9. Is. 64:5. Acts 2:45—47. 2 Cor. 8:2.
[r] 2 K. 12:10—12.
[s] 34:9—11.
[t] 1 K. 5:15.
[‡] Heb. the healing went up upon the work by their hands. Neh. 4:7.
[u] 1 Chr. 22:5. Hag. 2:3. Mark 13:1,2.
[x] 2 K. 12:13,14.
[y] 1 K. 7:50.
[§] Or, pestles. Prov. 27:22.
[z] Ex. 29:38—42. Num. 28:2,&c.
[a] 2.
[b] Gen. 15:15. 25:8. 1 Chr. 23:1. Job 5:26. Ps. 91:16.
[c] Gen. 47:9. Ps. 90:10.
[d] 1 Sam. 2:30. 1 K. 2:10. Acts 2:29.
[e] 28: 31:20,21. Neh. 13:14. Heb. 6:10.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—16. The best education, the most scriptural instructions, and the brightest examples, are insufficient of themselves to convert the soul: they are, however, the general means by which the Lord works; and even, when not eventually successful to change the sinner's heart, they commonly produce effects salutary to the community.—If we live to the glory of God, and endeavor to do good to men, especially in the great concerns of salvation; we may be satisfied that we have lived long enough, though we should die young. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXIV. V. 3. The Jewish expositors are of opinion, that Jehoiada took these two wives for himself, not for Joash: and they consider this as inconsistent with the character of the high priest. But it is most obvious to understand the words, for him, of Joash: and Jehoiada's advanced age, at this time, renders it highly improbable that he should take them for himself; for he must, on any computation, have been above 100 years old, when Joash began to reign. Nor are any sons of Jehoiada mentioned, afterwards, except such as were grown up.—It is not indeed expressly said that Jehoiada was high priest, but the way in which he is distinguished from the other priests, and the authority which he exercised, seem to put it beyond all reasonable doubt, that he was. SCOTT.

The sons of Athaliah, &c. (7) Jehoram's sons, Ahaziah excepted, whether by Athaliah, or his other wives, were slain before his death. (22:1.) But either his sons by Athaliah, during his life-time, or her sons by some other man, as many suppose, had thus spoiled the temple to consecrate its treasures to Baalim. SCOTT.

And they offered, &c. (14) It appears from this, that the daily offering, morning and evening, had been intermitted previously; and that it was neglected after the death of Jehoiada. (Notes, 23:18, 19. Ex. 29:38—41. Dan. 8:9—12. 11:31. 12:11—13.) ID.

(13.) The work was perfected.] 'Heb. the healing went up upon the work. A metaphor, whereby the ruins of the temple are resembled to the wounds of a body, [John 2.19.] and the repairs of those ruins to the healing of wounds.' ASSEMB. ANN

17 ¶ Now [f] after the death of Jehoiada, came [g] the princes of Judah, [B. C. 840.] and made obeisance to the king. Then the king hearkened unto them.

18 And [h] they left the house of the LORD God of their fathers, and served groves and idols: and [i] wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass.

19 Yet [k] he sent prophets to them, to bring them again unto the LORD; and they testified against them: but they would not [l] give ear.

20 And [m] the Spirit of God * came upon Zechariah [n] the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, [o] Why transgress ye the commandments of the LORD, that ye cannot prosper? [p] because ye have forsaken the LORD, he hath also forsaken you.

21 And they [q] conspired against him, and [r] stoned him with stones at the commandment of the king, in the court of the house of the LORD.

22 Thus Joash the king [s] remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slew his son. And when he died, he said, [t] The LORD look upon it, and require it.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, † at the end of the year, that [u] the host of Syria came up against him: and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed [x] all the princes of the people from among the people, and sent all the spoil of them unto the king of ‡ Damascus.

24 For the army of the Syrians [y] came with a small company of men, and the LORD [z] delivered a very great host into their hand, because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers. [a] So they executed judgment against Joash.

25 And when they were departed from him, (for they left him in [b] great diseases,) [c] his own servants conspired against him, [d] for the blood of the sons of Jehoiada the priest, and slew him on his bed, and he died: and they buried him in the city of David, but they buried him [e] not in the sepulchres of the kings.

26 And these are they that conspired against him; § Zabad the son of Shimeath, an Ammonitess, and Jehozabad the son of Shimrith a Moabitess.

I. His good counsellor died and left him. It was a mercy he lived so long, 130 years, v. 15. By this it appears he was born in Solomon's time, and had lived six entire reigns before this. It was an encouragement to him to go on in that good way Jehoiada had trained him up in, to see what honor was done Jehoiada at his death: they buried him among the kings, with this encomium, perhaps it was part of the inscription on his gravestone, that he had done good in Israel. Note, It is the greatest honor to do good in our generations; which those who do, shall have praise of the same. He had done good toward God; that is, toward his house, in reviving the temple-service, ch. 23: 8. Note, Those do the greatest good to their country, that lay out themselves in their places to promote religion. Jehoiada finished his course with honor; but the little religion Joash had was all buried in his grave. See how much one head may sustain, and what a great judgment to any prince or people, the death of godly, zealous, useful men is. See how necessary it is that, as our Savior speaks, we have salt in ourselves, that we act in religion from an inward principle, which will carry us on through all changes. Then the loss of a parent, a minister, a friend, will not be the losing of our religion.

2. Bad counsellors insinuated themselves into his affections, and wheedled him, made obeisance, and, instead of condoling, congratulated him on the death of his old tutor, as his release from the discipline he had been so long under, unworthy a man, a king: and (would you think it?) the princes of Judah were the men so industrious to debauch him, v. 17. His father and grandfather were corrupted by the house of Ahab, from whom no better could be expected; but they that incline to the counsels of the ungodly, will never want ungodly counsellors. They made obeisance to the king, flattered him into an opinion of his absolute power, promised to stand by him in making his royal will and pleasure pass for a law, any divine precept or institution to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding; and he hearkened to them. Princes, and inferior people, have been many a time thus flattered to their ruin by those who have promised them liberty and dignity, but who have really brought them into the greatest servitude and disgrace.

II. The apostasy, v. 18. The princes, it is likely, requested the king, which they durst not while Jehoiada lived, but now hope it will give no offence, to set up the groves and idols again, which were thrown down in the beginning of his reign; for they hate to be always confined to the dull, old-fashioned service of the temple: and he not only gave them leave to do it themselves, but joined them. King and princes, awhile ago, were repairing the temple, and pulling down groves and idols! So inconsistent a thing is man, and so little confidence to be put in him!

III. The aggravations of it, and the additional guilt. God sent prophets to them, v 19. to reprove them, and tell them what would be in the end, and so bring them again to the Lord. It is the work of ministers to bring people, not to themselves, but to God. In the most degenerate times, God left not Himself without a witness; for He would rather sinners should turn and live, than go on and die; and they that perish, shall be left inexcusable. But they slighted all the prophets, and slew one of the most eminent; Zechariah, son of Jehoiada, and perhaps others. Of whom observe,

1. His message to them in the name of God, v. 20. The people were assembled in the court of the temple, (for they had not quite left it,) on occasion, probably of some solemn feast, when this Zechariah, being filled with the spirit of prophecy, and known (it is likely) to be a prophet, stood up in some of the desks in the court of the priests, and very plainly, but without any provoking language, or personality, told the people of their sin, and its consequences: referring them to their bibles, Deut. 29: 25. 31: 16, 17. This is the work of ministers, by the Word of God, as a lamp, and a light, to discover the sin of men, and expound the providences of God.

2. Their barbarous treatment of him for this kindness and faithfulness, v. 21. They stoned him to death immediately; not, under color of law, accusing him as a blasphemer, traitor, or false prophet, but in a popular tumult, in the court of the house of the Lord—as horrid a piece of wickedness as perhaps any in all the history of the kings. The person, the place, the message, all sacred; the reproof just, the warning fair, and the delivery very gentle and tender; yet nothing less than the blood of the prophet can satisfy their indignation at the prophecy! The Jews say, There were seven transgressions in this; for they killed a priest, a prophet, a judge, they shed innocent blood, polluted the court of the temple, the sabbath, and the day of expiation; for, on that day, their tradition says, this happened.

3. The aggravation of this sin; this Zechariah was the son of Jehoiada, who had done so much good in Israel, and particularly had been as a father to Joash, v. 22. The affront to God, and the contempt put on religion, are not so particularly noticed, as the ingratitude to the memory of Jehoiada. Call a man ungrateful, and you can call him no worse.

4. The dying martyr's prophetical imprecation of vengeance on his murderers; The Lord look upon it, and require it! This came not from a spirit of revenge, but of prophecy; He will require it. This would be the continued cry of the blood they shed, as Abel's blood cried against Cain. This precious blood was reckoned for quickly in the judgments that came on this apostate prince; it came into the account also afterward in the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans: their misusing the prophets was what brought on them ruin without remedy, ch. 36: 16. nay, our Savior makes the persecutors of Him and his Gospel answerable for the blood of this Zechariah; so loud, so long, does the blood of the martyrs cry; see Matt. 23: 35. Rev. 6: 10.

Lastly, The judgments of God which came on Joash for this aggravated wickedness.

1. A small army of Syrians made themselves masters of Jerusalem, destroyed the princes, plun-f Deut. 31:27. Acts 20:29,30. 2 Pet. 1:15. g 10:8—10. 22:3,4. Prov. 7:21—23. 20:19. 26:28. 29:5. Dan. 11:32.

h 4. 21:13. 33:3—7. 1 K. 11:4,5. 14: 9,23.
i 19:2. 28:13. 29:8. Josh. 22:20. Judg. 5:8. 2 Sam. 24:1. Hos. 5:10,11.
k 36:15,16. 2 K. 17:13—15. Neh. 9: 26. Jer. 7:25,26. 25:4,5. 44:4,5. Luke 11:47—51. 16:31. 20:9—15.
l Is. 28:23. 42:23. 51:4. 55:3. Matt. 13:9,15,16.
m 15:1. 20:14.
* Heb. clothed. Judg. 6:34. 1 Chr. 12:18. margins.
n 23:11.
o Num. 14:41. 1 Sam. 13:13,14. 2 Sam. 12:9,10. Zech. 7:11—14. p 15:2. Deut. 28:25,6. 1 Chr. 28:9. Jer. 2:19. 4:18. 5:19,25.
q Jer. 11:19. 18:18. 38:4—6.
r Matt. 21:35. 23:34 37. Acts 7:58,59. s Ps. 109:4. Luke 17:15—18. John 10:32. t Gen. 9:5. Jer. 11:20. 26:14,15. 2 Tim. 4:14. Rev. 6:9—11. 18:20. 19: 2,3.
† Heb. in the revolution. 1 K. 20:22,26.
u Deut. 32:35. 2 K. 12:17,18. x 17,18. Is. 2:10,11. 58:10,11. 32:6,7.
‡ Heb. Darmasek.
y Lev. 26:8. Deut. 32:30. Is. 30:17 Jer. 37:10. z 16:8,9. 20:11,12. Lev. 26:25. Deut. 28:25. a 22:8. Is. 10:5,6. 13:5. Hab. 1:12.
b 21:16,18,19. 22:6.
c 2 K. 12:20. 14:19,20.
d 21,22. Ps. 10:14. Rev. 16:6.
e 16. 21:20. 28:27.
§ Or, Jozachar. 2 K. 12:21.

Verse 20.

Zechariah's dying words would be best rendered, 'The LORD will look upon it and require it:' as a prophecy, and not a prayer. [So Houb. Boothr. Poole.] (M. R.—Notes, Matt. 23:29—36.) 'Though Zechariah spoke by the Spirit of God, he only applied the prediction of Moses (Deut. 31:16, 17.) to the present time.' Patrick SCOTT.

monitess, and Jehozabad the son of * Shimrith, a Moabitess.

27 Now concerning his sons, and the greatness of the [f] burdens laid upon him, and the [†] repairing of the house of God, behold, they are written in the [‡] story of the book of the Kings. And [g] Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XXV.

Amaziah at first reigns well, and justly punishes his father's murderers, 1—4. He gathers a great army, and hires, for a hundred talents, a hundred thousand Israelites against Edom: but, having paid the money, he dismisses them at the word of a prophet, and they depart in great anger, 5—10. He smites the Edomites, and exercises great cruelty towards the captives, 11, 12. The Israelites, on their return, spoil the cities of Judah, 13. Amaziah serves the gods of Edom, and rejects the admonitions of a prophet, 14—16. He challenges Joash, who in vain warns him: he is vanquished, and Jerusalem spoiled, 17—24. The rest of his reign, 25, 26. He is slain by a conspiracy, 27, 28.

AMAZIAH was [a] twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, [b] but not with a perfect heart.

3 Now it came to pass, when the kingdom was § established to him, that [c] he slew his servants that had killed the king his father.

4 But he slew not their children, but did [d] as it is written in the law in the book of Moses, where the LORD commanded, saying, The fathers shall not die for the children, neither shall the children die for the fathers, but every man shall die for his own sin.

B. C. 827. 5 ¶ Moreover Amaziah gathered Judah together, and made them [e] captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, according to the houses of their fathers, throughout all Judah and Benjamin: and he numbered them [f] from twenty years old and above, and found them [g] three hundred thousand choice men, able to go forth to war, that could handle spear and shield.

6 He hired also an hundred thousand mighty men of valor out of Israel, for an hundred talents of silver.

7 But there came [h] a man of God to him, saying, O king, let not the army of Israel go with thee; [i] for the LORD is not with Israel, to wit, with all the children of Ephraim.

8 But if thou wilt go, do it, [k] be strong for the battle: God shall make thee fall before the enemy: for [l] God hath power to help, and to cast down.

9 And Amaziah said to the man of God, But what shall we do for the hundred talents, which I have given to the ‖ army of Israel? And the man of God answered, [m] The LORD is able to give thee much more than this.

10 Then [n] Amaziah dered the city, and sent the spoil to Damascus, v. 23, 24. Their God not only departed from them, but turned to be their enemy, and fought against them. The Syrians were employed as instruments in God's hand to execute judgments against Joash, though they little thought so, Isa. 10: 6, 7. and see Deut. 32: 30.

2. Before they departed, God smote him with great diseases of body, or mind, or both; either like his grandfather, ch. 21: 18. or like Saul, an evil spirit from God troubling him. If [God's] vengeance pursue men, the end of one trouble will but be the beginning of another.

3. His own servants conspired against him; when he thought to escape death by sickness, he met it by the sword; they slew him in his bed, for the blood of the sons of Jehoiada; by which it should seem he did not only slay Zechariah, but others of the sons of Jehoiada for his sake. Perhaps they that slew him, intended to take vengeance for that blood; this, however, was what God intended, in permitting them to do it. The regicides are here named, v. 26. and it is observable that the mothers of them both were foreigners, one an Ammonitess, and the other a Moabitess. The idolatrous kings, it is likely, countenanced those marriages which the law prohibited for the prevention of idolatry; and see how they resulted in their own destruction.

4. His people would not bury him in the sepulchres of the kings, because he had stained his honor by mal-administration, Ps. 69: 28. These judgments are called the burdens laid on him, v. 27. for the wrath of God is a heavy burden, too heavy for any man to bear. Or it may be meant of the threatenings denounced against him by the prophets, for those are called burdens; usually God sets some special marks of his displeasure on apostates, in this life, for warning to all to remember Lot's wife.

CHAP. XXV. Amaziah's reign is recorded in this ch.; none of the worst, and yet far from good. Most of the passages in this ch. we had before more briefly related, 2 K. 14.

V. 1—13. Here is,

I. The general character of Amaziah, He did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, worshipped the true God, kept the temple-service a-going, and countenanced religion in his kingdom; but he did not do it with a perfect heart, v. 2. that is, he was not a man of serious piety or devotion himself, nor had he any zeal for the exercises of religion. Such is the character of too many in this Laodicean age: they do that which is good, but not with the heart, not with a perfect heart.

II. A necessary piece of justice which he did on the traitors that murdered his father, v. 3. Though we should suppose they intended to avenge on their king the death of the prophet, as was intimated, ch. 24: 25. yet that would by no means justify their wickedness; for they were not the avengers, but presumptuously took God's work out of his hands. Therefore Amaziah did what became him in calling them to an account.

III. His expedition against the Edomites, who, some time ago, had revolted from under the dominion of Judah, to which he attempted to reduce them. Observe,

1. The great preparation he made for this expedition. (1.) He mustered and marshalled his own forces, v. 5. In Jehoshaphat's time, 50 or 60 years before, they were four times as many; sin weakens a people, diminishes them, dispirits them, and lessens their number and figure. (2.) He hired auxiliary troops out of Israel, v. 6. If he had advised with any of his prophets before he did this, or had but considered how little any of his ancestors got by their alliances with Israel, he would not have had this to undo again. But rashness makes work for repentance.

2. The command God sent him by a prophet to dismiss the forces of Israel, v. 7, 8. He would not have him call in assistance, it looked like distrust of God; if he made sure of his presence, his own army was sufficient; but particularly, he must not take in their assistance, for they worship the calves. This was a good reason why he should not make use of them, because he could not depend on them to do him any service. It is comfortable to employ those who, we have reason to hope, have an interest in heaven; and dangerous to associate with those from whom the Lord is departed.

3. The objection Amaziah made against this command, and the satisfactory answer the prophet

---

* Or, Shomer.
f 2 K. 12:18.
† Heb. founding. 13.
‡ Or, commentary. 9:29. 16:11. 20:34. 25:1. 1 Chr. 3:12.
g 2 K. 14:1—3.
a 14. 24:2. 26:4. 1 Sam. 16:7. Ps. 78:37. Is. 29:13. Hos. 10:2. Acts 8:21.
§ Heb. confirmed upon him.
b 24:25,26. Gen. 9:5,6. Ex. 21:14. Num. 35:31—33. c Deut. 24:16. 2 K. 14:5. Jer. 31:29, 30. Ez. 18:4,20. d Ex. 18:25. 1 Sam. 8:12. 1 Chr. 13: 1. 27:1. e Num. 1:3.
f 11:1. 14:8. 17:14—18.
g 2 Sam. 12:1. 1 K. 13:1. 1 Tim. 6: 11. 2 Tim. 3 17.
h 13:12. 19:2. 1 K. 12:28. Is. 28:1—3. Hos. 5:13—15. 9:13.
i 18:14. Ec. 11:9. Is. 8:9,10. Joe 3: 9—14. Matt. 26:45. k 14:11. Judg. 7 7. 1 Sam. 14:6. Job 5:18. 9:13. Ps. 20:7. 33:16—20 ‖ Heb. land.
l 1:12. Deut. 8:18. Prov. 10:22. Hag. 2:8. Luke 18:29,30.
m 1 K. 12:24.
n 1 K. 12:24.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 17—27. The authority or influence of parents, ministers, and pious friends, joined with transient, serious impressions, and other incidental circumstances, may produce, and long maintain, a plausible profession of religion: but the lamp will go out when it is especially wanted; unless supplied from the oil in the vessel, the grace of God possessing the heart. (Notes and P. O. Matt. 25: 1—13.)—Some regard to justice, decency, and gratitude, may be expected from ignorant and profligate characters, and from infidels and heathen idolaters: but the rage of an apostate bursts all obligations and restraints; for he has so done violence to his conscience, that it has lost all its energy; and, except he be restrained by human laws, every thing desperate may be expected from his resentment. Without the Spirit of prophecy, we may confidently foretell, that the Lord will look upon, and require, all the persecutions, slanders, mockeries, and ill usage, which his servants meet with, except their prayers be answered, and He give the persecutors repentance and better minds. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXV. V. 6—10. As 100 talents would not divide above 8 shillings apiece, among 100,000 men; we may suppose it was only an earnest of their pay, or that they expected to be enriched with the plunder of the Edomites.—Perhaps the army which Amaziah had hired, was chiefly of the tribe of Ephraim; or that tribe, being the most considerable in the kingdom of Israel, is put for the whole. [Note, end of 1 Sam.] SCOTT.

separated them, to wit, the army that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go * home again: wherefore their anger was greatly kindled against Judah, and they returned home in † great anger.

[Practical Observations.]

11 ¶ And Amaziah strengthened himself, and led forth his people, and went to the [o] valley of salt, and smote of the children of Seir ten thousand.

12 And other ten thousand left alive did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, and [p] cast them down from the top of the rock, that they all were [q] broken in pieces.

13 But the ‡ soldiers of the army which Amaziah sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, fell upon the cities of Judah, from [r] Samaria even unto [s] Beth-horon, and smote three thousand of them, and took much spoil.

14 ¶ Now it came to pass, after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, that [t] he brought the gods of the children of Seir, and set them up to be [u] his gods, and bowed down himself before them, and burned incense unto them.

15 Wherefore the anger of the LORD was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him [x] a prophet, which said unto him, [y] Why hast thou sought after [z] the gods of the people, [a] which could not deliver their own people out of thine hand?

16 And it came to pass, as he talked with him, that the king said unto him, [b] Art thou made of the king's counsel? [c] forbear: why shouldest thou be smitten? Then the prophet forbare, and said, I know that God [d] hath § determined to destroy thee, because thou hast gave to that objection, v. 9. It is an objection men often make against their duty, they are afraid of losing by it. 'Regard not that,' says the prophet, 'the Lord is able to give thee much more; and what is 100 talents between thee and Him? He has ways enough to make up the loss to thee: it is below thee to speak of it.' Note, A firm belief of God's all-sufficiency to bear us out in our duty, and to make up all the loss and damage we sustain in his service abundantly to our advantage, will make his yoke very easy, and his burden very light. What is it to trust in God, but to be willing to venture the loss of any thing for Him, in confidence of the goodness of the security He gives us that we shall not lose by Him, but that it shall be made up to us in kind or kindness. The king lost 100 talents by his obedience; and we find just that sum given to his grandson Jotham as a present, ch. 27:5. and, for interest, 10,000 measures of wheat, and as many of barley.

* Heb. to their place.
† Heb. heat of anger. 2 Sam. 19:43. Prov. 29:22.

4. His obedience to the command of God, which is upon record, to his honor. He would rather lose his money, disoblige his allies, and dismiss a fourth part of his army, just as they were going to take the field, than offend God, v. 10. but they went home in great anger, thus to be made fools of, and cashiered as men not fit to be employed, and being, perhaps, disappointed of the spoil and plunder, they promised themselves by joining Judah against Edom. Men are apt to resent that which touches them in their profit or reputation, though it frees them from trouble.

5. His triumphs over the Edomites, v. 11, 12. He left dead, in the field of battle, 10,000 men, 10,000 more he took prisoners, and barbarously killed them, by throwing them down some deep and craggy precipice.

6. The mischief the disbanded soldiers of Israel did to the cities of Judah, either in their return or soon after, v. 13. Several cities that lay on the borders they plundered, and killed 3000 men that made resistance. But why should God suffer this? Was it not in obedience to Him that they were sent home; and yet shall the country suffer by it? Surely God's way is in the sea! Did not the prophet say God was not with the children of Ephraim, and yet they are suffered to prevail against Judah? Doubtless God intended thereby to chastise those cities of Judah for their idolatries, which were found most in those parts that lay next to Israel. The men of Israel had corrupted them, and now they were made a plague to them: Satan both tempts and torments.

V. 14—16. Here is, 1. The revolt of Amaziah from God to the gods of the Edomites. Egregious folly! Ahaz worshipped the gods of those that had conquered him; he had some little color for that, ch. 28: 23. But to worship the gods of those whom he had conquered, (v. 14.) who could not protect their own worshippers, was the greatest absurdity! But, perhaps, for his barbarous inhumanity, (v. 12.) he was given up to this ridiculous idolatry.

2. The anger of the Lord was justly kindled against him; yet before He sent to destroy him, He sent to convince and reclaim him, and so to prevent his destruction. The prophet reasoned with him very fairly, and mildly, v. 15. If men would but duly consider the inability of all those things to help them, which they have recourse to [o] 2 Sam. 8:13. 2 K. 14:7. Ps. 60: title.

[p] 2 Sam. 12:31. 1 Chr. 20:3.
[q] 20:10. 21:8—10.
‡ Heb. sons of the band.
[r] 1 K. 16:24,29.
[s] 9:5. 1 K. 9:17.
[t] 28:23.
[u] Ex. 20:3—5. Deut. 7:5,25. 2 Sam. 5:21.
[x] 7. 16:7—9. 19:2. 20:37. 2 Sam. 12:1—6.
[y] 24:20. Judg. 2:2. Jer. 2:5.
[z] Ps. 96:5.
[a] 11. Ps. 115:4—8. Is. 44:9,10. 46: 1,2. Jer. 10:7. 1 Cor. 8:4. 10:20.
[b] 16:10. 18:25,26. 24:21. Am. 7:10—13. Matt. 21:23.
[c] Prov. 9:7,8. Is. 30:10,11. Jer. 29:26. 2 Tim. 4:3. Rev. 11:10.
[d] Ex. 9:16. Deut. 2:30. 1 Sam. 2:25. Acts 4:28. Rom. 9:22.
§ Heb. counselled. 18:20,21. Is. 46: 10. Eph. 1:11.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—10. Many favor and support religion from motives of policy, who either do not appear, or who only appear, to be religious; but the Lord has no pleasure in dissemblers.—Unrepented sin will inevitably and finally ruin every one who continues in it: and in like manner it will infallibly enfeeble those nations where it prevails, and diminish their prosperity and consequence. Princes and statesmen professing Christianity, when forming alliances, or stipulating succors from foreign courts, seldom inquire, whether 'the LORD be with them' or not. Indeed, the very question would too generally excite ridicule and disgust: yet this will be found of far greater efficacy, in the success of wars, and the prosperity of kingdoms, than the most sagacious ungodly devices. Success cannot reasonably be expected by those, who act in defiance of the divine commands: and if men prosper in presumptuous wickedness, their success is the prelude of their ruin. —When those who have not true faith, or a spiritual mind, are convinced of the sinfulness of any part of their conduct or pursuits, they always object to self-denying obedience; and seem to say, 'But what shall we do for the hundred talents?' 'What shall we do, if, by hallowing the Sabbath, we lose so many good customers? What shall we do, if we renounce this illegal traffic and exorbitant profit, to compensate so important a loss? What shall we do, if we affront our friends, obstruct our preferment, or lose the friendship of the world? How shall we maintain our families? "What shall we eat? or what shall we drink? or wherewithal shall we be clothed?" Penury and distress face us in the way which you point out to us: we are almost persuaded it is the road to heaven; but what shall we do about the expenses of the journey?' Here numbers stumble and turn aside, or endeavor to quiet their conscience in a vain pretence, that such and such practices are necessary in their case; and that they may be Christ's disciples without 'denying themselves, taking up the cross, and forsaking all for Him.' But the answer to such objections is obvious: 'The LORD is able to give thee much more than this;' and He has promised to 'add all other things' to those, 'who seek first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness:' yea, to make up a hundred fold, even in this present world, all that has been conscientiously renounced for his sake and the Gospel: and we are 'compassed about with an innumerable cloud of witnesses' of his faithfulness to this promise.—A single instance of self-denying obedience, performed on a sudden, under some vehement impression, does not prove that a man has true faith: but the deliberate daily renouncing of the world, and opposing our strongest sinful inclinations, for the sake of the Gospel, and in obedience to the Savior, forms the constant evidence of an interest in Him, and all his precious promises; (Phil. 3: 1—11. v. 7—9.) and to some measure of this temper and conduct every true believer has attained. SCOTT.

Verses 11, 12.

(M. R.—Note, 2 K. 14:7.) The enmity between Israel and Esau seems to have been reciprocal, and deeply malignant. The victorious king and his army considered every individual of Edom, as a traitor and a rebel; and so adjudged them to death, and acted according to that judgment SCOTT.

(12.) Cast them down.] A punishment with the Greeks, (for sacrilege,) Romans and Turks, as well as Jews, Luke 4:29. ED.

Verse 13. Amaziah had indeed dismissed these auxiliaries in obedience to God; but his savage cruelty to the prisoners of Edom, so wholly inexcusable, and his subsequent idolatry, (14—16.) proved that he acted by constraint or terror, when obedient. SCOTT.

Verses 14—16.

'Perhaps Amaziah worshipped them from fear they should owe him a spite, and contrive some mischief against him, in revenge of what he had done against the Edomites.' Patrick. But Amaziah, who had borne with the prophet, who spoke to him concerning dismissing the Israelites, by which he lost 100 talents, was so mad upon his idols, that he would not endure that subject to be insisted on.—The prophet was a counsellor, whom the Lord had appointed him: and none of done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel.

17 ¶ Then [a] Amaziah king of Judah took advice, and sent to Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, the son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, [f] let us see one another in the face.

18 And Joash king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, The [*] thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by [†] a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle.

19 Thou sayest, Lo, thou hast smitten the Edomites; and [g] thine heart lifteth thee up [h] to boast: abide now at home; [i] why shouldest thou meddle to thine hurt, that thou shouldest fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

20 But Amaziah would not hear: for [k] it came of God, that he might deliver them into the hand of their enemies, because they sought after the gods of Edom.

21 So Joash the king of Israel went up, and they [l] saw one another in the face, both he and Amaziah king of Judah, at [m] Beth-shemesh, which belongeth to Judah.

22 And Judah was [‡] put to the worse before Israel, and they [n] fled every man to his tent.

23 And Joash the king of Israel [o] took Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Joash, the son of [p] Jehoahaz, at Beth-shemesh, and brought him to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem, from the [q] gate of Ephraim to the § corner-gate, four hundred cubits.

24 And he took [r] all the gold and the silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of God, with Obed-edom, and the treasures of the king's house, the hostages also, and returned to Samaria.

25 ¶ And Amaziah, the son of Joash king of Judah, lived after the death of [s] Joash, son of Jehoahaz king of Israel, fifteen years.

B. C. 810. 26 Now the [t] rest of the acts of Amaziah, first, and last, behold, are they not written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel?

27 Now after the time that Amaziah did turn away ‖ from following the LORD, they [¶] made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem; and he fled to [u] Lachish: but they sent to Lachish after him, and slew him there.

28 And they brought him upon horses, and buried him with his fathers in [x] the city of Judah.

e 13. 2 K. 14:8—14.
f 2 Sam. 2:14. Prov. 20:3.
* Or, furze-bush, or thorn. Judg. 9. 8—15. 1 K. 4:33.
† Heb. a beast of the field. Ps. 80:13.
g 26:16. 32:25. Deut. 8:14. Prov. 13: 10. 16:18. 28:25. Dan. 5:20—23. Hab. 2:4. Jam. 4:6. 1 Pet. 5:5.
h Jer. 9:23,24. 1 Cor. 1:29. i 35:21. Prov. 18:6. 20:3. 26:17. Luke 14:31. k 16. 22:7. 1 K. 12:15. Ps. 81:11,12. Acts 28:25—27. 2 Thes. 2:9—11. 1 Pet. 2:8.
l 17.
m Josh. 21:16. 1 Sam. 6:9,19,20.
‡ Heb. smitten. 28:5,6.
n 1 Sam. 4:10. 1 K. 22:36.
o 33:11. 36:6,10. Prov. 16:18. 29:23. Dan. 4:37. Ob. 3. Luke 14:11. p 21:17. 22:1. Ahaziah. 22:6. Azariah.
q Neh. 8:16. 12:39.
§ Heb. the gate of it that looketh. Jer. 31:38.
r 12:9. 2 K. 14:14.
s 2 K. 14:17. Jehoash.
t 20:34. 2 K. 14:15.
‖ Heb. from after.
¶ Heb. conspired a conspiracy. 24:25. 2 K. 14:19.
u Josh. 10:31.
x 2 K. 14:20. City of David.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 11—28. Abused mercies occasion man's most aggravated wickedness, and accelerate his ruin: so that, when we are prospered by Providence, we should be peculiarly careful what return we make for the goodness of God, and what use we make of his bounty —The absurdities of superstition and idolatry, to which the human race has in all ages shown so strange a propensity, are as disgraceful to the understanding as to the heart: and if we did but consider how unavailing those worldly objects, which we are apt to idolize, have always proved, to the peace, safety, and happiness of their possessors; the reflection must check our eager pursuits of wealth, honor, or sensual pleasure; or at least show them to be as irrational, as the worship of useless, helpless idols. —They, who are mad on their lusts, will not bear control or counsel: and he, who would expostulate with them for their good, may expect to be treated as impertinent, intermeddling, or insolent: especially if an inferior venture to admonish, in the name of the Lord, sinners of superior rank and station. These, indeed, seem generally to claim it as one of their prerogatives, to walk unmolested in 'the broad way that leadeth to destruction.' If, however, mild, serious, rational, and scriptural reproof is proudly rejected and resented, we are not required further to urge our admonitions, but must desist, by plainly giving men to understand what the consequence will be.—When the remonstrances of conscience are silenced, and the ministers of God are rejected and menaced, it is to be feared that He has determined on the sinner's destruction; and that the longer he is spared, the more will he 'treasure up wrath against the day when God shall render to every man according to his works.' May the Lord preserve us from this dreadful doom, and prepare our hearts to receive his truth, to welcome his counsels and reproofs, and obediently to submit to his authority, and do his will! SCOTT.

---

those, whom he had chosen for himself, gave him such honest, wise, and salutary counsel. But, as he would not hearken to it, the prophet desisted, having most solemnly warned him that the Lord had counselled to destroy him. (M.—Notes, 17—27. Deut. 2:30. 1 K. 22:19—23. Luke 22:21—23. Acts 2:22—24.) SCOTT.

V. 24. Hostages.] 'Probably given that Amaziah might regain his liberty.' GREENFIELD.

Verses 25—27.

No intimation is given, that Amaziah repented during the whole space of the Lord's long-suffering. Probably he added tyranny and oppression to his idolatry: and this, with his imprudent and unsuccessful administration, rendered him so odious, that he was slain, as it appears, by the general consent of his subjects, and no one was called to account for his death. SCOTT.

CHAP. XXVI.

Uzziah succeeds Amaziah, reigns well for a time, and is greatly prospered, 1—8. His buildings, husbandry, army, and engines of war, 9—15. Being lifted up in pride he attempts to burn incense in the temple, is opposed by the priests, and smitten with leprosy by God, 16—21. He dies, and is succeeded by Jotham, 22, 23.

THEN [a] all the people of Judah took [b] Uzziah, who was sixteen years old, and made him king in the room of his father Amaziah.

2 He built [c] Eloth, and [d] restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

3 Sixteen years old was [e] Uzziah when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty and two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was [f] Jecoliah of Jerusalem.

4 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, [g] according to all that his father Amaziah did.

5 And [h] he sought God in the days of Zechariah, who [i] had understanding in the [*] visions of God: and, [k] as long as he sought the LORD, God made him to prosper.

6 And he went forth and [l] warred against the Philistines, and brake down [m] the wall of Gath, and the wall of Jabneh, and the wall of Ashdod, and built cities † about Ashdod, and among the Philistines.

7 And [n] God helped him against the Philistines, and against [o] the Arabians that dwelt in Gur-baal, and the Mehunims.

8 And [p] the Ammonites gave gifts to Uzziah: and [q] his name ‡ spread abroad even to the entering in of Egypt; for he strengthened himself exceedingly.

9 Moreover Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem at the [r] corner-gate, and at [s] the valley-gate, and at [t] the turning of the wall, and § fortified them.

10 Also he built towers in the desert, and || digged many wells:

a 22:1. 33:25.
b 2 K. 14:21. 15:1. 1 Chr. 3:12. Azariah. Matt. 1:8,9. Ozias.
c 8:17. 2 K. 14:22. 16:6. Elath.
d 25:23,28.
e Is. 1:1. 6:1. Hos. 1:1. Am. 1:1. Zech. 14:5.
f 2 K. 15:2,3. Jecholiah.
g 25:2.
h 24:2. Judg. 2:7. Hos. 6:4. Mark 4:16,17. Acts 20:30.
i Gen. 41:15. Dan. 1:17. 2:19. 5:16. 10:1.
* Heb. seeing of God.
k 15:2. 25:8. 1 Chr. 22:11,13. Ps. 1:3. l 21:16. Is. 14:29.
m 2 Sam. 8:1. 1 Chr. 18:1.
† Or, in the country of Ashdod. 1 Sam. 5:1,6. n 14:11. 1 Chr. 5:20. 12:18. Ps. 18: 29,34,35. Acts 26:22.
o 17:11. 21:16.
p 20:1. Gen. 19:38. Deut. 2:19. Judg. 11:15—18. 1 Sam. 11:1. q Gen. 12:2. 2 Sam. 8:13. 1 K. 4:31 Matt. 4:24.
‡ Heb. went.
r 25:23. 2 K. 14:13. Jer. 31:38. Zech. 14:10. s Neh. 2:13. 3:13.
t Neh. 3:20,24.
§ Or, repaired.
|| Or, cut out many cisterns. Gen. 26: 18—21.

II. His prosperity. In general, as long as he sought the Lord, and minded religion, God made him to prosper. Those only prosper, whom God makes to prosper; prosperity is his gift. Religion and piety are friendly to outward prosperity. Many have found and owned, that as long as they sought the Lord, and kept close to their duty, they prospered; but since they forsook God, every thing had gone cross.

The particular instances of this prosperity, are, 1. His success in his wars, v. 6, 8. He made all quiet about him, and kept them in awe. 2. Greatness, fame, and reputation, v. 8. a good name, a name for good things with God and good people. This is true fame, and makes a man truly honorable. 3. Buildings. He did not neglect defences at home, v. 9. Much of the wall of Jerusalem was, in his father's time, broken down, particularly at the corner gate, ch. 25: 23. probably, his father had repaired it, but he, to prevent the like mischief, fortified it, and built a tower at the corner gate. But his best fortification of Jerusalem was his close adherence to the worship of God, which if his father had not forsaken, its wall had not been broken down. While he fortified the city, he did not forget (v. 10.) to protect the country from the inroads of plunderers, bands of which sometimes alarmed and plundered them, as ch. 21: 16. 4. His husbandry. He dealt much in cattle and corn, employed many hands, and got much wealth by it, took a pleasure in it, v. 10. and, probably, inspected his country affairs himself, which encouraged industry among his subjects. It is an

CHAP. XXVI. V. 1—15. This ch. gives us the reign of Uzziah, (called Azariah in the Kings,) more fully than we had it before; though long, and in some respects illustrious, yet it was very briefly related, 2 K. 14, 21.—15. 1, &c. We have here two things concerning Uzziah:

I. His piety. In this he was not very eminent or zealous; yet he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord; we have no reason to think he ever worshipped idols as his father did, no not in his latter days, when his heart was lifted up. Zechariah, v. 5. some think, was the son of that Zechariah whom his grandfather Joash slew. He was one that had understanding in the visions of God; either those he himself was favored with, or those of the preceding prophets. He was well versed in prophecy, and conversed much with the upper world, was an intelligent, devout, good, man; and, it seems, had great influence with Uzziah. Happy the great men, who have such about them, and are willing to be advised by them; but unhappy those, who seek God only while they have such with them, and have not a principle in themselves to bear them out to the end.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXVI. V. 5. It is not known of what tribe or family this Zechariah was; though some conjecture, he was the son of that Zechariah whom Joash murdered. This, however, would be a singular instance in Scripture, of a son called by his father's name,—He was perhaps endued with a peculiar gift in distinguishing between those, who were actually favored with prophetic visions, and those who only pretended to be so SCOTT.

Verses 6—9.

These verses contain some particulars, in which Uzziah, by the special help and blessing of God, was greatly prospered, while he adhered strictly to the worship of God according to the law. (M. R.)—'These Mehunims were a people in Arabia deserta.' Bp. Patrick. Jabneh is not mentioned elsewhere, nor Gur-baal.—'He built cities about Ashdod,' or 'in the country of Ashdod.' (M.) ID.

Verse 10.

Towers.] These towers seem to have been built in the desert, for the protection of Uzziah's shepherds and flocks, from the depredations of the Arabian free-booters and others, on whom he seems to have retaliated. [Others suppose them also a mean of collecting tribute and retaining the nomade tribes there in subjection.] A prince can hardly have a more rational, inoffensive, and indeed useful recreation from public business, than these rural occupations. ID.

In Carmel.] 'Not . . . the famous mount of that name, (for that was not in the tribe of Judah,) but a very fertile country, as the word Carmel signifies in several places. Is. 16:10. Jer. 2:7. 48:33.' Patrick. (M.—1 Sam. 25:2. Is. 35:1, 2.) ID.

For he loved husbandry.] Comp. also v. 4, 7, 8, 13, 15. 'The encouragement of agriculture necessarily ameliorated the condition, of the early Egyptians: [and the same remark applies to those who lived under the Mosaic Polity, of which, says Michaelis, 'agriculture was the foundation:'] and it enabled them to spare a great portion of their population for the improvement of manufactures of every kind. Hence, no doubt, their superiority over neighboring nations, their riches, the advancement of their military tactics, and their power. Neither a nation of huntsmen nor of shepherds (for which last, on this account, perhaps they entertained the greatest contempt, as a low caste, and comp. Gen. 43:32. 46:34.) have the same advantages as an agricultural people; and it is pretty evident, in the early history of man, that those who possessed and tilled a fertile country were the first to make a progress in the arts of civilization.' Wilkinson.

The following remarks, by the same author, will illustrate the military state of the Jews, described in this chapter, and ch. 17:13—19. &c. 'A standing army was constantly maintained by the Egyptian government, for the garrisons of the different fortified towns from Pelusium to Syene, and for the constant excursions the Egyptians made to the N. E. to extend their conquests and maintain their authority over the provinces they had subdued. Besides the native troops, mercenaries were also kept in pay, [comp. 25:6.] who, as well as the rest of the forces, were divided into regiments, and disciplined according to the rules of regular tactics. [Comp. the Heb. phrase, to learn war, Is. 2: 4. Mic. 4:3. and 1 Sam. 20:20, 35—40. 2 Sam. 1:23. 22:35.] Each battalion had a certain standard peculiarly belonging to it, [Num. 1:52.] and the nature of their arms distinguished and portioned out the different brigades. So the Greeks: [and comp. 14:8, &c.] On the former was represented some sacred animal, a boat, shrine, the name of the king, or some other Egyptian device, [cut, Ps. 20:5.] and it was intended as a rallying point in the confusion of battle; raised, says Diod. on a lofty pike, and borne by an officer. Their arms consisted of the bow, sword, shield, battle axe, knife or atagan, spear, club, sling, and a curved stick still used by the Ababdeh and Ethiopians. Their engines (in sieges) consisted of the battering-ram, (or a long pike,) (the Roman terebra, and Greek trypanon,) armed with a metal head, similarly used, [2 Sam. 20: 15.] the scaling ladder and testudo, (like the testudo arietaria, covered by a shroud, or chelone, to protect the soldiers.) This last was supported by framework, and formed a step or terrace for the ascent of the besiegers; [note, 2 K. 19:32.] but as, at the same time, it sheltered the men it contained, it may have been also intended for a covert to the sappers, [comp. note, 2 Sam. 5:8.] whilst they mined the place. The Jews were also acquainted with these engines for sieges, long before the Greeks. Deut. 20:20. They were of course borrowed from the Egyptians. [Note, 14, 15.] The military caste [note, Neh. 11:35.] enjoyed considerable privileges, and the profession of arms was in the greatest repute among the Egyptians. Besides, too, other necessary measures instituted for their comfort, "each soldier was allowed 12 arourae" (9½ acres, about the size of Regulus' farm), "exempt from every charge and tribute." So Herod. The two native corps, the Calasiries and Hermotybies, took it by turns, to do the duty of royal guards, and 1000 of each were selected for this purpose, who, besides the above general allowances, received daily rations, consisting of 5 minæ (5 lbs. 5 oz. 1 dwt.) of bread, 2 of beef, (2 lbs. 2 oz. 8 grs.) and 4 arusters, (a little more than 2 pints?) of wine. The total for [u] he had much cattle, both in the low country and in the plains; husbandmen also, and vine-dressers in the mountains, and in * Carmel: for he loved † husbandry.

11 ¶ Moreover Uzziah had an host of fighting men, that [x] went out to war by bands, according to the number of their account, by the hand of Jeiel the scribe, and Maaseiah the ruler, under the hand of Hananiah, one of the king's captains.

12 The whole number of the chief of the fathers of the mighty men of valor were two thousand and six hundred.

13 And under their hand was ‡ an army, [y] three hundred thousand and seven thousand and five hundred, that made war with mighty power, to help the king against the enemy.

14 And Uzziah prepared for them, throughout all the host, shields, and spears, and helmets, and habergeons, and bows, and § slings to cast stones.

15 And he made in Jerusalem engines, invented by [z] cunning men, to be on the towers, and upon the bulwarks, to shoot arrows and great stones withal: and his name ‖ spread far abroad, for he was marvellously helped till he was strong.

[Practical Observations.]

16 ¶ But [a] when he was strong, his heart

u 2 K. 3:4. 1 Chr. 27:26—31.
* Or, fruitful fields. 2 K. 19:23. Is. 29:17.
† Heb. ground.
x 2 K. 5:2.
‡ Heb. the power of an army.
y 11:1. 13:3. 14:8. 17:14—19.
§ Heb. stones of slings. Judg. 20:16. 1 Sam. 17:49.
z 51:7,14. Ex. 31:4.
‖ Heb. went forth. Matt. 4:24.
a 25:19. 32:25. Deut. 8:14,17. 32:13—15. Prov. 16:18. Hab. 2:4. Col. 2:18.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—15. Wise and pious instructers are an invaluable treasure to young people; especially to those, who are advanced to exalted stations, and who are generally poisoned with the flattery of interested sycophants and dependants. Yet, unless they seek and serve God from an inward principle of piety; they will at length lose, or shake off, their preceptors and their religion together.—Many have experienced, and some have confessed, that, when they paid regard to the service of God, they prospered; but that every thing went wrong, from the time they grew negligent in religion. Indeed, external prosperity does not now so uniformly attend godliness, as it did in the case of Israel: yet every undertaking will succeed with the true Christian, as far as it is good for him; and God will help and prosper him in his spiritual warfare, in proportion to the simplicity of his dependence and obedience.—No lawful business will be the worse managed, or prove less pleasant to any man, on account of his diligence in the service of God, if he have learned to arrange his temporal and spiritual concerns in due order.—It would be happy for mankind, if able and powerful monarchs took more delight, and spent more of their leisure hours, in rural occupations, which are manly, useful, and truly honorable: but hitherto man's chief ambition, exertion, and ingenuity, have been directed to the destruction of his own species! If, however, it must be a part of his occupation to invent and forge instruments of destruction, and of shortening the already contracted duration of human life; surely these should be used only in self-defence, or in awing the turbulent spirits of those public depredators, who cannot otherwise be prevented from disturbing the world. SCOTT.

---

of these two corps was 410,000 men, at the time Egypt was most populous; these, of course, were not always employed, or kept in pay; their farms, provided for them, in part, and employed them, and were also tilled by husbandmen, like the land of the kings and priests. Diod. But mechanical trades were forbidden the soldier, as detrimental to his physical force. Their agricultural possessions also gave them a love for, and interest in defending, their native land. Strabo mentions a million of men, but this doubtless included their foreign auxiliaries. [Comp. 14:9.] Military punishments were established by law. The soldiers were inured to the fatigues of war, by the occupations of the chase, and above all by the games and gymnastic exercises they constantly practised, in common with all the Egyptians; as wrestling, cudgelling, throwing and catching the ball, leaping, racing, mock-fights, [comp. 2 Sam. 2:14.] feats of strength, and a variety of other exercises.' WILKINSON.

Verses 11—15.

'How hard it is to bear great prosperity with moderation and humble thankfulness.' Patrick. SCOTT.

(11.) Hand.] Notes, v. 10. Ps. 20:5, 2 Sam. 18:18, &c. ED.

(14, 15.) See note, v. 10. and cuts, Ex. 17:10. 2 Sam. 1:9. 1 K. 22:34, &c. Cuts are here given of the most ancient known, or supposed, forms of the Roman catapult, for shooting arrows, from Vegetius, (A) and the 'catapult or steel bow,' from Calmet's eds. (B) perhaps the scorpio, for smaller darts; (Kennett,&c.) also of the balista for casting great stones, from Calmet's eds. (C) and from Vegetius (D). 'Balistæ threw stones,(500 in a night and 1000 by day,) of 100, 120, (Nonnius) and even 360 lbs. (Diod.) to the distance of 3 stadia, a mile perhaps.' CALMET. Of the above engines there were many kinds, about which ancient authors disagree. Dr. A. Clarke remarks, (and there is nothing known on Egyptian monuments, (note v. 10) to contradict him,) 'This is the first intimation on record of warlike engines for sieges. [Except the Egyptian battering ram, mound, and testudo-shield, adopted probably by the Hebrews from them, Deut. 20:20. 2 Sam. 20:15. 2 K. 19:32. The word in Deut. is matsor, probably 'a circumvallation,' Sept. Charakosis, (vallum,) Vulg. Machinas. So Targ. and Arab. In 2 Sam. 20:15 the word for 'bank' is Sollah, which seems to have stood on the outer bank of the trench surrounding the city, or perhaps was advanced thence into the trench itself. The Sept. has proschoma, agger, and so other translators. Vulg. circumdederunt munitionibus. Gesenius. tr. mound, trench, rampart. The Heb. 2 K. 19:32. is magen, Sept. thyreos, which, says Gesenius, 'covered the whole body,' though he makes this larger shield to be the tsinnah (Heb.) and the small shield or buckler to be the magen: and both to be from roots signifying to protect. So that there is also much uncertainty about these engines.] This account in the SS. is long prior to any thing of the kind among the Greeks and Romans. Previously, the besieged could only be starved out; and hence sieges were very long and tedious. Shalmanezer was 3 yrs. in reducing so inconsiderable a place as Samaria, 2 K. 17:5, 6. Sardanapalus kept Nineveh 7 yrs. Troy was besieged 10 yrs. No wonder that, in consequence of these inventions, Uzziah's name spread far abroad, and struck terror into his enemies.' ED. 'The arts of destruction are often preserved and transmitted from age to age, whilst the chain of those useful inventions which contribute to the happiness of mankind is broken by intervening barbarism.' WHEATON.

Verses 16—23.

Burning incense was the most honorable part of the sacerdotal office.—It is not said how long this occurred before Uzziah's death: but the age of Jotham, when he began to reign, implies, that it was late in Uzziah's reign, before he was smitten with the leprosy: and his reign must be considered as a very prosperous one for his kingdom.—His was lifted up to his destruction; for he transgressed against the LORD his God, and [b] went into the temple of the LORD [c] to burn incense upon the altar of incense.

17 And [d] Azariah the priest went in after him, and with him fourscore priests of the LORD, that were [e] valiant men:

18 And they [f] withstood Uzziah the king, and said unto him, It appertaineth [g] not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the LORD, but [h] to the priests the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense: go out of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed; [i] neither shall it be for thine honor from the LORD God.

19 Then Uzziah was wroth, and had a censer in his hand to burn incense; and while [k] he was wroth with the priests, [l] the leprosy even rose up in his forehead, before the priests in the house of the LORD, from beside the incense-altar.

20 And Azariah the chief priest, and all the priests looked upon him, and, behold, he was leprous in his forehead, and they thrust him out from thence; yea, himself [m] hasted also to go out, because [n] the LORD had smitten him.

21 And [o] Uzziah the king was a leper unto the day of his death, and [p] dwelt in a * several house, being a leper; for he was cut off from the house of the LORD: and Jotham his son was over the king's house, judging the people of the land.

with mighty power; no enemy durst face them, or, at least, could stand before them. Men unarmed can do little in war; Uzziah therefore furnished himself with a great armory, whence his soldiers were supplied with arms offensive and defensive, v. 14. swords are not mentioned, because probably every man had a sword of his own, which he wore constantly. Engines of war, too, were invented, v. 15. What pity it is, that wars and fightings, which come from men's lusts, have made it necessary for cunning men to employ their skill in inventing instruments of death!

V. 16—23. Here is the only blot we find on the name of Uzziah, and it is such a one as lies not on any other of the kings.

I. His sin was, [a direct violation of the constitution, by] invading the priests' office. The good way is one, by-paths are many. His predecessors' sin was, forsaking the temple; his, intruding into it, further than was allowed him, and attempting to burn incense on the altar of God, for which, it is likely, he pretended an extraordinary zeal and affection. See how hard it is to avoid one extreme, and not run into another.

1. The bottom of his sin was, pride of heart, a lust that ruins more than any other whatever. Thus the prosperity of fools, by puffing them up with pride, destroys them. Now that he had done so much business, and won so much honor, he began to think no business, no honor, too great or too good for him; no, not that of the priesthood.

2. Perhaps he fancied the priests did not do their office as they ought, and he could do it better. Or, He observed that the idolatrous kings burnt incense at the altars of their gods; [after the custom of the idolatry of the day, especially the Egyptian, which allowed the king, chosen from the priestly order, to burn incense;] his father did so, and Jeroboam, 1 K. 13: 1. an ambition of which honor was perhaps one thing that tempted them from the house of God, where it was not permitted them.

3. He was opposed by the chief priest and other priests, v. 17, 18. Aaron and his sons were appointed by the law to burn incense, Ex. 30: 7. See Deut. 33: 10. 1 Chr. 23: 13. David had blessed the people, Solomon and Jehoshaphat had prayed with them, and preached to them; Uzziah might have done this, and it would have been to his praise; but burning incense was to be performed by the priests only. The kingly and priestly offices were separated by the law of Moses, not to be united again but in the person of the Messiah. It shall not be for thine honor from the Lord God; more is implied; 'It will be thy disgrace, and it is at thy peril.' The law runs express against all strangers that came nigh, Num. 3: 10.—18: 7. i. e. all not priests. Korah and his accomplices, though Levites, paid dear for offering to burn incense, which was the work of the priests only, Num. 16: 35. The incense of our prayers must be, by faith, put into the hands of our great High Priest, else we cannot expect it should be accepted by God, Rev. 8: 3.

4. He fell into a passion, v. 19. and would not part with the censer.

II. His punishment. If he had submitted, acknowledged his error, and gone back, all had been well; but when he was wroth with the priests, and fell foul on them, then God was wroth with him, and smote him with a plague of leprosy. And some conjecture, with Josephus, [whom see,] that then was the earthquake in the days of Uzziah, Amos 1: 1. and Zech. 14: 5.

1. This sudden stroke ended his controversy with the priests; they thrust him out; nay, himself hasted to go out, because the Lord had smitten him with a disease, in a particular manner a token of his displeasure, and which he knew secluded him from common converse with men, much more from the altar of God. If presumptuous men will not be made to see their error by the judgments of God's mouth, they shall be made to see it by the judgments of his hand. Though he strove with the priests, he would not strive with his Maker.

2. It remained a lasting punishment, v. 21. intended to possess the people with a great veneration for the temple, the priesthood, and other sacred things, they had been apt to think meanly of. While a leper, he was as good as dead, and buried alive; and so the law was, in effect, answered, that the stranger which cometh nigh, shall be put to death.

3. The punishment answered the sin. (1.) Pride was at the bottom, and thus God humbled, and dishonored him. (2.) He invaded the priests' office in contempt of them, and his disease, in a particular manner, subjected him to the inspection and sentence of the priests, Deut. 24: 8. (3.) He thrust himself into the temple of God, whither the priests only had admission, and for that was thrust out of the very courts of the temple, into which the meanest of his subjects, that were ceremonially clean, had free access. (4.) He confronted the priests that faced him herein, and for that the leprosy rose in his forehead, which, in Miriam's case, is compared to her father's spitting in her face, Num. 12: 14. (5.) He invaded the dignity of the priesthood which he had no right to, and is for that deprived even of his royal dignity which he had a right to. They that covet forbidden honors, forfeit allowed ones. Adam, by catching at the tree of knowledge, which he might not eat of, debarred himself from the tree of life, of which he 22 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Uzziah, [q] first and last, did [r] Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, write.

23 So Uzziah [s] slept with his fathers, and [t] they buried him with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings; for they said, He is a leper: and Jotham his son reigned [*] in his stead.

b 2 K. 16:12,13.
c Num. 16:7,17,18,35. 1 K. 12:33. 13: 1—4.
d 1 Chr. 6:10.
e 1 Chr. 12:28. 26:8.
f 16:7—9. 19:2. Jer. 13:18. Matt. 10:18,28. 14:4. 2 Cor. 5:16. Gal. 2:11.
g Num. 16:40,46—48. 18:7.
h Ex. 30:7,8. Heb. 5:1.
i 1 Sam. 2:30. Dan. 4:37. John 5:44. Jam. 2:1.
k 16:10. 25:16.
l Num. 12:10. 2 K. 5:27.
m Esth. 6:12.
n Lev. 14:34. Deut. 28:22,35.
o 2 K. 15:5.
p Lev. 13:46. Num. 5:2,3. 12:15. 2 K. 7:3.
* Heb. free.
q 9:29. 12:15.
r Is. 1:1. 6:1.
s 2 K. 15:6,7.
t 18. 21:20. 28:27. 33:20.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 16—23. It is written, as with a sun-beam, that prosperity is most dangerous to fallen man.—Extremes are on every side. To avoid enthusiasm and credulity, men become profane and infidel; and, in shunning infidelity, they rush into superstition. Those who are not chargeable with immorality or gross profaneness, may yet provoke the Lord by their hypocrisy or self-righteous pride.—We are not indeed, at present, kept at that awful distance from sacred things, which the people of God formerly were: yet let us not suppose, that we are in no danger of offending in this way. The sacred ministry may be intruded into, with a presumption and impiety bordering on sacrilege and blasphemy; while mercenary and ungodly men make those professions, engagements, and protestations, in the presence of God, 'for filthy lucre's sake,' which they deride as enthusiastic or superstitious! The Lord's table may be approached in hypocrisy, pride, unbelief, and impenitency; or even as a step to preferment, by infidels and debauchees who are the slaves to every lust! and in many ways men may be guilty of most awful and presumptuous profanations. Alas! few are found, who are valiant men, that dare, in meekness and faithfulness, oppose the powerful who attempt the most scandalous profanations; and venture all the consequences of their displeasure in refusing to concur in them. But the Lord will assuredly stand by those few, and mark their opposers with evident tokens of his anger. SCOTT.

patient and quiet submission to this severe rebuke, and to all its most painful consequences, (as they must have been to so honorable and prosperous a monarch,) forms no inconsiderable proof of his repentance; and implies that his retirement was well improved, and his death happy. (2 K. 15:1—7.) SCOTT.

CHAP. XXVII.

Jotham reigns well and prospers, 1, 2. His buildings, 3, 4. He subdues the Ammonites, 5, 6. He dies, and is succeeded by Ahaz, 7—9.

JOTHAM was [a] twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Jerushah, the daughter of Zadok.

2 And [b] he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Uzziah did: howbeit [c] he entered not into the temple of the LORD. And [d] the people did yet corruptly.

3 He built the [e] high gate of the house of the LORD, and on the wall of * Ophel he built much.

4 Moreover [f] he built cities in [g] the mountains of Judah, and in the forests he built castles and towers.

5 He fought also with [h] the king of the Ammonites, and prevailed against them. And the children of Ammon gave him the same year an hundred talents of silver, and ten thousand measures of wheat, and ten thousand of barley. † So much did the children of Ammon pay unto him, both the second year, and the third.

6 So Jotham became mighty, because he ‡ prepared his ways before the LORD his God.

7 ¶ Now [i] the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all his wars, and his ways, lo, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah.

8 He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem.

9 And [k] Jotham slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Ahaz reigns very wickedly, 1—4. He is defeated with terrible slaughter of his army by the kings of Syria and Israel, 5—7. The Israelites lead to Samaria an immense number of captives, 8. The people are induced, by the remonstrance of a prophet, and the interference of the princes, to treat them kindly and send them home, 9—15. Ahaz, attacked by the Edomites and Philistines, sends to the king of Assyria, but receives no benefit from his assistance, 16—21. In his distress he adds to his idolatries, 22—25. He dies, and is succeeded by Hezekiah, 26, 27.

* AHAZ was twenty years old when he began to reign; and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: but he did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD, [b] like David his father;

2 For [c] he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made also [d] molten images for [e] Baalim.

3 Moreover he § burnt incense in [f] the valley of the son of Hinnom, and [g] burnt his children in the fire, [h] after the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

CHAP. XXVII. V. 1—9. Not much more is related here of Jotham, than before, 2 K. 15: 32, &c.

1. He reigned well: did what was right in the sight of the Lord; prepared his ways before Him, v. 6. i. e. walked circumspectly and with much caution. Or, he established or fixed his ways before the Lord, i. e. walked steadily and constantly in the way of duty, was uniform, and resolute in it; not like some before him, who, though they had some good in them, lost their credit by inconstancy, and inconsistency. What was amiss in his father he amended in himself, v. 2. would not imitate what he did amiss; but took warning by his fate. Let us not imitate even the best, farther than they did well, but take warning by their falls to walk the more circumspectly. What was amiss in his people he could not prevail to amend, v. 2. Perhaps it reflects some blame on him, that he was wanting in his part toward the reformation. Men may be very good themselves, and yet not have courage and zeal to do what they might to reform others. However, it certainly reflects great blame on the people, that they did not what they might have done to improve the advantages of so good a reign: they had good instructions, and a good example, but would not be reformed; so that even in the reign of their good kings, as well as the bad ones, they were treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath.

2. He prospered, and became truly reputable. He built, conquered, and became mighty, v. 3—6. in wealth, power, and influence on the neighboring nations, who courted his friendship, and feared his displeasure; and this he got by preparing his ways before the Lord his God. The more steadfast we are in religion, the more mighty we are both to resist evil, and to do good.

3. He finished his course too soon, but with honor; he died in the midst of his days, v. 8. but, to balance that, outlived not his reputation, as his last three predecessors did. His wars abroad and ways at home, were so glorious, that they were recorded in the book of the kings of Israel, as well as the kings of Judah, v. 7. The last words of the ch. convey the painful intelligence, that Ahaz reigned in his stead, whose character, in all respects, was the reverse. When the wealth and power wise men have done good with, devolve on fools that will do hurt with them, it shall be for a lamentation.

CHAP. XXVIII. V. 1—5. This ch. is the history of the reign of Ahaz, the son of Jotham; a bad reign, which helped to augment the fierce anger of the Lord. Here we have him, in these few verses,

1. Wretchedly corrupted and debauched. He had had a good education, but all instruction was lost on him, v. 1, 2. He forsook the temple, and sacrificed and burnt incense on the hills, as if those would place him nearer heaven; and under every green tree, as if those would signify the protection and influence of Heaven by their shade and dropping. To complete his wickedness, as one perfectly divested of all natural affection as well as religion, and perfectly devoted to the service and interest of the great enemy of mankind, he burnt his children in the fire to Moloch, v. 3. not thinking it enough to dedicate them to that infernal fiend by causing them to pass through the fire. See what an absolute sway the prince of the power of the air bears among the children of disobedience!

2. Wretchedly spoiled and made a prey of, v. 5. The people suffered, their blood was shed, their country wasted, their families ruined; for when they had a good king, though they did, corruptly, ch. 27: 2. yet then his goodness sheltered them; but now they had a bad one, all their defence was departed, and an inundation of judgments broke in.

a 2 K. 15:32,33. 1 Chr. 3:12. Is. 1:1. Hos. 1:1. Mic. 1:1. Matt. 1:9. Joatham.
b 26:4. 2 K. 15:34.
c 26:16—21. Ps. 119:120. Acts 5:13.
d 2 K. 15:35.
e 23:15,20. Jer. 20:2.
* Or, the tower. 33:14. Neh. 3:26.
f 11:5—10. 14:7. 26:9,10.
g Josh. 14:12,13. Luke 1:39.
h 20:1. Judg. 11:4,&c. 2 Sam. 10:1—14. Jer. 49:1—6.
† Heb. This.
‡ Or, established. 19:3.
i 20:34. 26:22,23. 32:32,33.
k 2 K. 15:38.
a 2 K. 16:1,2. 1 Chr. 3:13. Is. 1:1. 7:1—12. Hos. 1:1. Mic. 1:1. Matt. 1:9. Achaz.
b 17:3.
c 21:6. 22:3,4. 1 K. 16:31—33. 2 K. 10:26—28.
d Ex. 34:17. Lev. 19:4.
e Judg. 2:11,13.
§ Or, offered sacrifice.
f 2 K. 23:10. Jer. 7,31,32. 19:2—6,13.
g 33:6. Lev. 18:21. 2 K. 16:3. Ps. 106. 37,38. Jer. 2:34. Ez. 16:20,21. Mic. 6:7.
h 33:2. Deut. 12:31.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The severest judgments of God have mercy connected with them, either to the persons themselves, or to others, who thence learn caution and circumspection.—It ought to be the constant aim of every one of us, to imitate the faith, piety, equity, kindness, self-denial, patience, and meekness, of those servants of God with whom we are acquainted, and of whom we read or hear; and carefully to avoid their failings, and the sins into which they have been betrayed: but the reverse of this is general, and natural to mankind.—Many pious men have not fortitude or vigor to combat the difficulties, which must be expected by those, who attempt reformation, in opposition to inveterate prejudices, errors, superstitions, and immoralities; yet all in public stations should remember, that this is incumbent on them, and forms that improvement of their talents, which God requires.—In righteous displeasure against those who hate to be reformed, the Lord often prematurely removes wise, prosperous, and pious rulers in church or state; and sends others, whose follies and vices severely punish a people, who did not value their mercies till they were withdrawn. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXVII. V. 1, 2. The general character of the people, as to unrighteousness, fraud, oppression, and other crimes; as well as their ungodliness, hypocrisy, or idolatrous worship, seems to be implied. SCOTT

Verse 3.

Ophel.] This seems to have been a cliff, or high rock, where a tower and wall were built to fortify the city. ID.

Verse 5.

(M. R.) It is probable that, at the end of three years, the Ammonites recovered strength, and refused to pay the tribute. SCOTT.

Verse 6.

It has been observed, that most, if not all, the pious kings of Judah, have some evil thing laid to their charge: but Jotham has not; except as 'the people did corruptly,' and the high places were not demolished. ID.

4 He [i] sacrificed also, and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 Wherefore the LORD [k] his God [l] delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria; and they smote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to * Damascus: and he also was delivered into the hand of the king of Israel, who smote him with a great slaughter.

6 For [m] Pekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judah [n] an hundred and twenty thousand in one day, which were all † valiant men: [o] because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers.

7 And Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maaseiah the king's son, and Azrikam the governor of the house, and Elkanah that was ‡ next to the king.

8 And the children of Israel [p] carried away captive of their [q] brethren, two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters; and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria.

[Practical Observations.]

9 ¶ But a prophet of the LORD was there, whose name was Oded; and [r] he went out before the host that came to Samaria, and said unto them, Behold, [s] because the LORD God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and ye have slain them in a rage that [t] reacheth up unto heaven.

10 And now ye purpose to [u] keep under the children of Judah and Jerusalem for bondmen and bond-women unto you: but are there [x] not with you, even i Lev. 26:30. Deut. 12:2,3. 2 K. 16:4.

k 36:5. Ex. 20:2,3.
l 24:24. 33:11. 36:17. Judg. 2:14. 2 K. 16:5. Is. 7:1,6.

V. 6—15. We have here,

I. Treacherous Judah under the rebukes of God's providence, and they very severe. Never was such bloody work made among them, since they were a kingdom, and by Israelites too. Ahaz walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and the king of Israel was the instrument God made use of for his punishment. It is just with God to make those our plagues, whom we make our patterns, or make ourselves partners with in sin. A war broke out between Judah and Israel, in which Judah was worsted. For, 1. Vast numbers were slain in battle, v. 6. and some of the first rank; the king's son for one. He had sacrificed some of his sons to Moloch, justly therefore is this sacrificed to the divine vengeance. Another that was next the king, his friend, the prime minister of state, or perhaps next him in the battle, so that the king himself had a narrow escape, v. 7. 2. There was a great captivity of women and children, v. 8. When the army in the field was routed, the cities, towns, and country villages, were all easily stripped.

II. Even victorious Israel under the rebukes of God's word, for their bad principle in making war with Judah, and their bad use of their success; and the good effect of this rebuke.

1. God's prophet tells them how they came by this victory, of which they were so proud; it was not because God favored them, or they merited it at his hand, but because He was wroth with Judah, and made them the rod of his indignation. Not for your righteousness, be it known to you, but for their wickedness, (Deut. 9: 5.) they are broken off; therefore be not ye high-minded, but fear, lest God also spare not you, Rom. 11: 20, 21.

2. He charges them with the abuse of the power God had given them over their brethren. They understand not what victory is, who think it gives them authority to do what they will; as it is impolitic not to use a victory, so it is impious to abuse it. The conquerors are here reproved, (1.) For the cruelty of their slaughter in the field. They had indeed shed the blood of war, in war; which is supposed lawful, but it turned into sin to them, because they did it from enmity to their brethren, and with a barbarous fury, a rage reaching up to heaven, i. e. that cries to God for vengeance against such bloody men. They that serve God's justice, if they do it with rage and a spirit of revenge, make themselves obnoxious to it, and forfeit the honor of acting for Him: the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God. (2.) For their imperious treatment of their prisoners. 'Ye now purpose to keep them under, to use them or sell them as slaves, though your brethren, and free-born Israelites.' God notices what men purpose, as well as what they say and do.

3. He reminds them of their own sins, by which they also were obnoxious to God's wrath; appeals to their own consciences, and to the notorious evidence of the thing. This is intended as a check to their triumph in their success; and to their severity toward their brethren. It ill becomes sinners to be cruel.

4. He commands them to release the prisoners, and send them home carefully, v. 11. for, having sinned, there is no other way of escaping the fierce wrath of God.

5. The princes, hereupon, stood up, and told them that came from the war, plainly, they should not bring their captives to Samaria, v. 12, 13. They had sin enough already to answer for. In this they were obedient to the word of God by his prophet, and compassionate to their brethren, through the tender mercy of God; for He regarded the affliction of this poor people, Ps. 106: 44, 46.

6. The compliance of the soldiers (v. 14.) with the resolution of the princes, in which they show-

* Heb. Darmasek.
m 2 K. 15:27,37. Is. 7:4,5,9. 9:21.
n 13:17.
† Heb. sons of valor.
o 15:2. Deut. 6:14,15. 28:15,25. 29:24—28. 31:16,17. 32:30. Josh. 23:16. Is. 24:5,6. Jer. 2:19.
‡ Heb. the second to.
p Deut. 28:25,41.
q 11:4. Acts 7:26. 13:26.
r 19:1,2. 25:15,16. 1 K. 20:13,22,42. 2 K. 20:14,15. s 5. Judg. 3:8. Ps. 69:26. Is. 10:5. 47:6. Ez. 25:12,15. 26:2. Ob. 10—16. Zech. 1:15. t Gen. 11:4. Ezra 9:6. Rev. 18:5.
u Lev. 25:39—46.
x Jer. 25:29. Rom. 12:20,21. 1 Pet. 4:17,18.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—8. Those, who succeed eminently wise and pious men in the same important station, seldom enter into their views or imitate their conduct, in 'doing that which is right in the sight of the LORD:' nay, frequently they seem ambitious of being as opposite to them as possible; especially when they run into wickedness, after having received a pious education. (Note, 2 K. 21: 3.)—They who are groaning under the oppression of cruel tyrants, or suffering from the effects of their infatuated counsels, are called on to humble themselves before God for their own sins, to submit to his justice, and to seek deliverance from his mercy. On the other hand, if we are governed with equity and clemency, and live in peace and prosperity, through the prudent and successful administration of our rulers; we should bless God for his mercies, and show forth our gratitude in our daily conduct: and it is the constant duty of us all to pray for those who are, or shall be, placed over us, that they may be the instruments of God's goodness and mercy to us, and not of his wrath.—Tempters and examples of iniquity are often employed as scourges; and the sentence, which God righteously denounces, man may unrighteously execute. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXVIII. V. 5. Had Ahaz been born and educated a heathen, he might perhaps have escaped remarkable judgments: but, as he was an apostate, 'the LORD his God' delivered him to be punished, into the hands of the Syrians and Israelites. (2 K. 16:5—9.) His people also were involved in the same guilt, and in the same punishment. Thus, the sins and sufferings of kings and people resemble the case of the human body; in which the head must share the sufferings of the members, and the members those of the head, by reason of that unity which subsists between them. (2 Sam. 24:1, 2. P. O. 1—9.) SCOTT.

Verses 6—8.

This is the greatest slaughter of the men of Judah that we read of, (13:17.) and must be ascribed to some supernatural terror or confusion. ID.

Verses 9—11.

This was the Lord's message to the conquerors by his prophet; and it naturally leads us to consider some questions concerning slavery.—Let it then be remembered, that there do not at present subsist any such distinctions between nations, as God, for wise reasons, was pleased, for a time, to establish between Israel and the Gentiles; but every man is now our neighbor, and in one sense our brother; our fellow man, if not our fellow Christian.—They indeed attempt too much who argue, that slavery in all cases is contrary to scriptural principles; and this has given its advocates some advantage in the controversy. But no man, well acquainted with the Word of God, needs fear to maintain, that the modern slave-trade stands in diametrical opposition to both the law and the gospel; as well as to the true interests of mankind. Those who have forfeited their lives by crimes against the state, have also forfeited their natural right to liberty; and might justly be sold for slaves, by public authority, declaring the crimes for which they were thus punished: [not in revenge, but that they may be restrained, by lawful power, from further injuring others; while, at the same time, they are placed in circumstances where their own reform and betterment may be attended to. ED.] Some other criminals, and some kind of fraudulent debtors, might be sold for a limited time, consistently with equity. Perhaps some prisoners taken in wars, evidently undertaken by all concerned from avarice and cruelty, might thus be punished, without transgressing the law of God; for the policy of it forms quite a distinct question. But to seize, enslave, and sell a fellow creature, who has, by no criminality known to us, or cognizable by us, merited so severe a treatment, must in all cases be contrary to the law of 'loving our neighbor as ourselves.' The poor Africans cannot be proved to be either criminals, debtors, or prisoners taken in rapacious or revengeful wars, waged by them against those who enslave them: on the contrary, they appear generally to be persons, who have been kidnapped from their relatives, or bought of them; or taken with you, sins against [y] the LORD your God?

11 Now hear me therefore, and [z] deliver the captives again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren: for [a] the fierce wrath of the LORD is upon you.

12 Then certain of [b] the heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, and Jehizkiah the son of Shallum, and Amasa the son of Hadlai, [c] stood up against them that came from the war,

13 And said unto them, Ye shall not bring in the captives hither: for whereas we have offended against the LORD already, ye intend to [d] add more to our sins and to our trespass: for our trespass is great, and there is fierce wrath against Israel.

14 So the armed men left the captives and the spoil, before the princes and all the congregation.

15 And the men which were [e] expressed by name rose up, and took the captives, and with the spoil [f] clothed all that were naked among them, and arrayed them, and shod them, and [g] gave them to eat and to drink, and anointed them, and carried all the feeble of them upon asses, and brought them to Jericho, [h] the city of palm trees, to their brethren: then they returned to Samaria.

16 ¶ At that time [i] did king Ahaz send unto the kings of Assyria to help him.

17 For again [k] the Edomites had come and smitten Judah, and carried away [*] captives.

18 The [l] Philistines also had invaded the cities of the low country, and of the south of Judah, and had taken [m] Beth-shemesh, and [n] Ajalon, and [o] Gederoth, and [p] Shocho with the villages thereof, and [q] Timnah with the villages thereof, Gimzo also and the villages thereof: and they dwelt there.

19 For [r] the LORD brought Judah low, [s] because of Ahaz king ed a more true, heroic bravery than in taking the prisoners. It is a great honor for any man, to yield to the authority of reason and religion against his interest. The princes very generously sent home the poor captives well accommodated, v. 15. Those who hope to find mercy with God, must learn hence with what tenderness to carry themselves toward those who lie at their mercy.

V. 16—27. I. Here is the great distress, the kingdom of Ahaz was reduced to, for his sin. In general, 1. The Lord brought Judah low, v. 19. who had lately been very high in wealth, and power; they that will not humble themselves, God will justly humble by his judgments. Iniquity brings men low, Ps. 106: 43. 2. Ahaz made Judah naked. As his sin debased them, so it exposed them. It made them naked to their shame; naked to their danger; Ex. 32: 25. Sin strips men. In particular, the Edomites, to be revenged for Amaziah's cruel treatment of them, ch. 25. smote Judah, and carried off many captives, v. 17. The Philistines also insulted them, took and kept possession of several cities and villages that lay near them, v. 18. and so were revenged for Uzziah's incursions, ch. 26: 6. And, to show that it was purely the sin of Ahaz that brought the Philistines on his country, in the very year he died, the prophet Isaiah foretold the destruction of the Philistines by his son, Isa. 14: 28, 29.

II. The addition Ahaz made both to the national distress, and the national guilt.

1. To the distress, by making court to strange kings, in hopes of relief, v. 16. he could not confide in God, therefore at a vast expense got an interest in Assyria. He pillaged the house of God, and the king's house, and squeezed the princes for money to hire these foreign forces, v. 21. nor could he make any interest in them but with this. It is often found, that wicked men themselves have no real affection for those that revolt to them, nor care to do them a kindness. But what did Ahaz get by the king of Assyria? He came, but distressed him, and strengthened him not, v. 20. helped him not, v. 21. These forces quartered on his country, and so impoverished and weakened it; they grew insolent and imperious, and created him great vexation.

2. To the guilt, by making court to strange gods, in hopes of relief, v. 22. A brand of infamy is here set on him for it; This is that king Ahaz, that wretched man, who was the scandal of the house of David, and the curse and plague of his genera-

y 5.
z Is. 58:6. Jer. 34:14,15. Heb. 13:1—3. a Ezra. 10:14. Matt. 5:7. 7:2. Jam. 2:13.
b 1 Chr. 28:1.
c Jer. 26:6.
d Num. 32:14. Josh. 22:17,18. Matt. 23:32,35. Rom. 2:5.
e 12.
f Job 31:15—23. Is. 58:7. Matt. 25: 35—45. Acts 9:39. 1 Tim. 5:10. Jam. 2:15,16. 1 John 3:17,18. g 2 K. 6:22. Prov. 25:21,22. Luke 6; 27. Rom. 12:20,21.
h Deut. 34:3. Judg. 1:16.
i 2 K. 16:5—7. Is. 7:1—9,17.
k 25:11,12. Lev. 26:18.
* Heb. a captivity.
l Ez. 16:27,57.
m Josh. 15:10. 1 Sam. 6:9,18. n 11:10. Aijalon.
o Josh. 15:41. p Josh. 15:48. Socoh.
q Judg. 14:1. Timnath.
r Deut. 28:43. 1 Sam. 2:7. Job 40:12. Ps. 106:41—43. Prov. 29:23.
s Hos. 5:11. Mic. 6:16.

prisoners in wars, excited on purpose to supply that infamous market. If any of them be criminals, the European merchants know it not: they have no authority from either God or man to be their executioners; and their descendants certainly are not criminals. Were it indeed true, (which is far from being the case,) that if not bought by the Europeans, they would be slain by the conqueror; we need only answer, 'You must not "do evil, that good may come."' . . . If you have no other way of rescuing them, you had better leave them to fight their own battles, and treat their captives as they please, without interfering: and you certainly would do so, if avarice were no more concerned in the business than humanity is.' It is true, that the Scripture throughout speaks of slavery as actually existing: but the judicial law was very distinct from the moral law, as has before been shown. (Note, Ex. 21:1—6.) [and an account of Heb. Slavery, p. 661. vol. I.] Like other municipal laws, it aimed to prevent those evils, which originated from abuses and human passions, and which could not be terminated except by constant miracle; as in the case of divorces, [and polygamy.] The apostles and evangelists were preachers, not legislators; they were not empowered to subvert the foundations of civil government throughout the world; and they found slavery universally and inseparably interwoven with them. Every one must therefore perceive what confusion, what reproach, and what additional enmity to Christianity, must have been occasioned by such an attempt. They indeed laid down the principles, which, when reduced to practice, will infallibly annihilate slavery: and, taking things as they then stood in civil society, they taught all Christians, how to accommodate themselves to their stations, consistently with their profession, even if they were slaves, and slaves in a heathen family. [See 'Wayland's Elts. Mor. Science,' and 'Channing on Slavery.']—The question is, therefore, to be decided not by facts, but by The moral Law of God, and the tendency of the GOSPEL. [Christ says, 'If a man strike thee on one cheek, turn the other,' but this does not give a right to strike. Paul says 'Obey your masters,' but, 'as to the Lord,' i. e. from duty to God; he does not touch the abstract question of rights. See as above. ED.] The practice could not then be regularly opposed, without creating convulsions in society; nor can it ever be successfully rectified by preachers: it is the work of enlightened, humane, and pious legislators.—Individual believers under both dispensations possessed slaves: they took matters as they were; and treated their slaves with such equity and humanity, as rendered it a kindness to them, to take them out of ungodly families. And a pious West Indian, who laments the enormities which he cannot but witness, arising from this unnatural trade, and who sincerely wishes and prays for its entire abolition, may, in the meantime, deem it better, quietly to set his neighbors an example of treating slaves with brotherly lenity and kindness, conducive to their real happiness, than indiscriminately to liberate them: when perhaps it might occasion fatal effects on the minds of the other planters and their slaves; if this were done by an individual, in opposition to all his neighbors, and without the interference of legal authority. When strangers are brought so far from home, and are not able to return, a truly pious and humane man may render the yoke tolerable to them. But, who had a right by compulsion to bring his unoffending brethren so far from their native land? And what proportion do pious and humane persons, in most communities, bear to those of an opposite character? A succession of very wise and good kings, if that could be ensured, might render even absolute monarchy a blessing. But, while mankind are what they are, men of reflection, and lovers of their brethren, will never be friends to despotism in kingdoms, or in families: and absolute monarchs, and the holders of slaves, (except of such as are condemned, by an equitable sentence, to that condition, as the punishment of their crimes,) will ever be justly exposed to the determined opposition of mankind, even when they do not merit detestation by any direct abuse of power. SCOTT.

Verses 12—15.

It is remarkable, that Pekah is not mentioned in this transaction concerning the prisoners: but probably he was at the head of the army, when the prophet addressed them. (6)—The courage of these princes, who ventured thus determinedly to oppose the whole army, insolent with victory and enriched with booty, was admirable and highly commendable; and the compliance of the army was very wonderful, and perhaps unparalleled in history; and the humane treatment, and the carrying back of the captives to their brethren, deserve all possible applause.—The narrative shows, that even Israel, amidst all their idolatries and iniquities, had not forgotten, and were not disposed to question, the divine authority of the law of Moses. ID.

Verses 16—18.

(2 K. 16.7—9.) 'This is the first time we read of the king of Assyria, excepting 2 K. 15:19. where Pul king of Assyria is mentioned as a powerful prince, who invaded the Israelites. Before his time, we read nothing of the Assyrian monarchy, which grew by degrees to its greatness from small beginnings. . . . If their large empire had been of long standing, we should in all probability have heard of them before this time, as we do often afterwards.' Patrick. (Note, 2 Kings 15:19, 20.) —The Philistines, &c. (18) M. R. 26:6.—2 K. 18:8. Is. 14:28—32. ID.

Verse 19.

He made Judah naked.] The Lord Himself was the glory and defence of Judah: but Ahaz, by seducing his subjects from his worship of [t] Israel; for he [u] made Judah naked, and transgressed sore against the LORD.

20 And [x] Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria came unto him, and [y] distressed him, but strengthened him not.

21 For Ahaz [z] took away a portion out of the house of the LORD, and out of the house of the king, and of the princes, and gave it unto the king of Assyria: but he helped him not.

22 And [a] in the time of his distress did he trespass yet more against the LORD: [b] this is that king Ahaz.

23 For [c] he sacrificed unto the gods of * Damascus, which smote him; and he said, [d] Because the gods of the kings of Syria help them, therefore will I [e] sacrifice to them, that they may help me. But [f] they were the ruin of him, and of all Israel.

24 And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and [g] cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God, and [h] shut up the doors of the house of the LORD; and [i] he made him altars in every corner of Jerusalem.

25 And in every several city of Judah he made high places to † burn incense unto other gods, and provoked to anger the LORD God of his fathers.

26 ¶ Now [k] the rest of his acts, and of all his ways, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

27 And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the
B. C. 726. city, even in Jerusalem: but [l] they brought him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel: and Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XXIX.

Hezekiah reigns well, opens the doors of the temple, and exhorts the priests and Levites to prepare every thing for the worship of God, 1—11. They sanctify themselves, and cleanse the temple and its vessels, 12—19. Hezekiah offers solemn sacrifices; and the Levites show more zeal than the priests, 20—36.

[a] HEZEKIAH began to reign when he was five and twenty years old, and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Abijah, the daughter of [b] Zechariah.

2 And he [c] did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father had done.

3 He, [d] in the first year of his reign, in the first month, [e] opened the doors of the house of the LORD, and repaired them.

4 And he brought in the priests and the Levites, and gathered them together into the [f] east-street,

5 And said unto them, Hear me, ye Levites; [g] Sanctify now

t 21:2.
u Gen. 3:7,11. Ex. 32:25. Rev. 3:17, 18. 16:15.
x 2 K. 15:29. 16:7—10. Tiglath-pileser. 1 Chr. 5:26. Hos. 5:13.
y 2 K. 17:5. Is. 7:20. 30:3,16. Jer. 2:37. z 12:9. 2 K. 18:15,16. Prov. 20:25. a 33:12. Ps. 50:15. Is. 1:5. Ez. 21: 13. Hos. 5:15. Rev. 16:9—11. b Esth. 7:5. Ps. 52:7.
c 25:14. 2 K. 16:12,13.
* Heb. Darmesek.
d Hab. 1:11.
e Jer. 44:15—18.
f Jer. 44:20—28.
g 2 K. 16:17,18. 25:13,&c.
h 29:3,7.
i 33:3—5. Jer. 2:28. Hos. 12:11. Acts 17:16,23.
† Or, offer.
k 20:34. 27:7—9. 2 K. 16:19,20.
l 21:20. 26:23. 33:20. 1 Sam. 2:30. Prov. 10:7. a 2 K. 18:1—3. 1 Chr. 3:13. Is. 1:1. Hos. 1:1. Mic. 1:1. Matt. 1:9,10. Ezekias.
b 26:5. Is. 8:2.
c 28:1. 34:2. 2 K. 18:3.
d 34:3. Ec. 9:10. Matt. 6:33.
e 28:24. 2 K. 16:14—18.
f 32:6. Neh. 3:29. Jer. 19:2.
g 35:6. Ex. 19:10,15. 1 Chr. 15:12.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 9—27. It is happy, when the authority of God's Word, or the expostulations of his ministers, deter men from persisting in mercenary cruelties; or excite legislators and princes to put a stop to their iniquity. If 'he shall have judgment without mercy, who has showed no mercy;' what will be his doom, who has been guilty of the most flagrant injustice to the inoffensive stranger, merely because he had it in his power to oppress him! Surely, in such a case, while the ministers of the Gospel warn, exhort, and beseech the oppressors to deliver the captives up, whom they have taken of their brethren: the legislators and rulers of every state should peremptorily refuse admission into their dominions, to those bond-slaves, whom men have so unjustly reduced under their subjection. For we have offended against the Lord already, and this connivance must add still more to our sin and to our trespass, till fierce wrath come upon the nation. Nay, if the poor captives, who have been violently torn from their native country, and who have no power to return to their beloved relatives, could, when dismissed and kindly treated, be carried back again to them, it would be a conduct becoming the disciples of Christ; it might tend to render the name of CHRISTIAN respectable in those distant regions, where the cruelty, treachery, and avarice of those who bear it, have rendered it odious; and thus at length prepare the way for the propagation of the Gospel among these poor benighted heathens. And, instead of injuring the interests of the community, or of any individuals; (except the most atrocious of the oppressors, who have no right to be considered;) we may venture, on general scriptural principles, to foretell, that above all other measures, it would tend the most effectually to the lengthening of our tranquillity and prosperity. (Dan. 4: 27.)—But if those, who commiserate their oppressed fellow creatures, long to see their grievous servitude terminated, they must unite in prayer for the divine blessing on the exertions of those, who honorably stand forth in this benevolent cause. For, except the Lord touch the hearts of such as are to decide on it, every exertion will be in vain. SCOTT.

and service, had degraded them, stripped them of all their ornament, deprived them of all their protection, and left them defenceless and contemptible in the hands of their feeblest enemies. (M. R.) SCOTT.

Verses 20, 21.

(Note, 2 K. 16:7—9.) Tiglath-pilezer 'did come to his assistance against the king of Syria, . . . he took Damascus, carried the people captive, and delivered Ahaz from the power of the Syrians. . . . But this did Ahaz little good; for he . . . rather weakened him by exhausting his treasures, and by destroying Samaria, whereby the way was opened to invade his country the more easily in the next reign. Thus many countries, in latter ages, by calling in the assistance of some foreign prince against their enemies, have been overthrown and conquered by those who came to their help.' Patrick. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXIX. V. 3—5. It seems, public worship at the temple was entirely suppressed and prohibited, during the latter years of Ahaz.

yourselves, and [h] sanctify the house of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthiness out of the holy place.

6 For [i] our fathers have trespassed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD our God, and [k] have forsaken him, and have [l] turned away their faces from the habitation of the LORD, and [*] turned their backs.

7 Also [m] they have shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burned incense, nor offered burnt-offerings in the holy place unto the God of Israel.

8 [n] Wherefore the wrath of the LORD was upon Judah and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them to [†] trouble, [o] to astonishment, and to hissing, as ye see with your eyes.

9 For, lo, [p] our fathers have fallen by the sword, and our sons and our daughters and our wives are in captivity for this.

10 Now [q] it is in my heart [r] to make a covenant with the LORD God of Israel, [s] that his fierce wrath may turn away from us.

11 My sons, be not now [‡] negligent: for [t] the LORD hath chosen you to stand before him, to serve him, and that ye should minister unto him, and [§] burn incense.

12 Then the Levites arose, Mahath the son of Amasai, and Joel the son of Azariah, of the sons of the [u] Kohathites: and [x] of the sons of Merari; Kish the son of Abdi, and Azariah the son of Jehalelel: and [y] of the Gershonites; Joah the son of Zimmah, and Eden the son of Joah:

13 And of the sons of [z] Elizaphan; Shimri, and Jeiel: and of the sons of [a] Asaph; Zechariah, and Mattaniah:

14 And of the sons of [b] Heman; Jehiel, and Shimei: and of the sons of [c] Jeduthun; Shemaiah, and Uzziel.

15 And they gathered their brethren, and [d] sanctified themselves, and came, according to the commandment of the king, [‖] by the words of the LORD, [e] to cleanse the house of the LORD.

16 And the priests went into [f] the inner part of the house of the LORD, to cleanse it, and brought out [g] all the uncleanness that they found in the temple of the LORD, into the court of the house of the LORD. And the Levites took it, to carry it out abroad into the brook [h] Kidron.

17 Now they began on the first day of the first month to sanctify, and on the eighth day of the month came they to [i] the porch of the LORD: so they sanctified the house of the LORD in eight days; and in [k] the sixteenth day of the first month they made an end.

18 Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and said, We have cleansed all the house of the LORD, and [l] the altar of burnt-offering, with all the vessels thereof, and [m] the shew-bread table, with all the vessels thereof.

19 Moreover, [n] all the vessels, which king Ahaz in his reign did cast away in his transgression, have we prepared and sanctified: and, behold, they are before the altar of the LORD.

20 ¶ Then Hezekiah the king [°] rose early, and gathered the rulers of the city, and went up h 16, 34:3—8. Ex. 36:25. Matt. 21: 12,13. 1 Cor. 3:16,17. 2 Cor. 6:16. 7:1. Eph. 5:26,27.

i 28:2—4,23—25. 34:21. Ezra 5:12. 9: 7. Neh. 9:16,32. Jer. 16:19. 44:21, 22. Lam. 5:7. Dan. 9:8,16. Matt. 10:37. 23:30—32. k Jer. 2:13,17.
l Jer. 2:27. Ez. 8:16.
* Heb. given the neck.
m 28:24. Lev. 24:2—8. 2 K. 16:17,18. n 24:18. 34:24,25. 36:14—16. Deut. 28:15—20.
† Heb. commotion.
o Lev. 26:32. Deut. 28:59. 1 K. 9:8. Jer. 18:16. 19:8. 25:9,18. 29:18. p 28:5—8,17. Lev. 26:17.
q 6:7,8.
r 15:12,13. 23:16. 34:30—32. Ezra 10:3. Neh. 9:38. 10:1,&c. Jer. 34: 15,16. 50:5. 2 Cor. 8:5.
s 2 K. 23:3,26.
‡ Or, deceived. Gal. 6:7,8.
t Num. 3:6—9. 8:6—14. 18:2—6. Deut. 10:8.
§ Or, offer sacrifice. Num. 16:35—40. 18:7.
u Ex. 6:16—25. Num. 4:2,&c. 1 Chr. 6:16—18. 15:5. 23:12—20.
x 1 Chr. 6:19,44. 15:6. 23:21—23.
y 1 Chr. 6:17,20,21. 15:7. 23:7—11.
z Lev. 10:4. Elzaphan. 1 Chr. 15:8.
a 1 Chr. 6:39. 15:17. 25:2.
b 1 Chr. 6:33. 15:19.
c 1 Chr. 25:1,3,6.
d 5.
‖ Or, in the business. 30:12.
e 1 Chr. 23:28.
f 3:8. 5:7. Ex. 26:33,34. 1 K. 6:19 20. Heb. 9:2—8,23,24.
g Ex. 36:29. Matt. 23:27.
h 15:16. 2 K. 23:4—6. John 18:1. Cedron.
i 7. 3:4. 1 K. 6:3. 1 Chr. 28:11. k Ex. 12:2—8.
l 4:1—8.
m 4:8. 13:11.
n 28:24.
o Gen. 22:3. Ex. 24:4. Josh. 6:12. Jer. 25:4.

V. 12—19. We have here busy work, good work, needful work, the cleansing of the house of the Lord.

Several of the Levites, employed in this work are here named, (v. 12, 13.) we cannot think merely because chief in place, for then surely the high priest, or some of the heads of the courses of the priests, would have been mentioned; but because more zealous and active than the rest. They began on the first day of the first month, a happy beginning of the new year, and that promised a good year; thus should every year begin with the reformation of what is amiss, and the purging away, by repentance, of all the defilements contracted the foregoing year. Though the vessels of the sanctuary may be profaned for a while, God will find a time and way to sanctify them. Neither his ordinances, nor his people, shall be suffered to fail for ever.

V. 20—36. The temple being cleansed, we have here an account of the good use immediately made of it. A solemn assembly was called to meet the king at the temple, the very next day; (v. 20.) and very glad, no doubt, were all the good people in Jerusalem, Ps. 122: 1. As soon as Hezekiah heard the temple was ready for him, he rose early

(7. 28:24. 2 K. 16:17, 18.) The only reason advanced for a contrary opinion, is this: it is not said, that the sacred fire on the altar of burnt-offering was extinguished, or that it was re-kindled by fire from heaven, as at the dedication of the temple.—Sanctify, &c. (5) The altar, made after the model of that Ahaz saw at Damascus, formed by far the worst filthiness, from which they needed to be cleansed. SCOTT.

Verses 6, 7.

(M. R.) Our fathers, &c. (6) When the honor of God was concerned, Hezekiah did not hesitate to criminate those who had gone before. (Matt. 10:37—39. 2 Cor. 5:16. P. O. 1 Pet. 1:17—21. ID.

Turned away, &c.] 'This seems to signify, that Ahaz brought in a way of worship directly contrary to the law of God, which commanded them to worship toward the ark, which was placed in the W. But he ordered that they should turn their backs on that, . . . and worship toward the E. [like the sun and fire worshippers,] where he had set his altar. And at last he shut up the doors of the temple, that they should not worship there at all.' Patrick. (Note, Ez. 8:16.) ID.

Verses 8, 9.

The defeat and dreadful slaughter recorded in the foregoing ch. seem here referred to, as the effect of some extraordinary terror from God on the minds of the Jews. ID.

Be not now negligent. (11) Do not err · 'do not persist in that error; in which you have neglected that worship of God, to which you were chosen.' Junius, in Robertson. SCOTT.

Verses 12—19.

(M. R. u—c.) When the ark was to be removed, and on other necessary occasions, the priests might enter the holy of holies, though not at other times. (Num. 4:5.)—Ahaz died about the close of the year; and Hezekiah had given timely orders to the priests and Levites, for them to begin this work with the new year. It is surprising that Ahaz did not cut in pieces all the tables of shew-bread, and the other golden and silver furniture of the temple; but merely cast them aside. ID.

According to the commandment of the king, &c. (15) When Ahaz commanded Urijah contrary to the law of God, both he, and the priest who obeyed his impious command, acted most wickedly. (2 K. 16:10—16.) But the priests and Levites acted right, in proportion as they obeyed 'the commandment of the king by the words of the Lord.' Hezekiah properly improved his talent, without intermeddling out of his province; and they as properly yielded obedience.—Why should not the case be the same, under the Christian dispensation? Was Hezekiah's interposition any part of the ritual law of Moses, which Christianity has superseded? (Note, 30:12.) ID.

to the house of the LORD.

21 And they brought [p] seven bullocks, and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he-goats, for [q] a sin-offering for the kingdom, and for the sanctuary, and for Judah. And he commanded the priests the sons of Aaron to offer them on the altar of the LORD.

22 So they killed the bullocks, and the priests received the blood, and [r] sprinkled it on the altar: likewise, when they had killed the rams, they sprinkled the blood upon the altar: they killed also the lambs, and they sprinkled the blood upon the altar.

23 And they brought * forth the he-goats for the sin-offering before the king and the congregation; and [s] they laid their hands upon them:

24 And the priests killed them, and they made [t] reconciliation with their blood upon the altar, to make an atonement for all Israel: for the king commanded that the burnt-offering and [u] the sin-offering should be made for all Israel.

25 And [x] he set the Levites in the house of the LORD with cymbals, with psalteries, and with harps, [y] according to the commandment of David, and of [z] Gad the king's seer, and [a] Nathan the prophet: [b] for so was the commandment † of the LORD by his prophets.

26 And the Levites stood with [c] the instruments of David, and [d] the priests with the trumpets.

27 And Hezekiah commanded to offer the burnt-offering upon the altar. And ‡ when the burnt-offering began, [e] the song of the LORD began also with the trumpets, and with § the instruments ordained by David king of Israel.

28 And [f] all the congregation worshipped, and || the singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded: and all this continued until the burnt-offering was finished.

29 And when they had made an end of offering, the king and all that were ¶ present with him, [g] bowed themselves, and worshipped.

30 Moreover, Hezekiah the king and the princes commanded the Levites to sing praise unto the LORD, [h] with the words of David, and of Asaph the seer. And [i] they sang praises with gladness, and they bowed their heads and worshipped.

31 Then Hezekiah answered and said, Now ye have  consecrated yourselves unto the LORD, come near, and bring [k] sacrifices and [l] thank-offerings into the house of the LORD. And the congregation brought in sacrifices, and thank-offerings; and [m] as many as were of a free heart, burnt-offerings.

32 And [n] the number of the burnt-offerings, which the congregation brought, was threescore and ten bullocks, an hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all these were for a burnt-offering to the LORD.

33 And the [o] consecrated things were six hundred oxen, and three thousand sheep.

34 But [p] the priests were too few, so that they could not flay all the burnt-offerings: wherefore [q] their brethren the Levites †† did help them, till the work was ended, and until the other priests had sanctified themselves: [r] for the Levites were more [s] upright in heart to sanctify themselves than the priests.

35 And also [t] the burnt-offerings were in abundance, with [u] the fat of the peace-offerings, and [x] the drink-offerings for every burnt-offering. [y] So the

1. The people were free: though not as in the glorious days of Solomon, but according to what they had, and as much as one could expect, considering their poverty and the great decay of piety among them, v. 32—35.

2. The priests were few, too few for the service, v. 34. It is recorded here, to the perpetual shame of the priests, that though so well provided for out of the offerings of the Lord made by fire, yet they did not mind their business!

3. The Levites were forward. They (v. 34.) were better affected to the work, and better prepared and qualified for it; this was their praise, and, in recompense, they had the honor to be employed in the priests' work; they helped them flay the offerings. This was not according to the law, (Lev. 1: 5, 6.) but the irregularity was dispensed with in cases of necessity, and thus encouragement given to the faithful, zealous Levites, and a just disgrace put on the careless priests.

4. All rejoiced in this blessed turn of affairs, v. 36. (1.) As it was so soon brought about, without opposition. (2.) For the hand of God was plainly in it; God had prepared the people by the secret influences of his grace, which did very much exp Num. 23:1,14,29. 1 Chr. 15:26. Ezra 8:35. Job 42:8. Ez. 45:23. q Lev. 4:3—14. Num. 15:22—24. 2 Cor. 5:21. r Lev. 1:5. 4:7,18,34. 8:15,19,24. Heb. 9:21,22.

* Heb. near.
s Lev. 1:4. 4:15,24.
t Lev. 6:30. 8:15. Ez. 45:15,17. Dan. 9:24. Rom. 5:10,11. 2 Cor. 5:18—21. Col. 1:20,21. Heb. 2:17.
u Lev. 4:13,&c.
x 1 Chr. 9:33. 15:16—22. 16:4,5,42. 25:1—7.
y 8:14. 35:15. 1 Chr. 23:5. 28:12,19.
z 2 Sam. 24:11. 1 Chr. 21:9. 29:29. a 2 Sam. 7:2—4. 12:1—7.
b 30:12.
† Heb. by the hand of the LORD, by the hand of his prophets.
c 1 Chr. 23:5. Am. 6:5.
d 5:12,13. Num. 10:10. Josh. 6:4—9. 1 Chr. 15:24. 16:6. Ps. 81:3. 98:5, 6. 150:3.
‡ Heb. in the time.
e 7:3. 20:21. 23:18. Ps. 136:1.
§ Heb. hands of instruments.
f Ps. 66:24—26. Rev. 5:8—14.
|| Heb. song. Ps. 89:15.
¶ Heb. found.
g 20:18. 1 Chr. 29:20. Ps. 72:11. Rom. 14:11. Phil. 2:10,11.
h 2 Sam. 23:1,2. 1 Chr. 16:7—36.
i Ps. 32:11. 33:1. 95:1,2. 100:1,2. 149: 2. Phil. 4:4.
 Or, filled your hand. 13:9. k Lev. 1: 3:
l Lev. 7:12.
m Lev. 1:3. 23:38. Ezra 1:4. n 1 K. 3:4. 8:63. 1 Chr. 29:21. Ezra 6:17.
o 31.
p 5. 30:16,17.
q 35:11. Num. 8:15,19. 18:3,6,7.
†† Heb. strengthened them.
r 30:3.
s 1 Chr. 29:17. Ps. 7:10.
t 32.
u Ex. 29:13. Lev. 3:15,16.
x Gen. 35:14. Lev. 23:13. Num. 15: 5,7,10.
y 1 Chr. 16:37—42. Ezra 6:18. 1 Cor. 14:40.

Verses 21—24.

It is not here stated, that the prescribed rules, respecting the sin-offerings, for the priest, the ruler, or the nation, as to carrying the blood into the most holy place, and burning the bodies without the camp, were observed. Perhaps this was not done: and in that case, these sin-offerings must be considered, as in some respects different from those prescribed in that part of the law. (Lev. 4:4—7, 11, 12. 6:30. Heb. 13:9—14, v. 11, 12.)—The word here rendered he-goats, (21) is not used in Scripture till after the captivity, and learned men think that this is one proof that Ezra compiled these books.—Hezekiah seems to have had respect to the plan which he afterwards proposed, and which is recorded in the ensuing ch. namely, of uniting the whole nation of Israel in celebrating the passover, and in the worship of God. SCOTT.

Verses 25, 30.

The temple-psalmody was regulated with the concurrence of these other prophets, as well as by the appointment of David. (23:11—21, v. 13. 1 Chr. 9:22. 15:16. 16:4—6. 25:1—8. Ezra 3:8—11. Ps. 33:2, 3. 81:1—5. 95:1—6. 150.) ID.

The priests with the trumpets. (26.) The blowing of trumpets by the priests, on various occasions, and in particular over the sacrifices, was a part of the ritual law of Moses, and is here exactly distinguished from the psalmody instituted by David and the prophets.—Asaph the seer. (30) Ps. 73: title. 74: title. SCOTT.

Verses 31, 32.

As the burnt sacrifices were wholly consumed on the altar, the offering of them evinced greater zeal and liberality, than the oblation of peace-offerings, a great part of which was eaten by the offerer and his friends. (Lev. 1:3:) ID.

Verse 33.

It is probable the consecrated things denote the peace-offerings and thank-offerings. ID.

Verse 34.

It does not appear that any idolatrous priests were punished. It was deemed more proper, that upright and duly sanctified Levites should flay the sacrifices, than unclean or profane priests. This is considered by many as irregular, but it is nowhere prohibited. Indeed, before the Levites were given to the sons of Aaron, it is proba service of the house of the LORD was set in order.

36 And [z] Hezekiah rejoiced, and all the people, that [a] God had prepared the people: for [b] the thing was done suddenly.

CHAP. XXX.

Hezekiah proclaims a solemn passover to be kept in the second month, and calls on both Judah and Israel to unite in celebrating it, 1--5. His message to the Israelites, and the reception with which it met, 6—12. A great multitude, having destroyed the altars for idolatry in Jerusalem, prepare to keep the feast, 13—18. Hezekiah prays for those who are not ceremonially clean, and is graciously answered, 17—20. They keep the feast fourteen days with great joy, 21—26. The priests bless the people, 27.

AND Hezekiah sent [a] to all Israel and Judah, and wrote letters [b] also to Ephraim and Manasseh, that they should come [c] to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, [d] to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel.

2 For [e] the king had taken counsel, and his princes, and all the congregation in Jerusalem, to keep the passover [f] in the second month.

3 For they could not keep it [g] at that time, [h] because the priests had not sanctified themselves sufficiently, neither had the people gathered themselves together to Jerusalem.

4 And the thing [i] pleased the king and all the congregation.

5 So they [j] established a decree [k] to make proclamation throughout all Israel, [l] from Beersheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel at Jerusalem: [m] for they had not done it of a long time in such sort as it was written.

6 So [n] the posts went with the letters from † the king and his princes, throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, [o] turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the remnant of you, that are [p] escaped out of the hand of the kings of Assyria.

7 And be not ye [q] like your fathers, and like your brethren, which trespassed against the LORD God of their fathers, who therefore gave them up to desolation, [r] as ye see.

8 Now ‡ be ye not stiff-necked as your fathers were, but § yield yourselves unto the LORD, and [s] enter into his sanctuary, [t] which he hath sanctified for ever: and [u] serve the LORD your God, that [x] the fierceness of his wrath may turn away from you.

9 For [y] if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, [z] so that they shall come again into this land: for [a] the LORD your God is gracious and merciful, and [b] will not [c] turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him.

10 So [d] the posts passed from city to city through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh, even unto Zebulun: but [e] they laughed them to scorn, and mocked them.

11 Nevertheless, [f] divers of Asher, and Manasseh, and of Zebulun, [g] humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem.

12 Also in Judah [h] the hand of God was to [z] 1 Chr. 29:9,17. Ezra 6:22. 1 Thes. 3:8,9.

[a] 30:12. 1 Chr. 29:18. Ps. 10:17. Prov. 16:1.
[b] Acts 2:41.
[c] 11:13,16.
[d] 10,11. 25:7. 35:6. Hos. 5:4. 7:8, 9. 11:8.
[e] Deut. 16:2—6.
[f] Ex. 12:3—20. 1 Cor. 5:7,8.
[g] 1 Chr. 13:1—3. Prov. 11:14. 15:22. Ec. 4:13.
[h] Num. 9:10,11.
[i] Ex. 12:6,18.
[j] 29:34.
[k] Heb. was right in the eyes of. 1 Chr. 13:4.
[l] Ezra 6:8—12. Esth. 8:12—15. 8:8—10. 9:20,21. Dan. 6:8.
[m] 24:9. 35:12. Lev. 23:2,4. Dan. 4: 1,&c.
[n] Judg. 20:1.
[o] 35:18.
[p] Job 9:25. Esth. 3:14. Jer. 51:31.
† Heb. the hand of the.
[q] Is. 55:6,7. Jer. 4:1. Ez. 33:11. Hos. 14:1. Joel 2:12,13. Jam. 4:8.
[r] 28:20. 1 K. 15:19,29. 1 Chr. 5:26. Is. 1:8.
[s] Ez. 20:18. Zech. 1:3,4.
[t] 29:8.
‡ Heb. harden not your necks. 36:13. Ex. 32:9. Deut. 10:16.
§ Heb. give the hand. 1 Chr. 29:24. marg. Ezra 10:19. Ps. 68:31. Rom. 6:13,16,19.
[u] Ps. 63:2. 68:24. 73:17.
[x] Ps. 132:13,14.
[y] Deut. 6:13,17. Josh. 24:15. Matt. 4:10. John 12:26. Rom. 6:22. Col. 3:22—24. Rev. 7:15.
[z] 28:11,13. 29:10. 2 K. 23:26. Ps. 78:49.
[a] 7:14. Lev. 26:40—42. Deu 30:2—4. 1 K. 8:50. Ps. 106:46.
[b] Jer. 29:12—14. 31:27,28.
[c] Ex. 34:6,7. Ps. 86:5,15. ...5:7,8. Mic. 7:18.
[d] 15:2. Is. 55:7. Ez. 18:30—32.
[e] Jer. 18:17.
[f] 6. Esth. 3:13,15. 8:10,14. Job 9:25.
[g] 36:16. Gen. 19:14. Neh. 2:19. Job 12:4. Luke 8:53. 16:14. 22:63,64. 23:35. Acts 17:32. Heb. 11:36.
[h] 18. 11:16. Acts 17:34.
[i] 12:6,7,12. 33:12,19,23. 34:27. Ex. 10:3. Lev. 26:41. Dan. 5:22. Luke 14:11. 18:14. Jam. 4:10. 1 Pet. 5:6.
[k] 29:36. 1 Chr. 29:18,19. Ezra 7:27. Ps. 110:3. Jer. 32:39. Phil. 2:13. 2 Thes. 2:13,14.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The removal of a single individual of very bad character, from any public situation, and the succession of a wise and pious person in his stead, may be productive of most important and extensive good effects. What an honor is it to be employed, in diffusing piety and felicity through whole nations! But how dreadful will be the condemnation of those, who spread guilt and misery in so extensive a manner!—Whether a godly man inherit a kingdom, or an estate; whether he change his station in society, or his place of abode, or be removed to a new situation in the church; his first actions will be of considerable importance, and often leave an abiding impression: and regulations may frequently be then made without difficulty, before different habits and expectations have been formed, which would afterward become almost impracticable.—Even in that nation, in which God had appointed that apostates and idolaters should be punished with death, the most effectual revivals of true religion were produced by example, exhortation, and encouragement. Happy and honorable will they be, who shall thus become 'nursing fathers' to the church, not by bribes and preferments, but by countenancing those, who zealously labor to promote acknowledged truth and practical godliness, even though not all exactly in the same way. —The nominal ministers of religion have, in all ages, been lamentably backward, in laboring and venturing to promote the cause of God: and the higher their dignities, and the greater their emoluments, the more evident, alas, frequently, has been their aversion to the work of the ministry.—The true minister of Christ, however, should take heed first to himself, and then to his ministry. His own conscience, heart, and life must first be purified, by repentance, and faith in the divine Savior; and then he may hope to prosper in endeavoring to convert others also, and to promote the pure and spiritual worship of God. SCOTT.

---

ble, they who brought the sacrifice both slaughtered and flayed it; (Note, Lev. 1:5—9.) afterwards these services seem to have formed a part of the ministry assigned to the Levites, at the will of the priests; but at length it became customary for the priests to perform them. The Levites might not in any case sprinkle the blood, burn the fat and flesh, or approach the altar. SCOTT.

Verse 36.

The great and sudden change produced in the conduct of the people, and the alacrity with which they concurred in measures, to which much opposition had been expected, evidenced that 'God had prepared' them. (M. R.—Note, 30:12.) ED.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXX. V. 1. The other tribes of Israel were as much bound to obey the law of Moses, as Judah and Benjamin were; but Hezekiah had no authority over them. Ephraim and Manasseh, as principal tribes, seem to be put for the whole kingdom of Israel. SCOTT. See also note, end of 1 Sam. p. 120. ED.

Verses 6—9.

The word rendered 'posts' signifies runners: for men were then, and still are in many places, trained, and kept on purpose, to convey depatches speedily by running. [Note, Mat. 5:41. latter part.] SCOTT.

Verse 12.

The language of this v. is entitled to special attention. 'The commandment of the king and his princes, by the word of the LORD,' met with ready and general obedience from the men of Judah, because 'the hand of God was to give them one heart to do it.' If the rulers had give them one heart to do [i] the commandment of the king and of the princes, [j] by the word of the LORD.

[Practical Observations.]

13 ¶ And there assembled at Jerusalem much people to keep the feast of unleavened bread in [k] the second month, a very great congregation.

14 And they arose, and took away the [l] altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into [m] the brook Kidron.

15 Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the priests and the Levites [n] were ashamed, [o] and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt-offerings into the house of the LORD.

16 And [p] they stood in their * place [q] after their manner, according to the law of [r] Moses, the man of God: [s] the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites.

17 For there were many in the congrega-i Deut. 4:2,5,6. 1 Thes. 4:2. j 29:25. Acts 4:19.

k See on 2.
l 28:24. 34:4,7. 2 K. 18:22. 23:12,13. Is. 2:18—20. m 15:16. 29:16. 2 Sam. 15:23. John 18:1. Cedron.
n 29:34. Ez. 16:61—63. 43:10,11.
o 24. 5:11. 29:15,34. 31:18.—Ex. 19: 10:22.
p 35:10,15.
* Heb. standing.
q 2 K. 11:14.
r See on Deut. 33:1.
s 35:10,11. Lev. 1:5. Heb. 11:28.

over, and to summon the people to it.

1. Expresses are sent post throughout all the tribes of Israel, (v. 1, 6.) with memorials earnestly pressing the people to take this opportunity of returning to God from whom they had revolted. Now, in these circular letters, Hezekiah discovers a great concern both for the honor of God, and the welfare of the neighboring kingdom, the prosperity of which he seems passionately desirous of, though he not only received no tribute from it, but it had often, and not long since, been vexatious to his kingdom. This is rendering good for evil.

Observe, (1.) What he presses them to, (v. 8.) Yield unto the Lord. Give the hand, so the word is; i. e. 'Consent to take Him for your God:' a bargain is confirmed by giving the hand. 'In order to this, be not stiff-necked as your fathers; let not your corrupt and wicked wills rise up in rebellion against the will of God. Say not that you will do what you please, but resolve to do what He pleases.' We perceive in the carnal mind a stiffness and obstinacy, an unaptness to comply with God; we have it from our fathers, it is bred in the bone with us; this must be conquered, and the will melted into the will of God. Thus they who through grace have turned to God themselves, should do all they can to bring others back to Him.

(2.) What arguments he uses, v. 6, 7, 8, 9. Could any thing be expressed more pathetically, more movingly? Could there be a better cause, and better pleaded?

2. The entertainment Hezekiah's messengers and message met with. It does not appear that Hoshea, now king of Israel, took umbrage from, or gave opposition to, the dispersing of these proclamations through his kingdom, nor forbade his subjects to accept the invitation; for though he did evil, yet not like the kings of Israel before him, 2 K. 17: 2. He saw ruin coming on his kingdom, and if any of his subjects would try this expedient to prevent it, they had his full permission. But, for the people,

(1.) The generality slighted the call, and turned a deaf ear to it; so far from complying with it, they abused them that brought it, (v. 10.) not only refused, but with disdain. No marvel the king's messengers were thus despitefully used by this apostate race, when God's messengers were so, his servants the prophets, who produced credentials from Him. The destruction of the kingdom of the ten tribes was now at hand; two or three years after this, the king of Assyria laid siege to Samaria, which ended in their captivity: had they generally accepted this invitation, it might have prevented their ruin; but their contempt of it hastened and aggravated it, and left them inexcusable.

(2.) Yet some few accepted the invitation; to whom it was a savor of life unto life, v. 11. In the worst times, God has had a remnant; so here, divers humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem, i. e. were sorry for their sins, and submitted to God. Pride keeps men from yielding themselves to the Lord; when that is brought down, the work is done.

3. A command was given to the men of Judah to attend; and they universally obeyed it, v. 12, the hand of God gave them one heart; for it is in the day of power Christ's subjects are made willing. It is God that works both to will and to do. When people, at any time, discover an unexpected forwardness to what is good, we must acknowledge God's hand in it.

V. 13—20. The time appointed for the passover had now come, and a very great congregation came together, v. 13. Here we have,

I. Their good preparation for the passover; they took away all the idolatrous altars found, not only in the temple, but in Jerusalem, v. 14. Before they kept the feast, they cast out this old leaven. The best preparation for the gospel passover, is, to cast away our iniquities, our spiritual idolatries.

II. The celebration; in this the people were so forward and zealous, that the priests and Levites blushed to see themselves outdone by the commonalty, who were more ready to bring sacrifices, than they to offer them. This put them on sanctifying themselves, v. 15. The notice we take of the zeal of others, should make us ashamed of our own coldness, and quicken us not only to do our duty, but to do it well, and to sanctify ourselves to it. They did according to the duty of their place, (v. 16.) sprinkling the blood on the altar, a type of Christ our Passover sacrificed for us.

III. The irregularities in this solemnity. The substance was well managed, and with great devotion; but, beside being a month out of time, 1. The Levites killed the passover, which should have been done by the priests only, v. 17. They also assisted, more than the law ordinarily allowed, in offering the other sacrifices, particularly those for purifying, many of which there was now occasion for. Some think, it was the officers' work, not the priests', the Levites had here the charge of. Ordinarily, every man killed his lamb, but now for those under any ceremonial pollution the Levites did it. 2. Many were permitted to eat the passover, who were not purified according to the strictness of the law, v. 18. There was no warrant to put them off further to the third month, and they were loath to forbid them communicating at all, lest they should discourage new converts, and send them away complaining, whom they desired to send away rejoicing. Grotius observes from this, that ritual institutions must give way,

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V 1—12. Favorable opportunities of fixing good impressions ought by no means to be neglected: and it is better that circumstantial irregularities should be admitted, than that divine ordinances should not be observed, or substantial usefulness prevented. —We ought to embrace every proper opportunity of addressing men on their eternal concerns, and of engaging as many as possible in the service of God. Numbers may and will 'laugh us to scorn:' but several will be humbled and benefited; and perhaps where success was least expected, where impiety and profligacy were most notorious, and among those who appeared ripe for destruction.—The rich mercy of God forms the grand argument, by which to enforce repentance on the sinner's conscience.—Oh, that messengers were sent forth to carry these invitations to every city and village, through our land, and every land! It is true, the Lord alone can render them effectual; but He works by the word of his ministers, and also by the commandment of kings and princes, when it accords with his Word.—Faith comes by hearing; and true religion has uniformly flourished, in proportion to the measure in which faithful, scriptural preaching has abounded. In general, persons of wealth or authority might be instrumental in promoting this faithful preaching of the Word of God, if they had the inclination, and were willing to bear the expense of it: nor can superior rank enjoy a higher privilege. SCOTT.

commanded any thing contrary to the Word of the LORD, or beyond it, in affairs of religion; it would have been a misapplication of their authority: but, as they required nothing but what God had expressly enjoined, they duly improved their talent; and the people, by the grace of God, knew and performed their duty.—It does not appear, to me at least, that Christianity has at all altered the duty either of rulers or subjects in this respect. [If the ruler was preternaturally inspired and directed, and so proved himself, this argument would apply: and we should have an authoritative interpreter of Scripture. But as it now is, interference by the government to compel certain modes of worship, would give us at once a sectarian despotism: and religious liberty would end. The subject is however too wide to be more than hinted at here. ED.] (29:10, 11, 12—19, v. 15.) 'There was a marvellous unanimity in Judah, who were so obedient to the motions of the divine grace, (without which so great a change could not have been made,) as generally to comply with the king's proclamation, made with the consent of the princes. They looked upon it as a divine command, which was brought to them by that authority: and it appeared so to be, by the mighty power of God, which wrought their hearts to a cheerful obedience.' Patrick. SCOTT.

Verse 13.

The emphatical language here used fully proves, that the concourse of people, to celebrate this passover, was exceedingly great, compared with all other instances with which the writer was acquainted. (35: 18, 19.) ID.

Verse 14.

The people assembled at Jerusalem some days before the passover, and employed the intermediate time, in clearing the city of altars for idolatry, and other abominations. This was an excellent preparation. (2 K. 23:4—28.) ID.

Verses 16—20.

(M. R.) Either the Levites, or the offerers, might receive the blood tion that were not sanctified: therefore [t] the Levites had the charge of [u] the killing of the passovers, for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the LORD.

18 For a multitude of the people, even [x] many of Ephraim and Manasseh, Issachar and Zebulun, [y] had not cleansed themselves, yet did they eat [z] the passover otherwise than it was written. But Hezekiah [a] prayed for them, saying, [b] The good LORD pardon every one,

19 That [c] prepareth his heart to seek God, the LORD God of his fathers, [d] though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary.

20 And the LORD hearkened to Hezekiah, and [e] healed the people.

21 And the children of Israel that were [*] present at Jerusalem kept [f] the feast of unleavened bread seven days, with [g] great gladness: and the Levites and [h] the priests praised the LORD day by day, singing with [†] loud instruments unto the LORD.

22 And Hezekiah spake [‡] comfortably unto all the Levites, [i] that taught [k] the good knowledge of the LORD: and they did eat throughout the feast seven days, offering peace-offerings, [l] and making confession to the LORD God of their fathers.

23 And the whole assembly [m] took counsel [n] to keep other seven days: and they kept other seven days with gladness.

24 For Hezekiah king of Judah § did [o] give to the congregation a thousand bullocks, and seven thousand sheep: and the princes gave to the congregation a thousand bullocks, and ten thousand sheep: and [p] a great number of priests sanctified themselves.

25 And all the congregation of Judah, with the priests and the Levites, and all the congregation that came out of Israel, and [q] the strangers that came out of the land of Israel, and that dwelt in Judah, [r] rejoiced.

26 So there was great joy in Jerusalem: for [*] since the time of Solomon the son of David king of Israel, there was not the like in Jerusalem.

27 Then [t] the priests the Levites arose, and blessed the people: and their voice was heard, and [u] their prayer came up to [‖] his holy dwelling-place, even unto heaven.

t 29:34. 35:3—6.
u Ex. 12:6.
x See on 11.
y Num. 19:20. 1 Cor. 11:28.
z Ex. 12:43, &c. a Gen. 20:7,17. Job 42:8,9. Jam. 5: 15,16. 1 John 5:16.
b 6:21. Ex. 34:6—9. Num. 14:18—20. Ps. 25:8. 86:5. 86:5. 119:68. Dan. 9:19. c 19:3. 20:33. 1 Sam. 7:3. 1 Chr. 29:18. Ezra 7:10. Job 11:13. Ps. 10:17. Prov. 23:26.
d Lev. 12:4. 15:31—33. 21:17—23. 22: 3—6. Num. 9:6. 19:13—20. e Ex. 15:26. Ps. 103:3. Jam. 5:16.
* Heb. found.
f Ex. 12:15. 13:6. Lev. 23:6. Luke 22:1,7. 1 Cor. 5:7,8.
g 26. 7:10. Deut. 12:7,12. 16:14. Neh. 8:10. Acts 2:46. Phil. 4:4.
h See on 20:21. 29:25—27.
† Heb. instruments of strength. Ps. 150:3—5.
‡ Heb. to the heart of all. 32:6. Is. 40:1. Hos. 2:14. margins.
i 15:3. 17:9. 35:3. Deut. 33:10. Ezra 7: 10,25. Neh. 8:7,8,18. 9:3. 2 Tim. 4:2. k Prov. 2:6,7. 8:6. John 17:3. 2 Cor. 4:6. Phil. 3:8. l Deut. 26:3—11. Ezra 10:11. Neh. 9:3.
m See on 2.
n 7:9. 1 K. 8:65.
§ Heb. lifted up, or, offered.
o 35:7,8. 1 Chr. 29:3—9. Ez. 45:17. Eph. 4:8.
p 29:34.
q See on 18.—Ex. 12:43—49.
r 1 Chr. 16:10,11. Ps. 92:4. 104:34.
s 7:9,10.
t See on Num. 6:23—26. Deut. 10:8.
u See on 1 K. 8:30,39. Acts 10:4.
‖ Heb. the habitation of his holiness. Deut. 26:15. Ps. 68:5. Is. 57:15. 63: 15. 66:1.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 13—20. When we are humbled for our transgressions, and declare war against all our idols, expecting and seeking forgiveness and salvation only through the atonement of Christ, we become welcome communicants at the Lord's table. No trembling believer, who desires to trust in the Redeemer, and to show his gratitude by obeying his plain command, needs to be alarmed, lest he should fail in that exactness, which he supposes is required in this ordinance: for the good LORD lays no snares in the way of penitent, humble, upright inquirers.—Previous preparation is indeed profitable; but the true believer is habitually ready, and ought not to retire for want of actual preparation. Yet every defect is sin, and needs forgiveness; and should be matter of humiliation, though not of discouragement. (P. O. 1 Cor. 11: 23—34.)—Man's authority cannot disannul or alter divinely instituted externals in the worship of God: yet these may be idolized; and the Lord will, on some occasions, approve the conduct of those, who prefer the spirit to the letter of an instituted observance, where both cannot possibly be attained; and who seize an opportunity of glorifying Him, in seeking the conversion and salvation of souls, by postponing or relaxing in the exact observance of an external regulation. Many allowances ought indeed to be made for those, who are newly brought forth out of very ignorant places, to attend on the ordinances of God; yet they must not be left in their mistakes.—When the ignorant, the mean, and the profligate, as well as those of superior stations, become earnest in God's service, Pharisees will either be exasperated or ashamed.—True godliness will be attended with proportionable joy. A few more interruptions of our joy, by conflicts and temptations, (whilst in Christ we still have peace,) and we shall be with Him to behold his glory: then our worship, our love, and our rejoicing, will be uninterrupted, unalloyed, and eternal. SCOTT.

---

of the victims; but the priests alone might sprinkle it.—It is evident from this passage, that, in ordinary cases, the persons who brought the paschal lambs slew them; or this exception would not have been stated: and it is at least probable, that the case was at first the same with other sacrifices. (29:34. Lev. 1:5—7.) (M. R. a—d.) 'Healed the people.' (20) Perhaps God had visited them with some sickness, for their irregular attendance, which He then graciously healed. (1 Cor. 11:29—34.) Or, He gave peace to their consciences, and healed their souls. SCOTT.

Verses 23—25.

'They did not observe other 7 days of unleavened bread, but offered sacrifices, with praises, and thanksgivings, and feasting, 7 days.' Patrick.—The people in general, and those who came out of the kingdom of Israel, would be unprepared for the expense attending these sacrifices: therefore both Hezekiah and his princes liberally gave cattle for sacrifices; in which no doubt they acted properly, and should be imitated, according to the nature of the Christian dispensation, by princes and nobles, liberally supplying what is wanting to support the worship of God, and to make glad the hearts of their poorer brethren. (Ez. 45:16, 17.) The example had also a salutary influence on the priests, who sanctified themselves, to take their part in the service.—Probably, 'the strangers that came out of the land of Israel,' as distinguished from 'the congregation of Israel,' were not Israelites by birth, but circumcised proselytes. SCOTT

Verse 26.

As this occurred in the 1st year of Hezekiah's reign, and he reigned 29 years, it must be supposed that he witnessed the effects of so good a beginning, to the end of his life. It was done suddenly, but, by the grace of God, it was done effectually.—Doubtless, the passovers and other solemn feasts were kept up, and attended to, during this reign, though not in so remarkable a manner as this first passover. ID.

CHAP. XXXI.

The people destroy the idols, and their temples and altars, through the cities of Judah and in Ephraim and Manasseh, 1. Hezekiah orders the courses of the priests and Levites, and provides for their maintenance, as well as for the stated sacrifices, 2—4. The people readily bring their first fruits and tithes, 5—10. Hezekiah appoints officers to dispose of these oblations, 11—19. A high commendation of his zeal and integrity, 20, 21.

NOW [a] when all this was finished [b] all Israel that were * present went out to the cities of Judah, and * brake the † images in pieces, and cut down the groves, and threw down the high places and the altars, out of all Judah and Benjamin, [d] in Ephraim also and Manasseh, ‡ until they had utterly destroyed them all. Then all the children of Israel returned, every man to his possession, into their own cities.

2 And Hezekiah appointed [e] the courses of the priests, and the Levites after their courses, every man according to his service, the priests and Levites for burnt-offerings, and for peace-offerings, to minister, and [f] to give thanks, and to praise in the gates of the tents of the LORD.

3 He appointed also [g] the king's portion of his substance for the burnt-offerings, to wit [h] for the morning and evening burnt-offerings, and [i] the burnt-offerings for the sabbaths, and [j] for the new moons, and for [k] the set feasts, as it is written in the law of the LORD.

4 Moreover he commanded the people, that dwelt in Jerusalem, to give [l] the portion of the priests and the Levites [m] that they might be encouraged in [n] the law of the LORD.

5 And [o] as soon as the commandment § came abroad, the children of Israel brought in abundance [p] the first-fruits of corn, wine, and oil, and ‖ honey, and of all the increase of the field; and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly.

6 And concerning [q] the children of Israel and Judah, that dwelt in the cities of Judah, they also brought in [r] the tithe of oxen and sheep, and the tithe of holy things which were consecrated unto the LORD their God, and laid them ¶ by heaps.

7 In [s] the third month

a 30:1.
b 1 K. 18:38—40. 2 K. 23:2—20.
* Heb. found. Gen. 19:15. Esth. 4:16. margins.
c 14:3. 23:17. 32:12. 34:3—7. Ex. 23:24. Deut. 7:5. 2 K. 18:4.
† Heb. statues.
d 30:18. 34:6,7. 2 K. 17:2. 23:15.
‡ Heb. until to make an end.
e 5:11. 8:14. 23:8. 1 Chr. 15:37,40. 23:24:25:26: Ezra 6:18. Luke 1:5.
f 29:24—26. 1 Chr. 16:4—6,41,42. 23:30. 25:1—3. Neh. 11:17. Ps. 134: 1:3. 135:1—3,26. Jer. 33:11.
g 30:24. 1 Chr. 26:26. Ez. 45:17. 46:4—7,12—18.
h See on Ex. 29:38—42. Num. 28:3—8.
i See on Num. 28:9 10.
j See on Num. 28:11—15.—Num. 28:16—31. 29: Deut. 16:1—17. Ps. 81:1—4. Col. 2:16,17.
k Lev. 23:2, &c. l 16. Lev. 27:30—33. Num. 18:8—21, 26—28. Mal. 3:8—10. m Neh. 13:10—13. 1 Cor. 9:10—14.
n Mal. 2:7.
o 24:10,11. Ex. 35:5,20—29. 36:5,6. 2 Cor. 8:2—5.
§ Heb. brake forth.
p Ex. 22:29. 23:19. 34:22,26. Num. 18:12. Neh. 10:35—39. 12:44. 13:31. Prov. 3:9. 1 Cor. 15:20. Jam. 1:18. Rev. 14:4.
‖ Or, dates.
q 11:16,17.
r Lev. 27:30. Deut. 14:28.
¶ Heb. heaps, heaps.
s Lev. 23:16—24.

and comfort in his favor, and reconciliation to Him. I believe neither Hezekiah nor his princes were the poorer at the year's end for this their pious liberality.

2. Many good prayers were put up, v. 22. They made confession, in which the intent and meaning of the peace-offerings were directed and explained. They made a religious confession of their relation to God and dependence on Him; a penitent confession of their sins and infirmities; a thankful confession of God's mercies to them; a supplicatory confession of their wants and desires; and, in all these, they had an eye to God as the God of their fathers, a God in covenant with them.

3. There was an abundance of good preaching. The Levites (whose office it was, Deut. 33: 10.) taught the people the good knowledge of the Lord, read and opened the Scriptures, and instructed the congregation concerning God, and their duty to Him; there was great need of it, after so long a famine of the Word in the last reign. Hezekiah did not himself preach, but spake comfortably to the Levites that did, attended their preaching, commended their diligence, and assured them of his protection and countenance; hereby he encouraged them to study hard and take pains, and put a reputation on them, that the people might respect and regard them, the more. Princes and magistrates, by owning and encouraging faithful and laborious preachers, greatly serve the interest of God's kingdom among men.

4. They sang psalms every day, v. 21. exciting one another's joy in God, and thankfulness to Him. Praising God should be much of our work in our religious assemblies.

5. Having kept the seven days of the feast in this religious manner, they had so much comfort in it, that they kept other seven days, v. 23. They did not institute any new modes of worship, but repeated and continued the old. The case was extraordinary, they had been long without the ordinance, guilt had been contracted by the neglect of it. They had now got a very great congregation together, and were in a devout and serious frame; they knew not when they might have such another opportunity, and therefore could not now find in their hearts to part till they had doubled the time. Many of them were a great way from home, and had business to look after, being in the midst of their harvest; yet they were in no haste to return, the zeal of God's house made them forget themselves and their secular affairs. How unlike those who snuffed at God's service, and said, What a weariness is it! Or those who asked, When will the Sabbath be gone? The servants of God should abound in his work.

6. All this they did with gladness, v. 23. Holy duties should be performed with holy gladness; we should be forward to them, and take pleasure in them, relish the sweetness of communion with God, and look upon it as a matter of unspeakable joy and comfort, that we are thus favored, and have such earnests of everlasting joy.

7. The congregation was at length dismissed with a solemn blessing, v. 27. 1. The priests pronounced it: it was part of their office to bless the people, Num. 6: 22, 23. in which they were both the people's mouth to God, by way of prayer; and God's mouth to the people, by way of promise; for their blessing included both. What a comfort to a congregation to be sent home thus crowned! 2. God said Amen to it, perhaps gave some sensible token of the ratification of it. The prayer that comes up to heaven in a cloud of incense, will come down again in showers of blessings.

CHAP. XXXI. V. 1—10. We have here a further account of that blessed reformation of which Hezekiah was a glorious instrument, and of the happy advances he made in it. When the passover was finished, there was more to be done.

I. They applied themselves with vigor to destroy all the monuments of idolatry The king had done what he could of this kind, (2 K. 18: 4.) but the people could discover those profane relics which escaped the eye of the king's officers, v. 1. Note, The comfort of communion with God should kindle in us a holy zeal and indignation against every thing offensive to God: What have I now to do any more with idols? 1. Some think those cities of Ephraim and Manasseh are meant, which were come under the protection and jurisdiction of the kings of Judah; others, that, Hoshea, king of Israel, not forbidding it, their zeal carried them out to the destruction of idolatry, even in many parts of this kingdom. At least, those that came out of Ephraim and Manasseh to keep the passover, (as many did, ch. 30: 18.) destroyed all their own images and groves, and did the like for as many more as they had influence upon, or could make interest in for leave to do it: we should not only reform ourselves, but do all we can to reform others too. 2. They destroyed all. Those that sincerely set themselves against sin, will set themselves against all sin. Perhaps Isaiah pointed to this, when, a little before, he spake of a day in which men should cast away the very idols themselves had made. So surprising was the blessed change, Isa. 2: 20. 31: 6, 7.

II. Hezekiah revived and restored the courses of the priests and Levites, v. 2. The temple service was put into method again. The priests were appointed in their courses for burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, the Levites, some to minister to the priests, others to give thanks and praise. See 1 Chron. 23: 4, 5. The temple is here called a tent, because the temple-privileges are movable things, and this temple was shortly to be removed.

III. The people were to be at the charge of the daily offerings, and those on the Sabbaths, new moons, and feasts, yet, rather than they should be burdened with the expense, Hezekiah allowed out of his own estate, or out of his exchequer, for all

---

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXI. V. 1. (Note, 30:14.) It is probable some of the Israelites, who had been at the feast, retired into the land of Judah, during the ravages of Shalmaneser, and so escaped the general ruin. SCOTT.

Verse 2.

The tents, &c.] The buildings which surrounded the temple, in which the priests and Levites were stationed, resembled the tents in which soldiers are regularly encamped. ID.

Verses 3, 4.

(Notes, 30:21, 22. Neh. 12:44—47. 13:10—13. 1 Cor. 9:7—18.) SCOTT.

Verses 5—7.

(M. R.) It is probable, some of the first-fruits, tithes, and offerings, were generally sold, and the money reposited in one common stock. 'They began to offer first-fruits in the 3d month, when their harvest began, and finished their tithing in the 7th month, when their harvest was ended, Ex. 23:16.' Patrick. ID.

they began to lay the foundation of the heaps, and finished them in the seventh month.

8 And when Hezekiah and the princes came and saw the heaps, they [t] blessed the LORD, [u] and his people Israel.

9 Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps.

10 And [v] Azariah the chief priest of the house of Zadok answered him, and said, [x] Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the LORD, [y] we have had enough to eat, and have left plenty: for [z] the LORD hath blessed his people; and that which is left is this great store.

[Practical Observations.]

11 Then Hezekiah commanded to prepare [*] chambers in the house of the LORD; and they prepared them,

12 And brought in the offerings and the tithes and the dedicated things faithfully: [a] over which Cononiah the Levite was ruler, and Shimei his brother was the next.

13 And Jehiel, and Azaziah, and Nahath, and Asahel, and Jerimoth, and Jozabad, and Eliel, and Ismachiah, and Mahath, and Benaiah, were overseers [†] under the hand of Cononiah and Shimei his brother, [b] at the commandment of Hezekiah the king, and [c] Azariah the ruler of the house of God.

14 And Kore the son of Imnah the Levite, [d] the porter toward the east, was over [e] the free-will offerings of God, to distribute the oblations of the LORD, and [f] the most holy things.

15 And [‡] next him were Eden, and Miniamin, and Jeshua, and Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, in [g] the cities of the priests, in their [§] set office, to give to their brethren by courses, [h] as well to the great as to the small:

16 Beside their genealogy of males, from three years old and upward, even unto every one that entereth into the house of the LORD, [i] his daily portion for their service in their charges, according to their courses,

17 Both to the [k] genealogy of the priests by the house of their fathers, and the Levites from [l] twenty years old and upward, in their charges, [m] by their courses;

18 And to the genealogy of all their little ones, their wives, and those offerings, v. 3. Let princes and great men reckon that well bestowed, and set out to the best interest, which they give for the support and encouragement of religion in their country.

IV. He issued an order to the inhabitants of Jerusalem first, v. 4. but which was afterward extended to, or, at least admitted by, the cities of Judah, that they should carefully pay in their dues, according to the law of the priests and Levites. This had been long neglected, which made the work to be neglected. But Hezekiah, having himself been liberal, might with a good grace require his subjects to be just, to the temple-service. Observe, 1. It is fit ministers should be not only maintained, but encouraged, not only be kept to do their work, but also have wherewith to live comfortably, that they may do it with cheerfulness. 2. Yet they are to be maintained, not in idleness, pride, and luxury, but in the law of the Lord, in observance of it themselves, and in teaching others the good knowledge of it.

V. The people, thereupon, brought in their tithes very readily; they wanted nothing but to be called on; therefore, as soon as the commandment came abroad, the first-fruits and all the holy things were duly brought in, v. 5, 6. and the overplus was laid in heaps, v 6. When harvest ended, they finished their heaps, v. 7. 1. Hezekiah questioned the priests and Levites concerning them, why they did not use what was paid in, but hoarded it up thus, v. 9. To which it was answered, that they had used all they had occasion for, for the maintenance of themselves and families, and for their winter-store, and that this was left over and above, v. 10. They did not hoard for covetousness, but to show what plentiful provision God by his law had made for them, if they could but have it collected and brought in; and that they who conscientiously give God his dues out of their estates, bring a blessing on all they have. Since they began to bring in the offerings, the Lord had blessed his people. See for this, Hag. 2: 19. Mal. 3: 10, 11. Ezek. 44: 30. 2. The acknowledgment of the king and princes, v. 8. to God for his providence, which gave them something to bring, and his grace, which gave them hearts to bring it. And they also blessed the people, i. e. commended them for doing well now, without reproaching them for former neglects. It is observable, that after they had tasted the sweetness of God's ordinance in the late comfortable passover, they were thus free in maintaining the temple service. They that experience the benefit of a settled ministry, will not grudge the expense of it.

V. 11—21. Having put church-matters in good order, here is Hezekiah's care to keep them so. He provides,

1. That the tithes and other holy things brought in, should be carefully laid up under treasurers or store-keepers, and not left exposed in loose heaps, liable to be wasted and embezzled, v. 11, 12, 13. This wisdom, (which we may learn from the ant,) was an encouragement to people to contribute. That will be given cheerfully by the public, which appears to be well-husbanded.

2. That they should be faithfully laid out, act Gen. 14:20. Judg. 5:9. 1 K. 8:14,15. 1 Chr. 29:10—20. Ezra 7:27. 2 Cor. 8:16. Eph. 1:3. 1 Thes. 3:9. 1 Pet. 1:3. u 6:3. Gen. 14:19. 2 Sam. 6:18. 1 K. 8:55,56.

v 26:17. 1 K. 2:35. 1 Chr. 6:8,14. Ez. 44:15.
x Prov. 3:9,10. Hag. 2:18, 19. Mal. 3:10,11. 1 Tim. 4:8.
y 2 K. 4:43,44. Matt. 15:37. Phil. 4: 18.
z Gen. 26:12. 30:27—30. 39:5,23. Lev. 25:21. 26:4,5. Deut. 28:8. Prov. 10:22. 2 Cor. 9:8—11.
* Or, store-houses. Neh. 10:38,39. 13: 5,12,13.
a See on 1 Chr. 26:20—26.
† Heb. at the hand.
b 4,11.—See on 30:12. c See on 10.—1 Chr. 9:11. 24:6. Neh. 11:11.
d 1 Chr. 26:12,14,17.
e Lev. 22:18. 23:38. Num. 29:39. Deut. 12:6,17. 16:10. Ezra 1:4. 3:5. 7: 16. Ps. 119:108.
f Lev. 2:10. 6:16,17. 7:1—6. 10:12, 13. 27:28.
‡ Heb. at his hand. 18. marg.
g Josh. 21:9—19. 1 Chr. 6:54—60.
§ Or, trust. 1 Chr. 9:22. marg.
h 1 Chr. 25:8.
i Lev. 21:22,23.
k Num. 3:15,20. 4:38,42,46. 17:2,8. Ezra 2:59. l Num. 4:3. 8:24. 1 Chr. 23:24,27. m See on 2.—1 Chr. 24:20—31. 25: 26:

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—10. The finishing of one duty should form an introduction to the beginning of another; and he, who 'delighteth greatly in God's commandments,' will not complain of this as a weariness.—Public ordinances, and divine consolations, should stir up men to cleanse their hearts, houses, or shops, and every thing in which they are concerned, from the filthiness of sin, and the idolatry of covetousness; and to exhort and excite others to do the same, by every method, consistent with relative duties and the peace of society.—Examples should concur with exhortations or injunctions, whether men act as magistrates or ministers: and this will give them greater effect, in many cases, than menaces, coercive measures, or severe rebukes. Those, who would have others expend their wealth in useful works, ought to take the lead: nay, the easiest method of enforcing the laws, and prevailing with others to pay their dues, is often found to be by receding from personal claims, and joining liberality with justice, in the magistrate's own conduct.—Every exercise of human authority in the church of God must be regulated and bounded by his law, and must enforce obedience to it, and not make additions to it, or alterations in it.—A man is never impoverished by prudent liberality, in works of piety and charity: indeed, this is the way to ensure the blessing of God on his substance and his labors. (M. R.) And when the portion, due to the ministers of religion, and to the poor, is conscientiously rendered, it shall be recompensed as if it were a free-will offering. SCOTT.

Verses 9, 10.

The disinterestedness of the priests was highly commendable; for they might easily have enriched themselves, without being suspected: and the whole transaction enlarges our idea of the blessing which had attended the preceding solemnity: for before this, the priests seem to have been generally very careless and ungodly. (Mal. 1:9—14.) Probably, Azariah was the chief priest, under the high priest, and nearly related to him. (13. 1 Chr. 6:13, 14.) SCOTT.

Verse 11.

Chambers.] Marg. store-houses: probably like those of the Egyptians, which, from the earliest times of which any monuments are left, were arched vaults, generally of crude brick. ED.

Verses 15—19.

A list was taken of the wives, and children, of the priests and Levites, and a proportionable allowance was assigned them. Thus none appropriated an exorbitant proportion, and none wanted a suitable provision; and this regular provision kept them from the temptation of entangling themselves in worldly cares and employments, to the neglect of their ministry. (M. R.—Neh. 13:10 13 2 Tim. 2:3—7.) SCOTT.

(15.) Miniamin.] 'Three of Ken. and De R's MSS., the Vulg. Syr. Sept. and Arab. read Benjamin.' Dr. A. CLARKE.

(18.) Boothr. renders this verse, 'And the whole multitude of their little ones, their wives and their sons and their daughters, were taken into the account of those who had faithfully hallowed themselves.' 'Houbigant renders the last clause, "Because the sacred gifts were committed to their trust."' HEWLETT.

their sons, and their daughters, through all the congregation: for in their * set office [n] they sanctified themselves in holiness:

19 Also of the sons of Aaron the priests, which were in [o] the fields of the suburbs of their cities, in every several city, [p] the men that were expressed by name, to give portions to all the males among the priests, and to all that were reckoned by genealogies among the Levites.

20 And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and [q] wrought that which was good, and right, and truth, before the LORD his God.

21 And in every work, that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law, and in the commandments, to seek his God, [r] he did it with all his heart, and [s] prospered.

CHAP. XXXII.

Sennacherib invades Judah; and Hezekiah fortifies Jerusalem, and encourages the people, 1—8. Sennacherib's blasphemous messages and letters, 9—19. Hezekiah and Isaiah pray for deliverance: an angel destroys the Assyrian army; and their king, when returned to Nineveh, is slain by his sons when worshipping his idol, 20, 21. Hezekiah prospers and is renowned, 22, 23. In his sickness he prays, and is miraculously recovered: his heart is lifted up, but he afterwards humbles himself, 24—26. His riches and works, 27—30. His misconduct in respect of the ambassadors from the king of Babylon, 31. He dies, his memory is honored; and Manasseh succeeds him, 32, 33.

AFTER [a] these things, and the establishment thereof, Sennacherib [b] king of Assyria came, and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities, and thought to † win them for himself.

2 And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that ‡ he was purposed to fight against Jerusalem,

3 He [c] took counsel with his princes and his mighty men [d] to stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city: and they did help him.

4 So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and [e] the brook that § ran through the midst of the land, saying, Why should the [f] kings of Assyria come, and [g] find much water?

5 Also [h] he strengthened himself and built up all the wall [i] that was broken, and raised it up to the towers, and [k] another wall without, and repaired [l] Millo in the city of David, and made ‖ darts and shields in abundance.

6 And [m] he set captains of war over the people, and gathered them together to him [n] in the street of the gate of the city, and spake [¶] comfortably to them, saying,

7 Be [o] strong and regard must be had to their families, that they may have food convenient. (5.) To the priests in the country, that lived in the fields of the suburbs, v. 19. They also had their share, who were inhabitants of the villages, though they might be supposed to live at a less expense.

A general character is given of Hezekiah's services for the support of religion, v. 20, 21. All his good intentions were brought to a good issue. What is undertaken with a sincere regard to the glory of God, will succeed to our own honor and comfort at last.

CHAP. XXXII. V. 1—8. This chapter continues and concludes the history of the reign of Hezekiah.

I. Here is, the formidable design and vigorous attempt of Sennacherib against Hezekiah's kingdom. This Sennacherib, as Nebuchadnezzar afterward, was now a great oppressor, and aimed to raise a boundless monarchy for himself on the ruins of all his neighbors; his predecessor Shalmaneser had lately mastered Israel, and carried the ten tribes captive: Sennacherib thought, in like manner, to win Judah for himself. Pride and ambition put men on grasping at universal dominion; and it is observable that, just about this time, Romulus built Rome, a city which afterward came to reign more than any other had done over the kings of the earth. Perhaps Senna-

* Or, trust. 15. 1 Chr. 9:22. margins.
[n] Is. 5:16. Rom. 15:16.
[o] 15. Lev. 25:34. Num. 35:2—5. 1 Chr. 6:54,60.
[p] 12—15. 28:15.
[q] 1 K. 15:5. 2 K. 20:3. 22:2. John 1:47. Acts 24:16. 1 Thes. 2:10.
[r] Deut. 6:5. 10:12. 1 K. 2:4. 1 Chr. 22:19. Ec. 9:10. Jer. 29:13.
[s] 14:7. 20:20. 26:5. Josh. 1:7. 1 Chr. 22:13. Ps. 1:3. Matt. 9:33.
[a] 20:1,2. 2 K. 18:13. Is. 36:1,&c.
[b] 2 K. 15:19. 17:6. 18:11,19,20. Is. 7:17,18. 8:6—8. 10:5,6. Hos. 11:5.
† Heb. break them up. Is. 10:7—11. 37:24,25. Mic. 2:13.
‡ Heb. his face was to war. 2 K. 12:17. Luke 9:51,53.
[c] 30:2. 2 K. 18:20. Prov. 15:22. 20:18. 24:6. Is. 40:13. Rom. 11:34.
[d] 2 K. 20:20. Is. 22:8—11.
[e] 30. 30:14.
§ Heb. overflowed.
[f] See on 1.—2 K. 18:9,13. 19:17. Is. 10:8.
[g] 2 K. 3:9,16,17. 19:21.
[h] 12:1. 14:5—7. 17:1,2. 23:1. 26:8. Is. 22:9,10.
[i] 25:23.
[k] 2 K. 25:4. Jer. 39:4.
[l] Judg. 9:6. 2 Sam. 5:9. 1 K. 9:24. 11:27. 2 K. 12:20.
‖ Or, swords, or, weapons. 26:14,15.
[m] 17:14—19. 1 Chr. 27:3,4,&c.
[n] Ezra 10:9. Neh. 8:1—3,16.
¶ Heb. to their heart. 30:22. Gen. 34:3. Is. 40:2. marg.
[o] Deut. 31:6,7,23. Josh. 1:6—9. 1 Chr. 28:10,20. Is. 35:4. Dan. 10:19. Zech. 8:9,13. Eph. 6:10. 2 Tim. 2:1.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 11—21. Disinterestedness, impartiality, and frugality, are requisite in those who have the management of public charities, or other public funds: for when proper care is taken of the sums already contributed, and they are evidently expended for the sole purpose intended, encouragement is given to further contributions. —It would tend greatly to the welfare of the church, if ministers were provided for, with some degree of equality, proportioned to their diligence, their families, and their necessary expenses. But the faithful servant of God needs not be discouraged: let him study to live, and to preach, according to the Word of truth, and 'give himself wholly' to his work; and let him do it in faith, and the Lord will not suffer him to want; yea, He will provide for his children after him. But all pious men are not able to go on comfortably in this manner; and it is a grievous thing, that their spirits should be depressed, and their hands weakened, in their work, on this account: but it is still far worse, when they are tempted to leave their proper employment, to earn a morsel of bread for their wives and children. SCOTT.

Verses 20, 21.

What a commendation was this as given by God Himself! What a happy instrument was this pious king of good to his people! and what an encouraging and worthy example is this for princes, magistrates, ministers, and Christians to imitate! SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXII. V. 1. Most of the transactions, recorded in the preceding chs. took place in the 1st year of Hezekiah's reign: and from that time he proceeded to establish and complete his reformation, without any very memorable occurrences, till his 14th year, in which Sennacherib's first invasion occurred. (M. R.—2 K. 18:13—16.) ID.

Verses 3, 4.

(M. R.) The brook, here mentioned, is supposed to have been Kidron, or Cedron, called also 'the upper water-course of Gihon.' This measure [turning the water] was intended, not only for a present defence against Sennacherib, but also as a security against future invasions of him or his successors. (Is. 22:8—14.) ID.

(4.) Stopped, &c.] So the inhabitants did, much to the distress of the Christian army of crusaders, who besieged Jerusalem 1800 yrs. after (in 1099). See Hewlett, from William of Tyre, who says, 'they stopped the mouths of the fountains or cisterns for 5 or 6 miles round the city, the citizens in the meantime not only having plenty of rain water [in their tanks], but enjoying the benefit of the springs too without the town, their waters being conveyed by aqueducts into two very large basins within it.' 'The Heb. of verse 30. may as well be rendered "Hezekiah stopped the upper going out of the waters of Gihon, and directed them underneath, to the W. of the city of David;" and so Pagninus and Montanus. "He stopped up," i. e. the outlet of the waters of Gihon into the open air, by which they used to flow into the pool of Siloam, and became a brook; and by some subterraneous contrivance, he directed the waters to the W. side of Jerusalem.' [Comp. note, 2 Sam. 5:8.] HARMER.

Verse 5—8.

(M. R.—20:14—19. 2 K. 6:15—17. 1 John 4:4—6.) These measures seem to have been adopted, and this most encouraging exhortation given, at the approach of Sennacherib's first invasion: Yet Hezekiah was afterwards induced to submit to Sennacherib, and pay him tribute; on this he departed, but not long after renewed his attempts. (2 K. 18:13—16.) SCOTT courageous, [p] be not afraid nor dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the multitude that is with him: [q] for there be more with us than with him:

8 With him is [r] an arm of flesh; but [s] with us is the LORD our God, to help us, and [t] to fight our battles. And the people [*] rested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

9 ¶ After this did [u] Sennacherib king of Assyria send his servants to Jerusalem, B. C. 710. (but he himself laid siege against [x] Lachish, and all his [†] power with him,) unto Hezekiah king of Judah, and unto all Judah that were at Jerusalem, saying,

10 [y] Thus saith Sennacherib, king of Assyria, Whereon do ye trust, that ye abide in the [‡] siege in Jerusalem?

11 Doth not Hezekiah persuade you [z] to give over yourselves to die by famine and by thirst, saying, [a] The LORD our God shall deliver us out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

12 [b] Hath not the same Hezekiah taken away his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, [c] Ye shall worship before [d] one altar, and burn incense upon it?

13 Know ye not what [e] I and my fathers have done unto all the people of other lands? [f] were the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of mine hand?

14 Who was there [g] among all the gods of those nations, that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of mine hand, that [h] your God should be able to deliver you out of mine hand?

15 Now therefore let not Hezekiah [i] deceive you, nor [k] persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand, and out of the hand of my fathers: how [l] much less shall your God deliver you out of mine hand?

16 And his servants spake [m] yet more against the LORD God, and [n] against his servant Hezekiah.

17 He [o] wrote also letters [p] to rail on the LORD God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, [q] As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand.

18 Then [r] they cried with a loud voice in the Jews' speech unto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall, [s] to affright them, and to trouble them; that they might take the city.

19 And they [t] spake against [u] the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the people of the earth, which were [x] the work of the hands of man.

20 And for this cause [y] Hezekiah the king, and [z] the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz, [a] prayed and cried to heaven.

21 And [b] the LORD sent an [c] angel, which [d] cut off all the mighty men of valor, and [e] the leaders and captains, in the camp of the king of Assyria: so he returned [f] with shame of face to his own land. And when [g] he was come into the house of his god, they that came forth of his own bowels, § slew him there with the sword.

22 Thus [h] the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all other, and [i] guided them on every side.

23 And many brought [k] gifts unto the LORD to Jerusalem, [l] and ‖ pres-

---

[p] 20:15. 2 K. 18:30. 19:6,7.
[q] 2 K. 6:16. Rom. 8:31. 1 John 4:4.
[r] Job 40:9. Jer. 17:5.
[s] 13:12. 14:11. Ps. 46:7,11. Is. 8:10. 41:10. Acts 18:10. 2 Tim. 4:17,22.
[t] 20:15. Deut. 20:1,4. Josh. 10:42.

[*] Heb. leaned. 15. 20:20. Is. 36:18.
[u] See on 2 K. 18:17. Is. 36:2.
[x] Josh. 10:31. 12:11. 15:39. Is. 37:8. Mic. 1:13.
[†] Heb. dominion.
[y] See on 2 K. 18:19. Is. 36:4.
[‡] Heb. strong-hold.
[z] See on 2 K. 18:27. Is. 36:12,18.
[a] 15. 2 K. 19:10. Ps. 3:2. 11:1—3. 22:8. 42:10. 71:11. Matt. 27:43.
[b] See on 31:1. 2 K. 18:4,22. Is. 36:7.
[c] See on Deut. 12:13,14,5,6,27.
[d] 4:1. Ex. 27:1—8. 30:1—6. 40:26—29. 1 K. 7:48.
[e] 2 K. 15:29. 17:5,6. 19:11—13,17,18. Is. 10:9,10. 37:12,13,18—20. Dan. 4:30,37.
[f] See on 19. 2 K. 18:33—35. 19:18,19. —Ps. 115:3—8. Is. 44:8—10. Jer. 10:11,12,16. Acts 19:26. 1 Cor. 8:4.
[g] See on Is. 10:11,12.
[h] Ex. 14:3. 15:9—11. Is. 42:8.
[i] See on 2 K. 18:29. 19:10.
[k] 11. 1 K. 22:22. Is. 36:18. Acts 19:26. Gal. 1:10.
[l] Ex. 5:2. Dan. 3:15. John 19:10,11.
[m] Job 15:25,26. Ps. 73:9.
[n] John 15:21.
[o] See on 2 K. 19:14. Neh. 6:5. Is. 37:14.
[p] See on 2 K. 19:22,28. Is. 10:15. 37:23,24,28,29. Rev. 13:6.
[q] 2 K. 19:12.
[r] 2 K. 18:26—28. Is. 36:13.
[s] 1 Sam. 17:10,26. Neh. 6:9.
[t] See on 13—17.
[u] 6:6. Ps. 76:1,2. 78:68. 87:1—3. 132:13,14. Is. 14:32. Heb. 12:22.
[x] Deut. 4:28. 27:15. 2 K. 19:18. Ps. 135:15—18. Is. 2:8. 37:19. 44:16—20. Jer. 1:16. 10:3,9. 32:30. Hos. 8:5,6.
[y] See on 2 K. 19:14—19. Is. 37:14—20.
[z] 2 K. 19:2—4. Is. 37:2—4.
[a] 14:11. 20:6—12. Ps. 50:15. 91:15.
[b] See on 2 K. 19:20,35. Is. 37:21,36,37.
[c] 2 Sam. 24:16. Matt. 13:49,50. Acts 12:23.
[d] Job 9:4. Ps. 76:5,7,12.
[e] Is. 10:8,16—19,33,34. 17:12—14. 29:5—8. 30:30—33. 33:10—12. 36:9. Rev. 6:15,16. 19:17,18.
[f] Ps. 132:18. Prov. 11:2. 16:18.
[g] See on 2 K. 19:36,37. Is. 37:37,38.
§ Heb. made him fall.
[h] Ps. 18:48—50. 144:10. Is. 10:24,25. 31:4,5. 33:22.
[i] Ps. 48:14. 73:24. Is. 58:11. John 16:13. 2 Thes. 3:5.
[k] 2 Sam. 8:10,11. Ezra 7:15—22,27. Ps. 68:29. 72:10. Is. 60:7—9. Matt. 2:11.
[l] 17:11. 1 K. 4:21. 10:10,25.
‖ Heb. precious things. 9:9,10,24.

Verse 19.

God of Jerusalem.] Sennacherib called JEHOVAH 'the God of Jerusalem,' either because that city alone remained in the hands of his worshippers; or because Hezekiah, by abolishing the high places, seemed to have confined to Jerusalem alone, the worship of his God, which before had been spread over the land. SCOTT.

ents to Hezekiah king of Judah: so that [m] he was magnified in the sight of all nations from thenceforth.

[Practical Observations.]

B. C. 713. 24 ¶ In those days [n] Hezekiah was sick to the death, and prayed unto the LORD: and he spake unto him, and he * gave him a sign.

25 But Hezekiah [o] rendered not again, according to the benefit done unto him; for [p] his heart was lifted up: [q] therefore there was wrath upon him, and upon Judah and Jerusalem.

26 Notwithstanding [r] Hezekiah humbled himself for the † pride of his heart, both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so that the wrath of the LORD came not upon them [s] in the days of Hezekiah.

27 ¶ And Hezekiah had [t] exceeding much riches and honor: and he made himself [u] trea-

B. C. 700. suries for silver, and for gold, and for precious stones, and for spices, and for shields, and for all manner of ‡ pleasant jewels;

28 [x] Storehouses also for the increase of corn, and wine, and oil; and [y] stalls for all manner of beasts, and [z] cotes for flocks.

29 Moreover he provided him cities, and [a] possessions of flocks and herds in abundance: for [b] God had given him substance very much.

B. C. 712. 30 This same Hezekiah also [c] stopped the upper water-course of [d] Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. And Hezekiah prospered in all his works.

31 Howbeit [f] in the business of the § ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to inquire of [g] the wonder that was done in the land, God [h] left him [i] to try him, [k] that he might know all that was in his heart.

32 Now the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and his ‖ goodness, behold they are written [l] in the vision of Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, and [m] in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

B. C. 698. 33 And Hezekiah [n] slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the ¶ chiefest of the sepulchres of the sons of brought presents to him, v. 22, 23. By the favor of God, enemies are lost, and friends gained.

V. 24—33. Here we conclude the story of Hezekiah, with three things concerning him:

I. His sickness, and recovery, v. 24. briefly mentioned here; largely, 2 K. 20.

II. His sin, and repentance; also more largely related, 2 K. 20: 12, &c. yet several things here, we had not there.

1. As to the occasion, it is here added, that the king of Babylon's honorable embassy, to congratulate him on his recovery, came to inquire of the wonder done in the land, (v. 31.) either the destruction of the Assyrian army, or the going back of the sun. The sun was their god, they came to inquire concerning the favor he had shown to Hezekiah, that they might honor him whom their god honored, v. 31. These miracles were wrought to alarm and awaken a stupid, careless world, but men were not converted till a greater wonder was there done in the appearing of Jesus Christ; Matt. 2: 1, 2.

2. God left him to himself in it, to try him, v. 31. that, by this trial and his weakness in it, He might know, i. e. it might be known, (an usual Hebraism,) what was in his heart. It is good for us to know ourselves, and our own weakness and sinfulness, that we may not be conceited, or self-confident, but may always think meanly of ourselves, and live in a dependence on divine grace. We know not the corruption of our own hearts, nor what we shall do if God leave us to ourselves. Lord, lead us not into temptation.

3. His sin was, that his heart was lifted up, v. 25. He was proud of the honor God had put on him in so many instances; the honor his neighbors did him in bringing him presents; and now the king of Babylon's sending an embassy to caress and court him, exalted him above measure. When Hezekiah had destroyed other idolatries, he began to idolize himself. O what need have great, and good, and useful men, to study their own infirmities and follies, and their obligations to free grace, that they may never think highly of themselves; and to beg earnestly of God, that He will hide pride from them, and always keep them humble!

4. The aggravation of his sin, was, that he made even those favors of God the food and fuel of his pride, v. 25. It is justly expected, that they who receive mercy from God, should make some suitable returns for the mercies received; and if they do not, their ingratitude will certainly be charged on them. Though we cannot render an equivalent, or the payment of a debt, we must render the acknowledgment of a favor: What shall I render, that may be so accepted? Ps. 116: 12.

5. The divine displeasure he was under for this sin; though but a heart-sin, and the overt-act seemed not only innocent, but civil, (the showing of his treasures to a friend,) yet wrath came on him and his kingdom for it, v. 25. Note, Pride is a sin God hates as much as any other, and particularly in his own people. They that exalt themselves, must expect to be abased, and put under humbling providences. Wrath came on David for his pride in numbering the people.

6. His repentance for this sin, v. 26. Note, (1.) Though God may, for wise and holy ends, suffer his people to fall into sin, yet He will not suffer them to lie still in it; they shall not be utterly cast down. (2.) Heart-sins are to be repented of, though

---

[a] 1:1, 1 Chr. 29:25.
[b] See on 2 K. 20:1—3. Is. 38:1—8.
[c] Or, wrought a miracle for him. See on 2 K. 20:4—11. Is. 38:4—8,21,22.
[d] Deut. 32:6. Ps. 116.12,13. Hos. 14: 2. Luke 17:17,18.
[e] 31. 25:19. 26:16. Deut. 8:12—14, 17. 2 K. 14:10. 20:13. Ez. 28:2,5, 17. Dan. 5:20,23. Hab. 2:4. 2 Cor. 12:7. 1 Tim. 3:6. 1 Pet. 5:5,6.
[f] 24:18. See on 2 Sam. 24:1,10—17. 1 Chr. 21:1,12—17.
[g] 33:12,19,23. 34:27. Lev. 26:40,41. 2 K. 20:19. Jer. 26:18,19. Jam. 4:10.
[h] Heb. lifting up.
[i] 34:27,28. 1 K. 21:29.—See on 2 K. 20:16—18. Is. 39:6—8.
[k] 1:12. 9:27. 17:5.
[l] 1 Chr. 27:25, &c.
[m] ‡ Heb. instruments of desire.
[n] 26:10.
[o] 1 K. 4:26.
[p] 2 Sam. 7:8.
[q] 26:10. Gen. 13:2—6. 1 Chr. 27:29 31. Job 1:3. 42:12.
[r] 25:9. Deut. 8:18. 1 Sam. 2:7. 1 Chr. 29:12. Prov. 10:22. 1 Tim. 6 17,18.
[s] See on 4.—Is. 22:9—11.
[t] 1 K. 1:33,38,45.
[u] Josh. 1:7,8. 1 s. 1:1—3.
[v] 2 K. 20.12,13. Is. 39:1,2.
[w] § Heb. interpreters.
[x] 2 K. 20:8—11. Is. 38:8.
[y] Judg. 16:20. Ps. 27:9. 51:11,12. 119: 116,117. John 15:5.
[z] Gen. 22:1. Deut. 8:16. Job 1:11,12. 2:3—6. Ps. 139:1,2,23,24. Prov. 17: 3. Zech. 13:9. Mal. 3:2,3. 1 Pet. 1:7.
[a] Deut. 8:2. 13:3.
[b] ‖ Heb. kindnesses. 31:20,21.
[c] Is. 36:—39:
[d] 2 K. 18:—20:
[e] See on 1 K. 1:21. 2:10. 11:43.
[f] ¶ Or, highest.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—23. Satan and his emissaries are most eager to give us disturbance, when we are most usefully employed: but God restrains them, till He sees it needful to correct our misconduct, or to try our faith and constancy, and then they are permitted, under certain restrictions, to assault us.—It is very lawful and proper to employ prudent precautions and means of defence, when there is a prospect of danger or difficulty: but men seldom attend to these things, without confiding in them. We should therefore encourage ourselves and each other, to trust wholly in the Lord. What need then have we to fear the strongest arm of flesh, when we have the 'LORD our God to help us, and to fight our battles?' Yet such a confidence will excite the contempt and reviling of proud, ungodly men.—The more undaunted any one is, while trusting the Lord in the path of duty, the more will some impious wretches rail, blaspheme, menace, boast, and triumph; especially when grown insolent by success, and intoxicated with absolute authority. But let the oppressed and insulted believer pray earnestly to the Lord, that he may not be driven from his confidence. None were ever confounded, who put their trust in Him.

SCOTT.

Verses 24—26.

(2 K. 20: Is. 38:39:) These events are supposed, by many learned men, to have been previous to Sennacherib's first invasion, as evidently occurring in the 14th year of Hezekiah's reign. (2 K. 18:13. 20:1.)—The princes and the people of Judah, as well as the king, had been very ungrateful for their many mercies: and when 'Hezekiah was humbled for the pride of his heart,' and had received Isaiah's alarming message, it is probable he made open confession of his offence, and called on the people to join him in solemn humiliation and prayer on that account. It may, however, be doubted, whether the ambassadors from the king of Babylon came to Jerusalem before Sennacherib's last invasion of the land; as the treasures, which Hezekiah showed them, seem to have been obtained by the result of that invasion, and the presents, which were afterwards brought to him. (Note, 27—29.)—This chapter is in great measure an abridgment of those chs. in 2 K. and in the prophecy of Isaiah, which are referred to.—Gave him a sign. (24) Or, 'wrought a miracle for him.' M. SCOTT.

Verses 27—29.

The riches, here spoken of, seem to have arisen, in great measure, from the immense spoil found in the Assyrian camp. (Is. 33:2—6, 23, 24.) Storehouses, &c. (28) 26:10. 1 Chr. 27:25—31. Job 1:2, 3 v. 3. 42:10—17, v. 12. Prov. 27:23—27. Ec. 5:9—12.) SCOTT.

Verses 30—33.

M. R.—Note, 3, 4, v. 4.—2 K. 20:20, 21.—The princes. (31) 'The princes of Babylon sent to inquire of the wonder that had been done in the land:' but it is not certain, that the Chaldeans observed any change in the motion of the heavenly bodies. The report of the miracles which attended Hezekiah's recovery, might suffice for that purpose. Yet, in Isaiah it is said, 'The sun returned, &c.' (Is. 38:8.)—The Lord on this occasion withdrew from Hezekiah the immediate efficacy of his grace, and left him to follow the dictates of his own natural propensity, 'to try him, that He might know all that was in his heart.' The omniscient God before knew the whole; but, having by the trial made the case evident, He thus pointed it out to Hezekiah, David: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem [o] did him honor at his death. [p] And Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Manasseh reigns long, is very wicked, multiplies idolatries, corrupts the people, and rejects the admonitions of God, 1—10. He is carried captive to Babylon; he humbles himself greatly before God, with earnest and fervent prayer; and is restored to his kingdom, 11—13. He fortifies his dominions, and restores the worship of God, 14—17. His acts and prayers, 18, 19. He dies, and Amon succeeds, who reigns wickedly, and is murdered, 20—24. The people slay the murderers, and make Josiah king, 25.

[a] MANASSEH was [b] twelve years old when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem;

2 But did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, [c] like unto the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

3 For [d] he [*] built again the high places [e] which Hezekiah his father had broken down, and [f] he reared up altars for Baalim, and [g] made groves, and worshipped all [h] the host of heaven, and served them.

4 Also [i] he built altars in the house of the LORD, whereof the LORD had said, [k] In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven, [l] in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

6 And he [m] caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom: also [n] he observed times, and used enchantments, and used witchcraft, and [o] dealt with a familiar spirit, and with wizards: he wrought much evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And he set a carved image, the idol which he had made, [p] in the house of God, of which [q] God had said to David, and to Solomon his son, In this house, and in Jerusalem, [r] which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

8 Neither [s] will I any more remove the foot of Israel from out of the land, which I have appointed for your fathers; [t] so that they will take heed [u] to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law and the statutes and the ordinances [x] by the hand of Moses.

o 16:14. Gen. 50:10,11. Num. 20:29. Deut. 34:8. 1 Sam. 2:30. 25:1. Prov. 10:7.
p See on 33:1,&c. a 32:33. 2 K. 21:1. 1 Chr. 3:13. Matt. 1:10. Manasses.
b 34:1,2. Ec. 10:16. Is. 3:4,12. c 28:3. 36:14. Lev. 18:24—30. 20:22, 23. Deut. 12:31. 18:9—14. 2 K. 17: 11,15. 21:2,9. Ezra 9:14. Ps. 106: 35—40. Ez. 11:12. d Ec. 2:19. 9:18.
* Heb. returned and built.
e 30:14. 31:1. 32:12. 2 K. 18:4. 21:3.
f 28:2—4. Judg. 2:11—13.
g Deut. 16:21. 1 K. 14:23. Jer. 17:2.
h Deut. 4:19. 17:3. 2 K. 23:5,6,11. Jer. 8:2. 19:13. Zeph. 1:5. Acts 7:42.
i 15. 34:3,4. 2 K. 21:4,5. Jer. 7:30. k 6:6. 7:16. 32:19. Deut. 12:11. 1 K. 8:29. 9:3.
l 4:9. Jer. 32:34,35. Ez. 8:7—18.
m 28:3. Lev. 18:21. 20:2. Deut. 12: 31. 18:10. 2 K. 21:6. 23:10. Jer. 7:31,32. Ez. 23:37,39. n Lev. 19:26. 20:6. Deut. 18:10—14. 1 Sam. 15:23. 2 K. 17:17. Is. 47:9—12. Gal. 5:20.
o 2 K. 21:6. 23:24. 1 Chr. 10:13. Is. 8:19. 19:3.
p 2 K. 21:7,8. 23:6.
q See on 4.—1 K. 8:29. Ps. 132:13,14.
r 6:6. 1 K. 8:44,48. 11:13,32. Ps. 78: 68.
s See on 2 Sam. 7:10. 1 Chr. 17:9.
t See on 7:17—22.—Deut. 28:1—14. 30: 15—20. Is. 1:19,20. Ez. 33:25,26. u Deut. 4:40. 5:1,31—33. 6:1. 8:1. 27:26. Luke 1:6. Gal. 3:10—13.
x See on Lev. 8:36. 10:11.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 24—33. Alas! how seldom do we in any good degree render to the Lord according to his benefits! None, who know themselves, and watch over their own hearts, will venture to cast a stone at Hezekiah; but they will all, one by one, depart convicted in their consciences of similar guilt, and crying out, 'God be merciful to me a sinner!'—Blessed be God, death will soon end the believer's conflict; then every sin will be abolished, and he may safely be trusted with the most glorious exaltation and uninterrupted felicity; and will no more, to all eternity, be tempted to intercept the least mite of that revenue of praise, which belongs to the God of his salvation.—While we are here, we ought to honor those to whom honor is due, though they be far from perfect: and we may well respect the memories, and should imitate the example, of those who have been pious and useful in their generation: for, a short time may perhaps awfully convince survivors, that the loss of them was far greater, than at first could be at all supposed. SCOTT.

and to all succeeding ages, for their humiliation, warning, and instruction. (Deut. 8:2, 3.) For it hence appears undeniable, that the best of men, if left to themselves, are prone to pride and ostentation, to idolize themselves and their fellow creatures, to withdraw their dependence from God, to rob Him of his glory, and to be ungrateful for his mercies. (2 Cor. 12:7—10.) 'God suffered him to behave according to his own inclinations, without any special motion from Him; that Hezekiah might know, he was not so strong as he imagined, if left to himself without God. . . . God made proof of Hezekiah, as he had done of many other good men, whether he would entirely obey Him or not. . . . God, no doubt, . . . saw the pride and vanity that lurked in Hezekiah's heart; which was hid from every one but God Himself, who now suffered him to discover it for his humiliation.' Patrick. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXIII. V. 7. A carved image, the idol, &c.] 'A graven image of the grove,' says 2 K. 21:7. Wilkinson, on opening (in 1827) one of the tombs of Qoornet Murraee, at Thebes, wherein was written 'the name of the elder brother of Amunoph 3d, [p. 214. vol. I. and note, Ex. 5:2.] found the following picture. 'The king is seated on his throne, within a richly ornamented canopy [note, 2 K. 17:18.], attended by a fan-bearer, who also holds his sceptre; a procession advances in 4 lines: the lowest is of Egyptians of the sacerdotal and military classes, some ladies of consequence, and young people bringing bouquets and boughs of trees. They have just entered the gates of the royal court, and are preceded by a scribe, and others of the priestly order, who do obeisance before the deputy of his majesty, as he stands to receive them. (Prostration before kings, &c. and persons of consequence, was common with the Egyptians: [comp. 1 Sam. 24:8, &c.] and the present Copts kneel down and kiss the ground before their patriarch.) In the 2d line black "Chiefs of Cush" or Ethiopia bring presents of gold rings, copper, skins, fans or umbrellas of featherwork, and an ox, bearing on its horns an artificial garden, and a lake of fish. This offering will appear less singular, when we think of our own flower-pots, and vases of gold and silver-fish; which last are not less incomprehensible to the modern Egyptian than the above mentioned lake may seem to us. The garden indeed may have been of artificial flowers, which were known to the Egyptians. [The above little facts may serve as a caution to some translators, who are fond of departing from and explaining away the literal meaning of the words of Scripture, because they seem so strange.] Having placed their offerings, these prostrate themselves before the monarch. In the 3d line, besides 9 So Manasseh [y] made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err, and [z] to do worse than [a] the heathen, whom the LORD had destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 And [b] the LORD spake to Manasseh, and to his people: but they would not hearken.

[Practical Observations.]

11 Wherefore [c] the LORD brought upon them [d] the captains of the host * of [e] the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh [f] among the thorns, and [g] bound him with † fetters, and carried him to Babylon.

12 And [h] when he was in affliction, [i] he besought [k] the LORD his God, [l] and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, 13 And prayed unto him: and [m] he was entreated of him, and heard his supplication, and [n] brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh [o] knew that the LORD he was God.

14 ¶ Now after this [p] he built a wall without the city of David, on the west side of [q] Gihon, in the valley, even to the entering in at [r] the fish-gate, and compassed about ‡ Ophel, and raised it up a very great height, and [s] put captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah.

15 And [t] he took away the strange gods, and the idol out of the house of the LORD, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the LORD, and in Jerusalem, and cast them out of the city.

16 And he [u] repaired the altar of the LORD, and sacrificed thereon [v] peace-offerings, and [x] thank-offerings, and [y] commanded Judah to serve the LORD God of Israel.

y 1 K. 14:16. 15:26. 2 K. 21:16. 23:26. 24:3,4. Prov. 29:12. Mic. 6:16. z See on 2. 2 K. 21:9—11.—Ez. 16:45—47. a Lev. 18:24. Deut. 2:21. Josh. 24:8. 2 K. 17:8—11. b 36:15,16. Neh. 9:29,30. Jer. 25:4—7. 44:4,5. Zech. 1:4. Acts 7:51,52. c Deut. 28:36.
d Is. 10:8. 36:9.
* Heb. which were the king's.
e Neh. 9:32,37. Is. 5:26—30. 7:18—20. f 1 Sam. 13:6.
g 2 K. 23:33. 25:6. Job 36:8—11. Ps. 107:10—12. † Or, chains.
h 28:22. Lev. 26:39—42. Deut. 4:30, 31. Jer. 31:18—20. Hos. 5:15. Mic. 6:9. Luke 15:16—18. i 18,19. Ps. 50:15. Acts 9:11.
k See on 28:5.
l 19,23. 32:26. Ex. 10:3. Luke 18:14, 15. Jam. 4:10. 1 Pet. 5:5,6. m Ezra 8:23. Job 22:23,27. 33:16—30. Ps. 32:3—5. 36:5. Is. 55:6—9. Jer. 29:12,13 Matt. 7:7,8. Luke 23:42, 43. John 4:10. n Ezra 7:27. Prov. 16:7. 21:1. Matt. 6:33.
o Deut. 29:6. Ps. 46:10. Jer. 24:7. Dan. 4:34,35. John 17:3. Heb. 8:11.
p 32:5.
q 32:30. 1 K. 1:33,45.
r Neh. 3:3. 12:39. Zeph. 1:10.
‡ Or, the tower. 27:3. Neh. 3:26,27.
s 11:11,12. 17:19.
t See on 3—7.—2 K. 21:7. Is. 2:17—21. Ez. 18:20—22. Hos. 14:1—3. Matt. 3:8.
u 29:18. 1 K. 18:30.
v Lev. 3:1,&c.
x Lev. 7:12—18.
y 9. 14:4.—See on 30:12.—Gen. 18:19. Luke 22:32.

V. 11—20. We have seen Manasseh by his wickedness undoing the good his father had done; here we have him by repentance undoing the evil he himself had done. It is strange this was not so much as mentioned in Kings. But, perhaps, the design of that history being to show the wickedness of the nation which brought destruction on them; and this repentance of Manasseh, and the benefit of it, being personal only, and not national, it is overlooked there; yet here it is fully related, and a memorable instance it is of the riches of God's pardoning mercy, and the power of his renewing grace. As to Manasseh's repentance, here is,

I. The occasion of it, to wit, his afflictions. In his distress, he humbled himself, and returned to God. Sanctified afflictions often prove happy means of conversion. God brought a foreign enemy upon him; the king of Babylon, here called king of Assyria, because he had made himself master of Assyria, which he would the more easily do, for the defeat of Sennacherib's army, and its destruction, before Jerusalem. He aimed at the treasures the ambassadors had seen, and all those precious things; but God sent him to chastise a sinful people, and reduce a straying prince. The captains took Manasseh among the thorns, in some bush or other, perhaps in his garden, where he had hid himself. Or, it is spoken figuratively; he was perplexed in his counsels, and embarrassed in his affairs. They bound him, who had been held before with the cords of his own iniquity, and carried him prisoner to Babylon. About what time of his reign this was, we are not told; the Jews say it was in his 22d year.

II. The expressions of it; (v. 12, 13.) when in affliction, he had time to bethink himself, and reason enough too. Had he been a prince in the palace of Babylon, probably he had been confirmed in his idolatry; but, being a captive in the prisons

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—10. It would be extremely distressing to pious parents, magistrates, or ministers, if they could foresee the consequences of their removal, in the conduct of their children or people, and in the subversion of their most important regulations. Yet good instructions and examples may remain, like seed under the ground, for a long time unperceived, and at length spring up and bring forth much fruit. Without disquieting ourselves about futurity, we may therefore cheerfully commit our families, and our endeavors to do good, as well as our souls and bodies, into the hand of God, assured that our labors will not prove wholly ineffectual. (Ps. 90: 17. Ec. 9: 1—3.)—The tendency of human nature to evil is so strong, that nothing but divine grace can give it a contrary bias: and when that power is in any degree suspended or withheld, men return to evil, as a stone falls downwards; and run, with rapid and accelerated motion, continually further and further into transgression. Yet, 'where sin hath abounded, grace hath often much more abounded:' (Rom. 5. 20, 21.) and some of every description of sinners shall be brought to repentance and salvation, to prove that 'with God nothing is impossible.'

SCOTT.

rings of gold, (which with rings of silver was the money of the Egyptians and Ethiopians; and is still about Sennaar,) and bags of precious stones, [comp. 31:23, 27, &c.] the presents are a camelopard, panthers' skins, and long-horned cattle, with heads strangely ornamented with the hands and heads (probably artificial) of negroes. In the upper line, the queen of the same people arrives in a chariot drawn by oxen and overshadowed by an umbrella accompanied by her attendants, some with presents of gold. She alights and advances, but whether this refers to any marriage, or to the annual tribute, I cannot decide. Among the presents are a chariot, shields covered with bull's hides, bound with metal borders, and studded with pins, [comp. Job 15:26.] (not unlike some described by Homer,) chairs, couches, head-stools, (a half-cylinder of well-polished (acacia) wood to support the head, Porphyry) [comp. 1 Sam. 26:8, 12.] and other objects.' ED.

Verses 9, 10.

(2 K. 21:9, 10.) 'A most prodigious change from the height of piety in his father's time, into the sink of impiety in this! . . . Strigelius, . . . prof. of theol. at Heidelberg, left this remark in his lectures on this place, near 140 years ago: (i. e. soon after the establishment of the reformation in Germany:)—"Now we have the word of God abundantly in all wisdom, and pious princes patronise both those that preach, and those that learn the Gospel. But this plenty of the word we now enjoy, (I tremble to speak it, but I must speak it, because it will come to pass,) shall be taken away: and that sad, mournful time will come, when the public assemblies of the church shall be scattered, and a few pious souls shall meet with fear in a corner, to communicate among themselves the fragments of the heavenly doctrine, and give God thanks for these remainders." Which we have seen fulfilled in that country, and in France, and other places.' Patrick.—This apparent prophecy seems to have been merely a presage grounded on the vicissitudes of things, especially in respect of religion, and the tendency of prosperity to induce carnal security. SCOTT.

Verse 11.

Here we find a most instructive view of Manasseh's latter years; and this very man became as eminent an instance of the power, riches, and freeness of divine mercy and grace, as any recorded in the Scripture.—We are not informed what devastations these invaders made in Judah and Jerusalem.—Many suppose, that Esar-haddon, having got possession of Babylon, and entirely changed the inhabitants of the kingdom of Israel, about the same time sent to invade Judah, and carried Manasseh captive to Babylon, in the 22d year of his reign. But the Scripture does not mention the date of this event, nor the name of the Assyrian king: and from the scriptural description of Manasseh's reign, as exceedingly wicked, it seems highly improbable, that he lived above 30 years after his repentance and reformation, as on this supposition he must have done. 'This was 33 years before his death, as the Jews make account. . . . But both Kimchi and Abarbinel confess, that this relies upon a weak foundation; as doth the other thing, that he was carried away in the 22d year of his reign.' Patrick. SCOTT.

Among the thorns.] The Heb. may mean 'they put upon him manacles.' Hewlett. 'Who took him alive.' Syr. Arab. Boothr. ED.

Verses 12, 13.

When Manasseh was deprived of his authority and liberty, and secluded from his evil counsellors and companions, and from all his pleasures; in chains, and in a prison; without any other prospect, than of ending his days in that wretched situation; he had leisure to reflect on what had passed. Thus, by the special grace of God, his solitude and affliction brought him to view his own conduct and character in another light than he had done before; and he began to pray for mercy and deliverance, 'humbling himself greatly before the God of his fathers.' (Note, Luke 15:17—19.) These humble supplications the Lord graciously accepted: and inclined the king of Assyria to liberate his prisoner, and to reinstate him in his authority. 'Then Manasseh knew that the LORD he was God,' alone able to punish, or to deliver: he likewise became acquainted with Him as a God of salvation; and learned to fear, trust, love, and obey Him. (1 Chr. 28:9.) SCOTT.

Verses 15—17.

Manasseh totally suppressed all open idolatry: and it might arise from other causes than his want of zeal, that the high places were not removed. The inveterate habits of the people; the powerful opposition of that party, [the aristocracy, perhaps, as opposed to the hierarchy, comp. 23:1, 2, 14, 16. 24:17, 18, 20.] which had concurred in his former idolatries, and of the nation in general; and the weakness of his authority, through ill success, and the power of the Assyrian monarch; would occasion obstacles, which he might not be able to overcome. (14:2—5. 17:6. 20:31—34, v 33. 1 K. 15:14.) But there is not 17 Nevertheless [z] the people did sacrifice still in the high places, yet unto the LORD their God only.

18 ¶ Now [a] the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and [b] his prayer unto his God, and the words of [c] the seers that spake to him in the name of the LORD God of Israel, behold, they are written [d] in the book of the kings of Israel.

19 [e] His prayer also, and how God was entreated of him, and [f] all his sin, and his trespass, and the places wherein he built high places, and set up groves and graven images, [g] before he was humbled; behold, they are written among the sayings of [*] the seers.

B. C. 643. 20 So [h] Manasseh slept with his fathers, and they buried him in his own house: and [i] Amon his son reigned in his stead.

21 ¶ Amon was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned [j] two years in Jerusalem.

22 But he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, [k] as did Manasseh his father: for Amon sacrificed unto all the carved images which Manasseh his father had made, and served them;

23 And [l] humbled not himself before the LORD, as Manasseh his father had humbled himself; but Amon [†] trespassed more and more 24 And [m] his servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house.

25 But the people of the land [n] slew all them that had conspired against king Amon: and [o] the people of the land made [p] Josiah his son king in his stead.

of Babylon, he was convinced of it, and reclaimed from it. He applied himself to Jehovah as his God now, renouncing all others, and resolving to cleave to Him only; the God of his fathers, and a God in covenant with him. He humbled himself greatly before Him; was truly sorry for his sins, ashamed of them, and afraid of the wrath of God. Our hearts should be humble under humbling providences, then we accommodate ourselves to them, and answer God's end in them. He prayed to Him for the pardon of sin, and the return of his favor. Prayer is the relief of penitents, the relief of the afflicted. That is a good prayer, and very pertinent in this case, which we find among the apocryphal books, entitled, The prayer of Manasses, when holden captive in Babylon; whether it was his or no, is uncertain.

III. God's gracious acceptance of it, v. 13, 19. Though affliction drives us to God, He will not therefore reject us, if in sincerity we seek Him, for afflictions are sent on purpose to bring us to Him. As a token of favor, God made a way for his escape; afflictions are continued no longer than till they have done their work; when Manasseh is brought back to his God and his duty, he shall soon be brought back to his kingdom. See how ready God is to accept and welcome returning sinners, and how swift to show mercy. Let not great sinners despair, when Manasseh himself, on his repentance, found favor with God. 1 Tim. 1: 16. Isa. 1: 18.

IV. The fruits meet for repentance after his return, v. 15, 16. He turned from his sins: returned to his duty; for he repaired the altar of the Lord, and sacrificed thereon. Nay, he now used his power to reform his people, as before he had abused it to corrupt them. Those that truly repent, will not only return to God themselves, but will do all they can to bring back those that have been seduced by their example We find he prevailed to bring them off from their false gods, but not from their high places, v. 17. he could not carry the reformation so far as he had carried the corruption. It is easy to debauch, but not so easy to reform again.

V. His prosperity, in some measure, after his repentance. He might plainly see it was sin that ruined him; for when he returned to God, God returned: and then he built a wall about the city of David, v. 14. for by sin he had unwalled it. He also put captains of war in the fenced cities, for the security of his country. Josephus says, that all the rest of his time, he was so changed for the better, that he was looked upon as a very happy man.

Lastly, Here is the conclusion of his history. The heads of those things, for a full narrative of which we are referred to other writings then extant, are more than of any of the kings, v. 18, 19. He was buried privately. Penitents may recover their comfort sooner than their credit.

V. 21—25. We have little recorded concerning Amon, but enough, unless it were better. He did as Manasseh had done in the days of his apostasy v. 22. They who think this an evidence that Manasseh did not truly repent, forget how many good kings had wicked sons. Only, it should seem Manasseh was in this defective, that he did not utterly destroy the images, according to the law, Deut. 7: 5. How necessary that law was, this shows: for the carved images being only thrown by, and not burnt, Amon knew where to find them, soon set them up, and sacrificed to them. It is added, to justify God in cutting him off so soon, That he outdid his father in sinning; and came short of him in repenting. It is not so much sin, as impenitence in sin, that ruins men; not so much that they offend, as that they do not humble themselves for their offences; not the disease, but the neglect of the remedy.

Observe his speedy destruction, v. 24. Perhaps, he promised himself he should repent, as his father did, in the latter end of his days. But his case shows what a madness it is to presume on that. He rebelled against God, and his own servants rebelled against him. Herein God was righteous, but they wicked, and justly did the people of the land put them to death as traitors. The lives of kings are particularly under the protection of Providence, and the laws both of God and man.

z 15:17. 32:12. 1 K. 22:43. 2 K. 15:4.
a 20:34. 32:32.—See on 1 K. 11:41.
b See on 12,13,19.
c 19. 1 Sam. 9:9. 2 K. 17:13. Is. 29: 10. 30:10. Am. 7:12. Mic. 3:7.
d See on 1 K. 14:19. 15:31.
e 11,12,19. Prov. 15:8. Acts 9:11.
f See on 1—19.
g See on 12.—30:11. 36:12. Jer. 44:10. Dan. 5:22.
* Or, Hosai.
h See on 3:33. 2 K. 21:18.
i 2 K. 21:19—25. 1 Chr. 3:14. Matt. 1:10. j 1. Luke 12:19,20. Jam. 4:13—15. k See on 1—10. 2 K. 21:1—11,20.—Ez. 20:18.
l See on 1,12,19.—Jer. 8:12.
† Heb. multiplied trespass. 28:22: 2 Tim. 3:13.
m 24:25,26. 25:27,28. 2 Sam. 4:5—12. 2 K. 21.23—26. Ps. 55:23. Rom. 11: 22. n Gen. 9:5,6. Num. 35:31,33.
o 26:1. 36:1.
p See on 34:1.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 11—25. When the objects of the Lord's special love disregard the rebukes of his Word, He will let them feel his chastening rod: and they may truly say, 'Before I was afflicted, I went astray; but now have I kept thy word.' The effects of a pious education, or of solid religious instructions, often show themselves in affliction: the troubles themselves verify the warnings of pious relatives or teachers; and worse things arise before the mind, as the dreaded consequence of continuing in sin. Yet all this would not have an abiding effect, if afflictions were not a 'mean of grace,' which God Himself uses and blesses, as evidently as He does those which He commands us to employ for ourselves and for each other. Wherever there is a sinner of whom it can truly be said, 'Behold he prayeth,' there will the Lord be found a God that heareth prayer. When a sinner in his affliction beseeches the Lord, and 'humbles himself greatly before Him;' when he condemns himself, ingenuously confesses his sins, and is covered with shame, and melted into godly sorrow; when he renounces all hope but in undeserved mercy, and every plea but in the Redeemer's name, and seeks forgiveness and salvation before all other things; he will assuredly find access and acceptance; and his future life will evince, that his repentance, faith, and love, have united in bringing him to hate and renounce all his sins, and to 'walk henceforth in newness of life.' Let sinners then be willing to know the worst of their case; for it is by no means desperate: let them consider all their pains and sorrows as so many calls to humble themselves before God, to call upon Him, and to 'acquaint themselves with Him, that they may be at peace.' And let not the hearts of those, who are thus seeking Him, yield to discouragement; but let them humble themselves yet more and more, and 'pray always and not faint.'—Let those who trifle and procrastinate, because a merciful God has long borne with a few most notorious rebels, and at length granted them repentance and forgiveness of sins, meditate upon the example of Amon; and tremble, lest He make them monuments of his righteous vengeance. SCOTT.

---

the most remote intimation, that God did not accept his endeavors. Yet the opposition or hypocrisy of the people, who had readily concurred in his iniquities, but refused to imitate his repentance, prevented it from being a national blessing, as his crimes had formed and occasioned a load of national sin, 'which the LORD would not pardon.' (2 K. 23:26, 27. Jer. 15:2—4.) SCOTT.

Verses 18, 19.

The repeated mention of Manasseh's prayer, 'and how God was entreated of him,' and of his being humbled, are well worthy our notice. This humble, supplicating frame of mind forms, as it were, a crisis in the sinner's case; and from the moment he is brought into it, he enters on a new state, and commences a new life, however wicked he before has been. (M. R.) The prayer, contained in the Apocrypha, and ascribed to Manasseh, probably was composed long after: but no doubt he prayed continually and fervently, with particular confessions of his sins, and with all that unstudied copiousness, which a burdened conscience, a broken heart, trembling fears, wavering hopes, and fervent desires, will invariably dictate. (Job 33:19—30. Acts 9:10—14, v. 11.) 'As if he had said, How he continued to pray till God was entreated of him.' Patrick.—Instead of 'the seers,' (19) the M. R. is Hosai, and some suppose it to have been the name of a prophet in those days. SCOTT.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Josiah reigns well, and destroys idolatry both in Judah and Israel, 1—7. He provides for the repair of the temple, 8—13. Hilkiah finds the book of the law, and reads it before the king; who is greatly alarmed, and sends to inquire of God by the prophetess Huldah, 14—22. Huldah predicts the destruction of Jerusalem, but not till after Josiah's death, 23—28. He causes the law to be read in a solemn assembly, and renews the covenant between God and the people, 29—33.

[a] JOSIAH was [b] eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem one and thirty years.

2 And he did that which was [c] right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the ways of
B. C. 634. David his father, and [d] declined neither to the right hand nor to the left.

3 For in the eighth year of his reign, [e] while he was yet young, he began [f] to seek after the God of David his father: and in the twelfth year [g] he began to purge
B. C. 630. Judah and Jerusalem from [h] the high places, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images.

4 And they [i] brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; and the * images that were on high above them he cut down; and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images he brake in pieces, and [k] make dust of them, and strowed it upon the † graves of them that had sacrificed unto them.

5 And [l] he burnt the bones of the priests upon their altars, and [m] cleansed Judah and Jerusalem.

6 And so did he [n] in the cities of Manasseh, and Ephraim, and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, with their ‡ mattocks round about.

7 And when he had broken down the altars and the groves, and had [o] beaten the graven images § into powder, and cut down all the idols throughout all the land of Israel, [p] he returned to Jerusalem.

B. C. 624. 8 ¶ Now in [p] the eighteenth year of his reign, when he had purged the land, and the house, he [r] sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, and [s] Maaseiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the [t] recorder, to repair the house of the LORD his God.

9 And when they came to [u] Hilkiah the high priest, [x] they delivered the money that was brought into the house of God, which the Levites that kept the doors had gathered of the hand of [y] Manasseh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, and of all Judah and Benjamin; and [z] they returned to Jerusalem.

10 And they put it [a] in the hand of the workmen that had the oversight of the house of the LORD, and they gave it to the workmen that wrought in the house of the LORD, to repair and mend the house:

11 Even to the artificers and builders gave they it, to buy hewn stone, and timber for couplings, and to ‖ floor the houses which [b] the kings of Judah had destroyed.

12 And the men did the work [c] faithfully: and the overseers of them were Jahath and Obadiah, the Levites, of the sons of Merari; and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the sons of the Kohathites, to set it forward; and other of the Levites, [d] all that could skill of instruments of music.

13 Also they were over [e] the bearers of burdens, and were overseers of all that wrought

CHAP. XXXIV. Before we see Judah and Jerusalem ruined, we shall yet see some glorious years, while good Josiah sits at the helm. By his pious endeavors for reformation, God tried them yet once more; if they had known, in this their day of visitation, the things that belonged to their peace, and improved them, their ruin might have been prevented. But, after this reign, they were hid from their eyes, and the next reigns brought an utter desolation on them.

V. 1—7. 1. I fear, that in the beginning of Josiah's reign, things went much as in his father's time, because, being a child, he must have left the management of them to others; so that it was not till his 12th year, which goes far in the number of his years, that the reformation began, v. 3.

2. He reigned well, v. 2.

3. While young, about 16 years old, he began to seek after God, v. 3. We have reason to think he had not so good an education as Manasseh had; yet he thus sought God when young. It is the duty and interest of young people, and will particularly be the honor of young gentlemen, as soon as they come to years of understanding, to begin to seek God; for they that seek Him early shall find Him.

4. In his 12th year, when, it is probable he took the administration of the government entirely into his own hands, he began to purge his kingdom from the remains of idolatry; he destroyed the high places, groves, images, altars, all the utensils of idolatry, v. 3, 4. This is here said to be in his 12th year, but it was said, 2 K. 23: 23. to be in his 18th year; something was done toward it now in his 12th year; but, probably, it was not thoroughly done till they found the book of the law six years after; but here the whole work is laid together briefly, which was much more largely and particularly related in Kings.

V. 8—13. Here, 1. Orders are given by the king for the repair of the temple, v. 8. When he had purged the house of its corruptions, he began to fit it for the services to be performed in it. Thus we must do by the spiritual temple of the heart; get it cleansed from the pollutions of sin, and then renewed, so as to be transformed into the image of God.

2. Effectual care is taken about it; the Levites went about the country, and gathered money towards it, which was returned to the three trustees mentioned, v. 8. They brought it to Hilkiah the high priest, (v. 9.) and he and they put it into the hands of workmen, both overseers and laborers, who undertook to do it, as we say, in the gross, v. 10, 11. It is observed, the workmen were industrious and honest, (v. 12.) and workmen are not completely faithful if they are not both careful and diligent, also that the overseers were ingenious; not that their skill in music could be of any use in architecture, but it was an evidence they were men of sense and ingenuity, and particularly that their genius lay toward the mathematics, which qualified them very much for this trust. [Indeed, it seems probable, that the same contrivance, or faculty of constructing, is used in building, as in adjusting a composition in music, or, as the phrase may mean, the constructing of a musical instrument; and the use of the faculty in one way would fit it for use in another; nor would the ready command of the muscles of the hand, acquired in playing on an instrument, be at all amiss in handling the tools of the mechanic. But these persons were probably appointed, because they had been accustomed to arrange work for large bodies of a 33:25. 1 K. 13:2. 2 K. 22:1. 1 Chr. 3:14,15. Jer. 1:2. Zeph. 1:1. Matt. 1:10,11. Josias. b 24:1. 25:1. 33:1. 1 Sam. 2:18,26. 1 K. 3:7—9. Ec. 4:13. c 14:2. 17:3. 29:2. 1 K. 14:8. 15:5. 2 K. 22:2. d Deut. 5:32. Josh. 1:7. 23:6. Prov. 4:27.

e 1 Chr. 22:5. 29:1. Ps. 119:9. Ec. 12: 1. 2 Tim. 3:15.
f See on 1 Chr. 28:9.—Prov. 8:17. Matt. 6:33.
g See on 33:17,22. 2 K. 23:4,14.
h 30:14. See on 2 K. 18:4.
i 33:3. Ex. 23:24. Lev. 26:30. Deut. 7:5,25.
* Or, sun images. 14:5. 2 K. 23:4,5,11.
k 7. Ex. 32:20. Deut. 9:21. 2 K. 23: 12. Ps. 18:42. Is. 27:9.
† Heb. face of the graves. 2 K. 10:26, 27. 23:4,6.
l 1 K. 13:2. 2 K. 23:16. Jer. 8:1,2. m 7. Num. 35:33. Jer. 3:10. 4:14. Ez. 22:24.
n 30:1,10,11. 31:1. 2 K. 23:15—20.
‡ Or, mauls. 1 Sam. 13:20,21. Prov. 25:18. Is. 7:25.
o See on h.—Deut. 9:21.
§ Heb. to make powder.
p 31:1.
q Jer. 1:2,3.
r 2 K. 22:3,12,14. Jer. 26:24. 29:3. 36: 10. 39:14. 40:11. Ez. 8:11.
s Jer. 21:1. 29:21,25. 37:3.
t 2 Sam. 8:16. 20:24. 1 Chr. 18:15.
u 14,15,18,20,22. 2 K. 22:4. 23:4
x See on 24:11—14. 2 K. 22:5—7. Phil. 4:3.
y 30:10,18. 31:1.
z 7.
a 2 K. 12:11,12,14. 22:5,6. Ezra 3:7.
‖ Or, rafter.
b See on 33:4—7,22.
c 2 K. 12:15. 22:7. Neh. 7:2. Prov. 28:20. 1 Cor. 4:2. d 1 Chr. 6:31,&c. 15:16—22. 16:4,5, 41,42. 23:5. 25:1,&c. e 2:18. 8:10. Neh. 4:10.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXIV. V. 3—7. This passage seems a compendious account of Josiah's reformation, perhaps without much respect to the order of time. SCOTT.

Verses 8—13.

The temple began to go to decay during the idolatries of Manasseh: and the wicked reign of Amon, and the long minority of Josiah, rendered it much in need of a thorough repair. All that could skill, &c. (12) It seems, that the Levites, who attended by courses, in the intervals of their proper work, assisted by turns in superintending the workmen; nor were those excepted who were employed in psalmody: thus they became doubly useful, and saved the expense of other overseers. (1 Chr. 23.2—6.) ID.

(12.) 'Did the musicians play to enliven the workmen? Philodemus (Treatise on Music) says, the skilful harper, Amphion, "was frequently employed by the Theban workmen to play to them while engaged in their labor. So powerful and pleasing was his music, that they went lightly and comfortably through their work; and time and labor passed on without tedium or fatigue; and the walls and towers were speedily raised." Hence the fable of Amphion's causing the stones and timber to rise up of themselves, and take their places in the wall of Thebes.' Dr. A. Clarke. Military and naval commanders know and use the power of music both to excite to great and harmonious exertion, and to keep up the spirits and preserve the health of their men, sinking under fatigue or ennui: to both which their hard life exposes them. The Egyptians had 'sacred masons,' in the sacer-the work in any manner of service: and of the Levites there were [r] scribes, and [s] officers, and [h] porters.

14 ¶ And when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of the LORD, [i] Hilkiah the priest found a book of [k] the law of the LORD given by * Moses.

15 And Hilkiah answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah delivered the book to Shaphan.

16 And [l] Shaphan carried the book to the king, and brought the king word back again, saying, All that was committed to † thy servants, they do it.

17 And [m] they have ‡ gathered together the money that was found in the house of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers, and to the hand of the workmen.

18 Then Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath given me a book. [n] And Shaphan read § it before the king.

19 And it came to pass, when the king had heard [o] the words of the law, [p] that he rent his clothes.

20 And the king commanded Hilkiah, and [q] Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and [r] Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and [s] Asaiah a servant of the king's, saying,

21 Go, [t] inquire of the LORD for me, and for them [u] that are left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found: [x] for great is the wrath of the LORD that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after all that is written in this book.

22 And Hilkiah, and men of different capacities, adapting their work to each, and overseeing its accurate performance in concert.] Witty men are then wise, when they employ their wit in doing good. Observe, in this work, how God dispenses his gifts variously. Let not the overseers of the work despise the bearers of burdens, nor let them that work in the service, grudge at those whose office is to direct; but let each esteem and serve the other in love, and God have the glory, and the church the benefit, of the different gifts and dispositions of both.

V. 14—28. This whole paragraph we had just as here, 2 K. 22: 8—20. and have nothing to add here to what was there observed.

But, 1. We may hence take occasion to bless God, that we have plenty of Bibles, and that they are, or may be, in all hands. What a great deal shall we have to answer for, if the great things of God's laws, being thus made common, should be accounted by us as strange things!

2. We may hence learn, whenever we read or hear the Word of God, to affect our hearts with it, and to get them possessed with a holy fear of that wrath of God, which is there revealed against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, as Josiah's tender heart was, v. 19, 27. Were the things contained in the Scripture new to us, as to Josiah, surely they would make deeper impressions on us than commonly they do; but they are nevertheless weighty, nor to be less considered by us, for being well known. Rend the heart, therefore, not the garment.

3. We are here directed, when under convictions of sin, and apprehensions of divine wrath, to inquire of the Lord, v. 21. Acts 2: 37. What must I do to be saved? Acts 16: 30. And blessed be God, we have the lively Oracles to which to apply ourselves.

V. 29—33. Here are noticed the further advances Josiah made in the reformation. Happy the people that had such a king: for,

1. They were well taught. He called all the people together, great and small, young and old, rich and poor, high and low, to hear the words of the book of the covenant; all are concerned in those words. To put an honor on the service, and to engage attention the more, though priests and Levites were present, the king himself read the book to the people, v. 30. no doubt in such a manner as to show that he was himself affected with it, which would be a mean of affecting the hearers.

2. They were well fixed. The articles of agreement between God and Israel being read, that they might intelligently covenant with God, both king and people here, with great solemnity, do, as it were, subscribe the articles. The repetition of serve, v 33. denotes intensity, and that their serving God was the only thing his heart was set on; he aimed at nothing else in what he did, but to engage them to God and their duty.

3. They were well tended; were honest with good looking to. All his days were days of restraint on them; but this intimated that there was in them a bent to backslide, a strong inclination to idolatry. Therefore we find, that in the days of Josiah, (Jer. 3: 6.) God charged it on treacherous Judah, that she had not returned to Him with all her heart, but feignedly, (v. 10.) nay, had played they that the king had appointed, went to Huldah [y] the prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of Tikvath, the son of [z] Hasrah, keeper of the ‖ wardrobe, (now she dwelt in Jerusalem in the ¶ college;) and they spake to her to that effect.

23 And she answered them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [a] Tell ye the man that sent you to me,

24 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, [b] I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even [c] all the curses that are written in the book, which they have read before the king of Judah:

25 Because [d] they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; therefore [e] my wrath shall be poured out upon this place, and [f] shall not be quenched.

26 And [g] as for the king of Judah, who sent you to inquire of the LORD, so shall ye say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, concerning the words which thou hast heard;

27 Because [h] thine heart was tender, and thou didst [i] humble thyself before God, when thou heardest his words against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, and humbledst thyself before me, and [k] didst rend thy clothes, and weep before me; I have even heard thee also, saith the LORD.

28 Behold [l] I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy grave [m] in peace, [n] neither shall thine eyes see all the evil that I will bring upon this place, and upon the inhabitants of the same. So they brought the king word again.

29 ¶ Then [o] the king sent, and [p] gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem.

30 And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the priests, and the Levites, and all the people,  great and small: and [q] he read in their ears all the words of [r] the book of the covenant that was found in f Ezra 7:6. Jer. 8:8. Matt. 26:3.

g 19:11. 1 Chr. 23:4. 26:29,30.
h 8:14. 1 Chr. 9:17. 15:18. 16:38,42. 26:1,&c. Ezra 7:7.
i See on 2 K. 22:8.—Deut. 31:24—26. k 12:1. 31:4. 35:26. Ezra 7:10. Ps. 1:2. Is. 5:24. 30:9. Jer. 8:8. Luke 2:39.
* Heb. the hand of Moses. Lev. 8:36. 10:11. 26:46.
l See on 2 K. 22:9,10.
† Heb. the hand of thy.
m See on 8—10.
‡ Heb. poured out, or melted.
n Deut. 17:19. Josh. 1:8. Ps. 119:46, 97—99. Jer. 36:20,21.
§ Heb. in it.
o Rom. 3:20. 7:7—11. Gal. 2:19. 3: 10—13. p 2 K. 19:1. 22:11,19. Jer. 36:22 -24 Joel 2:13.
q 2 K. 25:22. Jer. 26:24. 40:6,9,14.
r 2 K. 22:12. Achbor. Jer. 26:22. s 2 K. 22:12. Asahiah.
t Ex. 18:15. 1 Sam. 9:9. 1 K. 22:5—7. Jer. 21:2. Ez. 14:1,&c. 20:1—7 u 28:6. 33:11. 2 K. 17:6,7. 22:13. Is 37:2—4. Jer. 42:2. x Lev. 26:14,&c. Deut. 28:15,&c. 29: 18—28. 30:17—19. 31:16—18. 32: 15—25. Rom. 4:15.
y Ex. 15:20. Judg. 4:4. Luke 1:41—45. 2:36. Acts 21:9. z See on 2 K. 22:14. Harhas.
‖ Heb. garments.
¶ Or, school, or, second part.
a See on 2 K. 22:15—20.—Jer. 21:3—7. 37:7—10. b 36:14—20. Josh. 23:16. 2 K. 21:12. 23:26,27. Is. 5:4—6. Jer. 6:19. 19: 3,15. 35:17. 36:31.
c See on 21.
d See on 12:2. 15:2. 33:3—9.—2 K. 24:3,4. Is. 2:8,9. Jer. 15:—4.
e Is. 42:25. Jer. 7:20. Lam. 2:4 4. 11. Nah. 1:6. Rev. 14:10,11.
f 2 K. 22:17.—See on Jer. 4:4. 7:20.—Ez. 20:48. Mark 9:43—48.
g 21,23.
h See on 2 K. 22:18,19.—Ps. 34:18. 51 17. Is. 57:15. 66:2. Ez. 9:4. 36:26. i See on 32:26. 33:12,19.—Jam 4:6—10. k See on 19.—Je. 36:23,24.
l 35:24. See on 2 K. 22:20.—Is 57:1,2. Jer. 15:1. Ez. 14:14—21.
m Is. 37:37.
n 1 K. 21:29. 2 K. 20:19. Is. 39:8.
o 1 Sam. 12:23. 1 Chr. 29:2,&c. Mark 14:9.
p 30:2. 2 K. 23:1—3.
 Heb. from great even to small. 15: 12,13. 18:30. Deut. 1:17. Job 3:19.
q 6:1,&c. 17:7—9. Deut. 17:18—20. Neh. 8:2—5. Ec. 1:12. 12:9,10. r 15,18,19,24. Ex. 24:7. 2 K. 23:2,21. Jer. 31:31,32.

dotal order; and chants for various occasions. Champollion, as has been elsewhere remarked, [note, 1 Chr. 15:16, &c.] gives one used while beating out grain with sticks. ED.

Verses 20—28.

2 K. 22:12—20. Jer. 3:6—11.—All the curses, &c. (24) This confirms the opinion, that the 27th, and following chs. of Deut. were first the house of the LORD.

31 And the king stood [s]in his place, and [t]made a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, [u]with all his heart, and with all his soul, to perform the words of the covenant which are written in this book.

32 And [x]he caused all that were [*]present in Jerusalem and Benjamin to stand to it. And the inhabitants of Jerusalem [y]did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers.

33 And Josiah [z]took away all [a]the abominations out of all the countries that pertained to the children of Israel, and made all that were present in Israel to serve, even to serve the LORD their God. And [b]all his days they departed not [†]from following the LORD, the God of their fathers.

CHAP. XXXV.

Josiah causes a solemn passover to be celebrated, 1—19. He is slain in battle against Pharaoh-necho, 20—24. Great lamentations are made for him, 25. His acts and goodness, 26, 27.

MOREOVER [a]Josiah kept a passover unto the LORD in Jerusalem: and they killed the passover on [b]the fourteenth day of the first month.

2 And he set the priests in their [c]charges, and [d]encouraged them to the service of the house of the LORD,

3 And said unto [e]the Levites that taught all Israel, which were holy unto the LORD, [f]Put the holy ark [g]in the house, which Solomon the son of David king of Israel did build: it shall [h]not be a burden upon your shoulders: [i]serve now the LORD your God, and his people Israel;

4 And prepare yourselves by [k]the houses of your fathers, [l]after your courses, according to the writing of David king of Israel, and [m]according to the writing of Solomon his son;

5 And [n]stand in the holy place according to the divisions of the [‡]families of the fathers of your brethren, the[§] people, and after the division of the families of the Levites.

6 So [o]kill the passover, and [p]sanctify yourselves, and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

7 And [q]Josiah [‖]gave to the people, of the flock, lambs and kids, all for the passover-offerings, for all that were present, to the number of thirty thousand, and three thousand bullocks: these were of [r]the king's substance.

8 And [s]his princes [¶]gave [t]willingly unto the people, to the priests, and to the Levites: [u]Hilkiah, and Zechariah, and Jehiel, [x]rulers of the house of God, gave unto the priests for the passover-offerings, two thousand and six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen.

9 Conaniah also, and Shemaiah and Nethaneel his brethren, and Hashabiah, and Jeiel, and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, []gave unto the Levites for passo-and, 3. to the grave, where we see him bitterly lamented; so we must take our leave of Josiah.

V. 1—19. The destruction Josiah made of idols and idolatry, was more largely related in the Kings, and but just mentioned in the foregoing ch. v. 33. But his solemnizing the passover, just touched upon, (2 K. 23: 21.) is very particularly related here. Many were the feasts of the Lord, but the passover was the chief; it began them, all the night wherein Israel came out of Egypt. It concluded them, all the night wherein Christ was betrayed; and in the celebration of it, Hezekiah and Josiah, those two great reformers, revived religion in their day. The ordinance of the Lord's supper resembles the passover more than it does any of the Jewish festivals; and the due observance of it, according to the rule, is an instance and mean both of the growing purity and beauty of churches, and of the growing piety and devotion of particular Christians. Religion cannot flourish where it is either wholly neglected, or not duly observed; return to that, revive that, make a solemn business of that affecting, binding ordinance, and then, it is to be hoped, there will be a reformation in other instances also.

In the account of Hezekiah's passover, the great zeal of the people was observable, and the transport of devout affection they were in; but little s 6:13. 2 K. 11:14. 23:3. Ez. 46:2.

t 23:16. 29:10. Ex. 24:6—8. Deut. 29:1,10—15. Josh. 24:25. Neh. 9:38. 10:29. Jer. 50:5. Heb. 8:6—13. u 15:12,15. See on 31:21.—Deut. 6:5. Luke 10:27—29.
x 14:4. 30:12. 33:16. Gen. 18:19. Ex. 9:21.
* Heb. found. 29:29.
y Jer. 3:10.
z See on 3—7. 2 K. 23:4—20.
a See on 1 K. 11:5—7.
b Josh. 24:31.
† Heb. from after.
a 30: 2 K. 23:21—23.
b Ex. 12:6. Num. 9:3. Deut. 16:1—8. Ezra 6:19. Ez. 45:21. c 23:8. 31:2. Num. 18:5—7. 1 Chr. 24: Ezra 6:18.
d 29:5—11. 31:2. 1 Chr. 22:19.
e 17:8,9. 30:22. Deut. 33:10. Neh. 8:7,8. Mal. 2:7.
f 8:11. 34:14.
g See on 5:7.
h Num. 4:15—49. 1 Chr. 23:26.
i Num. 8:19. 16:9,10. 2 Cor. 4:5. k 1 Chr. 9:10—34. Neh. 11:10—20.
l 1 Chr. 23:—26:
m 8:14.
n Ps. 134:1. 135:2.
‡ Heb. house of the fathers.
§ Heb. sons of the people.
o 30:15—17. Ex. 12:6,21,22. Ezra 6. 20,21. p 29:5,15,34. 30:3,15—19. Gen. 35:2. Ex. 19:10,15. Num. 19:11—20. Job 1:5. Ps. 51:7. Joel 2:16. Heb. 9: 13,14. q 30:24. Is. 32:8. Ez. 45:17.
‖ Heb. offered. 1 K. 8:63.
r 1 K. 8:63. 1 Chr. 29:3.
s 29:31—33. 1 Chr. 29:6—9,17. Ezra 1:6. 2:68,69. 7:16. 8:25—35. Neh. 7:70—72. Is. 45:12. Acts 2:44,45. 4:34,35.
¶ Heb. offered.
t 2 Cor. 8:12. 9:7.
u 34:14—20.
x 1 Chr. 9:20. 24:4,5. Jer. 29:25,26. Acts 4:1. 5:26.
 Heb. offered. Is. 1:10—15. Jer. 3: 10. 7:21—23. Mic. 6:6—8.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Several years of our lives must pass before we become capable of performing useful services: our earliest youth should therefore be dedicated to God, that we may not waste any of our remaining span. None can express the anguish which is prevented by early piety, and its happy consequences.—If we would be useful, we must first 'take heed to ourselves;' and when we are established in faith and grace, we shall be fitted for instruments of good to others. In this important work we must expect many opposers, and but few cordial helpers: and the more we look into the world, the church, or our own hearts, by the light of God's Word, the more evidently shall we see how very much reformation and renovation are every where needed. (P. O. Ez. 8:1—6.) SCOTT.

read to Josiah. SCOTT.

Verse 33.

While Josiah lived, the people were restrained from open idolatry: yet we learn from the prophets, especially Jeremiah, that, at this very time especially, they were ripening for destruction, by their hypocrisy and iniquity. (Jer. 3.6—11. 4:14. 25:3—7. Zeph. 1:1—8.) ID.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXV. V. 3. Taught, &c.] The Levites, by courses, served the priests at the sanctuary, as their primary employment: but, when at home in their several cities, they were the stated teachers of the people. (M. R. e.—17:7—9. 30:21, 22, v. 22.)—Put, &c.] It is probable, that the most holy place had gone to decay, through neglect; and that while it was cleansed and repaired, the high priest had committed the ark to the custody of some Levites of the family of Kohath, who had been set apart and sanctified for that service: but when it was carried again into its place, they would be at liberty for other services, to the glory of God, and the benefit of his people. ID.

Verse 5.

The meaning of this verse seems to be, that the Levites should be as exact, in ascertaining to what family, or subdivision of a family, every man belonged, as those of the other tribes were: that each might know and do his proper work, with as much certainty and accuracy, as the others knew what lands belonged to them by inheritance. Some, however, suppose, that only the arrangement of the Levites at this time is intended; and that they were directed to stand in regular order, according to their families, to receive the paschal lambs, which their brethren of the other tribes would bring, according to their families, one for each household. (6, 10, 11.) SCOTT.

Verse 6.

Notes, 30:16—20. Ex. 12:3—10, v. 6. Lev. 1:5—9. ID

Verses 7—9.

According to the calculation, that not fewer than 10, nor more than 20 persons, were to join for one lamb or kid, the numbers given on this occasion, would suffice for above 400,000 persons, young and old: bever-offerings five thousand small cattle, and five hundred oxen.

10 So the service was prepared, and [y] the priests stood in their place, and the Levites in their courses, according to the king's commandment.

11 And they killed the passover, and [z] the priests sprinkled the blood from their hands, and the Levites [a] flayed them.

12 And they removed the burnt-offerings, that they might give according to the divisions of the families of the people to offer unto the LORD, [b] as it is written in the book of Moses: and so did they with the oxen.

13 And they [c] roasted the passover with fire, according to the ordinance: but the other holy offerings [d] sod they in pots, and in caldrons, and in pans, and [*] divided them speedily among all the people.

14 And afterwards they made ready for themselves, and for the priests: [e] because the priests the sons of Aaron were busied in offering of burnt-offerings and the fat until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themselves and for the priests the sons of Aaron.

15 And the singers the sons of Asaph were in their [†] place, [f] according to the commandment of David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Jeduthun the king's seer; and [g] the porters waited at every gate; they might not depart from their service, for their brethren the Levites prepared for them.

16 So all the service of the LORD was prepared the same day, to keep the passover, and to offer burnt-offerings upon the altar of the LORD, according to the commandment of king Josiah.

17 And the children of Israel that were [‡] present kept the passover at that time, and [h] the feast of unleavened bread, seven days.

18 And [i] there was no passover like to that kept in Israel, from the days of Samuel the prophet; [k] neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

19 In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah was this passover kept.

[Practical Observations.]

y 4,5. 30:16. Ezra 6:18.
z 29:22—24. 30:16. Lev. 1:5,6. Num. 18:3,7. Heb. 9:21,22.
a 29:34.
b Lev. 3:3,5,9—11,14—16.
c Ex. 12:8,9. Deut. 16:7. Ps. 22:14. Lam. 1:12,13.
d Lev. 6:28. Num. 6:19. 1 Sam. 2: 13—15. Ez. 46:20—24.
* Heb. made them run. Rom. 12:11.
e Acts 6:2—4.
† Heb. station.
f 29:25,26. 1 Chr. 16:41,42. 23:5. 25: 1—7. Ps. 77: 78: 88: titles.
g 1 Chr. 9:17—19. 26:14—19.
‡ Heb. found.
h 30:21—23. Ex. 12:15—20. 13:6,7. 23: 15. 34:18. Lev. 23:5—8. Num. 28: 16—25. Deut. 16:3,4,8. 1 Cor. 5:7,8.
i 30:5. 2 K. 23:21—23.
k 30:26,27.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—19. Extensive good may be done by persons in authority, who spare no labor or expense, in promoting the honor of God; and who unite their example and influence with most zealous endeavors, to excite and encourage other members of the community to do their duty.—God alone can efficaciously sanctify and prepare our hearts for his holy worship; but the blessing must be sought, for ourselves and others, by attending to our several duties. In this way revivals of religion are both manifested and forwarded; and sacred ordinances at once honor the Lord, and become 'means of grace' to the souls of men. The support of them, in an orderly and public manner, must always be attended with expense; and the multitude of the poor will often be unable to defray it. On this account religion will, in some places and at some times, be neglected, to the discouragement of many, and the ruin of far more: it then becomes a noble generosity for rulers, and wealthy persons, to step forward and to communicate liberally to the assistance of the poor, that they may not want 'the Bread of Life' for their souls; and God will honor those who thus honor Him.—Those who are continually so taken up in the work of God and his church, that they cannot attend to their secular interests, ought particularly to be provided for by their brethren who have more leisure.—Alas! how are the ordinances of God disregarded, or formally attended on! The church in its best days has fallen short hitherto of what it ought to be at all times: our most religious hours, in public or private, need forgiveness; and the mercy of God, through the Savior's atonement, must still be our only plea, to the close of our days. SCOTT.

---

sides those given for peace-offerings and other sacrifices. (30:23—25, v. 24. 1 K. 8:63—65.)—Rulers of, &c. (8) The heads of the several courses of the priests, or the captains of the temple. (M. R. x.) SCOTT.

Verse 12.

The Levites separated, as speedily as they could, the parts of the peace-offerings, which were to be burnt, from the rest, and added them to the other burnt-offerings; that the remainder, together with the paschal lambs, might, without delay, be prepared and distributed as the occasion required. (Lev. 3:) ID.

Verses 13—17.

'The singing and music continued till all the sacrifices were offered, that is till night. . . . And their brethren, who were not singers, took care to provide for them their portion, when they had done.' Patrick. SCOTT.

Verses 18, 19.

Nothing is recorded on this subject, from the time that Israel obtained possession of the promised land: (Josh. 5:10.) but even this passover, under Josiah, which exceeded all for several centuries, seems to have been very deficient as to genuine devotion. ID.

(20.) Carchemish.] 'Probably the Cercusium of the ancients, now called Karkisa, near the junction of the Khabour and the Euphrates.' HENRY abr.

20 ¶ After all this, when Josiah had prepared the * temple, [l]Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against [m]Carchemish by Euphrates: and Josiah went out against him.

21 But he sent ambassadors to him, saying, [n]What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not against thee this day, but against the † house wherewith I have war: for [o]God commanded me to make haste: [p]forbear thee from meddling with God, who is with me, that he destroy thee not.

22 Nevertheless Josiah would not turn his face from him, [q]but disguised himself, that he might fight with him, and hearkened not unto the words of Necho from [r]the mouth of God, and came to fight in the valley of [s]Megiddo.

23 And [t]the archers shot at king Josiah: and the king said to his servants, Have me away; for I am sore ‡ wounded.

24 His servants therefore took him out of that chariot, and put him in [u]the second chariot that he had; and [x]they brought him to Jerusalem, and [y]he died, and was buried § in one of the sepulchres of his fathers. And [z]all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah.

25 And [a]Jeremiah lamented for Josiah: and [b]all the singing men and the singing women spake of Josiah in their lamentations to this day, and made them an ordinance in Israel: and, behold, they are written in the lamentations.

26 Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, and his ‖ goodness, according to that which was written in the law of the LORD, 27 And [c]his deeds, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah.

* Heb. house.

cording to their families, (v. 11, 12.) not fewer than ten, nor more than twenty, to a lamb; they took it to their several apartments, roasted it, and ate it according to the ordinance, v. 13. As for the other sacrifices that were eucharistical, the flesh of them was boiled according to the law of the peace-offerings, and was divided speedily among the people, that they might feast on it as a token of their joy in the atonement made, and their reconciliation to God thereby. And lastly, The priests and Levites took care to honor God, by eating of the passover themselves, v. 14. Let not ministers think, that their care for the souls of others excuses their neglect of their own; or, that being employed so much in public worship will supersede the religious exercises of their closets and families. The Levites here made ready for themselves and for the priests, because the priests were wholly taken up all day in the service of the altar. Let ministers learn hence to help one another, and to forward one another's work, as brethren, and fellow servants of the same Master.

IV. The singers and porters attended in their places, and did their office, v. 15. the singers with their sacred songs, and the porters at the gates. While thus employed, their brethren the Levites prepared paschal lambs for them.

V. The whole solemnity was performed with great exactness, according to the law, (v. 16, 17.) and, on that account, there was none like it since Samuel's time, (v. 18.) for in Hezekiah's passover there were several irregularities. And Patrick observes, that in this also it exceeded the passovers preceding kings had kept, that, though Josiah was by no means so rich as David, Solomon, or Jehoshaphat, yet he furnished the whole congregation with sacrifices, both paschal and eucharistical, at his own cost and charge, which was more than any king ever did before him.

V. 20—27. It was 13 years from Josiah's famous passover to his death; during which time, we may hope, things went well in his kingdom; yet those years are passed over in silence, because the people, for all this, were not turned from the love of their sins, nor God from the fierceness of his anger. The next news therefore we hear of Josiah, is, that he is cut off in the midst of his days and usefulness, before he is full 40 years old. We had this sad story, 2 K. 23: 29, 30. here it is somewhat more largely related. What appears here, more than there, reflects such blame on Josiah, and such praise on the people, as one would not have expected.

I. Josiah was a very good prince, yet is much to l 2 K. 23:29. Pharaoh-necho. Jer. 46:2. m Is. 10:9.

n 2 Sam. 16:10. Matt. 8:29. John 2:4.
† Heb. house of my war.
o 2 K. 18:25. Is. 36:10.
p 25:19.
q 18:29. 1 K. 14:2. 22:30.
r 21. 18:4—6. Josh. 9:14.
s Judg. 5:19. 2 K. 9:27. 23:30. Zech. 12:11. Megiddon. Rev. 16:16. Armageddon.
t 18:33. Gen. 49:23. 2 K. 9:24. Lam. 3:12,13.
‡ Heb. made sick. 1 K. 22:34. 2 K. 8:29.
u Gen. 41:43. x 2 K. 23:30.
y Ps. 36:6. Ec. 8:14. 9:1,2.
§ Or, among the sepulchres. 34:28. z Zech. 12:11.
a Jer. 22:10.
b Job 3:8. Ec. 12:5. Jer. 9:17—21. Matt. 9:23.
‖ Heb. kindnesses. 31:20. 32:32.
c 20:34. 24:27. 25:26. 28:22. 32:32. 33:19. 2 K. 10:34. 16:19. 20:20. 21:25.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 20—27. No man suffers, or ever will suffer, who has not merited his sufferings; yet public persons are often laid aside or removed, to punish the wickedness of the community.—We are not bound to believe all those, who profess to speak by the authority of God: but it is always right to act with caution, to search the Scriptures, to seek the Lord's direction by prayer, and to consult wise, experienced, and pious friends; that we may discover, as far as possible, what is the truth and will of God concerning us, and that we may not be found in any instance to fight against Him.—Men seldom prosper in those measures which are unadvisedly adopted: and those, who are honored with great usefulness, should be doubly circumspect in their conduct, and careful of their [health as well as] lives; because so many are interested in them.—Many mourn over their own calamities, who do not repent, and forsake those sins, which have provoked God to inflict them. Yet this alone can avert still more tremendous judgments. SCOTT.

Verses 20—24.

Josiah's conduct at the close of his life has been treated with great severity by most commentators: and he has been charged with engaging in an unjust war, and disregarding the express command of God; which may in great measure be ascribed to the groundless censure passed on him by the apocryphal Esdras, 'Not regarding the words of the prophet Jeremy, spoken by the mouth of the LORD.' (1 Esdras 1:28.) But the Scripture nowhere condemns him. (Note, 2 K. 23:29, 30.) Pharaoh, in marching his army through Josiah's territories, against his will, certainly committed an act of hostility. It is evident Josiah was in possession of the whole land, and not of Judah only: (34:6.) and probably he held the northern parts of it as a grant from the king of Babylon; and was not only in alliance with him, but bound to guard his frontiers against hostile invaders. Doubtless the kings of Judah had been in some measure dependent on the kings of Assyria and Babylon, from the time of Manasseh's captivity and release. Pharaoh declared indeed by his ambassadors, that he did not mean to attack Josiah, but to march against a power with which he was at war. He was, however, in the heart of Josiah's kingdom, before he sent this embassy, and he avowed his intention of attacking his ally: therefore Josiah may fairly, on both accounts, be justified from the charge of unjustly meddling with a war that did not belong to him; for no king on earth would think it unjust to declare war against another prince, who should forcibly march an army into his dominions, in order to attack another prince who was in alliance with him. It is true, the ambassadors assured Josiah that 'God had commanded Pharaoh to make haste;' and said, 'Forbear thee from meddling with God who is with me, that He destroy thee not:' and he is therefore said, 'not to have hearkened to the words of Necho, from the mouth of God.' But Necho produced no proof, that he was a prophet of JEHOVAH, and Sennacherib had used similar language to Hezekiah, who had paid no regard to it. (2 K. 18:25.) The word used by Necho, (elohim) may signify gods, or idols: and critics have noted, that the expression 'from the mouth of God,' is nowhere used in the Hebrew Bible, for a revelation from the true God; but that it is always 'from the mouth of the LORD.' [Comp. the phrase, note * p. 147 vol. I.]—It is not indeed at all probable, that God had commanded Pharaoh-necho by Jeremiah, or by any other prophet, to undertake this expedition: for in that case Josiah would doubtless have been informed, and have submitted. And if Pharaoh had received any monition in a dream or vision, which he concluded to be from the God of Israel, (and so meant something more, than his own auguries and superstitions,) Josiah might not give credit to his testimony, in matters so closely connected with his own interests.—Josiah, however, seems to have been guilty of precipitation, and in not inquiring of the Lord when thus warned, before, he proceeded to attack so formidable an enemy: his premature and violent death might therefore be a rebuke for his rashness; but whatever sin Josiah committed, he doubtless repented of it: and the final state of one, who habitually lives a life of repentance, faith, and obedience, cannot be affected, by the manner in which he is suddenly taken away.—The second chariot seems to have been one that waited for him in case of necessity; into which he was removed, the other being perhaps covered with blood. SCOTT.

Verses 25—27.

The book of Lamentations of Jeremiah was written on another occasion: (Pref. to Lam.) and what that prophet composed on the death of Josiah has not come down to us. But both the prophet and the people, took several methods of doing honor to the memory of their prince; and of perpetuating the lamentations on his death; probably by an annual commemoration of that fatal event. (Jer. 22:10—12.) ID.

(25.) Their lamentations.] 'The Hebrews had poetical compositions for all important events, military songs, songs of triumph, marriage odes, funeral elegies, &c.' [Comp. note, 1 Chr. 15, 16, &c.] Dr. A. CLARKE.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Jehoahaz succeeds Josiah, but Necho carries him into Egypt; and makes Jehoiakim king, 1—4. He reigns wickedly, and is put in chains by Nebuchadnezzar, who carries some of the sacred vessels to Babylon, 5—7. Jehoiachin is made king, who in a short time is carried captive to Babylon, with other of the sacred vessels; and Zedekiah succeeds, 8—10. He reigns very wickedly, despises the warnings of Jeremiah, and rebels against Nebuchadnezzar, 11—13. The sins of the priests and people cause the utter destruction of Jerusalem, and the desolation of the land, for seventy years, 14—21. Cyrus's proclamation for rebuilding the temple, 22, 23.

THEN [a] the people of the land took [b] Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and made him king in his father's stead in Jerusalem.

2 Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem.

3 And the king of Egypt * put him down at Jerusalem, and † condemned the land in an hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold.

4 And the king of Egypt [c] made Eliakim his brother, king over Judah and Jerusalem, and turned his name to Jehoiakim. And [d] Necho took Jehoahaz his brother, and carried him to Egypt.

5 [e] Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusa-
B. C. 607. lem: and he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD his God.

6 Against him [f] came up Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and bound him in ‡ fetters, to carry him to Babylon.

7 Nebuchadnezzar also carried of [g] the vessels of the house of the LORD to Babylon, and put them in his temple at Babylon.

8 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and his abominations which he did, and that which was found in him, behold, [h] they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah: and [i] Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.

9 ¶ Jehoiachin was [k] eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem: and he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.

10 And § when the
B. C. 599. year was expired, [l] king Nebuchadnezzar sent and brought him to Babylon, with the ‖ goodly vessels of the house of the LORD, and made [m] Zedekiah his brother king over Judah and Jerusalem.

11 ¶ Zedekiah was [n] one and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned eleven years in Jerusalem.

12 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD his God, and [o] humbled not himself [p] before Jeremiah the prophet, speak-

a 25:1. 33:25. 2 K. 23:30.
b 2 K. 23:31—34. 1 Chr. 3:15. Jer. 22:11. Shallum.
* Heb. removed him. 2 K. 23:33.
† Heb. mulcted.
c 2 K. 23:34,35. 1 Chr. 3:15.
d Jer. 22:10—12. Ez. 19:3,4.
e 2 K. 23:36,37. Jer. 22:13—19. 26: 21—23. 36:1,27—32.
f 2 K. 24:1,2,5,6. Ez. 19:5—9. Dan. 1:1,2. Hab. 1:5—10.
‡ Or, chains.
g Ezra 1:7—11. Jer. 27:16—18. 28:3. Dan. 5:2—4.
h 2 K. 24.5,6.
i 1 Chr. 3:16,17. Jeconiah. Jer. 22:24, 28. Coniah. Matt. 1:11,12. Jechonias.
k 2 K. 24:8,9.
§ Heb. at the return of the year.
l 2 K. 24:10—16. 25:27—30. Jer. 29: 2. Ez. 1:2.
‖ Heb. vessels of desire. 7. Jer. 27: 18—22. Dan. 5:2,23.
m 2 K. 24:17. Mattaniah. 1 Chr. 3:15, 16. Jer. 37:1.
n 2 K. 24:18—20. Jer. 52:1—3.
o 32:26. 33:12,19,23. Ez. 10:3. Dan. 5:22,23. Jam. 4:10. 1 Pet. 5:6. p Jer. 21:1,&c. 27:12,&c. 28:1,&c. 34: 2,&c. 37:2,&c. 38:14,&c.

be blamed for his rashness and presumption in going to war against the king of Egypt, without cause or call. Here it looks worse than in the Kings; for, it seems, the king of Egypt sent ambassadors to warn him against this enterprise, v. 21.

He argues, 1. From principles of justice. He professes he had no design to do him any hurt, and therefore it was unfair, against common equity and the law of nations, for Josiah to take up arms against him. See Prov. 3: 30. 25: 8.

2. From principles of religion. 'God is with me; nay, He commanded me to make haste; if thou, then, retard my motions, thou meddlest with God.' It cannot be he only pretended this, (as Sennacherib in a like case, 2 K. 18: 25.) hoping thereby to make Josiah desist, because he knew he had a veneration for the word of God; for it is said here, (v. 22.) the words of Necho were from the mouth of God; we must therefore suppose that either by a dream, or by a strong impulse on his spirit, which he had reason to think was from God, or by Jeremiah, or some other prophet, He had ordered him to make war on the king of Assyria.

3. From principles of policy.

It was not in wrath to Josiah, but to a hypocritical nation, who were unworthy of so good a king, that he would not hearken to those fair reasonings, and desist from his enterprise, v. 22. If perhaps he could not believe the king of Egypt had a command from God to do what he did, yet, on his pleading such a command, he ought to have consulted the oracles of God before going out against him. His not doing that, was his great fault, and of fatal consequence. How can we think to prosper in our ways, if we do not acknowledge God in them?

II. The people were a wicked people; yet they are much to be praised for lamenting the death of Josiah as they did. That Jeremiah lamented him, I do not wonder; he was the weeping prophet, but it is strange all Judah and Jerusalem should do so, v. 24. yet so they did: they made an ordinance in Israel, that the mournful ditties, penned on this sad occasion, should be learned and sung by all sorts of people. They contrived also how to perpetuate the remembrance of it; these elegies were inserted in the collections of State Poems; they are written in the Lamentations. We are often taught to value mercies by their loss, which, when enjoyed, we did not prize as we ought. Jeremiah told them, it is likely, of the evil they might now expect to come on them, from which he was taken away; and they so far credited it, as to lament the death of him who was their defence. Many will more easily be persuaded to lament miseries coming on them, than to take the proper way by universal reformation, to prevent them. But godly sorrow worketh repentance, and that repentance will be to salvation.

CHAP. XXXVI. V. 1—10. The destruction of Judah and Jerusalem is here coming on by degrees. God so ordered it, to show He has no pleasure in the ruin of sinners, but had rather they would turn and live, and therefore gives them both time and inducement to repent, and waits to be gracious. The history of these reigns was more largely recorded in the last three chs. of 2. K.

1. Jehoahaz was set up by the people, (v. 1.) but in one quarter of a year was deposed by Pharaoh-necho, and carried a prisoner to Egypt, and the land fined for setting him up, v. 2—4. Of this young prince we hear no more; had he trodden in the steps of his father's piety, he might have reigned long, and prospered; but we are told in Kings that he did evil, therefore his triumphing was short.

2. Jehoiakim was set up by the king of Egypt, and reigned 11 years. The abominations he did, (v. 8.) were idolatries, which generally go under that name. The king of Babylon came against him, (v. 6.) to carry him to Babylon; but, either changed his mind, and suffered him to reign as his vassal, or death released the prisoner before he was carried away. However, the most valuable vessels of the temple were now taken, and used in Nebuchadnezzar's temple in Babylon; (v. 7.) we may suppose, no temple in the world was so richly furnished as that of Jerusalem. These were the vessels, with hopes of whose return the false prophets flattered the people, Jer. 27: 16. But Jeremiah told them the rest should go after them, (v. 22.) and they did so. But, as the carrying them away began the calamity of Jerusalem, so Belshazzar's daring profanation of them there, filled the measure of the iniquity of Babylon; Dan. 5: 2, &c. In the reference to the book of the Kings, concerning this Jehoiakim, mention is made of what was found in him, (v. 8.) which seems to be meant of the treachery found in him toward the king of Babylon; but some of the Jewish writers understand it of certain private marks or signatures found in his dead body, in honor of his idol; forbidden, Lev. 19: 28.

3. Jehoiachin, or Jeconiah, the son of Jehoiakim, attempted to reign in his stead, and reigned long enough to show his evil inclination; but, after 3 months and 10 days, the king of Babylon sent and fetched him away captive, with more or the goodly vessels of the temple. He is here said to be 8 years old, but in Kings 18, when he began to reign; so that this seems to be a mistake of the transcriber, unless we suppose his father took him at 8 years old to join him in the government, as some think.

V. 11—21. We have here an account of the destruction of the kingdom of Judah and the city of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans; and,

I. The sins that brought it.

1. Zedekiah's folly brought it on himself. For his ruin would have been prevented, (1.) If he had but made God his friend. Jeremiah brought him messages from God, which, if he had duly regarded, might have lengthened his tranquillity; but it is here charged on him, that he humbled not himself before Jeremiah, when he spake from the

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXVI. V. 9. Eight] Either this is an error of the transcribers, which is most probable; or Jehoiachin reigned 10 years with his father, which is very unlikely; for at his death he was 18 years old. (2 K. 24:8.) SCOTT.

Verse 10.

Jehoiakim, probably, died towards the close of the year: and soon after the entrance of the new year, Nebuchadnezzar took Jehoiachin captive, and carried him to Babylon, with many other prisoners, and many of the vessels of the temple. SCOTT.

ing from [q] the mouth of the LORD.

13 And he also [r] rebelled against king Nebuchadnezzar, [s] who had made him swear by God: but [t] he stiffened his neck, [u] and hardened his heart, from turning unto the LORD God of Israel.

14 Moreover [x] all the chief of the priests and the people transgressed very much, [y] after all the abominations of the heathen; and [z] polluted the house of the LORD which he had hallowed in Jerusalem.

15 And [a] the LORD God of their fathers sent to them by * his messengers, rising up † betimes, and sending; [b] because he had compassion on his people, and on his dwelling-place:

16 But they [c] mocked the messengers of God, and [d] despised his words, and [e] misused his prophets, until [f] the wrath of the LORD arose against his people, [g] till there was no ‡ remedy.

17 Therefore [h] he brought upon them [i] the king of the Chaldees, [k] who slew their young men with the sword, [l] in the house of their sanctuary, and had [m] no compassion upon young man or maiden, old man, or him that stooped for age: he gave them all into his hand.

B. C. 590. 18 And [n] all the vessels of the house of God, great and small, and the treasures of the house of the LORD, [o] and the treasures of the king, and of his princes; all these he brought to Babylon.

19 And [p] they burnt the house of God and [q] brake down the wall of Jerusalem, and burnt all the palaces thereof with fire, and destroyed all the goodly vessels thereof.

20 And § them that had escaped from the sword carried he away to Babylon; where [r] they were servants to him and his sons, [s] until the reign of the kingdom of Persia:

21 To [t] fulfil the word of the LORD by the mouth of Jeremiah, [u] until the land had enjoyed her sabbaths: for as long as she lay desolate, she kept sabbath, to fulfil threescore and ten years.

22 ¶ Now [x] in the first B. C. 536. year of [y] Cyrus king of Persia, [z] that the word of the LORD spoken by the mouth of Jeremiah might be accomplished, mouth of the Lord. v. 12. Because he would not thus make himself a servant to God, he is made a slave to his enemies. God will find some way or other to humble them that will not humble themselves. (2.) If he had but been true to his covenant with the king of Babylon; but he rebelled against him, though he had sworn to be his faithful tributary, and perfidiously violated his engagements to him, v. 13. All nations hold an oath as sacred, and those that durst break through the obligations of it, as the worst of men, abandoned of God, and to be abhorred of all mankind: if therefore Zedekiah falsify his oath, he shall not escape, Ezek. 17: 18. Nebuchadnezzar was a heathen, an enemy, yet if, having sworn to him, he be false to him, he shall know there is a God to whom vengeance belongs. What ruined Zedekiah, was, not only that he turned not to God, but that he stiffened his neck, and hardened his heart, from turning, i. e. was obstinately resolved not to turn.

2. The great sin that brought it, was idolatry, v. 14. The priests, the chief who should have opposed, were ringleaders in it. That place is not far from ruin, in which religion is already ruined.

3. Its great aggravation, and which filled its measure, was, abuse to God's prophets sent to call them to repentance, v. 15, 16. Where we have,

(1.) God's tender compassion in sending prophets. Rising up betimes, and sending, denotes not only the greatest care and concern imaginable, as men rise betimes, when their heart is on their business; but that, on their first deviation from God to idols, God immediately sent messengers to reprove them, and gave them early, timely notice of their danger and duty. The more pains ministers take in their work, the more will the people have to answer for, if it be all in vain. God's methods to reclaim sinners by his Word, by ministers, by conscience, by providences, are all instances of his compassion, and unwillingness that any perish.

(2.) Their base and disingenuous carriage toward God, v. 16. Their ill usage to Jeremiah, of which we read much in the book of his prophecy, is an instance. This mocking evinced an implacable enmity to God, and an invincible resolution to go on in their sins. Nothing is more provoking to God, than abuses of his faithful ministers; for what is done against them, He takes as done against Himself; Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? Persecution brought on Jerusalem its final destruction. See Matt. 23: 34—37 Those that mock at God's faithful ministers, and do all they can to render them despicable or odious, and to keep others from hearkening to them, should be reminded, that a wrongd one to an ambassador is construed as done to the prince that sends him, and that the day is coming, when they will find it had been better for them, if they had been thrown into the sea with a mill-stone about their necks; for hell is deeper, and more dreadful.

II. The desolation itself, and some few particulars of it, which we had more largely, 2 K. 25:

1. Multitudes were put to the sword, even in the house of their sanctuary, v. 17. whither they fled, hoping its holiness would be their protection: but how could they expect this, when they themselves had polluted it with their abominations? v. 14. Those that cast off the dominion of their religion, forfeit all the benefit and comfort of it. The Chaldeans not only paid no reverence to the sanctuary, but showed no natural pity to sex, or age.

2. All the remaining vessels of the temple, great and small, and all the treasures, sacred and secular, were brought to Babylon, v. 18.

3. The temple was burnt, the walls of Jerusalem demolished, the houses (here called palaces, as Ps. 48: 3. so stately, rich, and sumptuous, were they) laid in ashes, and all the furniture, called here the goodly vessels thereof, destroyed, v. 19 See here what woful havock sin makes!

4. The remainder of the people that escaped the sword, were carried captives to Babylon, v. 20. impoverished, enslaved, insulted, and exposed to all the miseries, not only of a strange and barbarous land, but of an enemy's land, where those that hated them, bare rule over them. They were servants to those monarchs, and, no doubt, were ruled with rigor so long as that monarchy lasted. Now they sat down by the rivers of Babylon, with which they mingled their tears, Ps. 137: 1. And though there, it should seem, they were cured of idolatry; yet, as appears by Ezekiel, they were not cured of mocking the prophets.

5. The land lay desolate while they were captives in Babylon, v. 21. This may be considered, (1.) As the just punishment of their former abuse of it. They had served Baal with its first fruits, cursed therefore is the ground for their sakes. Now

---

q 35:22.
r 2 K. 24:20. Jer. 52:2. Ez. 17:11—20. s Josh. 9:15,19,20. 2 Sam. 21:2. t 2 K. 17:14. Neh. 9:16,17. Is. 48:4.
u Ex. 8:15,32. 9:17. Neh. 9:29. Rom. 2:4,5. Heb. 3:8,13.
x 2 K. 16:10—16. Ezra 9:7. Jer. 5:5. 37:13—15. 38:4. Ez. 22:6,26—28. Dan. 9:6,8. Mic. 3:1—4,9—11. 7:3. Zeph. 3:3,4.
y 29:3. 33:9.
z 33:4—7. Ez. 8:5—16.
a 24:18—21. 33:10. 2 K. 17:13. Jer. 25:3,4. 26:5. 35:15. 44:4,5.
* Heb. the hand of his.
† That is, continually and carefully.
b Judg. 10:16. 2 K. 13:23. Hos. 11:8. Luke 19:41—44.
c 30:10. Ps. 35:16. Is. 28:22. Jer. 5: 12,13. 20:7. Luke 18:32. 22:63,64. 23:11,36. Acts 2:13. 17:32. Heb. 11:36.
d Prov. 1:25—30. Luke 16:14. Acts 13:41. 1 Thes. 4:8.
e Jer. 32:3. 38:6. Matt. 5:12. 21:33—41. 23:34—37. Acts 7:52.
f Ps. 74:1. 79:1—5.
g Prov. 6:15. 29:1.
‡ Heb. healing.
h 33:11. Deut. 28:49. 2 K. 24:2,3. Jer. 15:3. 22:42. 40:3. Dan. 9:14. i 2 K. 25:1,&c. Jer. 39:1,&c. 52:1,&c.
k Lev. 26:14,&c. Deut. 28:15,&c. 29: 18—28. 30:18. 31:16—18. 32:15—28. Ps. 79:2,3. Jer. 16:9. 18:21. Lam. 2:21,22. l 34:21. Lam. 2:20. Ez. 9:5—7. Luke 13:1,2. m Deut. 28:50. Ps. 74:20. n 7,10. 2 K. 25:13—17. Jer. 27:18—22. 52:17—23. Dan. 5:3.
o 2 K. 20:13—17. Is. 39:6. Zech. 1:6. p 2 K. 25:9. Ps. 74:4—8. 79:1,7. Is. 64:10,11. Jer. 7:4,14. 52:13. Lam. 4:1. Mic. 3:12. Luke 21:6.
q 2 K. 25:10,11. Jer. 52:14,15.
§ Heb. the remainder from the sword.
r Deut. 28:47,48. Jer. 27:7. s 22. Ezra 1:1,&c. t Jer. 25:9—11. 26:6,7. 27:12,13. Dan. 9:2. Zech. 1:4—6.
u Lev. 26:4—6. 26:34,35. Zech. 1:12. x Ezra 1:1—3.
y Dan. 10:1.
z 21. Jer. 25:12,14. 29:10. 32:42—44. 33:10—14. Heb. 10:23.

Verses 14, 15.

(M. R.) The Lord acted towards Judah, as a man would do, who had the welfare of his son much at heart, and would lose no time, but meet him with warnings as soon as he began to turn aside; missing no opportunity and sparing no pains: for God had compassion on the people; and proceeded, as if reluctantly, to execute vengeance, and to give up Jerusalem, and the temple, to the rage of heathen conquerors. (Jer. 25 3.) SCOTT.

(15.) Rising up betimes.] 'And he rose up early,' or 'very early,' is a very common Arabic expression in narratives, especially of journeys, and there is a verb expressly to denote 'rising early' and 'rising very early.' The expression originated in the common oriental custom of setting out on a journey as soon as, or even before, dawn, in order to avoid travelling or moving in the heat of the day, which is excessive long before noon. The dawn is their most refreshing hour, and in such dry and hot countries it is, therefore, the hour of greatest activity. ED.

Verse 16.

Jer. 2:26—30. 11:18—23. 18:18—23. 20:1—6. 26:10—24. 32:2, 3. 36:5. 37:11—21. 38:1—6. 43:3—7. Lam. 3:52—57. Matt. 5:10—12. 21: 33—39. 23:29—39. Acts 7:51—53. 1 Thes. 2:13—16.—No remedy, &c.] It no longer consisted with the honor of God to protect so wicked a people, who professed to be his worshippers, and who encouraged themselves in sin by a presumptuous confidence in Him. It was become necessary to display the glory of the divine holiness and justice, in bringing signal miseries on them: and this God did, by giving them up to their own infatuated counsels, and the imbittered resentment of their cruel invaders. (M. R.) SCOTT.

Verse 21.

The 70 years here mentioned may either be computed from the first captivity in the 4th year of Jehoiakim, to the 1st of Cyrus the Persian; or from the later and more complete desolations of the land, to the finishing of the temple, in the 6th of Darius, as the land was both desolated, and re-peopled gradually. (2 K. 24:1, 8—16. Dan. 1:1, 2.) ID.

[a] the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made [b] a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

23 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, [c] All the kingdoms of the earth hath the LORD God of heaven given me; and [d] he hath charged me to build him an house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. [e] Who is there among you of all his people? the LORD his God be with him, and let him go up.

the land enjoyed her sabbaths, v. 21. as God had threatened by Moses, Lev. 26: 34. and the reason there given, v. 35. is, 'Because it did not rest on your sabbaths, you profaned the sabbath-day, did not observe the sabbatical year.' They many a time ploughed and sowed their land in the 7th year when it should have rested, and now it lay unploughed and unsown for 10 times 7 years. Note, God will be no loser in his glory at last, by the disobedience of men: if the tribute be not paid, He will distrain and recover it, as He speaks, Hos. 2: 9. Some think, they had neglected the observance of 70 sabbatical years in all, and just so many, by way of reprisal, the land now enjoyed; or if those that had been neglected, were fewer, it was fit the law should be satisfied, with interest. We find that one of the quarrels God had with them at this time, was, for not observing another law which related to the 7th year, and that was the release of servants; see Jer. 34: 13, &c. (2.) Yet we may consider it as giving some encouragement to their hopes, that they should, in due time, return to it again. While it lay desolate, it did, as it were, lie waiting for them again, and refuse to acknowledge any other owners.

V. 22, 23. These two vs. have a double aspect.

1. They look back to the prophecy of Jeremiah, and show how that was accomplished, v. 22. God had, by him, promised to restore the captives, and rebuild Jerusalem, at the end of 70 years; and God will be found true to every word He has spoken.

2. They look forward to the history of Ezra, which begins with the repetition of these last two vs. There they are the introduction to a pleasant story, here the conclusion of a very melancholy one; so we learn from them, that though God's people be corrected, they are not abandoned; though thrown into the furnace, yet not lost there, nor left there any longer than till the dross be separated.

[a] 21:16. 1 Sam. 26:19. 1 K. 11:14,23. 1 Chr. 5:26. Ezra 1:1. Is. 13:3—5, 17,18. 45:1—5. Hag. 1:14.
[b] 24:9. 30:5.
[c] Ps. 75:5—7. Dan. 2:21,37. 4:35. 5: 18,28.
[d] Is. 44:26—28.
[e] 1 Chr. 22:16. 29:5. Ezra 7:13. Zech. 2:6,7. Rom. 8:31.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

When the wickedness of nations provokes God to remove wise and pious princes, and to advance others of a contrary character; avowed impiety and desolating judgments may be expected to come in like a flood, and to bear down all before them.—Infatuated counsels and treacherous measures concur in ruining those, who, in proud contempt of God, reject the warnings of his ministers from his Word: and who thus 'stiffen their neck, and harden their heart from turning unto the LORD.' The whole plan of redemption, the warnings, invitations, and entreaties of his Word, and his long-suffering towards us, prove his rich compassion and love: but these endearing attributes are exercised in exact consistency with his justice, holiness, truth, and infallible wisdom; and when no means, mercies, or warnings are effectual to bring sinners to repentance, there is no remedy, but He must vindicate the honor of his despised authority, patience, and mercy, in their condign punishment.

SCOTT.

'GEOGRAPHY OF S. W. ASIA. I. Countries this side the Euphrates. (a) The peninsula of Asia Minor (Natolia). Chief rivers: Halys and Sangarius. Countries:—3 on the W. side, Mysia, Lydia, Caria. Along the coast, the Greek maritime cities, Phocæa, Ephesus, Miletus, Smyrna, Halicarnassus, &c. In the interior the cities of Sardis, Lydia, and Pergamus in Mysia.—3 on the S. side: Lycia, Pamphylia and Cilicia, with the chief city Tarsus.—3 on the N. side: Bithynia, Paphlagonia, Pontus; with the Greek maritime cities Heraclea, Amisus and Sinope.—2 in the centre: Phrygia with Galatia, chief cities Gordium and Celænæ, and Cappadocia, city Mazaca. (b) Islands along the coast of Asia Minor. Lesbis, city Mitylene, Chios, Samos, Cos, Rhodes, with cities of the same name. (c) Syria with Phenicia and Palestine. 1. Syria proper. Cities: Damascus, Emesa, Heliopolis, (Baalbec). In the desert, Palmyra. 2. Phenicia. A mountainous land on the coast. Mts. Libanus and Anti-libanus. Cities: Tyre on an island, opposite ancient Tyre on the continent. Sidon, Byblus, Berytus, Tripolis, Aradus. 3. Palestine. Mts. Carmel, Tabor. River: Jordan. Division originally into 12 tribes; afterwards into the districts, Judea, chief city Jerusalem; Samaria, (cities Samaria and Sichem,) and Galilee.' [See also note, Josh. 12: 8. on Geogr. of Syria.] (d) Arabia. Full of monstrous deserts, and inhabited by nomades. But its S. and E. coasts give it great commercial importance. In the N. Arabia Petræa, from the place Petra. In the centre, the Arabian desert. In the S. Arabia Felix; rich, by its native products, as various kinds of incense, frankincense, &c. and as the most ancient depot for India wares. Cities: Mariaba, Aden, &c. On the E. side, the commercial city Gerra, and the opposite islands Tylus and Aradus (Bahrein islands,) likewise the staples as well of Arabian as of India wares, especially cinnamon from Taprobane Ceylon, [Parvaim].'

'II. Between Euphrates and Tigris. (a) Mesopotamia. In the interior a dry plateau, inhabited only by nomadic hordes. Cities on the Euphrates: Thapsacus, Circesium (Carchemish), Cunaxa. In the N. Zoba or Nisibis. (b) Armenia, to the N. above the preceding. Full of mountains: for a long time without cities, at a late period it had Tigranocerta. Rivers: Cyrus, and Araxes, and Phasis. (c) Babylonia, the S. part of Mesopotamia, divided from it by the Median wall. A plain with a rich soil; once, by careful culture, canals, dams, and lakes, the most fruitful, and by situation the richest commercial country in the interior of Asia. Cities: Babylon on the Euphrates, Borsippa.

'III. Between the Tigris and Indus. (a) Assyria, or the district Adiabene, an extensive plateau. Cities: Nineveh (Ninus), Arbela. The name Assyria is often used by the Greeks in a wider signification, and then it embraces both Mesopotamia and Babylonia; it is even sometimes put for the name Syria. (b Susiana, a fruitful country, with the city Susa on the River Choaspes or Eulæus (Ulai), one of the residences of the Persian kings. (c) Persis, in the N. rough and mountainous, in the middle a fruitful plain, in the S. sandy. Rivers: Cyrus and Araxes. Cities: Persepolis or Pasargada, where was the national palace, and burying-place of the kings of Persia. Persis is used in antiquity, as in modern geography, in a wider sense, and then embraces all the countries between the Tigris and Indus, except Assyria. In this case it comprises 3 S. districts, Persis, properly so called [Fars], Carmania, Gedrosia; 3 central, Media, Aria, Arachosia, and 3 N. Parthia, with Hyrcania, Bactria, Sogdiana. (d) Carmania, a large, for the most part desolate land, along the Persian Gulf and the Indian Sea. Cities: Carmania, Harmozia. (e) Gedrosia, the district on the coast between Carmania and India. Along the Indian Sea it is a desert of sand; in the N. mountainous. Town: Pura. (f) Media, above Persis. An extensive, very fruitful, and in the N. mountainous district. Rivers: Araxes, Cyrus, and Mardus. Cities: Ecbatana [Acmetha], Rages. The N. part is also called Atropatene (Aderbitschan or Media Minor. (g) Aria, a plain, with a lake and river Arius; and a city Aria or Artacoana. (h) Arachosia; a rich and fruitful country on the boundary of India; bounded on the N. by the mountain Paropamisus. Cities: Arachotus and Prophthasia. The neighboring, thickly peopled, mountainous countries, (at present Cabul and Candahar,) although they properly belong to India, yet, as they were so often subjected to the Persian rule, were often distinguished by the name of Paropamisus, and considered as forming a part of Persia. (i) Parthia and Hyrcania, rough mountain districts, N. from Media, but full of noble and fruitful valleys. Before and during the Persian supremacy, they were little known and esteemed, and were without cities. It was at a late period that the inhabitants of Parthia came in turn to possess a rule widely extended through the world. (k) Bactria, the country on the S. bank of the Oxus. It is rich in its natural products, and one of the oldest commercial countries of Asia. River: Oxus. Cities: Bactra and Zariaspa. Bactria, on the boundary of India, the less Thibet, and little Bucharia, (the N. India of Herod. and Ctesias,) and the desert Cobi, (the desert abounding in gold, of Herod.) through which the road to China passes, is by its geographical situation naturally destined to be one of the first staples of the wares of S. Asia; and appears, the farther we extend our researches in history, to have been, as Babylon, one of the first principal places of the intercourse between nations, and in consequence of dawning culture. (l) Sogdiana, the country between the upper Oxus and the upper Jaxartes, which divides it from Middle Asia (a part of the greater Bucharia). It resembles in character and advantages the neighboring Bactria. Chief city: Marakanda (Samarcand).' [See the maps, p. 64. vol. I. &c.]

'IV. Egypt. [Included by some geographers in S. W. Asia.] The land on the banks of the Nile, as far as its floods extend [its valley is 900 miles in length and from 12 to 25 in breadth], are alone fruitful in corn; the remainder on the W. is a desert of sand, and on the E. a rocky, mountainous region. [Only 17,000 sq. miles out of 200,000 are cultivable.] The E. of the branches of the Nile, entered the sea at Pelusium, the W. at Canopus: between was the Delta, (so called as resembling that Greek letter,) filled with cities and excellently well tilled. A few spots, fertile from abounding in fountains, are found in the W. desert, and are called oases. Egypt is divided into Upper Egypt, from Syene to the city Chemmis, (chief city, Thebes or Diospolis; Middle Egypt, from Chemmis to Cercasorus, where the Nile divides,) chief city, Memphis; and Lower Egypt, comprising the Delta and the land on both sides of it: it was full of cities, of which Sais is particularly worthy of note. Ethiopia, above, from the earliest times seems to have stood in an intimate connection with Egypt, especially of a commercial nature. The countries, just above Egypt, usually included under the name of Nubia, are mostly a mere desert of sand, traversed from the beginning by marauding nomades; whilst along the shore of the Arabian Gulf a rocky chain extends, and derived, in Nubia, a still greater importance, from its rich mines of gold, just above the Egyptian boundary. [Wilkinson states, that these were already worked as early as 1656 B. C. about the time of Joseph, (who he thinks arrived in Egypt in the reign of Osirtesen I. in 1706,) and that the port of Ænum or Philoteras (Old Kossaer) was probably already built for trade.] At this boundary, the Nile is full of rocks, and bends to the W. its banks are fruitful and inhabited, and rich in monuments of antiquity. Ascending to 16° N. L. fruitful districts commence; and their costly products, gold as well as incense, have always made these provinces, rich commercial countries. Here, even in Herodotus's time, (460 B. C.) Meroe was celebrated, with a capital of the same name. It formed a state of priests, with a king at its head, like the Egyptian states. The cities Axum and Adule also seem, from their ruins, of equal antiquity with the ancient Egyptian cities, and with Meroe.

HEEREN.

AN EXPOSITION,

WITH

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS AND NOTES,

UPON THE BOOK OF EZRA.

It is recorded by Jewish writers, that Ezra revised all the preceding parts of Scripture, and published a correct copy of the whole: and indeed this appears highly probable. He is not called a prophet, in Scripture: yet, doubtless, he performed these services under the guidance of the Holy Spirit; as no distinction is made in the N. T. between one part and another of that volume, then called 'The Oracles of God,' and, as such, sanctioned by our Lord and his apostles. The prophecies of Haggai and Zechariah confirm the history in the former part of this book: and as Ezra alone records the rebuilding of the temple; whatever in the N. T. relates to the temple, as then standing, is, in some sense, a sanction to the authenticity of the narrative: though I do not recollect any express references to it except in the genealogies. Neither does the book appear to contain any direct prophecies: but it is written in so pious a strain, and so much in the manner of the other Scriptures, that it has strong internal evidences of divine inspiration. As express mention is made in it of Jeremiah's prophecies, and plain intimations are given of Isaiah's extraordinary prediction concerning Cyrus; (1:1—4.) it is evident the writings of these prophets were then extant: and the constant reference to the law of Moses and the preceding histories, in this book, and that of Nehemiah, proves the same respecting them.—Ezra was peculiarly had in honor by the ancient Jews, and is so by the modern: and to this we must ascribe the forgery of several other books, under his name, especially the two apocryphal books of Esdras, or Ezra; for forgeries they undoubtedly are, and of a much later date than the authentic record of Ezra.—During the captivity nothing is recorded of Israel, except what may be collected from Ezekiel and Daniel: and exceedingly little is contained in the Scripture of their condition, during 536 years, till the birth of Christ, compared with the regular history given of the nation from Moses to the captivity. The old dispensation was about to expire and make way for Christianity; the Spirit of propheey was about to be withdrawn for a season; and the people had so often and so flagrantly violated their national covenant, that they were not honored and noticed as in former ages. [See concluding note to Ezra.] Scott.

The Jewish church puts on quite another face, in this book, from what it had appeared with; much better, and more pleasant, than of late in Babylon, yet far inferior to what it had been formerly. Kings we hear no more of, the crown is fallen from their heads. Prophets they are blessed with, to direct their re-establishment, but, after a while, prophecy ceases among them, till the great Prophet appears, and his fore-runner. The history of this book is the accomplishment of Jeremiah's prophecy concerning their return out of Babylon, at the end of 70 years, and a type of the accomplishment of the prophecies of the Apocalypse, concerning the deliverance of the gospel-church out of the New Testament Babylon. Ezra preserved the records of that great revolution, and transmitted them to the church in this book. His name signifies a helper; and so he was to that people. The book gives us an account, I. Of the Jews' return from captivity, ch. 1, 2. II. Of the building of the temple, the opposition it met with, and yet the perfecting of it at last, ch. 3—6. III. Of Ezra's coming to Jerusalem, about 78 or 79 years afterward, ch. 7, 8. IV. Of the good service he did there, in obliging those that had married strange wives, to put them away, ch. 9, 10. This beginning again of the Jewish nation was small, yet its latter end greatly increased. Henry.

B. C. 536.

CHAP. I.

Cyrus issues a proclamation, allowing the Jews to go up to Jerusalem and build the temple; and exhorting those who staid behind to assist them, 1—4. Many prepare to return, and others contribute to the expense, 5, 6. Cyrus restores the vessels of the temple to Sheshbazzar, 7—11.

NOW [a] in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the Lord [b] by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, [c] that he * made a See on 2 Chr. 36:22,23.

b Jer. 25:12—14. 29:10. 33:7—13.
c 5:13—15. 6:22. 7:27. Ps. 105:46. Prov. 21:1.
* Heb. caused a voice to pass. Matt. 3:1—3. John 1:23.

Chap. I. V. 1—4. It will be proper here to consider,

1. The state of the captive Jews in Babylon; it was on many accounts very deplorable; they were under the power of those that hated them, and had nothing they could call their own: no temple, no altar. If they sang psalms, their enemies ridiculed them; yet they had prophets among them, as Ezekiel and Daniel: some of them were preferred at court, others had comfortable settlements in the country, and all were borne up with hope that, in due time, they should return to their own land; so they preserved the distinction of their families, the knowledge of their religion, and an aversion to idolatry.

2. The state of the government, under which they were. Nebuchadnezzar carried many away, in the 1st year of his reign, the 4th of Jehoiakim; he reigned 45 years, his son Evil-merodach 23, and his grandson Belshazzar 3, which make up the 70. So Lightfoot. It is charged on Nebuchadnezzar, that he opened not the house of his prisoners, Isa. 14: 17. And if he had showed mercy to the poor Jews, Daniel told him it would have been the lengthening of his tranquillity, Dan. 4: 27 But the measure of the sins of Babylon was, at length, full, and then destruction was brought on them by Darius the Mede and Cyrus the Persian, which we read of, Dan. 5: Darius, being old, left the government to Cyrus, who was employed as the instrument of the Jews' deliverance, which he ordered, as soon as he was master of the kingdom of Babylon, either in contradiction to Nebuchadnezzar, or in policy, to recommend his newly-acquired dominion as merciful and gentle; or, as some think, in a pious regard to the prophecy of Isaiah, published, and well known, above 150 years before, Isa. 44: 28. 45: 1, &c. and which perhaps was showed him by those about him. His name, some say, in Persian, signifies the sun, for he brought light and healing to the church of God, and was an eminent type of Christ the Sun of Righteousness. Some say his name signifies a father, and Christ is the everlasting Father.

Respecting this proclamation, we have here, I. Its rise. The Lord stirred up Cyrus. The hearts

NOTES.

Chap. I. V. 1—4. (2 Chr. 36:22, 23.) Nebuchadnezzar's son, Evil-merodach, was slain by Neriglissar, his brother-in-law, after he had reigned two years; and probably Jehoiachin died before him. (Note, 2 K. 25:27—30.) After 4 years, Neriglissar was slain in battle by Cyrus: after a few months, Belshazzar, son of Evil-merodach, mounted the throne; and at the end of 17 years was slain in Babylon by Cyrus. (Dan. 5:) Then Cyaxares, or Darius the Mede, the uncle and father-in-law of Cyrus, succeeded to the throne of all these kingdoms; and after 2 years he died, and left the whole of them to Cyrus, who, in the first year after his predecessor's death, proclaimed liberty to the captive Jews. This is the first computation of the 70 years of the Babylonish captivity. (2 Chr. 36:21.)—As Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius the Mede, and of Cyrus the Persian, there can be little doubt, that he was instrumental in procuring this extraordinary proclamation in favor of the Jews: and probably he showed that prince the prophecy of Isaiah, [so Josephus asserts,] and also those of Jeremiah, which foretold the exact duration of the captivity. (Is. 13:17. 21:1—5. 41:25. 44:25—28. 45:1—6. Jer. 25:10—13. 27:4—9. 29:10. 50: 51: Dan. 1:17—20. 6:25—28.) The prophecy of Isaiah was delivered about 120 years before the temple was destroyed; and about the same time before the birth of Cyrus. These predictions, set before Cyrus, by a person of Daniel's venerable age, and high reputation for wisdom, and eminent station, seem to have produced in the mind of this prudent and humane a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

2 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The [d] LORD God of heaven [e] hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth; and [f] he hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem which is in Judah.

3 Who is there among you of all his people? [g] his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the LORD God of Israel, ([h] he is the God,) which is in Jerusalem.

4 And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, [i] let the men of his place [*] help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, beside [k] the free-will-offering for the house of God, that is in Jerusalem.

5 Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, with all them [k] whose spirit God had raised to go up to build the house of the LORD, which is in Jerusalem.

6 And all they that were about them of kings are in his hand, and, like the rivulets of water, He turneth them which way He will. It is said Cyrus knew not God, nor how to serve Him; but God knew him, and how to serve Himself by him, Isa. 45: 4. God governs the world by his influence on men's spirits, and, whatever good is done at any time, God stirs up the spirit to it, puts thoughts into the mind, gives to the understanding to form a right judgment, and directs the will which way He pleases. Whatever good offices therefore are, at any time, done for the church of God, He must have the glory of them. II. Its reference to the prophecy of Jeremiah, by whom God had not only promised they should return, but had fixed the time, which set time to favor Sion was now come. 70 years were determined; (Jer. 25: 12. 29: 10.) and He that kept the promise concerning Israel's deliverance out of Egypt, to a day, (Ex. 12: 41.) was, doubtless, as punctual to this. Jeremiah, while he lived, was hated and despised; yet thus did Providence honor him long after, that a mighty monarch shall act in pursuance of the word of the Lord by his mouth. Isa. 44: 36. III. Its date; in his 1st year, not of his reign over Persia, the kingdom he was born to, but Babylon, which he had conquered. Those are much honored, whose spirits are stirred up to begin with God, and to serve Him in their first years. IV. Its publication; by word of mouth, a voice passing throughout all his kingdom, like a jubilee trumpet proclaiming liberty to the captives; the publication was made also by writing, that it might be the more satisfactory, and might be sent to those distant provinces where the ten tribes were scattered, in Assyria and Media, 2 K. 17: 6. V. Its purport.

1. The preamble shows the causes and considerations him thereunto moving, v. 2. It should seem, his mind was enlightened with the knowledge of Jehovah, v. 3. Though he had not known God by education, God made him so far to know Him now, as that he did his service with an eye to Him. He professes to do it, (1.) In gratitude to God. What he says sounds a little vainglorious, for there were many kingdoms of the earth which he had nothing to do with; but he means, that God had given him all that was given to Nebuchadnezzar, whose dominion, Daniel says, was to the end of the earth, Dan. 4: 22. 5: 19. God is the Fountain of power; and those entrusted with it, should look on themselves as obliged thereby to do much for Him. (2.) In obedience to God. He hath charged me to build Him a house at Jerusalem; probably, by a dream or vision of the night, confirmed by comparing it with the prophecy of Isaiah, where it was foretold. Israel's disobedience to God's charge, which they were often told of, is aggravated by the obedience of this heathen king.

2. He gives free leave to all Jews in his dominions, to go to Jerusalem, and build the temple of the Lord there, v. 3. Piety is the best policy.

3. He subjoins a brief for a collection to bear the charges of such as were poor, and not able to bear their own, v. 4. Some take it as an order to the king's officers to supply them out of his revenue, as ch. 6: 8. But it may mean a warrant to ask and receive the alms and charitable contributions of all the king's loving subjects. And we may suppose the Jews had conducted themselves so well among their neighbors, that they would be as forward to accommodate them, because they loved them, as the Egyptians were, because they were weary of them. At least, many would be kind to them, because they saw the government would take it well. Cyrus not only gave his good wishes with them that went, (Their God be with them, v. 3.) but took care also to furnish such things as they needed. He took it for granted, that those among them who were of ability, would offer their free-will offering for the house of God, to promote the rebuilding of it. But he would also have them supplied out of his kingdom. Well-wishers to the temple should be well-doers for it.

V. 5—11. We are here told,

I. How Cyrus's proclamation succeeded with others. 1. Many went up accordingly, v. 5. The leaders were the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, eminent and experienced men, who might justly be expected, as they were above their brethren in dignity, to go before them in duty. The priests and Levites were (as became them) with the first. If any good work is to be done, let ministers lead in it. They that accompanied, were such as God had inclined, Zech. 4: 6. The temptation perhaps was strong, to some, to stay d 1 K. 8:27. 2 Chr. 2:12. Is. 66:1. Jer. 10:11. Dan. 2:28. 5:23.

e Jer. 27:5,7. Dan. 2:37,38. 4:25,32. 5:19—21.
f Is. 44:26—28. 45:1,12,13.
g Josh. 1:9. 1 Chr. 28:20. Matt. 28:20. h Deut. 32:31. Dan. 2:47. 6:26. Acts 10:36.
i 7:16—18. Acts 24:17. 3 John 6—8.
* Heb. lift him up. Ec. 4:9,10. Gal. 6:2. k 3:68—70. 1 Chr. 29:3,9,17.
k 1. 2 Chr. 36:22. Neh. 2:12. Prov. 16:1. 2 Cor. 8:16. Phil. 2:13. Jam. 1:16,17.

conqueror, a conviction that the God of Israel was the true God, and that the captive Jews were his chosen people, and Jerusalem the place where He was especially pleased to be worshipped.—Cyrus's dominions being far superior to any other empire then in the world, (as comprising the dominions of the Medes and Persians increased by those of the Assyrians, Babylonians, and others,) were called in the customary style, 'all the kingdoms of the earth.'—By this decree, the Jews, who had been held in bondage and captivity, were virtually released, provided they chose to engage in this enterprise. Any attempt of this kind would previously have been punishable as rebellion; but now, the government being favorable, their opposers would be restrained, and many would readily help them on that account alone.—As the kings of Persia still retained the sovereignty of the land, it could be no real impolicy to encourage the people to re-inhabit and cultivate a fertile territory, which had long lain desolate. But this measure was so contrary to the ancient prejudices and superstitions of these kings, that it was probably dictated by conscience, and a sense of duty to the God of heaven: though we find nothing in the subsequent history of this prince to favor a conclusion, that he finally renounced idolatry, and became a true worshipper of JEHOVAH. The proclamation, however, was honorable to God; and would encourage the Jews to adhere to their religion, and be more zealous for it; and perhaps induce many of the Gentiles to respect, and even to embrace it. SCOTT.

(1, 2.) 'On the conquest of Babylon, [note, 2 K. 17:6.] at the death of Belshazzar, (grandson of Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. 5:) Cyrus made his uncle Cyaxares, (there called Darius the Median,) king of Babylon. Such was his title, but, according to Xenophon, Cyrus had the throne and remained in the city. After 2 yrs. Darius died, when Persia, and all the dominions of Assyria and Babylon, became subject to his sole sway.' BOOTHROYD. All the kingdoms.] 'He ruled over all Asia, says Herod. Over the Medes and Hyrcanians, Syrians, Assyrians, Arabians, Cappadocians, both Phrygias, the Carians, Phoenicians, Babylonians, Bactrians, Indians, Cilicians, Sacæ or Scythians, Paphlagonians, Megadinians, and many other nations, the Greeks inhabiting Asia, and the Cyprians and Egyptians; the borders of his kingdom were to the E. of the Red Sea; to the N. the Euxine Pontus; to the W. Cyprus and Egypt; and to the S. Ethiopia. Xenoph.' Cond. Comm. See Geogr. note, end of 2 Chr. and Hist. note, end of Esther. ED.

He hath charged.] 'So he understood from Is. 45:13 and 44:28.' PATRICK.

(3.) He is the God.] 'There is no doubt that the aboriginal founders of the Median and Persian nations, were orthodox: for Shem was father of Elam, who was father or ancestor of the Persians. But as the corrupted and depraved human nature verges to worse, so they gradually mixed superstitions with their true religion; adding Sabianism, i. e. a veneration (not divine indeed, but yet too great) for the heavenly bodies and the elements. And, at length, imitating the fire of the altar in the temple of God, the Persians also learned to keep a perpetual fire in their Pyrees (fire-towers), and although they did not adore this with divine worship, yet they paid, and still pay it, too superstitious a veneration. They affirm, that their religion was reformed and brought back to its ancient purity by Abraham. Again relapsing into these superstitions, they were again reformed: and were indeed the worshippers of the true God, free from all iconolatry (or image-worship); and afterwards at length became zealous iconoclasts, destroying the idolatrous temples of the Greeks: [as well as those of the Jews, Egyptians, &c.?] believing that God, who filled the universe, could not be contained in walls. Therefore the Persians had then no temples, as Herodotus notes: nor adored any images or statues, nor made or fashioned any sculpture or handiwork: except once in the decline of the empire, when a heretical king set up a statue of Venus. Though accused of it, by Greeks, and Mohammedans, they deny that they ever worshipped any other than the one true God. The precepts of Zoroaster prescribe Niyaish, salutations, only, [Job 31:26—28.] to the Sun, no mention is made of Prestish, servitus.' HYDE. The judgment of Job, see as above, seems less lenient, and 'in the time of Sapor many thousand Christians in Armenia and Persia suffered martyrdom, rather than turn towards the Sun, (as is the custom of Mohammedans and even Armenian Christians in Persia now,) or the king, with this kind of external homage, at the order of a Persian king. . . . 'Indeed there is sufficient certainty of the faith of the Medes and Persians in the one only God, from the beginning of their monarchy.' . . . 'They have preserved the true faith in God, a d, which can be said of no other nation, but the Jewish, have continue : to the present time the most ancient church derived from Shem, and the post-diluvian Patriarchs.' HYDE; whom see for the reformations of the Zoroasters, &c. ZOROASTER's prophecy of Christ; and the sending of the magi to Bethlehem, to find Christ, by the Parthian monarch of Persia. But see pref. to Harris's 'Great Teacher,' ed. by Pres. Humphrey, p. 29. ED.

Verses 5, 6.

Some readers may perhaps wonder, that, on this proclamation of Cyrus, the Jews did not assemble in one body, and directly go and

* strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with precious things, beside all that was [l] willingly offered.

7 ¶ Also [m] Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels of the house of the LORD, which [n] Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem, and had put them in the house of his gods;

8 Even those did Cyrus king of Persia bring forth by the hand of Mithredath the treasurer, and numbered them unto [o] Sheshbazzar the prince of Judah.

9 And this is the number of them: thirty [p] chargers of gold, a thousand chargers of silver, [q] nine and twenty knives,

10 Thirty basins of gold, silver basins of a second sort four hundred and ten, and other vessels a thousand.

11 All [r] the vessels of gold and of silver were five thousand and four hundred. All these did Sheshbazzar bring up with them of the † captivity, that were brought up from Babylon unto Jerusalem.

in Babylon; they had convenient settlements there, and an agreeable acquaintance with the neighbors; the discouragements to return were many and great, the journey long, their wives and children unfit for travelling, their own land a strange land, the road to it an unknown road. Jerusalem was all in ruins, and in the midst of enemies to whom they would be an easy prey. Many were wrought upon by these considerations to stay at least, not to go with the first; but some got over those difficulties, and they were those whose spirits God raised. He, by his Spirit and grace, filled them with a generous ambition of liberty, a gracious affection to their own land, and a desire of the free and public exercise of their religion. Had He left them to themselves, and to the counsels of flesh and blood, they had staid in Babylon; but He put it into their hearts to set their faces Zionward, and, as strangers, to ask the way thither; (Jer. 50: 5.) Being a new generation, they went out, like their father Abraham, from this land of the Chaldees, not knowing whither they went, Heb. 11: 8. Whatever good we do, it is owing purely to the grace of God, and He raises up our spirits to do it, works in us both to will and to do. Our spirits naturally incline to this earth and the things of it; if they move upward, in any good affections or good actions, it is God that raises them.

The call and offer of the Gospel are like Cyrus's proclamation; deliverance to the captives, Luke 4: 18. out of the slavery of sin into the glorious liberty of the children of God. The offer is general to all; Christ makes it, in pursuance of the grant the Father has made Him of all power both in heaven and in earth, (a much greater dominion than that given to Cyrus; v. 2.) and of the charge given Him to build God a house, to set Him up a church in the world, a kingdom among men. Many that hear this joyful sound, are in love with their sins, and will not venture on the difficulties of a holy life; but some there are, that break through their discouragements,—those whose spirit God has raised above the world and the flesh, and whom He has made willing in the day of his power, Ps. 110: 3.

2. Their neighbors helped them, v. 6. All about them, furnished them with plate and goods. As the tabernacle was made of the spoils of Egypt, and the first temple built by the labors of the strangers, so the second by the contributions of the Chaldeans; all intimating the admission of the Gentiles into the church, in due time.

II. How this proclamation was seconded by Cyrus himself. He not only released the people of God, but restored the vessels of the temple, v. 7, 8. Observe here, 1. How careful Providence was of these, that they were not lost, melted down,

• That is, helped them. 7:15,16. 8:25—28,33.

l 4. Ps. 110:3. 2 Cor. 9:7.

m 5:14. 6:5.

n 2 K. 24:13. 25:13—16. 2 Chr. 36:7, 10,18. Jer. 27:21,22. 28:3—6. Dan. 1:2. 5:3,23.

o 11. 5:14,16. Hag. 1:1,14. 2:2—4. Zech. 4:6—10.

p Num. 7:13,19. 1 K. 7:50. 2 Chr. 4: 8,11,21,22. 24:14. Matt. 14:8.

q Matt. 10:29—31.

r Rom. 9:23. 2 Tim. 2:19—21.

† Heb. transportation. Matt. 1:11,12.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

As the architect progressively executes every part of the plan, he had delineated for his intended structure, till the whole is completed; so God in his providence performs in due order all the prophecies of his Word: a great proportion of his grand design has already been accomplished, and revolving ages will hasten the performance of all the rest, in the appointed periods.—When He has work to do, they, whom He has chosen to perform it, find their minds enlarged to entertain noble designs; and, forgetful of their former habits, maxims, and superstitions, they serve his cause with all the authority, which He has conferred on them. Even they, who live and die strangers to the power of true religion, have often received deep convictions of 'his eternal power and Godhead,' and of their obligations and accountableness to 'the God of heaven:' and, under these convictions, they have made public and honorable confessions to Him, have shown for a time a regard for his authority, and have done many and great things for his cause and people; speaking the language of piety, and being very useful to his worshippers: and yet at last they have relapsed into their former idolatry or ungodliness! (7: 11—28.) —If such things have heretofore been done in fulfilling former prophecies; the Lord is equally able and faithful to provide for the ruin of every antichrist, the conversion of the Jews, and the calling of all the Gentiles into his church.—In every useful undertaking, all should endeavor to be helpful; some by their labors, some with their substance, and all by their prayers; and whatever is done willingly, and from love to God and his people, will be graciously accepted. SCOTT.

take possesion of their ancient inheritances: but a little reflection shows the matter in another light. . . . None of the Jews had seen Jerusalem or the temple, except such as were considerably above 50 years of age; at which period of life the spirit of enterprise commonly begins to decline: and those, who had merely seen it as children, would have little stimulating recollection of it. Few were attached to the temple by true piety: and most of them wanted even that attachment, which men naturally feel for the land of their nativity; having been born in the places, where they were then settled. Some persons of true and eminent piety were so situated, that they did not think it their duty to remove; as Daniel in the court of Cyrus: others would be hindered by the infirmities of old age, and the peculiar circumstances of their families and connections. In short, the difficulties, hardship, and peril were manifest; the success of the attempt would be doubtful to all, but those who were 'strong in faith:' its temporal advantages were remote and precarious, and not worth the venture; especially to such as had obtained comfortable settlements or occupations, in the land of their captivity. Even the spiritual advantages would appear to the pious mind, more intended for posterity than for that generation; and to engage in it, in this view, would require vigorous faith, lively hope, and an active zeal for the honor of God, and the benefit of his church, and establishment of his worship, in ages to come.—We may conclude, that in consequence of the captivities, many Israelites, and some of the Jews, were finally incorporated with the heathen, among whom they dwelt: yet these calamities seem to have had a very good effect on considerable numbers. . . . Many more returned, than we read of being carried away captive: (2:64—67. Jer. 52:28—30.) but as the land had been utterly desolated, all the surviving inhabitants must have been driven into other countries, and most of them into those lands, which had been subject to the kings of Babylon, and which were now fallen under the dominion of the kings of Persia: and doubtless many of the ten tribes accompanied the Jews at this time. It is, however, evident that a great majority, even of the latter, chose to continue in the settlements they had there gained: some of them afterwards returned, but very many never did; and immense numbers of Jews were from that time dispersed, in every city and country, over all that part of the world. So that the new settlement, in Judea and at Jerusalem, formed but a small part of that people, as they continued to be distinguished from other nations: for they still increased and multiplied very rapidly, according to the promise of God to their fathers.—It is worthy of observation, that no Jews, who chose to go, were excluded by Cyrus's proclamation: yet the language of the sacred historian implies, that none would actually have gone, if He, who 'stirred up the spirit of Cyrus,' had not also 'raised the spirit of the people,' to avail themselves of this permission: the original words are the same in both clauses. This transaction, (as Abp. Usher has particularly observed,) furnishes a most striking illustration, or, as I would rather say, representation, of the way in which the Gospel is proposed to sinners, and embraced by believers. It is in general set before the ruined descendants of Adam, with the Savior's most solemn assurance, that 'Him who cometh . . . He will in nowise cast out.' Yet 'no man can come unto Him, except the Father draw him.' On one pretence or other, all who are left to themselves 'neglect so great salvation,' and are justly condemned. But God, by his preventing grace, 'stirs up the spirits' of some, who thus thankfully embrace the proffered blessing, and are mercifully saved. SCOTT.

Verses 7—11.

It is generally agreed, that the ark was lost or destroyed, when the temple was burnt: and it is likely, that by the absence of it, and the visible glory, 'God would signify, He was withdrawing his presence from that house of stone, to dwell in the temple of Christ's body, who offered Himself to God, and thereby put an end to these figurative sacrifices.' Patrick. The knives were used for slaying and preparing the sacrifices, as the original word signifies; and the vessels, for receiving the blood, for the meat-offerings, and other similar purposes. (M. R.)—The sum total of the vessels here stated far exceeds the particular account given of them: but it is supposed, that many spoons, tongs, and other instruments of service, not before numbered, were included. —Sheshbazzar was the grandson of Jehoiachin by Salathiel, and the heir of the house of David: as such he was regarded by the conquerors; he possessed authority over the captive Jews; and he was authorized, and willingly undertook, to lead those back, who now returned to rebuild the city and temple. (M. R. e.—2:2. 3:2, 8. 5:14—16. Jer. 22: 28—30.) ID.

Sheshbazzar. (8) This name appears to be compounded of a Hebrew word which signifies, fine linen, and another which signifies, in affliction.—The wearing of fine linen and white garments was an expression of rejoicing. ID.

CHAP. II.

The principal persons who returned from Babylon, 1, 2. The number of the several families which accompanied them, 3—35. The priests, 36—39. The Levites, 40—42. The Nethinims, 43—54. The children of Solomon's servants, 55—60. The priests who could not show their pedigree, 61—63. The sum total, with their retinue, 64—67. Their oblations towards the temple and its service, 68—70.

NOW these are [a] the children of the province that went up out of the captivity, of those which had been carried away, [b] whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away unto Babylon, and came again unto Jerusalem and Judah, every one unto his city;

2 Which came with [c] Zerubbabel: [b] Jeshua, Nehemiah, [e] Seraiah, Reelaiah, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispar, Bigvai, Rehum, Baanah. The number of the men of the people of Israel:

3 The children of [f] Parosh, two thousand an hundred seventy and two.

4 The children of [g] Shephatiah, three hundred seventy and two.

5 The children of [h] Arah, seven hundred seventy and five.

6 The children of [i] Pahath-moab, of the children of Jeshua and [k] Joab, two thousand eight hundred and twelve.

7 The children of [l] Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

8 The children of [m] Zattu, nine hundred forty and five.

9 The children of [n] Zaccai, seven hundred and threescore.

10 The children of [o] Bani, six hundred forty and two.

11 The children of [p] Bebai, six hundred twenty and three.

12 The children of [q] Azgad, a thousand two hundred twenty and two.

13 The children of [r] Adonikam, six hundred sixty and six.

14 The children of [s] Bigvai, two thousand fifty and six.

15 The children of [t] Adin, four hundred fifty and four.

16 The children of [u] Ater, of Hezekiah, ninety and eight.

17 The children of [x] Bezai, three hundred twenty and three.

18 The children of [y] Jorah, an hundred and twelve.

19 The children of [z] Hashum, two hundred twenty and three.

20 The children of [a] Gibbar, ninety and five.

21 The [b] children of Beth-lehem, an hundred twenty and three.

22 The men of [c] Netophah, fifty and six.

23 The men of [d] Anathoth, an hundred twenty and eight.

24 The children of [e] Azmaveth, forty and two.

25 The children of [f] Kirjath-arim, Chephirah and Beeroth, seven hundred and forty and three.

26 The children of [g] Ramah and Gaba, six hundred twenty and one.

27 The men of [h] Michmas, an hundred twenty and two.

28 The men of Bethel and [i] Ai, two hundred twenty and three.

29 The children of [k] Nebo, fifty and two.

30 The children of Magbish, an hundred fifty and six.

31 The children of the other [l] Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

32 The children of [m] Harim, three hundred and twenty.

33 The children of [n] Lod, * Hadid, and a 5:8. 6:2. Neh. 7:6. Esth. 1:1. 3:8, 11. 8:9. Acts 23:34.

b 2 K. 24:14—16. 25:11. 2 Chr. 36. Jer. 39: 52:
c 1:11. Sheshbazzar. Neh. 7:7. Hag. 1:1,12,14. 2:2,4,21. Zech. 4:6—10 Matt. 1:12,13. Zorobabel.
d 3:8,9. 4:3. 5:2. Hag. 1:12,14. 2:4. Zech. 3:1,3,8,9. Joshua.
e Neh. 7:7. Azariah. Nahamani. Raamiah. Mispereth. Nehum.
f 8:3. Pharosh. 10:25. Neh. 7:8.
g 8:8. Neh. 7:9.
h Neh. 6:18. 7:10. 652.
i 8:4. 10:30. Neh. 7:11. 2818. 10:14.
k 8:9.
l 8:7. 10:26. Neh. 7:12.
m 10:27. Neh. 7:13. 845.
n Neh. 7:14.
o 10:34. Neh. 7:15. Binnui. 648.
p 8:11. 10:28. Neh. 7:16. 628.
q 8:12. Neh. 7:17. 2322.
r 8:13. Neh. 7:18. 667.
s 8:14. Neh. 7:19. 2067.
t 8:6. Neh. 7:20. 655.
u Neh. 7:21.
x Neh. 7:23. 324.
y Neh. 7:24. Hariph.
z 10:33. Neh. 7:22. 328. a Neh. 7:25. Gibeon.
b 1 Chr. 2:50—52.
c 2 Sam. 23:28. 1 Chr. 2:54. Neh. 7:26. 188. Jer. 40:8.
d Josh. 21:18. Neh. 7:27. Is. 10:30. Jer. 1:1. 11:21. e Neh. 7:28. Beth-azmaveth.
f Josh. 9:17. Neh. 7:29. Kirjath-jearim.
g Josh. 18:24,25. Neh. 7:30.
h 1 Sam. 13:5:23. Is. 10:28. Michmash. Neh. 7:31.
i Gen. 12:8. Hai. Josh. 7:2. 8:9,17. Neh. 7:32. 123.
k Num. 32:3. Deut. 32:49. Neh. 7:33. Is. 15:2. Jer. 48:1,22.
l 7. Neh. 7:34.
m 10:31. Neh. 7:35.
n Neh. 6:2. 7:37. 11:34,35.
* Or, Harid, as in some copies.

NOTES.

CHAP. II. V. 2. These were the chief fathers, who were next in authority to Zerubbabel, and assisted him in this expedition. Jeshua, or Joshua, was the high priest, the grandson of Seraiah, slain by Nebuchadnezzar. (2 K. 25:18, 21. Comp. 1 Chr. 6:14, 15. with Note, Hag. 1:1.)—As these persons renounced many advantages, and encountered many hardships and dangers, in attempting to rebuild the temple and city, and resume possession of the promised land; it was proper their names should be recorded, as a mark of honorable distinction to them and their descendants. The people of Israel.] 'They who were called 'the children of the province,' (i. e. Judea,) before, are now called 'the people of Israel:' for from him they were derived, though most were of the tribe of Judah.' Patrick. (Note, 1:5. 9.)

SCOTT.

'We find that Nehemiah mentions 1765 not in Ezra, and Ezra 494 not in Nehemiah. Alting thinks that this, which seems to render all hope of reconciling them impossible, is precisely the point by which they can be reconciled: for, if we add Ezra's surplus to the sum in Nehemiah, and the surplus of Nehemiah to the number in Ezra, the numbers will be equal.'

Dr. A. CLARKE.

Verses 3—29.

The Register, in the book of Nehemiah, answers to this here given in so many particulars, that there can be no doubt that the same is meant in both places. In general, the names and the numbers of each family are nearly the same; and the sum total is computed in both exactly alike. Yet there are several considerable variations, in names and numbers, which cannot be readily and satisfactorily accounted for. The most material of these are marked in the margin.—It is probable, Ezra, when he wrote his history, many years after the return of the Jews to Babylon, copied this register from the public records without alteration.—The word children is sometimes used for the descendants from the several heads of families; at other times for those, whose ancestors belonged to the cities mentioned in connection with them. [Note, 1 Chr. 1:1.]

SCOTT.

Verse 30.

The children of Magbish are not named in Nehemiah.

ID.

CHAP. II. V. 1—35. We may observe here, 1. An account was kept in writing of the families that came up out of captivity, and the numbers of each family, (1.) For their honor, as part of their recompense for their faith, courage, confidence in God, and affection to their own land, and to stir up others to follow their good example. Those that honor God, He will thus honor. The names of all those Israelites indeed, that accept the offer of deliverance by Christ, shall be found, to their honor, in a more sacred record than this, even in the Lamb's book of life. (2.) For the benefit of posterity, that they might know from whom they descended, and to whom they were allied.

2. The leaders are first mentioned; (v. 2.) Zerubbabel and Jeshua were their Moses and Aaron, the former their chief prince, the latter their chief priest. Nehemiah and Mordecai are mentioned here; some think not the same with the famous men we afterward meet with of those names [so Scott]: probably, they were the same; but afterward returned to court for the service of their country.

3. Some families are named from their ancestors, others from the places in which they had formerly resided; as with us many surnames are the proper names of persons, others of places.

4. Some little difference there is between the numbers of some of the families here, and in Neh. 7. where this catalogue is repeated; which might arise from this, that some who had given in their names, at first, to come, afterward drew back; others that declined, at first, afterward repented and went.

5. Anathoth had been famous in Benjamin, yet here it numbered but 128, (v. 23.) which is to be imputed to the divine curse the men of Anathoth brought on themselves by persecuting Jeremiah who was of their city, Jer. 11: 23. There shall be

Ono, seven hundred twenty and five.

34 The children of [o] Jericho, three hundred forty and five.

35 The children of [p] Senaah, three thousand and six hundred and thirty.

36 ¶ The priests: the children of [q] Jedaiah, of the house of [r] Jeshua, nine hundred seventy and three.

37 The children of [s] Immer, a thousand fifty and two.

38 The children of [t] Pashur, a thousand two hundred forty and seven.

39 The children of [u] Harim, a thousand and seventeen.

40 ¶ The Levites: the children of Jeshua and Kadmiel, of the children of [x] Hodaviah, seventy and four.

41 The singers: the children of [y] Asaph, an hundred twenty and eight:

42 The children of [z] the porters: the children of Shallum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Akkub, the children of Hatita, the children of Shobai, in all an hundred thirty and nine.

43 ¶ The [a] Nethinims: the children of Ziha, the children of [b] Hasupha, the children of Tabbaoth, 44 The children of Keros, the children of [c] Siaha, the children of Padon, 45 The children of [d] Lebanah, the children of Hagabah, the children of Akkub, 46 The children of Hagab, the children of [*] Shalmai, the children of Hanan, 47 The children of Giddel, the children of Gahar, the children of Reaiah, 48 The children of Rezin, the children of Nekoda, the children of Gazzam, 49 The children of Uzza, the children of [e] Paseah, the children of Besai, 50 The children of Asnah, the children of [f] Mehunim, the children of Nephusim,

51 The children of Bakbuk, the children of Hakupha, the children of Harhur,

52 The children of [g] Bazluth, the children of Mehida, the children of Harsha, 53 The children of Barkos, the children of Sisera, the children of [h] Thamah, 54 The children of Neziah, the children of Hatipha.

55 ¶ The children of [i] Solomon's servants: the children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of [k] Peruda,

56 The children of [l] Jaalah, the children of Darkon, the children of Giddel, 57 The children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattil, the children of [m] Pocherith of Zebaim, the children of [n] Ami.

58 All the [o] Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's servants, were three hundred ninety and two.

59 And these were they which went up from Tel-melah, [p] Tel-harsa, Cherub, Addan, and Immer; but they could not show their father's house, and their † seed, whether they were of Israel:

60 The children [q] of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, six hundred fifty and two.

61 ¶ And of [r] the children of the priests: the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai: which took a wife of the daughters of [s] Barzillai the Gileadite, and was called after their name:

62 These sought their register among those that were reckoned by genealogy, but they were not found: [t] therefore ‡ were they, as polluted, put from the priesthood.

63 And the § Tirshatha said unto them, that they [u] should not eat of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with [x] Urim and with Thummim o 1 K. 16:34. Neh. 7:36. p Neh. 7:38. 3930.

q 1 Chr. 9:10. 24:7.
r 3:9. Neh. 7:39.
s 10:20. 1 Chr. 24:14. Neh. 7:40.
t 10:22. 1 Chr. 9:12. Neh. 7:41.
u 10:21. 1 Chr. 24:8. Neh. 7:42.
x 3:9. Judah. Neh. 7:43. Hodevah.
y 1 Chr. 6:39. 15:17. 25:1,2. Neh. 7:44. 148.
z 1 Chr. 26:1,&c. Neh. 7:45. 138. a 1 Chr. 9:2. Neh. 7:46—56. 10:28. b Neh. 7:46. Hashupha.
c Neh. 7:47. Sia.
d Neh. 7:48. Lebana. Hagaba.
* Or, Shamlai.
e Neh. 7:51. Phaseah.
f Neh. 7:52. Meunim. Nephisheshim.
g Neh. 7:54. Bazlith.
h Neh. 7:55. Tamah.
i 1 K. 9:21.
k Neh. 7:57. Perida.
l Neh. 7:58. Jaala.
m Neh. 7:59. Pocereth.
n Neh. 7:59. Amon.
o 7:7. Josh. 9:23,27. 1 Chr. 9:2. Neh. 7:60. p Neh. 7:61. Tel-haresha. Addon.
† Or, pedigree.
q Neh. 7:62. 642.
r Neh. 7:63,64.
s 2 Sam. 17:27. 19:31—39. 1 K. 2:7.
t Lev. 21:21—23. Num. 3:10. 16:40. 18:7.
‡ Heb. they were polluted from the priesthood. Ez. 44:10—14.
§ Or, governor. Neh. 7:65. 8:9. 10:1.
u Lev. 2:3,10. 6:17,29. 7:16. 10:17, 18. 22:2,10,15,16. Num. 18:9—11, 19,32.
x Ex. 28:30. Lev. 8:8. Num. 27:21. Deut. 33:8. 1 Sam. 28:6.

58. It is an honor to belong to God's house, though in the meanest office there.

IV. Of some looked upon as Israelites by birth, and others as priests, who yet could not make out a clear title to the honor. In one case their ancestor married a daughter of Barzillai, that great man we read of in David's time; and would have his children called after Barzillai's family, and their pedigree preserved in the registers of that house, not of the house of Aaron, so they lost it. In Babylon, there was nothing to be got by the priesthood, therefore they cared not for being akin to it. Those who think their ministry, or their relation to ministers, a diminution or disparagement to them, forget who it was, that said, I magnify my office. They had sold their birth-right for the honor of being gentlemen, therefore were justly degraded, and forbidden to eat of the most holy things. Note, Christ will be ashamed of those that are ashamed of Him and his service.

It was the Tirshatha, or governor, that put them under this sequestration, which some understand of Zerubbabel the present governor, others of Nehemiah, who is so called, (Neh. 8: 9. 10: 1.) and gave this order when he came some years after. But the prohibition was not absolute, it was only a suspension, till there should be a High Priest with Urim and Thummim, by whom they might know God's mind in this matter. This, it seems, was expected and desired, but it does not appear they were ever blessed with it under the second temple. They had the canon of the O. T.

Verse 35.

It is uncertain, whether Senaah be the name of a person, or a place; but the greatest number of persons stated in the whole register are called the children of Senaah. SCOTT.

Verses 36—39.

Above 4000 priests went up to Jerusalem on this occasion; which was a very great number, in proportion to the rest of the company: yet only 4, out of the 24 courses instituted by David, seem to have returned: at least only 4 of the persons, after whom the courses were first named, as here mentioned; namely, Jedaiah, Immer, Harim, and Pashur, who was the son of Malchijah: (1 Chr. 9.12. 24:7—9, 14.) and his name appears to have stood in the public records, as head of his course, instead of his father's. The priests, however, were afterwards divided into 24 courses, under the ancient names, in order to preserve regularity in their ministrations. SCOTT.

Verses 55—58.

These were persons descended from the remains of the devoted Canaanites, brought into bondage by Solomon; (1 K. 9:20—22.) and so their posterity were employed in menial services, perhaps about the sanctuary, along with the Nethinim: and though both the Nethinim and 'the children of Solomon's servants,' were of Gentile extraction, and not admitted to the privileges of Israelites; yet they seem to have been more ready to return to Jerusalem, than the Levites. ID.

Verses 61—63.

(M. R.—Note, Ex 28:30.) 'The Jews generally acknowledge, that there was no Urim and Thummim under the second temple; and even

64 The whole congregation together was [y] forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore, 65 Beside their [z] servants and their maids, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven: and there were among them [a] two hundred singing men and singing women.

66 Their horses were seven hundred thirty and six; their mules, two hundred forty and five;

67 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five; their asses, six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

68 ¶ And some of the chief of the fathers, when they came to the house of the LORD which is at Jerusalem, [b] offered freely for the house of God to set it up [c] in his place:

69 They gave after their ability, unto [d] the treasure of the work, threescore and one thousand drams of gold, and five thousand pounds of silver, and one hundred priests' garments.

70 So [e] the priests, and the Levites, and some of the people, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethinims, dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

y 9:8. Neh. 7:66—69. Is. 10:20—22. Jer. 23:3.

complete, which was better than Urim; and by the want of that oracle, were taught to expect the Messiah, the great Oracle, of which the Urim and Thummim were but a type. Nor does it appear that the second temple had the ark in it, either the old one or a new one; those shadows, by degrees, vanished, as the substance approached; and God, by the prophet, intimates to his people, that they should sustain no damage by the want of the ark, Jer. 3: 16.

V. 64—70. Here is,

I. The sum total that returned, and their feeble retinue. The particular sums before mentioned amount not quite to 30,000, (29,818,) so there were above 12,00 that come not into any of those accounts, who, it is probable, were of the rest of the tribes of Israel, beside Judah and Benjamin, that could not tell of what particular family or city they were, but that they were Israelites, and of what tribe. Now, 1. This was more than double the number carried captive by Nebuchadnezzar, so that, as in Egypt, the time of their affliction was the time of their increase. 2. These were but few to begin a nation with, yet, by virtue of the old promise to their fathers, they multiplied so as, before their last destruction by the Romans, about 500 years after, to be a very populous country. When God says, 'Increase and multiply,' a little one shall become a thousand. Themselves little better than servants, no wonder their servants were comparatively but few, (v. 65.) and their beasts of burden about as many, v. 66, 67. It was not with them now, as in days past. But notice is taken of 200 singing-men and women among them, who, we will suppose, intended, as those, 2 Chr. 35: 25. to excite their mourning, for it was foretold, they should, on this occasion, go weeping, (Jer. 50: 4.) with ditties of lamentation.

II. Their oblations. It is said, (v. 68, 69.) 1. They came to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem; like Abraham when the altar was gone, they came with devotion to the place of the altar; it is the character of the genuine sons of Zion, that they favor even the dust thereof. 2. They offered freely toward the setting of it up in its place. Though they came off a journey, and were beginning the world, yet they offered, and offered freely, toward the building of the temple. Let none complain of the necessary expenses of their religion, but believe that when they come to balance the account, they will find it clears the cost. The 61,000 drams of gold amount, (so Cumberland,) to so many pounds, and groats. Every maneh, or pound of silver, he reckons to be 60 shekels, namely, 30 ounces, which we may reckon £7 10 s. of our money; so that this 5,000 pounds of silver will be above 37,000 of our money. It seems, God had blessed them with the increase of wealth, as well as numbers, in Babylon; and, as God had prospered them, they gave cheerfully to the service of his house. 3. They dwelt in their

z Is. 14:1,2.
a Ex. 15:20,21. 2 Sam. 19:35. Neh 7:67. Ps. 68:25. 148:12,13. Ec. 2. 8. Jer. 9:17,18. Matt. 9:23.
b Ex. 35:5,&c.29. 36:3. Num. 7:3,&c. 1 Chr. 29:5—17. Neh. 7:70. Ps. 110: 3. Luke 21:1—4. 2 Cor. 8:3,12. 9:7. c 3:3. 1 Chr. 21:18. 22:1. 2 Chr. 3:1.
d 8:25—34. 1 K. 7:51. 1 Chr. 22:14. 26:26—28. Neh. 7:71,72.
e 6:16,17. 1 Chr. 11:2. Neh. 7:73. 11: 3,&c.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Those who are ashamed of religion, or undervalue their external relation to God, in times of reproach, persecution, or distress; will have no benefit from it, when it becomes honorable and profitable: and they who have no evidence, that they are, by regeneration and adoption, spiritual priests unto God through Jesus Christ, have no right to the peculiar comforts and privileges of Christians. But there are many cases, of which we cannot judge, but must leave them to be determined at the second coming of our High Priest, whose illuminations and perfections are unchangeable and eternal.—They, who, at the call of the Gospel, renounce sin, and return unto the Lord, shall be guarded and guided through all the perils of the way; and arrive safe at those mansions, prepared for them in the holy city of our God.

SCOTT.

they that say there was, (because it was necessary the high priest should have his garments complete,) yet say, there was no answer from God given by it.' Patrick. SCOTT.

Verse 64.

The number of the several families amounts only to 29,818: and those in Nehemiah to 31,089: yet the sum total is in both said to be 42,360, besides their servants. (Neh. 7:66, 67.) The surplus are supposed to have been priests and Levites who could not produce their genealogy, and Israelites from the other tribes, who accompanied their brethren of Judah and Benjamin. 'It is remarkable, that the two accounts' (of Ezra and Nehemiah) 'agree in the total amount; and the sum of the numbers, as separately detailed, will correspond, if to the 29,818, specified by Ezra, we add the 1765 persons reckoned by Nehemiah, which Ezra has omitted: and on the other hand, to the 31,089 enumerated by Nehemiah, add the 494, which is an overplus in Ezra, not noticed by Nehemiah: both writers including in the sum total 10,777 of the mixed multitude, not particularized in the individual detail. . . . Prideaux attributes the difference to alterations made by Nehemiah, in compliance with changes, that had happened since the departure from Babylon. . . . The accounts unquestionably agreed, when they were received into the canon, except where there might be some cause for variation; and probably the differences that now exist have originated in the carelessness of the copyists.' Gray's Key. ID.

Verse 65.

Among the servants were '200 singing men and singing women,' (or 245, according to Nehemiah) who probably were employed in families, to assist their mournings, or their thanksgivings. (M. R.) ID.

Verses 66, 67.

How exceedingly reduced and impoverished does Israel appear in this narrative, compared with the condition of the nation in the days of David and Solomon!—The number of asses, compared with that of the horses, shows in how general use asses were at that time: but horses, as belonging to the patriarchs or their descendants, are not mentioned, till the time of David. ID.

Verses 68—70.

Under the divine protection, this company arrived safe at Jerusalem, without any memorable occurrence. They found the city and all around it in ruins, and, it seems, the neighboring cities totally unoccupied. These they rebuilt as well as they could, and dwelt in them for the present. (1 Chr. 9:2. Neh. 7:73.) But the house of God chiefly occupied their thoughts; and it seems that their oblations to it were made, before they separated to seek habitations or subsistence. The whole amounted to nearly £80,000 stg. besides the priests' garments. which was a considerable sum for them to contribute in their present poverty: (Note, Neh. 7:70—72.) but probably their brethren who staid behind, contributed part of it; as the sacrifices and the burning of incense at the temple, were for the benefit of those, who worshipped at, or towards, that typical residence of the God of Israel. (1 K. 8:28—30. Dan. 6:10, 11.) 'By this it appears, that the Jews were not made such poor slaves in Babylon as wrought for their . . . masters, but had liberty to trade, and get riches for themselves; some of them being advanced to considerable offices in the king's court.' Patrick.—The whole history shows, that they were not reduced to personal slavery.—Every thing seems to have been conducted with much harmony and regularity. 'The foundation of this poor commonwealth was laid in a marvellous concord. . . . They had one heart and soul like the first Christians, without which unity no people can be preserved. And that it may be cherished, they must avoid those things that destroy it, which are (as Joseph Wolphius here observes) principally . . . self love, and meddling in other men's matters.' PATRICK. SCOTT.

(68.) Of silver.] 'These drams were a Median coin, struck by one of the elder Dariuses, and named, after him, "Daricks." The gold then consisted of golden Daricks, obtained from Persia by commerce.'

Scrip. Ill. A cut is given from Hyde of a silver Darick, (probably of a Persian king,) in the Museum of Mr. Duane. ED.

(69.) Drams.] Heb. Drkmonym, 'drakmons, or darics, a Persian coin always of gold, and worth about 1*l.* 5*s.*' Dr. A. Clarke. 'Brerewood values the 'dram' at 15*s.* (amt. 45,750*l.*); Cumberland at 1*l.* 0*s.* 4*d.* (amt. 61,000*l.*); Brerewood values the Heb. manim (mina) or pound at 7*l.* 10*s.* The Univ. Hist. at 9*l.* amt. 75,500*l.*' Cond. Comm. ID.

CHAP. III.

The Jews re-assemble at Jerusalem, build an altar, offer sacrifices, keep the feast of tabernacles, and prepare to rebuild the temple, 1—7. Under the direction of Zerubbabel and Jeshua the foundation is laid, amidst the rejoicing of some, and the weeping of others, 8—13.

AND when [a] the seventh month was come, and the children of Israel were in the cities, the people gathered themselves together, [b] as one man to Jerusalem.

2 Then stood up [c] Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren the priests, and [d] Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and his brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt-offerings thereon, [e] as it is written in the law of Moses the man of God.

3 And they set [f] the altar upon his bases; [g] for fear was upon them, because of the people of those countries: and they offered burnt-offerings thereon unto the LORD, even [h] burnt-offerings morning and evening.

4 They kept also [i] the feast of tabernacles, as it is written, and offered [k] the daily burnt-offerings by number, according to the custom, [*] as the duty of every day required;

5 And afterward offered [l] the continual burnt-offering, both of the new moons, and of all the set feasts of the LORD that were consecrated, and of every one that [m] willingly offered a free-will-offering unto the LORD.

6 From the first day of the seventh month began they to offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD. But [†] the foundation of the temple of the LORD was not yet laid.

cities, v. 70. Though out of repair, yet, because they were their cities, such as God had assigned them, they were content to dwell in them; and thankful for liberty and property, though they had little of pomp, plenty, or power. Their poverty was a bad cause, but their unity and unanimity were a good effect of it; a blessed presage of their settlement, as their discords, in the latter times of that state, were of their ruin.

CHAP. III. V. 1—7. Here is, I. a general assembly of the returned Israelites at Jerusalem in the 7th month, v. 1. We may suppose they came from Babylon, in the spring, and must allow at least 4 months for the journey, ch. 7: 9. The 7th month therefore soon came, in which many of the feasts of the Lord were to be solemnized; then they gathered themselves together, by agreement among themselves, rather than by the command of authority, to Jerusalem. Though newly come to their cities, and full of business to provide necessaries for themselves and families, yet such was their zeal for religion, that they left all their business in the country to attend God's altar; and (which is strange) in this were all of a mind, they came as one man. Let worldly business be postponed to the business of religion, and it will prosper the better.

II. The care their leading men took to have an altar ready for them, v. 2. in the same place, it is likely, where it had stood; on the same bases, v. 3. Patrick, observing that before the temple was built, there seems to have been a tabernacle, as in David's time, not on mt. Moriah, but on mt. Sion, supposes this altar was erected there, to be used while the temple was in building. Let us learn hence, 1. To begin with God. The more difficult and necessitous our case is, the more concerned we are to take Him with us in all our ways. If we expect to be directed by his oracles, let Him be honored by our offerings. 2. To do what we can in the worship of God, when we cannot do what we would. Abraham, wherever he came, built an altar; and, wherever we come, if we bring not the sacrifices of prayer and praise, we are wanting in duty, for we have an altar that sanctifies the gift, ever ready.

III. The reason given why they hastened to set up the altar, v. 3. is, they were in the midst of enemies to them and their religion, for whom they were an unequal match. Though they were so, yet they built the altar, so some; they would not be frightened from their religion by the opposition they were likely to meet with in it. Because they were so, therefore they set it up. Apprehension of danger should stir us up to duty. Have we many enemies? Then it is good to have God our Friend, and to keep up our correspondence with Him. This good use we should make of our fears. Even Saul thinks himself undone, if the enemy come on him before he make his supplication, 1 Sam. 12: 13.

1. They began on the 1st day of the 7th month, v. 6. not, as appears, with fire from heaven, as Moses and Solomon, but with common fire, as the patriarchs.

2. Having begun, they kept up the continual burnt-offering, (v. 5.) morning and evening, v. 3. They had known by sad experience what it was to want the comfort of the daily sacrifice, to plead in their daily prayers, and, now it was revived, they resolved not to let it fall again. The daily lamb typified the Lamb of God, whose righteousness must be our confidence in all our prayers.

3. They observed all the set feasts of the Lord, and offered the sacrifices appointed for each, particularly the feast of tabernacles, v. 4, 5. Now they had received such great mercy from God, and were beginning to settle in their cities, it might serve well to remind them of their fathers dwelling in tents in the wilderness. That feast also, which had a peculiar reference to gospel-times, (as appears, Zech. 14: 18.) was brought, in a special manner, into reputation, now that those times drew on. Of the services of this feast, it is said they did as the duty of every day required. See Num. 29: 13, 17, &c. So the original, The word, or matter, of the day in its day: a phrase that has become proverbial with those that have used themselves to scripture-language. If the feast of tabernacles was a figure of gospel conversation, in respect of continual weanedness from the world, and joy in God; we may infer that it concerns us all to do the work of the day in its day, according as the duty of the day requires; that is, we must improve time, by finding some business to do every day, that will turn to a good account; and improve opportunity, by accommodating ourselves to the proper business of the present day. Every thing is beautiful in its season. The 10th day of this month was the day of atonement, a solemn day, and very seasonable now: it is very probable they observed it, yet it is not mentioned, nor indeed in all the O. T. do I remember the least mention of the observance of that day; as if it were enough, that we have the law of it, (Lev. 16:) and the gospel of it, which was its chief intention in the N. T.

4. They offered every man's free-will offering, v. 5. The law required much, but they brought more; they had little wealth; and, we may suppose, spared at their own tables, that they might plentifully supply God's altar. Happy they that bring with them out of the furnace of affliction such a holy heat as this!

IV. The preparation they made for building the temple, v. 7. This they applied themselves immediately to; while we do what we can, we must still be aiming to do more and better. Tyre and Sidon must now, as of old, furnish workmen, and Lebanon timber, orders for both which they had

7 They [n] gave money also unto the masons, and to the [‡] carpenters: and [o] meat, and drink, and oil unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar-trees from Lebanon to the sea of [p] Joppa, [q] according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.

a Ex. 23:14—17. Lev. 16:29. 23:24, 27,&c. Num. 29:1,&c. Neh. 8:2,14.
b Judg. 20:1. Neh. 8:1. Zeph. 3:9. Acts 2:46. 4:32. 1 Cor. 1:10. c Hag. 1:1,12,14. 2:2—4. Zech. 3:1,8 6:11. Joshua the son of Josedech.
d 2:2. 1 Chr. 3:17,19. Hag. 2:21,23 Zech. 4:6—10. Matt. 1:12,13. Zorobabel. Salathiel.
e Ex. 20:24,25. Deut. 12:5—7. 2 Chr 6:6. Ps. 78:68. f 2 Chr. 4:1.
g 4:11—16. 8:21,22. Ps. 27:1,2. 56: 2—4.
h Ex. 29:38—42. Num. 28:2—8.
i Ex. 23:16. Lev. 23:34—38. Neh. 8: 14—17. Zech. 14:16—19. John 7: 2,37. k Num. 29:12—38.
* Heb. the matter of the day in his day. Ex. 5:13. Jer. 52:34. marg.
l Ex. 29:38—42. Num. 28:3—10,11,19, 27. 29:2,8,13.
m Lev. 1:3. Deut. 12:6,17. 2 Chr. 29: 31,32.
† Heb. the temple of the LORD was not yet founded.
n 2 K. 12:11,12. 22:5,6. 2 Chr. 24:12 13.
‡ Or, workmen.
o 1 K. 5:6,9—11. 2 Chr. 2:10—15. Ez 27:17. Acts 12:20. p 2 Chr. 2:16. Jon. 1:3. Acts 10:5,6.
q 6:3—5.

NOTES.

CHAP. III. V. 1. (M. R.—Notes, Lev. 23:24—43.) SCOTT.

Verses 2, 3.

(M. R.—Notes, 1:7—11. 2:2.) The Jews built the altar on the same foundation, and therefore of the same size, with that of Solomon. Probably it was formed of rough stones, with a large hearth of brass on the top. (Ex. 20:21—25, vv. 24, 25.) So large an altar, built all of brass, would have cost a sum far beyond their present circumstances. (2 Chr. 4:1.)—The fear of the tribes or nations around them, whom the people knew to be their enemies, did not induce them to take arms, or to erect fortifications, but to prepare an altar and to offer sacrifices; by which they put themselves under the immediate protection of the Almighty God. (Josh. 5:2—10.) The daily burnt-offerings, morning and evening, constituted the principal part of the stated worship required by the law. (Ex. 29:38—41.) ID.

Verses 5, 6.

(M. R.) Until the temple was completed, it is likely they had erected a tabernacle near the altar, in which the sacred vessels and treasures were deposited and guarded. (1 Chr. 9: 19:21.) SCOTT.

Verse 7.

It seems, the Jews were authorized by Cyrus to cut as much timber in Lebanon, as they wanted: but the Zidonians and Tyrians would expect to be paid for their labor; and they would prefer corn, wine, and oil, to money.—[Sidon had been conquered by the king of Egypt, Vaphres, (Apries, Psamatik III. Pharaoh Hophra, perhaps, of the SS.) says Wilkinson, in 595. It had now probably yielded to the arms of Persia, which in 525 had extended its conquests over all Egypt.] 'According to the grant that they had of Cyrus;' who commanded, I suppose, those of Tyre and Zidon to assist them.' Patrick. (M. R.—4: 4—6. 6:4.) ID. Joppa.] 'Called Japho in Joshua, and now Jaffa or 8 ¶ Now in the second year of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began [r] Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem; and appointed the Levites, from [s] twenty years old and upward, to set forward the work of the house of the LORD.

9 Then stood Jeshua with his sons and his brethren, Kadmiel and his sons, the sons of [t] Judah, * together, to set forward the workmen in the house of God: the sons of Henadad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites.

10 And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the LORD, they [u] set the priests in their apparel with [x] trumpets, and the Levites [y] the sons of Asaph with cymbals, to praise the LORD, [z] after the ordinance of David king of Israel.

11 And [a] they sang together by course in praising and giving thanks unto the LORD; [b] Because he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever toward Israel. And all the people * shouted with a great shout, when they praised the LORD, [d] because the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid.

12 But * many of the priests and Levites, and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had seen the first house, [f] when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes, wept with a loud voice; and many shouted aloud for joy:

13 So that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people; for the people * shouted with a loud shout, and [h] the noise was heard afar off.

r See on 2.
s Num. 4:3. 1 Chr. 23:24—32. t 2:40. Hodaviah. Neh. 7:43. Hodevah.

from Cyrus: what God calls us to, we may depend on his providence to furnish us with.

V. 8—13. There was no dispute, whether they should build the temple or no, that was immediately resolved on, and that it should be done with all speed. Observe,

I. That good work was begun as soon as the season of the year would permit, (v. 8.) and when they had ended the passover solemnities. They took little more than half a year to prepare the ground and materials; so much were their hearts upon it. When a good work is to be done, it will be wisdom to set about it quickly, and not lose time; yea, though we foresee difficulty and opposition. Thus we engage ourselves to it, and engage God for us. Well begun, (we say,) is half ended. Zerubbabel, Jeshua, and their brethren began it. Then the work of God is likely to go on well, when magistrates, ministers, and people, are hearty for it, and agree in their places to promote it. God gave them one heart for this service, and it boded well. They appointed the Levites to set forward the work, (v. 8.) who did it by setting forward the workmen, (v. 9.) and strengthening their hands with good and comfortable words. They that work not themselves, may yet do good service by quickening and encouraging those that do.

II. How God was praised at the laying of the foundation; (v. 10, 11.) the priests with the trumpets appointed by MOSES, and the Levites with the cymbals appointed by David, made up a concert of music. Whatever our condition is, how many soever our griefs and fears, let it be owned that God is good; and, whatever fails, that his mercy fails not. Ps. 73: 1. Let the reviving of the church's interests, when they seemed dead, be ascribed to the continuance of God's mercy for ever, for therefore the church continues.

III. How differently the people were affected. A remarkable mixture of various affections there was, and each expressed himself according to his sentiments, yet there was no disagreement, their minds were not alienated from each other, nor the common concern retarded by it. 1. Those that only knew the misery of having no temple, when they saw but the foundation of one laid, praised the Lord with shouts of joy, v. 11. We ought to be thankful for the beginnings of mercy. 2. Those that remembered the glory of the first temple, and considered how far this was likely to be inferior, wept with a loud voice, v. 12. If we date the captivity with the first, from the 4th of Jehoiakim, it was about 52 years since the temple was burnt, if from Jeconiah's captivity, it was but 59. So that many now alive might remember it standing. These lamented, and if they turned their tears into the right channel, and bewailed the sin that caused this melancholy change, they did well. Sin sullies the glory of any church or people, and when they are diminished and brought low, must bear the blame. Yet it was their infirmity to mingle those tears with the common joys, and so damp them. In the harmony of public joys, let not us be jarring strings. Priests and Levites should know and teach others how to be duly affected under various providences, and not let the remembrance of former afflictions drown the sense of present mercies.

This mixture of sorrow and joy is a representation of this world; some are bathing in rivers of joy, while others are drowned in floods of tears. In heaven all are singing, and none sighing; in hell all wailing, and none rejoicing; but on earth we can scarcely discern the shouts of joy from the noise of the weeping. Let us learn to rejoice with them that rejoice, and weep with them that weep; and ourselves to rejoice as though we rejoiced not, and weep as though we wept not.

* Heb. as one.
u Ex. 28:40—42. 1 Sam. 22:18. 1 Chr. 15:27.
x Num. 10:1—10. 1 Chr. 15:24. 16:5,6.
y 1 Chr. 6:39. 16:37. 25:1—7. 2 Chr. 35:15.
z 1 Chr. 6:31. 16:4—7. 23:5. 2 Chr. 29:25,26. a Ex. 15:21. Neh. 12:24,40. Ps. 24:7—10. Is. 6:3. b 1 Chr. 16:34,41. 2 Chr. 7:3. Ps. 103: 17. 106:1. 107:1. 135:3. 136:1,&c. Jer. 33:11. Luke 1:50. c Josh. 6:5,10,16. Ps. 47:1,5. Is. 12:6. 44:23. Zech. 9:9. d Is. 102:13,14.
e Hag. 2:3.
f Job 8:7. Is. 41:14. 60:22. Dan. 2: 34,35. Zech. 4:10. Matt. 13:31,32.
g Neh. 12:43. Ps. 5:11. Jer. 33:11. Zech. 4:7. Luke 19:37—40. h Ex. 32:17,18. 1 Sam. 4:5. 1 K. 1: 40,45. Ps. 100:1,2.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

It is true wisdom to prefer the service of God to our most urgent temporal concerns.—Those, who rule over others, should go before them in every good work: and we should worship the Lord in respect of outward things, according to what our circumstances will permit, though we cannot attain to all that is desirable. That, which is expended in obedience to his commandment, will never impoverish us or our families: we should therefore rather save in any thing, than grudge the expense of works of piety and charity, which is like sowing the seed of a future harvest. (Prov. 11: 24, 25. Ec. 11: 1,2. Luke 6: 37,38. Acts 11: 27—30. P. O. 19—30. 2 Cor. 9: 6—15. P. O. 8—15.)—Every day brings its peculiar duties: these will not be grievous, but pleasant, to the true and consistent servant of the Lord; and when zeal and love prevail, he will be looking out for opportunities of usefulness, and cheerfully bringing his free-will offerings.—We are too prone to bemoan lost comforts, disappointments, and scanty possessions; to give way to discontent, impatience, and distrust; and thus to mar our own enjoyment of present mercies, interrupt the joy of others, and refuse our God the praise and thanksgiving due unto his name. Against this tendency we should continually watch and pray. SCOTT.

Yaffa, one of the most ancient sea ports in the world. It is situated in a fine plain on the shore of the Mediterranean, between Jamnia, S. and Cæsarea of Palestine, N. 150 stadia from Antipatris (Jos.) 30 miles S. of Cæsarea, 12 N. of Ashdod, 9 W. of Ramla, and 40 W. of Jerusalem, according to modern authorities; in lat. 32° 50', long. 65° 40', according to Ptolemy. It is still a considerable town, containing about 4000 or 5000 souls, and occupying a circular eminence, close to the sea-side, with a citadel on the summit, the hill being surrounded by a wall 12 or 14 ft. high, and 2 or 3 thick. The environs are occupied by extensive gardens.' [See the engraving.] GREENFIELD.

Verses 8—11.

The people did all they could, during the winter, in making preparations for building the temple; for immense labor must have been requisite, in clearing the ground for the foundation, as well as in providing materials. In the 2d month, however, of the 2d year, or in a little more than a year after they left Babylon, Zerubbabel and Jeshua, having appointed the priests and Levites to attend in their courses, laid the foundation. SCOTT.

Jeshua, &c. (9) 'Not the high priest before mentioned, but another Jeshua, a Levite, mentioned 2:40.—'The sons of Judah,' called there Hodaviah.' Patrick. SCOTT.

Verses 12, 13.

(M. R.—Zech. 4:8—10.)—The temple is supposed to have been rebuilt of the same dimensions as before: but probably it was formed chiefly with the old stones dug out of the ruins, and with inferior workmanship; and it was not overlaid with gold, as Solomon's temple had been: neither was it, for a long time at least, surrounded with such magnificent out-buildings. Moreover, the ark, the tables, and the mercy-seat, were irrecoverably lost; and it is uncertain whether any thing was substituted in their stead: no visible glory, it is said, now appeared in the most holy place; there were no answers by Urim and Thummim; and no fire from heaven. (M. R.) These and other circumstances seemed to indicate, that the Lord was not with them as in times past: but they really showed, that the types were waxing old, and ready to vanish away, by the coming of the great Antitype. (Jer 3:16—18. Heb. 8:7—13.) ID.

CHAP. IV.

The adversaries of the Jews offer to join in building the temple; and, being rejected, they endeavor to hinder the work, 1—6. They write to Artaxerxes, king of Persia, 7—10. A copy of their letter, 11—16. The answer of Artaxerxes, who decrees that the work shall be stopped, 17—22. The Jews are compelled to cease from building, 23, 24.

NOW when [a] the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin heard that the * children of the captivity builded the temple unto the LORD God of Israel;

2 Then they came to [b] Zerubbabel, and to the chief of the fathers, and said unto them, [c] Let us build with you: for we seek your God as ye do; and [d] we do sacrifice unto him, since the days of * Esar-haddon king of [f] Assur, which brought us up hither.

3 But Zerubbabel, and Jeshua, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said unto them, [g] Ye have nothing to do with us to build an house unto our God; but we ourselves together will build unto the LORD God of Israel, as [h] king Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us.

4 Then the people of the land [i] weakened the hands of the people of Judah, and [k] troubled them in building;

B. C. 534.

5 And [l] hired counsellors against them, to frustrate their purpose, all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even until the reign of [m] Darius king of Persia.

6 And in the reign of † Ahasuerus, in the beginning of his reign, [n] wrote they unto him an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

[Practical Observations.]

a 7—9. 1 K. 5:4,5. 1 Chr. 22:9,10. Neh. 4:1—11. Dan. 9:25. 1 Cor. 16:9.
* Heb. sons of the transportation. I:

CHAP. IV. The good work of rebuilding the temple was no sooner begun, than it met with opposition; the Samaritans were enemies to the Jews and their religion, and set themselves to obstruct it.

V. 1—5. Here is an instance of the old enmity put between the seed of the woman and that of the serpent. The gospel-kingdom was, in like manner, to be set up with much struggle and contention. But, in removing and conquering this great opposition to the second temple, the wisdom, power, and goodness of God were much glorified, and the church encouraged to trust in Him.

I. The name children of the captivity, (v. 1.) makes the undertakers look very little. Born in captivity, newly come out, they had still the marks of their captivity on them; though not now captives, they were under the control of their captors. By their iniquity God's first-born sold and enslaved themselves, and so became children of captivity; but it should seem, the thought of their being so, quickened them to this work, for by their neglect of the temple they lost their freedom.

II. The opposers of the undertaking are here said to be adversaries of Judah and Benjamin, not the Chaldeans or Persians, but the relics of the ten tribes, [note, end of 1 Sam.] and the foreigners that had joined them, and patched up that mongrel religion, 2 K. 17: 33. They feared the Lord, and served their own gods too. They are called the people of the land, v. 4. The worst enemies Judah and Benjamin had, were these that said they were Jews, and were not, Rev. 3: 9.

III. Their opposition had in it much of the subtilty of the old serpent.

1. They offered to build with them, only thereby to retard the work, while pretending to further it.

Now, (1.) Their offer was plausible enough, and looked kind, v. 2. But what they said was false, for though they sought the same God, they did not seek Him only, nor in the way He appointed, and therefore not as the returned captives did. Thus are the kisses of an enemy deceitful; his words smoother than butter, when war is in his heart.

But, (2.) The refusal of it was very just, v. 3. The chief of the fathers of Israel were soon aware they meant them no kindness, whatever they pretended, but really designed mischief; therefore they told them plainly, 'You have nothing to do with us, have no part nor lot in this matter, are not true-born Israelites, nor faithful worshippers of God, you worship you know not what, John 4: 22. You are none of those with whom we dare hold communion, therefore we ourselves will build;' they plead not to them the law of their God, which forbade them to mingle with strangers, (though that especially they had an eye to,) but what they would notice more, the king's commission, which was directed to them only. In doing good, there is need of the wisdom of the serpent, as well as the innocency of the dove, and we have need, as it follows there, to beware of men, Matt. 10: 16, 17. While we trust God with a pious confidence, we must trust men with a prudent [but not bitter] jealousy and caution.

2. When this plot failed, they did what they could to divert them from the work, and discourage them in it; and by these artifices the cool and indifferent were drawn off from the work, v. 4. And because, what they themselves said the Jews would suspect to be ill meant, and not to be influenced by it, they, under-hand, hired counsellors against them, who, pretending to advise them for the best, should dissuade them from proceeding, and so frustrate their purpose; (v. 5.) or dissuade the men of Tyre and Sidon from furnishing the timber bargained for; (ch. 3: 7.) or, whatever business they had at the Persian court, to solicit for any particular grants or favors, pursuant to the general edict for their liberty, there were those hired, and ready, to appear of counsel against them. Wonder not at the restlessness of the church's enemies: he whose work they are doing, is unwearied in walking the earth to do mischief. And let those who discourage a good work, see whose pattern they follow.

V. 6—16. Cyrus steadfastly adhered to the Jews' interest, and supported his own grant; but though his reign, in all, was 30 years, yet, after the conquest of Babylon, and his decree for the release of the Jews, some think he reigned but 3 years, others 7, and then either died, or gave up that part of his government, in which his successor was Ahasuerus, (v. 6.) called also Artaxerxes, (v 7.) supposed to be the Cambyses of heathen authors, who had never concerned himself for Jews, nor had that knowledge of the God of Israel his predecessor had; to him these Samaritans applied in the beginning of his reign, by letter, for an order to stop the building of the temple; being resolved to lose no time, when they thought they had a king for their purpose. See how watchful the church's enemies are to take the first opportunity of doing it a mischief; let not its friends be less careful to do it a kindness. Here is,

I. The general purport of their letter, called, (v. 6.) an accusation. The devil is the accuser of the brethren, Rev. 12: 10. and carries on his malicious designs against them, not only by accusing them himself before our God, as he did Job, but by acting as a lying spirit in the mouths of his instruments, whom he employs to accuse them before magistrates and kings, and to make them odious to the many, and obnoxious to the mighty. Marvel not, if the same arts be still used to run down serious godliness.

II. The persons concerned in it. The contrivers are named, (v. 7.) the writers, (v. 8.) and the

b 1:5. 2:2. 3:2,12.
c Prov. 26:23—26. 2 Cor. 11:13—15. Gal. 2:4. 2 Tim. 3:8. 2 Pet. 2:1,2.
d 2 K. 17:24,27—33,41.
e 10. Asnapper. 2 K. 19:37.
f Gen. 10:11. Ps. 73:8. Is. 37:37. Assyria. Hos 14:3. Asshur.
g Neh. 2:20. John 4:22,23. Acts 8:21. Rom. 9:4,5.
h 1:1—3. 6:3—5. 2 Chr. 36:22,23. Is. 44:28. 45:1,4. Matt. 10:16. i 3:3. Neh. 6:9. Is. 35:3,4. Jer. 38:4.
k Neh. 4:7,8,11.
l Ps. 2:1,2. Neh. 1:11. Acts 24:1. m 24. 5:5,&c. 6:1,&c.
† Heb. Ahashveroth.
n Matt. 27:37. Acts 24:5—9,13. 25:7. Rev. 12:10.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—6. Every vigorous and successful attempt, to revive or promote true religion, will excite the opposition of Satan, and of 'the children of disobedience' in whom he works. In fact all ungodly men despise or hate holiness. Sometimes indeed, they seem desirous of being admitted to the fellowship of believers; and avow themselves to be of the same sentiments, and to be minding the same things. But they only want to insinuate themselves, that they may gain pre-eminence, and manage every thing for their own purposes. Let then all the friends of truth and holiness beware of such characters, and let them withdraw from them: 'by their fruits ye shall know them:' and let no plausible pretences, or hopes of support from their superior rank or wealth, bribe Christians to admit them 'to build with them,' unless they mean to build a Babel, instead of a temple. It is true, if you will not have their friendship, you must expect their imbittered resentment, which is more dreaded, but far less dangerous. From age to age the same part is acted over, and the less we are aware of it the greater is our danger. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. IV. V. 1. (2, 10.) The Cutheans, or Samaritans, who had been planted in the land of Israel by Esar-haddon, had perhaps encroached on the countries belonging to the Jews; and doubtless they were envious of the favor shown them by the king of Persia. (2 K. 17:24—28, 41. Neh. 13:23—30.) SCOTT.

Verses 2, 3.

'This people, no doubt, were desirous to partake of the privileges, granted to the Jews by the king of Persia.' Patrick.—The religion of the Samaritans was a mixture of idolatry, superstition, and ignorance; far worse at this time than it was when our Lord Himself declared, that 'they knew not what they worshipped.' (John 4:19—27.) The Samaritans were neither Israelites by birth, nor yet true proselytes. SCOTT.

Verses 4—6.

This opposition is supposed to have begun, soon after the foundation was laid. During the remainder of the reign of Cyrus, for almost 5 years, however, they did not openly oppose a work he had commanded: but discouraged the people, and perhaps intercepted their materials for building; and by bribing counsellors to oppose their application to 7 ¶ And in the days of Artaxerxes wrote * B. C. 522.] Bishlam, Mithredath, Tabeel, and the rest of their † companions, unto Artaxerxes king of Persia; and the writing of the letter was written in ° the Syrian tongue, and interpreted in the Syrian tongue.

8 Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the ‡ scribe, wrote a letter against Jerusalem to Artaxerxes the king, in this sort:

9 Then wrote Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the scribe, and the rest of their § companions; ᵖ the Dinaites, the ᵠ Apharsathchites, the Tarpelites, the Apharsites, the Archevites, the Babylonians, ʳ the Susanchites, the Dahavites, and the ˢ Elamites,

10 And ᵗ the rest of the nations whom the great and noble Asnapper brought over, and set in the cities of Samaria, and the rest that are on this side the river,ᵘ and ‖ at such a time.

11 ¶ This is the copy of the letter that they sent unto him, even unto Artaxerxes the king: Thy servants, the men on this side the river, and at such a time.

12 Be it known unto the king, that the Jews which came up from thee to us, are come unto Jerusalem, building ᵛ the rebellious and the ˣ bad city, and have ¶ set up the walls thereof, and  joined the foundations.

13 Be it known now unto the king, that ʸ if this city be builded, and the walls set up again, then will they not †† pay ᶻ toll, tribute, and custom, and so thou shalt endamage the ‡‡ revenue of the kings.

14 Now because we §§ have maintenance from the king's palace, ᵃ and it was not meet for us to see the king's dishonor, therefore have we sent and certified the king;

15 That search may be made in the book of the records of thy fathers: so shalt thou find in the book of the records, and know, that ᵇ this city is a rebellious city, and hurtful unto kings and provinces, and that they have ‖‖ moved sedition ¶¶ within the same of old time: ᶜ for which cause was this city destroyed.

16 We certify the king, that if this city be builded again, and by this means the pass by the river, thou hast no portion on this side the river.

17 Then sent the king an answer unto Rehum the chancellor, and to Shimshai the scribe, and to the rest of their companions that dwell in Samaria, and unto the rest beyond the river, Peace, and at such a time.

18 The letter which ye sent unto us hath been plainly read before me.

19 And I commanded, and search hath been made, and it is found that this city of old time hath made insurrection against kings, and that rebellion and sedition have been made therein.

20 There have been mighty kings also over Jerusalem, which have ruled over all countries beyond the river; and toll, tribute, and custom, was paid unto them.

21 Give ye now commandment to cause these men to cease, and that this city be not builded, until another commandment shall be given from me.

22 Take heed now that ye fail not to do this: why should damage grow to the hurt of the kings?

23 Now when the copy of king Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum, and Shimshai the scribe, and their companions, and went in haste to Jerusalem unto the Jews, and made them to cease by force and power.

24 Then ceased the work of the house of God which is at Jerusalem. So it ceased unto the second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia.

* Or, in peace.
† Heb. societies. 9, 17. 5:6.
° 2 K. 18:26. Is. 36:11. Dan. 2:4.
‡ Or, secretary. 9. 2 Sam. 8:17. 20. 25. 2 K. 18:18.
§ Chal. societies.
ᵖ 2 K. 17:24,30,31.
ᵠ 5:6. 6:6. Apharsachites.
ʳ Esth. 1:2. 2:3. Dan. 8:2.
ˢ Gen. 10:22. Is. 21:2. Jer. 25:25. 49. 34. Ez. 32:24. Acts 2:9. ᵗ 1. 2 K. 17:24,&c.
ᵘ 11,17. 7:12.
‖ Chal. Cheeneth.
ᵛ 15,19. 2 K. 18:20. 24:1. 2 Chr. 36:13. Jer. 52:3. Ez. 17:13—19. Luke 23:2—5. Acts 24:5. 1 Thes. 5:22. 1 Pet. 2:13—15.
ˣ Ps. 48:1,2. Is. 1:21—23. Luke 13:34.
¶ Or, finished. Neh. 1:3. Dan. 9:25.
 Chal. sowed together.
ʸ Neh. 5:4. Ps. 52:2. 119:69.
†† Chal. give.
ᶻ 7:24. Matt. 9:9. 17:25. Rom. 13 6,7.
‡‡ Or, strength.
§§ Chal. are salted with the salt of the palace. 1 Tim. 6:10.
ᵃ Ez. 33:31. John 12:5,6. 19:12—15.
ᵇ 12. Neh. 2:19. 6:6. Esth. 3:3—8 Dan. 6:4—13. Acts 17:6,7.
‖‖ Chal. made.
¶¶ Chal. in the midst thereof.
ᶜ Jer. 52:3,&c.

the ministers of Cyrus, for supplies or protection, they greatly obstructed the design. This would be more easily done, as it is probable that Daniel, the powerful friend of the Jews, died about this time. (Dan. 6 25—28.)—Cambyses, the son of Cyrus, called here (as it is probably supposed,) Ahasuerus, reigned above 7 years; and was a very impolitic and wicked prince: but regard to his father's memory, it may be supposed, prevented his attending to the accusations brought by the Samaritans against the Jews. Darius. (b) Notes, 5: 6: SCOTT.

(6, 7.) Jennings makes Ahasuerus to signify 'great chief' or 'prince,' and to be rather a title of several kings of Media and Persia, than a proper name; Jarchi makes this person to have been the husband of Esther. Gill makes him Cambyses, son and successor of Cyrus: and says, Artaxerxes is the same person; and that this was a common name to the kings of Persia; generally believed, as well as the name of Xerxes, to have been assumed, says Dr. A. Clarke, by the Persian kings, from the time of Cyrus the Great. Prid. and Univ. Hist. make him to have been Smerdis. Cond. Comm. See Hist. note, end of Esther. ED.

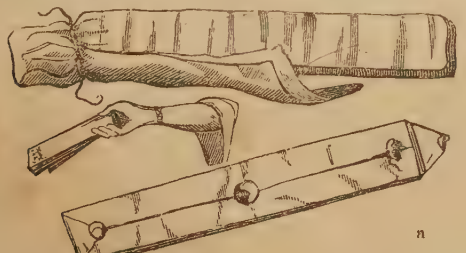
(7, 8.) Letter.] Letters were of several kinds. Those now sent in the E. are done up in folds, and enclosed in a pasted paper case, like



(a) now in possession of the editor; in a roll, and afterwards put into a morocco case richly gilt, as the one sent in 1835 by the Sultan of Turkey to the king of the French; or inserted in a silk-purse, as in the cut from Calmet; whom see. ID.

Verses 7—9.

On the death of Cambyses, Smerdis the Magian usurped the throne; and as no other king reigned in Persia, after Cambyses, and before Darius Hystaspis, under whom the temple was finished, he must be the Artaxerxes here mentioned: (Note, 6:13—15.) unless, as some think, Artaxerxes is only another name for Ahasuerus. (M. R. o.) Perh ps this letter was entered into the records in Persian; so that Ezra, when he extracted it, again translated it into Syriac: therefore it stands in the original Scriptures in that language, as does all that follows to the end of ch. 6.—Bishlam, Mithredath, and Tabeel seem to have been the principal persons, who counselled the people to send this letter; and Rehum and Shimshai, it is probable, drew it up. SCOTT.

Verse 10.

Asnapper, &c.] Probably Asnapper was the name by which Esarhaddon was known, in the eastern parts of the Assyrian empire: (2 K. 19:37.) or, as some think, he was a great captain, employed by Esar-haddon in this transaction. ID.

At such a time.] The date seems to have followed in the records; but was omitted by the transcriber, as it were with an et cætera. SCOTT. Probably, because connected with that tedious list of titles eastern kings especially affect, and which occupy so much space in oriental diplomacy. ED.

Verse 12.

The rebellious, &c.] (M. R. v, x.) After God, in his righteous judgments, had reduced Judah to subjection under the kings of Babylon, the Jews certainly showed a very obstinate and treacherous spirit of rebellion; they created their new masters a great deal of trouble, and they provoked them to their own destruction. But in so doing, they transgressed the commandments of their law, by violating their own solemn oaths and engagements. (13—16. 2 K. 24:1, 20 25:6, 7. 2 Chr 36:13. Ez. 17:15—21.) SCOTT.

Verses 13—16.

David and Solomon had reigned over all the countries from the river Euphrates, to the river of Egypt: but this was long before the commencement of the Babylonish, or Persian, monarchies. And after the death of Solomon, their successors had been confined within much narrower limits. The Samaritans, however, aimed to insinuate a jealousy into the mind of the king of Persia, that the Jews intended to claim and seize on all those regions, and hold the whole, as independent on the kings of Persia; than which nothing could be more groundless and absurd. All their offence seems to have been, that they had prepared to defend themselves against their enemies, whilst acting under the authority of Cyrus. ID.

(13.) 'Toll—, perhaps the part paid out of an estate. Tribute—a poll tax. Custom—a tax on merchandise.' WITSIUS.

the walls thereof set up, by this means [d] thou shalt have no portion on this side the river.

17 Then sent the king an answer unto Rehum the chancellor, and to Shimshai the scribe, and to the rest of their * companions that dwell in Samaria, and unto the rest beyond the river, [e] Peace, and [f] at such a time.

18 The letter which ye sent unto us hath been plainly read before me.

19 And † I commanded, and [g] search hath been made, [h] and it is found that this city of old time hath ‡ made insurrection against kings, and that rebellion and sedition have been made therein.

20 There have been [i] mighty kings also over Jerusalem, which have ruled over all countries [k] beyond the river; [l] and toll, tribute, and custom, was paid unto them.

21 § Give ye now commandment to cause these men to cease, and that this city be not builded, until another commandment shall be given from me.

22 Take heed now that ye fail not to do this: [m] why should damage grow to the hurt of the kings?

23 Now when the copy of king Artaxerxes's letter was read before [n] Rehum, and Shimshai the scribe, and their companions, [o] they went up in haste to Jerusalem unto the Jews, and made them to cease by ‖ force and power.

24 Then ceased the work of the house of B. C. 520. God, which is at Jerusalem. [p] So it ceased unto the second year of the reign of [q] Darius king of Persia.

we thus to argue ourselves into a pious concern for God's honor; we have our maintenance from the God of heaven, and are salted with his salt, live on his bounty, and are the care of his providence; therefore it is not meet for us to see his dishonor, without doing what we can to prevent it.

2. They represent the Jews as disloyal, and dangerous to the government, v. 12, 15. See how Jerusalem, the joy of the whole earth, (Ps. 48: 2.) is here reproached as the scandal of the whole earth. The enemies of the church could not do the bad things they design against it, if they did not first give it a bad name. Jerusalem had been a loyal city to its rightful princes, and its present inhabitants were as well affected to the king and his government, as any of his provinces whatsoever. Daniel had lately approved himself so faithful, his worst enemies could find no fault in his management, Dan. 6: 4. But thus was Elijah most unjustly charged with troubling Israel, the apostles with turning the world upside down, and Christ Himself with perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar; and we must not think it strange, if the same game be still played. Now here,

(1.) The history is invidious; that within this city, sedition had been moved of old time, and, for that cause it was destroyed, v. 15. It cannot be denied but there was some color given for this suggestion, by the attempts of Jehoiakim and Zedekiah to shake off the yoke of Babylon. But it must be considered, [1.] They were themselves, and their ancestors, sovereign princes, and their efforts to recover their rights, had there not been in them the violation of an oath, for aught I know, had been justifiable, and successful too, had they taken the right method, and made their peace with God first. [2.] It was unjust therefore to fasten this as an indelible brand on this city, as if it must, ever after, go under the name of the rebellious and bad city. The Jews, in captivity, had given such specimens of good behavior, as were sufficient, with reasonable men, to roll away that one reproach; for we have reason to hope they observed their instructions, to seek the peace of the city where they were captives, and pray to the Lord for it, Jer. 29: 7. It was therefore very unfair, yet not uncommon, to impute the iniquity of the fathers to the children.

(2.) Their information was grossly false, in matter of fact, v. 12. They had only begun to build the temple, which Cyrus commanded them to do; but as for the walls, there was nothing done, nor designed, toward the repair of them, as appears by the condition they were in, many years after, (Neh. 1: 3.) all in ruins. If they had not been perfectly lost to all virtue and honor, they would not, and if they had not been very secure of the king's countenance, they durst not have written that to the king which all their neighbors knew to be a notorious lie. See Prov. 29: 12.

(3.) Their prognostics of the consequences were altogether groundless and absurd. They would have the king believe on their word, that if this city be built, not only the Jews would pay no toll, tribute, or custom, (v. 13.) but (since a great lie is as soon spoken as a little one) that the king would have no portion at all on this side the river, v. 16. i. e. the Euphrates. See how every line of this letter breathes both the subtilty and malice of the old serpent.

V. 17—24. Here we have,

I. The orders of the king of Persia, in answer. He suffered himself to be imposed on by their fraud and falsehood, and was very willing to gratify them with an order of council to stay proceedings. See the hard fate of princes, who must see and hear with other men's eyes and ears, and give judgment. Therefore God's judgment is alway just, because He sees things as they are.

d 20. 2 Sam. 8:3. 1 K. 4:24.
* Chal. sociates. 7,9.
e 5:7. 7:12. Luke 10:5. Acts 23:26. Rom. 1:7.
f 10,11.
† Chal. by me a decree is set.
g 15. 5:17. 6:1,2. Deut. 13:14. Prov. 25:2.
h 2 K. 18:7. 24:20. Ez. 17:13—19.
‡ Chal. lifted up itself.
i 1 K. 4:21. 1 Chr. 18:3. Ps. 72:8.
k 16. Gen. 15:18. Josh. 1:4.
l 1 Chr. 18:6,13. 19:19. 2 Chr. 9:14. 23,24. 17:11. 26:7,8.
§ Chal. Make a decree. 19.
m 13. Esth. 3:8,9. 7:3,4.
n 8,9,17.
o Prov. 4:16. Mic. 2:1. Rom. 3:15.
‖ Chal. arm and power.
p Neh. 6:3,9. Job 20:5. 1 Thes. 2:18.
q 5:5. 6:1. Hag. 1:15.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 7—24. The gates of hell, in directly assaulting the church of Christ, often labor to excite rulers to suppress his truths and ordinances, by statutes and penal sanctions. To this end ungodly men bestow great pains to obtain the ear of princes.—It is an old slander, that 'Jerusalem is a rebellious and bad city,' and that the prosperity of the church would be injurious to kings and provinces: for 'the Accuser of the brethren' knows how prevalent such considerations are with the princes of this world. Yet nothing can be more false: for true godliness teaches us to honor and obey the king; to 'submit to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake;' to pay tribute, and 'to render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's;' to be upright, peaceable, and blameless; and even to fulfil the oath or engagement which we have entered into to our own hurt: it admits of only a single exception; namely, where the command of God requires one thing, and the law of the land another, we must 'obey God rather than man,' and patiently submit to the consequences.—But it must be allowed, that ambitious and turbulent men have often disgraced the cause of God, by their usurpations, seditions, rebellions, treacheries, and perjuries: real Christians have also been seduced into inconsistent practices; and 'oppression,' which 'maketh a wise man mad,' has sometimes excited them to use unwarranted weapons. A few instances of this kind, standing on record, while the blameless lives and patient sufferings of thousands are unnoticed and forgotten, serve through revolving ages as a pretext, by which malignant enmity misleads worldly policy. All who love the Gospel, should therefore walk circumspectly, avoiding all appearance of evil, especially in this particular, lest the church of God and posterity should suffer through their misconduct: for the whole body will be condemned without a hearing, if only a few individuals act improperly. (Rom. 13: 1, 2.)—Indeed we cannot behave so quietly, and endeavor to serve God and to promote religion so unexceptionably, but our endeavors will be ascribed to ambition or avarice, and we shall be suspected of harboring the basest intentions. For kings and princes are seldom able to discover the truth, in such causes, even when disposed to inquire after it. These considerations should teach us to count our cost; that we may be prepared for all events, and not be too easily discouraged or made remiss, as we are apt to be, on every appearance of opposition; they should excite our gratitude for our peculiar privileges in this favored land, and teach us to place our dependence on that God, who has all hearts in his hands, and not on the mutable decrees of magistrates and senates. SCOTT.

(14.) 'Chardin describes a modern Persian monarch, as punishing an officer with the words, "I have then such ungrateful servants and traitors as thou to eat my salt." Parkhurst mentions the expression, "I eat such an one's salt," as common in the E. Indies, to signify "I am fed by him." Mede observes that in his time the Emp. of Russia, when he wished to show favor, sent bread and salt from his table, and invited Ferdinand's ambassador in this form, "You shall eat your bread and salt with us." Tamerlane, in his Institutes, says of one who had quitted his service and joined the enemy, "At length my salt which he had eaten, overwhelmed him with remorse; he again threw himself on my mercy, and humbled himself before me."' HARMER.

Fathers. (15) So they called the kings, who had reigned before Artaxerxes, over those countries. ID.

Verses 17—24.

The king of Persia found by the records, that Jerusalem had been the seat of government for powerful princes, many ages before; and

CHAP. V.

Zerubbabel and Jeshua, excited by Haggai and Zechariah, begin again to build the temple, 1, 2. Tatnai and Shethar-boznai are not able to hinder them, 3–5. A copy of their letter to Darius, 6—17.

THEN the prophets, [a] Haggai the prophet, and [b] Zechariah the son of Iddo, prophesied unto the Jews that were in Judah and Jerusalem, [c] in the name of the God of Israel, even unto them.

2 Then [d] rose up Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and [e] Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and began to build the house of God which is at Jerusalem: and with them were [f] the prophets of God, helping them.

3 At the same time came to them [g] Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and their companions, and said thus unto them, [h] Who hath commanded you to build this house, and to make up this wall?

4 Then said we unto them after this manner, What are the names of the men that [*] make this building?

5 But [k] the eye of their God was upon the elders of the Jews that they could not cause them to cease, till the matter came to Darius: and [l] then they returned answer by letter concerning this matter.

6 ¶ The [m] copy of the letter that Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethara Hag. 1:1,&c. b Zech. 1:1,&c. c Mic. 3:4. Hag. 1:2—8. Zech. 1:3,4. 4:6—10.

d Hag. 1:12—15.
e Zech. 6:11. Joshua—Jozedech. 6:14. Hag. 2:4—9,20—23. Zech. 3:; 4: 2 Chr. 1:24.
f 6. 6:6,13. 7:21. Neh. 2:7—9.
g 9. 1:3. Matt. 21:23. Acts 4:7.
i 10.
* Chal. build.
k 7:5,28. 8:22. 2 Chr. 16:9. Ps. 33: 18. 34:15. Phil. 1:28. 1 Pet. 3:12.
l 6:6—12.
m 4.11,23.

He appointed these Samaritans to stop the building immediately, till further orders, v. 21, 22. Neither their letter, nor his order, mentions the temple, because both they and he knew they had not only a permission, but a command, from Cyrus to rebuild that, for the repeal of which even these Samaritans had not the confidence to move; they spake only of the city, 'Let not that be built,' i. e. 'as a city with walls and gates, lest damage grow to the kings:' he would not have the crown lose by his wearing it.

II. The use the Jews' enemies made of these orders, v. 23. They were impatient to serve this prohibition, as their warrant to make them cease by force and power. As they abused the king in obtaining it, by their mis-informations, so they abused him in executing it: the order was only to prevent the walling of the city; but they construed it as relating to the temple, for that was it they had an ill will to, and only wanted some color to hinder. See what need we have to pray, not only for kings, but for all in authority under them, and the governors sent by them, because the quietness and peaceableness of our lives, in all godliness and honesty, depend very much on the integrity and wisdom of inferior magistrates, as well as the supreme.

The consequence was, the work of the house of God ceased, for a time, till the 2d year of Darius Hystaspes, for to me it seems clear, it was that Darius, v. 24. Yet, soon after, they might have gone on by connivance, had they had a due affection to the work, for before they had that express warrant, (ch. 6.) they were reproved by the prophets for not doing it, ch. 5: 1. comp. with Hag. 1: 2, &c. If they had taken due care to inform the king of the truth of this case, perhaps he had recalled his order; but, for aught I know, some of the builders were almost as willing it should cease, as the adversaries themselves. At some periods, the church has suffered more by the coldness of its friends than by the heat of its enemies; but both together commonly make church-work slow work.

CHAP. V. We left the temple-work at a full stop; but, being God's work, it shall be revived. It was hindered by might and power, but now set a-going again by the Spirit of the Lord of hosts. Here we are told how that blessed Spirit warmed its cool-hearted friends, and excited them to build, cooled its hot-headed enemies, and brought them to better tempers, for though they secretly disliked the work, as much as those in the foregoing ch. yet, they were more mild towards the builders, and more fair in their representation to the king.

V. 1, 2. Some reckon that the building was suspended for only 9 years; I believe 15 were the utmost; during which they had an altar, and a tabernacle, which, no doubt, they used. But the counsellors hired to hinder the work, (ch. 4: 5.) told them, perhaps, with a pretence to inspiration, that the time was not come for building the temple, Hag. 1: 2. Thus the people were made easy in their own ceiled houses, while God's house lay waste. Here we are told how the cause was revived.

1. Two good ministers in God's name earnestly persuaded them to put the business in motion again; Haggai and Zechariah, who both began to prophesy in the 2d year of Darius, as appears, Hag. 1: 1. Zech. 1: 1. Observe, Ministers of the Gospel are the master builders in the temple of God. It is their business to stir up God's people to what is good, and to help them in it; to strengthen their hands, and, by suitable considerations from God's Word, quicken them to duty, and encourage them in it. They prophesied unto the Jews, even upon them, so the original, as Ezekiel prophesied upon the dry bones, that they might live. Against them, so Patrick, for they reproved them because they did not build the temple. The Word of God, if it be not received now as a testimony to us, will be received another day as a testimony against us, and will judge us. They prophesied in the name, or, as some read it, in the cause, or, for the sake of the God of Israel; spake by commission from Him, and argued from his authority over, his interest in, and the concern of his glory among them.

2. Two good magistrates were forward and active; Zerubbabel their chief prince, and Jeshua their chief priest, v. 2. These great men thought it no disparagement, but a happiness, to be taught and prescribed to by the prophets of the Lord; and were glad of their help in reviving this good work. Read here Hag. 1: (the best comment on these two vs.) and see what great things God does by his Word, which He magnifies above all his name, and by his Spirit working with it.

V. 3—17. I. While the people built and ceiled their own houses, their enemies gave them no molestation, (Hag. 1: 4.) though the king's order was to stop the building of the city, ch. 4: 21. But when they began to work again at the temple, the alarm is taken, and all heads are at work to hinder it, v. 3, 4. The adversaries are here named; the governors we read of, (ch. 4.) were, probably, displaced at the beginning of this reign, as is usual; it is the policy of princes often to change their deputies, proconsuls, and rulers of provinces. These, though real enemies to the building of the temple, were men of better temper than the other, and made some conscience of telling truth. The church's enemies are not all alike wicked and unreasonable. The historian begins to relate what passed between the builders and those inquisitors, (v. 3, 4.) but breaks off his account, referring himself to the ensuing copy of their letter to the king, where the same appears more fully and at large, which he began to abridge, (v. 4.) or make an extract out of, though, on second thoughts, he inserted the whole.

II. Divine Providence took care of this good work, v. 5. The elders of the Jews were active in it, so that their enemies could not cause them to cease, even till the matter came to Darius. They would not so much as yield them that, for the eye of God was upon them, even their God: which baffled, infatuated, and enfeebled their enemies, and protected the builders from their malicious designs. While employed in God's work, we are taken under his special protection; his eye is on us for good, seven eyes on one stone in his temple; see Zech. 3: 9. 4: 10. The elders of the Jews saw God's eye upon them, and then had courage to face their enemies, and go on vigorously, notwithstanding all opposition. Our eye on God, observing his eye on us, will keep us to duty and encourage us in it, when difficulties are ever so discouraging.

III. The account sent to the king. Observe,

1. How fully the elders of the Jews gave to the Samaritans an account of their proceedings. They told them they had sufficient warrant; for, 1. 'We are servants of the God of heaven and earth:

that afterwards rebellion and sedition had been made in it: and, as thus much was true in the letter of the Samaritans, full credit was given them for all that they advanced, concerning the progress and intentions of the Jews, and the consequences of their proceedings; though nothing could be more improbable, false, and malicious!—The usurpation of Smerdis did not continue a whole year; so that if he be intended, their commission was soon vacated: but the Jews, being greatly intimidated, and not so zealous as they had been, the work ceased till the 2d year of Darius, who, having assisted in killing the usurper, was advanced to the throne in his stead. (5:1, 2.) SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. V. V. 1, 2. A great part of Haggai, and the former part of Zech. refer to these events, and the reader will find it worth while to compare them.—The Jews resumed their work about 14 years after the first opposition, by the Samaritans; but within 2 or 3 years after they had been compelled to desist entirely from it. They were persuaded it was not yet time to build the temple. For this neglect the Lord corrected them, and reproved them by the prophets, who came to 'prophesy even unto them,' or rather 'against them.' Their remonstrances excited rulers and people to resume the work; and their subsequent encouraging prophecies greatly helped them in accomplishing it. (Hag. 1: Zech. 3:1—7. 4:4—10.) SCOTT.

Verse 3.

Probably, the governors had been changed, on the accession of Darius, for men of greater temper and impartiality. The 'companions' seem to have been some of the chief persons of the nation, who formed the council.—This wall.] The wall about the temple seems to be meant. (Neh. 1:3. 2:12—16. 4:1—3. Dan. 9:25—27.) SCOTT.

Verse 4.

Then, &c.] It is uncertain whether these are the words of the govboznai, and his companions the [n] Apharsachites, which were on this side the river, sent unto Darius the king:

7 They sent a letter unto him, * wherein was written thus, Unto Darius the king, [o] all peace.

8 Be it known unto the king, that we went into [p] the province of Judea, to the house of [q] the great God, which is builded with † great stones, and timber is laid in the walls, and this work goeth fast on, and prospereth in their hands.

9 Then asked we those elders, and said unto them thus, [r] Who commanded you to build this house, and to make up these walls?

10 We [s] asked their names also, to certify thee, that we might write the names of the men that were the chief of them.

11 And thus they returned us answer, saying, [t] We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and build the house that was builded these many years ago, [u] which a great king of Israel builded and set up.

12 But [x] after that our fathers had provoked the God of heaven unto wrath, [y] he gave them [z] into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, the Chaldean, who destroyed this house, and carried the people away into Babylon.

13 But [a] in the first year of Cyrus the king of Babylon, the same king Cyrus made a decree to build this house of God.

14 And [b] the vessels also of gold and silver of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple that was in Jerusalem, and brought them into the temple of Babylon, those did Cyrus [c] the king take out of the temple of Babylon, and they were delivered unto one, whose name was [d] Sheshbazzar, [e] whom he had made ‡ governor;

15 And said unto him, Take these vessels; go, carry them into the temple that is in Jerusalem, and [f] let the house of God be builded in his place.

16 Then came the same [g] Sheshbazzar, and [h] laid the foundation of the house of God which is in Jerusalem: and since that time even until now, hath it been in building, and yet [i] it is not finished.

17 Now therefore, if it seem good to the king, [k] let there be search made in the king's treasure house, which is there at Babylon, whether it be so, that [l] a decree was made of Cyrus the king, to build this house of God at Jerusalem, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter.

CHAP. VI.

Darius finds the decree of Cyrus, confirms it, allows out of his revenues the expenses of building the temple, and denounces penalties on all opposers, 1—12. The temple is finished and dedicated, and the passover is celebrated with great joy, 13—22.

THEN Darius the king made a decree, [a] and search was made in the house of the § rolls, where the trean 4:9. Apharsathchites. 6:6.

* Chal. in the midst whereof.
o 4:17. Dan. 3:9. 4:1. 6:21. John 14:27. 2 Thes. 3:16. p 2:1. Neh. 7:6. 11:3. Esth. 1:1,22.
q 1:2,3. 6:10. 7:23. Deut. 10:17. 32: 31. Ps. 145:3. Dan. 2:47. 3:26. 4: 2,34.—37. 6:26.
† Chal. stones of rolling. Mark 13: 1,2.
r 5,4.
s 4.
t Josh. 24:15. Ps. 119:46. Jon. 1:9. Matt. 10:32. Luke 12:8. Acts 27:23. Rom. 1:16. Gal. 6:14.
u 1 K. 6: 7: 2 Chr. 3: 4: 5:
x 2 K. 21:12—15. 2 Chr. 34:24,25. 36: 16,17. Neh. 9:26,27. Is. 59:1,2. Jer. 5:29. Dan. 9:5.
y Deut. 28:15,&c. 29:24—28. 31:17. 32: 30. Judg. 2:14. 4:2. 6:1. 1 K. 9: 6—9. 2 Chr. 7:19—22. Ps. 106:40.
z 2 K. 24:10,&c. 25:1,&c. 2 Chr. 36: 6,&c. Jer. 39:1,&c. 52:1,&c. Dan. 1:1,2.
a 1:1—4. 6:3—5. Is. 44:28. 45:1. b 1:7—10. 6:5. 2 Chr. 36:7,18. Dan. 5:2,3. c 7:27. Prov. 21:1.
d 16. 1:11.
e Hag. 1:1,14. 2:2,21.
‡ Or, deputy. Acts 13:7,8,12.
f 1:2. 3:3. 6:3.
g 14.
h 2. 3:8,10. Hag. 1:12—14. 2:18. Zech. 4:10.
i 6:15.
k 4:15,19. 6:1,2. Prov. 25:2.
l 6:3—5.
a 4:15,19. 5:17. Job 29:16. Prov. 25:2.
§ Chal. books. Ps. 40:7. Jer. 36:2—4, 20—23,29,32. Ez. 2:9. 3:1. Rev. 5:1.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The enemies of the church are active, powerful, and malicious, and alas, its friends too often dispirited and negligent: yet the Lord will not suffer his cause to be run down.—It especially belongs to the office of the ministers of God to warn, exhort, encourage, and direct all orders in society to attend to their several duties: when this is properly performed, it will be found the most effectual mean of forwarding reformation, and the power of godliness: and humble and pious men, in the most exalted stations, will think themselves helped, by the faithful labors and animated remonstrances of those, who really declare to them the Word of God.—While professed Christians are satisfied with forms, and attentive mainly to their secular interests and accommodations, opposition may seem to be slain: but when they bestir themselves to do the work and seek the glory of God, it will soon be found that it was not dead, but merely asleep. Nothing, however, can cause the work of those to cease whom God employs. He finds other employment for some opposers, He restrains others by the moderation of their superiors: some are removed by death, or by revolutions in governments; and others are softened or changed; as it seems good to Him, 'who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will.'—There are men who have no true religion, yet are possessed of equity, candor, and generosity: and these qualities entitle them to our respect, though they will not justify them in the sight of God.—A fair statement of facts forms the honest man's best method of pleading a good cause.—While we continue in this world, we shall always have to confess, that our sins have provoked the God of heaven unto wrath; and that all our sufferings spring from this source, and all our comforts from his unmerited mercy.—We ought fully to acknowledge the favors we have received from man; but should generally be silent as to the ill-treatment we have met with. Even when exposed to censure, whilst the blame belongs to others; except the honor of God and the Gospel requires it, it is seldom useful to vindicate ourselves. SCOTT.

ernors of Samaria, inquiring of the Jews the names of their rulers, who presided over the work; (10) or those of the workmen, referring the inquirers to Zerubbabel and Jeshua, for information.—Ezra may fairly be supposed to have inserted the words of the record without alteration: so that the first person plural neither proves that he was then at Jerusalem; nor yet that he was not the writer of the history, as some learned men have argued. SCOTT.

Verses 6—17.

The ingenuous account the Jews gave of their nation, and the cause of the calamities that had befallen them, (which Tatnai and his associates faithfully stated to Darius,) is worthy of observation and of imitation. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. VI. V. 1. House of rolls.] Beyth Sphrya. Sept. Bibliothe- sures were * laid up in Babylon.

2 And there was found † at Achmetha, in the palace that is in the province of the Medes, a roll, and therein was a record thus written:

3 In [b] the first year of Cyrus the king, the same Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem; Let the house be builded, [c] the place where they offered sacrifices, and let the foundations thereof be strongly laid; [d] the height thereof threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof threescore cubits;

4 With [e] three rows of great stones, and a row of new timber: and let [f] the expenses be given out of the king's house:

5 And also let [g] the golden and silver vessels of the house of God, [h] which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jerusalem, and brought unto Babylon, be restored, and ‡ brought again unto the temple which is at Jerusalem, every one to his place, and place them in the house of God.

6 Now therefore, [i] Tatnai, governor beyond the river, Shethar-boznai, and § your companions the Apharsachites, which are beyond the river, [k] be ye far from thence:

7 Let the work of this house of God alone; let the governor of the Jews, and the elders of the Jews build this house of God in his place.

8 Moreover ‖ I make a decree what ye shall do to the elders of these Jews, for the building of this house of God; that of [l] the king's goods, even of the tribute beyond the river, forthwith expenses be given unto these men, that they be not [¶] hindered.

9 And that which they have need of, both [m] young bullocks, and rams, and [n] lambs, for the burnt-offerings of the God of heaven, [o] wheat, [p] salt, wine, and oil, according to the appointment of the priests which are at Jerusalem, let it be given them day by day without fail:

10 That they may offer sacrifices of  sweet savors unto the God of heaven, and [q] pray for the life of the king, and of his sons.

11 Also I have made a decree, that [r] whosoever shall alter this word, let [s] timber be pulled down from his house, and being set up, let him be †† hanged thereon; and let [t] his house be made a dung-hill for this.

12 And the God, that hath [u] caused his name to dwell there, [x] destroy all kings and people that shall put to their hand, to alter and to destroy this house of God which is at Jerusalem. [y] I Darius have made a decree; let it be done with [z] speed.

13 ¶ Then [a] Tatnai, governor on this side the river, Shethar-boznai, and their compan-

* Chal. made to descend.
† Or, at Ecbatana, or, in a coffer.
b 1:1—4. 5:13—15. 2 Chr. 36:22,23.
c Deut. 12:5,6,11—14. 2 Chr. 2:6. d 1 K. 6:2,3. 2 Chr. 3:3,4. Ez. 41:13—15. Rev. 21:16.
e 1 K. 6:36.
f 7:20—23. Ps. 68:29. 72:10. Is. 49:23. 60:6—10. Rev. 12:15. g 1:7,8. 5:14. Jer. 27:16,18—22. Dan. 1:2. 5:2.
h 2 K. 24:13. 25:14,15. 2 Chr. 36:6,7, 10,18. Jer. 52:19.
‡ Chal. go.
i 5:3.
§ Chal. their societies. 5:6.
k Gen. 32:28. 43:14. Neh. 1:11. Ps. 76:10. Prov. 21:1,30. Is. 27:8. Acts 4:26—28. Rom. 8:31.
‖ Chal. by me a decree is made.
l 4. 4:16,20. 7:15—22. Ps. 68:29—31. Hag. 2:8.
¶ Chal. made to cease. 4:21,23. 5:5.
m Lev. 1:3—5,10. 9:2. Ps. 50:9—13.
n Ex. 29:38—42. Num. 28:29:
o Lev. 2:1,&c. Num. 15:4,&c. 1 Chr 9:29.
p Lev. 2:13. Mark 9.49.
 Chal. rest. Gen. 8:21. Lev. 1:9,13, 17. Eph. 5:2. q 7:23. Jer. 29:7. 1 Tim. 2:1,2.
r 7:26.
s Esth. 5:14. 7:10.
†† Chal. destroyed.
t 2 K. 9:37. 10:27. Dan. 2:5. 3:29.
u Ex. 20:24. Deut. 12:5,11. 16:2. 1 K. 9:3. 2 Chr. 7:16. Ps. 132:13,14. x Ps. 5:10. 21:8—10. Is. 60:12. Zech. 12:2—4. Acts 5:38,39. 9:5. Rev. 19:14—21. y Esth. 3:14,15. 8:14. z 13. Ez. 9:10.
a 4:9,23. 5:6.

kai. Library. Gill. Such were very ancient; note, Ex. 7:11. and see Spineto. A cut is given of a roll and book, (Sphr.) and writing implements, from Calm. Comp. note and cut, Luke 4:17. ED.

Verse 3.

(M. R.) Some suppose Cyrus did not allow the Jews to build the porch of the temple more than 60 cubits high, lest they should fortify it as a citadel; and that the 60 cubits in breadth included the chambers on each side the temple. Perhaps he permitted them to build the temple itself 60 cubits high and 60 wide, as well as 60 long; but they chose to build it of the same dimensions as their former temple: for it is generally agreed, that thus it was at last builded; and it is clearly proved, that the porch was raised to the same height. (1 K. 6:3, 4. 2 Chr. 3:3, 4.) SCOTT.

Verse 4.

Expenses, &c.] It is likely the Jews had been deprived of this advantage, by the counsellors who were hired against them. (Notes, 3:7. 4:4—6.) SCOTT.

Verse 5.

M. R.—Notes, 1:1—4, 7—11. ID.

Verses 6—12.

Darius, in order to ingratiate himself with his subjects, showed respect to the memory of Cyrus in every thing; and this might induce him to be more favorable to the Jews, when the decree of Cyrus was produced. But he seems to have been deeply convinced, that the God of the Jews was the God of heaven, who ought to be worshipped according to the law of Moses. His steady intention that sacrifices should be offered, at his expense, at Jerusalem, 'of sweet savors to the God of heaven;' that the people of God 'might pray for him and his sons;' and the expression, 'the God, that hath caused his name to dwell there,' (12) show, that he had been instructed in several important truths of genuine religion, and had a conviction of his dependence on God, and entertained high and honorable thoughts of Him, and that he regarded the prayers of his worshippers, as efficacious. [But see note on the ancient Religion of the Persians, 1:3.] (M. R.) Probably some pious Jews had access to the king, who had so explained the matter, as to give him these favorable sentiments, and to dispose him to the service assigned him by Providence. He thought the continuance of his life and the prosperity of his family, might be secured by the prayers of the Jews: but he seems not to have considered his future and unspeakably more important interests; and it does not appear, that his convictions had any abiding effect on his own mind or conduct. (M. R. x.—Zech. 14:1—3.) ID.

Verses 13—15.

If we allow a year for the message of Tatnai to the court of Darius, the search made among the records, and all delays and obstructions, ions, according to that which Darius the king had sent, [b] so they did speedily.

14 And [c] the elders of the Jews builded, and they prospered [d] through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet, and Zechariah the son of Iddo: and they builded, and [e] finished it, [f] according to the commandment of the God of Israel, and according to the [*] commandment of [g] Cyrus, and Darius, and [h] Artaxerxes king of Persia.

15 And this house was finished on the B. C. 515. third day of the month [i] Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king.

16 And [k] the children of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the rest of the [†] children of the captivity, kept [l] the dedication of this house of God [m] with joy,

17 And [n] offered at the dedication of this house of God, an hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs; and for a [o] sin-offering for all Israel, twelve he-goats, [p] according to the number of the tribes of Israel.

18 And they set [q] the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses, for the service of God which is at Jerusalem; [‡] as it is written in the book of Moses.

19 And [r] the children of the captivity [s] kept the passover, upon the fourteenth day of the first month.

20 For the priests and the Levites were [t] purified together, all of them were pure, and [u] killed the passover for all the children of the captivity, and for their brethren the priests, and for themselves.

21 And the children of Israel, which were come again out of captivity, and [x] all such as had separated themselves unto them from the filthiness of the heathen of the land, to seek the LORD God of Israel, [y] did eat,

22 And kept [z] the feast of unleavened bread seven days with joy; for the LORD had made them joyful, and [a] turned the heart of [b] the king of Assyria unto them, to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel.

formerly, Darius now, and Artaxerxes some time after: and encouraged in it by the prophesying of Haggai and Zechariah, who, it is likely, represented to them (as Patrick suggests) the wonderful goodness of God in thus inclining the heart of the king of Persia to them. And now the work went on so prosperously, that in four years' time it was brought to perfection. The gospel-church, that spiritual temple, is long in the building, but will be finished at last, when the mystical body is completed. Every believer is a living temple, building up himself in his most holy faith; much opposition is given to this work by Satan and our own corruptions; but He that has begun the good work, will see it performed, and will bring forth judgment unto victory. Spirits of just men will be made perfect.

III. The dedication. They showed by an example how it should be used, which (says Patrick) is the proper sense of dedicate. 1. The persons employed were not only priests and Levites who officiated, but children of Israel, some of each of the 12 tribes, though Judah and Benjamin were the chief, and the rest of the children of the captivity or transportation; which intimates that many of other nations, transported themselves with them, and became proselytes; unless we read it, even the remnant of the children of the captivity, and then, we may suppose, it betokens their mean and afflicted condition, because that helped to make them devout and serious. A sad change! The children of Israel are become children of the captivity, and there appears but a remnant of them, according to that prediction, (Isa. 7: 3.) Shear-jashub, The remnant shall return. 2. The sacrifices offered, (v. 17.) 2 Cor. 8: 2. The 12 he-goats were for sin-offerings, to make atonement, in order to their acceptance. Thus, they would free themselves from what had been the sting of their late troubles, and if not removed, would be a worm at the root of their present comforts. 3. Their joy. Let us welcome holy ordinances with joy, and serve the Lord with gladness. Whatever we dedicate to God, let it be done with joy, that He will please to accept of it. 4. Small comfort could they have in the temple, without the temple-service, v 18. and though it could not now be performed with so much pomp and plenty as formerly, yet, perhaps, it was performed with as much purity as ever, which was the true glory of it. No beauty like the beauty of holiness.

IV. The celebration of the passover in the newly-erected temple. Now they were newly delivered out of their bondage, it was seasonable to b Esth. 6:11. Job 5:12,13. Prov. 29:26.

c 3:8. 4:3.
d 5:1,2. Hag. 1:12—14. 2:2,&c. Zech. 2: 3: 4: 6:
e Zech. 4:9.
f Is. 44:28. Hag. 1:8.
* Chal. decree.
g 3. 1:1—4. 4:24. 5:13.
h 7:1.
i Esth. 3:7,13. 8:12. 9:1,15,17,19,21.
k 1 Chr. 9:2. Neh. 7:73.
† Chal. sons of the transportation. See on 4:1.
l 1 K. 8:63. 2 Chr. 7:9. John 10:22. m 3:11,12. Deut. 12:7. 1 Chr. 15:28. 2 Chr. 7:10. 30:23,26. Phil. 4:4.
n 8:35. Num. 7:2,&c. 1 K. 8:63,64. 1 Chr. 16:1—3. 2 Chr. 7:5. 29:31—35. o Lev. 4:3,13,14,22,23,28. 2 Chr. 29: 21—23. p 1 K. 18:31. Luke 22:30. Rev. 7:4—8. 21:12. q 1 Chr. 23:—26: 2 Chr. 35:4,5.
‡ Chal. according to the writing. Num. 3:6. 8:9,&c.
r 16.
s Ex. 12:6,&c. Josh. 5:10. 2 Chr. 30: 35:
t 2 Chr. 29:34. 30:15—17.
u Ex. 12:21. 2 Chr. 35:11. Heb. 7:27.
x 9:11. Num. 9:6,7,10—14. Is. 52:11. Ez. 36:25. 2 Cor. 6:17. 7:1.
y Ex. 12:47—49. Ps. 93:5.
z Ex. 12:15—20. 13:6,7. 2 Chr. 30: 21. 35:17. Matt. 26:17. 1 Cor. 5: 7,8.
a 7:27. Prov. 16:7. 21:1. John 19:11. b 2 K. 23:29. 2 Chr. 33:11. Zech. 10: 10,11.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Nothing but impartial and diligent investigation can give truth and innocence a decided advantage against lies, malice, and perjury: and much injustice may be committed merely through the indolence and inattention of magistrates.—Enmity or rapacity often intercepts the favors, which were intended for the people of God: but when his plan requires the interposition of princes, He can easily dispose them to use all diligence, to exert their authority, and to expend their treasures, in supporting his cause; and, for a time, these things have often been done by those, who would not give Him their hearts, and never became his true worshippers! (2 Cor. 8: 1—5.) We ought indeed to 'pray for kings, and all in authority,' whatever be their character and conduct; yet we are very apt to be remiss and formal in this service, till encouragement enlivens our desires and expectations: but when princes decidedly favor the cause of truth and righteousness, the hearts of pious Christians are enlarged with hopes, and they pray for them with greater earnestness. Such as interrupt and injure the worshippers of God, when protected by the civil government, are desperate rebels both against God and the king: and even tolerating laws will be insufficient for the protection of the harmless servants of God, if the executive power do not vigorously interpose, to punish such as illegally assault them. But the protection of God can alone be entirely depended on; and He will at length awfully destroy those persecutors who attempt to destroy his people, however powerful or numerous they may be. The revival of public ordinances, where they had been obstructed, should excite our rejoicing, because honor is thus ascribed to the Lord, and benefit accrues to the souls of men.—As nothing contributes more to the conversion of sinners, and to the purity and prosperity of the church, than the holiness and faithfulness of ministers; let us all unite in daily prayers to the Giver of every good and perfect gift, that all those who bear that sacred character may live and preach 'according to his holy Word, and rightly and duly administer his holy sacraments' SCOTT.

for the granting of the decree, and its publication in Judea; it will appear, that it was published just 70 years after the destruction of the temple by the Chaldeans.—Zechariah, who prophesied at this time, mentions, that the people had kept annual fasts for the ruin of the city and temple, during 70 years; (Notes, Zech. 7:1—7.) and this absolutely fixes these events to the time of Darius Hystaspes; for no other Darius reigned in Persia till many years afterwards.—The historian inserts the name of Artaxerxes with those of Cyrus and Darius, as concurring in this work: (14) for though the temple was built before Artaxerxes came to the throne, yet probably it received great accessions of splendor and convenience, under the government of Ezra and Nehemiah, whom he patronised. (Notes, 7:1—5. Neh. 1:1.)—The temple was finished in rather more than 4 years after the Jews returned to the work, when excited to it by Haggai and Zechariah; (Note, 5:1, 2.) in something more than 2 years after the decree of Darius had been published; and in about 20 years after the Jews returned from captivity. Cyrus reigned 7 years; Cambyses, or Ahasuerus, 7; Artaxerxes, or Smerdis, 1; and it was finished in the 6th of Darius. (Notes, 3:8—11. 4:4—6, 17—24.) SCOTT.

Verse 18.

(M. R.—Note, 3:8—11.) ID.

Verse 22.

Of Assyria, &c.] Darius, reigning over the country of Assyria, is here called 'the king of Assyria;' though the Persian monarchy had succeeded to the monarchies both of Assyria and Babylon. [See Hist. note, end of Esth. and Geogr. note, end of 2 Chr.]—The pious acknowledgment of God in all these transactions, as influencing the king to be kind to the Jews, and as thus making them joyful, is highly rational; though it has now almost sunk into disuse, even among professed Christians! (7:27, 28. 2 K. 5:1. Prov. 21:1.) ID.

CHAP. VII.

Ezra's genealogy from Aaron, 1—5. He goes up to Jerusalem, 6—10. A copy of Artaxerxes' favorable commission to him, 11—26. He blesses God for putting this into the king's heart, 27, 28.

NOW after these things, in the reign of [a] Artaxerxes king of Persia, [b] Ezra the son of [c] Seraiah, the son of Azariah, the son of [d] Hilkiah,

2 The son of Shallum, the son of [e] Zadok, the son of Ahitub,

3 The son of Amariah, the son of Azariah, the son of Meraioth,

4 The son of Zerahiah, the son of Uzzi, the son of Bukki,

5 The son of Abishua, the son of [f] Phinehas, the son of [g] Eleazar, the son of Aaron, the [h] chief priest:

6 This Ezra went up from Babylon; and he was [i] a ready [k] scribe in [l] the law of Moses, which the LORD God of Israel had given: and the king [m] granted him all his request, [n] according to the hand of the LORD his God upon him.

7 And there went up some of [o] the children of Israel, and of the priests, and [p] the Levites, and the [q] singers, and [r] the porters, and the [s] Nethinims, unto Jerusalem, in the seventh year of [t] Artaxerxes the king.

8 And he came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, which was in the seventh year of the king.

9 For upon the first day of the first month [*] began he to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month came he to Jerusalem, [u] according to the good hand of his God upon him.

10 For Ezra had [x] prepared his heart to seek [y] the law of the LORD, and [z] to do it, [a] and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments.

[Practical Observations.]

commemorate their deliverance out of Egypt. Fresh mercies should put us in mind of former mercies. The priests and Levites that killed the passover, v. 20. were purified together, as one man, so the word is; they were unanimous both in their resolutions, and in their endeavors, to make and keep themselves ceremonially clean for this solemnity, they were pure, to a man. The purity of ministers adds much to the beauty of their ministration; so does their unity. See how the proselytes are described; they separate themselves from the filthiness of sin, and fellowship with sinners, join themselves to the Israel of God, in conformity and communion, and set themselves to seek the God of Israel; and are welcome to the gospel-feast, as fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God.

CHAP. VII. Zerubbabel and Jeshua we will suppose, by this time, to be grown old, if not gone; nor do we hear more of Haggai and Zechariah; they have finished their testimony. What shall become of the cause of God and Israel, when these useful instruments are laid aside? Trust God to raise up others. Ezra here, and Nehemiah in the next book, are as serviceable in their days, as those in theirs.

V. 1—10. I. Ezra's pedigree. He was one of the sons of Aaron, a priest; said to be the son of Seraiah, that Seraiah, as is supposed, whom the king of Babylon put to death, when he sacked Jerusalem, 2 K. 25: 18, 21. If we take the shortest computation, it was 75 years since Seraiah died; many reckon it much longer, and, because they suppose Ezra called out, in the prime of his time, to public service, think Seraiah was not his immediate parent, but his grand-father, or great-grand-father; yet that he was the first eminent person that occurred in his genealogy upward, which is carried up here as high as Aaron, still leaving out many, for brevity-sake, which may be supplied from 1 Chr. 6: 4, &c. He was a younger brother, or his father was Jozadak, the father of Jeshua; so he was not high priest, but nearly allied to him.

II. His character, 1. He was of great learning, v. 6. very much conversant with the Scriptures, especially the writings of Moses, had the words ready, and was well acquainted with their meaning. It is to be feared learning ran low among the Jews in Babylon; but Ezra was instrumental to revive it. The Jews say he collected and collated all the copies of the law he could find out, and published an accurate edition of it, with all the prophetical books, historical and poetical, that were given by divine inspiration, and so made up the canon of the O. T. with the addition of the prophecies and histories of his own time. God sent the Jews prophets and scribes, Matt. 23: 34. Ezra went under the latter denomination; now that prophecy was about to cease, it was time to promote scripture knowledge, pursuant to the counsel of God by the last of the prophets, Mal. 4: 4. Remember the law of Moses. Gospel-ministers are called scribes instructed to the kingdom of heaven, (Mat. 13: 52.) New Testament scribes. Pity, such a worthy name should be worn in the degenerate ages of the Jewish church, by professed enemies to Christ and his Gospel, Scribes and Pharisees, learned in the letter of the law, but strangers to the spirit of it.

2. He was of great piety and holy zeal v. 10. (1.) The Chaldeans, among whom he was born and bred, were famed for literature, especially the study of the stars, to which, being a studious man, we may suppose Ezra was tempted to apply himself; but the law of his God was more to him than all the writings of the magicians and astrologers, of which he knew enough to despise them. (2.) He searched the Scriptures, for God's mind and will, which is to be found there, but not without seeking. (3.) He made conscience of doing it; set it before him as his rule, formed his sentiments and temper by it, and managed his whole conversation according to it. This use we must make of the Scriptures; for happy are we, if we do what we know of the will of God. (4.) He set himself to teach Israel the statutes and judgments of that law: the ministration of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. But observe the method; he first learned, and then taught. He also first did, and then taught; thus his example confirmed his doctrine. (5.) He prepared his heart to all this; or, fixed his heart. He took pains in his studies, and thoroughly furnished himself for what he designed, and then put on resolution to persevere in them, and thus became a ready scribe. Moses in Egypt, [and Midian,] Ezra in Babylon, and both in captivity, were wonderfully fitted for eminent services to the church.

III. His expedition to Jerusalem, for the good of his country, v. 6, 8. Strange, such a man as he staid so long in Babylon, after his brethren were gone up; but God sent him not thither, till He had work for him there; and none went, but those whose spirits God raised to go up. Some think

[a] 12,21. 6:14. Neh. 2:1.
[b] 10. 8:9; 10: Neh. 8:2—9.
[c] 2 K. 25:18. 1 Chr. 6:4—14. 9:11. Neh. 11:11. Jer. 52:24—27.
[d] 2 K. 22:4,8. 2 Chr. 34:9,15.
[e] 2 Sam. 8:17. 1 K. 2:35.
[f] Ex. 6:25. Num. 25:7—13. 31:6. Josh. 22:13,31. Judg. 20:28. 1 Chr. 6:4, 50—52. Ps. 106:30,31.
[g] Lev. 10:6,12,16. Num. 3:32. 20: 25—28. 27:2. 31:31,51. Josh. 14:1. 24:33. 1 Chr. 24:1—6.
[h] 2 Chr. 19:11. 26:20.
[i] 11,12,21. Ps. 45:1. Matt. 13:52.
[k] Neh. 8:4,9,13. 12:26,36. Jer. 8:8. 1 Cor. 1:20.
[l] Deut. 4:5. 28:1. Matt. 28:20. 1 Cor. 15:1. 1 Thes. 4:1,2.
[m] 11—26.
[n] 9,28. 6:22. 8:18,22,31. Gen. 32:28. Neh. 1:10,11. 2:8,12,18. 4:15. Is. 50:2. 59:1.
[o] 8:1—14.
[p] 2:40,41. 8:15—20.
[q] 1 Chr. 5:31,&c. 25:1—8.
[r] 2:42. 1 Chr. 9:17,&c. Neh. 7:45.
[s] 24. 2:43,&c. 8:20. Neh. 7:46,&c 10:28.
[t] 11,12. 6:14. 8:1. Neh. 2:1.
[*] Heb. was the foundation of the going up.
[u] 6. Neh. 2:8,18.
[x] 1 Sam. 7:3. 1 Chr. 29:18. 2 Chr. 12:14. 19:3. Job. 11:13. Ps. 10:17. 57:7.
[y] 6. Ps. 1:2. 19:7. 119:96—100.
[z] Matt. 5:19. 7:24. John 13:17. Rev. 22:14.
[a] Deut. 33:10. 2 Chr. 17:8,9. 30:22. Neh. 8:1—9. Mal. 2:7. Acts 1:1. 1 Tim. 3:2. 2 Tim. 4:2.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—10. When the Lord removes some useful instruments, He raises up others to fill their places.—Those, who desire to be 'scribes well instructed for the kingdom of God,' must lay aside all inconsistent pursuits and studies, and have their hearts purified from sinful passions, weaned from earthly affections, and filled with zeal for the glory of God, and love to the souls of men. In these sacred studies they should be diligent and unwearied; and meditation, prayer, and a spiritual mind will render them delightful. Thus they will become 'able ministers of the N. T.' 'men of God, thoroughly furnished for every good work,' ready scribes, apt to teach, bringing forth out of their treasures things new and old: and, beginning with faithfulness and diligence in a narrow circle, they may in due time expect, 'according to the good hand of God upon them,' to be favored with more extensive opportunities of usefulness.—But knowledge, even of the sacred Scriptures, except it be reduced to practice, and communicated to others, will become useless and worthless. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. VII. V. 1—5. Artaxerxes, here mentioned, was evidently a different person from Darius. (6:14.) Xerxes, the son and successor of Darius, cannot be intended: for he reigned only 21 years; but Nehemiah, who was contemporary with Ezra, mentions the 32nd year of Artaxerxes. (Neh. 5:14.) Artaxerxes Longimanus, the son and successor of Xerxes, must therefore be meant: and the 7th year of his reign was no less than 79 years after the proclamation of Cyrus. The temple had been finished, and its worship restored, within about 20 years: and nothing very memorable occurred during the subsequent 59 or 60 years. [See Hist. note, end of Esth.]—The Jews remained very unsettled, until this commission was granted to Ezra. (Dan. 9:25—27.) Seraiah had been dead above 130 years. (2 K. 25:18, 21.) SCOTT.

Verses 6—10.

The language here is well deserving of our most serious attention. Every thing is ascribed to God, for his is 'the kingdom, and the power, and the glory for ever:' yet the agency of instruments and second 11 ¶ Now this is [b] the copy of the letter that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the priest, the scribe, even [c] a scribe of the words of the commandments of the LORD, and of his statutes to Israel.

12 Artaxerxes, [d] king of kings, unto Ezra the priest, [*] a scribe of the law of the God of heaven, perfect peace, [e] and at such a time.

13 [f] I make a decree, that all they of the people of Israel, and of his priests and Levites, in my realm, which are [g] minded of their own free-will to go up to Jerusalem, go with thee.

14 Forasmuch as thou art sent [†] of the king, and of his [h] seven counsellors, to inquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, [i] according to the law of [k] thy God which is in thine hand;

15 And to carry [l] the silver and gold, which the king and his counsellors have freely offered unto the God of Israel, [m] whose habitation is in Jerusalem,

16 And [n] all the silver and gold that thou canst find in all the province of Babylon, with the free-will-offering of the people, and of the priests, [o] offering willingly for the house of their God which is in Jerusalem:

17 That thou mayest [p] buy speedily with this money, bullocks, rams, lambs, with [q] their meat-offerings, and their drink-offerings, and [r] offer them upon the altar of the house of your God which is in Jerusalem.

18 And [s] whatsoever shall seem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do with the rest of the silver and the gold, that do [t] after the will of your God.

19 [u] The vessels also that are given thee for the service of the house of thy God, those deliver thou before [x] the God of Jerusalem.

20 And whatsoever more shall be needful for the house of thy God, which thou shalt have occasion to bestow, [y] bestow it out of the king's treasure-house.

21 And I, even [z] Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are [a] beyond the river, that whatsoever [b] Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily.

22 Unto an hundred talents of silver, and to an hundred § measures of wheat, and to an hundred [c] baths of wine, and to an hundred baths of oil, and [d] salt without prescribing how much.

23 ‖ Whatsoever is commanded by the God of heaven, let it be diligently done for the house of the God of heaven: for [e] why should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons?

24 Also we certify you, that [f] touching any of the priests and Levites, singers, porters, Nethinims, or ministers of this house of God, it shall not be lawful to impose toll, tribute, or custom, upon them.

25 And thou Ezra, after [g] the wisdom of thy God that is in thine hand, [h] set magistrates and judges, which may judge all the people that are [i] beyond the river, all such as know the laws of thy God; and [k] teach ye them that know them not.

26 And [l] whosoever will not do [m] the law of thy God, and the law of the king, let

---

I. This commission gives him, 1. Leave to go to Jerusalem, and as many of his countrymen as pleased, with him, v. 13. Being as captives, they could not quit this dominion without royal license. 2. Authority to inquire into and amend the affairs of Judah and Jerusalem, v. 14. by the rule of God's law, which was in his hands. Thus is God's law magnified, and the Jews restored [by a 'chartered right'] to their ancient privilege of governing themselves by that law, from under the statutes of oppressors, Ezek. 20: 25. 3. As a man of known integrity, it intrusts him with the money freely given by the king and his counsellors, and collected among his subjects, for the house of God, v. 15, 16. Even those that worshipped other gods, were so convinced of the sovereignty of the God of Israel, that they were willing to incur expenses, for his favor. See Ps. 45: 12. 68: 29. We find Paul going to Jerusalem on such an errand, as Ezra, Acts 24: 17.

II. He draws him a bill, or warrant rather, on the treasurers on that side the river, for what he had occasion for, v. 20—22. This was considerate; for Ezra, being yet to inquire into the state of things, knew not what he should need, and was modest in his demands; it was also kind, and evinced a very great affection to the temple, and confidence in Ezra. It is the interest of princes and great men to use their wealth and power for the support and encouragement of religion. What else are great revenues good for?

III. He charges him that nothing requisite be

---

b 4:11. 5:6.
c 6. Matt. 23:2,13. Mark 7:1—13.
d 1 K. 4:24. 20:1. Is. 10:8. Ez. 26: 7. Dan. 2:37,47. 1 Tim. 6:15. Rev. 17:14. 19:16.
* Or, a perfect scribe of the law of the God of heaven, peace, &c.
e 4:10,11,17.
f 5:13. 6:1. 2 Chr. 30:5. Esth. 3:15. 9:14. Ps. 148:6. Rev. 22:17.
g 1:3. Ps. 110:3. Phil. 2:13.
† Chal. from before.
h Esth. 1:14.
i 25,26. Deut. 17:18,19. Is. 8:20. k 1:3. 5:5. 6:12. Dan. 2:47. 6:20,26.
l 6:4,8—10. Ps. 68:29,30. 72:10. Is. 60:6—9. Rev. 21:24—26. m 6:12. 2 Chr. 2:6. 6:2,6. Ps. 76:2. 132:2f.
n 8:25—28.
o 1:4,6. 1 Chr. 29:6,9,17. 2 Cor. 8:12. 9:7. p See on 6:9,10.—Deut. 14:24—26. Matt. 21:12,13. John 2:14.
q Num. 15:4—13.
r Deut. 12:5—11.
s 2 K. 12:15. 22:7.
t 23.
u 8:27—30,33,34.
x 2 Chr. 32:19. Jer. 3:17.
y 6:4,8, &c.
z 12,13.
a 4:16,20. 6:6.
b 6,10,11.
§ Chal. cors. Luke 16:7. marg.
c Ez. 45:14. Luke 16:6. marg.
d Lev. 2:13.
‖ Chal. Whatsoever is of the decree. 13.
e 6:10—12. Zech. 12:3.
f 7. 2:36—55.
g 14. 1 K. 3:28. 1 Chr. 22:12. Ps. 19: 7. 119:98—100. Prov. 2:6. 6:23. Jam. 1:5. 3:17,18.
h Ex. 18:21—25. Deut. 16:18. 1 Chr. 23:4. 2 Chr. 19:8—10.
i 6:6.
k 10. 2 Chr. 17:7—9. Neh. 8:1—3,7,8. 9:3. 13:1—3. Mal. 2:7. Matt. 13: 52. Mark 6:34.
l 6:11. Dan. 3:28,29. 6:26.
m 2 Chr. 30:12.

---

causes is properly noticed.—The word scribe here used, does not merely signify one who wrote out copies of the law, but rather an interpreter of the law. Many learned men are of opinion, and indeed with good reason, that Artaxerxes was the Ahasuerus, who soon after this married Esther; and that this commission, as well as that of Nehemiah, was obtained through her influence. (Neh. 2:5, 6.)—Of the priests, &c. (7) 8:1—20.—He came to Jerusalem, &c. (8) 8:21—23. SCOTT.

(6.) Scribe.] 'Sophr, one skilled and learned, from Sphr, a book; and as no book was comparable to the law, the name became one of great dignity.' HEWLETT.

Verses 11, 12.

The original letter is here inserted in the Chaldee language. SCOTT.

Verse 14.

Seven, &c.] As 7 princes of Persia had conspired against and slain the usurper Smerdis, and thus made way for the family of Darius which afterwards filled the throne; the Persian kings ever after had 7 chief princes as their counsellors, who possessed peculiar privileges, and joined with them in all public transactions. (Esth. 1:13, 14.) ED.

Verses 15, 16.

Canst find, &c. (16) I. e. all the money, which Ezra could obtain by the voluntary contributions of the people, whether Jews or Babylonians. (1:4—6.) SCOTT.

Verses 17, 18.

(M. R.) It is remarkable, that a heathen prince [but see note, 1:3. ED.] should lay no other restriction on Ezra and his brethren, in disposing of the treasures which they collected, except that they should be employed, 'after the will of their God.' ID.

Verse 22.

Salt.] As salt was offered with every sacrifice, Artaxerxes did not limit the quantity, lest any stated sacrifice should be omitted. ID.

Verse 23.

'Here Cappellus cries out in a kind of rapture, "O! words to be written on the palaces of kings in golden letters, and engraven on the minds of all the faithful with a pen of adamant! For they express an exceeding great sense of God, and of his supreme authority, and the regard due from the greatest kings and potentates, to his most sacred commands." The like is not easy to be found any where.' Patrick. ID.

Verse 26.

Speedily.] It was the Persian custom to punish malefactors, even capitally, at once, and before the king's tent, or palace door. See Fraser, &c. ED.

judgment be executed speedily upon him, [n] whether it be unto death, or to * banishment, or to confiscation of goods, or to imprisonment.

27 ¶ [o] Blessed be the LORD God of our fathers, which hath [p] put such a thing as this [q] in the king's heart, [r] to beautify the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem;

28 And hath [s] extended mercy unto me, before the king and [t] his counsellors, and before all the king's mighty princes. And I was strengthened [u] as the hand of the LORD my God was upon me; and I gathered together out of Israel, chief men to go up with me.

CHAP. VIII.

The names of those who joined Ezra, when he was about to go up to Jerusalem, 1—14. Finding no Levites, he sends to Iddo, at Casiphia, and obtains some, 15—20. They observe a solemn fast, to seek of God a prosperous journey, 21—23. Ezra intrusts the sacred treasures to the priests, 24—30. They arrive in safety at Jerusalem, 31, 32. The treasures, by weight, are delivered up; and sacrifices offered, 33—35. The king's commission is produced, 36.

THESE are now [a] the chief of their fathers, and this is the [b] genealogy of [c] them that went up with me from Babylon, in the reign of Artaxerxes the king.

2 Of the sons of [d] Phinehas, Gershom; of the sons of Ithamar, Daniel; of the sons of * David, Hattush;

3 Of the sons of Shechaniah, of the sons of [f] Pharosh, Zechariah; and with him were reckoned by genealogy, of the males, an hundred and fifty.

4 Of the sons of [g] Pahath-moab, Elihoenai the son of Zerahiah, and with him two hundred males.

5 Of the sons of Shechaniah; the son of Jahaziel, and with him three hundred males.

6 Of the sons also of [h] Adin; Ebed the son of Jonathan, and with him fifty males.

7 And of the sons of [i] Elam; Jeshaiah the son of Athaliah, and with him seventy males.

8 And of the sons of [k] Shephatiah; Zebadiah the son of Michael, and with him fourscore males.

9 Of the sons of [l] Joab; Obadiah the son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males.

10 And of the sons of

n Ex. 21: 22: Lev. 20: Deut. 13:
* Chal. rooting out. Ps. 52:5.
o 6:22. 1 Chr. 29:10,&c. Phil. 4:10. p 6:22. Neh. 2:12. 7:5. 2 Cor. 8:16. Heb. 8:10. 10:16. Jam. 1:17. Rev. 17:17. q Neh. 2:8. Prov. 21:1.
r Is. 60:13.
s 9:9. Gen. 32:28. 43:14. Neh. 1:11.
t 14. Jon. 3:7.
u 6,9. 5:5. 9:18. Neh. 2:8. 2 Tim. 4:17,18.
a 1:5. 1 Chr. 9:34. 24:31. 26:32. 2 Chr. 26:12. Neh. 7:70,71.
b 2:62. 1 Chr. 4:33. c 1. c 7:7,13.
d 1 Chr. 6:3,4,&c. 24:1—6.
e 1 Chr. 3:1,22.
f 2:3. Neh. 7:8. 10:14 Parosh.
g 2:6. Neh. 7:11. 10:14.
h 2:15. Neh. 7:20. 10:16.
i 2:7,31. Neh. 7:12,34.
k 2:4. Neh. 7:9. 11:4.
l 2:6. Neh. 7:11.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 11—28. The servants of God cannot vary from their rules at the instance of the greatest princes, or 'teach for doctrines the commandments of men:' but they may want the countenance and external assistance of rulers, in order that they may employ their gifts, and perform their duty, without molestation and to greater advantage. And when kings will grant them protection, intrust them with authority, and bear the expenses of their useful designs; and then leave them to conduct every thing by the rule of the Word of God, and according to his will, as it appears to them and their brethren; they may without hesitation avail themselves of such assistance: nay, they may properly petition for it, when there appears a prospect of success. (2 Chr. 30: 12.) But in whatever way great and effectual doors are opened to them, they should regard men only as instruments; and ascribe it to the power and goodness of God, if princes grant their requests; bless his name for putting such a thing in their hearts; and receive a commission from man merely as an external opportunity of executing a higher commission from God, according to his instructions, and under his protection.—The liberality of heathen kings, in beautifying the house of God, and supporting the expense of his worship, reproached the conduct of many kings of Judah, and of all that reigned in Israel; and it will rise up in judgment, and condemn the avarice of many nominal Christians, who refuse to employ their superfluous treasures in supporting the worship of God, and propagating the Gospel in the world.—Unconverted men may perceive, that 'whatsoever is commanded by the God of heaven,' should be diligently done; and that the neglect of his worship will bring wrath on kingdoms, and on the persons and families of princes. But divine faith alone, as working by love and gratitude, is capable of producing unreserved, persevering, and delightful obedience.—The exorbitant and pernicious exemptions, which ambitious ecclesiastics once claimed, have rendered magistrates reasonably jealous in this matter: but when ministers are poor and diligent, there would be a great propriety in favoring them with such exemptions, as consist with the welfare of society, and leave them to attend on their work without embarrassing cares and distresses.—But the weapons of our warfare, as Christian ministers, are not carnal: faithful preaching, holy lives, fervent prayers, and patient suffering, are the means we must use, to teach the ways of God to those who know them not, and to bring increasing numbers into subjection to the obedience of Jesus Christ. (2 Cor. 10: 1—6.)

SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. VIII. V. 1—14. (M. R. o.) The males only are mentioned; so that the number, including the women, was double, at least, what is here mentioned.

SCOTT.

Shelomith; the sons of Josiphiah, and with him an hundred and threescore males.

11 And of the sons of [m] Bebai; Zechariah the son of Bebai, and with him twenty and eight males.

12 And of the sons of [n] Azgad; Johanan * the son of Hakkatan, and with him an hundred and ten males.

13 And of the last sons of [o] Adonikam, whose names are these, Eliphelet, Jeiel, and Shemaiah, and with them three score males.

14 Of the sons also of [p] Bigvai; Uthai, and † Zabbud, and with them seventy males.

15 ¶ And I gathered them together to [q] the river that runneth to [r] Ahava; and there ‡ abode we in tents three days: and I viewed the people and the priests, [s] and found there none of the sons of Levi.

16 Then sent I for Eliezer, for Ariel, for [t] Shemaiah, and for Elnathan, and for Jarib, and for Elnathan, and for [u] Nathan, and for [x] Zechariah, and for Meshullam, [y] chief men; also for Joiarib and for Elnathan, [z] men of understanding.

17 And I sent them with commandment unto Iddo the chief at the place Casiphia, and § I told them what they should say unto Iddo, and to his brethren [a] the Nethinims, at the place Casiphia, that they should bring unto us [b] ministers for the house of our God.

18 And [c] by the good hand of our God upon us, they brought us [d] a man of understanding, of the sons of [e] Mahli, the son of Levi, the son of Israel; and [f] Sherebiah, with his sons and his brethren, eighteen;

19 And [g] Hashabiah, and with him Jeshaiah of the sons of [h] Merari, his brethren and their sons, twenty;

20 Also of the [i] Nethinims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by name.

21 ¶ Then [k] I proclaimed a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might [l] afflict ourselves before our God, [m] to seek of him a right way for us, and [n] for our little ones, and for all our substance.

22 For [o] I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way: because we had spoken unto

† Or, pitched.
s 2. 7:7,24.
t 13. 10:21.
u 10:39.
x 11.
y 1.
z 18. 1 K. 3:11. 1 Chr. 12:32. 26:14. 2 Chr. 2:12. Prov. 2:6. Dan. 2:21. 2 Tim. 2:7. 1 John 5:20.
§ Heb. I put words in their mouth. Ex. 4:15. Deut. 18:18. 2 Sam. 14:3,19. Jer. 1:9. 15:19.
a 2:43,58. 7:7.
b Num. 8:22—26. 18:6. 1 Chr. 23: 3—6,26—32.
c 22. 7:28. Neh. 2:8. Prov. 3:6. d See on 16.—Prov. 24:3. Jer. 3:15. Dan. 1:20. 1 Cor. 14:20.
e Num. 3:20. 1 Chr. 6:19.
f 24. Neh. 8:7. 9:4,5. 10:12. 12:24.
g Neh. 3:17. 10:11.
h 1 Chr. 6:1,16,19.
i 17. 2:43. 7:7. 1 Chr. 9:2.
k Judg. 20:26. 1 Sam. 7:6. 2 Chr. 20:3. Joel 1:14. 2:12—18. Jon. 3: 5—10. l Lev. 16:29,31. 23:29. Is. 58:5. Jer. 31:8,9. 50:4,5. m Ps. 5:8. 107:2—8. 143:8—10. Prov. 3:6. Is. 30:21. 35:8. 42:16. 49:10. Jer. 10:23.
n Num. 14:3,31. Mark 10:13—16. Acts 2:39.
o 1 Cor. 9:15. 2 Cor. 7:14.

m 2:11. 10:28. Neh. 7:16
n 2:12. Neh. 7:17.
* Or, the youngest son.
o 2:15. Neh. 7:18.
p 2:14. Neh. 7:19.
† Or, Zaccur, as some read. (Neh. 10:12.) q Ps. 137:1. Ez. 1:1. 3:15. Acts 16: 13.
r 21,31.

Verse 15.

Ahava seems to have been the name both of a town, and of a rivulet which ran into the Euphrates, near the town. The whole company must have lodged in tents, during the journey, as well as before they entered on it.—No Levites, who were not also priests, were found among them: for Ezra himself was a priest. SCOTT.

Verses 16, 17.

(M. R.) It is uncertain where Casiphia lay, or who Iddo the chief was. The Nethinim are called his brethren: and, if he were one of that company, no doubt he had been advanced, on account of his extraordinary qualifications or services. Some, however, suppose the word rendered 'his brethren' to be a proper name; and that, translated Nethinims, to signify appointed. They therefore render the passage thus; 'I told them what they should say to Iddo and Achio, who were constituted in the place Casiphia.' ID.

Verse 18.

Sherebiah, no doubt, was 'the man of understanding' here meant; and the passage should be read, 'A man of understanding . . . even Sherebiah.' (M. R.) ID.

Verse 20.

The Gibeonites were appointed to the service of the Levites, in the time of Joshua: (Josh. 9:27.) and some think, that others, (perhaps a remnant of the devoted Canaanites, or of those who were vowed to the Lord, by themselves or their parents, (Lev. 27:2—8.) were added to them, or placed in rather a superior station, by David and his princes, and afterwards by Solomon; and that these were, strictly speaking, the Nethinim. SCOTT

Verses 21—23.

Their journey lay chiefly through the desert: and, as they were encumbered with families and possessions, they could make but slow progress, and a feeble defence in case of an assault. They carried large treasures with them, which would invite the attempts of the Arabian free-booters, and others who infested that neighborhood. (26, 27.) In ordinary cases it would have been very proper, to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen for their defence, which no doubt would have been readily granted: but Ezra, wishing to impress Artaxerxes with a proper sense of the power and perfections of JEHOVAH, and being afraid lest the king should not at once understand the

have been wanting, the vacancies are well supplied, let God have the glory, and his good hand (as here by Ezra) be acknowledged, as qualifying for the service, inclining them to it, and then opening a door of opportunity for them.

V. 21—23. Ezra has procured Levites, but his chief care is to have God with him. In all our ways, we must acknowledge God; and in those particularly, wherein we are endeavoring to serve the interest of his kingdom among men Ezra does so here. Observe,

1. His steadfast confidence in God, and in his gracious protection; he told the king, what principle he went upon, v. 22. God's servants have his power engaged for them, his enemies have it engaged against them. This, Ezra believed, and confessed it before the king; therefore he was ashamed to ask a convoy, lest thereby he should give occasion to the king, and those about him, to suspect either God's power to help his people, or Ezra's confidence in it. Not but that those who depend on God, must use proper means for their preservation, and need not be ashamed to do it; but when the honor of God is concerned, one would rather expose one's-self than do any thing to the prejudice of that, which ought to be dearer than life.

2. His solemn application to God in that confidence; he proclaimed a fast, v. 21. for public mercies, public prayers must be made; that all who are to share in the comfort, may join in the request. Their fasting was, (1.) To express their humiliation; this he declares to be the intent and meaning of it, v. 21. When entering on any new condition of life, our care should be to bring none of the guilt of the sins of our former condition into it. When in any imminent peril, let us be sure to make our peace with God, and then we are safe, nothing can do us any real hurt. (2.) To excite their supplications; prayer was always joined with religious fasting: their errand to the throne of grace was, to seek of God the right way, i. e. to commit themselves to the guidance and protection of the Divine Providence. Note, All our concerns about ourselves and families, and our estates, it is the king, saying, [p] The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him; but [q] his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him.

23 So [r] we fasted, and [s] besought our God for this: [t] and he was entreated of us.

[Practical Observations.]

24 ¶ Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, [u] Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them;

25 And [x] weighed unto them [y] the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had offered:

26 I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents;

27 Also twenty basins of gold, of a thousand drams; and two vessels of * fine copper, † precious as gold.

28 And I said unto them, [z] Ye are holy unto the LORD; [a] the vessels are holy also; and the silver and the gold are a free-will offering unto the LORD God of your fathers.

29 [b] Watch ye, and keep them, [c] until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the LORD.

30 So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem unto [d] the house of our God.

31 ¶ Then we departed from [e] the river of Ahava, on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem: and [f] the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way.

p 7:6,9,28. 1 Chr. 28:9. 2 Chr. 16:9. Ps. 33:18,19. 34:15,22. Is. 3:10,11. Rom. 8:28. 1 Pet. 3:12.
q Josh. 23:16. 2 Chr. 15:2. Ps. 21:8,9. 90:11. Zeph. 1:2—6. 1 Pet. 3:12.
r Neh. 9:1. Esth. 4:16. Dan. 9:3. Luke 2:37. Acts 10:30.
s Jer. 29:12,13. 33:3. 50:4,5.
t 31. Deut. 4:29. 1 Chr. 5:20. 2 Chr. 33:12,13. Jer. 29:12,13. Matt. 7:7,8.
u 18,19.
x 33,34. 1:3. 2 Cor. 8:20,21. *Phil. 4:8.
y 7:15,16.
* Heb. yellow, or shining brass.
† Heb. desirable. Lam. 4:2.
z Lev. 21:6—8. Deut. 33:8. Is. 52:11. a 1:7—11. Num. 4:4—15,19,20. 7:13, 84—88. 1 K. 7:48—51. 1 Chr. 23:28. 2 Chr. 24:14.
b 1 Chr. 26:20—26. Mark 13:34,35. Acts 20:31. 2 Tim. 4:5.
c 33,34.
d 1 Chr. 29:2,3. Ps. 122:9. Is. 60:13.
e 15,21.
f 22. 7:9,28. Job 5:19—24. Ps. 91:9—14. Is. 41:10—14. Acts 25:3. 26:22

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—23. While love of the world, and fear of the cross, induce most men to neglect the salvation of the Gospel; they, who obey the gracious call, stand recorded in the Book of Life, and will be honored by God Himself.—When some of a family embrace the Gospel, those who linger behind may probably follow; till sometimes, in answer to fervent prayers, and by means of zealous, affectionate, persevering endeavors, the very last are brought in.—Alas! that professed ministers of religion, who ought to take the lead in every good work, are generally so backward to labor, or venture, or suffer in the cause of God; and need to be stirred up by the example and exhortations even of their laybrethren! But such as address them on these occasions should be chief men, or men of understanding and established character; lest they should be irritated, instead of being persuaded.—It is an invariable rule, that 'the hand of our God is upon all them for good, that seek Him; but his power and wrath is against all them that forsake Him:' and we ought to live in the habitual, firm belief of this, and should not be ashamed, if called to it, to avow our confidence before the greatest monarchs on earth: but we should be ashamed to act inconsistently with these professions, or even to appear distrustful of the Lord in the path of duty. On some occasions we ought to omit these precautions for personal safety, and refuse to make that provision for our families, which in other circumstances are very lawful; lest our weaker brethren, or inquirers, should be stumbled, and so our God should be dishonored. We have therefore great need to ask wisdom from Him, that we may know how to use, or to refuse, lawful things, as expedient, or otherwise: and we shall be no losers by venturing, renouncing, or suffering for his sake; as 'it is better to trust in the LORD, than to put confidence in princes,' or in armed hosts —Indeed, few enterprises, good in themselves, begun and conducted in this way, finally fail of success. SCOTT.

distinctions between using means, and confiding in them; determined to travel without a guard, except that of the Almighty. Accordingly, beseeching Him to be the Guide and Guard of them, their families, their substance, and also of their consecrated treasures, He was entreated of them, their enemies were restrained or disabled, and they arrived unmolested at Jerusalem. SCOTT.

Verse 24.

Sherebiah and Hashabiah, before-mentioned, (18, 19.) were descendants of Merari, the son of Levi, and not of Kohath, Aaron's progenitor; and consequently they were not priests. Either, therefore, the persons specified in this verse were priests who bore the same names; or they were the above-mentioned eminent Levites, who on this occasion were joined in trust with ten priests, in the care of the sacred treasures. (30) ID.

Verses 26, 27.

These treasures are computed to have been at least worth £100,000 stg. besides the sacred vessels, which were very valuable. The far greater part of this was offered by a pagan king, with his princes and nobles! SCOTT. But see note, 1:3. ED.

(26.) Fine copper, precious as gold.] 'Syr. nechosho Corinthio toba, best Corinthian brass; so called from the brass found after the burning of Corinth, which was brass, copper, gold, and silver, all melted together, as is generally supposed. But it was probably some factitious metal, made there, that took the polish, and assumed the brightness of gold, and because of its hardness was more durable. The Asiatics have still a factitious metal of this kind [perhaps a very early triumph in the arts. Ed.]. I have seen it often made; it is as bright and fine as gold, takes a most exquisite polish, and will scarcely tarnish. I have kept this exposed to every variation of the air, even among old iron, brass, copper, &c. for 20 yrs. together, without being scarcely at all oxidized. It requires much art in the making, but the ingredients are of small value. Vessels of it, because of their lustre, and durability, for domestic and ornamental uses, are in many respects more valuable than gold itself. The only difficulty is to get at first the true color, which depends on the degree of heat, and the time employed in fusion: but there are proper rules to ascertain these. It widely differs from or moulu, is less expensive, and much more valuable.' Dr. A. CLARKE.

Verse 31.

As Ezra departed from Babylon, on the 1st day of the 1st month, (7:9.) and, having sent to Casiphia to procure Levites and Nethinim, the company set off from Ahava on the 12th day of the same month;

32 And [g] we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

33 Now on the fourth day was the silver, and the gold, and the vessels [h] weighed in the house of our God, by the hand of [i] Meremoth the son of [k] Uriah the priest; and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinehas; and with them was [l] Jozabad the son of Jeshua, and Noadiah the son of [m] Binnui, Levites;

34 By number and by weight of every one: and all the weight was written at that time.

35 Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, [n] offered burnt-offerings unto the God of Israel, [o] twelve bullocks for all Israel, ninety and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he goats for a sin-offering: all this was a burnt-offering unto the LORD.

36 And they delivered [p] the king's commissions unto the king's [q] lieutenants, and to the governors on this side the river; and [r] they furthered the people, and the house of God.

CHAP. IX.

Ezra, learning that many of the priests and people had married heathen wives, expresses great sorrow and consternation, 1—4. He prays, and makes confession of sin unto God, 5—15.

NOW when these things were done, [a] the princes came to me, saying, The people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites, [b] have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, [c] doing according to their abominations, even [d] of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, [e] the Ammonites, the [f] Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites.

2 For they have [g] taken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons: so that [h] the holy seed have [i] mingled themselves with the people of those lands: yea, [k] the hand of the princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass.

3 And when I heard this thing, I [l] rent my garment and my mantle, and [m] plucked off the hair of my head and of

g 7:8,9. Neh. 2:11.
h 26,30. 1 Chr. 28:14—18. 2 Cor. 8: 20,21.
i Neh. 10:5.
k Neh. 3:4. Urijah.
l Neh. 8:7.
m Neh. 10:9.
n Lev. 1,&c. 2 Chr. 29:31,32. Ps. 66: 10—15. 116:12—19. Luke 1:74,75. o 6:17. Num. 7:27.
p 7:21—24.
q 4:7,&c. 5:6,&c. r 6:13. Is. 56:6,7. Acts 18:27. Rev. 12:16.
a 10:8. Jer. 26:10,16.
b 6:22. 10:10,11. Ex. 33:16. Num. 23:9. Neh. 9:2. 13:3. Is. 52:11. 2 Cor. 6:14—18. c Lev. 18:3,24—30. Deut. 12:31. 18: 9. 2 Chr. 33:2. Ps. 106:35.
d Gen. 15:16,19—21. Ex. 23:23. Deut. 20:17,18.
e Deut. 23:3—5. 1 K. 11:1,5—7. Neh. 4:3,7. 13:1—3.
f Num. 25:1—3.
g 10:18—44. Ex. 34:16. Deut. 7:1—4. Neh. 13:23,24. Mal. 2:11.
h Ex. 19:6. 22:31. Deut. 7:6. 14:2. Is. 6:13. Mal. 2:15. 1 Cor. 7:14.
i Gen. 6:2. Neh. 13:3,23,24.
k 10:18—44. Neh. 13:4,17,28.
l Josh. 7:6. 2 K. 18:37. 19:1. Job 1:20. Jer. 36:24. m Lev. 21:5. Neh. 13:25. Is. 15:2. Jer. 7:29. 48:37,38. Ez. 7:18. Mic 1:16.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 24—36. They should be holy persons, who have the charge of holy things. Ministers are stewards of the most precious mysteries of God; and watch for the souls of men, every one of which is more valuable than all the world: and if any are wanting through their default, they will be required at their hands. The meanest of them, therefore, needs at least as much wisdom, vigilance, integrity, fidelity, and zeal, as the chief of those who carried the vessels of the Lord. A clear conscience, and an evidently upright conduct, are both comfortable and reputable: yet our whole dependence for the acceptance of our persons and of all our services, must be rested on the merits and sacrifice of our great Surety: through Him we must devote ourselves, and consecrate our services, to our reconciled God, and then walk before Him in his commandments and ordinances, as we have opportunity and ability.—'When our ways please the LORD, He maketh even our enemies to be at peace with us:' and if He disposes a few of the great ones of the earth to favor his cause; numbers will afford their external assistance, not to please God, but the prince.—If preservation in peace and safety during our journeys on earth demand our tribute of grateful praise: what acclamations of gratitude shall we raise, when the Lord has conducted us safe through the perilous and wearisome pilgrimage of life, and through the gloomy vale of death, out of the reach of all our enemies, into the regions of eternal felicity! SCOTT.

---

then families, and joined themselves in affinity with strangers. Observe,

I. Their sin was, mingling with the people of those lands, (v. 2.) both in trade and conversation, making themselves familiar with them, and, to complete the affinity, taking their daughters in marriage to their sons. We are willing to hope they did not worship their gods, but that their captivity had cured them of their idolatry: it is said indeed they did according to their abominations; but that (says Patrick) signifies here only the imitation of the heathen in promiscuous marriages with any nation whatsoever; which, by degrees, would lead them to idolatry again. Herein, they disobeyed the express command of God, Deut. 7: 3. profaned the crown of their peculiarity, distrusted the power of God to protect and advance them, hoping by this carnal policy to strengthen themselves, and make an interest among their neighbors. A practical disbelief of God's all-sufficiency is at the bottom of all the sorry [vicious] shifts we make to help ourselves. They exposed themselves, and much more their children, to idolatry; the very sin, and introduced by this very way, that had once ruined their church and nation. But miserable is the case of that people, whose leaders (v. 2.) debauch them, and cause them to err.

II. The impression this made on Ezra, v. 3. Thus he expressed the deep sense he had, of the dishonor hereby done to God, of the mischief done to themselves, and of the danger of the wrath of God breaking out against them. Note, 1. Others' sins should be our sorrow, and the injury done by them to God's honor, and the souls of men, we should lay to heart. 2. Sorrow for sin must be great sorrow; such Ezra's was, as for an only son or a first-born. 3. The scandalous sins of professors we have reason to be astonished at. We may stand amazed to see men contradict, disparage, prejudice, ruin, themselves. Strange, men should act so inconsiderately, and so inconsistently with themselves! Upright men are astonished at it.

III. The influence of Ezra's grief for this, on others; we may suppose he went up to the house it is evident that Casiphia was not far from Ahava. SCOTT.

---

Verses 32—36.

M. R.—2:68—70. 6:6—12. Jer. 31:8, 9. 50:4—6. Zech. 2:6—9. Acts 11:27—30.—Eleazar the son of Phinehas. (33.) 'The names of Eleazar and Phinehas continued through many generations among the priests, because they were two very eminent persons in Aaron's family.' Patrick.—The children, &c. (35) The company that came up with Ezra, offered these sacrifices, as expressing humiliation for sin, faith in the mercy of God through the typical atonement, and gratitude for his late mercies: this they did, not only for themselves, but for their brethren of all the 12 tribes. ID.

NOTES

CHAP. IX. V. 1, 2. It seems there was still a remnant of the old inhabitants dwelling in the borders of the land. (M. R.) They had not indeed yet proceeded to direct idolatry; but were in the direct way to it, and already chargeable with doing in some respects 'according to the abomination of the Gentiles.' SCOTT.

Verse 3.

Plucked, &c.] An ancient expression of passionate grief, still common to the 'climes of the sun,' and strange to us, of a more frigid and disciplined temperament. So Homer speaks of mourners, who 'sitting down, howled and plucked off their hair.' So the Hindoos, says my beard, and [n]sat down astonied.

4 Then were assembled unto me every one that [o]trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away; and I sat astonied [p]until the evening-sacrifice.

5 ¶ And at the evening-sacrifice I arose up from my [*]heaviness; and, having rent my garment and my mantle, [q]I fell upon my knees, and [r]spread out my hands unto the LORD my God,

[Practical Observations.]

6 And said, O my God, [*]I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God: for [t] our iniquities are increased over our head, and our †trespass is [u]grown up unto the heavens.

7 [x]Since the days of our fathers have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and [y]for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered [z]into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and [*]to confusion of face, [b]as it is this day.

8 And now for a ‡little space [c]grace hath been showed from the LORD our God, to leave us [d]a remnant to escape, and to give us §a nail [*]in his holy place, that our God may [f]lighten our eyes, and give us a little [g]reviving in our bondage.

9 For [h]we were bondmen; [i]yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath ex-of the Lord, there to humble himself, because he had an eye to God in his grief, and that was the proper place to deprecate his displeasure: public notice was soon taken of it, and all the devout, serious people at hand assembled to him, it should seem, of their own accord, for nothing is said of their being sent to, v. 4. Note, 1. It is the character of good people, that they tremble at God's Word; they stand in awe of the authority of its precepts, and the severity and justice of its threatenings, and to them that do so will God look, Isa. 66: 2. 2. They that tremble at the Word of God, cannot but tremble at the sins of men, by which the law of God is broken, and his wrath and curse incurred. 3. The pious zeal of one against sin, may perhaps provoke very many to the like, as the apostle speaks in another case, 2 Cor. 9: 2. Many will follow, who have not consideration, conduct, and courage enough to lead in a good work. 4. All good people ought to own those, that appear and act in the cause of God against vice and profaneness, to stand by them, and do what they can to strengthen their hands.

V. 5—15. What the meditations of Ezra's heart were, while, for some hours, he sat down astonished, we may guess by these words; and a most pathetic address he here makes to Heaven. Observe,

I. The time; at the evening-sacrifice, v. 5. Then (it is likely) devout people used to come into the courts of the temple, to grace the solemnity of the sacrifice, and offer their own prayers in concurrence with it. In their hearing, Ezra chose to make this confession, that they might be made duly sensible of the sins of their people, which, hitherto, they had either not noticed, or made light of. Prayer may preach. The sacrifice, and especially the evening-sacrifice, was a type of the great Propitiation, that blessed Lamb of God, who, in the evening of the world, was to take away sin by the sacrifice of Himself, to which we may suppose Ezra had an eye of faith in this penitential address. Certainly Ezra was no stranger to the message the angel Gabriel had, some years ago, delivered to Daniel, at the time of the evening-sacrifice, and, as it were, in explication of it, concerning Messiah the Prince; (Dan. 9: 24.) perhaps he had regard to that in choosing this time.

II. The address itself. It is not properly a prayer, for there is not a word of petition in it; but if we give prayer its full latitude, it is offering pious and devout affections to God; and very devout, very pious, are the affections Ezra here expresses: a lively picture of ingenuous repentance. Observe,

1. His confession of the sin, and its aggravations, which he insists on, to affect his own heart, and theirs that joined him, with holy sorrow, shame and fear, in the consideration of it, that they might be deeply humbled for it. And it is observable, that though wholly clear from this guilt, yet he puts himself into the number of the sinners, because he was a member of the same community, our sins, and our trespass. Perhaps he now remembered it against himself, that he had staid so long after his brethren in Babylon, and had not separn Neh. 1:4. Job 2:12,13. Ps. 143:4. Ez. 3:15. Dan. 4:19. 8:27.

o 10:3. 2 Chr. 34:27. Is. 66:2. Ez. 9:4. p Ex. 29:39. Dan. 9:21. Acts 3:1.
* Or, affliction.
q 2 Chr. 6:13. Ps. 95:6. Luke 22:41. Acts 21:5. Eph. 3:14.
r Ex. 9:29,33. 1 K. 8:22,38,54. Ps. 141:2. 143:6. Is. 4:15. s Job 40:4. 42:6. Jer. 3:3,24,25. 6: 15. 8:12. 31:19. Ez. 16:63. Dan. 9:7,8. Rom. 6:21.
t Gen. 13:13. Ps. 38:4. Is. 1:18. 59: 12.
† Or, guiltiness.
u 2 Chr. 28:9. Rev. 18:5.
x Num. 32:14. 2 Chr. 29:6. 30:7. Neh. 9:32—34. Ps. 106:6,7. Lam. 5:7. Dan. 9:5—8. Zech. 1:4,5. Matt. 23:30—33. Acts 7:51,52.
y Lev. 26:14,&c. Deut. 4:25—28. 28: 15,&c. 29:22—28. 30:17—19. 31: 20—22. 32:15—28. 1 Sam. 12:15. 1 K. 9:6—9. Neh. 9:30. z 2 K. 17:5—8. 18:9—12. 24:1—4. 2 Chr. 36:16—19. Neh. 9:36,37. Dan. 9:11—14.
a Dan. 9:7,8.
b Neh. 9:32. Jer. 25:18. 44:22.
‡ Heb. moment.
c 9. Neh. 1:11. 9:31. Hab. 3:2. d 14. 2 K. 19:4,30,31. Is. 1:9. Jer. 42:2. 44:14. Ez. 6:8,9. 14:22. Zech. 8:6,12. Rom. 9:27. 11:5,6.
§ Or, a pin, i. e. a constant and sure abode. Ez. 12:11. Is. 22:23—25. Zech. 10:4.
e Is. 56:5. Rev. 3:12.
f 1 Sam. 14:27,29. Job 33:30. Ps. 13: 3. 34:5.
g Ps. 85:6. 138:7. Is. 57:15. Ez. 37: 11—14. Hos. 6:2. h Neh. 9:36,37. Ps. 106:45,46. 136:23,24.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—5. Those who deal in frivolous, slanderous, and malicious informations, are justly the objects of public execration: but when a pious regard for the honor of God, and a disinterested concern for the benefit of the community, induce men to give information of gross and flagrant abuses, to persons authorized to repress them; they perform a most useful and honorable service: and even princes may glory in such an employment, though the criminals will generally hate and revile them for it. (Gen. 37: 2.)—Intermarriages between God's people and ungodly persons, have in all ages been a successful device of Satan, to prevail against the cause of truth and righteousness, and to produce apostasies, superstitions, idolatry, or impiety. Formalists, of every description, make light of alliances or intimacies with those who are ungodly, and explain away the exhortation to 'come out from among them, and be separate:' but those who are best acquainted with the Word of God, with the human heart, and with the history of the church, and who have the most affectionate regard for the souls of men, view the subject in another manner. But alas! the evils, which are allowed and pleaded for, by many who profess to be 'the holy seed,' may well excite our astonishment as well as deep regret: and we ought to show our abhorrence of their abominations in the most earnest and decided manner. When this is done by those who are had in reputation for piety or wisdom, it will excite the attention of others, and cause them to tremble at the words of God, because of the transgression of the people: and this will produce greater watchfulness, lead to self-examination and humiliation, and subserve the purposes of reformation. SCOTT.

Roberts, 'in great distress, tear out their long hair.' Comp. notes, Gen. 50:10, &c. ED.

Verses 6—9.

Increased over our head . . . grown up unto the heavens.] Similar expressions are noted by Roberts, as still in use in India; he observes also that to 'lighten the eyes' (v. 8.) signifies to give comfort, to strengthen, to refresh. ID.

(6.) Ezra was not personally guilty in this matter: but he spake and acted, as the representative and the mouth of the whole people; being a member, and in some respects the head, of that body which had thus violated the covenant of God. (Dan. 9:3—20.) He came to establish the civil and ecclesiastical state of the nation, 'according to the good hand of his God upon him;' and he was ashamed and blushed, when he considered the rebellious and ungrateful conduct of that people, whose cause he had to plead continually before the Lord. The people, it may be supposed, persuaded themselves, that as they were free from idolatry, and adhered to the worship at the temple, all was very well and commendable among them; that their deviations as to these marriages were excusable, if not justifiable by necessity or policy; and that on the whole they might expect the favor and protection of God. (Rom. 7:9—12.) But the vehement language of this eminent man was well suited to give them a very different view of the case; and to convince them that they were abominable in the sight of God, and in danger of his severest vengeance: and it loudly called on them all, especially the criminals, to humble themselves before God in deep repentance.—Grown up unto the heavens.] 'This signifies . . . the high presumption and insolence of their wickedness.' Patrick. SCOTT.

(8.) A remnant of the Jews had now occupied Jerusalem and Judea for nearly 80 years; having thus had a revival, for a comparatively little space from the state of national death, as it were, which had continued during the captivity. (Ez. 37:11—14.) 'A nail given them in the LORD's holy place,' seems to signify, that the rebuilding of the temple formed a sure ground of confidence in the Lord, whilst they adhered to his service, and rested all their hopes and dependence on Him. (M. R.) ID.

Nail.] 'They do not drive with a hammer the nails or pegs that are placed in eastern walls, but they fix them with the brick work as they are building. They are usually large, with square heads, like dice, well made, the ends being bent so as to make them cramp-irons.' [See note on Isa. 22: 23—25.] CHARDIN.

(9.) A wall, &c.] The temple, being the pledge of God's presence among them, was as a wall, by which the Jews were effectually secured from their enemies; unless they provoked Him to desert them. Jerusalem was not at this time surrounded with a wall. (Neh. 1:3. 2.12—16. 3: 4:1—3 Dan. 9:24—27.) 'The Heb. (gader) doth not properly signify a wall, but a hedge or fence, such as were made for the folds of sheep. Whereby Ezra expresses (as Huetius well notes,) the singular care of God of them; who being "the Shepherd of Israel," tended mercy unto us [k] in the sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, [l] to set up the house of our God, and to [*] repair the desolations thereof, and to give us [m] a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem.

10 And now, O our God, [n] what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments,

11 Which thou hast commanded [†] by thy servants the prophets, saying, [o] The land unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with [p] the filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it from [‡] one end to another with their uncleanness.

12 Now therefore [q] give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, [r] nor seek their peace, or their wealth for ever; [s] that ye may be strong, [t] and eat the good of the land, [u] and leave it for an inheritance to your children for ever.

13 And [x] after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God § hast punished us [y] less than our iniquities deserve, and [z] hast given us such deliverance as this;

14 Should [a] we again break thy commandments, and [b] join in affinity with the people of these abominations, [c] wouldest not thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be [d] no remnant nor escaping?

15 O LORD God of Israel, [e] thou art righteous; for we remain yet escaped, as it is this day: behold, we are before thee [f] in our trespasses; for [g] we cannot stand before thee because of this.

CHAP. X.

The people weep with Ezra, 1. Shechaniah proposes that the people should divorce their heathen wives, and encourages Ezra to attempt this; who requires the priests, and others, to engage by oath so to do, 2—5. By proclamation he assembles the people, who promise to comply, 6—14. The measure is regularly carried into execution, 15—17. The names of those who put away their strange wives, 18—44.

NOW [a] when Ezra had prayed, and [b] when he had confessed,

k 1:1—4,7—11. 6:1—12. 7:6,11—28.
l 6:14,15. Hag. 1:9. Zech. 4:6—10.
* Heb. set up.
m Is. 5:5. Dan. 9:25. Zech. 2:5.
n Gen. 44:16. Josh. 7:8. Lam. 3:22. Dan. 9:4—16. Rom. 3:19.
† Heb. by the hand of.
o 1. Lev. 18:24—30. Deut. 12:31. 18: 12. 2 Chr. 33:2. p 6:21. Ez. 35:25—27. 2 Cor. 7:1.
‡ Heb. mouth to mouth. marg.
q Ex. 34:16. Deut. 7:3. Josh. 23:12,13. r Deut. 23:6. 2 Chr. 19:2. 2 Jc 10:11.
s Deut. 6:1,2. Josh. 1:6—9.
t Is. 1:19.
u Gen. 13:18,19. Ps. 112:1,2. Prov. 13:22. 20:7.
x Neh. 9:32. Ez. 24:13,14. Gal. 3:4.
§ Heb. hast withheld beneath our iniquities.
y Ps. 103:10. Lam. 3:22,39,40. Hab. 3:2.
z Ps. 106:45,46.
a John 5:14. Rom. 6:1. 2 Pet. 2:20,21.
b Ex. 23:32,33. Judg. 2:2. Neh. 13: 23—27. c Ex. 32:10. Num. 16:21,45. Deut. 9: 8:14.
d 8. Deut. 32:26,27. Is. 1:9. Jer. 46: 28. Ez. 6:8.
e Neh. 9:33,34. Dan. 9:7—11. Rom. 10:3.
f Is. 64:6,7. Ez. 33:10. Zech. 3:3,4. 1 Cor. 15:17.
g Job 9:2,3. Ps. 130:3. 143:2. Rom. 3:19—22. a Dan. 9:3,4,20. Acts 10:30.
b Lev. 26:40,41. Ps. 32:5. Hos. 14:2. 1 John 1:8—10.

3. He speaks as one much assured of the righteousness of God, and resolved to acquiesce in that, and to leave the matter with Him, whose judgment is according to the truth v. 1 5. We have nothing to say, nothing to do, but to make supplication to our Judge, Job 9: 15. Thus does this good man lay his grief before God, and then leave it with Him.

CHAP. X. V. 1—5. In this ch. we have the grievance redressed, which was complained of,

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 6—15. Whatever may afflict our hearts, we must not yield to inactive despondency, but arise from our heaviness, to spread our sorrows before the Lord, with humble and reverent devotion. —In confessing the sins of churches, or nations, all who form a part of them should bear a share: for every individual has, one way or other, added his transgressions to the aggregate of guilt: and all are interested in the event, and stand related to such as have committed those crimes, from which they have been preserved.—We should endeavor to affect ourselves and others with the greatness and heinousness of our sins: for often, when we think little of our transgressions, they have grown up even to the heavens, and are ready to overwhelm us with the vengeance of the Almighty.—National guilt accumulates from age to age, whilst children copy the iniquities of their fathers. Hence spring all our miseries: yet the Lord 'punishes us less than our iniquities deserve;' and no past or present sufferings will exempt us from greater in future, unless 'we repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance:' casting ourselves wholly upon the mercy of God, through the atoning blood of the Redeemer. SCOTT.

had . . . brought them back into their ancient folds, wherein He preserved them safe, even when they had no wall to defend them, under the powerful protection of the king of Persia.' Patrick. SCOTT.

Verses 10—12.

(M. R.) Nor seek their peace, &c. (12) The Israelites might seek the conversion of the heathen, or do them acts of common humanity: but they must not unite interests with them, nor seek their peace or prosperity in the land of Canaan, whilst they continued idolaters. (Josh. 23:11—13, v. 13.) ID.

Verse 15.

Though the Jews had endured many and heavy sufferings, yet they had been punished less than they deserved; for they had broken their covenant, and merited utter ruin. (13. Lam. 3:21—23.) Whatever therefore should hereafter befall them, the Lord would be righteous in his dealing with them: and if they were yet spared, it would be entirely the effect of his mercy.—Thus Ezra closed his address, without adding one petition to his humble confessions. He knew not what to say, to ask, or to do. He could say nothing to excuse his people; he was sure they could not stand in judgment before God. He dreaded the consequences; yet he had not given up all hopes. His own mind was affected, and his manner could scarcely fail to affect others: and by this abrupt conclusion, as one who was assured that the righteous Lord would do what was right, he referred the whole matter to Him, to do what was good in his sight. (10:1. 2. Josh. 7:6—9. 2 Sam. 24: 12—14.) SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. X. V. 1. Casting himself down.] 'So the Hindoos, even of the highest rank, do not hesitate thus to prostrate themselves in [c] weeping and casting himself down [d] before the house of God, there assembled unto him out of Israel [e] a very great congregation of men, and women, and children: for the people wept * very sore.

2 And [f] Shechaniah the son of Jehiel, one of the sons of [g] Elam, answered and said unto Ezra, [h] We have trespassed against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land: [i] yet now there is hope in Israel concerning this thing.

3 Now therefore [k] let us make a covenant with our God to † put away all the wives, and such as are born of them, [l] according to the counsel of my lord, and [m] of those that tremble [n] at the commandment of our God; and [o] let it be done according to the law.

4 [p] Arise; [q] for this matter belongeth unto thee: [r] we also will be with thee: [s] be of good courage, and do it.

5 Then [t] arose Ezra, and [u] made the chief priests, the Levites, and all Israel, to swear that they should do according to this word. And they sware.

6 ¶ Then Ezra rose up from before the house of God, and went into [x] the chamber of [y] Johanan the son of Eliashib: and when he came thither, [z] he did eat no bread, nor drink water: for [a] he mourned because of the transgression of them that had been carried away.

7 And [b] they made proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem unto all the children of the captivity, that they should gather themselves together unto Jerusalem;

8 And [c] that whosoever would not come within three days, according to the counsel of the princes and the elders, all his substance should be forfeited, and himself separated from the congregation of those that had been carried away.

9 Then all the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered themselves together unto Jerusalem within three days. It was the ninth month, on the twentieth day of the month; and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, trembling because of this matter, and for the great rain.

10 And Ezra the priest stood up, and said unto them, Ye have transgressed, and have taken strange wives, to increase the trespass of Israel.

11 Now therefore make confession unto the LORD God of your fathers, and do his pleasure: and separate yourselves from the people of the land, and from the strange wives.

12 Then all the congregation answered and said with a loud voice, As thou hast said, so must we do.

13 But the people are many, and it is a time of much rain, and we are not able to stand without, neither is this a work of one day or two: for we are many that have transgressed in this thing.

14 Let now our rulers of all the congregation stand, and let all them which have taken strange wives in our cities come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the judges thereof, until the fierce wrath of our God for this matter be turned from us.

15 Only Jonathan the son of Asahel and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah were employed about this matter: and Meshullam and Shabbethai the Levite helped them.

16 And the children of the captivity did so. And Ezra the priest, with certain chief of the fathers, after the house of their fathers, and all of them by their names, were separated, and sat down in the first day of the tenth month to examine the matter.

17 And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month.

18 And among the sons of the priests there were found that had taken strange wives: namely, of the sons of Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren; Maaseiah, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Gedaliah.

19 And they gave their hands that they would put away their wives; and being guilty, they offered a ram of the flock for their trespass.

20 And of the sons of Immer; Hanani, and Zebadiah.

21 And of the sons of Harim; Maaseiah, and Elijah, and Shemaiah, and Jehiel, and Uzziah.

22 And of the sons of Pashur; Elioenai, Maaseiah, Ishmael, Nethaneel, Jozabad, and Elasah.

23 Also of the Levites; Jozabad, and Shimei, and Kelaiah, (the same is Kelita,) Pethahiah, Judah, and Eliezer.

24 Of the singers also; Eliashib: and of the porters; Shallum, and Telem, and Uri.

25 Moreover of Israel: of the sons of Parosh; Ramiah, and Jeziah, and Malchiah, and Miamin, and Eleazar, and Malchijah, and Benaiah.

26 And of the sons of Elam; Mattaniah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, and Abdi, and Jerimoth, and Elijah.

27 And of the sons of Zattu; Elioenai, Eliashib, Mattaniah, and Jerimoth, and Zabad, and Aziza.

28 Of the sons also of Bebai; Jehohanan, Hananiah, Zabbai, and Athlai.

29 And of the sons of Bani; Meshullam, Malluch, and Adaiah, Jashub, and Sheal, and Jerimoth.

30 And of the sons of Pahath-moab; Adna, and Chelal, Benaiah, Maaseiah, Mattaniah, Bezaleel, and Binnui, and Manasseh.

31 And of the sons of Harim; Eliezer, Ishijah, Malchiah, Shemaiah, Shimeon, 32 Benjamin, Malluch, Shemariah.

33 Of the sons of Hashum; Mattenai, Mattathah, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jeremai, Manasseh, Shimei.

34 Of the sons of Bani; Maadai, Amram, and Uel,

35 Benaiah, Bedeiah, Chelluh,

36 Vaniah, Meremoth, Eliashib,

37 Mattaniah, Mattenai, and Jaasau,

38 And Bani, and Binnui, Shimei,

39 And Shelemiah, and Nathan, and Adaiah,

40 Machnadebai, Shashai, Sharai,

41 Azareel, and Shelemiah, Shemariah,

42 Shallum, Amariah, Joseph.

43 Of the sons of Nebo; Jeiel, Mattithiah, Zabad, Zebina, Jadau, and Joel, Benaiah.

44 All these had taken strange wives: and some of them had wives by whom they had children.

---

[c] Ps. 119:136. Jer. 9:1. 13:17. Zech. 12:10. Luke 19:41. Rom. 9:2.
[d] 1 K. 8:30. 9:3. 2 Chr. 20:9.
[e] Deut. 31:12. 2 Chr. 20:13. Neh. 10: 28. Joel 2:16—18. Acts 21:5.
* Heb. a great weeping. Judg. 2:4,5 Neh. 8:9.
[f] 26. Neh. 3:29.
[g] 2:7,31. Neh. 7:12,34.
[h] Ex. 34:12. Neh. 13:27.
[i] Ex. 34:6,7. Is. 55:6,7. Jer. 3:12,13. 1 John 1:7—9.
[k] 2 K. 11:17. 2 Chr. 29:10. 34:31,32. Neh. 9:38. 10:29,&c.
[l] Heb. bring forth.
[m] 2 Chr. 30:12.
[n] 9:4. 2 Chr. 34:21,27. Ps. 119:59, 120. Is. 66:2. Ez. 9:4.
[o] Deut. 7:2,3. Josh. 23:12,13. Neh. 8:14. 13:1—3. Is. 8:20.
[p] Josh. 7:10,&c. 1 Chr. 22:16,19. Ez. 9:10.
[q] Mark 13:34.
[r] Josh. 1:13—18. 1 Chr. 28:10,21.
[s] Is. 35:3,4. Heb. 10:4. 12:12,13.
[t] Prov. 1:5. 9:9. 15:22a. 25:11,12. 27:9.
[u] 3. Neh. 5:12. 10:29. 13:25. Matt. 26:63.
[x] Neh. 13:5.
[y] Neh. 3:1,20. 12:10,22. 13:28.
[z] Deut. 9:18. Job 23:12. John 4:31—34.
[a] 9:4. Is. 22:12. Dan. 9:3.
[b] 1:1. 2 Chr. 30:5.
[c] 7:26. Judg. 21:5. 1 Sam. 11:7.

---

the dust.' [Note 9:3.] 'How often do you see a man with his face in the dust, pouring out his complaint, or making his request to the gods, heedless of any about him.' ROBERTS.

Verse 3.

(M. R.—To put away, &c.] This is not any where expressly commanded in the law; yet the spirit of the precept seemed to require it. (9:1—4. Ex. 34:11—17. Josh. 23:11—13, v. 13. Neh. 13:23—30.) The prohibition of marriages with idolaters was given to prevent temptations to idolatry: and retaining an idolatrous wife formed a continual temptation. Divorces were permitted to the Israelites, by the judicial law, to prevent worse consequences: but the seducing of a man to idolatry was the worst consequence imaginable. This measure would also tend to prevent the contracting of such marriages in future. 'That which was done contrary to the law of God, was looked upon as null, and therefore these were accounted no marriages; and their children . . . were not to be a part of the family, but to be put away with their mothers. . . . Being educated in superstition, they might corrupt other children.' Patrick. It is probable, however, that none were put away, but such as continued idolaters; and that they were provided for out of the estates of those who divorced them. It does not appear, whether the children were generally sent away with their mothers, or not: but doubtless such were provided for, as were not admitted into the congregation of the Lord. (Note, 10, 11.) Under the N. T. the marriages of believers with ungodly persons are evidently sinful, and of very bad consequence: yet when contracted they must not be dissolved. The partition-wall between Jews and Gentiles is broken down; such matters are determined by the municipal laws of every country; and divorces, except for adultery, are expressly disallowed (Matt. 5:31, 32. 19 3—9. Mark 10 2—12. 1 Cor. 7:10—16.) SCOTT.

Verses 7, 8.

M. R.—All his substance, &c. (8) (M. Notes, Lev. 27:28, 29. Josh. 6:17—19.) 'In Heb. devoted, which signifies, that his goods were to be so forfeited, as to become sacred to God; and so incapable to be restored to the former owner, being put into the treasury of God's house.' Patrick.—Doubtless, reasonable excuses would be admitted: and the punishment was only inflicted on the refractory, and those who showed a determination to oppose the measure. Ezra was authorized to punish such persons more severely; (7:26.) but he was not cording to the counsel of the princes and the elders, all his substance should be *forfeited, and [d] himself separated from the congregation of those that had been carried away.

[Practical Observations.]

9 ¶ Then all the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered themselves together unto Jerusalem within three days. It was [e] the ninth month, and the twentieth day of the month: and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, [f] trembling because of this matter, and for the † great rain.

10 And Ezra the priest stood up, and said unto them, Ye have transgressed, and have ‡ taken strange wives, [g] to increase the trespass of Israel.

11 Now therefore [h] make confession unto the LORD God of your fathers, and [i] do his pleasure; and [k] separate yourselves from the people of the land, [l] and from the strange wives.

12 Then all the congregation answered and said with a loud voice, As thou hast said, [m] so must we do.

13 But [n] the people are many, and it is a time of much rain, and we are not able to stand without; neither is this a work of one day or two: for § we are many that have transgressed in this thing.

14 Let now [o] our rulers of all the congregation stand, and let all them which have taken strange wives in our cities come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the judges thereof, until [p] the fierce wrath of our God ‖ for this matter be turned from us.

15 Only Jonathan the son of Asahel and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah were employed about this matter: and [q] Meshullam and [r] Shabbethai the Levite helped them.

16 And the children of the captivity did so. And Ezra the priest, with certain chief of the fathers, after the house of their fathers, and all of them by their names, were separated, and sat down in the first day of the tenth month [s] to examine the matter.

17 And they made an end with all the men B. C. 458. that had taken strange wives, by the first day of the first month.

18 ¶ And among [t] the sons of the priests there were found that had taken strange wives; namely, of the sons of [u] Jeshua, the son of Jozadak, and his brethren; [x] Maaseiah, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Gedaliah.

19 And they [y] gave their hands that they would put away their wives; and being guilty, they offered [z] a ram of the flock for their trespass.

20 And of the sons of [b] Immer, Hanani, and Zebadiah.

21 And of the sons of [c] Harim; Maaseiah, and Elijah, and Shemaiah, and Jehiel, and Uzziah.

22 And of the sons of [d] Pashur; Elioenai, Maaseiah, Ishmael, Nathaneel, Jozabad, and Elasah.

23 Also of the Levites; [e] Jozabad and Shemei, and Kelaiah, (the same is [f] Kelita,) Pethahiah, Judah, and Eliezer.

24 Of the singers also; Eliashib: and of the porters; Shallum, and Telem, and Uri.

25 Moreover of Israel: of the sons of [g] Parosh; Ramiah, and Jeziah, and Malchiah, and Miamin, and Eleazar, and Malchijah, and Benaiah.

26 And of the sons of [h] Elam; Mattaniah, Zechariah, and [i] Jehiel, and Abdi, and Jeremoth, and Eliah.

27 And of the sons of

* Heb. devoted. Lev. 27:28. Josh. 6:19.
d Neh. 13:3. Matt. 18:17. John 9: 22,34. 16:2. 1 Cor. 5:13. e 7:8,9. Esth. 2:16.
f 1 Sam. 12:17,18. Jer. 10:10,13.
† Heb. showers.
‡ Heb. caused to dwell, or brought back.
g 9:6. Num. 32:14. Josh. 22:17,18. 2 Chr. 28:13. Matt. 23:32.
h Lev. 26:40—42. Josh. 7:19. Ps. 32: 5. Prov. 28:13. Jer. 3:13. 1 John 1:7—9.
i Is. 1:16—18. 55:4. Rom. 12:2. Col. 1:10. Heb. 13:21. k 9:1. Neh. 13:3. 2 Cor. 6:17.
l Deut. 7:3,4. 1 Cor. 2:12—14.
m 3,4. Neh. 13:23. Ps. 78:37,57.
n 18—44. Matt. 7:13,14.
§ Or, we have greatly offended.
o Deut. 17:9,18,19. 2 Chr. 19:5—7.
p Num. 25:4. Deut. 13:17. Josh. 7: 26. 2 Chr. 29:10. Ps. 78:38. Is. 12:1.
‖ Or, be turned from us, till this matter be despatched.
¶ Heb. stood.
q Neh. 3:6. 10:20. 12:33.
r Neh. 11:16.
s Deut. 13:14. Job 29:16.
t 9:1. Lev. 21:7,13—15. 1 Sam. 2:22 —24. Neh. 13:28. Jer. 23:11,14. Ez. 44:22. Mal. 2:8,9. 1 Tim. 3:11. u See on 2:2. 3:2.—5:2. 1 Chr. 6:14, 15. Neh. 12:10. Hag. 1:1. Zech. 3:1. Joshua.
x Neh. 8:4,7.
y 2 K. 10:15. 1 Chr. 29:24. 2 Chr. 30: 8. Marg. Lam. 5:6. Gal. 2:9.
z Lev. 5:16. 6:6.
b 2:37. 1 Chr. 24:14. Neh. 7:40.
c 2:39. 1 Chr. 24:8. Neh. 7:42.
d 2:38. 1 Chr. 9:12. Neh. 7:41.
e 8:33. Neh. 11:16.
f Neh. 10:10.
g 2:3. Neh. 7:8.
h 2. 2:7,31. 8:7. Neh. 7:12,34.
i 2.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—8. Genuine humiliation before God, and sorrow for sin, always produce 'works meet for repentance.' In order to affect others with godly sorrow and hatred of sin, or holy love and gratitude, we must ourselves be greatly affected.—We cannot too solemnly engage ourselves and each other, to renounce all interests, connections, or indulgences, which are contrary to the law of God. And when leading men set the example, and then propose the same things to others, many may be prevailed on by conviction, fear, or shame: and thus opposition will be prevented, or rendered ineffectual.—Excessive sorrow, terror, and self-abasement; and a great engagement of heart about the things of God and the eternal world, indispose us to animal recreation: so that fasting then becomes a natural expression of our feelings, as well as a suitable concomitant of our prayers and supplications.—Fervent affections should not be allowed to subside, till our most beloved sins have been renounced; and we should 'know no man after the flesh,' when a revival of pure religion is attempted. (2 Cor. 5: 16.) SCOTT.

disposed to put any one to death, if it could be avoided. SCOTT.

Verse 9.

For the great rain.] The periodical rains, common at that season, seem to have been more abundant than usual. (Jer. 3.2, 3.) ID.

Trembling.] 'On court days, in Hindostan, during a wet monsoon, the half-naked people sit huddled together under the nearest tree, trembling [shivering] for the great rain.' ROBERTS. 'The 9th month answered to our December; this is the coldest and most rainy part of the year in Palestine.' [Note, Ex. 12:2] Dr. A. CLARKE.

Verses 16, 17.

The cases, brought before the council, were either so many, or so complicated; that, though they separated themselves from other employments, to attend on this exclusively, they were 3 months in finishing it. This took place just a year after Ezra left Babylon. SCOTT.

Verses 18, 19.

No doubt Jeshua died many years before this transaction: (Note, 7: 1—5.) but his descendants had set a very pernicious example to the people. They, however, were the first to confess and forsake their sin, and also to present a trespass-offering on that account; 'which some think, all the rest made, after their example.' Patrick. (M. R.) ID.

[k] Zattu; Elioenai, Eliashib, Mattaniah, and Jeremoth, and Zabad, and Aziza.

28 Of the sons also of [l] Bebai; Jehohanan, Hananiah, Zabbai, and Athlai.

29 And of the sons of [m] Bani; Meshullam, [n] Malluch, and Adaiah, Jashub, and Sheal, and Ramoth.

30 And of the sons of [o] Pahath-Moab; Adna, and Chelal, Benaiah, Maaseiah, Mattaniah, Bezaleel, and Binnui, and Manasseh.

31 And of the sons of [p] Harim; Eliezer, Ishijah, [q] Malchiah, Shemaiah, Shimeon, 32 Benjamin, Maluch, and Shemariah.

33 Of the sons of [r] Hashum; Mattenai, Mattathah, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jeremai, Manasseh, and Shimei.

34 Of the sons of [s] Bani; Maadai, Amram, and Uel,

35 Benaiah, Bedeiah, Chelluh,

36 Vaniah, Meremoth, Eliashib,

37 Mattaniah, Mattenai, and Jaasau,

38 And Bani, and Binnui, Shimei,

39 And Shelemiah, and Nathan, and Adaiah,

40 * Machnadebai, Shashai, Sharai,

41 Azareel, and Shelemiah, Shemariah,

42 Shallum, Amariah, and Joseph.

43 Of the sons of [t] Nebo; Jeiel, Mattithiah, Zabad, Zebina, Jadau, and Joel, Benaiah.

44 All these had taken [u] strange wives: and some of them had wives by whom they had children.

each in his respective place might gain and give intelligence, to facilitate the matter; we see here,

1. Who undertook to manage the matter, and bring the cause regularly before the commissioners; Jonathan and Jahaziah, probably, the men that made that proposal; (v. 13, 14.) two honest Levites were joined with, and helped them, v. 15. Lightfoot gives a contrary sense of this; Only (or nevertheless) they stood against this matter, (which reading, the original will very well bear,) and these two Levites helped them, in opposing it, either the thing itself, or this method of proceeding. It was strange, if a work of this kind was carried on, and met with no opposition.

2. Who sat as commissioners; Ezra the president, and certain chiefs of the fathers qualified with wisdom and zeal, above others, v. 16.

3. How long they were; they began, the 1*st day of the* 10*th month*, (v. 16.) but 10 days after this method was proposed, (v. 9.) and finished in 3 months, v. 17. They sat close, and minded their business, otherwise they could not have despatched so many causes, in so little time. If we may judge by other cases, provided the wife were proselyted, she was not to be put away; the trial of which would require great care.

4. The guilty are here recorded to their perpetual reproach, v. 18—44. They promised under their hand to put away their strange wives; sware it with their hands lifted up, so some. They took the appointed way of obtaining pardon, Lev. 6: 6.

About 113 in all are here named, who had married strange wives, and some, it is said, (v. 44.) had children by them, which implies that not many had, God not crowning those marriages with the blessing of increase. Whether the children were turned off with the mothers, as Shechaniah proposed, does not appear: it should seem not. it is, however, probable the wives put away were well provided for, [as was but just,] according to their rank. One would think this grievance was now thoroughly redressed, yet we meet with it again, Neh. 13: 22. and Mal. 2: 11. for such corruptions are easily and insensibly brought in, but not without great difficulty purged out again. The best reformers can but do their endeavor; but when the Redeemer Himself shall come to Sion, He shall effectually turn away ungodliness from Jacob.

k 2:8. Neh. 7:13.
l 2:11. 8:11. Neh. 7:16.
m 2:10. Neh. 7:15. Binnui.
n Neh. 10:4.
o 2:6. 8:4. Neh. 7:11.
p 2:32. Neh. 7:35.
q Neh. 3:11. Malchijah.
r 2:19. Neh. 7:22.
s 29.
* Or, Mahnadebai, according to some copies.
t 2:29. Neh. 7:33.
u Prov. 2:16. 5:3,20.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 9—44. The most effectual divorce from lucrative or beloved sins, is generally preceded by examination and deliberation: for that which is hastily resolved, seldom proves durable.—When sin is repented of and forsaken, God will mercifully forgive: but the blood of Christ, our Sin-offering, is the only atonement which takes away the guilt of it: and all the names written in the Book of Life, are those of penitent, believing sinners; not of the self-righteous who think they have no need of repentance. SCOTT.

V. 44. Perhaps these were the principal persons, who were criminal; for all circumstances combine to induce an opinion, that a far greater number were concerned, than those here expressed by name.—Ezra continued nearly twelve years after this in authority at Jerusalem, no doubt zealously laboring to promote a revival of true religion. And in many ways, he established the ecclesiastical state of the Jews: though he seems not to have been so well qualified, as his successor Nehemiah, to attend to the civil government, to defend the city and state against enemies and invaders, and to effect outward reformation by the authority of the magistrate. So he is introduced in Nehemiah, as well employed in his proper line, though superseded by Nehemiah in his civil authority. (I Sam. 12:23. Neh. 8: 1—8.) SCOTT.

CONCLUDING NOTES. 'Ezra is said to have lived to the age of 120 yrs. the precise age of Moses (Deut. 34:7.); and his memory is held in almost equal reverence, by his grateful countrymen. [Indeed they call this great patriot, 'the second Moses.'] He, in fact, rendered them the most lasting services: for, beside conducting them back to their beloved country, and superintending the building of the temple, 1. He corrected, says Calmet, the errors which had crept into the sacred writings, from the negligence, or misapprehension, of transcribers. 2. He carefully collected all the books of which the Holy Scripture then consisted. 3. He occasionally added what appeared to him necessary to illustrate, connect, or complete them. 4. He changed the former names of some places, which were in his time become obsolete, and substituted the modern; and 5. He is said to have transcribed the whole of the Hebrew Scriptures in the Chaldee character, to render them more intelligible to the people at large. See also Prideaux, Part 1. Book 5. [Dr. Alexander, Canon of SS. and note on Canon of SS. at end of Mal.]' HEWLETT.

From the labors of Champollion, Grotefend, and Saint-Martin, we are now enabled to give in the cut below, several of the names of Persian kings mentioned in the SS. (if not all,) in the language of the Medes, the ancient Zend. This, Grotefend makes to have 3 wedge-shaped alphabets, (of the Zend, Pehlvi, and Babylonian dialects, respectively; Heeren,) all found at Persepolis, see below.—In the cut, the inscriptions, 1, 2, 3, 4, are in the 1st, most simple, and probably most ancient alphabet; this Heeren thinks to have 'originated in Media, where the Zend language, and Zoroastrism flourished; but, as the Babylon bricks, themselves of remote antiquity, have these wedge-shaped inscriptions, [cut, Gen. xi. 3.] we feel equally disposed to attribute to them an Aramæan origin. In all probability, too, the writing the Greeks and Persians termed Assyrian, was no other than the wedge-shaped.'... 'The orientalists of Germany and France,' says Heeren, (1833) 'have received Grotefend's method [i. e. his alphabet of the character, given in part in the cut] with approbation.' The inscription numbered (1) in the cut, is part of one, found on a pillar, near Murghab, whose ruins Grotefend considers, with Morier, to be the site of Pasargada. It runs thus, Edo (Lord) KUSRUESH (Cyrus, Heb. Kurs, Koresh, Sept. Kuros, Kyros) KSHEHION (king) AKHEOTSHOSHOH (Ruler of the world.) Their ignorance of geography, led such nomade conquerors as Cyrus, Jenghis Khan, &c. aspiring to universal conquest, to use this title. No. 2, is from a monument at Persepolis; the whole inscription runs thus; DARHEUSH (Darius, Heb. Drush, Dariavesh, Sept. Dareios,) K——H (king) EGHRE (powerful, &c.) GOSHTASHPAHE (of Hystaspes) BUN (stirps, progeny) AKHEOTSHOS HOH. 'King Darius, son of Hystaspes, Ruler of the world.' No. 4, is the name of Xerxes in the 1st alphabet; No. 7, his name in the 2d alphabet; No. 8, his name in a Persepolitan alphabet thought to be still more modern. Grotefend thus reads an inscription from Persepolis, given by Niebuhr; KSCHERSCHE * (cut, 4,) Xerxes, (Champ. found the inscriptions 5, and 6, on an Egyptian alabaster vase; he reads them KHSCHEARSCHA. and this seems to have been the key to the deciphering of the Persepolitan alphabets.) KHSCHEHION (king) EGHRE (powerful, valiant) KHSCHEHION KHSCHEHIOTCH, (cut, 3, king of kings. (Ezra, vii. 12. &c.) Shah in shah, the modern title also of the Persian kings) A. O. (filius ?) DARHEAUSCH KHSCHEHIOHAHE (of king Darius) BUN (successor) AKHEOTCHOSCHOH (of the sovereign of the world.) ED.

* If the third character in the name of Xerxes, (Ksher-she,) and the 4th in that of Darius (Da-re-ush) be a sign to determine the pronunciation; one might imagine the aspirate to be changed, after certain consonants, into w or y, so that the two names would read Kshwereshe and Daryeush or Daryeoesh: a supposition which may serve to explain how the Hebrews, like the Egyptians, by placing an a before each word commencing with two silent consonants, in order to facilitate the pronunciation, as the French would employ an e for the same purpose, might easily change the name of Xerxes into Ahshvresh, Ahhashveresh, and Darius into Dryush, Daryavesh. In all probability, the Persian name of Xerxes might contain the sound of w, omitted by the Greeks for want of a corresponding sign, as in the case of Araxes for Worokeshe or Warakshe; such at least might be gathered from the different ways of spelling this name, i. e. if we admit the Gr. words Assoueros, Axuares, Oxuartes, and Axares (in Kuaxares) to be nothing more than different modifications of (Gr.) Xerxes, just as (Gr.) Artoxares, Artaxares, and Artaxastes, are of (Gr.) Artoxerxes, or Artaxerxes, (in Zend, Artakhshethr, in Pehlvi, Artaxshir, Pers. Ardeshir, Arab. Azdeshir, [Heb. Artachsastha, Arthachshashtha, Egyptian (so Wilkinson) Artkheshes,]), with the initial Art or Ard, (strenuus, magnus, fortitudine polleus, Herod.)' Grotefend.

AN EXPOSITION,

WITH

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS, AND NOTES,

UPON THE BOOK OF

NEHEMIAH.

THIS book continues the history of the children of the captivity; the poor Jews lately returned to their own land. At this time, not only the Persian monarchy flourished, in great pomp and power, but Greece and Rome began to be very great, and make a figure. Of the affairs of those high and mighty states, we have authentic accounts extant, but the sacred and inspired history takes cognizance only of the state of the Jews, and makes no mention of other nations, but as the Israel of God had dealings with them; for the Lord's portion is his people, his peculiar treasure. In my esteem, Ezra the scribe, and Nehemiah the Tirshatha, though neither ever wore a crown, commanded an army, conquered any country, or were famed for philosophy or oratory, yet both being pious, praying men, and very serviceable in their day to the church of God and the interests of religion, were really greater men, and more honorable, not only than any of the Roman consuls or dictators, but than Xenophon, or Demosthenes, or Plato himself, who lived at the same time, the bright ornaments of Greece. Nehemiah's agency for advancing the settlement of Israel we have a full account of in this book of his own commentaries, or memoirs, wherein he records not only the works of his hands, but the workings of his heart, in the management of public affairs; inserting in the story many devout reflections and ejaculations, which discover in his mind a very deep tincture of serious piety, and are peculiar to his writings. Twelve yrs. he was governor of Judea, under Artaxerxes, from his 20th year, (ch. 1: 1.) to his 32d, ch. 13: 6. Lightfoot supposes this to be Artaxerxes from whom Ezra had his commission. Some call this the 2d book of Ezra, not because he was its penman, but because it is a continuation of the history of the foregoing book, with which it is connected, v. 1. This was the last historical book written, as Malachi the last prophetical book, of the O. T. HENRY.

This book resumes the history of the Jews, about 12 years after the close of the book of Ezra; and contains the latest canonical records of the nation till the days of Christ; reaching down to about 110 years after the captivity. It was evidently written by Nehemiah himself, who throughout speaks in the first person: and probably it was received among the canonical scriptures by Ezra and his assistants or successors.—Hearing of the distressed state of his countrymen, he, in great affliction, petitions Artaxerxes, king of Persia, for leave to go up to Jerusalem, as governor, with a commission to rebuild the walls, and to provide for the security and the prosperity of his people. Having obtained his request, he executes his commission for twelve years with great success. After this he returns to Artaxerxes, but at length comes back to Jerusalem; and employs various measures to promote the prosperity of the Jews, and the reformation of abuses.—His zeal, activity, and disinterestedness are well worthy of imitation; especially by such as are employed in arduous undertakings, for the good of the church or the community.—This book has many internal proofs of divine inspiration, and always has been considered by the Jews as a part of their sacred scriptures, and indeed as a continuation of the book of Ezra: it does not, however, seem to contain any prophecies, nor is it explicitly referred to in the N. T. SCOTT.

B. C. 446.

CHAP. I.

Nehemiah, being informed of the afflicted state of the Jews, mourns, fasts, and prays, 1—4. His prayer, 5—11.

THE words of [a] Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah. And it came to pass [b] in the month Chisleu, [c] in the twentieth year, as I was in Shushan the palace,

2 That [d] Hanani, one of my brethren, came, he and certain men of Judah; and [f] I asked them concerning the Jews [g] that had escaped,

a 10:1.
b Ezra 10:9. Zech. 7:1.
c Ezra 7:7.
d Esth. 1:2. 3:15. Dan. 8:2.
e 7:2.
f Ps. 122:6—9. 137:5,6.
g Ezra 9:8,9,14. Jer. 44:14. Ez. 6:9. 7:16. 24:26,27.

CHAP. I. V. 1—4. Here we first meet with Nehemiah at the Persian court. What tribe he was of, does not appear; but if it be true, (so 2 Mac. 1: 18.) that he offered sacrifice, we must conclude him a priest. We are here told he was in Shushan, the palace, or royal city, of the king of Persia, where the court was ordinarily kept, (v. 1, 11.) that he was the king's cup-bearer, a place of great trust, as well as of honor and profit. Kings and great men, probably, looked upon it as a piece of state to be attended by those of other nations. By being thus at court, 1. He would be the better qualified to serve his country, in that post for which God had designed him; as Moses was the fitter to govern, for being bred up in Pharaoh's court, and David in Saul's. 2. He would have the fairer opportunity to serve his country, by his interest in the king and those about him. Observe, he is not forward to tell of his preferment, and mentions it not till the end of the ch. when he could not avoid it, because of the following story; at first, he only says, I was in Shushan the palace; whence we may learn to be humble and modest, and slow to speak of our own advancements. But in the providences of God concerning him, we may observe, to our comfort, 1. That when God has work to do, He will never want instruments to do it with. 2. That those whom God designs to employ in his service, He will find out proper ways both to fit for it, and to call to it. 3. That God has his remnant in all places; we read of Obadiah in the house of Ahab, saints in Cæsar's household, and a devout Nehemiah in Shushan the palace. 4. That God can make the courts of princes sometimes nurseries, and sometimes sanctuaries, to the friends and patrons of the church's cause.

Now here we have,

I. Nehemiah's tender and compassionate inquiry concerning the state of the Jews in their own land, v. 2. It happened that a friend and relation of his came to the court with some other company, by whom he had an opportunity of informing himself fully how it went with the children of the captivity, and what posture Jerusalem, the beloved city, was in. Nehemiah lived at ease, in honor and fulness, but cannot forget he is an Israelite, nor shake off the thoughts of his brethren in distress, but, in spirit, (like Moses, Acts 7: 23.) visits them, and looks upon their burdens. Neither distance of place, nor dignity of station,

NOTES.

CHAP. I. V. 1. This book is here called, 'The words' (or, as it may be rendered, 'The actions') of 'Nehemiah,' i. e. the history of the services he performed to the Jewish church and state.—Tradition records, that he was of the tribe of Judah.—His father Hachaliah seems to have obtained a settlement in the city of Shushan, or Susa, [Map, vol. I. p. 64.] the capital of Persia, where the kings had a royal palace; and thus his son Nehemiah became cup-bearer to Artaxerxes: an office peculiarly desired by those who sought preferment, because it gave access to the king at those seasons of hilarity, when men are most disposed to grant favors.—It was the same Artaxerxes, who before commissioned Ezra. His station had hitherto prevented his going to Jerusalem. (Ezra 7:1—5.)—The month Chisleu coincides with part of our Nov. and part of Dec. [Note Ex. 12:2.]—20th year.] 2:1. Ezra 7:8. SCOTT.

Shushan.] In the province of Susiana, now Khusistan, 'between the rivers Shut el Arab and Tigris on the S. E. and S. the mountains of Louristan on the N. the Buchtiaree mts. on the N. E. and E. and the province of Fars on the S. E. The best part of it might become the granary of Persia: but oppression now makes it little better than a forsaken waste. Shuster, the capital, boasts of many magnificent remains, and has 15,000 inhabitants. Col. M. Kinneir rather rejects the opinion of some, that this was Shushan of the SS. and conceives that the remains of Shushan are found at Shus, a mass of ruins on the banks of the Kerah, or Karasu, which occupy an immense space between that river and the Abzal. These consist of heaps of rubbish, like those of Babylon, the whole being now a howling wilderness, the haunt of lions, hyenas, and other beasts of prey. Such is the condition of Elam and its stately capital." See Hist. of Pers. Edinb. Cab. Lib. ED.

which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem.

3 And they said unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity, there in [h] the province, are [i] in great affliction and [k] reproach: [l] the wall of Jerusalem also is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire.

4 And it came to pass, when I heard these words, that [m] I sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before [n] the God of heaven,

5 And said, I beseech thee, O LORD God of heaven, [o] the great and terrible God, that [p] keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him, and observe his commandments;

6 Let [q] thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, [r] day and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, and [s] confess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee: [t] both I and my father's house have sinned.

7 We have [u] dealt very [x] corruptly against thee, and have not [y] kept the commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which [z] thou commandedst [a] thy servant Moses.

8 [a] Remember, I beseech thee, the word that thou commandedst thy servant Moses, saying, [b] If ye transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations:

9 But [c] if ye turn unto me, and keep my commandments, and do them; though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, yet [d] will I gather them from thence, and [e] will bring them unto [f] the place that I have chosen to set my name there.

10 Now [g] these are thy servants and thy people, [h] whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy [i] strong hand.

11 O LORD, I beseech thee, [k] let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, [l] who desire to fear thy name; and prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and [m] grant him mercy in the sight of this man. For [n] I was the king's cup-bearer.

could alienate his affections from them. We should inquire, as he did, especially concerning the state of the church and religion; and the design of our inquiry must be, not, that, like the Athenians, we may have something to talk of, but that we may know how to direct our prayers, praises, and exertions.

II. The melancholy account of the Jews at Jerusalem, v. 3. Hanani has this character, (ch. 7: 2.) that he feared God above many, and therefore would not only speak truly, but, (when he spake of the desolations of Jerusalem,) tenderly. Probably his errand to court, at this time, was, to solicit some favor, or other, that they stood in need of. The account he gives, is, that the holy seed was miserably trampled on and abused, in great affliction and reproach, insulted on all occasions by their neighbors, and filled with the scorning of them that were at ease: that the holy city was exposed, and in ruins, the wall still broken down, and the gates, as the Chaldeans left them, in ruins. This made their condition both very despicable, under the abiding marks of poverty and slavery, and very dangerous, for their enemies might, when they pleased, make an easy prey of them. Every Jerusalem, this side the heavenly one, will have some defect or other in it, the making up of which will require the help and service of its friends.

III. The great affliction this gave Nehemiah, and the deep concern it put him into, v. 4. Note, The desolations and distresses of the church ought to be the matter of our grief, how much soever we live at ease. By his fasting and praying, he both consecrated his sorrows, and directed his tears aright; he eased his sorrows, and unburdened his spirit, by pouring out his complaint before God, and leaving it with Him: he took the right method of fetching in relief for his people, and direction for himself in what way to serve them. Let those who are forming any good designs for the service of the public, take God along with them, from the first conception of them, and utter all their projects before Him; that is the way to prosper in them.

V. 5—11. Nehemiah's prayer here has reference to all the prayers he had, for some time before, been putting up day and night, while he continued his sorrows for Jerusalem; and withal to the petition he was now intending to present to the king for his favor to Jerusalem. Observe in it,

I. His humble, reverent and dutiful address to God, v. 5. and general request, v. 6. It is much the same with Daniel's, ch. 9: 4. It teaches us to draw near to God, 1. With a holy awe of his majesty and glory; remembering that He is the God of heaven, infinitely above us, and sovereign Lord over us, whose powerful wrath all his enemies have reason to be afraid of: even the terrors of the Lord are improvable, for the comfort and encouragement of those that trust in Him. 2. With a holy confidence in his grace and truth, for He keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love Him; not only the mercy promised, but even more: nothing shall be thought too much to be done for them that love Him, and keep his commandments.

II. His penitent confession of sin; not only Israel, (it was no great mortification to him to own that,) but I and my father's house have sinned, v. 6. Thus does he humble, and take shame to, himself, v. 7. In confessing sin, let these two things be owned as its malignity, that it is a corruption of ourselves, and an affront to God; it is dealing corruptly against God; setting up the corruptions of our own hearts in opposition to the commands of God.

III. The pleas he urges for Israel.

1. What God had of old said to them, the rule He had settled of his proceedings toward them, h 7:6. 11:3. Ezra 2:1. 5:3. Esth. 1:1.

i 9:36,37. Ps. 44:11—14. Is. 32:9—14.
k 1 K. 9:7. Ps. 79:4. Is. 43:28. Jer. 24:9. 29:18. 42:18. 44:8—12.
l 2:17. 2 K. 25:10. Is. 5:5. Jer. 5:10. 39:8. 52:14.
m 1 Sam. 4:17—22. Ezra 10:1. Ps. 69: 9,10. 102:13,14. 137:1. Dan. 9:3. Zeph. 3:18. Rom. 12:15. n 2:4. Ezra 5:11,12. Dan. 2:18. Jon. 1:9.
o 4:14. Deut. 7:21. 1 Chr. 17:21. Ps. 47:2. Dan. 9:4. p Ex. 20:6. Deut. 7:9. 1 K. 8:23. Heb. 4:13—18.
q 1 K. 8:29,52. 2 Chr. 6:40. Ps. 34:15. 130:2. Dan. 9:17,18.
r 1 Sam. 15:11. Ps. 55:17. 88:1. Luke 2:37. 18:7. 1 Tim. 5:5. 2 Tim. 1:3. s Ezra 9:6,7. 10:1. Is. 64:6,7. Lam. 3:39—42. Dan. 9:4,20. t 2 Chr. 28:10. 29:6. Ps. 106:6. Is. 6:5. Lam. 5:7. Eph. 2:3.
u 60:29—35. Dan. 9:5,6.
x 2 Chr. 27:2. Hos. 9:9. Zeph. 3:7. Rev. 19:2.
y Lev. 27:34. Deut. 4:1. 5:1. 6:1. 1 K. 2:3. Ps. 19:8,9. 119:5—8.
z Deut. 4:5. 2 Chr. 25:4. Ezra 7:6. Dan. 9:11,13. Mal. 4:4.
a Ps. 119:49. Luke 1:72.
b Lev. 26:33. Deut. 4:25—27. 28:64. 32:26—28. 1 K. 9:6,7.
c Lev. 26:40—42. Deut. 4:29—31. 30: 2—5. Jer. 29:11—14.
d 1 Chr. 16:35. Ps. 106:47. Jer. 31: 10. 32:37. Matt. 24:31. e Jer. 3:14. Ez. 36:24.
f Deut. 12:5,21. 1 K. 9:3. Ezra 6:12.
g Ex. 32:11. Deut. 9:29. Is. 63:16—19. 64:9.
h Ex. 15:13. Deut. 15:15. Ps. 74:2.
i Ex. 6:1. 13:9. Ps. 136:12. Dan. 9: 15. k See on 6.—Ps. 130:2.
l Prov. 1:29. Is. 26:8,9. Heb. 13:18. m 2:8. Gen. 32:11,28. 43:14. Ezra 1: 1. 7:6,27,28. Prov. 21:1. n 2:1. Gen. 40:2,9—13,21,23. 41:9.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Eminent men of God may sometimes be found in situations, where they might be least expected: his grace will be sufficient for them, wherever his providence hast cast their lot: and it is seldom advisable to leave the place, where He has blessed us, without an evident call, or a substantial reason; even though we might remove into situations, apparently more favorable to our growth in grace.—The church militant is like the bush, which burned, but was not consumed, because the Lord was there: (Ex. 3: 2. P. O. 7—12.) afflictions and reproaches are its portion in this evil world: its enemies often presumptuously expect finally to prevail, and its friends, through unbelief, are sometimes ready to fear that they will. But, in the crisis, some unexpected help is afforded, and again it revives and flourishes. —If the believer have no more in his power, he may lift up his prayer without ceasing for the remnant that is left: and fasting joined with supplication may well express the believer's penitent sorrow for sin, sympathy with his afflicted brethren, distress to see the cause of God run down, and earnestness in seeking help from Him; so that he has no relish for common comforts and enjoyments. Such fervent, humble prayers have always been honored with signal prevalence and success.—In all our addresses, we must still come before God as sinners, pleading his gracious promises, and craving to be gathered into his church, and finally into heaven, the place where He displays those glories, which here, by faith, we feebly apprehend, love and adore. —May we endeavor to improve every talent, as those who are waiting for his coming; and never tarnish or defeat the success of our endeavors, by pride and self-confidence. May God grant us a spirit of simple dependence on his mercy and grace, united with zeal for his glory, and affection to his people. SCOTT.

Verse 3.

Ezra's commission, and his attention, had chiefly respected the state of religion, and the re-establishment of the Jewish church: and he was not empowered or enabled to fortify the city, or to repel hostile attempts: and probably the king never heard a full account of their injuries. SCOTT.

CHAP. II.

Artaxerxes, observing Nehemiah sad before him, asks the cause, 1, 2. Nehemiah is afraid, assigns the reason, prays, petitions the king, and obtains authority to rebuild the wall of Jerusalem, 3—8. He delivers the king's letters to the governors beyond the river; the enemies of the Jews are much grieved; and he arrives at Jerusalem, 9—11. He examines the state of the walls secretly by night, 12—16. He encourages the Jews to build, 17, 18. The scorn and menaces of their enemies, and his answer, 19, 20.

AND it came to pass, in the month [a] Nisan, and in [b] the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him: and [c] I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been beforetime sad in his presence.

2 Wherefore the king said unto me, [d] Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but [e] sorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid,

3 And said unto the king, [f] Let the king live for ever: why should not my countenance be sad, when [g] the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?

4 Then the king said unto me, [h] For what dost thou make request? [i] So I prayed to the God of heaven.

5 And I said unto the king, [k] If it please the king, and [l] if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it.

6 And the king said unto me, (the queen also sitting by him,) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? So it pleased the king to send me; and I set him a time.

7 Moreover I said unto the king, If it please the king, let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judah;

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertained to the house, and for the wall of the city, and for the house that I shall enter into. And the king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me.

9 Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave unto them the king's letters. Now the king had sent captains of the army and horsemen with me.

10 When Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, heard of it, it grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

11 So I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days.

12 And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me; neither told I any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem: neither was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon.

13 And I went out by the gate of the valley, even before the dragon well, and to the dung port, and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire.

14 Then I went on to the gate of the fountain, and to the king's pool: but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass.

15 Then went I up in the night by the brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by the gate of the valley, and so returned.

16 And the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did; neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the rest that did the work.

17 Then said I unto them, Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire: come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproach.

18 Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good work.

19 But when Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, and Geshem the Arabian, heard it, they laughed us to scorn, and despised us, and said, What is this thing that ye do? will ye rebel against the king?

20 Then answered I them, and said unto them, The God of heaven, he will prosper us; therefore we his servants will arise and build: but ye have no portion, nor right, nor memorial, in Jerusalem.

a Esth. 3:7.
b 1:1. Ezra 7:7.
c 1:11. Gen. 40:11,21.
d Gen. 40:7.
e Prov. 15:13.
f 1 K. 1:31. Dan. 2:4. 3:9. 5:10. 6:21.
g 1:3. Ps. 102:14. 137:6. Lam. 2:9.
h 1 K. 3:5. Esth. 5:3,6. 7:2. Mark 10:51. i 1:4,11. 2 Sam. 15:31. Prov. 3:6.
k Ezra 5:17. Esth. 1:19. 5:8. 7:3. 8:5. Ruth 2:13. 2 Sam. 14:22. Prov. 3:4.

which might be the rule of their expectations from Him, v. 8, 9. He had said indeed that, if they brake covenant with Him, He would scatter them among the nations, and that threatening was fulfilled in their captivity: never was people so widely dispersed as Israel was at this time, though at first so closely incorporated; but he had said withal, that if they turned to Him, (as now they began to do, having renounced idolatry and kept to the temple-service,) He would gather them again. This he quotes from Deut. 30: 1—5. and begs leave to put God in mind of it, as that which he guided his desires by, and grounded his faith and hope upon, in praying this prayer, v. 8. The covenant is often said to be commanded. If God were not more mindful of his promises, than we of his precepts, we were undone. Our best pleas therefore, in prayer, are taken from his promises, the Word on which He has caused us to hope, Ps. 119: 49.

2. He pleads the relation wherein of old they stood to God, v. 10. 'Wilt Thou suffer thy sworn enemies to trample on and oppress thy sworn servants? If Thou wilt not appear for thy people, whom wilt Thou appear for?' See Isa. 63: 19. As an evidence of their being God's servants, he gives them this character, (v. 11.) 'They desire to fear thy name: this they have a desire to do;' which denotes, (1.) Their good-will to it; 'It is their constant care and endeavor to be found in the way of their duty, though in many instances they come short.' (2.) Their complacency in it: 'They take pleasure to fear thy name:' so it may be read; 'They not only do their duty, but do it with delight.' Those shall graciously be accepted of God, that truly desire to fear his name; for those desires are his own work.

3. He pleads the great things God had formerly done for them, v. 10. 'Let not them be overpowered by the enemy, that have a God of infinite power on their side.'

Lastly, He concludes with a particular petition, that God would prosper him in his undertaking, and give him favor with the king: This man, he calls him, for the greatest of men are but men before God; they must know themselves to be so, (Ps. 9: 20.) and others must know them to be so; Who art thou that thou shouldest be afraid of a man? Mercy in the sight of this man, is what he prays for, meaning not the king's mercy, but mercy from God in his address to the king. Favor with men is then comfortable, when we can see it springing from the mercy of God.

CHAP. II. How Nehemiah prevailed with God, we read in the foregoing ch.; here we are told how, like Jacob, he prevailed with men also, and so found his prayers were heard and answered.

V. 1—8. When Nehemiah had prayed for the relief of his countrymen, and perhaps in David's words,(Ps. 51: 18.) Build Thou the walls of Jerusalem, he did not sit still, and say, 'Let God now do his own work, for I have no more to do;' but set himself to forecast what he could do towards it. Our prayers must be seconded with our serious endeavors, else we mock God. Near 4 months passed from Chisleu to Nisan, (November to March,) before he made his application to the king for leave to go to Jerusalem; either because the winter was not a proper time for such a journey, and he would not make the motion till he could pursue it, or because it was so long before his month of waiting came, and there was no coming into the king's presence uncalled, Esth. 4: 11. We are not thus limited in our addresses to the King of kings, but have liberty of access to Him at all times; to the throne of grace we never come unseasonably.

I. He gave the king occasion to inquire into his cares and griefs, by appearing sad. Those that speak to such, must not fall abruptly on their business, but fetch a compass. Nehemiah would try whether he was in a good humor, and took this method. He had not used to be sad in the king's presence, but conformed to the rules of the court, (as courtiers must do,) which would admit no sorrows, Esth. 4: 2. Good men should do what they can by their cheerfulness to convince the world of the pleasantness of religion, and to roll away the reproach cast on them as melancholy; but there is a time for all things, Eccl. 3: 4. Nehemiah now saw cause both to be sad, and to appear so.

II. The kind notice and inquiry of the king, v. 2. 1. We ought, from a principle of Christian sympathy, to concern ourselves in the sorrows and sadness of others, even of our inferiors, and not say, What is it to us? Let not masters despise their servants' griefs, but desire to make them easy God is not pleased with the dejections and disquietness of his people, but would have them both serve Him with gladness, and eat their bread with joy. 2. A good man, even in sickness, may be of good cheer, if he knows his sins are forgiven. 3. Freedom from sickness is so great a mercy, that we ought not to be inordinately dejected under any outward burden; yet sorrow for our own sins, the sins of others, and the calamities of God's church, may well sadden the countenance without sickness.

III. The account Nehemiah gave of the cause, with meekness and fear. Though a man of courage, as appears by the following story, he was now sore afraid, perhaps of the king's wrath, (those eastern monarchs assumed an absolute power of life and death, Dan. 2: 12, 13. 5: 19.) or of misplacing a word, and losing his request by the mismanagement of it: though a wise man, he was jealous of himself, lest he should say any thing imprudently; it becomes us to be so. A good assurance is indeed a good accomplishment, yet a humble self-diffidence is no man's dispraise. He speaks with meekness; without reflection on any man, and with all the respect, deference, and goodwill imaginable, to the king his master. Many are melancholy, fearful, and sad, but can give no good reason for it; such should chide themselves for it, and out of it; but Nehemiah could give so good a reason for his sadness, as to appeal to the king himself concerning it. Observe, 1. He calls

NOTES.

CHAP. II. V. 1, 2. The words rendered 'sad,' and 'sorrow of heart,' might be rendered evil, and wickedness of heart. This excited great alarm in Nehemiah: and in fact these arbitrary monarchs were generally suspicious, in proportion to their tyranny. Lest poison should be mixed with their wine, they required the cup-bearers to drink before them out of the same cup: [Xenophon says, the Persian kings required them to pour some of the drink into the hand, and thence drink it:] and some conjecture that Nehemiah, being oppressed with grief, had forgotten to observe this custom. Had the least suspicion, however, been excited of criminal designs, the immediate torture or execution of Nehemiah might have been the consequence: for the Persian monarchs frequently, with little ceremony, thus treated those who had before been their chief favorites. He might also fear that he should fail of his purpose, as the king seemed displeased, and no favorable opportunity for his request was yet afforded. SCOTT.

(2.) Sad.] Roberts says, a Hindoo, having a request to make, will walk about sad, and not speak but when spoken to, to induce inquiry into the cause. ED.

Verse 3.

Nehemiah, in answering the king, testified his cordial and loyal affection, by wishing the long continuance of his life and prosperity, in the customary manner. He perhaps meant the words likewise as a prayer for his salvation: but they were not generally understood in that sense. Thus, 'God save the king,' as generally used, means no more than, 'Let the king live and prosper:' but the words, when duly attended to, contain a solemn prayer to God, for his temporal preservation, and his eternal salvation. (M. R.)—Nehemiah said nothing to Artaxerxes concerning the religion of the Jews: perhaps, he saw that he was more regardless in that respect than formerly; (Ezra 7.6—28.) or he might suppose that the king would not attend to that subject so candidly, from a young courtier, as he had done from an aged priest and learned scribe of the law of God: and some think he was induced to wave it, because the company present were unfavorable. He therefore represented the afflicted, defenceless state of that city, where his ancestors lay interred; and how could he but be grieved that their sepulchres should be so disgraced, or how avoid sympathizing with his distressed countrymen?—Arguments of this kind the men of the world well understand: but alas! they little feel the force of those which are infinitely more important. Some infer from the expression 'my fathers' sepulchres,' that Nehemiah was of Judah; but his ancestors might have been buried in Jerusalem, if he were of Benjamin, or of Simeon. SCOTT.

Verse 4.

'The God of heaven' seems to have become the usual style, so to speak, in addressing the Lord, among the returned captives; perhaps as contrasting Him with the idols of the regions, in which they had sojourned. (20. 1:4, 5. Ezra 5:11, 12. Jer. 10:11.) SCOTT. This is the style Cyrus uses, (2 Chr. 36:2, &c.) It may have been the name by which God was worshipped by the Medes and Persians: note, Ezra 1:3. See also Hyde, de Rel. Vet. Pers. ED.

Verses 5, 6.

It is probable, that Esther was the queen who was present at this time, and that she seconded Nehemiah's request. Perhaps he had vant have found favor in thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it.

6 And the king said unto me, (the [*] queen also sitting by him,) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? [m] So it pleased the king to send me; and [n] I set him a time.

7 Moreover I said unto the king, If it please the king, [o] let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, [p] that they may convey me over till I come into Judah;

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber, to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertained to the house, and [q] for the wall of the city, and [r] for the house that I shall enter into. And [s] the king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me.

9 ¶ Then I came [t] to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. Now [u] the king had sent captains of the army, and horsemen with me.

10 When [x] Sanballat the [y] Horonite, and Tobiah [z] the servant, [a] the Ammonite, heard of it, [b] it grieved them exceedingly, that [c] there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

11 So [d] I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days.

12 ¶ And [e] I arose in the night, I and some few men with me; [f] neither told I any man what [g] my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem: neither was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon.

13 And I went out by night, by [h] the gate of the valley, even before the dragon-well, and to [i] the dung-port, and viewed [k] the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire.

14 Then I went on

Jerusalem the place of his fathers' sepulchres: it is good for us to think often of our fathers' sepulchres; we are apt to dwell on their honors, titles, houses, and estates, but let us also think of their sepulchres, and consider that they who have gone before us in the world, have also gone before us out of the world, and their monuments are mementos to us; there is a great respect owing to the memory of our fathers, that that be not injured. All nations, even those that have had no expectation of the resurrection of the dead, have looked upon the sepulchres of their ancestors as in some degree sacred, and not to be violated. 2. He justifies his grief. There is a time even for pious and prosperous men to be sad, and to show it. The best men must not think to antedate heaven by banishing all sorrowful thoughts; it is a vale of tears we pass through, and we must submit to the temper of the climate. 3. He assigns the ruins of Jerusalem as the true cause of his grief. Note, All the grievances of the church, but especially its desolations, are, and ought to be, matter of grief and sadness to all good people, to all that have a concern for God's honor, and that are living members of Christ's mystical body, and are of a public spirit; they favor even Zion's dust, Ps. 102: 14.

IV. The encouragement the king gave him to tell his mind, and the application he, thereupon, made in his heart to God, v. 4. The king had an affection for him, and was not pleased to see him melancholy; it is also probable he had a kindness for the Jews' religion; he had discovered it before in his commission to Ezra. Nehemiah was afraid to speak, (v. 2.) but the king's interrogation gave him boldness; much more may the invitation Christ has given us to pray, and the promise that we shall speed, enable us to come boldly to the throne of grace. Nehemiah immediately prayed to God that He would give him wisdom to act properly, and incline the king's heart to his request. They that would find favor with kings, must secure the favor of the King of kings. It was not an audible prayer, (he had no opportunity for that,) but a secret, sudden ejaculation, to that God who understands the language of the heart; Lord, give me a mouth and wisdom; Lord, give me favor in the sight of this man. Note, it is good to be much in pious ejaculations, especially on particular occasions: wherever we are, we have a way open heavenward; this will hinder no business, but further it rather, therefore let no business hinder this, but give rise to it rather. Nehemiah had prayed very solemnly with reference to this very occasion; (ch. 1: 12.) yet, when it comes to the push, he prays again. Ejaculations and solemn prayers must not justle out one another, but each have its place.

V. His humble petition to the king; he presents it very modestly, and with submission to the king's wisdom, v. 5. But he is very particular, v. 7. Either his commission was renewed, or he went back, and was sent again, so that he presided there 12 years at least, ch. 5: 14.

VI. The king's great favor to him, in asking him when he would return, v. 6. It intimated he would not lose him, nor be long without him; yet that, to gratify him, and do a kindness to his people, he would spare him awhile, and let him have what clauses he pleased inserted in his commission, v. 8. Here was an immediate answer to his prayer. In the account he gives of it, he notices, 1. The presence of the queen; she sat by; (v. 6.) which (they say) was not usual in the Persian court. (Esth. 1: 11.) Whether she was his adversary, that would have hindered him, and he observes it, to the praise of God's powerful providence, that though she was by, yet he succeeded; or his true friend, and he observes it to the praise of God's kind providence, that she was present to help forward his request, is not certain. 2. The power and grace of God; he gained his point, not according to his merit, his interest in the king, or his good management, but according to the good hand of his God upon him. Gracious souls notice of God's hand, his good hand, in all events which turn in favor of them; This is the Lord's doing, therefore doubly acceptable.

V. 9—20. Nehemiah is dismissed with captains and horsemen, (v. 9.) both for his guard, and honor. Whom the King of kings sends, He thus protects, thus dignifies with a host of angels to attend them.

1. The Jews and their friends, while he con-

---

[*] Heb. wife.

m 4. 1:11. Is. 58:12. 61:4. 65:24.
n 5:14. 13:6.
o 9. Ezra 6:6. 7:21.
p Ezra 8:22.
q 17. 3:1,&c.
r 3:7. 7:2.
s 18. Gen. 32:28. Ezra 5:5. 6:22. 7: 6,9,27,28. Prov. 21:1. Is. 66:14. Dan. 1:9. Acts 7:10. 26:22. 2 Cor. 8:16.
t 7.
u Ezra 8:22.
x 19. 4:1—3,7. 6:1.
y Is. 15:5. Jer. 48:5,34.
z Prov. 30:22. Ec. 10:7.
a 13:1.
b Num. 22:3,4. Ps. 112:10. 122:6—9. Prov. 27:4. Ez. 25:6—8. Mic. 7:9, 10,16,17. Acts 4:2. 5:24. 19:26,27.
c Ezra 4:4,&c.
d Ezra 8:32.
e Gen. 32:22—24. Josh. 10:9. Judg. 6:27. 9:32. Matt. 2:14.
f Ec. 3:7. Am. 5:13. Mic. 7:5. Matt. 10:16.
g Ezra 7:27. Jer. 31:33. 32:40. 2 Cor. 8:16. Jam. 1:16,17. Rev. 17:17.
h 15. 3:13. 2 Chr. 26:9.
i 3:13,14. 12:31.
k 3,17. 1:3. Jer. 5:10.

been preferred through her interest, and that of Mordecai: and her presence seems to be mentioned, as a favorable and not a common circumstance, and as an answer to his prayers.—For Mordecai's advancement preceded the commission granted to Nehemiah several years. (1:1. Esth. 1:3. 10:3.) [But see next note.] SCOTT.

(6.) Queen.] 'Shegel, rather, concubine, she who was chief favorite. This was not Esther, nor was this Artaxerxes her husband. The Sept. properly translate pallake, harlot.' DR. A. CLARKE.

Verse 7.

(Note, Ezra 8:21—23.) Ezra went as a priest and a scribe, though armed with civil authority; and, in consistency with his character and professions, he would not require a guard. But Nehemiah went to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, and to defend the Jews against their enemies: and it was very consistent with his avowed design, to petition the king, that the governors should be ordered to escort him with proper military attendants, which would afford him protection, and add dignity to his undertaking.—The king likewise ordered him a guard, till he had crossed the Euphrates. (9) SCOTT.

Roberts says, 'Persons of any rank (in India) always take letters with them in travelling, a duplicate of which is forwarded to the different chiefs of the district through which they have to pass. Without these, much inconvenience is sustained in obtaining supplies.' It is also quite customary, and often necessary now, for the same reason, to have a government Janizary, or guard, (v. 9.) when travelling through the same region Nehemiah passed through, and other parts of the ill-governed east. ED.

Verse 8.

The Heb. pardes, forest, is used only here and in Ec. 2: 5. Cant. 4: 13. where it is rendered orchard, and the word paradise seems derived from it; [and it is still, as in the time of Xenophon, the Persian name (ferdoos) for a park or garden, indeed, any 'place of pleasure' (Clarke,): hunting parks were common to both Egyptian and Persian kings;] yet here it must signify a forest of timber trees. The 'palace' seems to mean the temple, or some of those buildings which surrounded it, or 'the gates of the temple;' for though the temple was rebuilt, much might be wanting in respect of the surrounding walls and gates. Nehemiah proposed to build a house also for the governor, and to do all other things, which might place his people in a more secure and respectable situation. (M. R.) SCOTT.

Verse 10.

(M. R.) Moab and Ammon were subjugated and carried captive by the kings of Babylon: but it appears they had been restored, according to the predictions of Jeremiah. (Jer. 48:47. 49:6.) And it is likely Sanballat and Tobiah (as well as Geshem the Arabian, v. 19.) were placed by the king of Persia in authority over their own people, and over the Samaritans, or other tribes in that neighborhood, who were generally enemies to the Jews. ID.

Verses 12—16.

This account is well suited to show us the ruinous and defenceless state of the city, nearly 100 years after the Jews return: and Nehemiah's personal survey formed a suitable preparation to his address to the people, and would enable him to obviate any objections, and pre-to [l] the gate of the fountain, and to the king's pool: but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass.

15 Then went I up in the night by [m] the brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by [n] the gate of the valley, and so returned.

16 And [o] the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did; neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the rest that did the work.

17 Then said I unto them, [p] Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire: [q] come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more [r] a reproach.

18 Then I told them of [s] the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. [t] So they strengthened their hands for this good work.

19 But when [u] Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, and [x] Geshem the Arabian, heard it, [y] they laughed us to scorn, and despised us, and said, What is this thing that ye do? [z] will ye rebel against the king?

20 Then answered I them, and said unto them, [a] The God of heaven he will prosper us; therefore we his servants will arise and build: but [b] ye have no portion, nor right, nor [c] memorial, in Jerusalem.

cealed his errand, took little notice of him, (v. 11.) none of the great men of the city waited on him to congratulate him on his arrival, but he remained unknown: the king sent horsemen to attend him, but the Jews none to meet him; he had no beast with him, but that which he himself rode, v. 12. Wise men, and those who are worthy of double honor, yet covet not to make a show, or a noise, though coming with the greatest blessings. They that shortly are to have the dominion in the morning, the world now knows not, but they lie hid, 1 John 3: 1.

He took great notice of their state, v. 13. They that would know how to amend, must inquire what is amiss; well consider what needs reformation, and what may serve as it is.

2. When he discovered his design to the rulers and people, they cheerfully concurred. He produced the king's commission, told them how readily it was granted, and how forward the king was to favor his design, in which he saw the hand of his God good upon him. It would encourage both him and them to proceed in an undertaking which God had so remarkably smiled upon. Note, Many a good work would find hands enough, if there were but one good head to lead in it. It is pity that a good motion should be lost, purely for want of one to move it. By stirring up ourselves and one another to what is good, we strengthen ourselves and one another for it; the great reason why we are weak in our duty, is, that we are cold to it, indifferent and unresolved.

3. Let us now see how Nehemiah was received by those that wished ill to the Jews.

(1.) When he did but show his face, it vexed them, v. 10. Nothing is a greater vexation to the enemies of good people, who have misrepresented them to princes as turbulent, factious, and not fit to live, than to see them stand right in their rulers' opinion, their innocency cleared, and their reproach rolled away, and they trusted.

(2.) When he began to act, they set themselves to discourage and hinder him; but in vain, v. 19, 20. They represented the undertaking as a silly thing, and a wicked thing, no better than treason. It was the old invidious charge. They bear up themselves with this, that they were the servants of God, Ps. 2: 1. They consider also that the reason these enemies did so malign them, was, because they had no right in Jerusalem, but envied them their right in it. Thus may the impotent menaces of the church's enemies be easily despised by the church's friends.

CHAP. III. V. 1—32. Many are ready to say, Let us rise up and build, who sit still and do nothing; not so these builders, but they at once set about it, we find in this ch. Let not to-day's good work be left till to-morrow. The best way to know how to divide this chapter, is, to observe how the work was divided among the undertakers.

Several things are observable.

1. Eliashib, the high priest, with his brethren the priests, led the van, v. 1. Ministers should be first and foremost in every good work; their office obliges them to teach and quicken by example, as well as doctrine. The dignity of the high priest was very great, and obliged him to signalize himself in this service. The priests repaired the sheep-gate, so called, because through it the sheep to be sacrificed were brought; for their inheritance was the offerings. And of this gate

CHAP. III.

The names and order of those who built the walls of Jerusalem, 1—32.

THEN [a] Eliashib the high priest rose up, with his brethren the priests, and they builded [b] the sheep-gate; they [c] sanctified it, and set up the doors of it; even unto the [d] tower of Meah

l 3:15. 2 K. 13:17. 20:20. 2 Chr. 32: 30. m 2 Sam. 15:23. Jer. 31:40. John 18:1.
n 13.
o 12.
p Lam. 3:51.
q Ezra 5:1,2. 10:2—4. Is. 35:3,4.
r 1:3. 1 Sam. 11:2. Ps. 44:13. 79:4. 89:50,51. Lam. 3:45,46. Ez. 5:14,15. 22:4,5.
s See on 8.
t 2 Sam. 2:7. 1 Chr. 11:10. 19:13. 2 Chr. 32:5. Hag. 1:13,14. Eph. 6:10. Phil. 2:13.
u 10. 6:1,2.
x 6:6. Gashmu.
y Job 30:1. Ps. 44:13,14. Jer. 20:8. Mark 5:40. Heb. 11:36. z 5:6. Ezra 4:15,16. Luke 23:2. John 19:12. Acts 24:5.
a 4. 2 Chr. 26:5. Ps. 20:5. 35:27. 122:6. b Ezra 4:3. Acts 8:21.
c Ex. 28:29. Lev. 2:2. 24:7. Num. 10:10. Zech. 6:14. Acts 10:4,31.
a 12:10. 13:28.
b 12:39. John 5:2.
c 12:30. Deut. 20:5. Ps. 30: title. Prov. 3:6,9. d 12:39. Jer. 31:38. Zech. 14:10.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Unavoidable delays, when employed in fervent, persevering prayer, often forward the success of pious undertakings.—Cheerfulness is in general an ornament to religion. 'The children of this world' understand the propriety of our grieving, when we are sick and in pain; when impoverished, bereaved, or disappointed in our temporal pursuits: but they cannot conceive, why the heart should be heavy, or the countenance sad, if no outward calamity has befallen us. Yet conscious guilt, the fear or sense of the divine displeasure, the afflictions of God's people, the prevalence of impiety, and the decays of religion, are far more reasonable and important causes of grief; under which no confluence of earthly delights can afford comfort. We must, however, expect that worldly men will ascribe such sorrows to melancholy, discontent, moroseness, or even some more criminal cause: and those, who are strangers to the believer's consolations, are apt to infer from his complaints, that religion is uncomfortable, and unfits men for social life. We should therefore in general conceal our grief, or disclose it only to the Lord and to his people.—Inconstancy is connected with all the partialities and affections of absolute princes; and suspicions are multiplied in proportion as power is abused. Hence often the speedy ruin or disgrace of those, on whom honors and emoluments have been most lavished, without any cause, but caprice or groundless jealousy. 'It is therefore better to trust in the LORD, than to put any confidence in princes.' (Ps. 118: 8, 9.)—A meek and modest explanation best tends to banish groundless suspicions.—We must not speak falsehood: but we are not bound always to speak all we think, when a part will best answer every useful purpose.—Ejaculatory petitions should be intermixed with every transaction of a Christian. They neither supersede, nor are rendered unnecessary by stated devotions: and the habit of thus keeping up an intercourse with Heaven, is of peculiar importance and advantage. Indeed we ought never to engage in any pursuit, in which it would be improper thus to expect and seek the divine direction, assistance, and blessing.—The enemies of the Lord must grieve, in proportion as his servants rejoice, when those in authority, and endowed with suitable qualifications, are raised up to promote the cause of truth and holiness, and the welfare of his church: for the enmity of the serpent's seed against the cause of Christ is confined to no age or nation; it springs from hatred of God Himself, and is irritated in proportion as He is glorified. However, we should always be ready to give a meek and reasonable answer to objectors: and, blessed be God, even despisers and revilers, while they are warned of their danger, may be invited to cease from their opposition, and to be reconciled to God: that, after all, they may have their lot among his people, and not among his enemies.

SCOTT.

---

vent any misrepresentations, which might be made.—Nothing more is known of the several places mentioned, than what may be collected from the M. R. SCOTT.

(13.) Dragon.] Note and cut, Job 30:29. This ain, well or fountain, doubtless had the figures of Tannin, dragons, serpents, or some amphibious monster, through whose mouth or mouths fell the water, as is common still in the east; hence the name. ED.

Verses 17, 18.

The reader will note the piety of the language, used by Nehemiah on this as well as on every other occasion, which resembled that of Ezra. (M. R. s. in v. 8.) SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. III. V. 1. Eliashib was the grandson of Jeshua. (12:10.) Brethren.] Either his near relations, or the chief priests, the heads of their they sanctified it, unto the tower of Hananeel.

2 And * next unto him builded [o] the men of Jericho. And next to them builded [f] Zaccur the son of Imri.

3 But [g] the fish-gate did the sons of Hassenaah build, who also laid [h] the beams thereof, and set up [i] the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

4 And next unto them repaired [k] Meremoth the son of [l] Urijah, the son of Koz. And next unto them repaired [m] Meshullam the son of Berechiah, the son of Meshezabeel. And next unto them repaired Zadok the son of Baana.

5 And next unto them [n] the Tekoites repaired; but [o] their nobles [p] put not their necks to the work of their lord.

6 Moreover [q] the old gate repaired Jehoiada the son of Paseah, and Meshullam the son of Besodeiah; they laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

7 And next unto them repaired Melatiah [r] the Gibeonite, and Jadon the Meronothite, the men of Gibeon, and of [s] Mizpah, unto [t] the throne of the governor on this side the river.

8 Next unto him repaired Uzziel the son of Harhaiah, of [u] the goldsmiths. Next unto him also repaired Hananiah, the son of one [x] of the apothecaries, and they † fortified Jerusalem unto the [y] broad wall.

9 And next unto them repaired Rephaiah the son of Hur, [z] the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem.

10 And next unto them repaired Jedaiah the son of Harumaph, even [a] over against his house. And next unto him repaired [b] Hattush the son of Hashabniah.

11 Malchijah the son of [c] Harim, and Hashub the son of [d] Pahath-moab, repaired the ‡ other piece, and [e] the tower of the furnaces.

12 And next unto him repaired Shallum the son of Halohesh, [f] the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem, [g] he and his daughters.

13 [h] The valley-gate repaired Hanun, and the inhabitants of [i] Zanoah; they built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and a thousand cubits on the wall unto the dung-gate.

14 But [k] the dung-gate repaired Malchiah the son of Rechab, [l] the ruler of part of [m] Beth-haccerem; he built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

15 But [n] the gate of the fountain repaired Shallum the son of Col-hozeh, [o] the ruler of part of [p] Mizpah; he built it, and covered it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and the wall of the pool of [q] Siloah by the king's garden, and unto [r] the stairs that go down from the city of David.

16 After him repaired Nehemiah the son of Azbuk, [s] the ruler of the half part of [t] Beth-zur, unto the place over against [u] the sepulchres of David, and to [x] the pool that was made, and unto [y] the house of the mighty.

17 After him repaired the Levites, Rehum the son of Bani. Next unto him repaired Hashabiah, [z] the ruler of the half part of [a] Keilah, in his part.

18 After him repaired their brethren, Bavai the son of Henadad, the ruler of the half part of Keilah.

19 And next to him repaired Ezer the son of [b] Jeshua, the ruler of [c] Mizpah, another piece over against the going up to the armory, at [d] the turning of the wall.

20 After him Baruch the son of § Zabbai [e] earnestly repaired the other piece from the turning of the wall unto the door of the house of [f] Eliashib the high priest.

21 After him repaired [g] Meremoth the son of Urijah, the son of [h] Koz, another piece, from the door of the house of Eliashib, even to the end of the house of Eliashib.

22 And after him repaired the priests, [i] the men of the plain.

23 After him repaired Benjamin and Hashub [k] over against their house. After him repaired [l] Azariah the son of [m] Maaseiah, the son

* Heb. at his hand.
e 7:36. Ezra 2:34.
f 10:12.
g 12:39. 2 Chr. 33:14. Zeph. 1:10.
h 6. 2:8.
i 6:1. 7:1.
k 21. 10:5.
l Ezra 8:33. Uriah.
m 10:7.
n 27. 2 Sam. 14:2. Am. 1:1.
o Judg. 5:23. Jer. 5:5. 1 Cor. 1:26.
p Jer. 27:2,8,12. 30:8,9. Matt. 11:29 Acts 15:10.
q 12:39.
r Josh. 9:3,&c. 2 Sam. 21:2.
s 19. 2 Chr. 16:6.
t 2:8.
u 31,32. Is. 46:6.
x Gen. 50:2. Ex. 30:25. Ec. 10:1.
† Or, left.
y 12:38.
z 12,17.
a 23,28—30.
b 10:4.
c 10:5.
d 7:11. 10:14. Ezra 2:6. 8:4.
‡ Heb. second measure.
e 12:38.
f 9,14,15,16,17,18.
g Ex. 35:25. Acts 21:8,9. Phil. 4:3.
h 2:13.
i 11:30. Josh. 15:34.
k 2:13. 12:31.
l 9,12,15,16,17,18.
m Jer. 6:1.
n 2:14. 12:37. 2 Chr. 32:30.
o 9,12,14.
p 7. Judg. 20:1,3. Mizpeh. Jer. 40:6
q Is. 8:6. Shiloah. Luke 13:4. Joht 9:7. Siloam.
r 2 Sam. 5:6,7.
s 9,12,14.
t Josh. 15:58. 2 Chr. 11:7.
u 2 Chr. 16:14. Acts 2:29.
x 2 K. 20:20. Is. 22:11.
y 1 K. 14:27,28. 2 Chr. 12:10,11. Cant. 8:7.
z 16. 1 Chr. 23:4.
a Josh. 15:44. 1 Sam. 23:1,2.
b 10:9. 12:8.
c 15.
d 2 Chr. 26:9.
§ Or, Zaccai.
e Ec. 9:10. Rom. 12:11.
f 1,21. 12:22,23. 13:4,28.
g 4.
h 7:63. Ezra 2:61.
i 6:2. 12:28.
k 10,29,30.
l 10:2.
m 8:4,7.

---

several courses. Along with the gate, they builded a part of the wall on each side. (M. R. d.) This was the case, it may be supposed, in other instances where the gates alone are mentioned. SCOTT.

Verses 2—4.

(M. R. and Map.) After all the pains some learned men have bestowed on the subject, which is indeed not very interesting to us, little satisfactory information can be obtained on the situation of the places mentioned in this ch. beyond what may be collected from the M. R. [See the map of Jerusalem in vol. III.] ED.

Verse 5.

Their nobles, &c.] Disregarding the authority of God Himself, whose work it was, no wonder they would not submit to the commands of Nehemiah, their governor, who seems to be meant by the expression 'their lord:' and for this they are branded with disgrace in the Word of God. (1 Sam. 8:6—9.)—The expression, 'put not their necks,' renders it probable, that those who were earnest in the cause, of whatever rank, assisted by their personal labors. 'Well-disposed persons, though ever so great, "put their necks," i. e. labored hard, not refusing to carry burdens, &c.' Patrick. SCOTT. On the Egyptian monuments are still to be seen pictures representing that ancient and still common custom of carrying burdens hung on each end of a beam passed across the shoulder, or fitted to both shoulders and passing across the neck behind. See also pictures from Persepolis, in Niebuhr. GILL refers the expression, to 'refractory oxen, refusing the yoke.' ED.

Verse 7.

The throne, &c.] This seems to have been some judgment-hall, to which the governors of the kings of Persia, over the country W. of the Euphrates, came, from time to time, to administer justice. Probably, Nehemiah now occupied it; for his particular commission superseded their more general authority. SCOTT.

Throne.] 'Heb. Kisse, the name of the governor. So Aben Ezra & IL.

Verses 8—10.

(M. R.) Perhaps, where any part of the old wall remained, the persons mentioned 'repaired;' where none, they 'built.' SCOTT.

(8.) Goldsmiths . . apothecaries.] Note, 11:35. ED.

Verse 12.

(M. R. f.) Probably two superior magistrates were placed over the principal cities, with equal authority, to reside in different parts of them.—Shallum seems to have had no sons; and his daughters, as heiresses, contributed with him to the expense of the work. Perhaps they were widows. SCOTT.

Verse 15.

Stairs.] Probably, these formed a communication between the city of David, and the other parts of Jerusalem. (2 Sam. 5:6, 7.) ID.

Verse 16.

(M. R.) 'The house of the mighty' is thought to have been a guard-chamber, where the most valiant soldiers kept guard, to defend the palace of the kings of Judah. ID.

Verses 21—25.

(M. R.) 'The king's high house' (25) was, perhaps, some lofty building, from which the watchmen might make their observations. ID.

of Ananiah, by his house.

24 After him repaired [n] Binnui the son of Henadad [o] another piece, from the house of Azariah unto [p] the turning of the wall, even unto the corner.

25 Palal the son of Uzai, over against the turning of the wall, and the tower which lieth out from [q] the king's high house, that was [r] by the court of the prison. After him [s] Pedaiah the son of [t] Parosh.

26 Moreover the [u] Nethinims *dwelt in † Ophel, unto the place over against [x] the water-gate toward the east, and the tower that lieth out.

27 After them [y] the Tekoites repaired another piece, over against the great tower that lieth out, even unto [z] the wall of Ophel.

28 From above [a] the horse-gate repaired the priests, [b] every one over against his house.

29 After them repaired Zadok [c] the son of Immer over against his house. After him repaired also Shemaiah the son of [d] Shechaniah the keeper of [e] the east gate.

30 After him repaired Hananiah the son of Shelemiah, and Hanun the sixth son of Zalaph, [f] another piece. After him repaired [g] Meshullam the son of Berechiah over against his chamber.

31 After him repaired Malchiah, [h] the goldsmith's son, unto the place of the Nethinims, and of the merchants, over against the gate Miphkad, and to the ‡ going up of the corner.

32 And between the going up of the corner unto [i] the sheep-gate repaired [k] the goldsmiths and the merchants.

n 10:9.
o 11,19,27.
p 20.
q Jer. 22:14. 39:8.
r 12:39. Jer. 32:2. 33:1. 37:21. 39:15.
s 8:4.
t 7:8. Ezra 2:3.
u 7:46—56. 10:28. 1 Chr. 9:2. Ezra 2:43—58.
* Or, which dwelt in Ophel, repaired unto.
† Or, the tower. 27. 11:21. 2 Chr. 27:3. 33:14. x 8:1,3. 12:37.
y 5.
z 26.
a 2 K. 11:16. 2 Chr. 23:15. Jer. 31:40.
b 10,23.
c 7:40. Ezra 2:37.
d Ezra 10:2.
e Jer. 19:2.
f 21.
g 4.
h 8,32.
‡ Or, corner-chamber.
i 1. 12:39. John 5:2.
k 8,31.

Him all their performances, and to do even their common actions after a godly sort.

2 Undertakers were very many, who each took their share, according to their ability. What is to be done for the public good, every one should further to the utmost of his place and power. United force will conquer that which no individual dares venture on. Many hands (we say) make light work.

3 Many were active in this work, who were not themselves inhabitants of Jerusalem, and therefore consulted purely the public welfare, and not any private interest or advantage of their own; as the men of Jericho, (v. 2.) of Gibeon and Mizpah, (v. 7.) and of Zanoah, v. 13. Every Israelite should lend a hand toward building up Jerusalem.

4 Several rulers, both of Jerusalem and of other cities, were active, thinking themselves bound in honor to do the utmost their wealth and power enabled them to do, for the furtherance of it. But it is observable they are called rulers of part, or the half part, of their respective cities, v. 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18. Perhaps the Persian government would not intrust any one with a strong city, but appointed two to be a watch on each other. Rome had two consuls.

5. Here is a just reproach fastened on the nobles of Tekoa, (v. 5.) that they would not come under obligation to this service; as if the dignity and liberty of their peerage were their discharge from serving God and doing good, which are indeed the highest honor and the truest freedom.

6. Two persons joined in repairing the old gate, (v. 6.) and so were co-founders, and shared the honor of it between them. The good work we cannot compass ourselves, we must be thankful to those that will go partners with us in. Some think this is called the old gate, because it belonged to the ancient Salem, which was said to be built by Melchizedek.

7. Several good, honest tradesmen, as well as priests and rulers, were active in this work, goldsmiths, apothecaries, merchants, v. 8, 32. They did not think their callings excused them, nor plead that they could not leave their shops to attend the public business; knowing that what they lost, would certainly be made up to them by the blessing of God on their callings.

8. Some ladies are spoken of as helping forward this work, Shallum and his daughters, (v. 12.) who, though not capable of personal service, yet, having their portions in their own hands, or being rich widows, contributed money for buying materials and paying workmen. Paul speaks of some good women that labored with him in the Gospel, Phil. 4: 3.

9 Of some it is said, they repaired over against their houses, (v. 10, 23, 28, 29.) and of one who, it is likely, was only a lodger, that he repaired over against his chamber, v. 30. When a general good work is to be done, each should apply himself to that part of it, that falls nearest him, and is within his reach. If every one will sweep before his own door, the street will be clean; if every one will mend one, we shall be all mended.

10. Of one it is said, he earnestly repaired what fell to his share, (v. 20.) not that others were cold and indifferent, but he was most vigorous of any of them, and made himself remarkable for it. It is good to be thus zealously affected in a good thing; and it is probable this good man's zeal provoked very many to take the more pains, and make the more haste.

11. Of one it is observed, he was the sixth son of his father, v. 30. His five elder brethren, it seems, laid not their hand to this work, but he did. In doing what is good, we need not stay for our elders to go before us; if they decline it, it does not therefore follow we must. The younger brother, if he be the better man, is indeed the better gentleman; those are most honorable, that are most useful

12. Some of them that had first done, helped their fellows, and undertook another share, where they saw there was most need. Meremoth repaired, v. 4. and again, v. 21. And the Tekoites, v. 5. and v 27. which is the more remarkable, because their nobles set them a bad example by withdrawing from the service; but perhaps this made them the more forward to double work, that by their zeal they might either shame, or atone for, the covetousness and carelessness of their nobles.

Lastly. Here is no mention of any particular share Nehemiah himself had in this work. A namesake of his is mentioned, v. 16. but Nehemiah undertook not any particular piece of the wall; yet he did more than any of them, for he had the oversight of them all; half of his servants worked where there was most need, and the other half stood sentinel, as we find after; (ch. 4: 16.) while he himself in his own person walked the rounds, directed and encouraged the builders, set his hand to the work where he saw occasion, and kept a watchful eye on the motions of the enemy, as we shall find in the next ch. The pilot needs not hale at a rope, it is enough for him to steer.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The security and prosperity of the church, in every part of the world, is the common cause of all Christians, wherever they reside: and all orders of men should assist in promoting them. Every age, sex, and station can, in some way or other, contribute towards it. But, alas! the rich and noble generally count it their privilege to be idle, or useless; which they cannot be, without setting an example, mischievous in proportion to their influence: and no wonder they disregard the proclamations of the prince, which call them to attend the service of God, when they disdain the yoke of the almighty Lord Himself. But before Him they are on a level with the meanest of their inferiors; except that a more dreadful punishment, and deeper disgrace, await their impenitent and ungrateful rebellion.—If, in times of prevalent ungodliness, numbers, in different stations, would agree, first to look to themselves, and to reform their families as far as they could; and then to use all their influence to promote the general work of reformation, we might expect that much good would speedily be done: and though most men still neglect this duty; let those who lament the triumphs of iniquity and the desolations of piety, every one 'repair opposite to his own house' or 'chamber;' and let all endeavor to do what they can, by their prayers, their example, the education of their children, and pious conversation, to promote and recommend that cause which they have espoused.—May the Lord stir up the hearts of all his people, to lay aside their disputes, and to disregard their worldly interests, in comparison of 'building the walls of Jerusalem,' and defending the cause of evangelical truth, and vital godliness, against the assaults of avowed enemies. SCOTT.

Verses 26—31.

M. R.—The Nethinims, &c. (26) 'The Nethinim, which dwelt in Ophel, repaired unto the place over against the water-gate, &c.' M. 'The water-gate, it is likely, was that at which these lower ministers brought in water for the use of the temple.' Bp. Patrick.—Miphkad (31) signifies judgment, visitation, or correction; and it is thought a prison was situated near this gate. SCOTT.

Verse 32.

Sheep-gate.] Thus the whole city was walled: for Eliashib began at the sheep-gate. (1) ID

CHAP. IV.

Sanballat and his company are very wroth, and mock the Jews: but Nehemiah prays, and builds the wall, 1—6. He discovers that they secretly are plotting against him, and sets a watch, 7—12. He arms the builders, and gives them suitable orders and directions, 13—23.

BUT it came to pass, that when [a] Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he was wroth, and took great indignation, and [b] mocked the Jews.

2 And he spake before his brethren, and [c] the army of Samaria, and said, What do these [d] feeble Jews? will they * fortify themselves? [e] will they sacrifice? will they make an end in a day? will they [f] revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burned?

3 Now [g] Tobiah the Ammonite was by him, and he said, Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone-wall.

4 [h] Hear, O our God; for we are † despised: and [i] turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity:

5 And [k] cover not their iniquity, and let not [l] their sin be blotted out from before thee: for they have provoked thee to anger [m] before the builders.

6 So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof; for the people [n] had a mind to work.

7 ¶ But it came to pass, that when [o] Sanballat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and [p] the Ammonites, and [q] the Ashdodites, [r] heard that the walls of Jerusalem ‡ were made up, and that the breaches began to be stopped, [s] then they were very wroth,

CHAP. IV. We left all hands at work, building the wall. But such good work is not wont to be carried on without opposition. Their enemies reproached and ridiculed their undertaking, but their scoffs they answered with prayers, they heeded them not, but went on with their work. They formed a bloody design to hinder them by force of arms. To guard against this, Nehemiah prayed, set guards, and encouraged them to fight; by which the design was broken, and so the work was carried on with all needful precaution against a surprise. In all this, Nehemiah approved himself a man of great conduct and courage, as well as piety.

V. 1—6. Here is, I. The spiteful, scornful reflection of Sanballat and Tobiah. The country rang of their attempt presently, intelligence was brought to Samaria, that nest of their enemies, who had hitherto pleased themselves with the thought, that while Jerusalem was unwalled, they could master it when they pleased; but if walled, it will not only be fenced against them, but, by degrees, become formidable. The strength and safety of the church are the grief and vexation of its enemies. They despised it, and their ridicule sufficiently displayed their venom; but good was brought out of it; for, looking upon it as a foolish undertaking, that would sink under its own weight, they did not go about to obstruct it till it was too late. See their pride and malice:

(1.) Sanballat scorns the workmen, 'These feeble Jews,' (v. 2.) 'what will they do for materials? Will they revive the stones out of the rubbish? And what means their haste? Do they think to wall a city in a day? And keep the feast of dedication with sacrifice the next day? Poor, silly people! See how ridiculous they make themselves!'

(2.) Tobiah speaks with no less scorn of the work. He has his jest too, and must show his wit, v. 3. Profane scoffers sharpen one another. 'Sorry work,' says he, 'they are like to make of it; they themselves will be ashamed of it; if a fox go up, not with his subtilty, but with his weight, he will break down their stone-wall.' Many a good work has been thus looked upon with contempt by the proud and haughty scorners.

II. Nehemiah's humble and devout address to God, when he heard of these reflections. Probably they sent him a message to this purport; but he did not answer these fools according to their folly; but looked to God by prayer. 1. He begs of God to notice the indignities done them, (v. 4.) and in this we are apt to imitate him, Ps. 38: 13, 14. 2. He begs God to avenge their cause, and turn the reproach upon the enemies themselves; (v. 4, 5.) this was spoken rather by a spirit of prophecy than of prayer, and is not to be imitated by us, who are taught of Christ to pray for them that despitefully use and persecute us; Christ Himself prayed for those that reproached Him, Father, forgive them. Nehemiah here prays, Cover not their iniquity. They that cast contempt on God's people, do but prepare everlasting shame for themselves. It is a sin from which sinners are seldom recovered. Doubtless, Nehemiah had reason to think the hearts of those sinners were so desperately hardened, they would never repent, else he would not have prayed it might never be blotted out. His reason is, not They have abused us, but They have provoked Thee, and that before the builders, to whom, it is likely, they sent a spiteful message. Note, We should be angry at the malice of persecutors, not as abusive to us, but as offensive to God [and derogatory to Him]; and on that we may ground an expectation that God will appear against it, Ps. 74: 18, 22.

III. The vigor of the builders, notwithstanding this, v. 6. so that in a little time they had run up the wall to half its height, for the people had a mind to work, their hearts were on it, and they would have it forwarded. Then good work goes on well, when people have a mind to it. Reproaches of enemies should rather quicken us to duty, than drive us from it.

V. 7—15. We have here,

I. The conspiracy the Jews' enemies formed, to stay the building by slaying the builders. The conspirators were not only Sanballat and Tobiah, but other neighboring people. They fancied the work would soon stand still of itself; but when they heard it prospered, they were angry at the Jews for hastening it, and at themselves for being so slow in opposing it, v. 7. Nothing would serve their cruel wrath but they would fight against Jerusalem, v. 8. It was merely envy and malice; because they hated the Jews' piety. Observe, 1. How unanimous they were; though of different interests, yet they were one in opposition to the Word of God. 2. How close; they took crafty counsel, and promised themselves security and success from their secrecy. 3. How cruel; if nothing less will stop the work, they will not stick at the murder of the workmen; nay, their blood they thirst for, and are glad of any pretence to glut themselves with it. 4. Their design, and confidence of success, v. 11. Hindering good work is what bad men aim at and promise themselves; but good work is God's, and shall prosper.

II. The discouragements of the builders. At the very time the adversaries said, Let us cause the work to cease; Judah said, 'Let us even let it fall, for we are not able to go forward with it,' (v. 10.) representing the laborers as tired, and the remaining difficulties, even of that first part of the work, the removing of the rubbish, as insuperable. Can Judah, that warlike, valiant tribe, sneak thus? Active, leading men have many times as much ado to grapple with the fears of their friends, as with the terrors of their enemies

III. The information brought to Nehemiah of the enemies' designs, v. 12. Some Jews that dwelt by them, in the country, though they had not zeal enough to help in building, yet, having by their situation opportunity to discover the enemies' motions, had so much honesty and affection to the cause, as to give intelligence; nay, that it might be the more credited, they came themselves, and repeated it as men in earnest, and under a concern, and the report was confirmed by many witnesses; their intelligence is expressed abruptly, and finds a 2:10,19. Ezra 4:1—5. Acts 5:17. b Ps. 35:15,16. 44:13,14. Matt. 27:29. Heb. 11:36.

c Ezra 4:9,10.
d 1 Sam. 14:11,12. 17:43,44. Zech. 12:8. 1 Cor. 1:27.
* Heb. leave to themselves.
e 12:27,43.
f 10. Ez. 37:3—13. Hab. 3:2.
g 2:10,19. 6:1. 1 K. 20:10,18. 2 K. 18:23.
h Ps. 123:3,4.
† Heb. despite.
i 1 Sam. 17:26. Ps. 79:12. Prov. 3:34. Hos. 12:14.
k Ps. 59:5—13. 69:27,28. 109:14,15. Jer. 18:23. 2 Tim. 4:14.
l Ps. 51:1,9. Is. 43:25. 44:22.
m Is. 36:11,12.
n 6:15. 1 Chr. 29:3,14,17,18. 2 Chr. 29:36. Ps. 110:3. 2 Cor. 8:16,17. Phil. 2:13. Heb. 13:21.
o 1. 2:10,19.
p Judg. 10:7, &c. 11:12, &c. 1 Sam. 11:2. 2 Sam. 10:1—5. 2 K. 24:2 2 Chr. 20:1. Ez. 25:3—7. Am. 1:13.
q 13:23,24. 1 Sam. 5:1,2. 2 Chr. 26: 6—8. Jer. 25:20. Am. 1:8. 3:9. Zech. 9:5,6.
r Ezra 4:4—16. 5:8.
‡ Heb. ascended.
s Gen. 3:15. Acts 4:17,18. 5:33. Rev. 12:12,13,17.

NOTES.

CHAP. IV. V. 4, 5. The Jews were at this time the church of God: they were actually employed in his service: their enemies, without the smallest ground of complaint against them, despised and hated them for his sake: if they succeeded in their designs, they would subvert true religion; and their condign punishment would form a salutary example to all other adversaries, and be subservient to the cause of truth and righteousness. So that, zeal for the honor of God, and love to his people, induced Nehemiah to pray, that these scorners might be exposed to that reproach which they cast on the Jews, and become 'a prey to their enemies in the land of captivity;' and that their sins might not be covered, or blotted out, by the merciful forgiveness of God: seeing they had endeavored to discourage the builders, and render them disaffected to their work; (M. R. i—1. —Such scriptural requests are prophetical, or declaratory of the judgments of God against persecutors: and the subsequent doom of these nations was an answer to this prayer. (Ps. 69:21—28. 109:6—20.) 'This prayer . . . was confirmed by the destruction of these nations, by the Maccabees and their successors.' Patrick. SCOTT.

Turn, &c.] 'A prayer of this kind, understood literally, is not lawful for any Christian. Such sayings are excusable in the mouth of a Jew, under severe irritation. Probably we should understand these most terrible imprecations, as declaratory; for the same form of the verb, in the Heb. is used as precative and imperative. Their reproach shall be turned. They shall be given for a prey, &c. All who know the genius of the Heb. know that the future tense is used to express all these senses. These declarations of God's judgments respected their bodies, and life; not their souls. And then they amount to no more than this, "What a man soweth that he shall reap."' Dr. A. CLARKE.

Verses 7, 8.

All these nations, (except perhaps the Arabians,) were subjects of 8 And [t] conspired all of them together, to come and to fight against Jerusalem, and to * hinder it.

9 Nevertheless [u] we made our prayer unto our God, and [x] set a watch against them day and night, because of them.

10 And Judah said, [y] The strength of the [z] bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish; so that we are not able to build the wall.

11 And our adversaries said, [a] They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass, that when the Jews which dwelt by them came, they said unto us [b] ten times, † From all places whence ye shall return unto us, they will be upon you.

13 Therefore [c] set I in ‡ the lower places behind the wall, and on the higher places, I even set the people after their families with [d] their swords, their spears, and their bows.

14 And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, [e] Be not ye afraid of them: [f] remember the LORD, which is [g] great and terrible, and [h] fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses.

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and [i] God had brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, [k] every one unto his work.

16 And it came to pass from that time forth, that the half of [l] my servants wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were behind all the house of Judah.

17 They which builded on the wall, and they that [m] bare burdens, with those that laded, every one [n] with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon.

18 For the builders, every one had his sword girded § by his side, and so builded: and [o] he that sounded the trumpet was by me.

work for the critics; which perhaps is designed to intimate, that they gave it as men out of breath, and in confusion, whose very looks would make up the deficiencies of their words. I think it may be read, without supplying any thing, 'Whatever place ye turn to, they are against us, so you have need to be on your guard on all sides.' God has many ways of bringing to light, and so bringing to nought, the devices and designs of his and his church's enemies.

IV. The pious and prudent methods Nehemiah, hereupon, took to baffle them, and cure his work and workmen; it is said, (v. 14.) he looked. 1. He looked up, put himself and his cause under the divine protection, v. 9. That was this good man's way, and should be ours. This he did first before using any means, for with God we must always begin. 2. He looked about him. Having prayed, he set a watch. The instructions Christ gives for our spiritual warfare, agree with this, Matt. 26: 41. Watch, and pray. If we think to secure ourselves by prayer only, without watchfulness, we are slothful, and tempt God: and if by watchfulness, without prayer, we are proud, and slight God; either way, we forfeit his protection.

Observe, (1.) How he posted the guard, v. 13. In the lower places, he set them behind the wall, that they might annoy the enemy over it, as a breastwork; but in the higher places, where the wall was raised to its full height, he set them on it, that from its top they might throw down stones or darts on the heads of the assailants: he set them after their families, that mutual relation might engage to mutual assistance. (2.) How he animated and encouraged them, v. 14. He observed even the nobles and rulers, as well as the people, to be in great consternation on the intelligence brought, and ready to conclude they were all undone, by which their hands were weakened both for work and war, therefore he endeavors to silence their fears. Those that with an eye of faith see the church's God to be great and terrible, will see the church's enemies to be mean and despicable. The reigning fear of God is the best antidote against the ensnaring fear of man. He that is afraid of a man that shall die, forgets the Lord his Maker, Isa. 51: 12, 13.

V. The disappointment this happily gave the enemy, v. 15. They knew they could not gain their point but by surprise, and if their plot was known, it was quashed. The Jews, hereupon, returned every one to his work, with so much the more cheerfulness, because they saw plainly that God owned it, and owned them in doing it. God's care of our safety should engage and encourage us to go on with vigor in our duty. As soon as a danger is over, let us return to our work, and trust God another time.

V. 16—23. When the builders had so far reason to think the design of the enemies broken, as to return to their work, yet they were not so secure as to lay down their arms, knowing how restless and unwearied they were in their attempts, and that, if one design failed, they would be hatching another. Thus must we watch always against our spiritual enemies, and not expect our warfare to be accomplished till our work is.

1. While one half was at work, the other half was under their arms, holding spears, and shields, and bows, not only for themselves but for the laborers too, who would immediately quit their work, and betake themselves to their weapons, on the first alarm, v. 16. Probably they changed services at such and such hours, which would relieve the fatigue of both, and particularly ease the bearer of burdens, whose strength was decayed; (v. 10.) while they held the weapons, they were eased yet not idle. They thus dividing their time between the trowels and the spears, are said to work with one hand, and hold their weapons with the other, (v. 17.) which cannot be understood literally, for the work would require both hands, but it intimates they were equally employed in both. Thus must we work out our salvation with the weapons of our warfare in our hand, still fighting the good fight of faith.

2. Every builder had a sword by his side, (v. 18.) which he could carry without hindering his labor. The Word of God is the sword of the Spirit, which we ought, as Christians, to have always at hand, both in our labors, and conflicts.

t Ps. 2:1—3. 83:4—11. Is. 8:9,10. Acts 23:12,13.
* Heb. make an error to it.
u 1:11. Gen. 32:9—12,28. 2 K. 19:14—19. Ps. 50:15. 55:16—18. Luke 6: 11,12. Acts 4:24—30. x Matt. 26:41. Luke 21:36. 1 Pet. 5:8.
y Num. 13:31. 32:9. Ps. 11:1,2. Hag. 1:2. z 2 Chr. 2:18. Ez. 29:18.
a Judg. 20:29,&c. Ps. 56:6. Is. 47:11. 1 Thes. 5:2. b Gen. 31:7,41. Num. 14:22. Job 19:3.
† Or, That from all places ye must return to us.
c Gen. 32:13—20. 2 Chr. 32:2—8. Ps. 112:5. Matt. 10:16. 1 Cor. 14:20.
‡ Heb. From the lower parts of the place. d 17,18. Cant. 3:7,8. Eph. 6:11—20. e Num. 14:9. Deut. 1:21. 20:3,4. Josh. 1:9. 2 Chr. 20:15—17. 32:7. Ps. 27: 1. 46:11. Is. 41:10—14. Heb. 13:6.
f 1-a. 20:7. 77:10—20. 143:5. Is. 51: 12,13. 63:11—13.
g 1:5. Deut. 10:17. Job 37:22. Ps. 65:5. 66:3. Is. 64:1—3. Nah. 1:2—7. Heb. 12:20,21,28,29.
h 2 Sam. 10:12.
i 2 Sam. 15:31. 17:14. Job 5:12,13. Ps. 33:10,11. Prov. 21:30. Is. 8:10. 44:25. Lam. 3:37. 1 Cor. 3:19,20. k Mark 13:34. Rom. 12:11. 1 Thes. 4:11. l 23. 5:15,16. Ps. 101:6.
m 10.
n Dan. 9:25. 1 Cor. 9:26. 16:13. 2 Cor. 6:7. Eph. 6:11,&c. 2 Tim. 2:3. 4:7.
§ Heb. on his loins.
o Num. 10:9. 2 Chr. 13:12—17.

Persia; and were induced by Sanballat to unite against Nehemiah and the Jews, when acting by the king's commission; so their attempt was a conspiracy in the most criminal sense. Dreading either the resentment of the king, or the valor of the Jews, they had not hitherto dared to attack them openly, notwithstanding the greatness of their malice. (Matt. 26:3—5. Acts 23:12—22.) 'The last words in the Heb. are to make an error in it; i. e. to put them by the work, or to make them not know which way to turn themselves.' Patrick. SCOTT.

Verse 9.

The connection, here marked, between the greatest simplicity and piety, in trusting God alone and seeking help from Him by prayer, and the most vigilant and diligent activity in the use of all proper means, is well worthy of notice. ID.

'The strongest confidence in the protection and favor of God, does not preclude the use of all or any of the means of self-preservation and defence, which his providence has put in our power. While God works in us to will and to do; we should proceed to willing, through the power He has given us to will: and to action, through the power He has given us to act. We cannot will, but through God's power; we cannot act, but through God's strength. The power, and the use of it, are two distinct things. We may have the power to will, and not will: and we may have the power to do, and not act: therefore, says the apostle, seeing God has wrought in you these powers, see that you work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.'

Dr. A. CLARKE.

Verse 11.

Some think, certain of the princes reported these sayings of the adversaries, in order to intimidate the builders: being themselves weary of the labor, and not cordially affected to the cause. It was not however likely, Sanballat could introduce into the city so large a number of soldiers, as would suffice to overpower and destroy all the Jews, and stop the work, without being discovered, till he and his troops were in the midst of the builders. [Yet such terrifying rumors, exaggerated by their own fears, are effectual to melt the hearts of the wonder-loving mass, and so are dangerous and often fatal to the great public designs of patriotism in critical times.] Indeed the conduct of those, who reported such a plan of the enemy, was more suited to intimidate the inconsiderate, than to convince wise men that they really expected it would be carried into execution. SCOTT.

Verses 16—18.

Wrought with one of his hands, &c.] The expression is figurative, implying that every man was both a builder, and a soldier. ID.

19 And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another.

20 In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: [p] our God shall fight for us.

21 So [q] we labored in the work: and half of them held the spears, from the rising of the morning, till the stars appeared.

22 Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let [r] every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labor on the day.

23 So neither [s] I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our clothes, * saving that every one put them off for washing.

CHAP. V.

The poor Jews complain of the debts which they had unavoidably contracted, and which compelled them to mortgage their lands, and even sell their children, 1—5. Nehemiah rebukes the rich usurers, who oppress their brethren; and obliges them to engage by oath to make full restitution, 6—13. He refuses the governor's customary allowances, and maintains great hospitality at his own charge, 14—19.

AND there was [a] a great cry of the people, and of their wives, against [b] their brethren the Jews.

2 For there were that said, [c] We, our sons and our daughters, are many: therefore [d] we take up corn for them, that we may eat and live.

3 Some also there were that said, [e] We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, [f] because of the dearth.

3. Care was taken both to get, and give, early notice, in case the enemy should endeavor to surprise them. The work was large, and the builders dispersed; for in all parts of the wall, they were laboring at the same time. Nehemiah kept a trumpeter always by him, and continually walked round to oversee the work, and encourage the workmen, and so would have speedy intelligence of an attack, of which, by sound of trumpet, he would soon notify all, and they must immediately repair to him, with full assurance that God would fight for them, v. 18—20. When they acted as workmen, they should be dispersed wherever there was work to do; but when, as soldiers, they must come into close order, and be found in a body. Thus should the laborers in Christ's building be ready to unite against the common foe.

4. The inhabitants of the villages were ordered to lodge within Jerusalem, with their servants, not only that they might be nearer their work in the morning, but be ready to help in case of an attack in the night, v. 22. The strength of a city lies more in its hands than in its walls; secure them, and God's blessing on them, and be secure.

5. Nehemiah himself, and all his men, kept close to business, v. 21. Thus ought we always to be on our guard against our spiritual enemies, not only (as here) while it is light, but when it is dark, for they are the rulers of the darkness of this world. Nay, so very intent was Nehemiah on his work, and so fast did he hold his servants to it, that while the heat of the business lasted, neither he himself, nor his attendants, went to bed, but every night slept in their clothes, (v. 23.) only shifting them now and then, either for cleanliness, or in case of ceremonial pollution. Then good work is likely to go on successfully, when those that labor in it, thus make a business of it.

CHAP. V. How bravely Nehemiah, as a wise and faithful governor, stood on his guard against the attacks of enemies abroad, we read in the foregoing ch. Here we have him no less bold and active to redress grievances at home, and, having kept them from being destroyed by their enemies, to keep them from destroying one another.

V. 1—5. We have here the tears of the oppressed. Hard times and hard hearts made the poor miserable.

I. The times were hard. There was a dearth of corn, (v. 3.) probably, for want of rain, with which God had chastised their neglect of his house, (Hag. 1: 9—11.) and the non-payment of their church-dues, Mal. 3: 9, 10. Thus, foolish, sinful men bring God's judgments on themselves, and then fret and complain of them. When the markets are high, and provisions scarce and dear, the poor soon feel it. Blessed be God for the mercy, and God deliver us from the sin, of fulness of bread, Ezek. 16: 49. What made the scarcity more grievous, was, their sons and daughters were many, v. 2. The families most necessitous, were most numerous. Some have estates and no children; others children and no estates; those who have both, have reason to be thankful, those who have neither, may the more easily be content.—Those who have great families and little substance, must learn to live by faith in God's providence and promise; and those who have little families and great substance, must make their abundance a supply for the wants of others. But this was not all; as corn was dear, so the taxes were high: the king's tribute must be paid, v. 4. This mark of their captivity still remained on them. Perhaps it was a poll money required, and then, their sons and their daughters being many, it rose the higher. The more they had to maintain, (a hard case!) the more they had to pay. Their families came poor out of Babylon, they had been at great expense in building them houses, and had not yet got up their strength when these new burdens came. The straits of poor housekeepers who make hard shift to get an honest livelihood, and sometimes want what is fitting for them and their families, are well worthy the compassionate consideration of those, who either with their wealth, power, [patronage, sympathy, or friendly counsel,] are in a capacity to help them.

II. Money must be had, but it must be borrowed, and they that lent, taking advantage of their necessity, were very hard, and made a prey of them. 1. Exacting interest at 12 per cent. the hundredth part every month, v. 11. If men borrow large p Ex. 14:14,25. Deut. 1:30. 3:22. 20: 4. Josh. 23:10. q 1 Cor. 15:10,58. Gal. 6:9. Col. 1:29.

r 11:1,2.
s 5:16,17. 7:2. Judg. 9:48.
* Or, every one went with his weapon for water. Judg. 5:11. a Ex. 3:7. 22:25—27. Job 31:38,39. 34:28. Is. 5:7. Luke 18:7. Jam. 5:4. b Lev. 25:35—37. Deut. 15:7—11. Acts 7:26. 1 Cor. 6:6—8. c Ps. 127:3—5. 128:2—4. Mal. 2:2. d Gen. 41:57. 42:2. 43:8.
e Gen. 47:15—25. f Mal. 3:8—11.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The pious labors of those, who endeavor to promote true religion, must always excite the indignation of such as are 'haters of God,' and of his truth and holiness: nay, in this case, the wisest and most excellent behavior will be reproached and derided, as madness and folly.—The most sacred things may easily be represented in so ridiculous a light, as to excite profane laughter: a small measure of wit, united with competent malice, impiety, and impudence, will suffice.—Contempt and derision frequently prove the Christian's protection, and give him leisure to effect his designs, without more formidable opposition. The means he uses appear feeble to proud despisers; but, by the power and blessing of God, they produce durable and extensive effects: and all the efforts of man, seconded by the power and policy of hell, have failed, and ever will fail, to subvert the cause, which infidels have dreamed would fall of itself, or on the first assault.—When insulted or injured, let us then give up ourselves to prayer: and the supplications of believers, throughout the world, for the prosperity of the church, and the success of the Gospel, will eventually be answered, [if not in the conversion of such sinners,] in the reproach and merited punishment of all impenitent opposers.—Those, who disagree in almost every other thing, will often unite in persecution: (Matt. 22: 15—22.) and that enmity, which at one time dictates contempt and derision, will at another suggest more violent and cruel measures; especially when the servants of God are active, united, and successful. So that proud scorners are not fit to be trusted with power; whatever professions of candor they may make, or however they may plead for toleration.—In important and useful undertakings, we should expect discouragement from every quarter: for we shall be tried, not only by the anger, contempt, treachery and cruelty of enemies, but also by the inconstancy and lukewarmness of friends and helpers. But if we be led thereby to a more simple confidence in God, and to the more diligent use of proper means, and if our enemies cannot fright us from duty, or deceive us into sin, or find us unwatchful, they cannot hurt or hinder us. When ministers of religion, or other active instruments, add the example of diligence, courage, self-denial, and patience, to their exhortations; others will be stirred up, who were before drawn or driven from their work.—Every true Christian is both a laborer and a soldier, working with one hand and fighting with the other, and called, by the sound of the Gospel, alternately to his work and to the conflict.

SCOTT.

(16.) Habergeons, &c.] Cuts, 1 Sam. 17:5—7. 2 Sam. 1:9. 1 K. 22:34, Ezra 1:69. Ex. 17:20, &c. ED.

Verses 19, 20.

The priests were directed to blow the sacred trumpets; (Num. 10: 2—10.) and no doubt some constantly attended, one at least, in the different stations selected, to sound the alarm when needful: and this was a token that the Lord would fight for his people. (M. R.) SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. V. V. 1—5. It seems, the attention of Nehemiah was interrupted, before the wall was completed, by the affair recorded in this ch. (6:15, 16.) Amidst the depredations to which the Jews were exposed, and their attention to self-defence, it is likely tillage was in some degree neglected, and a scarcity of corn ensued. It is also supposed by learned men, that these events occurred in the sabbatical year; which, if indeed it were so, would increase the difficulties of the 4 There were also that said, We have borrowed money for [e] the king's tribute, and that upon our lands and vineyards.

5 Yet now [h] our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children: and, lo, [i] we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought unto bondage already: neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and vineyards.

6 And [k] I was very angry when I heard their cry, and these words.

7 Then * I consulted with myself, and [l] I rebuked the nobles and the rulers, and said unto them, [m] Ye exact usury, every one of his brother. And [n] I set a great assembly against them;

8 And I said unto them, We, [o] after our ability, have [p] redeemed our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even [q] sell your brethren? or [r] shall they be sold unto us? Then [s] held they their peace, and found nothing to answer.

9 Also I said, [t] It is not good that ye do: ought ye not [u] to walk in the fear of our God, because of [x] the reproach of the heathen our enemies?

10 [y] I likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn: [z] I pray you let us [a] leave off this usury.

11 [b] Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, [c] their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them.

12 Then said they, [d] We will restore them, and will require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest. Then [e] I called the priests, and took an oath of them, that they should do according to this promise.

13 Also [f] I shook my lap, and said, [g] So God shake out every man from his house, and from his labor, that performeth not this promise, even thus be sums, to trade with, to increase their stocks, or to purchase land, there is no reason but the lender should share with the borrower in his profit; or if to spend on their lusts, or repair what they have so spent, why should they not pay for their extravagances? But if the poor borrow, to maintain their families, and we be able to help them, certainly we ought either to lend freely what they need, or (if they be not likely to repay it) to give freely. Nay, 2. They forced them to mortgage their lands and houses to secure the money (v. 3.) and not only so, but took the profits of them for interest, (v. 5. compare v. 11.) that by degrees they might make themselves masters of all they had. Yet this was not the worst. 3. They took their children for bond-servants, to be enslaved or sold at pleasure, v. 5. This they complain of most sensibly, and make an humble remonstrance of to Nehemiah, not only because they saw he was a great man that could relieve them, but a good man that would. Whither should the injured poor flee for succor, but to the shields of the earth? to the chancery, to the charity, in the royal breast, and those deputed by it, for relief against the summum jus—the extremity of the law?

We may leave Nehemiah hearing the complaint, and inquiring into the truth of the complainants' allegations, but let us lament the hardships many groan under, and remember them in our prayers and succors, while we abhor their pride and cruelty, who drink the tears, the blood, of those they have under their feet. But let those who show no mercy, expect judgment without mercy. It was an aggravation of their sin, that they were themselves so lately delivered out of bondage, which obliged them in gratitude to undo the heavy burden, Isa. 58: 6.

V. 6—13. It should seem, the foregoing complaint was made to Nehemiah, when he was as full as possible of public business; yet, perceiving it to be just, he did not reject it because unseasonable; nor chide the petitioners, nor fall into a passion with them, for disturbing him, when they saw how much he had to do, (a fault men of business are too often guilty of,) nor did he so much as adjourn the hearing till he had more leisure: knowing that, let him build Jerusalem's walls ever so high, so thick, so strong, the city could not be safe while such abuses were tolerated.

I. He was very angry, v. 6. It well becomes rulers to show themselves angry at sin, that by it they may be excited to duty, and others by the expressions of it, deterred from evil.

II. He consulted with himself, v. 7. So his anger was not excessive, but kept within bounds, for he did not say or do any thing unadvisedly: he consulted with himself what to say, and when, and how. Note, Reproofs must be given with great consideration, that what is well-meant, may not come short of its end, for want of being well managed. It is the reproof of instruction, that giveth life.

III. He rebuked the nobles and rulers, who were the moneyed men, and whose power perhaps made them more bold to oppress. Let no man imagine his dignity sets him above reproof.

IV. He set a great assembly against them; called the people together to witness what he said, and bear their testimony (which they will generally be forward to do) against the oppressions and extortions of their rulers. Ezra and Nehemiah were both very wise, good, useful men, yet, in cases not unlike, there was a great difference between their management: Ezra, when told of the sin of the rulers in marrying strange wives, rent his clothes, and wept, and prayed, and was hardly persuaded to attempt a reformation, fearing it to be impracticable, for he was a man of a mild, tender spirit; Nehemiah, when told of as bad a thing, kindled immediately, reproached the delinquents, incensed the people against them, and never rested till, by all the rough methods he could use, he forced them to reform; for he was a man of a hot and eager spirit. Note, 1. Very holy men may differ much from each other in their natural temper, and in other things that result from it. 2. God's work may be done well and successfully, and yet different methods taken in doing it; which is a good reason why we should neither arraign the management of others, nor make our own a standard. There are diversities of operation, but the same Spirit.

V. He fairly reasoned the case with them, and showed them the evil of what they did: the regular way of reforming men's lives, is, to endeavor, in the first place, to convince their consciences. Several things he offered to their consideration, so pertinent and just, that it appeared he had consulted with himself. 1. Those whom they oppressed, were their brethren, from whom the divine law did not allow them to take any usury, Deut. 23: 19, 20. 2. They were but lately redeemed out of the hand of the heathen; the body of the people was so by the wonderful providence of God, and some particular persons were so, at the charge of Nehemiah, and other pious and well disposed persons. 'Now,' says he, 'What an absurd thing is this! Must we be at the same trouble and expense to redeem them from you, as we were to redeem them from Babylon?' v. 8. Those whom g 9:37. Deut. 28:47,48. Josh. 16:10. 1 K. 9:21. Ezra 4:13,20. h Gen. 37:27. Is. 58:7. Jam. 2:5,6.

i Ex. 21:1—11. Lev. 25:39—43. 2 K. 4:1. Matt. 18:25. k 13:8,25. Ex. 11:8. Num. 16:15. Mark 3:5. Eph. 4:26.
* Heb. my heart consulted in me. Ps. 4:4. 27:3.
l Lev. 19:15. 2 Chr. 19:6,7. Ps. 82: 1—4. Prov. 27:5. 2 Cor. 5:16. Gal. 2:11. 1 Tim. 5:20. Tit. 2:15. m Ex. 22:25. Lev. 25:36. Deut. 15:2, 3. 23:19,20. 24:10—13. Ez. 22:12. 45:9.
n 2 Chr. 28:9—13. Matt. 18:17.
o Matt. 25:15,29. 2 Cor 8:12. Gal. 6:10. p Lev. 25:47—49.
q Ex. 21:16. Deut. 24:7.
r Rom. 14:15. 1 Cor. 8:11.
s Job 29:10. 32:15,16. Matt. 22:12. Rom. 3:19.
t 1 Sam. 2:24. Prov. 16:29. 17:26. 18: 5. 19:2. 24:23.
u 15. Gen. 20:11. 42:18. Acts 9:31.
x Gen. 13:7,8. 2 Sam. 12:14. Ez. 36: 20. Rom. 2:24. 1 Tim. 5:14. Tit. 2:5. 1 Pet. 2:12.
y Mic. 2:1. Luke 3:13,14. 1 Cor. 9. 12—18.
z 2 Cor. 5:11,20. 6:1. Philemon 8,9.
a 7. Ex. 22:25—27. Ps. 15:5. Ez. 18: 8,13.
b Lev. 6:4,5. 1 Sam. 12:3. 2 Sam. 12:6. Is. 58:6. Luke 8:8.
c 3,4.
d 2 Chr. 28:14,15. Ezra 10:12. Matt. 19:21,22. Luke 19:8.
e 10:29. 13:25. 2 Chr. 6:22,23. 15:13, 14. Ezra 10:5. Jer. 34:8—10. Matt. 26:63.
f Matt. 10:14. Acts 13:51. 18:6.
g 1 Sam. 15:28. 1 K. 11:29—31. Zech. 5:3,4.

poor, as well as aggravate the guilt of those, who thence took occasion to oppress their brethren. The nation seems also to have been visited with scarcity, for their sins. SCOTT.

Verse 8.

It was indeed impossible to reply to this animated and reasonable expostulation. (M. R.) ID.

Verse 9.

When Nehemiah said, 'It is not good that ye do,' his words imply that they had acted very wickedly. 'A soft form of speech, used when they mean it is very bad. Prov. 16:29.' Patrick. (M. R. t.) The exposed and distressed condition to which sin had reduced the nation, and the recent mercies which they had received, combined to enforce it on them, to 'walk in the fear of God,' lest He should give them up as a reproach to their enemies: or rather, lest the heathen, who were full of malice, should reproach them, as they justly might, for their avarice and cruelty; and thence take occasion to revile their religion, and blaspheme the name of God Himself. (M. R. u, x.) SCOTT.

Verses 10—13.

Nehemiah urged them voluntarily to leave off their usury, and to restore the lands of their poor brethren, and the increase of money and provisions, which they had exacted from them; to lend them without pledge or usury, in this time of distress; and to wait for payment till better times. This seems the immediate purport of his proposal: though probably he required the free remission of former debts, and the liberating of the children which were in bondage, as in the year of release.—(Jer. 34: 8—22.)—Thus this matter was in one assembly amicably settled, by motives and arguments taken from true religion, and the law of God; yet one of a similar kind distracted the Roman state he shaken out and *emptied. And all the congregation said, [h] Amen, and [i] praised the LORD. And [k] the people did according to this promise.

[Practical Observations.]

B. C. 434. 14 ¶ Moreover, [l] from the time that I was appointed to be their governor in the land of Judah, [l] from the twentieth year, even unto the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years, [m] I and my brethren have not eaten [n] the bread of the governor.

15 But the former governors, that had been before me, were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, beside forty shekels of silver; yea, [o] even their servants bare rule over the people: but [p] so did not I, [q] because of the fear of God.

16 Yea, also [r] I continued in the work of this wall, [s] neither bought we any land: and [t] all my servants were gathered thither unto the work.

17 Moreover there were [u] at my table [x] an hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers, beside those that came unto us from among the heathen that are about us.

18 Now that [y] which was prepared for me daily was one ox, and six choice sheep; also fowls were prepared for

* Heb. emptied, or void.

h Num. 5:22. Deut. 27:14—26.
i 1 Chr. 16:36.
k 2 K. 23:3. Ps. 50:14. 76:11. 119: 106. Ec. 5:5.
l 2:1.
m 1 Cor. 9:4—15,18. 2 Thes. 3:8,9.
n Ezra 4:13,14. Rom. 13:6,7.
o 1 Sam. 2:15—17. 8:15 Prov. 29:12. p Matt. 5:47. 2 Cor. 11:9. 12:13.
q 9. Job 31:23. Ps. 112:1. 147:11. Prov. 16:6. Ec. 12:13,14. Is. 50:10. Luke 18:2—4.
r Luke 8:15. Rom. 2:7. 1 Cor. 15:58. Gal. 6:9.
s Num. 16:15. Acts 20:33—35. 1 Thes. 2:5,6. t 2 Cor. 12:16—18. Phil. 2:20,21. u 2 Sam. 9:7,13. 1 K. 18:19.
x Is. 32:8. Rom. 12:13. 1 Pet. 4:9,10.
y 1 K. 4:22,23.

God by his grace has made free, ought not to be again brought under a yoke of bondage, Gal. 5: 1. 1 Cor. 7: 23. 3. That it was a great sin thus to oppress the poor; v. 9. though you get money by it, you contract guilt by it; and ought ye not to walk in the fear of God? But if you walk in the fear of God, you will not be either covetous of worldly gain, or cruel toward your brethren.'—They that walk in the fear of God, will not dare to do a wicked thing, Job 31: 13, 14, 23. 4. That it was a great scandal, and a reproach to their profession. 'It will give the heathen, our enemies, great occasion to speak against us; they will say, These Jews that profess so much devotion to God, see how barbarous they are one to another.' Note, (1.) All that profess religion, should be very careful not to expose themselves to reproach, lest religion be wounded through them. (2.) Nothing exposes religion more to the reproach of its enemies, than the worldliness and hard-heartedness of its professors. 5. He himself had set them a better example, (v. 10.) which he enlarges on afterward, v. 14, &c. They that rigorously insist on their right themselves, will with a very ill grace persuade others to recede from theirs.

VI. He earnestly pressed them not only not to make their poor neighbors any more such hard bargains, but to restore what they had got, v. 11. See how familiarly he speaks to them, putting himself in, as becomes reprovers, though far from being any way guilty of the crime. See how earnestly, and yet humbly, he persuaded them; though he had authority to command, yet, for love's sake, he rather beseeches. See how particularly he presses them to be kind to the poor; to give them up their mortgages, put them again in possession of their estates, remit the interest, and give them time to pay the principal. He urged them to their loss, yet, urging them to their duty, it would be, at length, to their advantage. What we charitably forgive will be remembered and recompensed, as well as what we charitably give.

VII. He laid them under all the obligations possible to do what he pressed them to. 1. He got a promise from them, (v. 12.) sent for the priests to give them their oath, that they would perform it, and bound them by a solemn curse or execration, hoping that would awe them, v 13. And so far were they from promising with regret, that they promised with all possible expressions of joy and thankfulness; as David, when he took God's vows upon him, sang and gave praises, Ps. 56: 12. This was well, but what follows, was better: they did according to this promise, and adhered to what they had done, not as their ancestors in a like case, who re-enslaved those whom, a little before, they had released, Jer. 34: 10, 11, 18. Good promises are good things, but good performances are all in all.

V. 14—19. Nehemiah had mentioned his own practice, as an inducement to the nobles not to burden the poor, no not with just demands; here he relates more particularly what his practice was, not in pride or vain-glory, or to pass a compliment on himself, but as an inducement both to his successors, and to the inferior magistrates, to be as tender as might be of the people's ease.

I. He intimates what had been the way of his predecessors, v, 15. He does not name them, because what he had to say of them, was not to their honor, and, in such a case, it is good to spare names; but the people knew how chargeable

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—13. Every domestic or relative comfort may become an occasion of increasing anguish: we should not then be discontented in the want of children, or anxious about temporal things; but seek our happiness from God.—But alas! too many take advantage of the necessities, to which others are reduced, in order to exact on them; that they may increase their own useless abundance, or support their luxurious and extravagant expenses! They wilfully forget, that the poor are of the same nature with themselves; and that they have the same wants, inclinations, natural affections, and feelings of pain and suffering. Instead of 'doing to others, as they would that others should do to them;' they grow careless of the welfare, and callous to the miseries, of their fellow creatures; and usurp authority over them, as bond-slaves, in proportion as wealth, power, and prosperity increase. Every gratification is deemed requisite for the lordly oppressors; but the meanest morsel is good enough for the poor and enslaved, though far better characters than themselves. Thus men prey on their species, and, by 'despising the poor, reproach their Maker;' and aggravate, instead of relieving, those distresses, which are always entitled to compassion and assistance; and especially, when they are not the effect of extravagance, or sloth; but of hard times, heavy taxes, large families, and debts contracted for bare necessaries. (Prov. 14: 31. 17: 5. P. O. 1—15, latter part.) Such conduct disgraces even human nature; but who can express sufficient abhorrence of it when adopted by professed Christians? It exposes our holy religion to the reproach, scorn, and abomination of heathens, and gives occasion to our enemies to blaspheme that worthy name, by which these selfish wretches are improperly distinguished. Thus, in all the four quarters of the globe, millions of Mohammedans and Pagans abhor Christianity, through the avarice, treachery, and cruelty of men called Christians!—Well then may the report of such crimes, and the cry of the oppressed, kindle an honest indignation in the breast of every friend of mankind, of his country, and of the Gospel.—In expostulating with selfish people, it is good to contrast their conduct with that of others, who are remarkably liberal and benevolent: but it is best to point out to them the example of Him, who, 'though He was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich.' When this is compared with the conduct of those, who do not care how many they reduce to the most abject penury or slavery, to enrich themselves; the contrast, between the Master and his professed disciples, is so striking, that it implies an argument, which is silencing, and unanswerable on any scriptural principles. (Jam. 2: 9—13, v. 13.)—If our oppressors [who pay the poor whom they hire when and how they will, and as little as possible,] and our slave-dealers were not, by habits long persisted in, more callous than these Jews, we might be encouraged to entreat and beseech them to leave off their extortion, to make restitution to the injured, and to show mercy to the poor. But alas! these methods are seldom successful! and more conclusive reasons alone prevail. This remains for the magistrate; and here the preacher must leave them. If arguments, expostulations, warnings, and persuasions will not induce them 'to repent, and to do works meet for repentance:' we must 'shake off the dust of our feet, as a testimony against them;' assuring them that God will soon shake them out from their ill-gotten treasures, and cast them down into destruction; (Jam. 5: 1—6.) if they continue to neglect the salvation of Christ, or refuse to imitate his example of loving-kindness and mercy: and when the righteous Judge shall denounce this tremendous sentence against them, all the multitudes of the redeemed will cry, 'Amen, and will praise the LORD.' SCOTT.

for ages, and the oppression was never effectually prevented! (2 Chr. 28:9—15. 1 Tim. 6:1—5.) SCOTT.

(11.) 'It is worthy of remark, that on like occasions money is now borrowed in Syria in the same way, at an interest of 12, 20, and even 30 per cent. So Volney.' COND. COMM.

(13.) Shook my lap.] This custom in cursing still remains in the E. see Roberts; it was common with the ancients; the Romans used it. See Burder. ED.

Verses 14—18.

This passage must have been added by Nehemiah several years after the date of the transaction before recorded: for that occurred soon after he came to Jerusalem.—The former governors had received from the people an income of about 5 pounds a day, (as it is generally interpreted;) besides a proportion of bread and wine for their households: while their attendants, (as it is too commonly the case,) lorded it over the people, and increased their burdens. It is not said who me, and once in ten days store of all sorts of wine: yet for all this [z] required not I the bread of the governor, because the bondage was heavy upon this people.

19 [a] Think upon me, my God, for good, [b] according to all that I have done for this people.

CHAP. VI.

Sanballat and his party practise against Nehemiah, by insidious attempts, false rumors, and the hired counsel of pretended prophets, 1—14. The wall is finished, and the enemies are disheartened, 15, 16. The nobles of Judah traitorously correspond with Tobiah, 17—19.

NOW it came to pass, [a] when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and [b] Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was [c] no breach left therein; (though [d] at that time I had not set up the doors upon the gates;)

2 That Sanballat and Geshem sent unto me, saying, [e] Come, let us meet together in some one of the villages in the plain of [f] Ono. But [g] they thought to do me mischief.

3 And [h] I sent messengers unto them, saying, I [i] am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: why should the work

z 14,15
a 13:14,22,31. Gen. 40:14. Ps. 25:6, 7. 106:4. Jer. 29:11. b Ps. 18:23—25. Matt. 10:42. 25:34—40.
a 2:10,19. 4:1,7.
b 6. Gashmu.
c 4:6,7. Dan. 9:25.
d 3:3,6.
e 2 Sam. 3:27. 20:9. Ps. 37:12. Prov. 26:24—26. Ec. 4:4.
f 11:35. 1 Chr. 8:12.
g Ps. 12:2. 37:12,32. Jer. 12:2. Ez. 33:31. Mic. 7:4,5. Luke 20:19—21.
h Prov. 14:15. Matt. 10:16.
i Ec. 9:10. Luke 14:30. John 9:4. 1 Tim. 4:15,16.

they had been, and how dear the country paid for all the benefit of their government. The government allows them forty shekels of silver, which was near five pounds, (so much a day, it is probable,) but beside that, they obliged the people to furnish them with bread, and wine, insisting on it as perquisites of their office, and not only so, but they suffered their servants to squeeze the people, and to get all they could out of them. Note, 1. It is no new thing for those who are in public places, to seek themselves more than the public welfare, nay, and to serve themselves by the public loss. 2. Masters must be accountable for all the acts of fraud and injustice, violence and oppression, which they connive at in their servants.

II. He tells us what had been his way. In general, he had not done as the former governors did; he would not, he durst not, because of the fear of God: those that truly fear God, will not dare to do any thing cruel or unjust. And it was purely that which restrained him; he was thus generous, for conscience-sake, because of the fear of God. What a good hand his predecessors made of their place, appeared by the estates they raised; but Nehemiah, for his part, got nothing, except the satisfaction of doing good, v. 16.

Let us remember the words of the Lord, how He said, It is more blessed to give than to receive, Acts 20: 35. And observe here, 1. How little Nehemiah received of what he might have required; he did the work of the governor, but he did not eat the bread of the governor, (v. 14.) did not require it, v. 18. but lived on what he had got in the king of Persia's court, and his own estate in Judea: the reason he gives, is, Because the bondage was heavy on the people; while they groaned under so much hardship, he could not find in his heart to add to their burden, but would rather lessen his own estate than ruin them. Note, In our demands, we must consider not only the justice of them, but the ability of those on whom we make them; where there is nothing to be had, we know who loses his right. 2. How much he gave, which he might have withheld. (1.) His servants' work, v. 16. The servants of princes think themselves excused from labor; but Nehemiah's, by his order, no doubt, were all gathered to the work. Those that have many servants, should contrive how they may do good with them, and keep them well employed. (2.) His own meat, v. 17, 18. He kept a very good table, not on certain days, but constantly; he had many honorable guests, at least, 150 of his own countrymen, persons of the first rank, beside strangers that came to him on business; and he had plentiful provisions for his guests, v. 19. Let those in public places remember that they were preferred to do good, not to enrich themselves; and let less people learn to use hospitality one to another without grudging, 1 Pet. 4: 9.

Lastly, He concludes with a prayer, v. 19. 1. Nehemiah here mentions what he had done for his people, not in pride, as boasting of himself, nor in passion, as upbraiding them; nor had he occasion to do it in his own vindication, as Paul in relation to the Corinthians, but to shame the rulers out of their oppressions. 2. He mentions it to God, in prayer, not as if he thought he had hereby merited any favor from God, as a debt, but to show that he looked not for any recompense of his generosity from men, but depended on God only to make up to him what he had lost and laid out for his honor; and he reckoned the favor of God reward enough; 'If God do but think upon me for good, I have enough.' His thoughts to usward are our happiness, Ps. 40: 5. He refers himself to God, to recompense him in such a manner as He pleased; 'If men forget me, let my God think on me, and I desire no more.'

CHAP. VI. The cries of oppressed poverty being stilled, we are now to inquire how the wall goes forward, and, in this ch. we find it carried on with vigor, and finished with joy, notwithstanding the restless attempts of the gates of hell.—How the Jews' enemies were baffled in their design to stop it by force, we read before, ch. 4. Here we find how their endeavors to drive Nehemiah from it, were frustrated. When they courted him to an interview, with design to do him a mischief, he would not stir: when they would have made him believe his undertaking was represented as seditious and treasonable, he regarded not the insinuation; when they hired pretended prophets to advise him to retire into the temple for his own safety, still he kept his ground; and notwithstanding the secret correspondence kept up between them and some false and treacherous Jews, the work was finished in a short time. Such were the struggles between the church and its enemies; but great is God's cause, and will be prosperous and victorious. We have here,

V. 1—9. I. A plot to trepan Nehemiah into a snare. The enemies knowing the good forwardness of the work, (v. 1.) must now or never, by one bold stroke, take off Nehemiah; they heard how well guarded he was, so there was no attacking him on the spot; they will therefore try all the arts of wheedling to get him among them. Observe, How they courted him to meet them, not in any city, lest that should have given cause to suspect they intended to secure him, but in a village in Benjamin, as if to consult about common interests, or as if they coveted his friendship, and would be glad to be better acquainted. But he had such secret intelligence, or he knew them so well, he concluded they aimed at his life; therefore, when they spake fair, he believed them not, v. 3. He says nothing of his jealousies, nor reproaches their treacherous design, but gives a good reason, and one of the true reasons, why he would not come. Compliment must always give way to business. Let those that are tempted to idle, merry meetings by vain companions, thus answer, 'We have work to do, and must not neglect it.' Four times he returned the same answer, which, we may suppose, much vexed them; for really it was the ceasing of the work they aimed at, and it would make them despair of breaking the undertaking, to see the undertaker so intent on it. I answered them (says he) after the same manner, v. 4. Note, We must

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 14—19. We must not do our works to be seen of men, and it is seldom expedient to speak of them ourselves. Yet we should 'let our light shine before men, that they may see our good works, and glorify God:' (Matt. 5:14—16. 6:1—4.) and sometimes a good man may be called on, as in his presence, and with an appeal to the consciences of many witnesses, to declare his own disinterested and upright conduct, and the motives of it, for a reproof, an instruction, and an example, to mankind. But it is always necessary for those to set a decidedly good example, who are bold reprovers and active reformers of others, and who speak and act with decision and sharpness against their crimes. In this case a man should give up his right, neglect opportunities of gain, be willing to labor and endure hardship without recompense, and to expend his substance in the support of a good cause. These are proper evidences and expressions of living faith; and our reconciled God will look, for good, on such as abound in these fruits of righteousness, according to all that they have done to his people. SCOTT.

---

these governors were. It is probable, however, the Persian governors W. of the Euphrates were meant: for they seem to have had authority over the Jews in all civil concerns, until Nehemiah's commission was granted.—In reading this account which he gave of himself, we should remember, that he wrote under the guidance of the Holy Spirit: and it was proper that his magnanimous, disinterested, and liberal conduct should stand on record, for an example to all others, what use to make of great riches; how to render authority a public blessing; and how to induce mankind to acts of justice and every good work, by taking the lead in them. (1 Cor. 9:13—18. 2 Cor. 11:7—12, 16—20. 12:11—15.)—'He loved religion better than riches, and took not his own due, that the people might serve God more cheerfully.... They (his servants) were constantly employed also in the same work, and received no pay for their labor, though it could not be done without neglect of his private business.' Patrick SCOTT.

Verse 19.

Nehemiah had shown great kindness to his brethren, to which they had not, in strict justice, any claim; and he lifted up his heart to God, when recording it, entreating him to show like kindness to him, and to remember him for good. His conduct in these circumstances evidenced that he was a true believer; he desired no recompense from man, but confidently expected one from a merciful God: he evidently spoke and acted as one that knew himself to be a sinner; and he did not expect a recompense as of debt; but in the manner, the Lord rewards a cup of cold water given to a disciple for his sake. (13:14. Matt. 10:40—42. Heb. 6:9, 10.) ID.

cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you?

4 Yet they sent unto me [k] four times after this sort; and I answered them after the same manner.

5 ¶ Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me in like manner, the fifth time, with [l] an open letter in his hand;

6 Wherein was written, [m] It is reported among the heathen, and [n] Gashmu saith it, [o] that thou and the Jews think to rebel: for which cause thou buildest the wall, [p] that thou mayest be their king, according to these words.

7 And thou hast also [q] appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying, There is [r] a king in Judah: and now shall it be reported to the king, according to these words. [s] Come now therefore, and let us take counsel together.

8 Then I sent unto him, saying, [t] There are no such things done as thou sayest, but [u] thou feignest them out of thine own heart.

9 For [x] they all made us afraid, saying, [y] Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done. [z] Now therefore, O God, strengthen my hands.

{Practical Observations.}

10 Afterward I came unto the house of [a] Shemaiah the son of Delaiah, the son of Mehetabeel, who was [b] shut up; and he said, [c] Let us meet together in [d] the house of God, within the temple; and [e] let us shut the doors of the temple: for they will come to slay thee; yea, [f] in the night will they come to slay thee.

11 And I said, [g] Should such a man as I flee? and who is there, that, being as I am, [h] would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in.

12 And, lo, [i] I perceived that [k] God had not sent him; but that he pronounced this prophecy against me: for Tobiah and Sanballat had [l] hired him.

13 Therefore was he hired, [m] that I should be afraid, and do so, and sin, and [n] that they might have matter for an evil report, [o] that never suffer ourselves to be overcome by the greatest importunity to do any thing sinful or imprudent; but, when attacked with the same temptation, must still resist it with the same reason and resolution.

II. A plot to terrify him from his work. Sanballat endeavors to make him think his undertaking was generally represented as factious and seditious, and would be resented accordingly at court, v. 5—7. The best men, even in their most innocent and excellent performances, have lain under this imputation. Note, It is common for that which is the sense only of the malicious, to be falsely represented by them as the sense of the many. Now Sanballat pretends to inform Nehemiah of this as a friend, that he might hasten to court to clear himself, or stay his proceedings for fear they should be thus misconstrued; at least, on this surmise, he urges him to meet him; hoping by this mean either to take him off, or, at least, to take him off from his business. Thus were his words softer than oil, yet war was in his heart, and he hoped, like Judas, to kiss and kill. But Nehemiah was soon aware what they aimed at, to weaken their hands from the work, (v. 9.) therefore he not only denied that such things were true, but that they were reported; he was better known than to be thus suspected. Thus he escaped the snare, and kept his ground. We must never omit known duty merely for fear it should be misconstrued, but, while we keep a good conscience, trust God with our good name. But indeed it was not thus reported. God's people, though sufficiently loaded with reproach, yet are not really fallen so low in reputation as some would have them thought.

In the midst of his complaint of their malice, in endeavoring to frighten him, and so weaken his hands, he lifts up his heart to Heaven in this short prayer, Now, therefore, O God, strengthen my hands. It is the great support and relief of good people, that in all their straits and difficulties they have a good God to go to. When, in our Christian work and warfare, we are entering on any particular services or conflicts, this is a good prayer for us, 'I have such a duty to do, such a temptation to grapple with; now, therefore, O God, strengthen my hands.' Some read it, not as a prayer, but as a holy resolution, (for O God is supplied in our translation,) Now therefore I will strengthen my hands. Note, Christian fortitude will be sharpened by opposition. Every temptation to draw us from our duty, should quicken us so much the more to duty.

V. 10—14. They leave no way untried, to take Nehemiah off from building; let him be any where but at his work.

I. Observing him to be cautious, they endeavor to gain their point by making him cowardly.

1. They basely design, to bring him to do a foolish thing, that they may laugh at, and insult over him for it, and so lessen his interest and influence, v. 13. This was indeed doing the devil's work, who is men's tempter, that he may be their accuser, draws men to sin, that he may glory in their shame. The greatest mischief our enemies can do us, is, to frighten us from duty, and bring us to do sin.

2. Their tools, were a pretended prophet and propheteess, whom they hired to persuade him to quit his work, and retire for his own safety. The prophet was Shemaiah, of whom it was said, he was shut up in his own house, either under pretence of retirement for meditation, and to consult the mind of God, or to give Nehemiah a sign in like manner to make himself a recluse. It should seem, Nehemiah had a value for him, for he went to his house to consult with him, v. 10. Other prophets there were, and one propheteess, Noadiah, (v. 14.) pensioners to the Jews' enemies, and traitors to their country. Whether they pretended to inspiration, does not appear; they do not say, Thus saith the Lord, as the false prophets of old did; if not so, yet they would be thought to excel in divine knowledge, and human prudence, and to have uncommon measures of insight and foresight, and were therefore consulted in difficult cases, as prophets had been. Let us hence lament, (1.) The wickedness of such bad men: that ever any should be so perfidious as to betray the cause of God and their country, even under the pretence of communion with God, and concern for their country. (2.) The unhappiness of such good men as Nehemiah, who are in danger of being imposed on by such cheats, and to whom no temptation comes k Judg. 16:6,10,15—20. Prov. 7:21. Luke 18:5. 1 Cor. 15:58. Gal. 2:5.

l 2 K. 18:26—28. 2 Cor. 2:11. 11:13—15. Eph. 6:11. 2 Thes. 2:10. m Jer. 9:3—6. 20:10. Matt. 5:11. Rom. 3:8. 2 Cor. 6:8. 1 Pet. 2:12,13. 3: 16. n 4,2. Geshem.
o 2:19. Ezra 4:12,15. p Luke 23:2. John 19:13.
q 12,13.
r 2 Sam. 15:10—12. 1 K. 1:7,18,25,34. s Prov. 26:24—26. Acts 23:15. t Acts 24:12,13. 25:7,10.
u Job 13:4. Ps. 36:3. 38:12. 52:2. Is. 59:4. Dan. 11:27. Matt. 12:34. John 8:44.
x 14. 4:10—14. 2 Chr. 32:18.
y 2 Chr. 15:7. Ezra 4:1—24. Is. 35:3, 4. Jer. 38:4. Heb. 12:12.
z Ps. 56:3. 68:35. 138:3. Is. 41:10 a 10. 3:29. 1 Chr. 25:3. Jer. 36:5.
b Jer. 36:5.
c Ps. 12:2. 37:12. 140:2,3. d 1 K. 6:5. 2 K. 11:3.
e 2 Chr. 28:24. 29:3,7. Mal. 1:10. Acts 21:30. f Job 24:13—17. John 3:20.
g 3. 1 Sam. 19:5. Job 4:3—6. Ps. 11: 1,2. Prov. 28:1. Is. 10:18. Luke 13:31—33. Acts 8:1. 20:24. 21:13. Heb. 11:27. h 9. Num. 32:7—9. Ec. 10:1. Phil. 2:17,30.
i Ez. 13:22. 1 Cor. 2:15. 12:10. k Jer. 14:14. 23:16,25. 28:15. Ez. 13: 7. 1 John 4:1.
l Is. 56:11. Ez. 13:19. Mic. 3:11. Acts 20:33. 1 Tim. 3:3. Tit. 1:7. 1 Pet. 5:2. 2 Pet. 2:3. Rev. 18:13. m rev. 29:5. Is. 51:7,12,13. 57:11. Jer. 1:17. Ez. 2:6 Matt. 10:28. 2 Tim. 1:7. Rev. 21:8.
n 6. Prov. 22:1. Ec. 7:1.
o Jer. 18:18. 20:10. Dan. 6:4,5. Matt. 22:15. 26:59. Acts 6:13. 2 Cor. 11: 12. 1 Tim. 5:14. Tit. 2:8.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V 1—9. The rage of persecutors, though terrible, is not so dangerous as the professed friendship of concealed enemies: so that except there is good evidence that men, who have opposed the cause of God, have truly repented, and been reconciled to Him, they cannot safely be trusted, when they court the favor of his people, but should rather be suspected of some mischievous design. (Ezra 4: 1—6. Acts 9: 10—16, 23—30.)—It is desirable to be constantly engaged in some useful employ; among other reasons, that we may have an answer ready for those invitations and proposals, which we cannot profitably accept, and scarcely know how to refuse.—The deceitful smiles of the world frequently form our first temptation in the path of duty. But if we steadfastly withstand them, and will not be diverted from our work; we must prepare for reproaches, slanders, and menaces, from the same quarter. Our firmness will be called obstinacy; our zeal, rashness; and our activity, ambition: nay, we shall be warned, that we are about to affront all our friends, and turn them into enemies; and to bring ourselves into dangers and difficulties, from which we cannot extricate ourselves, unless we follow other counsels, and act more circumspectly. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. VI. V. 5. 'Eastern letters are carefully rolled up, sealed, and put into a bag or purse, [note and cut, Ezra 4:7, 8.] so that this was intended as an insult, "open letters" being sent only to inferiors. So NIEBUHR, Hanway, Lady W. Montague, Pococke, Chardin.'
COND. COMM.

Verse 9.

The words, 'now therefore,' &c. seem an ejaculation; and the omission of the address (O God) implies the holy, yet reverend familiarity, with which this pious man communed with his condescending Father and Friend, and shows that his heart was habitually employed in thinking of his God. (John 20:11—17.) SCOTT.

they might reproach me.

14 [p]My God, [q]think thou upon Tobiah and Sanballat, according to these their works, and [r]on the prophetess Noadiah, and the rest of the prophets, that would have put me in fear.

15 ¶ So [s]the wall was finished in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul, [t]in fifty and two days.

16 And it came to pass, that [u]when all our enemies heard thereof, and all the heathen that were about us saw these things, they were much cast down in their own eyes: [x]for they perceived that this work was wrought of our God.

17 ¶ Moreover in those days [y]the nobles of Judah [*]sent many letters unto Tobiah, and the letters of Tobiah came unto them.

18 For there were many in Judah sworn unto him, because he was the son-in-law of Shechaniah the son of [z]Arah; and his son Johanan had taken the daughter of [a]Meshullam the son of Berechiah.

19 Also [b]they reported his good deeds before me, and uttered my † words to him. And Tobiah sent letters [c]to put me in fear.

p 5:19. Ps. 22:1. 63:1.
q 4:4,5. 13:29. Ps. 140:5—11. Jer. 11:20—23. 18:20—23. 2 Tim. 4:14, 15. 1 John 5:16. r 1 K. 22:22—24. Is. 9:14,15. Jer. 14: 15,16. 28:1,10,15. Ez. 13:16,17. Matt. 7:15. 24:11,24. 2 Tim. 3:8. Rev. 19:20. s Ezra 6:15. Ps. 1:3. Dan. 9:25.
t 4:1,2.
u 2:10. 4:1,7. 6:1,2.
x Ex. 14:25. Num. 23:23. Josh. 5:1. Ps. 125:2.
y 3:5. 5:7. 13:28. Mic. 7:3—6. Matt. 24:10—12.
* Heb. multiplied their letters passing to Tobiah.
z 7:10. Ezra 2:5.
a 3:4,30.
b Prov. 28:4. John 7:7. 15:19. 1 John 4:5.
† Or, matters.
c 9,13. Is. 37:10—14. Acts 4:18—21.

With more force, than that which comes under the color of religion, of revelation and devotion, and is brought by the hand of prophets.

3. These prophets plausibly pretended, the enemies would come and slay him in the night, which he had reason enough to believe true; they would, if they could, if they durst. Pretending much concern for his safety, they very gravely advised him to hide himself in the temple till the danger was over; that was a strong and sacred place, where he would be under the special protection of Heaven, Ps. 27: 5. Had Nehemiah been prevailed with to do this, immediately the people would both have left off their work, and thrown down their arms, and every one would have shifted for his own safety; then the enemies might easily, and without opposition, have demolished the works, broken down the wall again, and so gained their point. Self-preservation is a fundamental principle of the law of nature, yet that is not always the best and wisest counsel, which pretends to go on that principle.

II. He immediately resolved not to yield to this temptation, v. 11. Note, When tempted to sin, we should remember who, and what, we are, that we may not do any thing unbecoming us, and the profession we make. It is not for kings, O Lemuel, Prov. 31: 4. And the result of his reasonings was, he is at a point; 'I will not go in, I will rather die at my work, than live in an inglorious retreat from it.' Note, Holy courage and magnanimity will engage us, whatever it cost, never to decline a good work, or do a bad one.

I. He was immediately aware of what was the rise of it, v. 12. The wickedness of such mercenary wretches will, sooner or later, be brought to light. Two things Nehemiah says he dreaded in what he was advised to. (1.) Offending God; that I should be afraid, and do so, and sin. Sin is that which, above any thing, we should dread; and a good preservative it is against sin, to be afraid of nothing but sin. (2.) Shaming himself; that they might reproach me. Next to the sinfulness of sin, we should dread the scandal of it.

2. He humbly begs of God to reckon with them for their base designs on him, v. 14. As, when he had mentioned his own good services, he did not covetously or ambitiously prescribe to God what reward He should give him, but modestly prayed, Think on me, my God; (ch. 5: 19.) so here he does not revengefully imprecate any particular judgment on his enemies, but refers the matter to God. We must not avenge ourselves, but commit our cause to Him that judgeth righteously.

V. 15—19. Nehemiah is here finishing the wall, yet still is troubled by his enemies.

1. Tobiah, and the other adversaries of the Jews, had the mortification to see the wall built up, notwithstanding all their attempts to hinder it, and yet we have reason to believe the builders rested on the sabbaths, v. 15. Many were employed; what they did, they did cheerfully, and minded their business, because they loved it. The threats of their enemies, though intended to weaken them, it is likely, quickened them, that they might get their work done before the enemy came. See how much work may be done in a little time, if we set about it in earnest, and keep close to it.

When the enemies heard the wall was finished, before they thought it well begun, and when they doubted not but to have put a stop to it, they were much cast down in their own eyes, v. 16. and ashamed of their own confidence, that they should cause the work to cease. They envied the prosperity and success of the Jews; perhaps, the kings of Persia had not permitted them thus to fortify their own cities of Samaria. When Cain envied his brother, his countenance fell, Gen. 4: 5. They despaired also of ever doing the Jews the mischief they designed them; and well they might, for they perceived, by the wonderful success, that the work was wrought of God. Even these heathens had so much sense, as to see a special providence of God conversant about the affairs of the church, when they did remarkably prosper, Ps. 126: 2. God fighteth for Israel, and worketh with them.

2. Nehemiah had the vexation, notwithstanding this, to see some of his own people treacherously correspond with Tobiah, and serve his interest; and a great grief and discouragement, no doubt, it was to him, v. 17. They wrote with all the freedom and familiarity of friends to him, and welcomed his letters to them. Many in Judah were in a strict but secret confederacy with him, to advance the interest of his country, because he and his son had married daughters of Israel, v. 18. See the mischief of marrying with strangers; for one heathen converted by it, ten Jews were perverted. When once they became akin to Tobiah, they soon became sworn to him. A sinful love leads to a sinful league. They had the impudence to court Nehemiah himself into a friendship with him; reporting his good deeds before him; and representing him as an ingenuous person, well worthy his ac-

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 10—19. A thousand slanders will die away, one after another; while the malice of their authors will be exposed: but one real crime sometimes leaves an indelible stain on a man's character, and obstructs his future usefulness: let us then fear the least sin far more than any calumny. But those temptations are the most dangerous, which come from professed servants of God, and our own friends. Our appeal, however, in these cases, must be to the Word of God. (1 K. 22: 13, 14. Matt. 16: 21—23.) That cannot be from Him, let who will speak it, which contradicts his plain precept or truth; or which would induce us to neglect our duty, or prefer our own ease, emolument, credit, liberty, or life, to his glory and the welfare of his church; or which would persuade us to shrink from the cross, or refuse self-denial.—We need not always judge the adviser; but we ought in all cases, to try and prove the advice, and without scruple to reject all that is contrary to the Word of God. Every man should also study consistency with his profession, former character, station, and engagements. That which is allowable in one man, may be very improper in another: and we ought to venture any thing in a good cause, trusting in the Lord, and committing ourselves to his protection. Thus, all that God has done for us, or by us, may become an argument for watchfulness, diligence, self-denial, and perseverance.—It is also peculiarly instructive to consider, how others in similar circumstances would act. 'Would Peter or Paul have done so, to save their money, to indulge their sloth or pride, to escape a cross, a prison, or death? Do even the men of the world suffer themselves so easily to be diverted from their object, by every appearance of difficulty or peril.'—In all cases indeed they, who would lead others in arduous services, must share the danger and the hardship: and this is the reason, why the enemy of souls employs so many instruments, and forms so many projects, to discourage, or bring a reproach on, the active servants of God. If the shepherd can be frighted away, the flock will be scattered.—Every success of the Gospel discourages the enemies of God: and they sometimes perceive that it is his work, and yet hate it the more on that very account: but false brethren are the severest trial to the faithful servants of God. Yet under every discouragement, we should 'consider Jesus, who endured the contradiction of sinners against Himself, lest we be weary, and faint in our mind;' and who 'laid down his life for his sheep;' that after his example we may persevere in our duty, amidst every danger and opposition, not being overcome by the treachery, ingratitude, or perverseness of those around us, but still endeavoring to 'overcome evil with good:' and 'in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.' SCOTT.

Verse 15.

Elul.] Answering to part of Aug. and part of Sept. as it is supposed: for it is not elsewhere mentioned. SCOTT. Note, Ex. 12:2. ED.

Fifty-two days.] 'The work here, where the old materials were at hand, was little, compared with what Cæsar did in Gaul, &c. and Titus at Jerusalem, who built a wall round Jerusalem, of 5000 paces in 3 days, besides 13 towers of 10 stadia in circuit. Alexander, (so Arrian and Q. Curt.) built the walls of Alexandria, on the Tanais, nearly 8 miles in compass, in between 20 and 30 days. See Calmet.'

Dr. A CLARKE.

CHAP. VII.

Nehemiah, having finished the wall, and regulated the attendance of the Levites, commits the charge of the city to Hanani and Hananiah, 1—4. He finds a register of those who first came from Babylon, 5—7. The register is inserted, 8—69. The oblations made to the temple, 70—73.

NOW it came to pass, when [a] the wall was built, and [b] I had set up the doors, and [c] the porters, and the singers, and the Levites were appointed,

2 That I gave [d] my brother Hanani, and [e] Hananiah [f] the ruler of the palace, charge over Jerusalem: for he was [g] a faithful man, and [h] feared God above many.

3 And I said unto them, [i] Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened, until the sun be hot: and while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them: and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house.

4 Now the city was [*] large and great: but the people were few therein, and [k] the houses were not builded.

5 And [l] my God [m] put into my heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, [n] that they might be reckoned by genealogy. And I found a register of the genealogy of them which came up at the first, and found written therein;

B. C. 556. 6 These are [o] the children of the province, that went up out of the captivity, of those that had been carried away, [p] whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away, and came again to Jerusalem and to Judah, every one unto his city;

7 Who came with [q] Zerubbabel, [r] Jeshua, Nehemiah, [s] Azariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilshan, [t] Mispereth, Bigvai, [u] Nehum, Baanah: the number, I say, of the men of the people of Israel, was this;

8 The children of [x] Parosh, two thousand an hundred seventy and two.

9 The children of [y] Shephatiah, three hundred seventy and two.

10 The children of [z] Arah, six hundred fifty and two.

11 The children of [a] Pahath-moab, of the children of Jeshua and Joab, two thousand and eight hundred and eighteen.

12 The children of [b] Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

13 The children of [c] Zattu, eight hundred forty and five.

14 The children of [d] Zaccai, seven hundred and threescore.

15 The children of [e] Binnui, six hundred forty and eight.

16 The children of [f] Bebai, six hundred twenty and eight.

17 The children of [g] Azgad, two thousand three hundred twenty and two.

18 The children of [h] Adonikam, six hundred threescore and seven.

19 The children of [i] Bigvai, two thousand threescore and seven.

20 The children of [k] Adin, six hundred fifty and five.

21 The children of [l] Ater of Hezekiah, ninety and eight.

a 3:1,&c. 6:15.

CHAP. VII. V. 1—4. God saith concerning his church, (Isa. 62: 6.) I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem; that is Nehemiah's care here; for dead walls, without living watchmen, are but a poor defence.

The porters', singers', and Levites' work, in general, was to attend the temple-service, which had been neglected in some degree, but now was revived. God's worship is the defence of a place, and his ministers, when they mind their duty, are watchmen on the walls. Or, in particular, Nehemiah ordered them to be ready against the wall was to be dedicated, that they might perform that service in an orderly and solemn manner; and its dedication was its strength. That is likely to be beneficial to us, which is devoted to God.

1. He appointed two governors or consuls, to whom he committed the care of the city, and gave them in charge to provide for the public peace and safety; Hanani, his brother, who came to him with the tidings of the desolations of Jerusalem, a man of approved integrity, and affection to his country; and Hananiah, that had been ruler of the palace, of whom it is said, he feared God above many, v. 2. Some do fear Him greatly, and excel others in the expressions and instances of that fear; and, while those that fear God must evidence it by their being faithful to all men, and universally conscientious, God's Jerusalem is then likely to flourish, when those rule in it, and have charge of it, who are eminent for godliness and honesty. Some suppose, Nehemiah was now about to return to the Persian court, to have his commission renewed, and that he left these two worthy men in charge of the city in his absence. Good governors, when and where they cannot act themselves, must be very careful whom they depute.

2. He gave orders about the shutting of the gates, and the guarding of the walls, v. 3, 4. In vain had they a wall, if they were careless of their gates. They should not be opened in the morning, till they could see all was clear and quiet; and sentinels on the walls, or elsewhere, at convenient distances, should, in case of the approach of the enemy, give timely notice to the city of the danger; they must post themselves over against their own houses, because of them, it might be presumed, they would be in a particular manner careful. The public safety depends on every one's particular care to guard himself and his own family against sin, that common enemy. It is every one's interest to watch, but many understand not their own interest; it is therefore incumbent on magistrates to appoint watches. And as this people had lately found God with them in their building, (else they had built in vain,) so now that the wall was built, no doubt, they were made sensible that except the Lord kept the city, the watchmen waked but in vain, Ps. 127: 1, 2.

V. 5—73. We have here another good project of Nehemiah's; for wise and zealous men will be always contriving something or other for the glory of God, and the edification of his church. He knew very well the safety of a city, under God, depends more on the number and valor of the inhabitants, than on the height or strength of its walls; therefore, observing the people were few that dwelt in it, he thought fit to take an account of them, that he might find what families had formerly had their settlement in Jerusalem, but were now removed into the country, that he might bring them back; and what families could any other way be influenced by their religion, or business, to come and rebuild the houses in Jerusalem, and dwell in them. So little reason have we to wish we may be placed alone in the earth, or in Jerusalem itself, that much of our safety and comfort depends on our neighbors and friends. It is the

b 3:3. 6:1.
c 10:39. 11:3. 12:24. 1 Chr. 23: 25: 26: 2 Chr. 31:2. Ezra 3:8.
d 1:2.
e 10:23.
f 2:8.
g Num. 12:7. Ps. 101:6. Dan. 6:4. Matt. 24:45. 25:21. Luke 16:10—12. 1 Cor. 4:2. 2 Tim. 2:2.
h 5:15. Gen. 42:18. Ex. 18:21. 2 Sam. 23:3. 1 K. 18:3,12. Job 1:1. Is. 33 5,6.
i 13:19. Ps. 127:1. Matt. 10:16.
j 3:23,28—30.
* Heb. broad in spaces.
k Is. 58:12. Hag. 1:4—6. Matt. 6:33
l 5:19. 6:14.
m Ezra 7:27. 1 Cor. 15:10. 2 Cor. 3:5 8:16. Phil. 2:12,13. Col. 1:29. Jam 1:16,17.
n 64. 1 Chr. 9:1. Ezra 2:62.
o Ezra 2:1,&c. 5:8. 6:2.
p 2 K. 24:14—16. 25:... 2 Chr. 36: Jer. 39: 52:
q 12:1,7,10. Ez. 1:11. Sheshbazzar. 2:2. Hag. 1:1. Matt. 1:12,13. Zorobabel.
r Ezra 3:8,9. 5:2. Zech. 3:1 3. Joshua.
s Ezra 2:2. Seraiah, Reelaiah.
t Ezra 2:2. Mizpar.
u 12:3. Ezra 2:2. Rehum.
x 10:14. Ezra 2:3. 8:3. Pharosh. 10.25.
y Ezra 2:4. 8:8.
z 6:18. Ezra 2:5. 775.
a 10:14. Ezra 2:6. 2812. 8:4.
b Ezra 2:7. 8:7. 10:26.
c Ezra 2:8. 945.
d Ezra 2:9.
e Ezra 2:10. Bani. 642.
f Ezra 2:11. 6:3.
g Ezra 2:12. 1222.
h Ezra 2:13. 666.
i Ezra 2:14. 2056.
k Ezra 2:15. 454.
l Ezra 2:16.

NOTES.

CHAP. VII. V. 2, 3. The charge here given, and the service required, would be necessary even when Nehemiah resided at Jerusalem: for he could not superintend the gates and the watchmen, without being taken off from other important and numerous engagements.—Ruler of the palace. (2) 'So the house, where Nehemiah dwelt is called, because he was governor for the king, and a kind of Viceroy, who did all the king's business, and here, gave audience to the people, as the king was wont to do in his palace.' Patrick. (2:8.) SCOTT.

Until, &c.] (3.) 'So now in the E. city-gates are shut from sunset till sunrise. Travellers arriving after sunset must pass the night under the walls.' Dr. A. CLARKE.

Verse 4. Was large.] Fifty furlongs, 6 miles. Hecatæus, see Eusebius. Thirty three furlongs. Josephus. COND. COMM.

Verses 5, 6.

This account was taken of the people, in order to bring the tenth part of them to reside in Jerusalem; (11:1, 2.) and as it proved an useful measure, Nehemiah piously and reasonably ascribed the first thought of it to God, who 'put it into his heart.' (M. R.—Jam. 1.16—18.)—As the greatest part of the families consist of exactly the same number in both places; and the sum total in each, with several other particulars, entirely coincides; it can hardly be conceived, that almost 100 years should have made no greater changes.—Should any, however, conjecture, that some ancient copyist had inserted the wrong register, and that his mistake had been generally followed; the very conclusion would show, that such alterations are almost always liable to detection; and no reasonable man would think it the least objection to the divine inspiration of the sacred Scriptures. SCOTT.

22 The children of [m] Hashum, three hundred twenty and eight.

23 The children of [n] Bezai, three hundred twenty and four.

24 The children of [o] Hariph, an hundred and twelve.

25 The children of [p] Gibeon, ninety and five.

26 The men of [q] Bethlehem and Netophah, an hundred fourscore and eight.

27 The men of [r] Anathoth, an hundred twenty and eight.

28 The men of [s] Beth-azmaveth, forty and two.

29 The men of [t] Kirjath-jearim, Chephirah, and Beeroth, seven hundred forty and three.

30 The men of [u] Ramah and Gaba, six hundred twenty and one.

31 The men of [x] Michmas, an hundred twenty and two.

32 The men of [y] Beth-el and Ai, an hundred twenty and three.

33 The men of the other [z] Nebo, fifty and two.

34 The children of [a] the other Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

35 The children of [b] Harim, three hundred and twenty.

36 The children of [c] Jericho, three hundred forty and five.

37 The children of [d] Lod, Hadid, and Ono, seven hundred twenty and one.

38 The children of [e] Senaah, three thousand nine hundred and thirty.

39 ¶ The priests: the children of [f] Jedaiah, of the house of Jeshua, nine hundred seventy and three.

40 The children of [g] Immer, a thousand fifty and two.

41 The children of [h] Pashur, a thousand two hundred forty and seven.

42 The children of [i] Harim, a thousand and seventeen.

43 ¶ The Levites: the children of Jeshua, of Kadmiel, and of the children of [k] Hodevah, seventy and four.

44 [l] The singers: the children of Asaph, an hundred forty and eight.

45 [m] The porters: the children of Shallum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Akkub, the children of Hatita, the children of Shobai, an hundred thirty and eight.

46 ¶ The [n] Nethinims: the children of Ziha, the children of [o] Hashupha, the children of Tabbaoth, 47 The children of Keros, the children of [p] Sia, the children of Padon, 48 The children of Lebana, the children of [q] Hagaba, the children of [r] Shalmai, 49 The children of Hanan, the children of Giddel, the children of Gahar,

50 The children of Reaiah, the children of Rezin, the children of Nekoda, 51 The children of Gazzam, the children of Uzza, the children of [s] Phaseah, 52 The children of Besai, the children of Meunim, the children of [t] Nephishesim,

53 The children of Bakbuk, the children of Hakupha, the children of Harhur,

54 The children of [u] Bazlith, the children of Mehida, the children of Harsha, 55 The children of Barkos, the children of Sisera, the children of [v] Tamah, 56 The children of Neziah, the children of Hatipha.

57 ¶ The children of [x] Solomon's servants: the children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of [y] Perida, 58 The children of [z] Jaala, the children of Darkon, the children of Giddel, 59 The children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattil, the children of Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of [a] Amon.

60 All [b] the Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's servants, were three hundred ninety and two.

61 And these were they which went up also from Tel-melah, [c] Tel-haresha, Cherub, Addon, and Immer: but they could not shew their father's house, nor their * seed, whether they were of Israel.

62 The children of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, [d] six hundred forty and two.

63 ¶ And [e] of the priests: the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai, which took one of the daughters of [f] Barzillai the Gileadite to wife, and was called after their name.

64 These sought their register among [g] those that were reckoned by genealogy, but it was not found: therefore were they, as polluted, put from the priesthood.

65 And † the Tirshatha said unto them, [h] that they should not eat of the most holy things, [i] till there stood up a priest with Urim and Thummim.

66 ¶ The [k] whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore;

67 Besides [l] their man-servants and their maid-servants, of whom thre were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven: and they had [m] two hundred forty and five singing men and singing women.

68 [n] Their horses, seven hundred thirty and six: their mules, two hundred forty and five:

69 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five: six thousand seven hundred and twenty asses.

70 ¶ And ‡ some of [o] the chief of the fathers gave unto the work. [p] The Tirshatha gave to the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty [q] basins, five hundred wisdom of a nation, to keep the balance even between city and country; that the metropolis be not so extravagantly large as to drain and impoverish the country, nor yet so weak as to be unable to protect it. Now observe,

I. Whence this good design came, v. 5. Every good gift and work are from above; all is of God therefore all must be to Him. What is done by human prudence, must be ascribed to the direction of Divine Providence; He that teaches the husbandman his discretion, (Isa. 28: 26.) teaches the statesman his.

II. What method he took. 1. He called the rulers together, and the people, that he might have an account of their families, which, it is likely, he ordered them to bring with them out of their several districts.

2. He compared the old register, Ezra 2. with the present accounts. The title is the same here, v. 6, 7. as there, v. 1, 2. also the repetition of m Ezra 2:19. 223.

n Ezra 2:17. 323.
o Ezra 2:18. Jorah.
p Ezra 2:20. Gibbar.
q Ezra 2:21,22. 179.
r Ezra 2:23. Is. 10:30. Jer. 1.1. 11:21.
s Ezra 2:24. Azmaveth.
t Josh. 9:17. Ezra 2:25. Kirjatharim.
u Josh. 18:24,25. Ezra 2:26.
x 1 Sam. 13:5,23. Ezra 2:27. Is. 10:28. Michmash.
y Josh. 8:9,17. Ezra 2:28. 223.
z Ezra 2:29.
a 12. Ezra 2:31.
b Ezra 2:32. 10:31.
c Ezra 2:34.
d 6:2. 11:34,35. 1 Chr. 8:12. Ezra 2:33. 725.
e Ezra 2:35. 3630.
f 1 Chr. 24:7. Ezra 2:36.
g 1 Chr. 24:14. Ezra 2:37.
h 1 Chr. 9:12. 24:9. Ezra 2:38. 10:22.
i 1 Chr. 24:8. Ezra 2:39. 10:31. k Ezra 2:40. Hodaviah. 3:9. Judah.
l 1 Chr. 25:2. Ezra 2:41. 128.
m 1 Chr. 26: Ezra 2:42. 139. n Lev. 27:2—8. Josh. 9:23—27. 1 Chr. 9:2. o Ezra 2:43. Hasupha.
p Ezra 2:44. Siaha.
q Ezra 2:45,46. Hagabah, or, Hagab.
r Ezra 2:46. Shamlai.
s Ezra 2:49. Paseah.
t Ezra 2:50. Nephusim.
u Ezra 2:52. Bazluth.
v Ezra 2:53. Thamah.
x 11:3.
y Ezra 2:55. Peruda.
z Ezra 2:56. Jaalah.
a Ezra 2:57. Ami.
b Ezra 2:58.
c Ezra 2:59. Telharsa. Addan.
* Or, pedigree.
d Ezra 2:60. 652.
e Ezra 2:61—63.
f 2 Sam. 17:27. 19:31—39. 1 K. 2:7.
g 5. 1 Chr. 9:1.
† Or, the governor. 8:9. 10:1. Ezra 2:63.
h Lev. 2:3,10. 6:17. 10:17,18. 21:21—23.
i Ex. 28:30. Num. 27:21. Deut. 33:8.
k Ezra 2:64.
l Is. 45:1,2. Jer. 27:7.
m Ezra 2:65. 200.
n Ezra 2:66,67.
‡ Heb. part. Ezra 2:68—70.
o Num. 7:2—88. 1 Chr. 29:3—9.
p 8:9. 10:1.
q Ex. 12:22. 24:6. 1 K. 7:45. 1 Chr. 28:17. 2 Chr. 4:8,11. Jer. 52:19.

Verses 70—72.
This seems a distinct oblation from that recorded in Ezra: (2:68—70.) and was probably made, after the people were registered by Nehemiah, who was the Tirshatha, or governor, at this time, as Zerubbabel had and thirty priests' garments.

71 And some of the [r] chief of the fathers gave to the treasure of the work twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand and two hundred pound of silver.

72 And that which the rest of the people gave, was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pound of silver, and threescore and seven priests' garments.

73 So the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singers, and some of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Israel, dwelt in their cities; and [s] when the seventh month came, the children of Israel were in their cities.

CHAP. VIII.

The people being assembled, Ezra, with solemn worship, reads and expounds the law, 1—8. The people are greatly affected: but Nehemiah, Ezra, and the Levites, exhort them to joy in God, to cheerful feasting, and to liberality towards the poor, 9—12. Being instructed from the law concerning the feast of tabernacles, they keep it with great solemnity, 13—18.

AND [a] all the people gathered themselves together [b] as one man into the street that was [c] before the water-gate; and they spake unto [d] Ezra the scribe to [e] bring the book of the law of Moses, which the LORD had commanded to Israel.

2 And Ezra [f] the priest brought the law before [g] the congregation, both of men and women, and all that [*] could hear with understanding, upon [h] the first day of the seventh month.

3 And [i] he read therein before the street that was before the water-gate, from the [†] morning until mid-day, before the men and the women, and those that could understand: and [k] the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law.

4 And Ezra the scribe stood upon a [‡] pulpit of wood, which they had made for the purpose: and beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah, and these accounts may intimate to us the delight God is pleased to take in the persons, families, and services, of his spiritual Israel, and the particular notice He takes of them. He knows them that are his, knows them all, knows them by name, has his eye on the register of those children of the captivity, and does all according to the ancient counsel of his will concerning them.

(1.) As to the numbers in this catalogue and that in Ezra, most of them indeed are exactly the same, and some others within a very few under or over; therefore I cannot think as some, that that was the number of these families at their first coming, this as they were now, which was at least 40 years after, (some make it much more,) for we cannot suppose so many families to be not at all, or but little, altered in their numbers in all that time; therefore what differences there are, we may suppose to arise either from the mistakes of transcribers, which easily happen in numbers, or from the diversity of the copies from which they were taken, or perhaps one was the account of them when they set out from Babylon with Zerubbabel, the other when they came to Jerusalem. The sums total are all just the same there and here, except of the singing-men and singing-women, which there are 200, here 245. Those were not of such importance, as that they should keep any strict account of them.

(2.) The account of their offerings, v. 70, &c. differs much from that, Ezra 2: 68, 69. and it may be questioned whether it refers to the same contribution; here, the Tirshatha, or chief governor, begins the offering, who there was not mentioned. And the single sum mentioned there, exceeds all those here put together; yet it is probable that it was the same, but that followed one copy of the lists, this another; for the last verse is the same here that it was in Ezra 2 : 70. adding ch. 3: 1. Blessed be God, that our faith and hope are not built on the niceties of names and numbers, genealogy and chronology, but on the great things of the law and gospel. Whatever is given to the work of God, He is not unrighteous to forget it; nor shall even a cup of cold water, wherewith He is honored, go without its reward.

CHAP. VIII. V. 1—8. Ezra came up out of Babylon 13 years before Nehemiah, who, though not such a scholar, nor divine, as Ezra, nor such a scribe in the law, yet was a man of a more lively, active spirit. His zeal set Ezra's learning on work, and then great things were done; as we find here, where we have,

I. An account of a solemn, religious assembly.

1. The time, v. 2. the day of the feast of trumpets, called a sabbath, and on which they were to have a holy convocation, Lev. 23: 24. Num. 29: 1. the day the altar was set up, and they began to offer their burnt-offerings after their return, a late mercy in the memory of many then living; in a thankful remembrance of that, it is likely, they had kept this feast, ever since, with more than ordinary solemnity. Divine favors fresh in mind, and which ourselves have witnessed, should be, and usually are, most affecting.

2. The place, v. 1. a spacious, broad street, able to contain so great a multitude, which the court of the temple was not; for, probably, it was not now built near so large as in Solomon's time.

3. The persons, v. 1, 2. Masters of families should bring their families with them to public worship. Little ones, as they come to the exercise of reason, must be trained up in the exercises of religion.

4. The master of this assembly, Ezra the priest. None so fit to expound and preach, as such a ready scribe in the law of his God. God gave him ability and authority, and then the people gave him opportunity and invitation. Knowledge is spiritual alms, which they that are able should give to every one that needs, to every one that asks. Some think he appointed his assistants, v. 4. to read when he was weary; at least, this honored them before the people, in order to their being employed in the same service another time. Others mentioned, v. 7. seem to have been employed at the same time in other places near, to [r] Job 34:19. Luke 21:1—4. 2 Cor. 8: 12.

[s] Ezra 2:70. 3:1.
[a] Ezra 3:1.
[b] Judg. 20:1,8.
[c] 16. 3:26. 12:37.
[d] 4—9. Ezra 7:6,11. Jer. 8:8,9. Matt. 13:52. 23:2,13,34.
[e] 2 Chr. 34:15. Is. 8:20. Mal. 4:4.
[f] Deut. 17:18. 31:9,10. Mal. 2:7.
[g] Deut. 31:11—13. 2 Chr. 17:7—9.
[*] Heb. understood in hearing. Is. 28:9.
[h] Lev. 23:24. Num. 29:1—6.
[i] Luke 4:16—20. Acts 13:15,27. 15:21.
[†] Heb. light. Acts 20:7,11. 28:23.
[k] Matt. 7:28,29. Mark 12:37. Luke 8: 18. 19:48. Acts 16:14. 17:11. 1 Thes. 2:13. Heb. 2:1—3. Rev. 2:29. 3:22.
[‡] Heb. tower.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The active servants of God, and of his church, will never want employment; for the completion of one design will make way for the commencement of another.—The fear of God, powerfully possessing the heart, produces proportionable fidelity and conscientiousness, in a man's whole character and conduct: and it is happy for the community, when men of this character have the charge of public affairs.—Magistrates and ministers have more extensive charges than others: but every man ought to watch over his own heart, and his own house, that sin, the worst enemy, may be kept at a distance, as much as possible.—Provision is made in the Gospel, and in the city of our God, for immensely greater numbers than have yet been enrolled citizens: we should therefore be devising means for replenishing it with inhabitants, as well as for building its walls.—'All holy desires, all good counsels, and all just works are from God:' to Him belongs the praise: when good thoughts are suggested, we should be careful not to 'quench the Spirit,' by rejecting them; (1 Thes. 5: 16—22, v. 19.) and we ought continually to pray, that our God would put more and more of them into our hearts, and enable us to bring them to good effect; and that He would do the same for increasing numbers.—Happy they, who willingly come to dedicate themselves, and consecrate their substance, to his service and glory! SCOTT.

been at the first return of the Jews from captivity. The principal persons also concurred with him liberally, according to their ability. SCOTT.

Verse 73.

This v. so accords with Ezra 2:70. and 3:1. that it is doubtful whether it should be understood of the Jews, who returned under Zerubbabel, or of what followed after Nehemiah had registered them. If it be taken in the latter sense; and if the events next recorded took place in the same year with the building of the wall, as probably they did; there could be no time for Nehemiah to go to Babylon: (Note, 2, 3.) for the wall was not finished till the 25th day of Elul, or the 6th month. (6:15.) ID.

ADDITIONAL NOTE.

'Nehemiah is supposed to have returned twice to the Persian court: the first time, as soon as the walls were completed. He came back to Jerusalem in a few months, and continued there as governor 12 years. After this he went again to the court, and resided there several years: during that interval the abuses occurred which he reformed on his subsequent return to Jerusalem, ch. 13.' HENRY abr.

NOTES.

CHAP. VIII. V. 1, 2. (Lev. 23:24, 25.)—Probably, Nehemiah, having formed a plan for their instruction from the law, called on them by this early attendance to concur in it. Doubtless the appointed sacrifices were offered. (Num. 29:1—6.) It does not appear that the measure originated with Ezra, yet he most cordially concurred in it. (Ezra 7:6—10.) Some conjecture that Ezra had been at Babylon, during the preceding events, in which he is not mentioned; and that he had lately returned: but perhaps he had been privately occupied in his own line for the good of the people, and was well satisfied to leave public affairs entirely to Nehemiah. (1 Sam. 12:23.) SCOTT.

Verse 4.

Pulpit.] 'Migdol âts, a "tower of wood." MONTANUS. 'It held 14 men, for beside him stood Mattithiah and 12 others.' And so Patrick. GILL.

[l] Maaseiah, on his right hand; and on his left hand, Pedaiah, and Mishael, and [m] Malchiah, and [n] Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and [o] Meshullam.

5 And Ezra [p] opened the book in the * sight of all the people; (for he was above all the people;) and when he opened it, all the people [q] stood up:

6 And Ezra [r] blessed the LORD, the great God. And all the people answered, [s] Amen, amen, [t] with lifting up their hands; and they [u] bowed their heads, and worshipped the LORD [x] with their faces to the ground.

7 Also [y] Jeshua, and [z] Bani, and [a] Sherebiah, Jamin, [b] Akkub, Shabbethai, [c] Hodijah, [d] Maaseiah, [e] Kelita, [f] Azariah, [g] Jozabad, [h] Hanan, [i] Pelaiah, and the Levites, [k] caused the people to understand the law: and the people stood in their place.

8 So they read in the book in the law of God distinctly, [l] and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.

[Practical Observations.]

9 And [m] Nehemiah, which is the † Tirshatha, and [n] Ezra the priest the scribe, and [o] the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, [p] This day is holy unto the LORD your God; [q] mourn not nor weep. For [r] all

l 10:25. 11:5.
m 10:3.
n 10:18. Ezra 10:33.
o 10:7,20. 11:7. 12:13. Ezra 10:29.
p Luke 4:17.
* Heb. eyes.

q Judg. 3:20. 1 K. 8:14.
r 1 Chr. 29:20. 2 Chr. 6:4. Ps. 41:13. 72:18,19. Eph. 1:3. 1 Pet. 1:3. s 5:13. Jer. 28:6. Matt. 6:13. 1 Cor. 14:16.
t Gen. 14:22. Ps. 28:2. 63:4. 134:2. 141:2. Lam. 3:41. 1 Tim. 2:8.
u Gen. 24:26. Ex. 4:31. 12:27. 2 Chr. 20:18. 29:30. x Lev. 9:24. Matt. 26:39. Rev. 7:11.
y 3:19. 9:4. 10:9. 12:24.
z 3:17. 9:4. 10:13.
a 9:4. 10:12. 12:24. Ezra 8:18.
b 11:16,19. 12:25.
c 10:10,18.
d 4. 3:23. 12:41,42. Ezra 10:22.
e 10:10. Ezra 10:23.
f 3:23. 10:2. 12:33.
g Ezra 10:22,23.
h 10:10.
i 10:10.
k Lev. 10:11.
l Hab. 2:2. Matt. 5:21,22,27,28. Luke 24:27,32. Acts 8:30—35. 17:2,3. 28:23. m 7:65,70. 10:1.
† Or, governor
n Ezra 7:11.
o 7,8. 2 Chr. 15:3. 30:22. 35:3. Hos. 4:6. p 2. Lev. 23:24. Num. 29:1—6.
q Deut. 12:7,12. 16:11,14,15. 26:14. Ec. 3:4. Mal. 2:13. r 2 K. 22:11,19. Rom. 3:20. 2 Cor. 7:9—11.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—8. Pious men of different dispositions may serve the church in their several ways. The studious may, as it were, prepare materials with which the active may work: and the active may make way for the studious, to bring forth their treasures for public use. They ought therefore reciprocally to assist each other; and to welcome such assistance, without envy, competition, or prejudice.—The public reading, expounding, and preaching of God's Word has, in all ages, been the grand method of promoting true religion: they, therefore, who are eminently capable of this service, should be called forth from obscurity and retirement, and excited and encouraged to abound in it; all, of every age, sex, or rank, who are capable of understanding, should assemble to attend, and all ought to 'give earnest heed to the things they hear.' (2 Chr. 17: 7—9. P. O. 7—19.) Those who are in reputation should set an example of diligence in this respect, and even teachers should be 'swift to hear' other ministers, especially younger ministers their approved seniors, as they have opportunity, that they may become more competent for the service.—When the value of the Scriptures, and of the immortal soul, is properly understood; and when we are earnestly engaged, and in a spiritual frame of mind; we shall not soon be weary of divine ordinances. Short sermons, therefore, or tired hearers, prove a very low state of religion: for facts demonstrate, that where the Word of God is precious, even inconvenient situations and uneasy postures will be patiently endured: and when ministers, who are themselves in earnest, perceive the people thirsting for instruction, and drinking it in, they will be encouraged to proceed, and to preach as much and as often as required, so long as God [through the use of the knowledge of his laws] gives them health for the work. SCOTT.

Verse 5, 6.

This was an excellent preparation for a due regard to the sacred Scriptures; and the example should be imitated by those who preach and expound, or read and hear the Word of God. SCOTT.

Verse 7.

The persons, mentioned in this verse, must not be confounded with those who stood by Ezra, in his pulpit, or tower: for only one of the same name occurs in both places; and, no doubt, in that instance, different men of the same name were meant. The persons here mentioned were most of them, if not all, priests and Levites. (M. R.) (Acts 2:14—21. v. 14.)—Perhaps, different orders and descriptions of persons formed separate circles: and therefore it is added, that 'the people stood in their place,' as it had been appointed to each of them. 'The people stood in their place,' 'listening both to what was read, and what was delivered as the explication of it.' Patrick. ID.

Verse 8.

It is here said, 'So they read, &c.' which confirms the preceding supposition, there being evidently more than one reader.—The persons engaged in this service read the text distinctly, and then gave the interpretation: thus the meaning was declared to the people, with all plainness, and application to their present circumstances and conduct, for their conviction and instruction. This seems the obvious meaning of the passage. Some learned men, however, suppose, that the Jews had forgotten the Hebrew, during the captivity; and that the expositors merely rendered what was read, into Chaldee. 'But if this were true, why did the prophets write in Hebrew after their return from captivity? And this very book shows the contrary, (13:23, 24.) where the Jews' language appears to have been spoken by the people.' Patrick. The opinion indeed is grounded chiefly on Jewish traditions, and customs introduced in later ages, and has no support in the Scriptures themselves. SCOTT.

Dr. A. Clarke thinks, the people had lost their Heb. [and so Poole. &c.] so the Levites gave the sense in the Chaldee: also, that 'this was not only the origin of the Chaldee Targums, or translations of the law and prophets into that tongue: but likewise, probably, the origin of preaching from a text; a custom the most excellent and beneficial ever introduced among men.' ED.

the people wept when they heard the words of the law.

10 Then he said unto them, [s] Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and [t] send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto our LORD: neither be ye sorry; for [u] the joy of the LORD is your strength.

11 So the Levites [x] stilled all the people, saying, Hold your peace, for the day is holy; neither be ye grieved.

12 And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, [y] because they had understood the words that were declared unto them.

13 ¶ And on [z] the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even * to understand the words of the law.

14 And they found written in the law, which the LORD had commanded † by Moses, that the children of Israel should [a] dwell in [b] booths, in the feast of the seventh month:

15 And [c] that they should publish and proclaim in all their cities, and [d] in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto [e] the mount, and [f] fetch [g] olive-branches, and pine-branches, and myrtle-branches, and [h] palm-branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written.

16 So the people went forth, and brought them, and made themselves booths, every one upon [i] the roof of his house, and in their courts, and in [k] the courts of the house of God, and in [l] the street of the water-gate, and [m] in the street of the gate of Ephraim.

17 And all the congregation of them, that were come again out of the captivity, made booths, and [n] sat under the booths: for since the days of [o] Jeshua the son of Nun, unto that day, [p] had not the children of Israel [q] done so. And [r] there was very great gladness.

18 Also [s] day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he read in ror, shows men their sins, and misery and danger because of sin, and thunders a curse against every one that continues not in every part of his duty. Therefore they all wept, (v. 9.) like Josiah, when they heard; for their hearts were tender, thinking how they had offended God, and exposed themselves, by their many violations of the law; all wept, for all saw themselves guilty.

II. How they were healed and comforted with words of peace. Even sorrow for sin must not hinder joy in God, but rather lead to it, and prepare us for it.

1. The masters of the assembly endeavored to pacify, and encourage them. Nehemiah is not brought in before in this ch. Now he notices the people's weeping; Ezra was pleased to see them so affected with the Word, but Nehemiah observed to him, and Ezra concurred, that it was now unseasonable; this day was holy, it is called a sabbath, (Lev. 23: 24.) therefore was to be celebrated with joy and praise, not as a day to afflict the souls. They forbade the people to mourn and weep, (v. 9—11.) and commanded them to testify their joy, to feast themselves, to eat and drink better than on other days, to eat the fat, and drink the sweet: but then it must be, (1.) With charity to the poor. Christ directs those that make feasts, to invite their poor neighbors, Luke 14: 13. And it is especially the duty of a religious feast, as well as of a religious fast, to draw out the soul to the hungry, Isa. 58: 7, 10. God's bounty should make us bountiful. Many will eat the fat, and drink the sweet themselves, even to excess, that will never allow portions, nor scarcely crumbs, to the poor, who may read their own doom in the parable of the rich man, Luke 16: 19, &c. But such know not, or consider not, what God gave them their estates for. Observe, We must not only give to those that offer themselves, but send to those that are out of sight. The liberal devises liberal things, and seeks objects of charity. (2.) It must be with piety and devotion; the joy of the Lord is your strength. Let it not be a sensual joy, but holy and spiritual, the joy of the Lord, joy in the goodness of God, under the conduct and government of the grace of God; joy arising from our interest in the love and favor of God, and the tokens of his favor. This joy will be your strength, therefore encourage it; it will be your strength, for the performance of the other duties of the feast; for all you have to do, in conformity to the law of God which has been read to you; and for the resisting of your enemies that are plotting against you. The joy of the Lord will arm us against the assaults of our spiritual enemies, and put our mouths out of taste for those pleasures with which the tempter baits his hooks.

2. The assembly complied. Their weeping was stilled, (v. 11.) and they made great mirth, v. 12. We ought always to have such a command of every passion, as that, however it may break out, it may soon be restrained and called in again, when we are convinced it is either unreasonable or unseasonable. He that has such a rule over his own spirit, is better than the mighty. Holy mourning makes way for holy mirth; they that sow in tears, shall reap in joy; they that tremble at the convictions of the Word, may triumph in its consolations. The ground of their joy was very good; not that they had the fat and sweet, and a deal of good company, but that they had understood the words declared. Note, To have the Scriptures with us, and helps to understand them, is a very great mercy, which we have abundant reason to rejoice in. Bibles and good ministers are the joy of God's Israel. The better we understand the Word of God, the more comfort we shall find in it. When the words were first declared, they wept, but when they understood them, they rejoiced, finding, at length, precious promises to those who repented and reformed, therefore there was hope in Israel.

V. 13—18. We have here,

I. The people's renewed attendance on the Word. They had spent the greatest part of one day in praying and hearing, yet were so far from being weary, that, the next day after, though no festival, the chief of them came together again to hear Ezra expound, v. 13. The more we converse with God's Word, if we rightly understand it, and be affected with it, the more we shall covet to converse with it, and to increase in our acquaintance with it, saying, How sweet are thy words unto my mouth! They that understand the Scriptures well, will still be desirous to understand them better. Now the priests and the Levites themselves came, to understand, or, (as the marg.) that they might instruct in, the words of the law; they came to be taught themselves, that they might be qualified to teach others. Though, on the first day, Ezra's humility had set them on his right hand, and on his left, as teachers with him, (v. 4, 7.) yet now, they being by trial made more sensible than ever of their own deficiencies, and his excellences, on the second day, their humility set them at Ezra's feet, as learners of him. Those that would teach others, must themselves receive instruction. [May those instructers be few, who cannot teach, and will not learn!]

II. The people's ready obedience to the Word in

* Or, that they might instruct in. 7,8. Luke 24:32. 2 Tim. 2:24,25.
† Heb. by the hand of.

a Lev. 23:34,40—43. Deut. 16:13—15. Zech. 14:16—19. John 7:2. b Gen. 33:17.
c Lev. 23:4.
d Deut. 16:16.
e Judg. 9:48,49. Matt. 21:1.
f Lev. 23:40.
g Gen. 8:11.
h John 12:13. Rev. 7:9.
i Deut. 22:8. 2 Sam. 11:2. Jer. 19:13. 32:29.
k 2 Chr. 20:5. 33:5.
l 3. 3:26. 12:37.
m 12:39. 2 K. 14:13.
n John 1:14. Heb. 11:9,13.
o Josh. 1:1. Joshua. Heb. 4:8. Jesus.
p 2 Chr. 7:8—10. 8:13. Ezra 3:4.
q 2 Chr. 30:26. 35:18.
r 1 Chr. 29:22. 2 Chr. 7:10. 30:21—23.
s Deut. 31:10—13.

12:1. Mark 6:33,34. Luke 19:47,48. Acts 4:1. 13:42.

Verses 10, 11.

Sending portions to those for whom nothing had been prepared; to the poor, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, (Deut. 12:12, 18, 19. P. O.) would distinguish their religious feasting from the [wholly] sensual indulgence of carnal men, and complete the due solemnization of the holy day. SCOTT.

Verse 12.

Ps. 126. 5, 6.) 'This was an extraordinary reason for their mirth, that they were illuminated in divine knowledge, and understood the will of God better than before.' Patrick. ID.

Verse 13.

This was no festival; but, having profited from the Word the day before, the people were desirous to be further instructed: and the chief of the fathers, priests, and Levites, were the most forward to request Ezra, to favor them with an exposition of some other part of the law, being convinced of his superior knowledge in it. Hence it appears that he instructed even those, who assisted in teaching the people. SCOTT.

Verses 14—16.

(Lev. 23:34—43. Num. 29:12—38. Zech. 14:16—19. John 7:2, 14—17, 37—39.) It may be supposed, Ezra selected those portions of the law, which prescribed solemnities to be observed in the 7th month; especially the feast of tabernacles, as it had not in general been duly observed, and the season was approaching for it. (Jam. 1:22—25.) ID.

Verse 17.

It is evident, this and the other solemn feasts were totally neglected, at some times, and for a long while together: yet a few instances occur of the feast of tabernacles being kept; and these words must therefore be understood, of the exactness, unanimity, and joyfulness, with which it was at this time celebrated. (1 K. 8:63—65. Ezra 3:4.) ID.

the book of the law of God: and they kept the feast seven days, and on the eighth day was * a solemn assembly, ‡ according unto the manner.

CHAP. IX.

' solemn fast is observed, 1—3. The Levites, as leading the worship of the people, piously acknowledge the manifold goodness of God to Israel, and humbly confess the sins of the nation, as the cause of their miseries, 4—37. The people solemnly covenant with God, 38.

NOW in the [a] twenty and fourth day [b] of this month, the [c] children of Israel were assembled with fasting, and with sackclothes, and [d] earth upon them.

2 And [e] the seed of Israel separated themselves from all † strangers, and stood and [f] confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers.

3 And [g] they stood up in their place, and read in the book of the law of the LORD their God, [h] one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and worshipped the LORD their God.

4 Then stood up upon the ‡ stairs, of the Levites, [i] Jeshua, and Bani, Kadmiel,

* Heb. a restraint.
† Lev. 23:36. Num. 29:35. John 7:37.
‡ Lev. 23:34,39. 2 Chr. 7:10.
a 8:2.
b Judg. 20:26. 2 Chr. 20:3. Ezra 8:23. Esth. 4:3,16. Is. 22:12. Joel 1:13,14. 2:15—17. Jon. 3:5—8. Acts 13:2,3.

one particular instance, as soon as they were made sensible of their duty therein. Probably Ezra, after the wisdom of his God that was in his hand, (Ezra 7: 25.) when they applied for instruction on the 2d day of the 7th month, read to them those laws which concerned the feasts of that month, and, among the rest, that of the feast of tabernacles, Lev. 23: 34. Deut. 16: 13. Ministers should preach not only what is true and good, but what is seasonable, directing to the work of the day in its day.

This feast had usually been observed, (2 Chr. 5: 3. Ezra 3: 4.) but never with such solemnity as now, since Joshua's time, when they were newly settled, as they were now newly re-settled in Canaan. That man loves his house too well, that cannot find in his heart to quit it, awhile, in compliance either with an ordinance or with a providence of God.

They attended the reading and expounding of the Word of God, during all the days of the feast, v. 18. Spare hours cannot be better spent than in studying the Scriptures, and conversing with them. At this feast, God appointed the law to be read, each 7th year: whether this was that year of release, (Deut. 31: 10, 11.) does not appear: however, they spent all the days of the feast in that good work; and, on the 8th day, was a solemn assembly, as God had appointed, in which they finished the solemnity, the 22d day of the month; yet did not scatter, for the 24th was appointed to be spent in fasting and prayer. Holy joy must not indispose us for godly sorrow, any more than godly sorrow for holy joy.

CHAP. IX. The 10th of the 7th month, between the feast of Trumpets (ch. 8: 2.) and of Tabernacles, (v. 14.) was appointed to be the day of atonement; which, though not mentioned, we have no reason to think but was religiously observed. But here we have an account of an occasional fast, kept a fortnight after, with reference to the present posture of their affairs, and it was, as that, a day of humiliation. There is a time to weep as well as a time to laugh.

V. 1—3. The fast was kept, probably, by order from Nehemiah, by and with the advice and consent of the chief of the fathers. It was a fast that men appointed, but such as God had chosen; for,

1. It was a day to afflict the soul, Isa. 58: 5. Probably they assembled in the courts of the temple, in sackcloth, and in the posture of mourners, with earth on their heads, v. 1. By these outward expressions of sorrow and humiliation, they gave glory to God, took shame to themselves, and stirred up one another to repentance.

2. It was a day to loose the bands of wickedness, and that is the fast God has chosen, Isa. 58: 6. Without this, spreading sackcloth and ashes under us, is but a jest. Israel, because a holy seed, appropriated to God, and more excellent than their neighbors, separated themselves from all strangers, with whom they had mingled themselves, and joined affinity, v. 2. Now they separated from the strange children, as well as wives. They that intend by prayers and covenants to join themselves to God, must separate themselves from sin and sinners; for what communion hath light with darkness?

3. It was a day of communion with God; they fasted to Him, even to Him, Zech. 7: 5. They spake to Him in prayer, offered their pious and devout affections to Him, in the confession of sin, and the adoration of Him, as the Lord, and their God. They heard Him speaking to them by his Word; for they read in the book of the law, which is very proper on fasting days, that, in the glass of the law, we may see our deformities and defilements, and know what to acknowledge, and what to amend. The Word will direct and quicken prayer, for by it the Spirit helps our praying infirmities. Observe how the time was equally divided between these two. Three hours (the 4th part of a day) in reading, expounding, and applying the Scriptures; and 3 hours in confessing sin, and praying; 6 hours in all, in solemn acts of religion, without saying, Behold what a weariness is it! Varying the exercises made it less tedious. Patrick thinks they spent the whole 12 hours of the day in devotion, reading from 6 o'clock till 9, and from 12 till 3; and praying from 9 o'clock till 12, and from 3 till 6. The work of a fast-day, is a good work, therefore we should endeavor to make a day's work, a good day's work of it.

V. 4—38. Here is an account of the fast-day work.

I. The names of the ministers employed are twice given, (v. 4, 5.) only with some variation. Either they prayed successively, according to 1 Cor. 14: 31. or, as some think, there were 8 c Josh. 7:3. 1 Sam. 4:12. 2 Sam. 1:2. Job 2:12.

d 13:3,30. Ezra 9:2. 10:11.
† Heb. strange children. Ps. 144:7,11. Is. 2:6. Hos. 5:7.
e 1:6. Lev. 26:39,40. Ezra 9:6,7,15. Ps. 106:6,7. Dan. 9:3—10,20. 1 John 1:7—9.
g 8:4,7,8.
h 8:3.
‡ Or, scaffold.
i 5. See on 8:7. 10:9—13. 12:8.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 9—18. The divine law, when faithfully unfolded, in its extensive demands and righteous sanction, is generally made successful by the Holy Spirit, in bringing the stout, hard, and proud hearts of sinners to tremble, to melt into godly sorrow, and to become abased before God.—Joy in God, if genuine, adds strength and courage to the soul for every duty and for every trial; it inspires resolution for service, and vigor in resisting temptation; it satisfies, and sanctifies, and enlarges the heart in cheerful obedience, and in love to our brethren. Indeed, that joy is a mere counterfeit, which has not these effects: and they are enemies to their own sanctification, who always indulge sorrow, even for sin, and put from them those consolations, which are tendered to them by the Word and Spirit of God.—Those, who have profited by the Word of God, will be glad of an opportunity of hearing it on any day, as far as consistent with other duties: and when the people are so disposed, the minister is called to be 'instant in season and out of season.'—Some portions of Scripture are more suitable to the circumstances of our congregations than others would be, especially when they remind them of present duty. For even true Christians neglect many things, through ignorance and forgetfulness, and for want of particular instructions. But it is admirable, when they no sooner hear the command of God, than they prepare for obedience; when attending on the Word excites an increasing appetite for it; and when the ordinances afford great gladness to their souls.—Yet, alas, how little have the commandments and institutions of our God been hitherto observed, even among his professed worshippers! So that when individuals, or collective bodies, come near the standard of his Word, in the power of godliness, they become 'men wondered at.' But though none, from age to age, or through whole nations of professed Christians, have ever served God, as some small company may aim to do; yet if these be evidently obeying the plain meaning of Scripture, they ought not to be censured as singular, precise, or affected; but to be commended and imitated.—True religion will make us strangers and pilgrims on earth: and those who refuse conformity to the world, and have their conversation in heaven, and their joy in the Lord, must appear strange and uncouth in the eyes of the servants of that other master, who 'worketh in all the children of disobedience.' SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. IX. V. 3. Perhaps the 3 hours previous to the offering of the morning-sacrifice, were assigned for the people to prepare themselves and their families for the public solemnity; and the 3 hours after the evening-sacrifice, for their consenting to the covenant and sealing it, and the improvement of what they had heard, by meditation, pious converse, and devotion: for on solemn fasts it was customary for the Jews to take no food till after sunset. The public services of the day, however, continued at least 6 hours without intermission. SCOTT.

Verse 4.

Stairs.] Boothr. tr 'Platform.' The temple probably was built on a platform of mason-work, like that of the temple of Baalbek, and the ruins of Persepolis; and the last, according to Saint-Martin, are of this age of Darius and Xerxes. This terrace, built of white marble, is an irregular parallelogram, (cut, Esth. 1:2—6.) 25 to 50 ft. high, according to the inequalities of the ground, 1425 ft. on the W. front, 926 on the N. and 802 on the S. The only ascent is on the W. side, by a magnificent staircase, formed of 2 double flights of steps. Of these the lowest, consisting each of 55, 22 ft. long and 3½ in. in depth, meet in a landing place of 37 ft. by 44. From this point springs a second double flight of 48 steps of similar dimensions, which terminate on the level of the platform in a second landing place of 64 ft. long. Niebuhr says he saw holes in the large stones of the landing place, as if for gates;

Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and [k] cried with a loud voice unto the LORD their God.

5 Then the Levites, Jeshua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabniah, Sherebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said, [l] Stand up and [m] bless the LORD your God for ever and ever; and blessed be [n] thy glorious name, which is [o] exalted above all blessing and praise.

6 Thou, [p] even thou, art LORD alone; [q] thou hast made heaven, [r] the heaven of heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou [s] preservest them all; and the [t] host of heaven worshippeth thee.

7 Thou art the LORD the God, who didst [u] choose Abram, and broughtest him forth out of [x] Ur of the Chaldees, and [y] gavest him the name of Abraham;

8 And [z] foundest his heart faithful before thee, and [a] madest a covenant with him, to give the land of [b] the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites, to give it, I say, to his seed, [c] and hast performed thy words; for thou art [d] righteous:

9 And [e] didst see the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and [f] heardest their cry by the Red Sea;

10 And [g] shewedst signs and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his servants, and on all the people of his land: for thou knewest that [h] they dealt proudly against them. So [i] didst thou get thee a name, as it is this day.

11 And thou didst [k] divide the sea before them, so that they went through the midst of the sea on the dry land; and [l] their persecutors thou threwest into the deeps, [m] as a stone into the mighty waters.

12 Moreover [n] thou leddest them in the day by a cloudy pillar, and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light [o] in the way wherein they should go.

13 Thou [p] camest down also upon mount Sinai, and [q] spakest with them from heaven, and [r] gavest them right judgments and * true laws, good statutes, and commandments;

14 And [s] madest known unto them thy holy sabbath, and [t] commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of [u] Moses thy servant;

15 And [x] gavest them bread from heaven for their hunger, and [y] broughtest forth water for them out of the rock for their thirst, and promisedst them that they should [z] go in to possess the land which thou hadst † sworn to give them.

16 But they and our fathers [a] dealt proudly, and [b] hardened their necks, and [c] hearkened not to thy commandments,

17 And [d] refused to obey, neither were [e] mindful of thy wonders that thou didst among them; but hardened their necks, and in their rebellion [f] appointed a captain to return to their bondage: but thou art [g] a God ‡ ready to pardon, [h] gracious and merciful, slow to anger, several congregations at some distance from each other, and each had a presiding Levite.

II. The work itself. They prayed to God, for pardon and favor, cried aloud, (v. 4.) that the people might the better hear, and to excite their fervency. They praised God; which is not unseasonable on a fast-day: in all acts of devotion, we must aim at this, to give unto God the glory due. The summary of their prayers we have here; whether drawn up before, as a directory to the Levites what to enlarge on, or recollected after, as the heads of what they had in prayer enlarged on, is uncertain. Much more, no doubt, was said; else confessing and worshipping God had not taken up 1-4th of the day, much less 2-4ths. In this solemn address, we have,

1. An awful adoration of God, as a perfect and glorious Being, one and self-existent, and the Fountain of all beings, and Creator of all things. v. 5, 6. The congregation is called on to signify their concurrence herewith, by standing up; God's name is not only exalted above our blessing, but above all blessing. Put all the praises of heaven and earth together; and the thousandth part is not said of what might and should be said of the glory of God.

2. A thankful acknowledgment of God's favors to Israel, many of which are here reckoned up in order before Him, and very much to the purpose. They multiply and magnify the instances of God's goodness to Israel, and we should do so, that the goodness of God, duly considered, may lead us to k 2 Chr. 20:19. Ps. 77:1. 130:1. Lam. 3:8. John 11:43. Acts 7:60. l 1 K. 8:14,22. 2 Chr. 20:13,19. Ps. 134: 135:2,3. m 1 Chr. 29:20. Ezra 3:11. Ps. 103:1, 2. 117: 145:2. 146:2. Jer. 33:10,11. Matt. 11:25. Eph. 3:20,21. 1 Pet. 1:3.

n Ex. 15:6,11. Deut. 28:58. 1 Chr. 29: 13. Ps. 72:18,19. 145:5,11,12. 2 Cor. 4:6.
o 1 K. 8:27. 1 Chr. 29:11. Ps. 106:2. p Deut. 6:4. 2 K. 19:15,19. Ps. 86:10. Is. 43:10. 44:6,8. Mark 12:29,30. John 10:30.
q Gen. 1:1. 2:1. Ex. 20:11. Ps. 33:6. 136:5—9. 146:6. Jer. 10:11,12. Col. 1:15,16. Rev. 4:11. 14:7.
r Deut. 10:14. 1 K. 8:27.
s Ps. 36:6. Col. 1:17. Heb. 1:3.
t Gen. 2:1. 32:2. 1 K. 22:19. Ps. 103: 21. 148:2—4. Is. 6:2,3. Heb. 1:6. Rev. 5:13.
u Gen. 12:1,2. Deut. 10:15. Josh. 24: 2,3. Is. 41:8,9. 51:2. x Gen. 11:31. 15:7. Acts 7:2—4.
y Gen. 17:5.
z Gen. 12:1—3. 15:6. 22:12. Acts 13:22. 1 Tim. 1:12,13. Heb. 11:17. Jam. 2:21—23.
a Gen. 12:7. 17:7,8. 22:16—18. Deut. 7:8,9. 9:5. Ps. 105:8,9. Luke 1:72,73.
b Gen. 15:18—21. Ex. 3:8,17. Deut. 7:1. Josh. 9:1. 11:3. c Deut. 26:3. Josh. 11:23. 21:43—45. 23:14. Is. 105:43,44.
d Num. 23:19. Ps. 92:14,15. Tit. 1:2. Heb. 6:18. 1 John 1:9.
e Ex. 2:25. 3:7,9,16. Acts 7:34.
f Ex. 14:10—12.
g Ex. 7—10: 12:29,30. 14:15—31. Deut. 4:34. 11:3,4. Ps. 78:12,13,43—53. 105:27—37. 106:7—11. 135:8,9. 136:10—15. Acts 7.36.
h Ex. 5:2,7,8. 9:17. 10:3. 18:11. Job 40:11,12. Dan. 4:37. 5:23. 1 Pet. 5:5.
i Ex. 9:16. Josh. 2:10,11. Ps. 83:18. Is. 63:12,14. Jer. 32:20. Ez. 20:9. Dan. 9:15. Rom. 9:17. k Ex. 14:21,22,27,28. Ps. 66:6. 78:13. 114:3—5. 136:13—15. Is. 63:11—13.
l Ex. 15:1—21. Ps. 106:9—11. Heb. 11:29. m Ex. 15:10. Rev. 18:21. n 19. Ex. 13:21,22. 14:19,20. Ps. 78: 14. 105:39.
o Ps. 107:7. 143:8.
p Ex. 19:11,16—20. Deut. 33:2. Is. 64:1,3. Hab. 3:3.
q Ex. 20:1,22. Deut. 4:10—13,33. 5:4, 22—26. Heb. 12:18—26.
r Deut. 4:8. 10:12,13. Ps. 19:7—11. 119:127,128. Ez. 20:11—13. Rom. 7: 12—14,16.
* Heb. laws of truth. Ps. 119:160.
s Gen. 2:3. Ex. 16:29. 20:8—11. Ez. 20:12,20. t Ex. 21:—23: Lev. 27:34. Deut. 4: 5,45. 5:31.
u 1:8. John 1:17.
x Ex. 16:4,14,15. Deut. 8:3,16. Ps. 78:24,25. 105:40. John 6:31—33. 1 Cor. 10:3.
y 20. Ex. 17:6. Num. 20:9—11. Deut. 8:15. Ps. 77:15—20. 105:41. 114:8. 1 Cor. 10:4.
z Deut 1:8. Josh. 1:2—4.
† Heb. lift up thine hand. Gen. 14:22. Num. 14:30. Ez. 20:15.
a See on 10,29. Ex. 32:9. Deut. 9:6, 13,23,24,27. 32:15. Ps. 78:8. 106: 6. Is. 63:10. Jer. 2:31. Acts 7:51.
b Deut. 31:27. 2 K. 17:14. 2 Chr. 30: 8. 36:13. Ps. 95:8—10. Prov. 29:1. Is. 48:4. Jer. 19:15. Rom. 2:5. Heb. 3:13,15. c Ex. 15:26. Deut. 5:29. Ps. 81:8,11—14. Is. 48:18.
d Num. 14:3,4,11,41. 16:14. Ps. 106: 24,25. Prov. 1:24. Heb. 12:25. e Ps. 78:11,42,43. 106:7,13. Matt. 16. 9—11. 2 Pet. 1:12—15.
f Num. 14 4. Acts 7:39.
g Num. 14:18,19. Ps. 86:5,15. 130:4. Mic. 7:18,19.
‡ Heb. of pardons.
h Ex. 34:6,7. Ps. 78:38. 103:8—18. 145:8,9. Is. 55:7—9. Joel 2:13. Rom. 9:15. Eph. 1:6,7.

---

and conceives that the whole platform might have been under lock and key. The ascent is so gradual, that travellers usually ride up on horseback; and the blocks of marble are so large, that from 10 to 14 steps are cut out of each. A magnificent colonnade, of columns 60 ft. high and 16 in circumference occupies the terrace,' [&c. See Hist. of Pers. Edinb. Cab. Lib.] Fraser. See note, Esth. 1: 2—6. ED.

Verse 5.

Perhaps the people were prostrate on the ground, or kneeling, while they humbly confessed their sins, and craved mercy from God, each for himself, and for his people: but they were called on to 'stand up,' when the public adorations began; and to bless and 'praise the LORD their God for ever and ever;' or as long as they had any being; or, to bless Him, as 'their God, for ever and ever.' SCOTT.

Verse 7.

'Here follows a compendious history of the affairs of the Hebrew nation, in this confession of God's benefits and their ingratitude; which Nehemiah and Ezra, it is likely, composed in the form of a prayer, and delivered it to the Levites, whom they ordered to speak it distinctly before the whole congregation, from their several scaffolds, which were conveniently placed in several parts of the assembly, that they might be heard.' Patrick. . . . It seems to have been a kind of compendium, or directory, to those who officiated, that all might be evidently of one mind; on the several parts of which, it is probable, each of them enlarged according to his ability. SCOTT.

Verse 13.

God spake the law of ten commandments 'from heaven,' in respect of its original, as distinguished from the statutes of earthly lawgivers. Or the word heaven may mean the higher regions of the air.—The moral law is right, true, and good: grounded on eternal truth, resuing from the nature of God and man, and our relations to Him and to each other; and forming the standard of excellency and the rule of felicity. (Ex. 20:1. Deut. 4:6—8. 32:2—4. Ex. 20:11. Rom. 7:7—12.) The judgments (or judicial law, the rule of the magistrate) given to Israel, were more consistent with the true difference between right and wrong, and the relative proportion of crimes and punishments, than the municipal laws of any other country in any age hitherto have been: (Ex. 21:1.) and the ritual law prefigured the true way of a sinner's justification, sanctification, and obtaining eternal life. (M. R.—Ex. 21:—24:) ID.

Verse 17.

The order of the Heb. is, to their bondage in their rebellion: (bemarim) this Dr. A. Clarke thinks a mistake for bemitsraym, in Egypt: which 'is the reading of 7 of K. and De R's MSS. of the Neapolitan ed. of the Hagiographa, and of the Sept. It is also so in Num. 14:4.' ED.

and of great kindness, and [i] forsookest them not.

18 Yea, [k] when they had made them a molten calf, and said, This is thy god that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations;

19 Yet thou, [l] in thy manifold mercies, forsookest them not in the wilderness: [m] the pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way, neither the pillar of fire by night, to show them light, and the way wherein they should go.

20 Thou [n] gavest also thy [o] good Spirit to instruct them, and [p] withheldest not thy manna from their mouth, and [q] gavest them water for their thirst.

21 Yea, [r] forty years didst thou sustain them in the wilderness, so that they lacked nothing; [s] their clothes waxed not old, and their feet swelled not.

22 Moreover [t] thou gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst [u] divide them into corners: so they possessed [x] the land of Sihon, and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og king of Bashan.

23 Their children also [y] multipliedst thou, as the stars of heaven, and [z] broughtest them into the land, concerning which [a] thou hadst promised to their fathers, that they should go in to possess it.

24 So the children went in and possessed the land, and [b] thou subduedst before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them [*] as they would.

25 And they took [c] strong cities, and [d] a fat land, and possessed houses full of all goods, [†] wells digged, vineyards, and olive-yards, and [‡] fruit-trees in abundance: so they [e] did eat, and were filled, and became fat, and [f] delighted themselves in thy great goodness.

26 Nevertheless [g] they were disobedient, and rebelled against thee, and [h] cast thy law behind their backs, and [i] slew thy prophets, which testified against them to turn them to thee, and [k] they wrought great provocations.

27 Therefore [l] thou deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed them: and [m] in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and according to thy manifold mercies, thou gavest them [n] saviors, who saved them out of the hand of their enemies.

28 But after they had rest, they [§] did evil again before thee: therefore leftest thou them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them; yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou [o] heardest them from heaven, and [p] many times didst thou deliver them, according to thy mercies;

29 And [q] testifiedst against them that thou mightest bring them again unto thy law: [r] yet they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, ([s] which if a man do, he shall live in them,) and [‖] withdrew the shoulder, and [t] hardened their neck, and would not hear.

30 Yet many years didst thou forbear them, and testifiedst against them by thy spirit in thy prophets: yet would they not give ear: therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Nevertheless for thy great mercies' sake thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them; for thou art a gracious and merciful God.

32 Now therefore, our God, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who keepest covenant and mercy, let not all the trouble seem little before thee, that hath come upon us, on our kings, and on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, since the time of the kings of Assyria unto this day.

33 Howbeit thou art just in all that is brought upon us; for thou hast done right, but we have done wickedly:

34 Neither have our kings, our princes, our priests, nor our fathers, kept thy law, nor hearkened unto thy commandments and thy testimonies, wherewith thou didst testify against them.

35 For they have not served thee in their kingdom, and in thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and fat land which thou gavest before them, neither turned they from their wicked works.

36 Behold, we are servants this day, and for the land that thou gavest unto our fathers to eat of the fruit thereof and the good thereof, behold, we are servants in it:

37 And it yieldeth much increase unto the kings whom thou hast set over us because of our sins: also they have dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleasure, and we are in great distress.

38 And because of all this we make a sure covenant, and write it; and our princes, Levites, and priests, seal unto it.

k Ex. 32:4—8,31,32. Deut. 9:12—16. Ps. 106:19—23. Ez. 20:7,&c. l Ps. 106:7,8,45. Lam. 3:22. Ez. 20:14,22. Dan. 9:9,18. Mal. 3:6.
m See on 12.—Ex. 40:38. Num. 9:15—22. Is. 4:5,6. 1 Cor. 10:1,2. n 30. Neh. 11:17,25—29. Is. 63:11,14.
o Ps. 143:10. Rom. 15:30. Gal. 5:22, 23. Eph. 5:9. 2 Pet. 1:21. p Ex. 16:35. Josh. 5:12.
q Ps. 105:41. Is. 41:17,18. 48:21. 49: 10. John 4:10,14. 7:37—39.
r Ex. 16:35. Num. 14:33,34. Deut. 2:7. 8:2. Am. 5:25. Acts 13:18.
s Deut. 8:4. 29:5. Ps. 34:10.
t Josh. 10: 11. Ps. 78:55. 105:44.
u Deut. 32:26. Josh. 11:23.
x Num. 21:21—35. Deut. 2:26—36. 3: 1—17. Ps. 135:10—12. 136:17—22.
y Gen. 15:5. 22:17. 1 Chr. 27:23.
z Josh. 1: 3. &c. a Gen. 12:7. 13:15—17. 15:18. 17:8. 26:3.
b Josh. 18:1. 1 Chr. 22:18. Ps. 44:2,3.
* Heb. according to their will. 2 Tim. 2:26.
c Num. 13:27,28. Deut. 3:5. 6:10—12. 9:1—3. d 35. Deut. 8:7—10. 32:13. Ez. 20:6.
† Or, cisterns.
‡ Heb. tree of food.
e Deut. 32:15. Ps. 65:11. Is. 6:10. Jer. 5:27,28. Hos. 13:6.
f 1 K. 8:66. Jer. 31:14. Hos. 3:5. Rom. 2:4.
g Judg. 2:11,12. 3:6,7. 10:6,13,14. Ps. 78:56,57. 106:34—40. Ez. 16:15,&c. 20:21. 23:4,&c. h 1 K. 14:9. Ps. 50:17. Ez. 23:3—5.
i 1 K. 18:4,13. 19:10. 2 Chr. 24:20, 21. 36:16. Jer. 26:20—23. Matt. 21:35. 23:34—37. Acts 7:52.
k 18. 2 K. 21:11. Ez. 22:25—31.
l Deut. 31:16—18. Judg. 2:14,15. 3:8, &c. 2 Chr. 36:17. Ps. 106:41,42. Dan. 9:10—14.
m Deut. 4:29—31. Judg. 3:15. 6:6—10. 10:15,16. Ps. 106:43—45.
n Judg. 2:18. 3:9,15. 1 Sam. 12:10,11. 2 K. 13:5. 14:27. Ob. 21.
§ Heb. returned to do evil. Judg. 3:11, 12,30. 4:1. 5:31. 6:1.
o 1 K. 8:33,34,39. Is. 63:15. p Ps. 106:43—45. q 26. Deut. 4:26. 31:21. 2 K. 17:13. 2 Chr. 24:19. 36:15. Jer. 25:3—7. Hos. 6:5.
r 10,16. Ex. 10:3. Jer. 13:15—17. 43: 2. 44:10,16,17. Dan. 5:20. Jam. 4: 6—10. s Lev. 18:5. Ez. 20:11. Luke 10:28. Rom. 10:5. Gal. 3:12.
‖ Heb. gave a withdrawing shoulder. Zech. 7:11,12.
t See on Jer. 7:26. 17:23. 19:15.
1 1 K. 6:13. 8:57. Ps. 106:43—46.

Verses 18, 19.

M. R.—Notes, Ex. 32:—34: Ps. 106:19—23, 40—45. Is. 63:7—14. Ez. 20:11—26. SCOTT.

Verse 20.

The Spirit of prophecy, in Moses, Joshua, the seventy elders, and the subsequent prophets, both instructed the Israelites by their ministry, and testified against them when rebellious. (30) The example, conversation, and exertions of those who partook of his sanctifying influences, tended to reform the nation: and, no doubt, the Spirit of God, by his convictions, powerfully excited in the consciences of the unconverted, a sense of guilt and dread of punishment; and in other ways strove with them. But in all these respects 'they resisted the Holy Ghost.' (M. R. n, o. Notes, Is. 63:10. Acts 7:51—53. 1 Thes. 5:16—22, v. 19. Heb. 10:28—31, v. 29.)—The unspeakable condescension and compassion of the blessed Spirit of God, in his operations on the polluted souls of sinful men, as well as the beneficent tendency of those operations, are strongly marked in the words 'thy good Spirit.' (Ps. 143:10.) ID.

Verse 22.

Into corners.] I. e. into all the corners of the promised land, from which the old inhabitants had been driven. Some expositors think, the situation of Canaan, as favorable to Israel's separation from other nations, being divided by seas, mountains, and deserts, from the most flourishing kingdoms in the world, was denoted by this expression. And indeed it is observable, that Jerusalem, which God chose for the metropolis of his people, was situated [in a rugged country,] at a distance from the sea, and from all navigable rivers.—Others, however, suppose, that the dispossessed nations are meant, who were driven into corners.—Heshbon being the city of Sihon, the word should be rendered, 'even the land of the king of Heshbon.' ID.

Corners.] 'Alluding probably to the division of Canaan, according to the number of the tribes, the districts running into many angles.' HEWLETT.

Verse 25.

Became fat, &c.] 'We have an old, nervous saying, "War begets poverty; poverty, peace; peace affluence; affluence begets luxury and corruption of manners: and hence civil broils, foreign wars, and desolations." A sensible Roman historian has said the same:—"Imperium facile iis artibus retinetur, quibus initio partum est: verum ubi pro labore, desidia; pro continentia et æquitate, libido atque superbia invasere; fortuna simul cum moribus immutatur."' Dr. A. CLARKE. In which of these stages is our beloved country? May simplicity of manners, and of living, a spirit of subordination, in domestic, social, and civil life, sound education, pure morality, and a deep sense of religious obligations, and of the inestimable privileges of liberty and prosperity, save us from that idolatry of mammon and of self, and forgetfulness of our infinitely kind God, to which prosperity gives a lamentable tendency! ED.

Verse 27.

Saviors, &c.] The deliverers, which God immediately raised up for his people, as the Judges, and king David, by whom they were rescued from the miseries into which their sins had plunged them, were all types of the great Savior, who delivers us from wrath, and from our enemies, that we may become the servants of that God whom we have offended.' SCOTT.

Verse 29.

Testifiedst against them, that thou mightest bring them again to thy law.] The end of our ministry is, to bring people to God, by bringing them to his law; not to bring them to ourselves, by bringing them ened their neck, and would not hear.

30 Yet [u] many years didst thou * forbear them and testifiedst against them [x] by thy Spirit in † thy prophets; yet would they not give ear: [y] therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Nevertheless, [z] for thy great mercies' sake thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them; for thou art a [a] gracious and merciful God.

32 Now therefore, [b] our God, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who [c] keepest covenant and mercy, let not all the ‡ trouble seem [d] little before thee that hath § come upon us, [e] on our kings, on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, [f] since the time of the kings of Assyria unto this day.

33 Howbeit [g] thou art just in all that is brought upon us; for thou hast done right, but [h] we have done wickedly:

34 Neither have our kings, our princes, our priests, nor our fathers kept thy law, nor hearkened unto thy commandments, and [i] thy testimonies, wherewith thou didst testify against them.

35 For [k] they have not served thee in their kingdom, and in [l] thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and [m] fat land which thou gavest before them, neither turned they from their wicked works.

36 Behold, [n] we are servants this day; and for the land that thou gavest unto our fathers, to eat the fruit thereof, and the good thereof, behold, we are servants in it.

37 And [o] it yieldeth much increase unto the kings, whom thou hast set over us, because of our sins: also they have [p] dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleasure, and we are in great distress.

38 And because of all this, [q] we make a sure covenant, and write it; and our princes, Levites, and priests, ‖ seal unto it.

specified; meditating a return, first, to Egyptian slavery, [which deprived their owner, for another's profit, of every physical energy;] and second, to Egyptian idolatry, [a slavery of the mind, an utter prostration of every manly attribute to spiritual tyranny, infinitely more debasing and pernicious. Note, Ez. 8: 10.]

(2.) They next bewail the provocations of their fathers after they were put in possession of Canaan; v. 26—28. not being wrought upon, either by their troubles, or their deliverances out of trouble. Neither fear nor love would hold them to their duty.

(3.) They, at length, come nearer to their own u Ps. 86:15. Rom. 2:4. 2 Pet. 3:9.

* Heb. protract over them.
x 20. Is. 63:10. Acts 7:51. 28:25. 1 Pet. 1:11. 2 Pet. 1:21.
† Heb. the hand of thy prophets.
y Is. 5:5,6. 42:24. Jer. 40:2,3. 44:22 Lam. 2:17. Zech. 7:13 z Jer. 4:27. 5:10,18. Lam. 3:22. Ez 14:22,23. Dan. 9:9.
a See on 17.—Ex. 34:6,7. 2 K. 13:23 2 Chr. 30:9. Ps. 103:8,9. 145:8,9.
b 15. Deut. 7:21. Ps. 47:2. 66:3,5. c Deut. 7:9. 1 K. 8:23. Dan. 9:4. Mic. 7:18—20. ‡ Heb. weariness.
d Lev. 26:18,21,24,28. Ezra 9:13.
§ Heb. found us.
e 2 K. 23:29,33,34. 25:7,18—21,25,26 2 Chr. 36: Jer. 8:1—3. 22:18 9. 34. 19—22. 39: 52: Dan. 9:6,8.
f 2 K. 15:19,29. 17:3. Is. 7:17,18. 8: 7,8. 10:5—7. 36: 37: g Gen. 18:25. Job 34:23. Ps. 119:137. Jer. 12:1. Lam. 1:18. Dan. 9:7,14. h Lev. 26:40,41. Job 33:27. Ps. 106:6 Dan. 9:5—10.
i 30. 2 K. 17:15.
k Deut. 28:47. Jer. 5:19. Rom. 3:4,5.
l 25.
m Deut. 8:7—10. 32:12—15.
n Deut. 28:48. 2 Chr. 12:8. Ezra 9:9
o Deut. 28:30,51. Ezra 4:13. 6:8. 7:24 p 5:8. Lev. 26:17. Deut. 28:48. John 8:33.
q 10:29. 2 K. 23:3. 2 Chr. 15:12,13 23:16. 29:10. 34:31. Ezra 10:3.
‖ Heb. are at the sealing, or, sealed 10:1.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The diligent study of God's Word will more and more show us both our own sinfulness, and the plenteousness of his salvation; and thus alternately call us to mourn for sin, and to rejoice in Him.—Seasons of comfort should remind us of his condescending goodness, and so lead us to deeper self-abasement on account of our crimes against Him: and thus joyful feasts and solemn fasts may properly succeed, and prepare our hearts for each other.—Alas, we are most of us sooner weary in the courts of the Lord, than the trifler is at his diversions, or even the laborer at his work!—Those who address God in public, should speak audibly and with animation; that the people may hear and be affected: and if, on some occasions, 'they cry with a loud voice unto the LORD their God,' or be more copious than usual, they cannot be censured, without involving those who are commended in the sacred Scriptures.—In reviewing this abstract of the Lord's conduct toward Israel, as a people, from the choice and call of Abraham to the days of Nehemiah: we perceive a continued display of his power, wisdom, truth, and love, requited by persevering ingratitude, and perverse disobedience. And is not their conduct a specimen of human nature? Our land, for instance, has long been favored with deliverances, opportunities, and benefits, little, if at all, inferior to those vouchsafed to Israel: and have we not copied Israel's ingratitude, rebellion, and iniquity? Oh, may a general reformation, while yet we are spared, prevent our being given up into the hands of foreign conquerors, or domestic oppressors! (P. O. Deut. 32: 15—35. Ps. 78: 12—54. 106: 28—48. Ez. 16: 20: 10—19.) But especially we should each of us study our own history. Let us look back to the time, when we received our being, as rational creatures, from the goodness and power of the Lord; let us recollect the distinguishing advantages of our infancy and childhood: then let us ask ourselves, what were our first returns to our kind Friend and Benefactor? what were our first thoughts, words, and works?—As our faculties began to unfold, revolving years brought with them recent comforts and advantages: and did they not witness increasing perverseness, ingratitude, and ungodliness? Let us divide our lives past into distinct periods, and carefully investigate the mercies and the transgressions of each, until we have brought down the inquiry to the present hour: praying all the while, that the Holy Spirit may assist our recollection, and enable us to form a proper estimate of the Lord's dealings with us, and our behavior towards Him; and to deduce proper conclusions from the whole, with suitable affections. And if prejudice, ignorance, or self-flattery do not blind our minds, we shall certainly see abundant cause for deep humiliation and for admiring gratitude; and to acknowledge, that all our sufferings have been justly merited, all our comforts mercifully bestowed.—Besides the temporal provision which we have from the Lord's bounty, (though not by miracle;) we are favored with means and opportunities of becoming wise unto salvation, even beyond what Israel enjoyed in their most favored times. We have the sacred oracles, now completed and ever at hand, to give us light, and to show us the way in which we should go. We have the gospel preached among us, and the holy sabbaths and ordinances of our God: but have we never neglected, profaned, and despised them? We have not been without salutary chastisements, and merciful deliverances, perhaps, in answer to prayer: but have we not requited them by returning unto sin? We have had, not only the testimony of God's servants, but the strivings of his good Spirit: but have we never hated or despised the one, and quenched the other? nay, we are especially 'under the ministration of the Spirit:' yet perhaps have neglected to pray for his gracious influences, and derided those who did! And have not we proudly cast off the authority of God's law; and as proudly endeavored to justify ourselves before Him? This, I say, was the case with us once, perhaps is so still with some who read these observations. Yet, whilst others have been cut off, we are spared! May this review of the Lord's mercies, and of our sins, bring us to true repentance, and induce us to condemn ourselves, as having imitated and vindicated all the transgressors who have gone before us: may it bring us to submit to the Lord's righteousness, to accept of his salvation, and to set our seal to his new covenant of mercy and grace: that 'being delivered from all our enemies, we may serve Him in righteousness before Him' the remainder of our days. (P. O. Deut. 9: 32: 1—14. Ps. 106: 1—27. Ez. 20: 1—9.)

Even, if, by the Lord's choice of us, and his grace given to us, under any law of ours. HENRY.

Verse 32.

Dr. A. Clarke thinks, Nehemiah mentions here, in the 'natural order, the whole of civil society in its officers, as they stand related to each other in dignity. 1. Kings. 2. Princes. 3. Priests. 4. Prophets. 5. Fathers, heads or chiefs of tribes and families. 6. The common People.' ED.

Verses 36, 37.

The situation of Israel was very different, at this time, from what it had been under their own kings, and in the days of their prosperity. (John 8:30—36.) It was very distressing for the worshippers of God, to be in slavery to the worshippers of dumb idols:* and though they had no intention of revolting from the kings of Persia, who allowed them to live according to their own laws, and in many respects showed them much favor; yet they hoped, that, on their deep repentance, and more entire return to God, He would more effectually deliver them from captivity and bondage, and restore them in due season to their former liberty, independence, and prosperity. (5:1—5. Ps. 85:1—8. 106:46—48.) SCOTT.

* Scripture nowhere, it is believed, calls the Persians idolaters. The case of the Babylonians or Chaldeans was far different. See Isa. 46: Jer. 50: &c. Ed.

CHAP. X.

The names of those who sealed the covenant, 1—27. The rest of the people bind themselves to observe it, 28, 29. Some particulars to which they bound themselves, 30—39.

NOW * those that sealed were [a] Nehemiah the † Tirshatha, the [b] son of Hachaliah, and Zidkijah,

2 [c] Seraiah, Azariah, Jeremiah,

3 [d] Pashur, [e] Amariah, [f] Malchijah,

4 [g] Hattush, [h] Shebaniah, [i] Malluch,

5 [k] Harim, [l] Meremoth, Obadiah,

6 Daniel, [m] Ginnethon, [n] Baruch,

7 [o] Meshullam, [p] Abijah, [q] Mijamin,

8 Maaziah, [r] Bilgai, [s] Shemaiah: these were the priests.

9 And the Levites: both [t] Jeshua the son of Azaniah, Binnui of the sons of [u] Henadad, Kadmiel;

10 And their brethren, [x] Shebaniah, Hodijah, Kelita, Pelaiah, Hanan, 11 Micha, Rehob, [y] Hashabiah,

12 Zaccur, [z] Sherebiah, Shebaniah,

13 Hodijah, Bani, Beninu.

14 The chief of the people; [a] Parosh, Pahath-moab, Elam, Zatthu, [b] Bani, 15 Bunni, [c] Azgad, Bebai,

16 Adonijah, [d] Bigvai, Adin,

17 Ater, Hizkijah, Azzur,

18 Hodijah, [e] Hashum, Bezai,

19 Hariph, Anathoth, Nebai,

20 Magpiash, Meshullam, Hezir,

* Heb. at the sealings. 9:38.

a 8:9.

day, and lament the sins which had brought those judgments they had long been groaning under, and were now but in part delivered from, v. 33, 34. Two things they charge on themselves, and their fathers, as the cause of their troubles. A contempt of the good law, and the good land God had given them. They sinned against thy judgments, the dictates of divine wisdom, and the demands of divine sovereignty: they gave a withdrawing shoulder, so the marg. pretended to lay their shoulders under the burden of God's law, but when it came, as we say, to the setting to, they shrunk back, and would not hear; they had a backsliding heart. And though God by his prophets called them to return, they would not give ear, v. 30. 'our people have not served Thee in the use of the gifts of thy great goodness, in that large and fat land Thou gavest them.' It is a pity that a good land should have bad inhabitants, but so it was with Sodom; fatness and fulness often make men proud and sensual. [Note, 2 Chr. 20: 3.]

4. A humble representation of the judgments they had been, and were now, under. Former judgments are remembered as aggravations of their sins, that they had not taken warning, v. 27. and their present calamitous state is laid before the Lord, v. 36, 37. Free-born Israelites are enslaved, and the land they had long held by a grant from the crown of heaven to them, as a peculiar people above all people of the earth, they now held by as base a tenure as villanage itself, by, from, and under, the kings of Persia, whose vassals they were. A sad change! But see what work sin makes! They were bound to personal service; they have dominion over our bodies; they held all they had, precariously, were tenants at will, and the land-tax that they paid, was so great, that it amounted even to a rack-rent; so that all the rents, issues, and profits of their land, did, in effect, accrue to the king; and it was as much as they could do to get a bare subsistence for themselves and their families out of it: this, they honestly own, was for their sins; poverty and slavery are the fruits of sin; it is sin that brings all our distresses.

5. Their address to God under these calamities, v. 32. It is the only petition in all this prayer. They do not prescribe to God what He shall do for them, but leave it to Him only, desiring He would please to take cognizance of their trouble. They acknowledge, notwithstanding, that really it was less than they deserved, v. 33. Note, It becomes us, when under the rebukes of Divine Providence, though ever so sharp, and ever so long, to justify God, and to judge ourselves, Ps. 61: 4.

6. After this long presentation of their case, they came, at last, to this resolution, that they would return to God and duty, and oblige themselves never to forsake God, but always to continue in their duty. Observe, This covenant was made with serious consideration; it is the result of a chain of suitable thoughts, and so is a reasonable service: with great solemnity; it was written, that it might remain a memorial for all ages; it was sealed, and left on record, that it might be a witness against them if they dealt deceitfully: with joint-consent; 'We make it, we do it unanimously, to strengthen the hands one of another:' with fixed resolution; 'It is a sure covenant, without reserving a power of revocation. It is what we live and die by, and never go back from.' A certain number of the princes, priests, and Levites, were chosen as the representatives of the congregation, to subscribe and seal it, for and in the name of the rest. Now was fulfilled that promise, that when they were returned out of captivity, they should join themselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant, (Jer. 50: 5.) and that (Is. 44: 5.) they should subscribe with their hand unto the Lord; he that bears an honest mind, will not startle at assurances; nor will those that know the deceitfulness of their own hearts, think them needless.

CHAP. X. V. 1—31. We have, in this ch. a particular account of the covenant resolved on in the close of the foregoing; they immediately put that good resolve in execution, when in a good frame, lest, if delayed, it had been dropped. Israel was first brought into covenant with God, by sacrifice, and the sprinkling of blood, Ex. 24. but here, by the more natural and common way of sealing and subscribing the written articles of the † Or, governor. 7:70. Ezra 2:63.

b 11:1.
c 3:23. 11:11. 12:1,33,34.
d 11:12. e 12:2,13.
f 3:11. 8:4. Malchiah.
g 3:10.
h 12:14.
i 12:2.
k 3:11.
l 3:4,21. 12:3.
m 12:4. Ginnetho
n 3:20.
o 3:6. 8:4. 11:11. 12:13,25—33.
p 12:4.
q 12:5. Miamin. 17,41. Miniamin.
r 12:5. Bilgah.
s 3:29. 12:6,18,42. Ezra 10:21.
t 3:19. 7:43. 8:7. 9:4.
u 3:18,24. 12:8,24.
x 8:7. 9:4,5. Ezra 10:23.
y 11:15,22. 12:24. Ezra 8:19,24.
z 8:7. 9:4. 12:8.
a 3:11. 7:8,11—13. Zattu.
b 7:15. Binnui. Ezra 2:10.
c 7:16,17. Ezra 2:11,12. 8:11,12. 10:28.
d 7:19—21. Ezra 2:14—16. 8:14.
e 7:22,&c. Ezra 2:17,&c.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

we have on the whole been made and found faithful to Him; and if his covenant have been ratified to us with all its precious promises; we shall not only have cause to adore Him for these inestimable mercies, and for his Son Jesus Christ, and redemption by his atoning blood, as the Foundation of them all; but we shall, on every review, see cause to admire his present patience and gentleness, and to lament our ingratitude and disobedience. We have been delivered from a far worse oppression, than that of the Egyptian tyrant, and by a far more wonderful exertion of almighty power and love. We are guided by a superior light, sheltered by a more glorious protection, and favored with stronger consolations, than Israel of old. We feed on 'the Bread of Life, which came down from heaven, to give life unto the world:' we drink the waters which flow from 'the Rock of Ages' who was smitten for us; we are clothed with the robe of righteousness and salvation; our 'feet are shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace;' and the good Spirit of God is not only our condescending Instructer and Sanctifier, but our Comforter also, who deigns to make our hearts his temple! and we possess the hope and earnests of everlasting glory. But, while we rejoice in the Lord's great goodness to us, what requital do we make? We are, perhaps, kept from habitual and gross disobedience: but we are conscious how often we are setting up our idols, and in heart returning to our bondage; how often we forget Him, 'grieve his Holy Spirit,' and neglect his service; and how often we are kept from sti greater revolts by no higher motives than the terror of his judgments, and the anguish of his salutary chastisements, which yet we soon forget, when He has mercifully removed them. Were He not slow to anger, and ready to pardon, He would have cast us off long ago. But our Heavenly Advocate still pleads, and we are spared; and his mercies and our privileges are continued to us! SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. X. V. 1. This is the only instance met with of a covenant drawn up in writing, and ratified by the names and seals of the persons who consented to it. (29. Ex. 24:3—11. Deut. 26:17—19. 29:10—15. Josh. 8:30—35. 24:14—27. 2 Kings 11:17—20. 23:3. 2 Chr. 15: 12—15. Is. 44:3—5. P. O. 1—5.) The same uses may be made of those professions, and of that consent to the new covenant, which are virtually made in baptism, whether personal, or that of our children; and in the Lord's supper; when those ordinances are duly explained and understood, administered and attended on. (Matt. 19:13—15. 26: 26—28. P. O. 26—35.)—Perhaps Zidkijah was one of the princes; but no other name is explicitly mentioned of that order. SCOTT.

Verses 2—8.

All the persons named in these vs. were priests, and no doubt chief persons of that order.—It is observable that Eliashib, the high priest, is not found among those who sealed the covenant. And it is probable, that neither he nor his sons favored the measure. (13:4, 23—30.) SCOTT.

Verses 9—17.

Most, if not all, of the Levites, who led the public devotions, set their seal to the covenant; which may be admitted as a probable indication, that they were earnestly and zealously engaged in that service. (M. R.—9:4, 5.) ID.

Verses 18—27.

(M. R.) Many of the names, here mentioned, are found among those who returned with Zerubbabel, about 90 years before: so that, ei her the same names were preserved in the several families; or the principal descendants of these persons, when in general favorable to the 21 Meshezabeel, Zadok, Jaddua, 22 Pelatiah, Hanan, Anaiah,

23 Hoshea, Hananiah, Hashub,
24 Hallohesh, Pileha, Shobek,
25 [f] Rehum, Hashabnah, Maaseiah, 26 And Ahijah, Hanan, Anan, 27 Malluch, Harim, Baanah.

28 ¶ And [g] the rest of the people, the priests, the Levites, the porters, the singers, the Nethinims, and [h] all they that had separated themselves from the people of the lands, unto the law of God, their wives, their sons, and their daughters, [i] every one having knowledge, and having understanding;

29 They [j] clave to their brethren, their nobles, and [k] entered into a curse, and into an oath, [l] to walk in God's law, which was [m] given [*] by Moses the servant of God, and [n] to observe and do all the commandments of [o] the LORD our Lord, and his judgments and his statutes;

[Practical Observations.]

30 And [p] that we would not give our daughters unto the people of the land, nor take their daughters for our sons:

31 And if [q] the people of the land bring ware, or any victuals, on the sabbath day to sell, that we would not buy it of them on the sabbath, or [r] on the holy day; [s] and that we would leave the seventh year, and the exaction of every † debt.

32 Also we made ordinances for us, [u] to charge ourselves yearly with [x] the third part of a shekel, for the service of the house of our God;

33 For [y] the shewbread, and for the continual meat-offering, and for [z] the continual burnt-offering, of the sabbaths, of the new moons, for the set feasts, and for the holy things, and for the sin-offerings, to make an atonement for Israel, and for [a] all the work of the house of our God.

34 And we [b] cast the lots among the priests, the Levites, and the people,

[f] 3:17, &c.
[g] 7:72,73. Ezra 2:70.
[h] 9:2. 13:3. Ezra 9:1,2. 10:11—17. 2 Cor. 6:14—17.

covenant,—which bound them to no more than was already their duty. Here we have,

I. The names of those public persons who, as the representatives and heads of the congregation, set their hands and seals to this covenant, because it would have been endless for every particular person to do it. Observe, 1. Nehemiah, who was the governor, signed first, to show his forwardness in it, and to set a good example, v. 1. Those that are above others in dignity and power, should exert a good influence on the people, and go before them in the way of God. 2. Next subscribed 22 priests, among whom I wonder we do not find Ezra, who was active in the solemnity (ch. 8: 2.); but he, perhaps, having before done his part as a scribe, now left it to others to do theirs. 3. Next to the priests, 17 Levites subscribed, among whom we find all or most of those who were the mouth of the congregation in prayer, ch. 9: 4, 5. This showed they would not bind those burdens on others, which they themselves declined to touch. They that lead in prayer, should lead in every other good work. Next, 44 of the chief of the people gave it under their hands for themselves and all the rest, chiefly those whom they had influence upon, that they would keep God's commandments. Their names are left on record here, to their honor, as men forward and active in reviving, and endeavoring to perpetuate, religion in their country: the memory of such shall be blessed. Most of those mentioned, ch. 7: 8, &c. as heads of houses or clans, are here mentioned among the first of the chief of the people that subscribed; whoever was the present head bearing the name of him that was head when they came out of Babylon, and these were fittest to subscribe for all those of their father's house.

II. The concurrence of the rest of the people, priests and Levites, every one that had knowledge and understanding, must covenant with God. As soon as young people grow up to be capable of distinguishing between good and evil, and of acting intelligently, they ought to make it their own act and deed, to join themselves to the Lord. The proselytes of other nations also joined, all that had separated themselves from the people of the lands, their gods and their worship, under the law of God, and the observance of that law. Conversion is separating ourselves from the course and custom of this world, and devoting ourselves to the conduct of the Word of God.

Observe how this concurrence is expressed, v. 29. 1. They clave to their brethren; one and all. Here, whom the court blessed, the country blessed too! The commonalty agreed with their nobles, called their brethren, for, in the things of God, rich and poor, high and low, meet together. Great men never look so great, as when they encourage reli-

[i] 8:2. Ec. 5:2. Jer. 4:2.
[j] Is. 14:1. Acts 11:23. 17:34. Rom. 12:9.
[k] 5:12,13. 13:25. Deut. 27:15,&c. 29: 12—14. 2 Chr. 15:13,14. Ps. 119: 106. Acts 23:12—15,21.
[l] 2 K. 10:31. 23:3. 2 Chr. 6:16. 34: 31. Jer. 26:4.
[m] Deut. 33:4. Mal. 4:4. John 1:17. 7:19.
[*] Heb. by the hand of.
[n] Deut. 5:1,32. Ps. 105:45. Ez. 36:27. John 15:14. Tit. 2:11—14.
[o] Is. 9:1,9.
[p] Ex. 34:16. Deut. 7:3. Ezra 9:1—3, 12—14. 10:10—12.
[q] 13:15—22. Ex. 20:10. Lev. 23:3. Deut. 5:12—14. Jer. 17:21,22.
[r] Ex. 12:16. Lev. 16:29. 23:21,35,36. Col. 2:16.
[s] Ex. 23:10,11. Lev. 25:4—7. 2 Chr. 36:21.
[t] 5:7,12. Deut. 15:1—3,7—9. Matt. 6:12. 18:27—35. Jam. 2:13.
† Heb. band. Is. 58:6.
[u] Gen. 28:22. Prov. 3:9,10.
[x] Ex. 30:11—16. Matt. 17:24—27. 2 Cor. 8:12.
[y] Lev. 24:5—9. 2 Chr. 2:4.
[z] Num. 28: 29:
[a] 2 Chr. 24:5—14.
[b] 1 Chr. 24:5,7. 25:8,9. Prov. 18:18.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—29. As the creatures and subjects of the Lord, we are bound by his authority to obey all his commandments, and are exposed to a tremendous curse for violating them. But our offended Sovereign, in his infinite mercy, has provided a better covenant, according to which believers are delivered from this curse, and are taught and enabled to perform a new, sincere, and acceptable obedience through Jesus Christ. The Word of God calls us to consent to this covenant, and to partake of its inestimable benefits. And when we humble ourselves in godly sorrow and penitent confessions of sin; when we receive the atonement and reconciliation, which the Mediator of this covenant has made by his precious blood, and seek for mercy through his intercession by fervent prayers; and when in our purposes of renewed obedience, we rely on his gracious assistance:—when these transactions have indeed taken place in secret, between God and our souls; our public sealing and ratifying the covenant at the Lord's table, or in any other solemn way, will be honorable to God, edifying to his people, and encouraging to ourselves; and we may trust in Him to enable us to fulfil the engagements with acceptance. But where this preparation of heart is wanting, such public engagements are mere hypocrisy. (P. O. Deut. 29: 1—17. 2 Chr. 30: 13—27.) This detestable evil will intrude in all great revivals of religion, after every possible precaution; and the hypocrites must be left to the judgment of a heart-searching God. But men should be warned, that those, who in baptism, or at the Lord's table, or when admitted into the ministry, or in any other way, engage for what they do not intend, or afterwards do not take care to perform, bring themselves under an additional and most awful curse: as do all, who trifle with solemn oaths, vows, or sacramental engagements of any kind; and all, who despise, oppose, or pervert the salvation of the Gospel. SCOTT.

measure, subscribed their family-name; i. e. the name of that ancestor, by relation to whom they were commonly distinguished. (Luke 1:61.) SCOTT.

Verse 29.

By the nobles, in this place, the superior persons, priests, or Levites, are evidently meant. The body of the people, who were old enough to be capable of knowing what was intended, assembled together, and signified, by some appointed token, their consent to the covenant, as in the presence of God, and under the solemn obligations of an oath; and to an awful curse, which was denounced against such as violated these obligations. (5:10—13. Deut. 27:15—26.) They engaged in general to obey the whole law of Moses: and some instances were specified, in which they had been remarkably guilty, or which were peculiarly ensnaring. ID.

Verses 30, 31.

(Ezra 9: 10:)—It seems, that Nehemiah would not venture, in the present unsettled state of the Jews, to exercise his authority, to prevent their heathen neighbors from vending provisions at Jerusalem, or in the cities of Judah, on the Sabbath: and he supposed, that by engaging the people, in this solemn manner, not to buy of them, they would be discouraged from coming. But he soon found that many evaded or violated the engagement, without regard to consequences; and he was afterwards constrained to employ coercive measures. (13:15—22.)—It may be concluded from this narrative, that no Jew attempted to carry on trade on the Sabbath; though some would buy of the Gentiles. This gave the latter an undue advantage, and proportionably injured the Jews. And certainly, carrying on trade is as contrary to the law of hallowing the Sabbath, as any kind of labor whatever. SCOTT.

Verses 32, 33.

A half shekel apiece had been collected for erecting the tabernacle in the wilderness; and that sum is supposed to have been paid from time to time, for the purchase of sacrifices, and other expenses of the stated worship. (Ex. 30:11—16. 2 K. 12:4, 5. Matt. 17:24—27.) But it was now computed, that one third of a shekel apiece, or something less than a shilling of our money, annually, would suffice for these expenses. ID.

Verse 34.

Wood-offering.] 'Maimonides says, there was a time fixed for families to go into the forests and bring in wood for the altar and on the day of their turn, they offered free-will burnt offerings, which were for [c] the wood-offering; to bring it into the house of our God, after the houses of our fathers, at times appointed, year by year, to burn upon the altar of the LORD our God, [d] as it is written in the law:

35 And to bring [e] the first fruits of our ground, and the first fruits of all fruit of all trees, year by year, unto the house of the LORD:

36 Also [f] the first-born of our sons, and of our cattle, as it is written in the law, and the firstlings of our herds, and of our flocks, to bring to the house of our God, [g] unto the priests that minister in the house of our God:

37 And that we should bring [h] the first fruits of our dough, and our offerings, and the fruit of all manner of trees, of wine, and of oil, unto the priests, [i] to the chambers of the house of our God; and [k] the tithes of our ground unto the Levites, that the same Levites might have the tithes, in all the cities of our tillage.

38 And the priest the son of Aaron shall be with the Levites, [l] when the Levites take tithes: and the Levites shall bring up the tithe of the tithes unto the house of our God, to the chambers, into [m] the treasure-house.

39 For [n] the children of Israel and [o] the children of Levi shall bring the offering of the corn, of the new wine, and the oil, unto the chambers, where are the vessels of the sanctuary, and the priests that minister, and the porters, and the singers: and [p] we will not forsake gion, and are examples of it; and they would by that, as much as any thing, secure an interest in the most valuable of their inferiors. 2. They entered into a curse and an oath; solemnly appealing to God concerning their sincerity, and imprecating his just vengeance if they dealt deceitfully. Every oath has in it a conditional curse on the soul, which makes it a strong bond upon the soul; for our own tongues, if false and lying, will fall, and fall heavy, on ourselves.

III. The general purport of this covenant. They laid on themselves no other necessary burden, than this they were already obliged to by all other engagements of duty, interest, and gratitude—to walk in God's law, and do all his commandments, v. 29. Thus David swore, Ps. 119: 106. Our own covenant binds us to this, if not more strongly, yet more sensibly, than we were before bound, therefore we must not think it needless thus to bind ourselves. When we bind ourselves to do the commandments of God, we bind ourselves to do all his commandments, and therein to have an eye to Him as the Lord, and our Lord.

IV. Some particular articles, adapted to their present temptations. 1. That they would not intermarry with the heathen, v. 30. Many had been thus guilty, Ezra 9: 1. In our covenant with God, we should engage particularly against those sins we have been most frequently overtaken in, and damaged by. They that resolve to keep the commandments of God, must say to evil-doers, Depart, Ps. 119: 115. 2. That they would keep no market on the Sabbath, or any other day of which the law had said, Ye shall do no work therein. They would even buy their provisions for their families the day before, v. 31. Those that covenant to keep all God's commandments, must particularly covenant to keep sabbaths well; the profanation of them is an inlet to other instances of profaneness. The Sabbath is a market-day for our souls, but not for our bodies. 3. That they would not be severe in exacting their debts, but would observe the 7th year as a year of release, according to the law, v. 31. In this they had been faulty, (ch. 5.) here therefore they promise to reform. This was the acceptable fast, to undo the heavy burden, and to let the oppressed go free, Isa. 58: 6. It was in the close of the day of expiation, that the jubilee trumpet sounded. It was for the neglect of observing the 7th year as a year of rest for the land, that God had made it enjoy its sabbaths 70 years; (Lev. 26: 35.) therefore they covenanted to observe that law. Those are stubborn children indeed, that will not amend the fault they have been particularly corrected for.

V. 32—39. Having covenanted against the sins they had been guilty of, they oblige themselves to revive and observe the duties they had neglected. We must not only cease to do evil, but learn to do well. It was resolved,

I. In general, that the temple-service should be carefully kept up, v. 33. Let not any people expect the blessing of God, unless they make conscience of observing his ordinances, and keeping up public worship; then it is likely to go well with them. It was likewise resolved, they would never forsake the house of their God, (v. 39.) as they and their fathers had done; for the house of any other god, or for the high places, as idolaters did; nor for their farms and merchandises, as did the atheistical, and profane. They that forsake God's worship, forsake God.

II. That, in pursuance of this, they would liberally maintain, and not starve it. The priests were ready to do their part in all the work of God's house, if the people would do theirs, which was, to find them with materials to work upon.

1. A stock shall be raised to furnish God's table and altar plentifully. Formerly, there were treasures in the house of the Lord for this, but those were gone, and there was no settled fund to supply them. It was a constant charge to provide shew-bread for the table, 2 lambs for the daily offerings, 4 for the sabbaths, and more, and more costly sacrifices for other festivals, occasional sin-offerings, and meat-offerings, and drink-offerings for them all. They had no rich king to provide these, as Hezekiah did: the priests could not afford it, their maintenance was so small; the people therefore agreed to contribute for it yearly, each the 3d part of a shekel, about 10*d.* a-piece. When every one will act, and give, though but little, to a good work, the amount will be considerable. The Tirshatha did not impose this tax, but the people charged themselves with it, v. 32, 33.

2. Particular care shall be taken to provide wood for the altar, to keep the fire always burning on it, and wherewith to boil the peace-offerings. Each of them, priests and Levites as well as people, agreed to bring in his quota, and cast lots in what order he should bring it in, which family first, and which next, that there might be a constant supply, and not a scarcity at one time, and an overplus at another, v. 34.

3. That all those things, which the divine law had appointed for the maintenance of the priests and Levites, should be duly paid in, for their encouragement to mind their business, and that they might not be under any temptation to neglect it to make necessary provision for their families Then the work of the house of God is likely to go on, when those that serve at the altar, live comfortably on the altar. First-fruits and tenths were then the principal branches of the minister's revenues; and they here resolve, (1.) To bring in their first-fruits justly, of their ground and trees, Ex. 23: 19, Lev. 19: 24. The first-born of their children, even the money wherewith they were to be redeemed; and of their cattle, Ex. 13: 2, 11, 12. This was given to the priests, Num. 18: 15, 16. Also the first-fruits of their dough, (Num. 15: 21.) concerning which, there is a particular order given in the prophecy concerning the second temple, Ezek. 44: 30. (2.) To bring in their tenths likewise, which were due to the Levites, (v. 37.) and a tenth out of those tenths to the priests, v. 38. This was the law; (Num. 18:

the house of our God.

c 13:31. Lev. 6:12. Josh. 9:27. Is. 40:16.
d Lev. 6:12,13.
e Ex. 23:19. 34:26. Lev. 19:23—26. Num. 18:12. Deut. 26:2. 2 Chr. 31: 5—10. Prov. 3:9,10. Mal. 3:8—12. f Ex. 13:2,12—15. 34:19. Lev. 27:26, 27. Num. 18:15,16. Deut. 12:6.
g Num. 18:8—19. 1 Cor. 9:6—14. Gal. 6:6.
h Lev. 23:17. Num. 15:19—21. 18:12, 13. Deut. 18:4. 26:2.
i 13:5,9. 1 K. 6:5—10. 2 Chr. 31:11,12.
k Lev. 27:30—33. Num. 18:21,24—32. 2 Chr. 31:6.
l Num. 18:26—28.
m 13:12,13. 1 Chr. 9:26. 2 Chr. 31:11, 12. n Deut. 12:6—11,17. 14:23—27. 2 Chr. 31:12.
o Num. 18:30. p 13:10,11. Ps. 122:9. Heb. 10:25.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 30—39. We are not sincere in covenanting with God, except we aim to obey all his commandments: for if we allow ourselves in violating one of them habitually, it is evident that we have not truly repented of our former transgressions in that particular; that we have never sought forgiveness of them in a due manner; that we do not desire the sanctifying Spirit of Christ, to mortify that peculiar [sinning] propensity: and consequently that we are not born of God, nor interested in the righteousness and atonement of Christ. But real believers, at least all, who by a consistent conduct give satisfactory evidence that they are such, place the strongest guard where there is the greatest danger; and use every mean of avoiding and subduing those sins, which have the most foiled and ensnared them. Separation from intimate connections with ungodly persons, and the conscientious hallowing of the Lord's-day, are peculiarly attended to by them. Though they be poor or burdened, they will find a little to spare for pious or charitable uses; that little will be accepted; and, coming from great numbers, will form large funds for useful purposes.—As the ordinances of God are the appointed means of sustenance to our souls, the believer should not grudge the expense of them. Even the poor will part with their money for bread: yet most men leave their souls to starve! SCOTT.

called a wood offering.' GILL. 'The bringing of the wood, (perhaps once a year by one district, the next year by another, and so on,) at last became a great day; and was constituted into a feast, called by Jos. Xylophoria, the "carrying of the wood."' Dr. A. CLARKE.

CHAP. XI.

The rulers, with every tenth man taken by lot, and those who offered voluntarily, dwell at Jerusalem, 1, 2. Their names, 3—19. The rest dwell in the other cities, 20—36.

AND [a] the rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem: the rest of the people also [b] cast lots, to bring [c] one of ten to dwell in Jerusalem [d] the holy city, and nine parts to dwell in other cities.

2 And the people [e] blessed all the men, that [f] willingly offered themselves to dwell at Jerusalem.

3 Now these are [g] the chief of the province that dwelt in Jerusalem: but in the cities of Judah dwelt every one in his possession in their cities, to wit, [h] Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the Nethinims, and [i] the children of Solomon's servants.

4 And at Jerusalem, [k] dwelt certain of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin. Of the children of Judah; Athaiah the son of Uzziah, the son of Zechariah, the son of Amariah, the son of Shephatiah, the son of Mahalaleel, of the children of [l] Perez;

5 And Maaseiah the son of Baruch, the son of [m] Col-hozeh, the son of Hazaiah, the son of Adaiah, the son of Joiarib, the son of Zechariah, the son of [n] Shiloni.

6 All the sons of Perez that dwelt at Jerusalem, were four hundred threescore and eight valiant men.

7 ¶ And these are [o] the sons of Benjamin; Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Joed, the son of Pedaiah, the son of Kolaiah, the son of Maaseiah, the son of Ithiel, the son of Jesaiah.

8 And after him Gabbai, Sallai, nine hundred twenty and eight.

9 And Joel the son of Zichri was their overseer: and [p] Judah the son of Senuah was second over the city.

10 ¶ Of the priests: [q] Jedaiah the son of [r] Joiarib, Jachin.

11 [s] Seraiah the son of Hilkiah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, was [t] the ruler of the house of God.

12 And their brethren that did the work of the house, were eight hundred twenty and two: and [u] Adaiah the son of Jeroham, the son of Pelaliah, the son of Amzi, the son of Zechariah, the son of Pashur, the son of Malchiah,

13 And his brethren, chief of the fathers, two hundred forty and two: and Amashai the son of Azareel, the son of Ahasai, the son of Meshillemoth, the son of Immer,

14 And their brethren, mighty men of valor, an hundred twenty and eight: and their overseer was Zabdiel, the son * of one of the great men.

15 ¶ Also of the Le-

21—28.) but these dues had been withheld, for which God, by the prophet charges them with robbing Him, (Mal. 3: 8, 9.) at the same time encouraging them to be more just to Him and his receivers, with a promise, that, if they brought the tithes into the store-house, He would pour out blessings on them, v. 10. This therefore they resolve to do, that there might be meat in God's house, and plenty in the store-chambers of the temple, where the vessels of the sanctuary were, v. 39. We will do it (say they) in all the cities of our tillage, v. 37. In all the cities of our servitude, so the LXX. for they were servants in their own land, ch. 9: 36 But (as Poole well observes) though they paid great taxes to the kings of Persia, and had much hardship put on them, they would not make that an excuse for not paying tithes, but would render to God the things that were his, as well as to Cæsar the things that were his. We must do what we can in the works of piety and charity, notwithstanding the taxes we pay the government; and cheerfully perform our duty to God in our servitude, which will be the surest way to ease and liberty in God's due time.

CHAP. XI. Jerusalem was walled round, but not yet fully inhabited, therefore Nehemiah's next care is to bring people into it: of that we have here an account.

V. 1—19. Jerusalem is called here the holy city, (v. 1.) as it was the place of the temple, and where God had chosen to put his name; on this account, one would think, the holy seed should have all chosen to dwell there, but, on the contrary, it seems they declined it; either, 1. Because a greater strictness of conversation was expected from the inhabitants of Jerusalem than from others, which they were not willing to come up to: Or, 2. Because Jerusalem, of all places, was most hated by the heathen, their neighbors, which made that the post of danger, (as the post of honor usually is,) therefore they were not willing to expose themselves there. Or, 3. Because it was more for their worldly advantage to dwell in the country. Jerusalem was no trading city, therefore there was no money to be got there by merchandises, as in the country by corn and cattle. Note, All seek their own, not the things that are Jesus Christ's, Phil. 2: 21. It is a general and just complaint, that most people prefer their own wealth, credit, pleasure, ease, and safety, before the glory of God and the public good.

People being thus backward, we are here told, I. How Jerusalem was replenished, 1. By the rulers, v. 1. It was their proper residence, which would invite and encourage others. When great men choose the holy city for their habitation, it brings holiness into reputation, and their zeal will provoke very many. 2. Some willingly offered, bravely postponing their own secular interest to the public welfare, v. 2. It is on record, to their honor, that when others were shy of venturing on difficulty, loss, and danger, they sought the good of Jerusalem, because of the house of their God. They shall prosper, that thus love Zion, Ps. 122: 6, 9. 3. Finding there yet was room, they concluded to bring in one in ten, by lot, the disposal whereof, all knew, was of the Lord; who would thus appoint the bounds of their habitation. They observed this proportion, as we may suppose, to bring the balance between the city and country to a just and equal poise; so it seems to refer to the ancient rule of giving the tenth to God; and what is given to the holy city, He reckons given to Himself.

II. A general account is here given of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, because the governors of Judah looked on them as their strength in the Lord of hosts their God, and valued them accordingly, Zech. 12: 5.

1. Many of Judah and Benjamin dwelt there; originally, part of the city lay in one of those tribes, and part in the other; but the greater part in the lot of Benjamin, therefore here we find of the children of Judah only 468 families in Jerusalem, (v. 6.) but of Benjamin, 928; v. 7, 8. Afterward, before our Savior's time, it grew much more populous. Those of Judah all descended from Perez, or, Pharez, that son of Judah, of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came. The Benjamites were more in number, yet of the men of Judah it is said, (v. 6.) they were valiant men, fit for service, and able to defend the city. Judah has not lost its ancient character, of a lion's whelp, bold and daring. Of these Benjamites, we are told who was overseer, and who was second, v. 9. Good magistrates are as necessary to safety, as good soldiers.

2. Many priests and Levites settled there; where else should men, holy to God, dwell, but in the holy city? (1.) Most of the priests, we suppose, dwelt there, for their business lay there. Of them a 7:4,5. Deut. 17:8,9. Ps. 122:5. b 10:34. Josh. 18:10. 1 Chr. 26:13. Prov. 16:33. Acts 1:24. c Judg. 20:9,10.

d 18. Is. 48:2. 52:1. Matt. 4:5. 27:53.
e Deut. 24:13. Job 29:13. 31:20.
f Judg. 5:9. 2 Cor. 8:16,17.
g 7:6. Ezra 2:1.
h 7:73. 1 Chr. 9:1,2. Ezra 2:70.
i 7:57—60. Ezra 2:55—58.
k 1 Chr. 9:3,4.
l Gen. 38:29. Ruth 4:18. Pharez. Matt. 1:3. Luke 3:33. Phares.
m 3:15.
n Gen. 38:5. Shelah. Num. 26:20. Shelanites. 1 Chr. 4:21. 9:5.
o 1 Chr. 9:7—9.
p 1 Chr. 9:7. Hodaviah—Hasenuah.
q 7:39. 12:19. 1 Chr. 9:10. and Jehoiarib. Ezra 2:36. 8:16.
r 12:6.
s 1 Chr. 6:7—14. 9:11. Azariah. Ezra 7:1—5.
t Num. 3:32. 1 Chr. 9:1. 2 Chr. 19:11. 31:13. Acts 5:24. u 1 Chr. 9:12,13.
* Or, of Haggedolim.

NOTES.

CHAP. XI. V. 3. Israel, in this v. seems to mean those of the ten tribes, who went up with the Jews. These were not required to dwell at Jerusalem, but inhabited the cities and villages allotted to them. The priests, Levites, Nethinim, and the children of Solomon's servants likewise, were left at liberty when not attending at the temple. (1 Chr. 9:2. Ezra 2:55—58. 7:24—26.) SCOTT.

Verses 4—6.

'Shiloni' (6) is supposed by some to mean Shelah, Judah's youngest, but only surviving son, by Shuah, the Canaanitess. (M. R. n.) If this supposition be well grounded, his descendants seem to have been included in the 468 valiant men of Perez, or Pharez; that being the principal branch of the tribe of Judah.—In Chr. a larger number is stated: but it may be supposed, that the descendants of Zerah, (Judah's other son,) are also included, of whom no more than one is mentioned in this ch. (24. 1 Chr. 9:3—9.) SCOTT.

Verses 7—9.

The greatest part of Jerusalem was situated within the lot of Benjamin; and, it is probable, the men of that tribe were most desirous of having it fully replenished.—Nearly twice as many of this tribe, (we may suppose, with their families,) dwelt there, as of Judah. (Note, 4—6.) The number does not exactly agree with that in 1 Chr. 9: though there can be no reasonable doubt that the same events are intended: but at this distance of time it cannot be supposed that such trivial variations can in all cases be accounted for; though the reason of them might be very evident to contemporaries.—From this time Jerusalem was progressively repeopled; so that it soon became very populous, and continued to be so, till destroyed by the Romans. ID.

vites: [v] Shemaiah the son of Hashub, the son of Azrikam, the son of Hashabiah, the son of Bunni.

16 And [x] Shabbethai and Jozabad, of the chief of the Levites, [*] had the oversight of the outward business of the house of God.

17 And Mattaniah the son of Micha, the son of [y] Zabdi, the son of Asaph, was the principal, [z] to begin the [a] thanksgiving in prayer; and [b] Bakbukiah the second among his brethren, and Abda, the son of Shammua, the son Galal, the son of Jeduthun.

18 All the Levites in [c] the holy city were two hundred fourscore and four.

19 Moreover the porters, [d] Akkub, Talmon, and their brethren that kept † the gates, were an hundred seventy and two.

20 ¶ And the residue of Israel, of the priests, and the Levites, were in all the cities of Judah, every one in his inheritance.

21 But [e] the Nethinims dwelt in ‡ Ophel: and Ziha and Gispa were over the Nethinims.

22 The [f] overseer also of the Levites at Jerusalem was [g] Uzzi, the son of [h] Bani, the son of [i] Hashabiah, the son of [k] Mattaniah, the son of Micha. [l] Of the sons of Asaph, the singers [m] were over the business of the house of God.

23 For it was [n] the king's commandment concerning them, that § a certain portion should be for the singers, due for every day.

24 And Pethahiah the son of [o] Meshezabeel, of the children of [p] Zerah the son of Judah, was [q] at the king's hand in all matters concerning the people.

25 And for the villages, with their fields, some of the children of Judah dwelt at [r] Kirjath-arba, and in the villages thereof, and at [s] Dibon, and in the villages thereof, and at [t] Jekabzeel, and in the villages thereof,

26 And at Jeshua, and at [u] Moladah, and at [x] Beth-phelet, 27 And at [y] Hazar-shual, and at [z] Beer-sheba, and in the villages thereof.

28 And at [a] Ziklag, and at Mekonah, and in the villages thereof.

29 And at [b] En-rimmon, and at [c] Zareah, and at [d] Jarmuth,

30 [e] Zanoah, [f] Adullam, and in their villages, at [g] Lachish, and the fields thereof, at [h] Azekah, and in the villages thereof. And they dwelt from Beer-sheba unto [i] the valley of Hinnom.

31 The children also of Benjamin ‖ from [k] Geba dwelt at [l] Michmash, and [m] Aija, and [n] Beth-el, and in their villages,

32 And at [o] Anathoth, [p] Nob, Ananiah,

33 Hazor, [q] Ramah, [r] Gittaim,

34 Hadid, [s] Zeboim, Neballat,

35 [t] Lod, and Ono, [u] the valley of craftsmen.

v 1 Chr. 9:14—19.
x 8:7.
* Heb. were over. 1 Chr. 26:20.
y 1 Chr. 9:15. Zichri.

necessary in their place, as those who take care of its inward concerns, who give themselves to the word and prayer. [2.] It is said of another, that he was the principal to begin the thanksgiving in prayer. Probably, he had a good ear and a good voice, and was a scientific singer, therefore was chosen to lead the psalm. Observe, Thanksgiving is necessary in prayer; they should go together; giving thanks for former mercies is a becoming way of begging further mercies. And care should be taken in public service, that every thing be done in the best manner, decently and in good order; in prayer, that one speak, and the rest join; in singing, that one begin and the rest follow.

V. 20—36. Having given an account of the principal persons that dwelt in Jerusalem, (a larger account of whom we had before, 1 Chr. 9: 2, &c.) Nehemiah, in these vs. gives some account of the other cities, in which dwelt the residue of Israel, v. 20.

1. The Nethinim dwelt in Ophel, on the wall of Jerusalem; (ch. 3: 26.) as they were to do the z 12:8,31. 1 Chr. 16:4,41. 25:1—6.

a Phil. 4:6. 1 Thes. 5:17,18.
b 12:9,25.
c 1. 1 K. 11:13. Dan. 9:24. Matt. 24:15. 27:53. Rev. 11:2. 21:2. d 7:45. 12:25. 1 Chr. 9:17—22.
† Heb. at the gates.
e 3:26,31. 2 Chr. 27:3.
‡ Or, the tower.
f 9:14. 12:42. Acts 20:28.
g 12:42.
h 3:17. 8:7. 9:4,5. 10:13.
i 10:11. 12:24. Ezra 8:19.
k 17. 12:25,35. 13:13. 1 Chr. 9:15.
l 17. 12:46. 1 Chr. 25:1—6.
m 11,16. 1 Chr. 9:26—32.
n 1 Chr. 9:33. Ezra 6:8,9. 7:20—24.
§ Or, a sure ordinance.
o 10:21.
p Gen. 38:30. Zarah. Num. 26:20. Matt. 1:3. Zara.
q 1 Chr. 18:17. 23:28. margine.
r Josh. 14:15.
s Josh. 15:22. Dimonah.
t Josh. 15:21. Kabzeel.
u Josh. 15:26. 19:2.
x Josh. 15:27. Beth-palet.
y Josh. 15:28. 19:3.
z Gen. 21:31. 26:33. Judg. 20:1.
a Josh. 15:31. 1 Sam. 27:6.
b Josh. 15:32 Rimmon.
c Josh. 15:33. Zoreah. 19:41. Judg. 13:25. Zorah.
d Josh. 15:35.
e 3:13. Josh. 15:34.
f Josh. 12:15. Mic. 1:15.
g Josh. 10:3. 15:39. Is. 37:8.
h Josh. 15:35.
i Josh. 18:16. Jer. 7:31,32. 19:2,6.
‖ Or, of.
k 7:30. Gaba. Josh. 18:24.
¶ Or, to.
l 7:31. Michmas. 1 Sam. 13:11,23. Is. 10:28. m 7:32. Ai. Gen. 12:8. Hai. Josh. 8:9. Ai.
n Gen. 28:19. Josh. 18:13.
o 7:27. Is. 10:30. Jer. 1:1.
p 1 Sam. 21:1. 22:19. Is. 10:32. q Josh. 18:25. 1 Sam. 7:17. Matt. 2: 18. Rama.
r 2 Sam. 4:3.
s 1 Sam. 13:18.
t 7:37. 1 Chr. 9:12.
u 1 Chr. 4:14.

Verse 17.

The times of the morning and evening-sacrifices were the principal hours of prayer to the Jews, who then resorted to the courts of the temple for their devotions.—These were, it seems, preceded by the solemn praises and thanksgivings, which the Levites rendered to the Lord with music and singing. Over this sacred service, Mattaniah, as precentor, statedly presided; while the others acted under his direction. Mattaniah was descended from Asaph, and the others were descendants of Jeduthun; chief singers in David's time. (22, 23. 1 Chr. 16:37—43. 25:1—7. 2 Chr. 5:12, 13. 29:25—30.) SCOTT.

Verse 35.

Craftsmen.] Comp. 2:8, 32. and 1 Chr. 4:14, 23. In these texts is a slight allusion, perhaps, to that very ancient oriental institution of castes: with which was connected the regulation, that no family should practise any other trade or art than the ancestors of that family practised. This institution, so powerful and permanent in its effects, procuring manual skill at the expense of mental imbecility, was not adopted by Moses, to fetter the free spirit of his tribes, although it must have been a powerful political engine before his time in Egypt and India. It seems however from the above texts, that the custom prevailed to a certain extent among the Israelites. Wilkinson thus describes it. 'The 1st, or sacerdotal class, in Egypt, was composed of pontiffs of various grades; prophets, judges, hierogrammats, taricheutes or embalmers, doctors, (in short, all who followed any learned profession. The only [?] Jewish medical men were the priests. Lev. 13:3.) hierophants, (an office belonging to the mysteries,) hieraphori, (of whom probably were the standard-bearers of the sacred animals, who travelled through Egypt to collect charitable donations for the support of their deities, a custom still used by the Mohammedans, with the sacred banners of their saints,) pastophori, hierolaotomi, or masons of the priestly order, and several inferior functionaries of this class. The 2d class was composed of the military, husbandmen, gardeners, huntsmen, boatmen, &c. who may be comprehended under the general denomination of peasants. In the 3d class may be reckoned the artificers, tradesmen, musicians, builders, and carpenters; and in the 4th, the pastors, poulterers, fishermen, laborers, servants, (many of these were in the service of the grandees; but they appear also to have had a great number of white and black slaves of both sexes,) &c. Several of these classes were again subdivided,—as for instance, pastors, into oxherds, shepherds, goatherds, and swineherds. But, considering them under general heads, they may be called the 4 castes of priests, peasants, townsmen, and pastors or common people. The above account reconciles Diodorus, Plato, Herodotus, and Strabo.'

'The Indian castes were,—1. The priests and philosophers; 2. Magistrates and soldiers; 3. Husbandmen and merchants; and 4. Artisans, laborers and servants. I have placed the soldiers with the peasants, on the authority of Diodorus.'

'Every Egyptian was not only required to follow the profession of his father, (as were the Indians, by the law of their country,) but was obliged to give an account to the magistrates of his mode of life, and the employment by which he gained his livelihood,—a false statement, or the discovery of an unjust action, subjecting him to severe punishment: so Diod. and see the tombs; they evidently did not spare offenders. The peasants appear to have been divided into hundreds, each with their peculiar banner, which they followed when presenting themselves for this census. Scribes noted down their names, and after a proper inquiry had been made, they were either acquitted before this tribunal, or for minor delinquences punished (without regard to sex) with the stick.' [Comp. Ex. 21:20, 21, &c.] WILKINSON. ED.

36 And [x] of the Levites were [y] divisions in Judah, and in Benjamin.

CHAP. XII.

The priests and Levites who came up with Zerubbabel, 1—9. The succession of high priests after the captivity, 10, 11. The names of some chief priests, 12—21; and of some eminent Levites, 22—26. The solemnity of dedicating the wall, 27—43. The offices and portions of the priests and Levites, 44—47.

NOW these are [a] the priests and the Levites that went up with [b] Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and [c] Jeshua: [d] Seraiah, Jeremiah, Ezra,

2 Amariah, [e] Malluch, Hattush,

3 [f] Shechaniah, [g] Rehum, [h] Meremoth,

4 Iddo, [i] Ginnetho, Abijah,

5 [k] Miamin, [l] Maadiah, Bilgah,

6 Shemaiah, and [m] Joiarib, Jedaiah,

7 [n] Sallu, Amok, Hilkiah, Jedaiah. These were the chief of the priests, and of their brethren, in the days [o] of Jeshua.

8 Moreover the Levites; [p] Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, and [q] Mattaniah, which was over [*] the thanksgiving, he and his brethren.

9 Also Bakbukiah and Unni, their brethren, were [r] over against them in the watches.

10 ¶ And [s] Jeshua begat Joiakim, Joiakim also begat Eliashib, and 11 [t] Eliashib begat Joiada,

And Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jaddua.

B. C. 350.] 12 And in the days of Joiakim were priests, [u] the chief of the fathers: of [x] Seraiah, Meraiah; of Jeremiah, Hananiah;

13 Of Ezra, Meshullam; of Amariah, Jehohanan;

14 Of [y] Melicu, Jonathan; of [z] Shebaniah, Joseph;

15 Of [a] Harim, Adna; of [b] Meraioth, Helkai;

16 Of [c] Iddo, Zechariah; of [d] Ginnethon, Meshullam;

17 Of Abijah, Zichri; of [e] Miniamin; of [f] Moadiah, Piltai;

18 Of Bilgah, Shammua; of [g] Shemaiah, Jehonathan:

19 And of Joiarib, Mattenai; of Jedaiah, Uzzi; 20 Of [h] Sallai, Kallai; of Amok, Eber;

21 Of Hilkiah, Hash-x Josh. 21: 1 Chr. 6:54—81.

y Gen. 49:7.
a 7:7. Ezra 2:1.
b 1 Chr. 3:17—19. Ezra 3:8. 4:2. 5: 2. Hag. 1:1,12,14. 2:2,21—23. Zech. 4:6—10. Matt. 1:12,13. Zorobabel. Salathiel.
c 10. Zech. 3:1—9. 6:11. Joshua.
d 12—21. 10:2. Ezra 2:2.
e 14. Melicu.
f 14. Shebaniah.
g 15. Harim.
h 15. Meraioth.
i 16. Ginnethon.
k 17. Miniamin.
l 17. Moadiah.
m 14:10. 1 Chr. 9:10. Jehoiarib.
n 20. Sallai.
o 1. Ezra 3:2. Zech. 3:1.
p 7:43. 9:4. 10:9—13.
q 11:17,22.
* That is, the psalms of thanksgiving.
24. 1 Chr. 9:33.
r Ps. 134:1—3.
s 26. 1 Chr. 6:3—15.
t 3:1. 13:4,7,28.
u 22. 1 Chr. 9:33,34. 15:12. 24:6—31.
x 1.
y 2. Malluch.
z 3. Shechaniah.
a 3. Rehum.
b 3. Meremoth.
c 4.
d 4. Ginnetho.
e 5. Miamin.
f 5. Maaziah.
g 6:
h 7. Sallu.

suppose them safe and easy, though few and poor. Indeed, by God's blessing, they were likely to increase in wealth and power; and they would have been more likely, had there not been that general profaneness, and lukewarmness, with which (in God's name) Malachi charges them, who, it is supposed, prophesied about this time, and in whom prophecy ceased for some ages, till it revived in the Great Prophet and his forerunner.

servile work of the temple, they must be posted near it, v. 21.

2. The Levites were dispersed through the cities of Judah, yet had an overseer who resided in Jerusalem, to whom they applied for direction, who took care of their affairs, and cognizance of their conduct, whether they did their duty, v. 22.

3. Some of the singers were appointed to look after the necessary repairs of the temple, being ingenious men, and having leisure betwixt their hours of service; they were over the business of the house of God, v. 22. And it seems the king of Persia had such a kindness for their office, that he allotted a particular maintenance for them, beside what belonged to them as Levites, v. 23.

4. One was the king's commissioner at Jerusalem; a descendant of Zerah, v. 24. Of that family of Judah, some were now settled in Jerusalem, and not all of Pharez, as appears by that other catalogue, 1 Chr. 9: 6. He is said to be at the king's hand, or, on the king's part, in all matters concerning the people, to determine controversies between the king's officers and his subjects; to see that what was due to the king from the people, was duly paid in, and that what was allowed by the king for the temple-service, was duly paid out; it was happy for the Jews, that one of themselves was in this post.

5. Here is an account of the villages, or country-towns, inhabited by the residue of Israel. The towns in which Judah dwelt, v. 25—30. Those inhabited by Benjamin, v. 31—35. And divisions for the Levites among both, v. 36. We will now

CHAP. XII. V. 1—26. We have here the names, and little more, of a great many priests and Levites, eminent in their day, among the returned Jews. Why this register should be here inserted, does not appear; perhaps to keep in remembrance those good men, that posterity might know to whom they were beholden, under God, for the happy revival and re-establishment of their religion among them. Thus must we contribute to the performance of that promise, (Ps. 112: 6.) that the righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance. Let the memory of the just be blessed, be perpetuated. It is a debt we still owe to faithful ministers, to remember our guides, who have spoken to us the word of God, Heb. 13: 7. Perhaps it was intended to stir up those who succeeded them in the priest's office, to imitate their courage and fidelity. It is good to know what our godly ancestors and predecessors were, that we may learn thereby what we should be. We have here,

1. The names of the priests and Levites that came up with the first out of Babylon, when Jeshua was high priest. Jeremiah and Ezra, though

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

It has in all ages been justly lamented, that men prefer their own ease and emolument to the public good; that even professed Christians too commonly 'seek their own, and not the things of Jesus Christ;' and that but few have such an attachment to holy places and holy things, as to renounce their secular pleasures or advantages for the sake of them. Yet surely, where opportunities of spiritual improvement most abound, and where Jesus, the Ruler of our holy city, especially resides, there we should delight to dwell; in preference to all interests and connections, and notwithstanding persecutions, tribulations, perils, and losses. Otherwise, where is our 'meetness for the inheritance of the saints in light?' and how shall we be willing to depart hence, and be 'absent from the body, that we may be present with the Lord?' For, to the carnally-minded, the perfect holiness of heaven, of its inhabitants, its employments, and its pleasures, and especially of that God who there unveils his glory, would be proportionably more intolerable, than the feeble beginnings of holiness in his church on earth, which excite their disgust, their weariness, and aversion.—The remnant who now willingly offer themselves to self-denying and perilous services, from love to the church, and zeal for the glory of God, shall in the event be distinguished with peculiar honor, and are now entitled to it from their brethren: indeed many will commend and wish them well, who, alas! have not courage to imitate them.—Our habitations are allotted us by the Lord Himself; and we should not be hasty in changing them, though they be in some respects incommodious, especially if convenient for attendance on divine ordinances, and giving us opportunities of doing good.—In every station in life we should 'study to be quiet, and to do our own business' with diligence; and, at all times, to cast our cares on God, and make our requests known unto Him, by prayer with thanksgiving. We cannot be so afflicted, as not to have cause for gratitude; nor so prosperous, as to have no need of prayer: these duties should therefore be always united. (Phil. 4:5—7. 1 Thes. 5:16—22, v. 17,18.) SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XII. V. 7. 'The chief of the priests' seem to have been the heads of the courses established by David, with the next in succession to the high priesthood, and the ruler or captain of the temple. Perhaps the 24 courses were not yet fully re-established. (1 Chr. 24:6—10. Ezra 2:36—39.) SCOTT.

Verses 8, 9.

11:17.—Jeshua. (8) M. R. p.—In the watches. (9) It is probable, some of the Levites, in succession, sang the praises of God in the sanctuary, during the watches of the night. (Ps. 134:) ID.

Verses 10, 11.

Jaddua is, by most expositors, supposed to have been high priest in the time of Alexander the Great, and to have met that haughty conqueror in his pontifical habit; in consequence of which Alexander greatly favored the Jews. (Note, Dan. 8:5—7.) It is, however, evident, that he was high priest long after the events, which are mentioned at the close of this book; for Joiada then filled that office: (13:28.) and as 'Darius the Persian,' (22) is supposed to mean the last king of Persia, who was subdued by Alexander about 100 years after the principal transactions recorded in this book; this v. and v. 22. must have been added by another hand, after the death of Nehemiah. (26) SCOTT.

Verses 12—21.

These vs. contain a catalogue of the next race of chief priests, as descended from those who came up from Babylon with Zerubbabel. ID.

abiah; of Jedaiah, Nethaneel.

22 ¶ The Levites, in the days of [i] Eliashib, Joiada, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were [k] recorded chief of the fathers: also the priests, to the reign of Darius the Persian.

23 The sons of Levi, the chief of the fathers, were written in [l] the book of the chronicles, even until the days of Johanan the son of Eliashib.

24 And the chief of the Levites: [m] Hashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brethren over against them, to praise and to give thanks, [n] according to the commandment of David [o] the man of God, [p] ward over against ward.

25 [q] Mattaniah, and Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters, [r] keeping the ward at the [*] thresholds of the gates.

26 These were in the days of [s] Joiakim the son of Jeshua, the son of Jozadak; and in the days of [t] Nehemiah the governor, and of Ezra the priest, the scribe.

27 ¶ And at [a] the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem, they sought the Levites [x] out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication [y] with gladness, both with [z] thanksgivings, and with singing, with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps.

28 And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both out of [a] the plain country round about Jerusalem, and from the villages of [b] Netophathi;

29 Also from [c] the house of Gilgal, and out of the fields of [d] Geba, and [e] Azmaveth: for the singers had builded them villages round about Jerusalem.

30 And the priests and the Levites [f] purified themselves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.

31 Then I brought up [g] the princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed [h] two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof one went on the right hand upon the wall toward the [i] dung-gate;

32 And after them went Hoshaiah, and half of the princes of Judah,

33 And [k] Azariah, Ezra, and Meshullam,

34 Judah, and Benjamin, and Shemaiah, and Jeremiah, both priests, are mentioned with the first, (v. 1.) but, it is supposed, not Jeremiah the prophet, or Ezra the scribe; the fame of the one was diffused long before, and the other some time after. Of one of the Levites it is said, (v. 8.) he was over the thanksgiving, i. e. he was intrusted to see that the psalms, the thanksgiving psalms, were constantly sung in the temple in due time and manner. The Levites kept their turns in their watches, relieving one another as becomes brethren, fellow laborers, and fellow soldiers.

[B. C. 444.]

2. The succession of high priests during the Persian monarchy, from Jeshua (or Jesus) who was high priest at the time of the restoration, to Jaddua (or Jaddus) who was high priest when Alexander the Great, after the conquest of Tyre, came to Jerusalem, and paid great respect to this Jaddus, who met him in his pontifical habit, and showed him the prophecy of Daniel, which foretold his conquests.

3. The next generation of priests, chief men, and active in the days of Joiakim, sons of the first set. Note, We have reason to acknowledge God's favor to his church, and care of it, in that, as one generation of ministers passes away, another comes. All these who are mentioned, (v. 1, &c.) as eminent in their generation, are again mentioned, though with some variation in several of the names, (v. 12, &c.) except two, as having sons that were likewise eminent in their generation; a rare instance that 20 good fathers should leave 20 good sons, (so many here are,) to fill up their places.

4. The next generation of Levites, or rather, a later; for those priests mentioned, flourished in the days of Joiakim the high priest, these Levites in the days of Eliashib, v. 22. Perhaps then the forementioned families of the priests began to degenerate, and the third generation came short of the first two; but the work of God shall never fail for want of instruments. Then a generation of Levites was raised up, (v. 22.) eminently serviceable to the interests of the church, and their service not the less acceptable either to God or his people, for their being Levites only of the lower rank of ministers. Eliashib the high priest being allied to Tobiah, (ch. 13: 4.) the other priests grew remiss; but then the Levites appeared the more zealous, as is seen by this, that those who were now employed in expounding, (ch. 8: 7.) and in praying, (ch. 9: 4, 5.) were all Levites, not priests, regard being had to their personal qualifications more than to their order. These Levites were some of them singers, (v. 24.) to praise and give thanks, others of them porters, (v. 25.) keeping the wards at the thresholds of the gate; and both according to the command of David.

V. 27—43. After the building of the wall, in great fear and trembling, and replenishing the city, we come now to read of their dedication, with great joy and triumph. They that sow in tears shall thus reap. I. This act was, 1. A solemn thanksgiving for success, after so many difficulties. 2. They hereby devoted the city in a peculiar manner to God and to his honor, and took possession of it for Him and in his name. All our cities, all our houses, must have holiness to the Lord written on them, but this city was (as never any other was) a holy city, the city of the great King; (Ps. 48: 2. and Matt. 5. 35.) it had been so ever since God chose it to put his name there, and, as such, it being now refitted, it was afresh dedicated to God by the builders and inhabitants, in acknowledgment that they were his tenants, and desired it might still be his, and the property of it never be altered. Whatever is done for their safety, ease, and comfort, must be designed for God's honor and glory. 3. They hereby put the city and its walls under the divine protection, owning that, unless the Lord kept the city, the walls were built in vain. When this city was in possession of the Jebusites, they committed the guardianship of it to their gods, though blind and lame, 2 Sam. 5: 6. With much more reason do the people of God commit it to his keeping, who is All-wise and Almighty. The superstitious founders of cities had an eye to the lucky position of the heavens; (see Mr. Gregory's Works, p. 29, &c.) but these pious founders to God only, to his providence, and not to fortune.

II. Observe the solemnity.

1. The Levites from all parts were summoned; the surrender of the city to God must pass through their hands. They purified themselves, v. 30. We are concerned to cleanse our hands, and purify our hearts, when any work of God is to pass through them. They that would be instrumental to sanctify others, must sanctify themselves, and set themselves apart for God, with purity of mind and sincerity of intention. Then they purified the gates and the wall. Then may we expect comfort, when prepared to receive it. To the pure all things are pure; and to them who are sanctified, houses and tables, and all their creature-comforts and enjoyments, are sanctified, 1 Tim. 4: 4, 5. This purification was performed, probably, by sprinkling the water of purifying, or of separation, (as it is called, Num. 19: 9.) on themselves and the people, the walls and the gates; a type of the blood of Christ, with which our consciences being purged from dead works, we became fit to serve the living God, and to be his care.

2. The princes, priests, and Levites, walked round, singing psalms, it is likely, on the wall, in two companies, with musical instruments, to signify the dedication of the whole circuit of it to God, v. 36. This procession had a rendezvous at one certain place, where they divided. Half went on the right hand, Ezra leading their van, v. 36. the other half on the left hand, Nehemiah bringing up the rear, v. 38. At length both companies met in the temple, where they joined their thanks-

---

[i] 10,11.
[k] 12,13.
[l] 1 Chr. 9:14,&c.
[m] 8. 8:7. 9:4. 10:9—13.
[n] 1 Chr. 23: 5,5: 26:
[o] Deut. 33:1. Josh. 14:6. 1 K. 17:24. 2 Chr. 8:14. 1 Tim. 6:11. 2 Tim. 3:17.
[p] 9. Ezra 3:10,11.
[q] 8,9. 11:17—19. 1 Chr. 9:14—17.
[r] 1 Chr. 23:32. 26:12. Is. 21:8.

[*] Or, treasuries, or, assemblies.
[s] 10.
[t] 8:9. Ezra 7:6,11.
[u] Deut. 20:5. Ps. 30: title.
[x] 11:20. 1 Chr. 15:4,12,13. 26:31,32. 2 Chr. 29:4—11,30. Ezra 8:15—20.
[y] 8:17. Deut. 16:11. 2 Sam. 6:12. 2 Chr. 29:22. Ezra 6:16. Ps. 98:4—6. 100:1,2. Phil. 4:4.
[z] 1 Chr. 13:8. 15:16,28. 16:5,42. 23: 5. 25:1—6. Ezra 3:10,11. Ps. 81:1 —4. 92:1—3. 149:3. 150:2—5. Rev. 5:8.
[a] 6:2.
[b] 1 Chr. 2:54. 9:16.
[c] Deut. 11:30. Josh. 5:9. 10:43.
[d] 11:31. Josh. 21:17. 1 Chr. 6:60.
[e] Ezra 2:24.
[f] Gen. 35:2. Ex. 19:10,15. Num. 19: 2—20. 2 Chr. 29:5,34. Ezra 6:21. Job 1:5.
[g] 1 Chr. 13:1. 28:1. 2 Chr. 5:2.
[h] 38.
[i] 2:13. 3:13,14.
[k] 10:2—7.

Verses 22—26.

It is not easy or perhaps possible, to determine, why these few names of the Levites were here inserted: but probably they were persons who greatly distinguished themselves, and were highly honored and trusted by their contemporaries. (M. R.)—Darius the Persian. (22) 'This is thought to be that Darius, whom Alexander conquered.' Patrick.—Ward over against ward.] 8, 9. 1 Chr. 25:9.—'In their turns, one coming on, when another went out, to attend in their courses, which are called wards.' Patrick. (13:30. 1 Chr. 9:23. 26:6—12, v. 12, 13.) —These, &c. (26) Note, 10, 11. SCOTT.

Verse 29.

Builded, &c.] The singers had builded villages for their residence about Jerusalem; that they might be near at hand, when wanted; and attend more conveniently and regularly at the temple. ID.

35 And certain of the priests' sons [l] with trumpets; namely, [m] Zechariah the son of Jonathan, the son of Shemaiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Michaiah, the son of Zaccur, the son of Asaph;

36 And his brethren, Shemaiah, and Azarael, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethaneel, and Judah, Hanani, with the [n] musical instruments of David the man of God, and [o] Ezra the scribe before them.

37 And at [p] the fountain-gate, which was over against them, they went up by [q] the stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto the [r] water-gate eastward.

38 And [s] the other company of them that gave thanks went over against them, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond [t] the tower of the furnaces, even unto [u] the broad wall:

39 And from above [x] the gate of Ephraim, and above [y] the old gate, and above [z] the fish-gate, and [a] the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto [b] the sheep-gate: and they stood still in [c] the prison-gate.

40 So stood [d] the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me:

41 And the priests; Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah, [e] with trumpets;

42 And Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer. And the singers * sang loud with Jezrahiah their [f] overseer.

43 Also that day they [g] offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced; for [h] God had made them rejoice with great joy: [i] the wives also and the children rejoiced; so that [k] the joy of Jerusalem was heard even afar off.

44 ¶ And at that time were [l] some appointed over [m] the chambers for the treasures, for the offerings, for the firstfruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them, out of the fields of the cities, the portions † of the law for the priests and Levites: for ‡ Judah rejoiced for the priests and for [n] the Levites that § waited.

45 And both [o] the singers and the porters kept the ward of their God, and [p] the ward of the purification, according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his son.

46 For in the days of David [q] and Asaph, of old, there were chief of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving unto God.

47 And all Israel, in the days of [r] Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, [s] gave the portions of the singers and the porters, every day his portion: and [t] they ‖ sanctified holy things unto the Levites, and the Levites sanctified them unto the children of Aaron.

l Num. 10:2—10. Josh. 6:4. 2 Chr. 5:12. 13:12.
m 11:17. 1 Chr. 6:39—43. 25:2. 26: 10,11.
n 24. 1 Chr. 23:5. 2 Chr. 8:14. Amos 6:5.
o Ezra 7:1. 8:1.
p 2:14. 3:15.
q 3:15. 2 Sam. 5:7—9.
r 3:26. 8:1,3,16.
s 31.
t 3:11.
u 3:8.
x 8:16. 2 K. 14:13.
y 3:6.
z 3:3. Zeph. 1:10.
a 3:1. Jer. 31:38.
b 3:32. John 5:2.
c 3:25,31. Heb. Jer. 32:2. d 31,32. Ps. 42:4. 47:6—9. 134:
e 35.
* Heb. made their voice to be heard. Ps. 81:1. 95:1. 98:4—9. 100:1,2. Is. 12:5,6.
f 11:14.
g Num. 10:10. Deut. 12:11,12. 1 Chr. 29:21,22. 2 Chr. 7:5—7,10. 29:35,36. Ps. 27:6.
h 2 Chr. 20:27. Job 34:29. Ps. 28:7. 30:11,12. 92:4. Is. 61:3. 66:10—14. Jer. 33:11. John 16:22. i Ez. 15:20,21. 2 Chr. 20:13. Ps. 148: 11—13. Jer. 31:13. Matt. 21:9,15. Eph. 5:19. Jam. 5:13.
k 1 Sam. 4:5. Ezra 3:13.
l 10:37—39. 13:5,12,13. 2 Chr. 31:11 —13.
m 1 Chr. 9:26. 26:21—26.
† That is, appointed by the law.
‡ Heb. the joy of Judah rejoiced.
n Num. 3:10. 8:24,25. 1 Chr. 23:28. 2 Chr. 5:11,12. Prov. 8:34. Is. 40:31. Rom. 12:7.
§ Heb. stood.
o 1 Chr. 25: 26:
p 1 Chr. 23:28. 2 Chr. 23:6.
q 1 Chr. 25:1,&c. 2 Chr. 29:30. Ps. 73:—83: titles.
r 1,12,26.
s 10:35—39. 13:10—12. 2 Chr. 31:5,6 Mal. 3:8—10. Gal. 6:6.
t Num. 18:21—29.
‖ That is, set apart.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The believer should undertake nothing, which he cannot, and does not, dedicate to God, by seeking his direction and assistance in it, and his blessing on it; by designing his glory, and by giving praise for success in all things: and whatever he possesses he should commit to the Lord's keeping and disposal, and use it according to his will. (Ps. 30: title. P. O.—Col. 3: 16, 17, v. 17.) If our families be trained up to join in the solemn worship of God, and in attendance on his Word, we may hope they will share our joys and privileges; and the prosperity of the church gladdens the hearts of all true believers: and in all cases, where the ministers of religion generally come forward in support of pious and benevolent measures, with zeal and alacrity, to the satisfaction of all concerned, they take the most effectual method, not only of doing much good, but of securing the liberal and cheerful payment or contribution for the supply of themselves and families. This they may receive with songs of praise and thanksgiving, and need not fear sanctifying a portion even of their portion, to the more immediate service of God, and the support of his cause. SCOTT.

Verse 35.

Zechariah, being descended from Asaph, of the line of Gershom, was no priest; and the word 'namely' is improperly added. (M. R. m.) SCOTT.

Verses 44—47.

Thus matters were settled, as they had been in the days of David and Solomon. (M. R.) Similar regulations had been made in the days of Zerubbabel; but they were completed, and put on a durable footing, in the time of Nehemiah. (13:5—14. 2 Chr. 31:5—19. Mal. 3:7—12.) —The tithes were paid to the Levites, as sanctified to their use; and the tithe of them was, by the Levites, sanctified to the use of the priests. (10 35—39. Num. 18:25—32.) SCOTT.

CHAP. XIII.

On reading the law, Israel separates from the mixed multitude, 1—3. Eliashib having, during Nehemiah's absence, prepared a chamber at the temple for Tobiah, Nehemiah on his return, being grieved and indignant, causes the chambers to be cleansed, 4—9. He reforms abuses concerning tithes and offerings, 10—14. He prevents the profanation of the sabbath, 15—22. He opposes those who had married strange wives, and drives away the grandson of Eliashib, 23—28. His other services and prayers, 29—31.

ON that day * they read in the book of Moses in the † audience of the people; and therein was found written, that [a] the Ammonite and the [b] Moabite should not come into the congregation of God for ever;

2 Because they met not the children of Israel with bread and with water, but [c] hired Balaam against them, that he should curse them: howbeit [d] our God turned the curse into a blessing.

3 Now it came to pass, [e] when they had heard the law, [f] that they separated from Israel all [g] the mixed multitude.

4 And before this, [h] Eliashib the priest, ‡ having the oversight of the chamber of the house of our God, was [i] allied unto Tobiah;

5 And he had prepared for him [k] a great chamber, where aforetime they laid the meat-offerings, the frankincense, and the vessels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oil, § which was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the singers, and the porters; and the offerings of the priests.

6 But [l] in all this time was not I at Jerusalem: for in [m] the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon, came I unto the king, and ‖ after certain days ¶ obtained I leave of the king.

7 And I came to Jerusalem, and [n] understood of the evil that Eliashib did for Tobiah, [o] in preparing him a chamber in the courts of the house of God.

8 And [p] it grieved me sore: therefore [q] I cast forth all the household stuff of Tobiah out of the chamber.

9 Then I command-

B. C. 433.

* Heb. there was read. 8:3—8. 9:3. Deut. 31:11,12. 2 K. 23:2. Is. 34:16. Luke 4:16—19. 10:26. Acts 13:15,27. 15:21.

† Heb. ears.

a 23. Deut. 23:3—5. Is. 15: 16: Jer. 48: Ez. 25:1—11. Am. 2:1—3.

b 2:10,19. 4:3. Ps. 83:7—9. Jer. 49: 1—6. Am. 1:13—15.

Num. 22:3—6. Josh. 24:9,10.

d Num. 23:8—11,18—24. 24:5—9. Ps. 109:28. Mic. 6:5.

e Ps. 19:7—11. 119:9,11. Prov. 6:23. Rom. 3:20.

f 9:2. 10:28. Ezra 10:11. Jam. 1:27.

g Ex. 12:38. Num. 11:4.

h 7. 12:10.

‡ Heb. being set over. 12:44.

i 28. 6:17,18.

k 10:38,39. 12:44.

§ Heb. the commandment of the Levites. Num. 18:21—24.

l Ex. 32:1. 2 Chr. 24:17,18. Matt. 13: 25.

m 2:1. 5:14.

‖ Heb. at the end of days. 2:5,6.

¶ Or, I earnestly requested.

n Ezra 9:1. 1 Cor. 1:11.

o 1,5. Lam. 1:10. Matt. 21:12,13. Acts 21:28,29.

p Ezra 9:3,4. 10:1. Ps. 69:9.

q Mark 11:15—17. John 2:13—17.

CHAP. XIII. Nehemiah, having finished what he undertook for the fencing and filling of the holy city, returned to the king his master, [when he made those appointments, 7: 2. some think,] who could not long be without him, as appears, v. 6. But, after some time, he obtained leave to come back, to redress grievances, and purge out some corruptions which had crept in in his absence; and very active he was in reforming several abuses here.

V. 1—9. It was the honor of Israel, and the greatest preservation of their holiness, that they were a peculiar people, and were so to keep themselves, and not to mingle with the nations, nor suffer any to incorporate with them. Here we have,

I. The law to this purport, (Deut. 23: 3—5.) which happened to be read on that day, i. e. (v. 1.) of the dedication of the wall, as should seem; and though it was long after, that ther grievances, here mentioned, were red by Nehemiah's power, yet this of the mix ltitude, might be redressed then by the people wn act, for so it seems to be, v. 3. Or, perhaps, it was on the anniversary commemoration of that day, some years after, and therefore said to be on that day.

II. The people's ready compliance, v. 3. See the benefit of the public reading of the Word of God. Then we profit by it, when wrought upon to separate from all that evil to which we had addicted ourselves. The mixed multitude had, of old, been a snare to them, for they fell a lusting, Num. 11: 14.

III. The particular case of Tobiah, an Ammonite, to whom, it is likely, the historian had an eye in the recital of that law, (v. 1.) and the reason of it, v. 2. For he had the same enmity to Israel, as his ancestors, the spirit of an Ammonite, witness his indignation at Nehemiah, (ch. 2: 10.) and opposition to his undertakings, ch. 4: 7 Observe,

1. Eliashib, the chief priest, became allied to Tobiah, (v. 4.) by marriage first, then by friendship: his grandson had married Sanballat's daughter, v. 28. Probably, some other of his family had married Tobiah's. By the law, the high priest should marry one of his own people, else he profanes his seed, Lev. 21: 14. And for Eliashib to contract an alliance with an Ammonite, a servant, (so he is called,) and to value himself on it, probably, because he was a wit, and a beau, and cried up for a fine gentleman, (ch. 6: 19.) was such a contempt of the crown of his consecration, as one would not wish should be told in Gath, or published in the streets of Askelon. Now, Tobiah, being a man of business, has often occasion to be at Jerusalem, I doubt, on no good design. Eliashib, fond of his new kinsman, pleased with his company, must have him as near him as he can; he has not a room for him stately enough in his own apartment, in the courts of the temple: therefore out of several little store-chambers, by taking down the partitions, he contrived to make one great chamber, a state-room for Tobiah, v. 5. A wretched thing it was, (1.) That the Ammonite should be entertained with respect in Israel, and have a magnificent reception. (2.) That the high priest, who should have taught the people the law, and set them a good example, should, contrary to the law, basely give him entertainment, and make use of his power, as overseer, for that purpose. (3.) That he should basely lodge him, who must not even come into the congregation, in the very court of God's house itself, as if to confront God Himself! This was next to setting up an idol there, like the wicked kings of old. (4.) That he should throw out the stores [and vessels] of the temple, to make room for him, and so expose them to be lost, wasted, and embezzled, though [the provisions were] the portions of the priests, merely to

NOTES.

CHAP. XIII V. 1—3. The introductory language seems to imply, that the events recorded in these vs. occurred immediately: though the words 'on that day' may be understood with some latitude, and may mean, about that time. Indeed, it can hardly be supposed, that when the gross abuses stated in the sequel of the ch. prevailed, the public reading of the law at the temple was regularly kept up, and the people zealous to reduce it to practice. It is therefore more probable, that, before Nehemiah left Jerusalem, or when he was first gone, the law was publicly read and expounded to the congregation. (8:1—8, 13—18. 9:3, 4.) At that time, the passage here referred to, coming in course, excited peculiar attention. Whether intermarriages with any of those nations, even when fully proselyted, or with their descendants, was, or was not, intended in the law, many instances would doubtless occur, in which a separation would be required; for probably few, in comparison of those with whom alliances had been formed, were fully proselyted.—It is supposed, that from the days of Ezra and Nehemiah, synagogues were built in every part of the land, where God was publicly worshipped, and his Word read, expounded, or preached; which produced very salutary effects. (2 K. 4:23. 2 Chr. 17:7—9.) A copy of the Scriptures then extant, was placed in every synagogue; and the whole was divided into portions or lessons, for the several days when they were accustomed to assemble for that purpose; and probably the same became the general usage in the court of the temple. (Luke 4: 16—22. Acts 13:13—15. 15:21.) SCOTT.

Verse 4.

Eliashib had before this formed an alliance with Tobiah the Ammonite, but perhaps secretly, to escape censure. (2:9, 10, 19, 20. 4:6: 17—19.) It does not appear, that the high priest was, or that his sons were, married to any of Tobiah's family: but he was confederated with him, and related to those who were.—The word rendered 'chamber,' seems to mean the out-buildings of the temple in general. SCOTT.

Verses 5, 6.

Nehemiah was first commissioned by Artaxerxes in the 20th year of his reign; and this journey to court took place in his 32d year, so that 12 years had elapsed, concerning which we have little account: and the following events occurred after the end of those years.—When Nehemiah was gone from Jerusalem, Eliashib seems to have invited Tobiah thither.—King of Babylon. (6) The kings of Persia reigned over Babylon, and all the regions, which had been before subject to the kings of Babylon: but their general residence was at Shushan, or Susa. (1:1.) This was much more distant from Jerusalem than Babylon: but Nehemiah, most probably, journeyed thither on this occasion. ID.

Verses 7—9

Nehemiah is generally supposed to have been absent from Jerusalem only one year: but the great abuses, which prevailed at his return, favor the opinion of those who think that about five years intervened; and there is nothing in the text that militates against it: for the words rendered 'after certain days,' or, at the end of days, (6. marg.) do not ed, and [r] they cleansed the chambers: and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, with the meat-offering and the frankincense.

10 ¶ And I perceived that [s] the portions of the Levites had not been given them: for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one [t] to his field.

11 Then [u] contended I with the rulers, and said, [x] Why is the house of God, forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in their * place.

12 Then [y] brought all Judah the tithe of the corn, and the new wine, and the oil unto the † treasuries.

13 And [z] I made treasurers over the treasuries, [a] Shelemiah the priest, and Zadok the scribe, and of the Levites, [b] Pedaiah: and ‡ next to them was Hanan the son of [c] Zaccur, the son of [d] Mattaniah: for they were [e] counted faithful, and § their office was [f] to distribute unto their brethren.

[Practical Observations.]

14 [g] Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my ‖ good deeds that I have done [h] for the house of my God, and for the ¶ offices thereof.

15 ¶ In those days saw I in Judah some [i] treading wine-presses on the sabbath, and bringing in sheaves, and lading asses; as also wine, grapes, and figs, and all manner of [k] burdens, which they brought into Jerusalem on the sabbath-day: and [l] I testified against them, in the day wherein they sold victuals.

16 There dwelt [m] men of Tyre also therein, which brought fish, and all manner of ware, and sold on the sabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.

17 Then [n] I contend-gratify Tobiah. Thus did he corrupt the covenant of Levi, as Malachi complained at this time, ch. 2: 8. Well might Nehemiah add, (v. 6.) But in all this time was not I at Jerusalem. The envious one, who sows tares in God's field, knows how to take his opportunity when the servants sleep, or are absent, Matt. 13: 25. The calf was made when Moses was in the mount.

2. It grieved Nehemiah sore, (v. 7, 8.) that God's house should be so profaned, his enemies so caressed and trusted, and his cause betrayed by him that should be its protector and patron. Nothing grieves a good man, a good magistrate, more than to see the ministers of God's house do any wicked thing. Nehemiah has power, and will use it for God. (1.) Tobiah shall be expelled; he fears not disobliging him, fears not his resentments, or Eliashib's, nor excuses himself from interposing in an affair that lay within the jurisdiction of the high priest, but, like one zealously affected in a good thing, bravely expelled the intruder, by casting forth all his household-stuff. Our Savior thus cleansed the temple, that the house of prayer might not be a den of thieves. And so they that would expel sin out of their hearts, those living temples, must throw out its household stuff, and put away all those things [and thoughts] that are the food and fuel of lust; this is, in effect, to mortify it. (2.) The temple-stores shall be brought in again, and the vessels of the house of God put in their places; but the chambers must first be sprinkled with the water of purification, and so cleansed, because they had been profaned. Thus when sin is cast out of the heart by repentance, let the blood of Christ be applied to it by faith, and then let it be furnished with the graces of God's Spirit for every good work.

V. 10—14. Here is another grievance redressed by Nehemiah.

1. Perhaps Tobiah, when he took possession of the store-chambers, seized the stores too, and, by Eliashib's connivance, converted them to his own use. The complaint is not that they were not collected from the people, but that they were not given to the Levites, (v. 10.) who were so modest as not to sue for them; for they and the singers were fled every one to his field. This comes in as a reason, either, (1.) Why their payments were withheld; the Levites were non-residents: when they should have been doing their work about the temple, they were at their farms, therefore the people were little inclined to give them their maintenance. If ministers have not the encouragement they should have, let them consider, whether they themselves be not accessary to this contempt, by neglect of their business. Or rather, (2.) It is the reason why Nehemiah soon perceived their dues had been denied them, because he missed them from their posts. Truly they were gone every one to his country-seat, to get a livelihood for themselves and families out of their grounds, for their profession would not maintain them. A scandalous maintenance makes a scandalous ministry. The work is neglected, because the workmen are. It was not long since the payment of the singers' salaries was put into a very good method; (ch. 12: 47.) yet how soon did it fail, for want of being looked after!

2. Nehemiah laid the fault on the rulers, (v. 11.) who should have taken care that the Levites minded their business, and had all due encouragement therein. Christian magistrates are required to use the power [given them by law] to oblige ministers to do their duty, and people to do theirs. 'Why are the Levites starved out? Why did not you notice this, and prevent it?' The people forsook the Levites, which was expressly forbidden; (Deut. 12: 19. 14: 27.) and then the Levites for-

[r] Heb. at their hand.
[c] 10:12.
[d] 11:22. 12:35.
[e] 7:2. 2 K. 12:15. 22:7. Luke 12:42. 16:10—12. Acts 6:3. 1 Cor. 4:2. 1 Tim. 1:12.
§ Heb. it was upon them.
[f] Acts 4:35. 6:1.
[g] 22,31. 5:19. Heb. 6:10. Rev. 3:5.
‖ Heb. kindnesses.
[h] 1 Chr. 29:3. 2 Chr. 24:16. 31:20,21. Ezra 7:20,24,27. Ps. 122:6—9.
¶ Or, observations.
[i] Ex. 20:8—11. 34:21. 35:2. Is. 58: 13. Ez. 20:13.
[k] 10:31. Num. 15:32—36. Jer. 17:21, 22,24,27.
[l] 21. 9:29. Deut. 8:19. 2 Chr. 24:19. Ps. 50:7. Jer. 42:19. Mic. 6:3. Acts 2:40. 20:21. Gal. 5:3. Eph. 4:1*. 1 Thes. 4:6. Rev. 22:18,19.
[m] Ex. 23:12. Deut. 5:14.
[n] 11,25. 5:7. Ps. 82:1,2. Is. 1:10. Jer. 5:5. 13:18. 22:2,&c. Mic. 3: 1,9.
[r] 10:12.
[s] 11:22. 12:35.
[t] 7:2. 2 K. 12:15. 22:7. Luke 12:42. 16:10—12. Acts 6:3. 1 Cor. 4:2. 1 Tim. 1:12.
§ Heb. it was upon them.
[u] Acts 4:35. 6:1.
[x] 22,31. 5:19. Heb. 6:10. Rev. 3:5.
‖ Heb. kindnesses.
[y] 1 Chr. 29:3. 2 Chr. 24:16. 31:20,21. Ezra 7:20,24,27. Ps. 122:6—9.
¶ Or, observations.
[z] Ex. 20:8—11. 34:21. 35:2. Is. 58: 13. Ez. 20:13.
[a] 10:31. Num. 15:32—36. Jer. 17:21, 22,24,27.
[b] 21. 9:29. Deut. 8:19. 2 Chr. 24:19. Ps. 50:7. Jer. 42:19. Mic. 6:3. Acts 2:40. 20:21. Gal. 5:3. Eph. 4:1*. 1 Thes. 4:6. Rev. 22:18,19.
[c] Ex. 23:12. Deut. 5:14.
[d] 11,25. 5:7. Ps. 82:1,2. Is. 1:10. Jer. 5:5. 13:18. 22:2,&c. Mic. 3: 1,9.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—14. The public reading of the whole Word of God, as far as it relates to our faith and practice, is of immense advantage to true religion. Though we have heard many sermons, and have the Bible in our hands, few of us are acquainted with every part of it; and many live in violation of its injunctions, through ignorance or inattention.—Alas, how prone is human nature to evil! When the restraints of influence or authority are withdrawn, men break out into those excesses of which they seemed incapable; whilst the eye and authority of God are treated with almost atheistical disregard.—They who have enjoyed the highest dignities in the visible church, by divine right, have sometimes been equally distinguished by sacrilegious impiety; and have openly committed those crimes, which the most profane of the laity would not have ventured on without hesitation and dismay! But if sacredness of character will not restrain men from setting a pernicious example, it should not shelter them from censure, or condign punishment by the magistrate. (1 K. 2: 26, 27.)—As nobles have too generally, in every age and country, deemed themselves privileged to disregard the divine law, and many human institutions obligatory on others; magistrates and reformers need courage and resolution, as well as impartiality and integrity.—Our grief for the sins which we witness, should stimulate us to oppose them strenuously, according to the duty of our station, and not induce us to yield to unmanly despondency.—Few ministers are willing, during any length of time, to labor in their ministry, under the pressure or the prospect of indigence; but most of them will turn to more profitable occupations: so that depriving the clergy of a suitable maintenance forms one of Satan's projects, for causing the house and ordinances of God to be forsaken. SCOTT.

necessarily signify after one year, but may denote a longer time. (Dan. 12:13. Heb.)—It is probable, Eliashib was dead before Nehemiah returned; and that Tobiah did not choose to appear at Jerusalem to see after his furniture. SCOTT.

Verses 10—13.

The rulers, who had been left in trust, ought to have exerted their authority to prevent such mismanagement; but probably they had concurred in it, out of regard to their secular interests; therefore Nehemiah called them to account for this misconduct. Malachi seems repeatedly to refer to these abuses. (Mal. 1:9—14 3.7—12.) 'It is a great artifice of the devil, by his instruments, to defraud the ministers of religion of their necessary maintenance, that he may thereby abolish religion itself.' Wolphius, in Patrick. (Notes, 1 Cor. 9.7—18.) ID.

Verse 14.

(M. and M. R.) There have been times, when enriching the clergy beyond all bounds, and without requiring them to attend on their ministry, was thought the height of piety: but it may be questioned whether rulers may not at present, as well as for some past ages, have run into the contrary extreme; and Nehemiah's firm and prudent conduct in this respect, might be imitated with good effect by Christian princes and rulers. (2 Chr. 31:5—7. P. O. 1—10.) SCOTT.

Verses 15—18.

It can hardly be supposed, that in the course of one year of Nehemiah's absence, such gross and open profanation of the Sabbath should have been introduced and become general. (Note, 7—9.) The magistrates must have been shamefully negligent, in conniving at these abuses, till they were become so notorious: and the nation seemed to ed with the nobles of Judah, and said unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the sabbath-day?

18 [o] Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? yet [p] ye bring more wrath upon Israel by profaning the sabbath.

19 And it came to pass, that when the gates of Jerusalem [q] began to be dark before the sabbath, [r] I commanded that the gates should be shut, and charged that they should not be opened till after the sabbath: and some of my servants set I at the gates, that there should no burden be brought in on the sabbath-day.

20 So the merchants, and sellers of all kind of ware, lodged without Jerusalem once or twice.

21 Then [s] I testified against them, and said unto them, Why lodge ye * about the wall? if ye do so again, [t] I will lay hands on you. From that time forth came they no more on the sabbath.

22 And [u] I commanded the Levites, that they should [x] cleanse themselves, and that they should come and keep the gates, to [y] sanctify the sabbath-day. [z] Remember me, O my God, concerning this also, and [a] spare me according to the † greatness of thy mercy.

23 ¶ In those days also saw I Jews [b] that took their post. Both ministers and people, who forsake religion and its services, and magistrates too, who do not what they can to keep them to it, will have a great deal to answer for.

3. He delayed not to bring the dispersed Levites to their places again, and set them in their stations, as the word is, v. 11. Many that are careless, would do much better, if but called upon. Say to Archippus, Take heed to thy ministry.

4. He obliged the people to bring in their tithes, v. 12. His zeal provoked theirs; and when they saw the Levites at their work, they could not, for shame, longer withhold their wages.

5. He provided that just and prompt payment should be made of the Levites' stipends; commissioners were appointed to see to this, (v. 13.) and they were such as were counted faithful, i. e. had approved themselves so in other trusts, and so purchased this good degree. Let men be tried first, and then trusted; tried in the less, and then trusted with more.

6. Having no recompense (it is a question if he had thanks) from those for whom he did these good services, he looks to God as his Pay-Master, v. 14. Nehemiah was a man much in pious ejaculations; on every occasion, he looked up to God, and committed himself and his affairs to Him.—(1.) It pleased him to think he had been any way instrumental to revive and support religion in his country, and to reform what was amiss. What kindness any show to God's ministers, thus shall it be returned into their own bosoms, in the secret joy they shall have there, not only in having done well, but in having done good, good to many, good to souls. (2.) He here refers himself to God to consider him for it, not in pride, or boasting, much less depending on it as his righteousness, or as if he thought he had made God his debtor, but in a humble appeal to Him concerning his integrity and honest intention in what he had done, and a believing expectation, that He would not be unrighteous to forget his work and labor of love, Heb. 6: 10. Observe how modest is his request; he only prays, Remember me, not Reward me; Wipe not out my good deeds, not Publish them, Record them. Yet he was rewarded, and his good deeds recorded; for God does more than we ask. In deeds done for the house of God and its offices, for the support of religion, and its encouragement, there is goodness, righteousness and godliness, and God will certainly remember them, and not wipe them out; they shall in nowise lose their reward.

V. 15—22. Here is another instance of that blessed reformation in which Nehemiah was so active; he revived sabbath-sanctification, and maintained the 4th commandment; a very good deed this for the house of God and its offices; for where holy time is made nothing of, it is not strange if all holy duties be neglected. Here is,

I. A remonstrance. The law of the Sabbath was very strict, and much insisted on; and with good reason, for religion is never in the throne, while the Sabbath is trodden under foot. But Nehemiah, to his great grief, found there was a general profanation of that holy day, even in that holy city, so lately dedicated to God. 1. The husbandmen trod their wine-presses, and brought home their corn, on that day, (v. 15.) though there was an express command, that in ploughing and harvest-time, they should rest on the sabbaths, (Ex. 34: 21.) because then they might be tempted to take a greater liberty, and to fancy God would indulge them in it. 2. The carriers loaded their asses with all manner of burdens, and made no scruple of it, though there was a particular proviso for the cattle resting, (Deut. 5: 14.) and that they should bear no burden on the sabbath-day, Jer. 17: 21. 3. The hawkers, and pedlers, and petty chapmen, from Tyre, that famous trading city, sold all manner of ware on the sabbath-day; (v. 16.) and the children of Judah and Jerusalem had so little grace as to buy of them. No wonder there was a general decay of religion, and corruption of manners, when they forsook the sanctuary, and profaned the Sabbath.

II. The reformation. They that are jealous for the honor of God, cannot bear to see his Sabbath profaned. Observe,

1. He testified against them who profaned it, v. 15, 21. He not only expressed his own dislike of it, but endeavored to convince them it was a great sin, and showed them the testimony of the Word of God against it. He would not punish it, till he had laid open the evil of it.

2. He reasoned with the rulers concerning it, took the nobles of Judah to task, and contended with them, v. 17. They did not carry corn nor sell fish themselves, but connived at them that did; and not using their power to restrain them, made themselves guilty, as those magistrates do, who bear the sword in vain. They set a bad example in other things; if the nobles allowed themselves in sports and recreations, in idle visits, and idle talk, on the sabbath-day, the men of business, both in city and country, would profane it by their worldly employments, as more justifiable. We must be responsible for sins others commit by our example. He shows them, (v. 18.) that sabbath-breaking was one sin for which God had brought judgments on them, and if they did not take warn-

22. Ez. 23:8,26. Zech. 1:4—6. p Lev. 26:18,28. Num. 32:14. Josh. 22:17,18. q Lev. 23:32.
r 7:3. Ex. 31:14—17. Jer. 17:19—22.
s See on 15.
* Heb. before.
t Ezra 7:26. Rom. 13:3,4. 1 Pet. 2:14. u 7:64,65. 2 K. 23:4. 1 Chr. 15:12—14. 2 Chr. 29:4,5,24,27,30. Is. 49: 23. x 12:10.
y Deut. 5:12.
z 14,31. 5:19. Ps. 132:1—5. Is. 38:3. 2 Cor. 1:12. 2 Tim. 4:7,8.
a Ps. 25:6,7. 51:1. 130:3,4,7. 143:1,2 † Or, multitude. Ps. 5:7. Is. 55:7. b 10:30. Ezra 9:2,11,12. 10:10,44. 2 Cor. 6:14.
o Ezra 9:13—15. Jer. 17:23,27. 44:9.

---

be proceeding, in many respects, as their fathers had done, in provoking the wrath of God against them.—Fish. (16) How far the concessions made by [English] laws, in respect of the selling some fish on the Lord's-day, agree with this, or consist with hallowing the Sabbath, may fairly be questioned. SCOTT.

(15.) Wine-presses.] The most common method of making and using these, is thought to be described in the note, Matt. 21:33. now in use in Persia; they also were used in Egypt, and we give a cut of another curious and more cleanly process, from the ancient tombs to the E. of the 2d pyramid of Memphis. The Egyptians preserved the wine in amphoræ, ranged along the walls, in cellars; as at Pompeii, and in ancient Greek houses. The Heb. here, for treaders of wine-presses, is dorekym-gittoth, Vulg. Calcantes torcularia; Sept. patountas lenous; Syr. and Arab. treaders of the ways. ED.

Verses 20—22.

Probably, his other regulations were at last equally effectual; but we have no more canonical history concerning them. SCOTT.

Verses 23—30.

Some time must have elapsed after Nehemiah's departure from Jerusalem, before the children of these marriages could betray their origin by their speech: for though the Ashdodites lived near the Jews, their language was, it seems, materially different from theirs: yet probably they were not contracted before that event, and the reform seems to have been made very soon after his return. This separation also evidently was diverse from that recorded before: (Note, 1—3.) for that was the effect of reading the law, and by voluntary consent; this by more vehement and coercive measures. The authority, which Nehemiah exercised over the priests, even the chief of them, and in requiring the ministers of religion to attend to their several duties; as well as over the people, requiring them to render the priests and Levites their dues; is nowhere expressly enjoined on governors, or kings, in the Mosaic law: yet as this exercise of authority was entirely limited to the things which God had commanded; he performed a good and acceptable service, and properly improved his talents. (2 Chr. 29:3—5. 30:12.) ID.

had * married wives of [e] Ashdod, of [d] Ammon, and of Moab:

24 And their children spake half in the speech of Ashdod, and † could not speak in the Jews' language, but according to the language of ‡ each people.

25 And [e] I contended with them, [f] and § cursed them, and [g] smote certain of them, and [h] plucked off their hair, and [i] made them swear by God, saying, [k] Ye shall not give your daughters unto their sons, nor take their daughters unto your sons, or for yourselves.

26 [l] Did not Solomon king of Israel sin by these things? [m] yet among many nations was there no king like him, who was beloved of his God, and God made him king over all Israel: nevertheless even him did outlandish women cause to sin.

27 [n] Shall we then hearken unto you to do all this great evil, to transgress against our God, in marrying strange wives?

28 And one of the sons of [o] Joiada, the son of [p] Eliashib, the high priest, was [q] son-in-law to [r] Sanballat the Horonite: therefore [s] I chased him from me.

29 [t] Remember them, O my God, ‖ because they have defiled the priesthood, and [u] the covenant of the priesthood, and of the Levites.

* Heb. made to dwell with them.
[e] 1 Sam. 5:1.
[d] See on 1—3.
† Heb. they discerned not to speak.
‡ Heb. people and people. Zeph. 3:9.
[e] 11,17. Prov. 28:4.
[f] 5:13. Deut. 27:14—26.
§ Or, reviled. Luke 11:45,46.
[g] Deut. 25:2,3. Ezra 7:26.
[h] Is 50:6.
[i] 10:29,30. Deut. 6:13. 2 Chr. 15:12—15. Ezra 10:5.
[k] Ex. 34:16. Deut. 7:3.
[l] 1 K. 11:1—3. Ec. 7:26.
[m] 2 Sam. 12:24,25. 1 K. 3:13. 2 Chr. 1:12.
[n] 1 Sam. 30:24.
[o] 12:10,22.
[p] 3:1.
[q] 4,5. 6:17—19.
[r] 2:19.
[s] 25. Ps. 101:8. Prov. 20:8,26. Rom. 13:3,4.
[t] 6:14. Ps. 59:5—13. 2 Tim. 4:14.
‖ Heb. for the defilings of. Lev. 21:1—7.
[u] Num. 16:9,10. 25:12,13. 1 Sam. 2:30. Mal. 2:4—8,11,12.

ing, they had reason to expect further judgments. Thus Ezra concluded, Ezra 9: 14.

3. He took care to prevent the profanation of the Sabbath, as one that aimed only at reformation; if he could reform, he would not punish them, and if he should punish, it was but that he might reform them. This is an example to magistrates to be heirs of restraint, and prudently to use the bit and bridle, that there may be no occasion for the lash.

(1.) He ordered the gates to be kept shut from the evening before the Sabbath to the morning after, and set his own servants ([his body-guard, perhaps,] whom he could confide in) to watch them, that no burdens should be brought in on the sabbath-day, nor late the night before, nor early in the morning after, lest sabbath-time should be trenched on, v. 19. Those that came in to worship in the courts of the temple, were, no doubt, admitted to pass and repass, but none that came to sell goods, they were forced to lodge without the city, (v. 20.) where, no doubt, they wished the Sabbath were gone, that they might sell grain.

(2.) He threatened those who came with goods to the gates, who pressed hard for entrance, telling them that if they came again, he would certainly lay hands on them, v. 21. This deterred them. Note, If reformers will but put on resolution, more may be done to break bad customs than they can imagine. Vice connived at, is indeed daring, and will bid defiance to counsel and reproof; but it may be made cowardly, and will be so, when magistrates make themselves a terror to it. The king that sits on the throne of judgment, scatters away all evil with his eyes.

(3.) He charged the Levites carefully and duly to sanctify the Sabbath, to cleanse themselves in the first place, and so give a good example to the people, and that they should some of them come and keep the gates, v. 22. because he and his servants must shortly return to court. Then reform is likely, when magistrates and ministers join their forces. This courage, zeal, and prudence, of Nehemiah, are recorded for imitation; and we have reason to think the cure he wrought, was lasting; for, in our Savior's time, we find the Jews in the other extreme, over-scrupulous in the ceremonial part of sabbath-sanctification.

4. He concludes with a prayer, v. 22. The petition is, Remember me, (as the thief on the cross,) that is enough; God's thoughts to usward are very precious, Ps. 40: 5. He adds, Spare me; so far from thinking that what he had done, did properly merit a reward in strict justice, he cries earnestly to God to spare him, as Jeremiah, (ch. 15: 15.) Take me not away in thy long-suffering, (ch. 10: 24.) Correct me not in anger, and (ch. 17: 17.) Be not a terror to me. The best saints, even when they do the best actions, stand in need of sparing mercy, for there is not a just man that doeth good, and sinneth not. The plea; According to the greatness (or multitude) of thy mercies. God's mercy, not our merit, is our dependence before God.

V. 23—31. We have here one instance more of Nehemiah's pious zeal to purify his countrymen, a peculiar people to God; that, he aimed at in the use of his power, not the enriching of himself.

I. The corruption of marrying strange wives. This was complained of in Ezra's time, and much done towards a reform, (Ezra 9: and 10:) yet others would not take warning; We still lean toward what is forbidden. Nehemiah, like a good governor, inquired into the state of the families under his charge, that he might reform what was amiss in them, and so heal the streams, by healing the springs.

1. He found, on inquiry, that many had married wives of Ashdod, Ammon, and Moab; (v. 23.) either because fond of what was far-fetched, or hoping by these alliances to strengthen and enrich themselves. See how God by the prophet reproves this, (Mal. 2: 11.) Judah has dealt treacherously, and broken covenant with God, that in Ezra's time, as to this very thing; he has profaned the holiness of the Lord, by marrying the daughter, (worshipper,) of a strange god.

2. He talked with children, and found they were children of strangers, for their speech betrayed them. Bred up with their mothers, they learned of them and their nurses and servants to speak, so that they could not speak the Jews' language, either at all, or not readily, or not purely, but half in the speech of Ashdod, or Ammon, or Moab, according to the country of the mother. Observe, (1.) Children, in their childhood, learn much of their mothers, They are prone to imitate them. (2.) If either side be bad, the corrupt nature will incline the children to take after that, which is a good reason why Christians should not be unequally yoked. (3.) In the education of children, great care should be taken of their tongues; that they learn not the language of Ashdod, any impious or impure talk, any corrupt communication.

II. Nehemiah's course to purge out this corruption, when he discovered how much it had prevailed.

1. He showed the evil, and his obligation to witness against it. He did not seek an occasion against them, but this was an iniquity to be punished by the judge, and which he must by no means connive at, v. 27. 'There is no remedy but divorce, to clear us from the guilt of this great evil, and prevent the infection.' He quotes, (1.) A precept, to prove it a great sin; and makes them swear to that precept, from Deut. 7: 3. When we would reclaim from sin, we must show its sinfulness in the glass of the commandment. (2.) A precedent, to show its pernicious consequences, v. 26. The falls of great and good men are therefore recorded, that we may take warning by them, to shun the temptations they were overcome by. When Solomon married strange wives, even his wisdom could not secure him from the snares. He was beloved of God, but that threw him out of God's favor, and went near utterly to extinguish the holy fire of grace in his soul: it lost him 10 of his 12 tribes. Let him that thinks that he stands take heed lest he fall, when he runs on such a precipice.

2. He showed himself highly displeased at it, to awaken them to a due sense of the evil. They offered to justify themselves, but he showed them how frivolous their excuses were, and argued it warmly with them, v. 25. When he had silenced them, he cursed them, i. e. denounced the judgments of God against them, and showed them what their sins deserved. He then picked out some of the more obstinate, and fit to be made examples, and smote them, i. e. ordered them to be beaten by the proper officers according to the law, Deut. 25: 2, 3. To which he added this further mark of infamy, he plucked off their hair, or cut or shaved it off; for it may be so understood. Perhaps they had prided themselves in their hair, therefore he took it off, to deform and humble them, and put them to shame; it was, in effect, to stigmatize them, at least, for a time. Ezra, in this case, had plucked off his own hair, in holy sorrow for the sin; Nehemiah plucked of their hair, in a holy indignation at the sinners. See the different tempers of wise, and good, and useful men, and the divers graces, as well as divers gifts, of the same Spirit!

3. He obliged them not to take any more such wives, and separated those they had taken. He cleansed them from all strangers, both men and women, (v. 30.) and made them promise with an oath never to do so again, v. 25. Thus did he try all ways and means.

4. He took particular care that the priests' families might not lie under this guilty stain. He found, on inquiry, that a branch of the high priest's

Remember them, &c. (29) By visiting with some evident token of his holy indignation, the principal offenders in these things, the Lord would both display his own glory, and give a salutary warning to others, tending to repress such gross violations of his law; and even to bring the offenders to repentance. (Lev. 10:1—3. 21:7—15. Num. 25: 11—13. 1 Cor. 5:1—5, v. 5.) SCOTT.

V. 25. Plucked.] 'Had them shaved as a mark of ignominy. Dr. A. Clarke. It made them look like vile slaves. Patric'. The Heb. properly signifies tearing off the hair with violence; a punishment common in Persia. Calmet.' Cond. Comm. See Poole also, for the summary and violent method of administering justice, or punishing persons under the ruler's displeasure, in that still despotic country. ED.

CONCLUDING NOTE. 'For disinterestedness, philanthropy, patriotism, prudence, courage, zeal, humanity, and every virtue that consti-

30 Thus [x] cleansed I them from all strangers, and [y] appointed the wards of the priests and the Levites, every one in his business;

31 And for [z] the wood-offering, at times appointed, and for the first-fruits. [a] Remember me, O my God, for good.

x 10:30.
y 12:2—26. 1 Chr. 23:—26:
z 10:34.
a 14,22. Ps. 25:7. 106:4. Luke 23:42.

own family, one of his grandsons, had married a daughter of Sanballat, that notorious enemy of the Jews, (ch. 2: 10. 4: 1.) and so had, in effect, twisted interests with the Samaritans, v. 28. How little love had that man either to God or his country, who could make himself, in duty and interest, a friend to a sworn enemy to both. It seems, this young priest would not put away his wife, therefore Nehemiah chased him from him, deprived him, degraded him. Josephus says, this expelled priest was Manasseh, and that, when driven away, he went to his father-in-law Sanballat, who built him a temple on mt. Gerizzim, like that of Jerusalem, and promised he should be high priest in it, and that then was laid the foundation of the Samaritans' pretensions, which continued warm, to our Savior's time, John 4: 20.

Lastly, are Nehemiah's prayers on this, 1. Remember them, v. 29. 'Lord, convince and convert them, put them in mind of what they should be and do, that they may come to themselves.' Or, 'Remember them, to reckon with them for it; remember it against them.' If so, this is a prophecy, that God would remember it against them. They that defile the priesthood, despise God, and shall be lightly esteemed. Perhaps they were too many and too great for him to deal with; 'Lord' (says he) 'deal Thou with them, take the work into thine own hands.' 2. Remember me, v. 31. The best services to the public have sometimes been forgotten by those for whom they were done; (Eccl. 9: 15.) therefore Nehemiah refers himself to God, to recompense him, and doubts not he shall be well paid. This may well be the summary of our petitions: we need no more to make us happy than this; Remember me, O my God, for good.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 15—31. The Christian magistrate ought to take proper measures, to prevent the Lord's-day from being profaned by labor, merchandise, or those occupations which subserve the luxury and pride of life.—Persons in the higher orders of society, in general, little consider the extensive effects of their misconduct: if they violate the holy day of God, others will assuredly imitate their impiety; and thus the flood-gates of ungodliness and wickedness will be thrown open, which must bring the wrath of God on guilty nations. Indeed the present state of unprincipled profligacy in these kingdoms, may be shown in great measure to originate from the relaxed sentiments, which some time after the reformation began to prevail concerning the spending of the Sabbath. And as these have gained ground, that holy day has gradually become more and more the time, when the lower orders are let loose to corrupt one another.—Children [inheriting, perhaps, a degenerated constitution] readily imbibe the principles of an infidel or ungodly parent, and soon forget the very language and appearance of piety; or substitute a corrupt religion, in the stead of that which comes from God, and leads to Him.—Mothers likewise have a very important [we might almost say all-important, Ed.] part allotted them, in forming the manners of mankind; as the care of children in their tender years is almost wholly committed to them. It is therefore of great consequence to society, that females should be educated with a view to this most momentous employment, and qualified for the discharge of their duty in it. Every wise man, in contracting marriage, should consider whether the object of his choice would be a proper person to intrust with his children's tuition: and every mother should consider, that this is her most important charge, and most calls for assiduity, prudence, and circumspection. (2 Tim. 1: 3—5. Scott.

---

tutes a great mind, and proves a soul in deep communion with God, Nehemiah will ever stand conspicuous among the greatest men of the Jewish nation: and an exemplar worthy to be copied by the first patriots in every nation under heaven.' Dr. A. Clarke. 'Many highly distinguished men were contemporary with Nehemiah: as Æschylus, Aristophanes, Cincinnatus, Democritus, Euripides, Herodotus, Hippocrates, Phidias, Pindar, Plato, Socrates, Sophocles, Thucydides, Xenophon, and Zeuxis.' Cond Comm.

We now (in Ezra, Neh. and Esth.) find the true religion brought to the palaces and hovels of another of the most powerful, and widely extended empires of antiquity, and Jews placed in eminent stations in it. What effect this intercourse had, in advancing the human race in the path of improvement, is a very obscure but interesting inquiry to the Christian philosopher. Of the much disputed subject of the chronology and history of ancient Persia, Fraser gives a short but clear account, and a more extended view is taken by Heeren.—The identity of the several Persian kings mentioned in Scripture, with those of the Greek and Persian historians, is also a fruitful subject of discussion: see Prideaux, Eichhorn, Hales, and the Univ. Hist. To show the hopelessness of reconciling the Greek and Persian lists of the early kings, Fraser gives both; see note, end of Esther. Ed.

Epitome of the History of the Jews, and surrounding nations, (as connected,) from the close of the Old, to the times of the New Test.

Soon after the events, recorded by Nehemiah, and in Esther, or perhaps before their close, Artaxerxes Longimanus died, and was succeeded by Darius Nothus. (B. C. 423.) He, dying, was succeeded by Artaxerxes Mnemon; (405;) in whose time, Johanan, the high priest, murdered his brother Joshua in the temple, and the nation was fined by the Persians. After some other successions, Darius Codomannus, the last king of the Medo-Persian empire, ascended the throne. (336.) During all these years the Jews were entirely a province of that empire.

Xerxes (father of Artaxerxes Longimanus) had before this unsuccessfully attempted to subjugate them. (Dan. 11: 2—4.) This so exasperated the Greeks, that they long meditated to subvert the Persian empire.—Various events made way for Alexander the great, king of Macedon, to be appointed commander of a Grecian army, raised, to invade the Persian dominions. With about 30,000 select troops, he passed over into Asia; (B. C. 334;) and, with a celerity, unexampled in history, having vanquished the immense armies of Darius, in 3 pitched battles, the last followed by the murder of Darius by his own servants, he terminated the Medo-Persian empire, and assumed dominion over all its nations. (330.) (Dan. 2: 39. 7: 6. 8: 5—7. 11: 2—4.) In a short time, Alexander, having still more enlarged his dominions, died at Babylon; and after many severe and bloody contests, his empire was divided into 4 kingdoms, Macedonia, Thrace, Syria, and Egypt. (323.) (Dan. 7: 6. 8: 8.)—The Jews, however, had little concern, for some ages, with either, except the kings of Syria, and of Egypt, called by Daniel, the king of the N. and the king of the S. (Dan. 11: 2—6.) Judea lay between the dominions of the successive rulers of these kingdoms; and was long under the power of one or the other, (Dan. 11: 5—20.) and exposed to the ravages of armies, which marched through the land. At first they formed part of the kingdom of Egypt, under Ptolemy Soter: after his death, Ptolemy Philadelphus, his son and successor, showed them much favor; and during his reign, the Hebrew SS. began to be translated into Greek, for the benefit of Jews, in Egypt and other places, where the Greek was known.—This translation is called the Septuagint; and by means of it, many of the learned Gentiles became acquainted with the Old Testament.

The Jews, having been cruelly oppressed by Ptolemy Philopater, (who, attempting to enter into the holy of holies, was opposed and hindered by the priests and rulers, which he indignantly resented,) revolted from him, and submitted to Antiochus the Great, king of Syria. But Antiochus, having rashly engaged in war with the Romans, was vanquished, and reduced to make an inglorious peace; which gave the Romans the first entrance into the Grecian empire, or the 3d kingdom. (Dan. 2: 39—43. 7: 7, 8,11: 17—19, 31.) After the death of Antiochus the great, and the inglorious reign of his son, Seleucus Philopater, (Dan. 11: 20.) Antiochus Epiphanes, called by Daniel 'a vile person,' succeeded, and most cruelly oppressed and persecuted the Jews, causing all the worship at the temple to cease, and even dedicating it to his own idol. (Dan. 8: 9—18. 12. 11: 21—30.) But Mattathias, a priest, and his sons called the Maccabees, opposed him; and being wonderfully assisted and prospered, in many bloody contests, under Judas Maccabæus, the power of Antiochus was overthrown, his persecution terminated, the temple was recovered, and its service restored; and Antiochus soon came to a miserable end. These events are recorded in the books of Maccabees, the first of which especially is allowed to contain authentic history. (Dan. 11: 31—35.) From about this time, (153,) the Jews, taking advantage of the enfeebled state of the contending kingdoms, (Syria and Egypt,) became independent under the Maccabees, who united in general the high priesthood with the sovereign authority; but without the name of king, till the time of Aristobulus, son of Hyrcanus. (B. C. 107.) This epitome must exclude the notice of the intestine contests of the different parties, among the Jews; which were many, fierce, and often bloody.

At length, however, the Romans greatly extending their conquests, the kingdom of Syria was reduced to the form of a Roman province, by Pompey the great. He not long after besieged Jerusalem; and having taken it, he entered into the holy of holies: (B. C. 63;) but after that, he never prospered. (Notes Dan. 11: 31. conclusion.)—From this time, the Jews became dependent on the Romans.—At length Antipater, the father of Herod the great, an Edomite, by the favor of Julius Cæsar, (who had prevailed against Pompey, and obtained dominion at Rome,) was made ruler in Judea. (B. C. 47.) After Antipater's death, Herod his son, called by Matthew, 'Herod the king,' by the favor of the Romans, and by force of arms, obtained possession of Jerusalem, and was established in regal authority; being by birth an Edomite, but proselyted to Judaism; which authority was at length confirmed by Augustus Cæsar. (B. C. 30.) This dignity he maintained with great ability, but most atrocious cruelties, in his own family, as well as among others, till the birth of Christ. In this interim, he had built many cities, and almost rebuilt the temple. (Notes, Hag. 2: 6—9. Mat. 16: 18—16. John 2: 18—22. Acts 23: 35.) His atrociously cruel attempt to murder the infant Savior, is recorded by the evangelist; and soon after he died most miserably. (Notes, Matt. 2.) After some years, in which the dominions of Herod were divided into four Tetrarchies under the sons of Herod, (Notes, Matt. 14: 1, 2.) Judea became a Roman province; the sceptre departed from Judah, for Shiloh was come. (Note, Gen, 49: 9, 10.) And under Pontius Pilate, the Roman procurator, in the reign of Tiberius Cæsar, the successor of Augustus, the Lord Jesus was crucified.—Galilee, however, still remained under the government of Herod the Tetrarch, son of Herod the king, who beheaded John Baptist: but after some other changes, at length the whole Jewish state was subverted under Titus, the son of Vespasian. (A. D. 79.) Scott.

AN EXPOSITION,

WITH

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS AND NOTES,

UPON THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

How God watched over the returned Jews, and what great and kind things were done for them, we read in the two foregoing books; but many stayed behind, having not zeal enough for God's house, and the holy land and city, to carry them through the difficulties of a removal thither; these, one would think, should have been excluded the specia protection of Providence, as unworthy the name of Israelites; but our God deals not with us according to our folly and weakness. Who drew up this story is uncertain; Mordecai was as able as any to relate, on his own knowledge, its several passages, for he bore a conspicuous part in it; and that he wrote such an account as was necessary to inform his people of the grounds of the feast of Purim, we are told, ch. 9: 20. therefore we think he penned the whole book. It is the narrative of a plot against the Jews, scattered in the provinces of the heathen, to cut them all off, and wonderfully disappointed, by a concurrence of providences. The most compendious exposition of it will be to read it deliberately all together at one time, for the latter events expound the former, and show what Providence intended in them. The name of God is not found in this book; but the apocryphal addition to it (which is not in the Heb. nor was ever received by the Jews into the canon, containing six chs.) begins thus, Then Mordecai said, God has done these things. But though the name of God be not in it, the finger of God is, directing many minute events, to bring about his people's deliverance. The particulars are not only surprising and very entertaining, but edifying, and very encouraging to the faith and hope of God's people, in the most difficult and dangerous times: we cannot now expect such miracles as brought Israel out of Egypt, but we may expect that in such ways as God here took, He will still protect his people. We are told, I. How Esther came to be queen, and Mordecai to be great, the instruments of the intended deliverance, ch. 1, 2. II. On what provocation, and by what arts, Haman the Amalekite obtained an order for the destruction of all the Jews, ch. 3. III. The great distress of the Jews, their patriots especially, thereupon, ch. 4. IV. The defeat of Haman's particular plot against Mordecai's life, ch. 5, 6, 7. V. The defeat of his general plot against the Jews, ch. 8. VI. The care taken to perpetuate the remembrance of this, ch. 9, 10. The whole story confirms the Psalmist's observation, Ps. 37: 12, 13. The wicked plotteth against the just, and gnasheth on him with his teeth. The Lord shall laugh at him, He sees that his day is coming. HENRY.

There are various opinions among learned men as to who was the author of this book. The Jews have always held it in [the greatest] veneration; and as the feast of Purim (9:26—32.) is observed by them to this day, no reasonable doubt can be entertained concerning the authenticity of the narrative. It contains no prophecies, and it is not referred to in the N. T.—It is also very remarkable, that there is no clear mention in it of any of the names, by which the God of Israel is distinguished in the sacred oracles: yet it is most evidently intended, as well as admirably calculated, to illustrate the doctrine of Providence; and the methods and instruments by which the great Ruler of the world accomplishes his purposes, both of mercy and of judgment. Perhaps this omission of the names of God was designed. Facts, well known, concerning the worshippers of JEHOVAH, the plot formed for their extirpation, and the wonderful deliverance vouchsafed them, were thus simply stated; in order that every reader might judge for himself, whether these facts did not demonstrate, that the God of the Jews was the great Ruler of the universe. Had this conclusion been urged on the Gentiles by a despised Jew, their prejudices might have been excited: let the simple narrative then speak for itself.—Several additional chs. are found in the Apocrypha; but they never were in the Heb. text, and the Jews never received them: they principally contain repetitions, or additions, intended to decorate the history; but which in fact destroy its simple unity and beauty: and some things in them cannot be reconciled with the times to which the history must relate.—SCOTT. Copies of this book, widely differing from each other, exist in Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, Greek and Latin. DR. A. CLARKE. Esther contains a true picture of the manners of the Persian court. HEEREN.

B. C. 460.

CHAP. I.

Ahasuerus, king of Persia, makes a royal feast, 1—9. He sends for Vashti his queen, who refuses to come, 10—12. By the advice of his counsellors, he divorces her, and asserts, by a public decree, the authority of men over their wives, 13—22.

NOW it came to pass in the days of [a] Ahasuerus, (this is Ahasuerus which reigned [b] from India even unto Ethiopia, over [c] an hundred and seven and twenty provinces;)

2 That in those days, when the king Ahasu-a Ezra 4.6. Dan. 9:1. b 8:9. Is. 18:1. 37:9.

c Dan. 6:1.

CHAP. I. V. 1—9. Several things in this ch. are very instructive, and of great use; but its design is, to show how way was made for Esther, to the crown, to defeat Haman's plot, and this, long before the plot was laid, that we may observe and admire the foresight, and vast reaches of Providence. Which king of Persia this Ahasuerus was, the learned are not agreed. Mordecai is said to have been carried captive from Jerusalem, (ch. 2: 6.) whence it should seem, it was one of the first kings of that empire: Lightfoot thinks, Artaxerxes, who hindered the building of the temple, called also Ahasuerus, (Ezra 4: 6, 7.) after his great-grandfather of the Medes, Dan. 9: 1. [Notes, 10:2. end of Neh. Esth. and Ezr.] Here is an account,

1. Of the vast extent of his dominion. In the time of Darius and Cyrus, there were but 120 provinces, Dan. 6: 1. Now, there were 127, from India to Ethiopia, v. 1. [note, Ezra, 1: 2.] a vast power, in a bad hand, is able to do so much the more mischief; but, in a good hand, able to do so much the more good.

2. Of the great pomp of his court. When fixed in his throne, the pride of his heart rising with the grandeur of his kingdom, he made a most extravagant feast, v. 4. all in vain glory, an affectation of pomp to no purpose; for none questioned his riches, nor offered to vie with him for honor. Had he showed the riches of his kingdom, and his majesty, as some of his successors did, (Ezra 6: 8. 7: 22.) it would have turned to much better account. Two feasts he made: (1.) One for his nobles and princes, which lasted 180 days, v. 3, 4. perhaps the nobles and princes of one province one day, of another province another. The Chaldee paraphrast (who is very bold in his additions to this book) says, there had been a rebellion, and this feast was kept for joy of the quashing of it. (2.) Another for all the people, great and small, which lasted seven days; some one day, and some another; and because no house would hold them, they were entertained in the court of the garden, v. 5. The [awnings above, and] hangings dividing the several apartments, or the tents for the com-

NOTES.

CHAP. I. V. 1, 2. It is evident, that these events took place, after the complete establishment of the Persian empire; for Shushan was the royal city of Persia. (Neh. 1:1. Dan. 8:2.) But various have been the opinions of learned men, concerning the king here called Ahasuerus. I am, however, fully satisfied with the arguments of Dean Prideaux: that he was Artaxerxes Longimanus, who commissioned both Ezra and Nehemiah. The extent of his dominions, his liberality, and his kindness to the Jews, favor the supposition. (Ezra 7:1—5, 11—26. Neh. 1:1. 2:5, 6, v. 6.) The Sept. calls him Artaxerxes, and Josephus, Artaxerxes Longimanus. See Prideaux's Connection. SCOTT.

(2.) Xerxes, the father of Ahasuerus, was assassinated by Artaerus [d] sat on the throne of his kingdom, which was in [e] Shushan the palace,

3 In the third year of his reign, [f] he made a feast unto all his princes, and his servants; the power [g] of Persia and Media, [h] the nobles and princes of the provinces, being before him:

4 When [i] he showed [j] the riches of his glorious kingdom, and the honor of his [k] excellent majesty, many days, even an hundred and fourscore days.

5 And when these days were expired, the king made a feast unto all the people that were [*] present in Shushan the palace, both unto great and small, [l] seven days, in the court of the garden of the king's palace;

6 Where were [m] white, green, and † blue hangings, fastened with cords of fine linen and purple to silver rings, and pillars of marble: [n] the beds were of gold and silver, upon a pavement of ‡ red, and blue, and white, and black marble.

pany, were very fine and rich; so the beds or benches on which they sat, and the pavement under their feet, v. 6. Better is a dinner of herbs with quietness, and the enjoyment of one's self and a friend, than this banquet, with all its noise and tumult.

3. [*] Of the good order, kept there, in some respects, notwithstanding. It was not profane, like Belshazzar's, Dan. 5: 3, 4; nor murderous, like Herod's, but two things in it are laudable. (1.) There was no forcing, nor urging of healths. The drinking was according to the law, probably, some law lately made; none did compel, (by continual proposing, so Josephus,) but every man drank as he pleased, (v. 8.) so that if any drank to excess, it was their own fault; a fault few would commit, when the king's order put an honor on sobriety. This caution of a heathen prince, even then when he would show his generosity, may shame many called Christians, who think they do not sufficiently show their good housekeeping, nor bid their friends welcome, unless they make them drunk, and, under pretence of sending the health round, send the sin round, and death with it. There is a wo to them that do so; let them read it and tremble, Hab. 2: 15, 16. It is robbing men of their reason, their richest jewel, and making them fools: [besides the lawless lusts, and countless miseries, the habit engenders.] (2.) There was no mixed dancing; in Belshazzar's feast, his wives and concubines drank with him; (Dan. 5: 2.) in Herod's, his daughter danced before him. Here Vashti feasted the women, not openly in the garden-court, but in her own apartment, in the royal house, v. 9. Thus, while the king showed the honor of his majesty, she and her ladies showed the honor of their modesty, which is truly the majesty of the sex.

V. 10—22. Here is a damp to all their mirth, through Ahasuerus's own folly, which broke off the feast abruptly, and sent the guests away silent and ashamed.

I. It was the king's weakness, to send for Vashti, when he was drunk, and in company with abundance of gentlemen, many of whom, it is likely, were in the same condition, v. 10, 11.—Hereby, 1. He dishonored himself as a husband; who ought to protect, but by no means to expose, the modesty of his wife, to be to her a covering of the eyes, (Gen. 20: 16.) not to uncover them. 2. He diminished himself as a king, in commanding from his wife, what she might refuse, much to the honor of her virtue. It was against the custom of the Persians for the women to appear in public, and he put a great hardship on her, when he did not court, but command, her to do so uncouth a thing, and make her a show. If he had not been out of possession of himself by drinking, he would not have done such a thing, but have been angry at any that should have mentioned it. When the wine is in, the wit is out.

II. However, perhaps it was not her wisdom to deny him. Coming, evidently in pure obedience, had been no reflection on her modesty, nor a bad example. The thing was not in itself sinful, therefore to obey had been more her honor than to be so precise. Perhaps she refused in a haughty manner, and then it was certainly evil; she scorned to come at the king's commandment. What a mortification to him! While showing the glory of his kingdom, he showed the reproach of his family, that he had a wife that would do as she pleased. Strifes between yoke-fellows are bad enough at any time, but before company they are very scandalous.

III. The king, thereupon, grew outrageous. He that had rule over 127 provinces, had no rule over his own spirit, v. 12. He had consulted his own comfort and credit more, had he stifled his resentments, passed by the affront, and turned it off with a jest.

IV. Yet he would do nothing in this matter, till he advised with his privy-counsellors. The greater the power, the greater need of advice, that it may not be abused. These counsellors were learned, for they knew law and judgment; wise men, for they knew the times; and the king greatly confided in and honored them, for they saw the king's face, and sat first in the kingdom, v. 13, 14. In the d 2 Sam. 7:1. 1 K. 1:46. Dan. 4:4.

e 2:3. 3:15. 4:16. 9:12—15. Neh. 1:1. Dan. 8:2. f 2:19. Gen. 40:20. 1 K. 3:15. Dan. 5:1. Mark 6:21.
g 14. Ezra 1:2. Is. 21:2. Jer. 51:11. Dan. 5:28. 8:20.
h Dan. 3:2,3. 6:1,6,7.
i Is. 39:2. Ez. 28:5. Dan. 4:30.
j Ps. 76:1—4. 145:5,12,13. Dan. 2:37—44. 7:9—14. Matt. 4:8. 6:13. Rom. 9:23. Eph. 1:18. Col. 1:27. Rev. 4:11. k 1 Chr. 29:11,12,25. Job 40:10. Ps. 21:5. 45:3. 93:1. Dan. 4:36. 5:18. 2 Pet. 1:16,17.
* Heb. found.
l 2 Chr. 7:8,9. 30:21—25.
m Ex. 26:1,31,32,36,37.
† Or, violet.
n 7:9. Ez. 23:41. Am. 2:8. 6:4.
‡ Or, of porphyre, and marble, and alabaster, and stone of blue color.

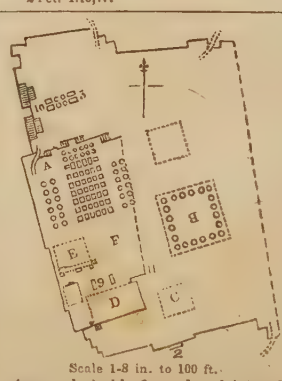
banes, captain of his guard, who repaired to Ahasuerus, the 3d son of Xerxes, and pretended that Darius, his eldest brother, had committed this parricide to make his way to the throne, intending also to cut off him, to secure it. Ahasuerus then slew his brother. Artabanes aimed at the regal power, but placed Ahasuerus on the throne for the present. But Megabyzus, who had married a sister of Ahasuerus, discovered to him the whole plot, on which he cut off Artabanes, and his whole party, and probably appointed the extraordinary feast mentioned in the following vs. to celebrate his deliverance.' HEWLETT.

Verses 2—6.

We cannot give a better illustration of the Persian magnificence here described, than in the cut and description of Persian ruins still extant (though at another place) attributed by very learned men to an age quite contemporary: (note, Neh. 9:4.) 'Imagination cannot picture a sight more imposing, than the vast, solitary, mutilated pillars, . . . of the magnificent colonnades, which occupy this platform [note, as above.] Sir R. K. Porter says of the exterior double rows [at the left side of the cut] "The total height of the columns is 60 ft. circumf. of shaft, 16, and length from tor to capital, 44 ft. The shaft is finely fluted in 52 divisions; the capitals which remain, though much injured, suffice to show that they were also surmounted with the double demi-bull" (or unicorn,) [note, and cut Num. 23:22.] "and I think there can be no doubt that the wide hollow between the niches, received a beam, meant to support and connect an entablature, over which has been placed the roof . . . The dimensions, and general particulars of the centre group are similar, but they are only 55 ft. high; the shafts 35 ft. the capitals are different: its two lower divisions, are evidently constructed of the hallowed lotus; the upper compartment has only two volutes; the middle compartment (which is only one division of the lotus) appears to have had some extraneous body introduced into the opening between it and the lower part; and the angular and unfinished state of the lower side of the capital seems to testify the same: here then the connecting line must have run, whence the roof could spring."*



Scale 1-8 in. to 100 ft.

Door-ways and window-frames of gigantic proportions and exquisite workmanship, are still in their places, [on parts of the terrace.] '. . The materials seem to have been taken mostly from the mountain behind, of a compact, grey limestone, susceptible of a good polish. . . One of the most striking considerations which arises from examining these splendid monuments, is the great mechanical skill and exquisite taste evinced in their construction, and which indicate an era of high cultivation and considerable scientific knowledge. We see here, as in Egypt, blocks of some 40 or 50 ft. long, and of enormous weight, placed one above another with a precision, which renders the points of union almost invisible; columns 60 ft. high, of huge pieces admirably formed and jointed with invariable accuracy; and a detail of sculpture (numerous cuneiform inscriptions, and 1800 and more figures), which, if it cannot boast the exact anatomical proportions and flowing outline of the Greek models, displays at least chiselling as delicate as any work of art on the banks of the Nile.' FRASER. ED.

The palace.] 'Ha birah. Rather, the city: and so the Sept. The luxury and ostentation of the Persians was a proverb in Horace's time. Shaw and others remark, that on such occasions as that, v. 6. not only was the place hung about with elegant curtains of these colors, but a canopy of rich stuffs was suspended from side to side. And the paved work of tiles or marble, gave origin to the Musive or Mosaic work, well known among the Asiatics, and borrowed from them by the Greeks and Romans. The beds of gold and silver were the couches covered with gold and silver cloth.' [Hewlett supposes them over laid, or studded, with gold and silver. Note, 3: 9.] Dr. A. CLARKE.

(4.) 'Dr. Fryer, who resided in Persia, mentions a feast of 180 days, and Cheus, a Chinese emperor, used frequently to make a feast of 120 days.' BURDER.

(6.) M. and M. R.—The beds.] On these they sat, or reclined, at table. [Heeren thinks they were stationary 'divans.'] SCOTT.

* [Heeren, (from the sculptures,) makes A 'the audience and festival hall;' and B the 'reception hall:' C the 'sanctuary;' D the king's, and E the queen's houses; F the 'banqueting house,' Alexander burnt; probably roofed with cedar.] 'It is doubtful if the hall ever had a roof. The inter-columnar distances, the absence of all appropriate materials for it among the ruins, and the scantiness of the rubbish, are thought to prove it never was covered unless occasionally by an awning.' [Comp. v. 5, 6. A modern royal garden pavillion at Ispahan has rooms of columns, covered with a flat roof, and entirely open at the sides, which have rich curtains.] 'But those who agree with Porter above, think the distance of the columns not too great for beams, (long since decayed,) or if a more permanent connection was used, this has been removed to assist in constructing modern towns.' Fraser. Ed.

7 And they gave them drink in [o] vessels of gold, (the vessels being diverse one from another,) and [*] royal wine in abundance, according to the [†] state of the king:

8 And the drinking was according to the law; [p] none did compel: for so the king had appointed to all [q] the officers of his house, that they should do according to every man's pleasure.

9 Also Vashti [r] the queen made a feast for the women, in the royal house which belonged to king Ahasuerus.

10 ¶ On the seventh day, when [s] the heart of the king was merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, [t] Harbona, Bigtha, and Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven [‡] chamberlains, that served in the presence of Ahasuerus the king,

11 To bring [u] Vashti the queen before the king with the crown royal, to show the people and the princes her beauty: for she was [§] fair to look on.

12 But the queen Vashti [x] refused to come at the king's commandment [‖] by his chamberlains: therefore [y] was the king very wroth, and his anger [z] burned in him.

13 Then the king said to [a] the wise men, which [b] knew the times, (for so was the king's manner toward all that knew law and judgment:

14 And the next unto him was Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan, [c] the seven princes of Persia and Media, which [d] saw the king's face, and which sat the first in the kingdom;)

15 ¶ What shall we do unto the queen Vashti, according to law, because she hath not performed the commandment of the king Ahasuerus, by the chamberlains?

16 And Memucan answered before the king and the princes, Vashti the queen hath not [e] done wrong to the king only, but also to all the princes, and to all the people, that are in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus.

17 For this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall [f] despise their husbands in their eyes, when it shall be reported, The king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to be brought in before him, but she came not.

18 Likewise shall the ladies of Persia and Media say this day unto all the king's princes, which have heard of the deed of the queen. Thus shall there arise too much contempt and wrath.

19 If [] it please the king, let there go a royal commandment [††] from him, and let it be written among the laws of the Persians and the Medes, that [‡‡] it be not altered, that Vashti come no more before king Ahasuerus; and let the king give her royal estate unto [§§] another [g] that is better than she.

20 And when the king's decree which he shall make shall be published [h] throughout all his empire, (for it is great,) [i] all the wives shall give to their husbands honor, both to great and small.

21 And the saying [‖‖] pleased the king and the princes; and the king did according to the word of Memucan:

o 1 K. 10:21. 2 Chr. 9:20. Dan. 5.2—4.
* Heb. wine of the kingdom.
† Heb. hand.
p Jer. 35:8. 51:7. Hab. 2:15,16.
q John 2:8.
r 5:4,8.
s Gen. 43:34. Judg. 16:25. 1 Sam. 25: 36,37. 2 Sam. 13:28. Prov. 20:1. Ec. 7:2—4. 10:19. Eph. 5:18,19. t 7:9. Harbonah.
‡ Or, eunuchs. Dan. 1:3—5,18,19.
u Prov. 16:9. 23:29—33. Mark 6:21,22.
§ Heb. good of countenance. 2 Sam. 14:25. Prov. 31:30.
x Gen. 3:16. Eph. 5:22,24. 1 Pet. 3:1.
‖ Heb. which was by the hand of his eunuchs.
y Prov. 19:12. 20:2. Dan. 2:12. 3: 13,19. Nah. 1:6. Rev. 6:16,17. z Ex. 32:19,22. Deut. 29:20. Ps. 74:1. 79:5.
a Jer. 10:7. Dan. 2:2,12,27. 4:6,7. 5:7.
b 1 Chr. 12:32. Matt. 16:3.
c Ezra 7:14.
d 2 K. 25:19. Matt. 18:10. Rev. 22:4.
¶ Heb. What to do? 6:6. e Acts 18:14. 25:10. 1 Cor. 6:7,8.
f 2 Sam. 6:16. Eph. 5:33.
 Heb. it be good with the king. 21 3:9. 8:5.
†† Heb. from before him.
‡‡ Heb. it pass not away. 8:8. Dan 6:8,12,15,17.
§§ Heb. her companion.
g 1 Sam. 15:28. 1 K. 2:32.
h Deut. 17:18. 21:21.
i Eph. 5:33. Col. 3:18. 1 Pet. 3:1—7.
‖‖ Heb. was good in the eyes of the king. 19. 2:4. Gen. 41:37.

Verses 7, 8.

(M. R. o.) The absurd practice of urging people to drink more strong liquor, than they are of themselves inclined to, has prevailed in all ages; though it is a most gross violation of common sense, freedom, and civility, as well as of morality and religion. SCOTT.

(8.) 'Among the Greeks, each guest was obliged to keep the round, or leave the company: hence their proverb, "Drink or begone." The Romans had their arbiter bibendi, whose rules were to be obeyed.' Dr. A. CLARKE.

Verse 9.

It seems, the women were kept separate from the men by express appointment; which made the subsequent order of the king appear the more unreasonable. (10—12.) SCOTT.

Verse 11.

To bring Vashti.] 'The Targum adds, naked.' Dr. A. CLARKE. 'That such exhibitions were not unusual, the history of those times leaves us little reason to doubt.' HEWLETT. See Herod. &c. ED.

Verses 13, 14.

These wise men, being acquainted with the records of the kingdom, might be able to bring precedents, how former kings had acted under circumstances in any respect similar, according to the laws and customs of the kingdom; as well as to understand in general what was proper to be done in the present emergency. (1 Chr. 12:32.) And it was the king's manner, in all such matters, to confer with those who knew law and judgment.—The seven counsellors here mentioned had free access to the king, and were the first subjects in the kingdom. (Note, Ezra 7:14.) SCOTT.

Verses 16—18.

Memucan, it is supposed, was the youngest, or last in order on some account; and that he was required to give his opinion first, that he might not previously be biassed by the sentiments of his seniors or superiors. It is uncertain, whether he really deemed the queen's disobedience a dangerous precedent, while it remained unpunished or whether he paid court to the king, by counselling him to follow his own humor, and by suggesting a plausible reason for so doing. (2 Sam. 14:6—22.—P. O. 1—20.)—If husbands had been careful not to act contemptibly, or to give foolish and improper commands, they might have ruled by reason and affection, without either such fatal consequences, or violent measures. But despotism in civil government leads to despotism in domestic life [and vice versa]: men imagine, there is no way to rule, but by force and terror; and thus the superior relations become tyrants, and the inferior, slaves, submitting by constraint, without conviction or affection. SCOTT. The very idea of a contest for power between husband and wife, is revolting to a well regulated mind, for as Dr. WAYLAND remarks, 'Such is the nature of human affections, that we derive a higher pleasure from rendering happy those whom we love, than from [simple] self-gratification. Thus a parent prefers self-denial for the sake of a child, to self-indulgence. The same principle is illustrated in every case of pure, disinterested benevolence. This is the essential element on which depends the happiness of the married state. To be in the highest degree happy, we must each prefer the happiness of another to our own. The marriage contract binds each party, whenever individual gratification is concerned, to prefer the happiness of the other party to its own.' See Elts. Mor. Sci. How effectually would this principle prevent every species of matrimonial discord! And how offensive must that selfish state of mind, which seeks gratification in domineering over a husband or a wife be, in the eyes of a God of Love! ED.

Verses 19—22.

By this irrevocable edict, which was published in the various languages, spoken through the immense empire of the Persians, that all might understand it, Ahasuerus's example was virtually proposed for general imitation: so that every husband was allowed to divorce his wife, if she disobeyed his command, even when evidently foolish and unreasonable! SCOTT.

22 For he sent letters into all the king's provinces, [j] into every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language, [k] that every man should bear rule in his own house, and that * it should be published [l] according to the language of every people.

CHAP. II.

By advice of his servants, Ahasuerus causes fair virgins to be sought out in every province of his kingdom, that he may choose a queen, 1—4. Esther had been brought up by Mordecai, 5—7. She obtains favor with the keeper of the women; pleases the king; and is made queen, having observed Mordecai's directions, 8—20. Mordecai discovers a plot against the king; the criminals are punished; and his service is registered in the chronicles of the kingdom, 21—23.

AFTER these things, when the wrath of king Ahasuerus was appeased, [a] he remembered Vashti, and [b] what she had done, and what was decreed against her.

2 Then said the [c] king's servants, that ministered unto him, [d] Let there be fair young virgins sought for the king:

3 And let the king appoint officers * in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather together all the fair young virgins unto Shushan the palace, to the house of the women, unto † the custody of [f] Hege the king's chamberlain, keeper of the women; and let [g] their things for purification be given them:

4 And let the maiden which pleaseth the king, be queen instead of Vashti. And [h] the thing pleased the king; and he did so.

5 ¶ Now in [i] Shushan the palace there was a [j] certain Jew, whose name was Mordecai, the son of Jair, [k] the son of Shimei, the son of Kish, a Benjamite;

6 Who had been carried away from Jerusalem, with the cap-

[j] 3:12. 8:9. Dan. 3:29. 4:1.
[k] 1 Tim. 2:12. Tit. 2:4,5.
* Heb. one should publish it according to the language of his people. 3:12.
[l] Luke 16:8. Acts 2:5—11. 1 Cor. 14: 19,20.
[a] Dan. 6:14—18.
[b] 1:12—21.
[c] 1:10,14. 6:14.
[d] Gen. 12:14,15. 1 K. 1:2,3.
[e] 1:1,2.
† Heb. the hand.
[f] 8. Hegai.
[g] 12—14. Is. 3:18—23.
[h] 1:21. 3:9,10. 2 Sam. 13:4—6. 16: 21—23. 17:4. Matt. 14:6.
[i] 3. 1:2. 5:1.
[j] 3:2—6. 10:3.
[k] 1 Sam. 9:1. 2 Sam. 16:5.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

No extent of possessions or dominion can satisfy the human heart, and give contentment or felicity even in this present life. But 'to whom much is given, of him will much be required' by the great Proprietor, who is continually saying to monarchs, as to subjects, 'Give an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayst be no longer steward.'—Ostentatious generosity and magnificence, for a man's own honor and glory, that his wealth, bounty, and taste may be admired and applauded, is a common idolatry of the great and 'noble:' and, except grace prevail in the heart, self-exaltation and self-indulgence, in some form or other, will be the ruling principles. But indeed the honor of every endowment, possession, or achievement, of created beings, belongs solely to the underived, unchangeable Creator: his glory, in our own true felicity and that of our fellow creatures, should be our great end in every action; and all other considerations ought to be subordinated to it, and regulated by it.—In all other feasts, but the marriage-supper of the Lamb! the pleasure is greatly alloyed, and soon palls; and seldom do any frequent them, without being led into some degree of excess, injurious to their strength of body and vigor of mind. They are scenes of temptation, suited to [over-excite] man's various propensities. The enemy of souls will be sure to avail himself of the unguarded moments, especially of such as are in reputation for wisdom and piety; and real Christians must not only shun such scenes, and separate from those who frequent them; but likewise, by warnings and exhortations, endeavor to preserve their brethren from sin: and if, by this conduct at their own tables, they incur the censure of being penurious; 'the poor, whom they always have with them,' afford them a fair occasion of refuting the slander. Indeed, that will go very far in hospitality to the indigent, which is quickly wasted by pampering the luxury of the affluent. (Luke 14: 12—14. P. O. 12—24.) —Seasons of peculiar festivity often terminate in vexation. Wine and jovial company elate the mind, add strength to the passions, and stun the voice of reason and conscience. On such occasions caprice generally dictates the conduct; propriety and decorum are often disregarded; unreasonable claims are started, or projects formed; and the eagerness of men's spirits ill brooks contradiction or affront, while it disposes to give them. Thus anger [and lust are] excited and exasperated; and discords, revenge, duels, and murders, are the frequent consequences!—Let it also be specially noted, that superiors, in all cases and circumstances, should be careful not to command what may reasonably be disobeyed; for this must weaken their authority, and prove a temptation to inferiors; yet these ought never to persist in a refusal, except when it is really a point of conscience towards God. (Rom. 13: 1—7.) Surely, proper domestic subordination may be effected by other means, beside severe laws, divorces, and measures more pernicious than the evil they are intended to remedy!—Let us be on our guard against every incentive to our passions; watching and praying against wrath, pride, and self-will, as well as sensuality. SCOTT

NOTES.

CHAP. II. V. 1. Under color of ascribing infallibility to the sovereign, and thus flattering his pride; this restriction [of not revoking an edict] perpetually exposed him, in his unguarded hours, to be deluded into the most pernicious measures; and would not so much as allow him to remedy the injustice, or impolicy, into which he had been betrayed, when reflection and experience had made him sensible of error. (3:3—13. 9:1—16. Dan. 6:12—17.) And this was the more absurd and dangerous in its nature and effects, if they may be depended on, who inform us, that the Persian monarchs, and their counsellors, commonly framed their edicts at feasts, and when they were drinking. (3:12—15.) SCOTT.

Verses 2—4.

It is uncertain, whether this was the project of the seven counsellors before mentioned. If he had been greatly desirous of Vashti's company, the law of the Medes and Persians would scarcely have prevented him from recalling her. This will appear by the following instance:—Cambyses, king of Persia, having conceived a violent passion for his own sister, inquired of his counsellors whether it was lawful for him to marry her? And they, dreading the effects of his resentment if they opposed his will, answered, that there was no law in Persia, by which a man was allowed to marry his sister, but that it was lawful for the king of Persia to do what he pleased.—It must also be noted, that though the king could not legally reverse the decree he had signed and sealed; yet he might put to death the counsellors, who induced him to ratify it. (7:7—10. 8:8. Dan. 6:24.) SCOTT.

Verses 5—7.

Mordecai, though a Benjamite, is repeatedly called the Jew: for the whole nation was now called after Judah.—Some of Mordecai's ancestors, (probably Kish,) had been carried to Babylon with Jeconiah; (2 K. 24:8—16.) and the family afterwards settled at Shushan. But it seems they were diminished in number, or impoverished: so that Mordecai's own cousin had been left an orphan.—The conjectures of several learned men concerning her, taken from rather a slight similarity of names between her and the wives of some of the Persian kings, mentioned in pagan historians, seem entirely groundless; as the dissimilarity of character, and indeed all other circumstances, vastly preponderate against them. ID.

(7.) Hadassah.] 'A myrtle, in Chal. This was probably her first or Babylonish name. When she came to the Persian court, she was called Esther, aster, or sitara, which signifies a star in Persian: the name is undoubtedly Persian.' Dr. A. CLARKE.

tivity which had been carried away with [l] Jeconiah king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away.

7 And he [*] brought up [n] Hadassah, that is Esther, [o] his uncle's daughter: for she had neither father nor mother, and the maid was [†] fair and beautiful; whom Mordecai, when her father and mother were dead, [p] took for his own daughter.

8 ¶ So it came to pass, when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were gathered together unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of [q] Hegai, that Esther was brought also unto the king's house, to the custody of Hegai, keeper of the women.

9 And the maiden pleased him, and [r] she obtained kindness of him; and he speedily gave her [s] her things for purification, with [‡] such things as belonged to her, and seven maidens which were meet to be given her, out of the king's house: and he [§] preferred her and her maids unto the best place of the house of the women.

10 Esther [t] had not showed her people nor her kindred: [u] for Mordecai had charged her that she should not show it.

11 And Mordecai [x] walked every day before the court of the women's house, to know [‖] how Esther did, and what should become of her.

12 ¶ Now when every maid's turn was come [y] to go in to king Ahasuerus, after that she had been twelve months, according to the manner of the women, (for so were the days of their purifications accomplished, to wit, [z] six months with oil of myrrh, and six months with sweet odors, and with other things for the purifying of the women;)

13 Then thus came every maiden unto the king; whatsoever she desired was given her, to go with her out of the house of the women, unto the king's house.

14 In the evening she went, and on the morrow she returned into the second house of the women, to the custody of Shaashgaz, the king's chamberlain, which kept the concubines: she came in unto the king no more, except the king [a] delighted in her, and that [b] she were called by name.

15 ¶ Now when the turn of Esther, the daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai, [c] who had taken her for his daughter, was come to go in unto the king, she required nothing but what Hegai the king's chamberlain, the keeper of the women, appointed. And [d] Esther obtained favor in the sight of all them that looked upon her.

16 So Esther was taken unto king Ahasuerus into his house royal in [e] the tenth month, which is the month Tebeth, in [f] the seventh year of his reign.

17 And the king loved Esther above all the women, and she obtained grace and favor [¶] [] in his sight more than all the virgins; [g] so that he set the royal crown upon her head, and made her queen instead of Vashti.

18 Then the king [h] made a great feast unto all his princes and his servants, even Esther's feast; and he made a [††] release to the provinces, and [i] gave gifts according to the state of the king.

19 And when [k] the virgins were gathered together the second time, then Mordecai [l] sat in the king's gate.

20 Esther [m] had not yet showed her kindred, nor her people; as Mordecai had charged her: for Esther did the commandment of Mordecai, to that pious instance of charity, that many who have taken care of the education of orphans, have lived to see the good fruit of their care and pains, abundantly to their comfort. Lightfoot thinks this is that Mordecai, Ezra 2: 2. who went to Jerusalem with the first, and helped forward the settlement of his people, until the building of the temple was stopped, and then went back to court, to see what service he could do them there. How tender Mordecai was of her, as of an own child, v. 11. Let those whose relations are thus cast on them by Providence, be thus kindly affectioned and solicitous. How respectful she was to him; though in relation his equal, yet in age and dependence being his inferior, she honored him as her father, did his commandment, v. 20. This is an example to orphans; if they fall into the hands of those who love them and take care of them, let them make suitable returns of duty and affection. Mordecai did not bid her deny her country, nor tell a lie to conceal her parentage; but she must not proclaim it: all truths are not to be spoken at all times, though an untruth is not to be spoken at any time.

dignity, do not consider the custom of those times and countries. Every one the king took to his bed, was married to him, and was his wife of a lower rank, as Hagar was Abraham's; so that if Esther had not been made queen, the sons of Jacob need not say he dealt with their sister as with a harlot. Concerning Esther, observe,

1. Her original and character, v. 7. When those whose unhappiness it is to be thus deprived of their parents, in their childhood, yet afterwards come to be eminently pious and prosperous, we ought to notice it to the glory of that God, his grace and providence, who has taken it among the titles of his honor, to be a Father of the fatherless. Her wisdom and virtue were her greatest beauty, but it is an advantage to a diamond to be well set, v. 7. Mordecai, her cousin-german, was her guardian, brought her up, and took her for his own daughter. The LXX say, he designed to make her his wife; if so, he was to be praised that he opposed not her better preferment. Let God be acknowledged in raising up friends for the fatherless and motherless; let it be an encouragement l 2 K. 24:14,15. 2 Chr. 36:9,10. Jehoiachin. Jer. 22:24,28. Coniah. 24:1.

* Heb. nourished. Eph. 6:4. n Dan. 1:6,7.
o 15. Jer. 32:7—12.
† Heb. fair of form and good of countenance. 1:11.
p Gen. 48:5. 2 Cor. 6:18. 1 John 3:1.
q 3. Hege.
r Gen. 39:21. 1 K. 8:50. Ezra 7:6. Neh. 2:8. Ps. 106:46. Prov. 16:7. Dan. 1:9. Acts 7:10.
s 3,12.
‡ Heb. her portions.
§ Heb. changed her.
t 3:8. 4:13,14. 7:4. Matt. 10:16. u 7,20. Eph. 6:1.
x 13,14.
‖ Heb. the peace of Esther. Gen. 37: 14. 1 Sam. 17:18. Acts 15:36.
y 1 Thes. 4:4,5.
z Prov. 7:17. Cant. 3:6. Is. 57:9. Luke 7:37,38.
a 4:11. Gen. 34:19. Is. 62:4,5.
b Is. 45:4.
c 7.
d Cant. 6:9. Acts 7:10.
e 3:9.
f 1:3. Ezra 7:8.
¶ Or, kindness.
 Heb. before him.
g 4:14. 1 Sam. 2:8. Ps. 75:6,7. 113: 7,8. Ez. 17:24. Luke 1:48—52.
h 1:3—5. Gen. 29:22. Judg. 14:10—17. Cant. 3:11. 5:1. Matt. 22:2. Luke 14:8. Rev. 19:9.
†† Heb. rest.
i 9:22. 1 Sam. 25:8. Neh. 8:12. Rev. 11:10.
k 3,4.
l 21. 3:2,3. 5:13.
m 10.

Verses 8—10.

As Mordecai was so scrupulous in respect of Haman, (3:2—5.) it has been wondered, how he could consent to Esther's becoming the wife, or concubine, of a heathen prince, contrary to the law of Moses. But it does not seem to have been left to the choice, either of Mordecai or of Esther. 'The word we translate "was brought," may be rendered was taken; and that by force, as the word sometimes signifies; and as the former Targum here explains it, She was brought by violence.' Patrick.—If Esther had made known her nation, it might have interfered with her advancement to the rank of queen, as the Jews were generally despised; but she could not have avoided becoming one of Ahasuerus's concubines. Polygamy was connived at, by the Mosaic law; so that the situation of a concubine was not deemed dishonorable, or unlawful: and in her peculiar circumstances, the ritual law of not giving their daughters to those of another nation, might not be thought obligatory.—The conduct of Providence, however, should be chiefly noticed; though it does not appear that either Mordecai or Esther could have acted otherwise, had they been inclined. Scott. How few too, dare now brave the 'public opinion,' of their family, order, town, state, country! Ed.

Verses 15—17.

Ezra obtained his commission in the former part of this same year, if Artaxerxes were the same as Ahasuerus (Note, Ezra 7.8—10.) and they who think, that Artaxerxes granted the desire of Ezra, through Esther's influence, suppose that Esther had been the favored concubine of the king, residing in his palace a considerable time before she was publicly made and crowned queen, which was in the 10th month of the 7th year of his reign. Scott.

Verse 18.

'The Persian kings gave their queens such a city to buy them clothes, another for their hair, a third for their necklaces, a fourth for their pearls, &c. Probably, at Esther's request, such cities were released from this queen-gold, as it were.' Dr. A. Clarke.

Verses 19, 20.

Probably virgins had also been collected before Vashti was made queen; and to this the phrase 'second time' refers. Scott.

(19.) King's gate.] 'The vassals of our ancient feudal lords met in the court of the castle: hence the expression, courts of princes. In the east, affairs are transacted at the gate of the seraglio.' Fleury. 'Hence the Turkish expression for their government, 'Baba humayoon,' 'the lofty gate,' which we translate 'Sublime Porte,' and use in the same sense as the Turks. 'The master of every family in the east even transacts his business and receives visits at his gate, not even the nearest relations advancing further, except on extraordinary occasions. Hence, at all the principal houses are porches or gateways, provided with seats.' Shaw. See 2 Sam. 11:9, &c. Ed.

like as when she was brought up with him.

21 ¶ In those days, while Mordecai sat in the king's gate, two of the king's chamberlains, [n] Bigthan and Teresh, of those which kept the [*] door, were wroth, [o] and sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

22 And [p] the thing was known to Mordecai, who told it unto Esther the queen; and [q] Esther certified the king thereof in [r] Mordecai's name.

23 And when inquisition was made of the matter, it was found out: therefore they were both [s] hanged on a tree: and it was written in [t] the book of the chronicles before the king.

CHAP. III.

Haman is advanced by the king, who commands his servants to bow down to him; but Mordecai refuses to do it, 1, 2. Haman, being informed, in revenge, purposes to destroy the whole Jewish nation, 3—6. He chooses a day, by casting lots, for executing his purpose, 7. By calumniating the Jews, he obtains a decree from the king to extirpate the nation, and publishes it through all the provinces, 8—15.

AFTER these things did king Ahasuerus [a] promote Haman, the son of Hammedatha the [b] Agagite, and advanced him, and set his seat [c] above all the princes that were with him.

2 And all [d] the king's servants, that were in the king's gate, [e] bowed, and reverenced Haman: for the king had so commanded concerning him. But Mordecai [f] bowed not, nor did him reverence.

n 6:2. Bigthana. * Heb. threshold.
o 2 Sam. 4:5,6. 16:11. 1 K. 15:25—27. 16:9. 2 K. 9:22—24. 12:20. 21:23. Ps. 144:10. p Ec. 10:20. Acts 23:12—22.
q 6:2. Rom. 11:33.
r Phil. 2:4.
s 5:14. 7:10. Gen. 40:19,22. Deut. 21: 22,23. Josh. 8:29. t 6:1,2. Mal. 3:16.
a 7:6. Ps. 12:8. Prov. 29:2. b Num. 24:7. 1 Sam. 15:8.
c 1:14. Gen. 41:40,55. Ezra 7:14. Dan. 6:2.
d 2:19,21.
e Gen. 41:43. Phil. 2:10.
f 1. Ex. 17:14,16. Deut. 25:19. 1 Sam. 15:3. Ps. 15:4.

2. Her preferment, v. 17. This was done in the king's 7th year; (v. 16.) Vashti was divorced in his 3d, (ch. 1: 3.) so he was 4 years without a queen. He graced the solemnity of her coronation with a royal feast, (v. 18.) He also granted a release to the provinces, either a remittance of the taxes in arrear, or an act of grace for criminals; as Pilate, at the feast, released a prisoner. This was to add to the joy. Esther still did the commandment of Mordecai, as when she was brought up with him, v. 20. He sat in the king's gate, the height of his preferment, he was a porter, or door-keeper, of the court; whether he had this place before, or Esther obtained it for him, we are not told; but there he sat contentedly, and aimed no higher. Esther's observance of him evinced an humble and grateful disposition; it is a great ornament and praise to those that are advanced, to remember their benefactors, to retain the impressions of their good education, to be diffident of themselves, willing to take advice, and thankful for it.

V. 21—23. This good service of Mordecai, in discovering a plot against the king's life, is here recorded, because the mention of it will again occur to his advantage. No step is yet taken toward Haman's design of the Jews' destruction, but several steps are taken toward God's design of their deliverance, and this for one. Probably, the servants, v. 21. resented some affront they thought he had given them, or some injury he had done them. Who would be great, to be so much the object of envy? Who arbitrary, to be so much the object of ill-will? Princes, above any mortals, have their souls continually in their hands, and often go down slain to the pit, especially those who caused terror in the land of the living. Mordecai got notice of their treason, how, does not appear, and, by Esther's means discovered it to the king, hereby confirming her in, and recommending himself to, the king's favor. This ought to warn all traitors against all seditious practices, though they presume on secrecy, a bird of the air shall carry the voice. It ought also to be an instruction and example to good subjects, not to conceal any bad design they know of against the prince or the public pence, for it is confederating with public enemies. The traitors were hanged, as they deserved, but not till it was, on search, fully proved against them, (v. 23.) and the whole matter was recorded in the king's journals, with a particular remark, that Mordecai was the man who discovered the treason.

CHAP. III. V. 1—6. I. Here is Haman advanced by the prince, and adored, thereupon, by the people. He was an Amalekite, says Josephus, probably descended of Agag, a common name of the princes of Amalek, Num. 24: 7.

II. Mordecai adheres to principle with a bold and daring resolution, and therefore refuses to reverence Haman, as the rest of the king's servants did, v. 2. He was urged to it, for his life, by his friends, especially considering Haman's insolence, v. 3. but in vain; he told them plainly, a Jew could not, in conscience, do it: doubtless, his refusal was commonly attributed to pride, envy, or a seditious spirit. Those that would make the best of it, looked upon it as his weakness, or want of breeding, called it a humor, and a piece of affected singularity; none scrupled it, except Mordecai; yet his refusal was pious, conscientious, and pleasing to God, for a Jew's religion forbade him, 1. To give such extravagant honors as were required, to any mortal, [comp. note, Ezra 1: 3.] especially so wicked a man as Haman. In the apocryphal chs. of this book, (ch. 13: 12—14.) Mordecai, thus appeals to God; Thou knowest, Lord, that it was neither in contempt nor pride, nor for any desire of glory, that I did not bow down to proud Haman, for I could have been content with good will, for the salvation of Israel, to kiss the soles of his feet; but I did this, that I might not prefer the glory of man above the glory of God, neither will I worship any but Thee. 2. He especially thought it an injustice to his nation, to give such honor to

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Resolutions formed in anger, and executed without deliberation, make work for bitter recollection and repentance. A wise man therefore will not proceed even to punish the guilty, till passion has subsided, and reason resumed her sway.—The depravity of our nature, and the fallibility of our judgment, render it indispensable to our interest and happiness, that we should be allowed to change our sentiments and conduct, and correct our mistakes. God has mercifully placed us under a dispensation, which admits of this: and though many painful effects must follow from transgression, we shall not be ruined by it, if we avail ourselves of this provision. (Ez. 18: 30.)—No one should be too proud, to confess that he has been mistaken: and as this would preclude the absurdity of human laws which must never be repealed or reversed; so it would strike at the root of that self-justifying, pertinacious temper, which induces sinners to neglect the Gospel, and go on in sin.—The servants of mighty monarchs, though themselves princes and nobles, have often stooped to be pimps and parasites, to support their present authority, purchase impunity for past crimes, or procure future and still greater preferment! But how degrading! Even reason, (not to say religion,) could her voice be heard, would command men to moderate and restrain their passions, and to teach them submission by habituating them to brook denial.—How low is our nature sunk, when the gratifications of [the lower propensities of our nature] are the leading pursuits, and the highest felicity, of many millions of rational creatures! when every consideration of decency, equity, and conscience; when domestic comfort, relative duties, and the natural rights of mankind; when even reputation, interest, and health; when life, and the immortal soul itself, are habitually sacrificed to such base and hateful idols! Yet after a prostituted ingenuity has done its utmost, disappointment, vexation, and loathing must ensue: and that man most wisely consults even the enjoyment of this present life, who most exactly obeys the precepts of the divine law.—It is peculiarly useful to consider the providential conduct of God fulfilling his wise, faithful, righteous, and merciful purposes, in the midst of the extravagances occasioned by the mad passions of wicked men. Orphans are often peculiarly favored, to encourage us to entrust our children to his care while we live, and when about to die and leave them. If wealth or kingdoms were good for God's people, they would certainly have them; but prosperity too generally feeds the distempers of corrupt nature, and poverty and obscurity are more advantageous. Even those high stations, which some few believers occupy for the good of their brethren, will be their cross, if not their snare; and their comforts must flow from the same source, and be of the same nature, with those of the poorest Christian; and are generally in more scanty measure.—We ought, however, to be passive in the Lord's hands; and only be careful to avoid sin, and to perform our duty, in whatever station.—Our profession of religion, and many things relating to it, must often be regulated and timed according to circumstances; so that we not only need to regard the advice of wise and experienced Christians, but daily to ask for that wisdom which is from above, or we shall be liable to perpetual mistakes. SCOTT.

Verses 21—23.

Many conjectures have been formed of the cause of this conspiracy, and the manner of its discovery; but curiosity alone is concerned in such inquiries, which after all end in uncertainty. The transaction itself was nowise uncommon; but the event showed the hand of God in it, in a most remarkable manner, and for the most important purposes. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. III. V. 2. As Mordecai evidently acted conscientiously, and was accepted by the Lord, we must not ascribe his behavior to pride, moroseness resentment, or envy. It is well known, that the Persian monarchs required an obeisance, which even the Greeks often refused or evaded, as express adoration: and it is not at all unlikely, that Ahasuerus required a similar act of adoration to be offered to his favorite.

3 Then the king's servants, which were in the king's gate, said unto Mordecai, [g] Why transgressest thou the king's commandment?

4 Now it came to pass, [h] when they spake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, [i] that they told Haman, to see whether Mordecai's matters would stand: for [k] he had told them that he was a Jew.

5 And when Haman saw [l] that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman [m] full of wrath.

6 And he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had showed him the people of Mordecai: wherefore Haman [n] sought to destroy all the Jews, that were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

7 ¶ In [o] the first month, that is, the month Nisan, [p] in the twelfth year of king Ahasuerus, [q] they cast Pur, that is, the lot, before Haman from day to day, and from month to month, to the twelfth month, that is, the month [r] Adar.

8 And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people [s] scattered abroad, and dispersed among the people, in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and [t] their laws are diverse from all people, neither keep they the king's laws: therefore it is not * for the king's profit to suffer them.

9 If it please the king, let it be written † that they may be destroyed; and I will ‡ pay [u] ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business, to bring it into the king's treasuries.

g Ex. 1:17. Matt. 15:2,3. h Gen. 39:10.
i Dan. 3:8,9. 6:13.
k Ezra 1:3. Dan. 3:12,16—18,23—30.

an Amalekite, one of that devoted nation with whom God had sworn He would have perpetual war, (Ex. 17:16.) and concerning which He had given that solemn charge, (Deut. 25:17.) Remember what Amalek did. Though religion does by no means destroy good manners, but teaches us to render honor to whom honor is due, yet it is the character of a citizen of Zion, that not only in his heart, but in his eyes, such a vile person as Haman, is contemned, Ps. 15:4. Let those who are governed by principles of conscience, be steady and resolute, however censured or threatened, as Mordecai was.

III. Haman meditates revenge. Some, who hoped thereby to curry favor with Haman, noticed Mordecai's rudeness, waiting to see whether he would bend or break, v. 4. Haman then observed it himself, and was full of wrath, v. 5. it makes his proud spirit rage, and fret, and boil, within him, [note 5:9.] Mordecai must die; it is as penal, in this court, not to worship Haman, as it was in Nebuchadnezzar's, not to worship the golden image; but his single life is nothing towards a satisfaction; thousands of innocent and valuable lives must be sacrificed too; all Mordecai's people for his sake, because his being a Jew, was the reason he did not reverence Haman. Herein appear Haman's intolerable pride, insatiable cruelty, and the ancient antipathy of an Amalekite to the Israel of God. I suppose, he includes those that were returned to their own land, for that was now a province of the kingdom, Ps. 83:4. Nero's barbarous wish is his, that they had all but one neck.

V. 7—15. Here we are told how Haman obtained leave and commission to cut off all the Jews.

1. He makes a false and malicious representation of the Jews, and their character, to the king, v. 8. He would have him believe the Jews were a despicable, dangerous people, and that it was not for his credit nor safety to harbor them. A certain people, he says, as if nobody knew whence they came, and what they were; not incorporated, but scattered and dispersed as fugitives and vagabonds, inmates in all countries, the burden and scandal of the places where they live; 'having laws and usages of their own, and conforming not to the statutes of the kingdom, and the customs of the country; who therefore may be looked upon as disaffected to the government, and likely to infect others with their singularities, which may end in a rebellion.' It is no new thing for the best of men to have such invidious characters given of them; if it be no sin to kill, it is no sin to belie them.

2. He bids high for leave to destroy them all, v. 9. He knew there were many that hated them, and would willingly fall upon them, if they might but have a commission; and, as for the rest, he will make the king a present of 10,000 talents, which, he thought, would obviate the strongest objection, that the government must needs sustain loss in its revenues, by the destruction of so many subjects. Proud and malicious men will not mind expense to gratify their revenge; yet, no doubt, Haman knew how to reimburse himself, out of their spoil his janizaries were to seize for him, (v. 13.)

6:30—23,26—28. Jon. 1:9.
l 2. 5:9.
m 1:12. Job 5:2. Prov. 12:16. 19:19. 21:24. 27:3,4. Dan. 3:19. n Ps. 83:4. Rev. 12:12—17.
o Neh. 2:1.
p 1:3. 2:16.
q 9:24—26. Prov. 16:33. Ex. 21:21,32. Matt. 27:35.
r 9:1,5,17—19,21. Ezra 6:15. s Lev. 26:33. Deut. 4:27. 30:3. 32: 26. Neh. 1:8. Jer. 50:17. Ez. 6:8. 11:16. Zech. 7:14. John 7:35. Jam. 1:1. 1 Pet. 1:1. t Ezra 4:12—15. Acts 16:20,21. 17:6, 7. 24:5. 28:22.
* Heb. meet, or, equal, for the king to, &c.
† Heb. to destroy them.
‡ Heb. weigh. Gen. 23:16.
u Matt. 18:24.

'To bow the knee or the body, to all great persons, was a common respect; for which there needed not a particular command, . . . with respect of Haman. . . . There was therefore some kind of divine honor intended, such as was paid to the Persian kings themselves, to whom the Greeks would not pay this sort of respect, because it was accounted divine. And the word reverence imports something beyond bowing; which was falling flat on their faces to the ground.' [Comp. note, 2 Chr. 33:7.] Patrick.—The original words may be rendered, 'They kneeled down and fell prostrate before Haman,' or, they worshipped him: and perhaps the two expressions are never united, except when adoration is expressly meant, and they are in this narrative uniformly united. (Matt. 4:9. Acts 10:25, 26. Rev. 22:8, 9.)—Most probably the homage required by Haman was idolatrous: and we may reasonably conclude, that the king himself dispensed with the customary ceremonies, out of regard to the conscientious scruples of those few Jews, who were admitted into his presence, and whom he peculiarly favored; but that Haman, despising Mordecai and hating his people, was not so condescending. It does not appear that Mordecai was blamed by any of the Jews, even amidst the most imminent danger to which the whole nation was exposed. (Dan. 3:1—7.) SCOTT.

Reverenced Haman.] '"Gave him divine honors," as to a deity, for such were given to the kings of Persia, and might be to their favorites.' Gill. Clarke. Nor did him reverence, either from the nature of the homage required, or because he was an Amalekite. So Boothr. and many others. See Ex. 17:14. 1 Sam. 15:1, 2. Notes, Matt. 2:9. 2 Chr. 33:7, &c. ED.

Verse 3—5.

These servants first remonstrated with Mordecai for his disobedience to the king: but when he disregarded them, they desired to know whether 'his matters would stand; for he had told them he was a Jew.' This proves, that he vindicated himself on the ground of his religion: and it implies, that he expected Ahasuerus would admit this plea; which favors the supposition, that Persian kings used to excuse their Jewish servants from such obeisance, as they could not conscientiously render. SCOTT.

(4.) Whether Mordecai's matters would stand.] 'Whether he and the Jews would be allowed to observe, with impunity, their singular customs.' LAWSON.

Verse 6.

Haman was a man of a weak and vain-glorious mind, and intoxicated with prosperity, as the whole history shows. It may fairly be concluded that his device was not his own; but was suggested by that ambitious spirit, who aspires to be 'the god of this world,' who has been 'a murderer from the beginning,' and whose enmity to the 'Seed of the woman,' to Christ and his church, is communicated to all his children. In this view, it was a plan worthy of the vast capacity, enmity, malice, ambition, and desperation of that arch rebel against his Maker. SCOTT. Human life is ever of little account with despots and conquerors. ED.

Verse 7.

The event of the lot showed the vanity of Haman's oracles or auguries, and illustrated the doctrine of a particular Providence over all the affairs of men, and the care of God over his church. SCOTT.

Verse 8.

Diverse.] 'One great purpose of many of their peculiar rites and customs was, to keep the Jews separate from the heathen. These frequently drew reproaches upon them. Tacitus describes them as a people whose religious rites were contrary to all the world beside.' COLLYER.

Verse 9.

10,000 talents.] As a despotism paralyses the true sources of national wealth, its tyrants are still obliged to support their extravagant ostentation by selling justice, power, or aught else that ambition, passion, or revenge covets, to the highest bidder: and he calculates in his turn to pay the price and enrich himself by every method of extortion or injustice. Compare the present state and system of Turkey, Persia, Egypt, &c. Can we wonder that this system should desolate the fairest portions of those countries; and make a barren wilderness where the gifts of nature have been most lavishly bestowed? 'The sum is 3,750,000*l.* Brerewood. 3,415,000*l.* Sutcliffe. 2,100,000*l.* Prideaux. 2,119,000*l.* DR. A. Clarke.' COND. COMM. 'We cannot avoid being struck by the prodigious abundance, in Central Asia, of the precious metals, particularly gold, whether in ancient or modern times. The thrones of their princes, [cuts, 1 K. 10:18, 19. Esth. 1:2.] the furniture of their palaces, &c. especially of the table, [1:7.] &c. from Solomon down, have been fashioned of massive gold: weapons are thus decorated, and dresses or carpets embroidered with gold. [1:6.] The descriptions given both by Xenophon in ancient, and Chardin in modern times, of the riches and splendor of the Persian kings, so closely resemble each other, that they would seem to have proceeded from the pens of contemporaries. This splendor was not a prerogative confined to the monarchs alone, the satraps were comparatively as wealthy as their masters, and their inferior officers again in the like proportion. (Herod.) We meet also with occasional instances of private individuals pos-

10 And the king [x] took his ring from his hand, and gave it unto Haman, the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the Jews' [*] enemy.

11 And the king said unto Haman, The silver is given to thee, the people also, [y] to do with them as it seemeth good to thee.

12 Then were the king's [†] scribes called on the thirteenth day of the first month, and there was written according to all that Haman had commanded, unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province, [z] according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language; [a] in the name of king Ahasuerus was it writ[t]en, and [b] sealed with the king's ring.

13 And the letters were sent [c] by posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to cause to perish, all Jews, [d] both young and old, little children and women, [e] in one day, even upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar, and to take [f] the spoil of them for a prey.

14 The [g] copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day.

15 The posts went out, being [h] hastened by the king's commandment, and the decree was given in Shushan the palace. And the king and Haman [i] sat down to drink; but [k] the city Shushan was perplexed.

CHAP. IV.

Mordecai and the Jews fast, and mourn exceedingly, 1—3. Esther, sending to inquire of Mordecai the reason, is informed of the decree, and required to petition the king for her people, 4—9. She excuses herself by alleging the peril of the attempt: but being shown the consequences, she appoints a fast of three days, and consents to approach the king, though at the hazard of her life, 10—17.

WHEN Mordecai perceived [a] all that was done, Mordecai [b] rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth [c] with ashes, and went out into the midst of the city, and [d] cried with a loud and a bitter cry; and hoped to be not only a saver, but a gainer by the bargain.

3. He obtains what he desired, v. 10, 11. The king took no time to examine; but, as willingly as Haman could wish, gave the Jews into his hands, as lambs to the lion, v. 11. And so little did he consider the loss in his tribute, and Haman's gain in the spoil, that he gave him withal the 10,000 talents. Such implicit confidence likewise had he in Haman, and so perfectly had he abandoned all care of his kingdom, that he gave him his ring, his privy-seal, or sign-manual, [note and cut, Gen. 38: 18.] wherewith to confirm whatever edict he pleased to draw up. Miserable is a kingdom at the disposal of such a head as this, which has one ear only, and a nose to be led by, but neither eyes nor brains, nor scarcely a tongue of its own.

4. He then consults his soothsayers, to find a lucky day for the massacre, v. 7. Esther had been queen about 5 years; and, as if he doubted not but Heaven would favor his design, and further it, he refers it to the lot, i. e. to the Divine Providence, to choose the day for him; but that, in the decision, proved a better friend to the Jews; for the lot fell on the 12th month, so that Mordecai and Esther had 11 months to turn them in, to defeat the design; or, if they could not, space would be left for the Jews to escape. Haman, perhaps fearing the enterprise as hazardous, submits to the laws of his superstition, and will not anticipate the supposed fortunate day, no, not even to gratify his impatient revenge. This may shame us, who often acquiesce not in the directions and disposals of Providence, when they cross our desires and intentions. He that believeth the lot, much more the promise, will not make haste. But God's wisdom serves its own purposes by men's folly.

5. The bloody edict is, hereupon, drawn up, signed, and published, v. 12—14. No crime is laid to the Jews' charge; it is not pretended they were obnoxious to public justice, nor is any condition offered, upon which they might have their lives spared, but die they must, without mercy Thus have the church's enemies thirsted for the blood of the saints and the martyrs of Jesus, and drunk of it till they have been perfectly intoxicated, (Rev. 17: 6.) yet still they cry, Give, give. This cruel order is ratified with the king's seal, directed to the king's lieutenants, and drawn up in the king's name, yet he knows not what he does. Posts are sent out, with all expedition, to carry copies to the respective provinces, v. 15. How restless the malice of the church's enemies! it will spare no pains, lose no time.

6. The different temper of the court and city, hereupon. The court was very merry; the king and Haman sat down to drink, perhaps to drink confusion to all the Jews. Haman was afraid, lest the king's conscience should smite him; to prevent which, he engrossed him to himself, and kept him drinking: this cursed method many take to drown their convictions, and harden their own and others' hearts in sin. The city was very sad; (and the other cities of the kingdom, no doubt, when they heard it;) Shushan was perplexed; not only the Jews, but all their neighbors that had any justice or compassion, grieved to see their king so abused, and wickedness in the place of judgment, (Eccl. 3: 16.) to see men that lived peaceably, treated so barbarously; and the consequences to themselves, they knew not. But the king and Haman cared for none of these things. It is absurd and impious to indulge in mirth and pleasure, when the church is in distress, and the public perplexed.

CHAP. IV. V. 1—4. We left God's Isaac bound upon the altar, ready to be sacrificed; and the enemy in triumph; here we have the general sorrow among the Jews, on the publishing of Haman's bloody edict.

1. Mordecai cried bitterly, rent his clothes, and x 8:2,8. Gen. 41:42.

* Or, oppressor. 7:6.
y Ps. 73:7. Jer. 26:14. 40:4. Luke 23:25.
† Or, secretaries.
z 1:22. 8:9. 9:27.
a 1 K. 21:8. Dan. 6:8,12,15.
b 8:2,8.
c 8:10,14. 2 Chr. 30:6. Job 9:25. Jer. 51:31. Rom. 3:15.
d 1 Sam. 15:3. 22:19.
e 8:12—14. Jam. 2:13.
f 8:11. 9:10. Is. 10:6.
g 8:13,14.
h Prov. 1:15. 4:16.
i Hos. 7:5. Am. 6:6. John 16:20. Rev. 11:10.
k 4:16. 8:15. Prov. 29:2.
a 3:8—13.
b 2 Sam. 1:11. Job 1:20. Jon. 3:4—9. Acts 14:14.
c 3. Josh. 7:6. 2 Sam. 13:19. Job 2:8. 42:6. Is. 58:5. Ez. 27:30. Dan. 9:3. Matt. 11:21.
d Gen. 27:34. Is. 15:4. 22:4. Ez. 21:6. 27:31. Mic. 1:8. Zeph. 1:14. Rev. 18:17—19.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The vanity and comparative worthlessness of earthly dignities and possessions are shown, by their being so commonly lavished on the basest of the human species; 'God having provided better things' for the objects of his special love.—The poison of the old serpent, infused by his first temptation, 'Ye shall be as gods,' still rankles in the human heart; and when the pride of man is emboldened by great prosperity, it is capable of openly affecting the honor and worship, which belong to God alone! (Gen. 3: 4, 5. Ez. 28: 2—5. P. O. 1—10. Dan. 6: 6—9. Acts 12: 20—23.) We are all by nature idolatrous, and self is the most favorite of our idols: and whilst we admire and glory in our own supposed excellences, we delight that others should join the incense of their adulation. And when this vast ambition occupies a narrow mind, and the possessor climbs the pinnacle of earthly grandeur, he forgets he is a man! What cause have we to be thankful for external restraints to our headstrong passions; and how ought we to watch and pray against pride, anger, malice, and every propensity! for if left under the power of them, we cannot conceive how far they would hurry us.—Let us also remember to be thankful for a limited, mild, and equitable government; and to beg of God to extend the same blessing to all other nations; with all the blessings of our holy religion, and that liberty with which Christ makes his people free.—The world, as lying in wickedness, must hate the people of God, who bear his image and do his will: but they will be peculiarly obnoxious to tyrants; as they must refuse unreserved compliance with their mandates and humors; being the subjects of another kingdom, and governed by laws diverse from, nay opposite to, their favorite maxims and pursuits. Whatever mere professors may be, true Christians are the best subjects under every government: not only because they are more peaceable, honest, and industrious than their neighbors; and conscientiously pay tribute, and render obedience in all things lawful; but because their examples and conversation edify many, and their prayers bring down a blessing on the land in which they live in peace. No acquisitions of wealth therefore could compensate the loss of them, even in a political view; and without bringing into the account the enormous load of national guilt, which persecution rapidly accumulates.

SCOTT.

---

sessed of immense wealth; (Herod.) and even a pastoral nation of E. Asia, (the Massagetæ.) had most of its utensils in gold. (Herod.) . . . The best of every country was considered as the property of the king, and was delivered to him by the rulers of the provinces; and as by these means provisions of all sorts were accumulated at the royal residence from every quarter of the empire, there necessarily reigned there an abundance and luxury which corrupted the morals of the court, and introduced those habits of waste and sensuality [v. 15.] for which the Persians were notorious.' Researches, &c. Persians. HEEREN. ED.

Verse 13.

Posts.] 'Cyrus originally established couriers, places for post-horses on all the high roads, and offices where they might deliver their packets to each other. This they did, night and day, faster than cranes can fly.' XENOPHON.

2 And came even before the king's gate: for none might enter into the king's gate clothed with sackcloth.

3 And [a] in every province, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, there was [f] great mourning among the Jews, and fasting, and [g] weeping, and wailing; and [*] many lay in sackcloth and ashes.

4 So Esther's maids and her [†] chamberlains came and told it her. Then was the queen exceedingly grieved; and she sent raiment to clothe Mordecai, and to take away his sackcloth from him; [h] but he received it not.

5 Then called Esther for Hatach, one of the king's chamberlains, whom he had [‡] appointed to attend upon her, and gave him a commandment to Mordecai, [i] to know what it was, and why it was.

6 So Hatach went forth to Mordecai unto the street of the city, which was before the king's gate.

7 And Mordecai told him of [j] all that had happened unto him, and of the sum of the money that Haman had promised to pay to the king's treasuries for the Jews, to destroy them.

8 Also he gave him [k] the copy of the writing of the decree, that was given at Shushan to destroy them, to show it unto Esther, and to declare it unto her, and [l] to charge her that she should go in unto the king, [m] to make supplication unto him, and [n] to make request before him for her people.

9 And Hatach came, and told Esther the words of Mordecai.

10 Again Esther spake unto Hatach, and gave him commandment unto Mordecai;

11 All the king's servants, and the people of the king's provinces, do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into [o] the inner court, who is not called, there is [p] one law of his to put him to death, except such to whom [q] the king shall hold out the golden sceptre, that he may live: [r] but I have not been called to come in unto the king these thirty days.

12 And they told to Mordecai Esther's words.

13 Then Mordecai commanded to answer put on sackcloth, v. 1, 2. laying the danger to heart more than any, because he knew Haman's spite was against him primarily, and for his sake the Jews were struck at; therefore, though he did not repent of what some would call his obstinacy, for he persisted in it, (ch. 5: 9.) yet it troubled him greatly, that his people should suffer for his scruples, which perhaps occasioned some of them to reflect on him as too precise. But, being able to appeal to God, that what he did, he did from a principle of conscience, he could with comfort commit his own cause, and that of his people, to Him that judgeth righteously. God will keep those that are exposed by the tenderness of their consciences. The law, [or ridiculous custom still prevalent in the east,] that none might enter into the king's gate in sackcloth, allowed Mordecai to come only before the gate, not to take his place in the gate.

2. All the Jews laid it much to heart, v. 3. denied themselves the comfort of their tables, and of their beds at night. They who, for want of confidence in God, and affection to their own land, had staid in the land of their captivity, when Cyrus gave them liberty to be gone, now perhaps repented their folly, and wished, too late, they had complied with the call of God.

Esther, on a general intimation of Mordecai's trouble, was exceedingly grieved, v. 4. His grief was hers, such a respect did she still retain for him; and the Jews' danger was her distress; for, though a queen, she forgat not her relation to them. Let not the greatest think it below them to grieve for the affliction of Joseph, though themselves anointed with the chief ointments, Am. 6: 6. Esther sent change of raiment to Mordecai, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garments of praise for the spirit of heaviness; but, to make her sensible of the greatness of his grief, and consequently of its cause, he received it not, as one that refused to be comforted.

V. 5—17. So strictly did the laws of Persia confine wives, especially the king's wives, that it was not possible for Mordecai to confer with Esther, but divers messages are here carried between them, by Hatach, appointed to attend her, one, it seems, she could confide in.

I. On Esther's sending to inquire more particularly into Mordecai's grief, he sent her an authentic account of the whole matter, with a charge to intercede, if she had any respect for him, or kindness for the Jewish nation, rectify the misinformations with which the king was imposed on, and set the matter in a true light, not doubting but he would then vacate the decree, v. 7, 8.

II. She sent her case to Mordecai, v. 11. complaining that he put a great hardship on her, in urging her to address the king; gladly would she do the Jews a kindness, but if she must run the hazard of death as a malefactor, she might well say, I pray thee, have me excused, and find some other intercessor.

1. The law was express, all knew it; and it was extremely doubtful whether she should find the king in a good humor, v. 11. This law was made, not so much in prudence, for the greater safety of the king's person, as in pride, that, being seldom seen, and not without great difficulty, he might be adored as a little god. This foolish law made the royal palace little better than a royal prison; the kings themselves could not but become morose, and perhaps melancholy, and so a terror to others, and a burden to themselves. Many have their lives made miserable by their own haughtiness and ill-nature. It was bad for their subjects; what good had they of a king they might never apply to for redress, or appeal to from inferior judges? It is not thus in the court of the King of kings; to the footstool of his throne of grace we may, at any time, come boldly, and be sure of an answer of peace to the prayer of faith. We are welcome, not only into the inner court, but even into the holiest, through the blood of Jesus. It was particularly very uncomfortable for their wives, that there was no proviso in the law to except them, who were bone of their bone, and flesh of their flesh. But perhaps it was wickedly intended as much against them as any other, that the kings might the more freely enjoy their concubines, and Esther knew it. Miserable the kingdom, when the princes framed their laws to serve their lusts.

2. Her case was, at present, very discouraging: Providence so ordered it, that she was under a cloud, the king's affections cooled toward her, she had not been in his presence for thirty days; this was, that her faith and courage might be the more tried, and God's goodness, in the favor she now found with the king notwithstanding, shine the brighter. Probably Haman endeavored by women, as well as wine, to divert the king from thinking of what he had done, and then Esther was neglected, from whom, no doubt, he did what he could to alienate the king, knowing her to be averse to him.

III. Mordecai still insisted; for,

1. The cause was her own, the decree did not except her; and it was certainly her wisdom rather to expose herself to a conditional death from her husband, than to a certain death from her enemy.

2. The cause, one way or other, would certainly be carried, therefore she might safely venture, v. 14. This was the language of a strong faith, when the danger was most threatening. Instruments may fail, but God's covenant will not.

3. If she deserted her friends now, through cowardice and unbelief, she would have reason to fear some judgment from heaven would be the ruin of her and her family, while the rest of the Jews would be preserved. He that by sinful shifts will save his life, and cannot find in his heart to trust God with it in the way of duty, shall lose it in the way of sin.

4. Divine Providence had an eye to this, in bringing her to be queen, 'Who knows whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?' Therefore, (1.) 'Thou art bound in gratitude to do this service for God and his church, else thou dost not answer the end of thine elevation.' (2.) 'Thou

[a] 1:1. 3:12.
[f] 1 Sam. 4:13,14. 11:4. Is. 22:4,5,12. 27:1,3.
[g] Matt. 13:42. 22:13. 25:30.
[*] Heb. sackcloth and ashes were laid under many. Is. 58:5. Dan. 9:3.
[†] Heb. eunuchs. 1:12. 1 Sam. 8:15. Marg. 2 K. 9:32. Is. 56:3. Acts 8: 27.
[h] Gen. 37:35. Ps. 77:2. Jer. 31:15.
[‡] Heb. set before her. 1:10,12.
[i] Rom. 12:15. 1 Cor. 12:26. Phil. 2:4. Heb. 4:15.
[j] 3:2—15.
[k] 3:14,15.
[l] 2:20. 1 Tim. 6:13,17.
[m] Job 9:15. Prov. 18:14,15. Ec. 10:4. Acts 12:20.
[n] 7:3,4. 8:6. Neh. 2:3—5. Prov. 21:1.
[o] 5:1.
[p] Dan. 2:9.
[q] 5:2. 8:4.
[r] 1:19. 2:14. 1 Pet. 3:7.

NOTES.

CHAP. IV. V. 11. It may be supposed, that this law was framed, under the pretext of securing the person of the king from the assaults of conspirators, and of maintaining his dignity; but it would serve also to protect his ministers and favorites from detection, in their oppressions or pernicious measures. For, in general, the king must see with their eyes and hear with their ears, and receive their reports: and if any one would venture to present to him a complaint, petition, appeal, or information, he must do it at the hazard of his life; as the king would seldom call for any person, in opposition to the advice of his counsellors and ministers. SCOTT.

Whosoever, &c.] 'This was the law ever since the reign of Dejoces, king of Media, for the security of the king's person, as Herod. states, and possibly a contrivance of the king's officers to engross him to themselves, all his affairs being transacted through his ministers.' LE CLERC

Verse 13.

Think not—thou shalt escape.] 'The counsellors who ruined V

Esther, [s] Think not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house, more than all the Jews.

14 For, if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, [t] then shall there [u] enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but [v] thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth [x] whether thou art come to the kingdom [y] for such a time as this?

15 ¶ Then Esther bade them return Mordecai this answer,

16 Go, gather together all the Jews that are † present in Shushan, and [z] fast ye for me, and neither [a] eat nor drink, three days, night or day: [b] I also and my maidens will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law: and [c] if I perish, I perish.

17 So Mordecai ‡ went his way, and did according to all that Esther had commanded him.

CHAP. V.

Esther, venturing uncalled before the king, is graciously received; and, being encouraged to make her request, she invites the king and Haman to a banquet, 1—5. Being again asked what was her request, she invites them to another banquet the next day, 6—8. Haman, proud of this distinction, and elated by prosperity, is yet disquieted by Mordecai's neglect, and amidst his vain-glorying, complains of it to his friends and his wife, 9—13. By their advice he erects a gallows for Mordecai's execution the next morning, 14.

NOW it came to pass [a] on the third day, that Esther put on her [b] royal apparel, and stood [c] in the inner court of the king's house, over against the king's house: and the king [d] sat upon his royal throne in the royal house, over against the gate of the house.

2 And it was so, when the king saw Esther the queen standing in the court, that [e] she obtained favor in his sight: and the king held out to Esther [f] the golden sceptre that was in his hand. So Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre.

[s] Prov. 24:10—12. Matt. 16:24,25. John 12:25. Phil. 2:30. Heb. 12:3.
[t] Gen. 22:14. Num. 23:22—24. Deut. 32:26,27,36. 1 Sam. 12:22. Is. 54: 17. Jer. 30:11. 33:24—26. 46:28. Am. 9:8,9. Matt. 16:18. 24:22.
[u] Heb. respiration. Esra 9:8. Job 9: 18.
[v] 2:7,15. Judg. 14:15—18. 15:6.
[x] Gen. 45:4—8. Is. 45:1—6. 49:23. Acts 7:20—36.
[y] 1 Sam. 17:29. 2 K. 19:3. Neh. 6:11.
† Heb. found.
[z] 2 Chr. 20:3. Is. 22:12. Joel 1:14,15. 2:12—17. Jon. 3:4—8.
[a] 5:1. Matt. 12:40. Acts 9:9. 27:33.
[b] Gen. 18:19. Josh. 24:15. Acts 10:7.
[c] Gen. 43:14. 1 Sam. 19:5. 2 Sam. 10:12. Luke 9:24. Acts 20:24. 21: 13. Rom. 16:4. Phil. 2:30
‡ Heb. passed.
[a] 4:16. Matt. 27:64.
[b] 1:11. 8:15. Matt. 10:16. 11:8. 1 Pet. 3:3—5.
[c] 4:11. 6:4.
[d] 1 K. 10:18—20. Luke 22:30. Rev. 3:21.
[e] Gen. 32:28. Neh. 1:11. Ps. 116:1. Prov. 21:1. Acts 7:10. 10:4.
[f] 4:11. 8:4.

Chap. V. Our last news of Haman, left him in his cups; of Esther, left her in tears, fasting and praying. Now this ch. brings in Esther in her joys; smiled on by the king, and honored with his company at her banquet of wine; and Haman on the fret, because he had not Mordecai's reverent salutation, and with great indignation setting up a gallows for him. Thus they that sow in tears, shall reap in joy, but the triumphing of the wicked is short.

V. 1—8. Here is,

I. Esther's bold approach to the king, v. 1. When the fast was finished, she lost no time; but, while the impressions of her devotions were fresh on her spirit, addressed the king. When the heart is enlarged in communion with God, it will be emboldened in doing and suffering for Him. Some think the 3 days' fast was only one whole day, and 2 whole nights, and that this is called 3 days, as Christ's lying in the grave so long is. This exposition is favored by the consideration, that on the 3d day she appeared at court. Resolutions which have difficulties and dangers to break through, should be pursued without delay, lest they cool and slacken. What thou doest, which must be done boldly, do it quickly. She put on her fine clothes, not to please herself, but her husband—so her prayer, in the Apocrypha. Let those whose rank obliges them to wear rich clothes, learn hence to be dead to them, and not make them their adorning.

II. Her favorable reception.

1. The king protected her from the law, assur-

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Public calamities, especially those which oppress the church of God, should more affect our hearts than any private affliction.—Vain is the attempt of man to banish misery from his heart, by any of those varied devices he tries for that purpose. A refuge from the wrath to come is indeed provided; and an effectual support under temporal afflictions, and victory over death itself: but most men content themselves with striving to forget their misery, instead of seeking and securing happiness. Yet the approach of death, as well as its consequences, must be formidable, in proportion as it is unexpected and unprepared for.—We never have any good reason to complain of the Lord's dispensations; though we have frequently cause to bemoan our afflictions, to deprecate the miseries to which we are exposed, and to appeal to Him against our oppressors, persecutors, and tempters: and we are charged to present our daily petitions at his throne of grace, for the whole church of God and all the members of it, according to their several difficulties, trials, and services; as well as for the conversion and salvation of our fellow sinners. As the enemies of the church are instigated by malice to be unwearied in mischief, surely we should be constrained by love to be as unwearied in doing good. But we are prone to shrink from perilous and self-denying services: and to think ourselves sufficiently excused for neglecting an opportunity of important usefulness, if we can truly say, that it would have been embraced at the hazard of liberty or life. Yet, as the disciples of Him who laid down his life for us, we ought also, if properly called to it, 'to lay down our lives for the brethren:' and no labor, loss, or suffering in the way, will justify us in neglecting the duty of our station. Those who are called to stand forth boldly in perilous services, have a right to demand the united prayers of all their brethren. And, in great emergencies and adversities especially, solemn seasons of fasting, humiliation, and prayer are peculiarly useful, to prepare the mind for expecting and receiving deliverance from the mercy of God, in a proper manner. The trembling sinner is often as much afraid of casting himself, without reserve, on the Lord's free mercy, as Esther was of coming before the king. But let him venture, as she did, with earnest prayers and supplications, saying, 'If I perish, I perish,' and he shall certainly succeed. Scott.

---

ti, would not spare an obnoxious alien.' Sutcliffe, in Cond. Comm.

NOTES.

Chap. V. V. 2. Golden sceptre.] 'Xenophon also states that the 3 Then said the king unto her, [s] What wilt thou, queen Esther? and what is thy request? it shall be even given thee [h] to the half of the kingdom.

4 And Esther answered, [i] If it seem good unto the king, let the king and Haman come this day unto [k] the banquet, that I have prepared for him.

5 Then the king said, [l] Cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said. So the king and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared.

6 And [m] the king said unto Esther at the banquet of wine, What is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? even to the half of the kingdom it shall be performed.

7 Then answered Esther, and said, My petition and my request is;

8 If I have found favor in the sight of the king, and if it please the king to grant my petition, and to * perform my request, let the king and Haman come to the banquet that I shall prepare for them, and I will do [n] to-morrow as the king hath said.

9 ¶ Then went Haman forth that day, [o] joyful, and with a glad heart: but when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, that [p] he stood not up, nor moved for him, [q] he was full of indignation against Mordecai.

10 Nevertheless Haman [r] refrained himself: and when he came home, he sent and † called for his friends, and [s] Zeresh his wife.

11 And Haman told them of [t] the glory of his riches, and [u] the multitude of his children, and all the things wherein the king had promoted him, and [x] how he had advanced him above the princes and servants of the king.

12 Haman said moreover, Yea, Esther the queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that she had prepared, but myself; and [y] to-morrow am I invited unto her also with the king.

13 Yet [z] all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate.

g 6. 7:2. 9:12. 1 K. 2:20. 3:5. Matt. 20:20—22. Luke 18:41.
h 6. Mark 6:23.

ed her of safety, and encouraged her address, v. 2, 3. He that had divorced one wife for not coming when sent for, would not kill another for coming when not sent for. God can turn the hearts of the most powerful, the most arbitrary, as He pleases, toward us. Esther feared she should perish, but is promised half a kingdom. God, in his providence, often prevents the fears, and outdoes the hopes, of his people, especially when they venture in his cause. Let us hence infer, as our Savior does from the parable of the unjust judge, an encouragement to pray always, and not faint. Esther came to a proud, imperious man, we come to the God of love and grace; she was not called, we are; the Spirit and the Bride say, Come. She had a law against her, we have a promise, many a promise, in our favor. She had no friend to introduce her, or intercede for her; on the contrary, he that was then the king's favorite, was her enemy: but we have an Advocate with the Father, in whom He is well pleased.

2. All her request at this time, was, that he would come to her banquet, and bring Haman, v. 4, 5. Hereby she would, 1. Intimate how much she valued his favor and company. Whatever she had to ask, that she desired above any thing, and would purchase at any rate. 2. Try how he stood affected to her; for if he should refuse this, it would be to no purpose, as yet, to present her other request. 3. Endeavor to bring him into a pleasant humor, and soften his spirit, to receive with more tenderness the impressions of her complaint. 4. Please him, by making court to Haman his favorite, whose company she knew he loved, and whom she desired to have present when she made her complaint, for she would say nothing of him, but what she durst say to his face. 5. She hoped, at the banquet, to have a more favorable opportunity of presenting her petition. Wisdom is profitable to direct how to manage some men that are hard to deal with.

3. He readily came, and ordered Haman to come, (v. 5.) an indication of the kindness he still retained for her; if he really designed the destruction of her and her people, he would not have accepted. There he renewed his kind inquiry, and his generous promise. The expression, even to the half of the kingdom, is proverbial; by this he assured her, he would deny her nothing in reason. Herod used it, Mark 6: 23.

4. Then Esther thought fit to ask no more than a promise to accept of another treat, the next day, v. 7, 8. intimating that then she would let him know the business. This adjourning of the main petition may be attributed, 1. To Esther's prudence; thus she hoped yet further to ingratiate herself with him. What is hastily asked, is often hastily denied; but what is asked with a pause, deserves to be considered. 2. To God's providence, putting it into Esther's heart to delay her petition a day longer, she knew not why, but God did, that what was to happen that night, might further her design; that Haman might arrive at the highest pitch of malice against Mordecai, and begin to fall before him.

V. 9—14. This account of Haman, is a comment on Prov. 21: 24. Proud and haughty scorner is his name, that deals in proud wrath; never any more answered that name than he, in whom pride and wrath have so much the ascendant. See him,

1. Puffed up with the honor of being invited to Esther's feast, v. 9. Observe with what a high gust he speaks of it, v. 12. Self-admirers and self-flatterers are really self-deceivers. He fancies that the queen, by this repeated invitation, designed his honor, whereas her calling him to the banquet, did but call him to the bar. What magnifying glasses do proud men look at their faces in! And how does the pride of their heart deceive them! Obad. 3.

2. Vexing and fretting at Mordecai's slight, and thereby made uneasy to himself, and all about him. 1. What Mordecai did, (v. 9.) was from a principle of conscience, [note, Ezra, 1: 3.] therefore he persevered in it, and would not cringe to Haman, no not when Esther herself complimented him. He knew God could and would deliver him and his people from Haman's rage, without any such mean and sneaking expedients to mollify him. They that walk in holy sincerity, may walk in holy security, go on in their work, not fearing man. He that walks uprightly, walks surely. 2. Haman can as ill bear this little affront as ever; nay, the higher he is lifted up, the more impatient i 8. Prov. 29:11.

k 8. 3:15. Gen. 27:25. 32:20. Ps. 119:5. 1 Cor. 14:20.
l 6:14.
m 3. 7:2. 9:12. * Heb. do.
n 6:1, &c. Prov. 16:9.
o Job 20:5. Am. 6:12, 13. Luke 6:25. John 16:20. Jam. 4:9. p 3:2. Ps. 15:4. Matt. 10:28.
q 3:5. 1 K. 21:4. Job 31:31. Ps 27:3. Dan. 3:13, 19. Matt. 2:16 Acts 7:54.
r Gen. 43:30, 31. 45:1. 2 Sam. 13:22, 28. Ec. 7:9.
† Heb. caused his friends to come.
s 6:13.
t 1:4. Gen. 31:1. Job 31:24, 25. Ps. 49:6, 16, 17. Is. 10:8. Jer. 9:23, 24. Dan. 4:30. Mark 10:24. Luke 12:15, 20. 1 Tim. 6:17. u 9:7—10. Job 27:14, 15. Hos. 9:13, 14.
x 3:1.
y Job 8:12, 13. 20:5—8. Ps. 37:35, 36. Prov. 7:22, 23. 27:1. Luke 21:34, 35. 1 Thes. 5:3.
z 1 K. 21:4—6. Job 18:4. Ec. 1:2, 14. Phil. 4:11, 12.

kings of Persia wore a golden sceptre.' BURDER. The cut (of a Medo-Persian king) is from a huge doorway of the square columned building, on the right of the platform; cut, 1:2—6. (Niebuhr.) The throne, foot-stool, sceptre, and sacred lotus-cup, 'havan,' (indicating a worshipper of the 'Good Principle,' see Zendavesta,) are doubtless of massive gold; note, 3:9. The attendant eunuch holds the fly-flap or fan, and has his mouth covered, that, according to court etiquette, he may not breathe upon the king: elsewhere an ambassador stands before the king, and also holds his hand upon his mouth.

See Heeren, Porter, &c. ED.

V. 9, 10. Mordecai now 'stood not up nor moved,' even in common respect, to one of such prodigious wickedness; and would thus show that he fearlessly trusted in God. SCOTT. Lest Haman's malice seem incredible to those who do not feel all the force of such vile passions, a modern parallel is given; 'This v.' says Roberts, 'is indeed a graphic sketch of eastern manners. The colors are so lively, so fresh, that they might have been but the work of yesterday. See the native gentleman at the head of his courtly train: he moves along in pompous guise, and all who see him arise from their seats, take off their sandals, and humbly move in reverence to him. To some he gives a graceful wave of the hand; to others not a word or look. Should there be one who neither stands up nor moves to him, his name and abode will be inquired after, and the first opportunity eagerly embraced to glut his revenge.—A Moorman of high bearing, influence, and wealth, rented the pearl fishery of Ondāchy: Muttoo-Chadde-Appa, the proud modeliar of the Dutch governor Van de Graaff's gate, was one day passing along, where the Moorman was seated on his carpet. He arose not, moved not to him; the Modeliar's soul was fired with indignation. He forthwith resolved on his ruin, and, by deeply formed intrigues, too well succeeded. The rent was taken from the Moorman; the money he had advanced to the headman, the officers, the boatmen, the pearl-divers, and others, was lost; his estates were sold; and, to make up the deficiency, he himself was disposed of by auction for 425 rix dollars, and the Modeliar became the purchaser.' ED.

14 Then [a] said Zeresh his wife, and all his friends unto him, [b] Let a * gallows be made of fifty cubits high, and to-morrow [c] speak thou unto the king that Mordecai may be hanged thereon: then [d] go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. And [e] the thing pleased Haman; and [f] he caused the gallows to be made.

CHAP. VI.

The king, unable to sleep, orders the records of the kingdom to be read, 1; and discovering that Mordecai's service had not been rewarded, he considers how to honor him, 2, 3. Haman, coming early to request that Mordecai might be hanged, is himself appointed to confer the highest honors upon him, 4—11. He is extremely cast down, and distressed; his friends and wife predict his ruin; and in this state of mind he is called to attend Esther's banquet, 12—14.

ON [a] that night † could not the king sleep, and he commanded to bring [b] the book of records of the chronicles; and they were read before the king.

2 And it was found written that Mordecai had told of [c] Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the ‡ door, who sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

3 And the king said, [d] What honor and dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, [e] There is nothing done for him.

a 2 Sam. 13:3—5. 1 K. 21:7,25. 2 Chr. 22. 3,4. Mark 6:19—24.
b 7:9.
* Heb. tree.
c 3:8, &c. 6:4.
d 3:15. 1 K. 21:7. Am. 6:4—6. Rev. 11:10.
e 2 Sam. 16:21—23. 17:1—4. Mark 14: 10,11. Acts 23:14,15. Rom. 1:32.
f 7:10. Ps. 7:13—16. 9:15. Prov. 1: 18. 4:16. Rom. 3:15.
a 5:3. Gen. 22:14. 1 Sam. 23:26,27. Is. 41:17. Rom. 11:33.
† Heb. the king's sleep fled away. Dan. 2:1. 6:18.
b 2:23. Mal. 3:16. c 2:21. Bigthan.
‡ Heb. threshold.
d Judg. 1:12,13. 1 Sam. 17:25,26. 1 Chr. 11:6. Dan. 5:7,16,29. Acts 28: 8—10. Gen. 40:23. Ps. 118:8,9. Ec. 9:15.

is he of contempt, and the more enraged at it; yet he refrained himself, v. 10. hoping shortly to see him fall with all the Jews; with much ado, he prevailed with himself to forbear stabbing him. What a struggle had he! Thus thorns and snares are in the way of the froward. It made all his enjoyments sapless; this dead fly spoiled all his precious ointment; he owned it himself, in the presence of his wife and friends, to the everlasting reproach of a proud and discontented mind, that he had no comfort in his estate, preferment, and family, as long as Mordecai lived, and had a place in the king's gate, v. 10—13. Those that are disposed to be uneasy, will never want something or other to be uneasy at. Such are proud men, that though they have much to their mind, if they have not all to their mind, it is as nothing to them. The thousandth part of what Haman had, would serve to make a humble, modest man, as much of happiness as he expects from this world; yet Haman complains as passionately, as if he had been sunk into the lowest degree of poverty and disgrace.

3. Meditating revenge, assisted by his wife and friends, v. 14. Now he will have the speedy execution of Mordecai, to please him at the moment: and, having, as he thinks, made sure the destruction of all the Jews, at the time appointed, he will not think scorn, for the present, to lay hands on Mordecai alone. 1. To please his fancy, they advise him to get a gallows ready, that, the warrant signed, there might be no delay of the execution, so much as to make the gallows. It must be 50 cubits high, as near as might be, for greater disgrace, and to make Mordecai a spectacle to every passer by; it must be before Haman's door, that all might notice it was to the idol of his revenge Mordecai was sacrificed, and to feed his eyes with the sight. 2. To gain his point, they advise him to go early to the king, and get an order to hang Mordecai, which, they doubted not, would be readily granted to one so much the king's favorite, and who had so easily obtained an edict for the destruction of the whole Jewish nation; there needed no feigned suggestion, it was enough to let the king know that Mordecai, in contempt of the king's command, refused to reverence him. Now we leave Haman to go to bed, pleased with the thoughts of seeing Mordecai hanged the next day, and then going merrily to the banquet, not dreaming of handselling his own gallows.

CHAP. VI. V. 1—3. It is a very surprising scene that opens in this ch. [How Haman wilfully gave the reins to his propensities, and how Satan thence] put it into his heart to contrive Mordecai's death, we read in the foregoing ch.; how God put it into the heart of the king to contrive Mordecai's honor, we are here told. It is to no purpose for Haman to oppose it, when both God and the king will have Mordecai honored, and in this juncture too, when his preferment, and Haman's disappointment, would ripen the great affair of the Jewish deliverance, for the effort Esther was to make toward it the next day. Sometimes, delay may prove to have been good conduct. Stay a while, and we may have done the sooner! He conquered by delay. Let us trace the steps of Providence in Mordecai's advancement.

1. On that night the king's sleep fled away, so the word is; sometimes we cannot sleep because we fain would. Even after a banquet of wine, he could not sleep, when Providence had a design to serve in keeping him waking. We read of no bodily indisposition that broke his sleep, but God, whose gift sleep is, withheld it from him. He that commanded 127 provinces, could not command one hour's sleep. Perhaps the charms of Esther's conversation the day before, occasioned his heart to reproach him for neglecting her, and that might keep him waking. An offended conscience can find a time to speak, when it will be heard.

2. Then he called to have the Book of Records, the Journals of his reign, read to him, v. 1. Surely he did not design that that should lull him to sleep, it would rather fill his head with cares; but God put it into his heart to call for them, rather than for music or songs, which their kings used to be attended with, (Dan. 6: 18.) more likely to compose him to rest. When men do what is unaccountable, we know not what God intends by it. David would have found some other entertainment for his thoughts; when he could not sleep, he would have remembered God, and meditated on Him; (Ps. 63: 6.) and if he would have any book read to him, it would have been his Bible; for in that law did he meditate day and night.

3. The servant read, among other things, that Mordecai had discovered a plot against the king's life, which prevented it's execution, v. 2. Mordecai was not in such favor at court, that the reader should designedly pitch on that place, but Providence directed him to it. How Mordecai's good service was recorded, we read, ch. 2: 23. and here it is found on record. [Note, 10: 2.]

4. The king inquired what honor had been done to Mordecai for this; suspecting he had gone unrewarded, and, like Pharaoh's butler, remembering it as his fault this day. Note, The law of gratitude is a law of nature. We ought particularly to be grateful to inferiors, not thinking their services such debts to us, but that they make us indebted to them. Two rules of gratitude are here. 1. If we cannot, or need not recompense those who have been kind to us, yet let us honor them, by acknowledging their kindnesses, and owning our obligations. 2. If we have long neglected to make grateful returns for good offices, let us, at length, bethink ourselves of our debts.

5. They informed him, that nothing had been done to Mordecai for it; in the king's gate he sat before, and there he still sat. Note, 1. It is common for great men to take little notice of their inferiors. High spirits take a pride in being careless about those below them, and ignorant of their state. The great God takes cognizance of the meanest of his servants, knows what dignity is done them, and what disgrace. 2. Humility, modesty, and self-denial, though, in God's account, of great price, yet commonly hinder men's preferment in the world: but though the aspiring rise fast, the humble stand fast, Prov. 29: 23. 3. Honor and dignity are rated high in the king's books. He does not ask, What reward? But only, What honor? A poor thing, and but a burden, if he had not wherewith to support it. 4. The greatest merits, and best services, are often overlooked, and unrewarded, among men: little honor is done to those who best deserve it, are fittest for it, and would do most good with it. See Eccl. 9: 14—16. The acquisition of wealth and honor are [often] a perfect lottery, in which they that venture

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

It is a most deplorable evil, that inferior persons will ape the fashions, and emulate the expense, of their superiors: and thus they often injure their families and creditors, or lavish what belongs to the poor; and at the same time expose their own weakness and folly.—Vain-glorious men delight in boasting of the commendations, honors, and favors conferred on them; each new distinction gives a momentary gratification to their vanity; and they receive every attention, as a tribute to their merit, or as homage paid to their superior talents. They invite, and even hire men, to listen to their praises; and often glory most in those things, which tend to their immediate disgrace and ruin For 'vanity and vexation' are at last the inventory of all sublunary things. Prosperity increases insolence and arrogance, which stir up envy and enmity, and provoke affronts and opposition; and thus the most envenomed resentments and tormenting passions are excited, and the fair edifice of fancied felicity vanishes, like the enchanted castles of romance. May we then seek happiness in the favor of God, in peace of conscience, and dominion over our own spirits; and in cultivating that love, which 'suffereth long and is kind, . . . envieth not, vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own; is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things; and which never faileth,' but shall be perfected in the eternal felicity of heaven! SCOTT.

4 And the king said, [f] Who is in the court? Now Haman was come into [g] the outward court of the king's house, [h] to speak unto the king to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him.

5 And the king's servants said unto him, Behold, Haman standeth in the court. And the king said, Let him come in.

6 So Haman came in. And the king said unto him, What shall be done unto the man, * whom the king delighteth to honor? Now Haman thought in his heart, [i] To whom would the king delight to do honor more than to myself?

7 And Haman answered the king, For the man † whom the king delighteth to honor,

8 ‡ Let the royal apparel be brought which the king useth to wear, and [k] the horse that the king rideth upon, and the crown-royal which is set upon his head;

9 And let this apparel and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the king's most noble princes, that they may array the man withal whom the king delighteth to honor, and § bring him on horseback through the street of the city, and [l] proclaim before him, Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honor.

10 Then the king said to Haman, [m] Make haste, and take the apparel and the horse, as thou hast said, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth at the king's gate: ‡ let nothing fail of all that thou hast spoken.

11 Then [n] took Haman the apparel and the horse, [o] and arrayed Mordecai, and brought him on horseback through the street of the city, and proclaimed before him, Thus shall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honor.

12 ¶ And Mordecai [p] came again to the king's gate: but Haman [q] hasted to his house mourning, and [r] having his head covered.

13 And Haman told least, carry off the best prize. Nay, 5. Good services, sometimes, so far from being a man's preferment, will not be his protection; Mordecai is, at this time, by the king's edict, doomed to destruction, with all the Jews, though it is owned he deserved dignity. Those that faithfully serve God, need not fear being thus ill paid.

V. 4—11. It is now morning, and people begin to stir.

1. Haman is so impatient to get Mordecai hanged, that he comes early to court, to be ready at the king's levee, before any other business was brought before him, to get a warrant for his execution, (v. 4.) which he makes sure to have at the first word. And he could tell the king, that he was so confident of the justice of his request, and the king's favor, that he had got the gallows ready; one word from the king would complete his satisfaction.

2. The king is so impatient to have Mordecai honored, that he sends to know who was in the court that was fit to be employed in it. Word is brought him, that Haman is in the court, v. 5. Let him come in, says the king; the fittest man to be made use of, both in directing and in dispensing the king's favor; the king knew nothing of any quarrel he had with Mordecai. Haman is brought in immediately, proud of the honor of being admitted into the king's bed-chamber, as it should seem, before he was up; let the king but give orders for dignifying Mordecai, and he will be easy in his mind, and try to sleep. Now Haman thinks he has the fairest opportunity; but the king's heart is as full as his, and it is fit he should speak first.

3. The king asks Haman, how he should express his favor to one whom he had marked for a favorite, v. 6. It is good in kings, and other superiors, to delight in bestowing rewards, and not in punishing. Parents and masters should take a pleasure in commending and encouraging.

4. Haman concludes, he himself was the favorite intended, (none so worthy,) therefore he prescribes the highest expressions of honor that could, for once, be bestowed on a subject. The deceitfulness of our own hearts appears in nothing so much, as in the good conceit we have of ourselves and our own performances, against which we should therefore constantly watch and pray. Haman had too great an opinion of his interest, thinking the king loved and valued no one but himself. We should suspect that the esteem others profess for us, is not so great as it seems, or we are sometimes willing to believe it; that we may not think too well of ourselves, nor place too much confidence in others.

Now Haman thinks he is carving out honor for himself, and therefore does it very liberally, v. 8, 9. nay, presumptuously prescribes honors too great for any subject; he must appear in all the pomp and grandeur of the king himself, only he must not carry the sceptre, the emblem of power; [the Jews think he aimed at the crown;] all the people must be made to notice him, and do him reverence; every good subject will honor those whom the king delights to honor. And shall not every good Christian then honor those whom the King of kings delights to honor, and call the saints which are on the earth, the excellent ones?

5. The king confounds him with a positive order, immediately to go himself, and put all this honor on Mordecai the Jew, v. 10. How is he thunder-struck—the very man he hated above all men, whose ruin he was now designing!

6. Haman dares not dispute, nor so much as seem to dislike, the king's order, but obeys, v. 11. It is hard to say which of the two put a greater force on himself; proud Haman, in putting this honor upon Mordecai, or humble Mordecai, in accepting it: the king would have it so, and both must submit. It was agreeable to Mordecai, at least, as an indication of the king's favor, and of hope that Esther would prevail to reverse the edict against the Jews.

V. 12—14. I. How little is Mordecai puffed up with his advancement. He came again to the king's gate; (v. 12.) returned to his place, and

* Heb. in whose honor the king delighteth. [i] Is. 35:27. Is. 42:1. 62:4, 5. Jer. 32:41. Matt. 3:17. John 5: 23.
† Heb. in whose honor the king delighteth.
‡ Heb. Let them bring the royal apparel, wherewith the king clotheth himself. [t] Sam. 18:4. Luke 15:22.
§ Heb. cause him to ride.
‖ Heb. suffer not a whit to fall. 2 K. 10:10.
[f] Prov. 3:27,28. Ec. 9:10.
[g] 4:11. 5:1.
[h] 3:8—11. 5:14. 7:9. Job 5:13. Ps. 2:4. 33:10.
[i] 3:2,3. 5:11. Prov. 1:32. 16:18. 18: 12. 30:13. Ob. 3.
[k] 1 K. 1:33.
[l] Gen. 41:43. Zech. 9:9.
[m] Dan. 4:37. Luke 14:11. Rev. 18:7.
[n] Ezra 6:13. Is. 60:14. Luke 1:52. Rev. 3:9.
[o] 8:15. 9:3.
[p] 2:19. 1 Sam. 3:15 Ps. 131:1,2.
[q] 2 Sam. 17:23. 1 K. 20:43. 21:4. 2 Chr. 26:20. Job 20:5.
[r] 7:8. 2 Sam. 15:30. Job 9:24. Jer. 14:3,4.

NOTES.

Chap. VI. V. 4—11. Even Haman might not enter the inner court till called for. (4:11.)—His excessive vanity, ambition, presumption, and ostentation, as well as the emptiness of his worthless mind, are fully illustrated by the honors he chose, supposing them intended for himself. Perhaps Ahasuerus understood his meaning, was [jealous of ulterior aims, and] disgusted at his exorbitant pretensions: and while he peremptorily commanded him to do all this to 'Mordecai the Jew,' he could scarcely help remembering the edict Haman had obtained against that people. Imagination itself cannot devise a more painful mortification. Scott.

(8—11.) 'Xenophon states, that the robe of Cyrus was half purple and half white, and no other person might wear such a one, for it was a capital crime. [But see 8:15.] Herodotus informs us, the Persian kings rode Nisean horses, brought from Armenia, as Strabo says, of peculiar beauty; and if the same law obtained in Persia as in Judea, no man might ride the king's horse. The crown royal [comp. cut Ezra 2:69.] was wont to be put on the head of a horse led in state; and this we are assured, was a custom in Persia, as it is with the Ethiopians to this day.' Gill, so Aben Ezra, &c. 'The Heb. kthr, signifies any ornament about the head or neck, and the head of a horse is meant.' Patrick. A cut is given of a drawing by Morier, from the contemporary ruins at Persepolis, of a royal personage on horseback, which may illustrate the text. Ed.

Apparel.] 'The Medish dresses (of silk we are led to conclude) formed a peculiar description of clothing, distinguished above all other articles of dress with which the Greeks were acquainted, by the beauty, the variety, and as it were the play and splendor of their colors. (Xenoph.) Their use was confined to the great. A Medish robe and cimeter, a chain of gold, and a richly caparisoned horse, were the customary marks of distinction bestowed on their favorites by the kings of Persia; just as at present is the caftan, which also is always of silk. Xenoph. Comp. the accurate description of the Persian Khilat

[s] Zeresh his wife, and all his friends, every thing that had befallen him. Then [t] said his wise men, and Zeresh his wife, unto him, [u] If Mordecai be of the seed of the Jews, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou shalt not prevail against him, [x] but shalt surely fall before him.

14 And while they were yet talking with him, came the king's chamberlains, and [y] hasted to bring Haman unto the banquet that Esther had prepared.

CHAP. VII.

Esther, at the banquet, petitions the king for her own life, and the lives of her people, and accuses Haman as their enemy, 1—6. The king, in wrath and jealousy, condemns Haman, who is hanged on the gallows prepared for Mordecai, 7—10.

SO the king and Haman came to * banquet with Esther the queen.

2 And [a] the king said again unto Esther on the second day at the banquet of wine, What is thy petition, queen Esther? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? and it shall be performed, even to the half of the kingdom.

3 Then Esther the queen answered and said, If I have found favor in thy sight, O king, and if it please the king, [b] let my life be given me at my petition, and [c] my people at my request:

4 For [d] we are sold, I and my † people, to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish. [e] But if we had been sold for bond-men and bond-women, I had held my tongue, although [f] the enemy could not countervail the king's damage.

5 Then the king Ahasuerus answered and said unto Esther the queen, [g] Who is he, and where is he, ‡ that durst presume in his heart to do so?

6 And Esther said, § The adversary and enemy is [h] this wicked Haman. Then Haman [i] was afraid ‖ before the king and the queen.

minded his business as close as before. Honor is well bestowed on those that are not made proud and idle by it, and will not think themselves above their business.

II. How much is Haman cast down with his disappointment. To wait as a page on any man, especially Mordecai, and at this time, when he hoped to hang him, was enough to break so proud a heart. Was he ever the worse for thus stooping? Was it not what he himself proposed to be done by one of the king's most noble princes? Why then grudge to do it himself? But that will break a proud man's heart, which would not break a humble man's sleep. Observe,

III. How his doom was, out of this event, read him by his wife and his friends, v. 13. Miserable comforters are they all; they did not advise him to [curb his passions, and] repent, asking Mordecai's pardon for his bad design, but foretell his destiny as fatal, unavoidable, hopeless. It has been observed of great court-favorites, that when once they have been frowned on, they have fallen utterly, as fast as they rose; it is true of the church's enemies, that when God begins with them, He will make an end.

IV. How seasonably he was now sent for to the banquet, v. 14. He thought it seasonable, in hopes it would revive his drooping spirits, and save his sinking honor. But, really, it was seasonable, because his spirits being thus broken, he might the more easily be run down by Esther's complaints. God's wisdom is seen, in timing the means of his church's deliverance, to manifest his own glory.

CHAP. VII. 1—6. We are now to attend the second banquet to which the king and Haman were invited. The king in humor, and Haman out of humor, meet at Esther's table. Now here,

1. The king urges Esther, a third time, to tell her request, and repeats his promise, v. 2. now he was bound with the threefold cord of a promise thrice made to favor her.

2. Esther, at length, surprises the king with her petition, not for wealth or honor, or the preferment of her friends, but for life! v. 3, 4. Two things bespeak the urgent importance of the petition. Majesty. A crowned head is struck at; 'If thou hast any affection for the wife of thy bosom, now is the time to show it, for that life lies at stake.' Multitude. 'A whole nation, a nation dear to me.'

To move the king the more, she suggests, 1. That she and her people were bought and sold: not by any offence against the government, but to gratify the pride and revenge of one man. 2. Not their liberty only, but their lives, were sold. 'Had we been sold' (says she) 'into slavery, I had not complained, for, in time, we might recover liberty, though the king would have made but a bad bargain, and not have increased his wealth by our price.' (Whatever had been paid for us, the loss of so many industrious hands, would have been more damage to the treasury than the price would countervail.) To persecute good people is as impolitic as it is impious, and a manifest wrong to princes and states; they are weakened and impoverished by it. But, 'We are sold' (says she) 'to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish;' and then it is time to speak. She refers to the words of the decree, ch. 3: 13. this would touch a tender part, if there were any such in the king's heart, and bring him to relent.

3. The king stands amazed at the remonstrance, v. 5. 'What!' says he, 'contrive the murder of the queen and all her friends? Is there such a man, such a monster rather, in nature? Who is he, and where is he, whose heart has filled him to do so?' It is hard to imagine, there should be such horrid wickedness committed in the world, as there really is. Who, where is he, that dares, presumes, to question the being of God and his providence, to banter his oracles, profane his name, persecute his people, and yet bid defiance to his wrath? Such there are, to think of whom is enough to make horror take hold of us, Ps. 119: 53. We sometimes startle at the mention of that evil, which yet we ourselves are chargeable with. Ahasuerus himself was guilty; for he consented to that bloody edict.

4. Esther plainly charges Haman with it before his face: 'Here he is, let him speak for himself, for therefore he is invited.' He has designed our murder, and, which is worse, basely drawn the king in to be a partaker of his crime.

5. Haman is soon apprehensive of his danger; and it was time to fear, when the queen was his prosecutor, the king his judge, and his own conscience a witness; the surprising operations of Providence against him, too, that same morning,

---

[s] 5:10—14.
[t] Gen. 41:8. Dan. 2:12.
[u] Gen. 40:19. 1 Sam. 28:19,20. Dan. 5:26—28. Zech. 12:2,3.
[x] Job 16:2.
[y] 5:14. Deut. 32:35,36.
* Heb. drink. 3:15. 5:8.
[a] See on 5:6. John 16:24.
[b] 7. 1 K. 20:31. 2 K. 1:13. Job 2:4. Jer. 38:26.
[c] 4:8. Ps. 122:6—9.
[d] 3:9. 4:7,8. Deut. 28:68. 1 Sam. 22: 23.
† Heb. that they should destroy, and kill, and cause to perish. 3:13. 8: 11. Ps. 44:22,23.
[e] Gen. 37:26—28. Deut. 28:68. Josh. 9:23. Neh. 5:5. Joel 3:6. Am. 2:6.
[f] 6. 3:9.
[g] Gen. 27:33. Job 9:24.
‡ Heb. whose heart hath filled him. Acts 5:3.
§ Heb. The man adversary.
[h] 1 Sam. 24:13. Ps. 27:2. 139:19—22. Prov. 24:24,25. Ec. 5:8. 1 Cor. 5:13. 2 Thes. 2:8.
[i] Neh. 6:16. Job 15:21,22. 18:5—12. Ps. 73:5—9,17—20. Is. 21:4. Dan. 5:5,6.
‖ Or, at the presence of.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

We are in every thing entirely dependent on God; nor can the whole world purchase an hour's refreshing sleep, if He see good to withhold it: from Him therefore we should seek this solace to our cares, and thank Him for it when we have enjoyed it. His providence superintends the most minute concerns of men. Those actions which are the result of caprice, and appear unaccountable, fall in with his wise and gracious purposes, and 'not a sparrow falls to the ground without Him.'—Gratitude even to man, though commended by all, is practised by very few indeed; and commonly least by those who have most in their power. Yet thus they not only become guilty of the odious sin of ingratitude; but actually yield the superiority to the very man whom they affect to despise: for he that confers, is always superior to him who receives, an unmerited and unrequited favor.—And if any reader should recollect, that nothing has been done to requite some benefactor who aided him many years ago, let him not think that the obligation is out of date; but rather let him study how he may, effectually, and without further delay, do that which should have been done long since; and delight to honor his benefactors, if he can render them no other recompense.—Pride, envy, and ambition are insatiable; and every sinful passion grows more exorbitant by indulgence. But 'before honor is humility, and a haughty spirit before a fall:' both God and man delight in rendering the mortification of proud worms proportioned to their ambition: and men of this character meet with many presages on earth of that everlasting contempt and misery which await them in another world, if not rescued from this diabolical vice. (Dan. 4: 34—37. 5: 18—28.) SCOTT.

---

in Morier, and the immutability of Asiatic customs will very strikingly appear.' [See the cut, and on 8:15.] HEEREN.

Verse 14.

Haman, in the anguish of his heart, seems to have neglected his appointment. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. VII. V. 2—4. Sold. (1) Alluding to the money Haman had offered to pay into the treasury for their destruction.—Some interpret the last clause to mean, that if the sufferings of the enslaved Jews, though extreme and undeserved, had not been likewise detrimental to the king's interest, Esther would have held her peace. The whole speech, however, was replete with natural eloquence, and suited to affect and persuade the king. SCOTT.

7 ¶ And the king, arising from the banquet of wine [j] in his wrath, went into the palace-garden: and [k] Haman stood up to make request for his life to Esther the queen; [l] for he saw that there was evil determined against him by the king.

8 Then the king returned out of the palace-garden into the place of the banquet of wine; and Haman was fallen upon [m] the bed whereon Esther was. Then said the king, Will he force the queen also * before me in the house? As the word went out of the king's mouth, they [n] covered Haman's face.

9 And [o] Harbonah, [p] one of the chamberlains, said before the king, [q] Behold also, the † gallows fifty cubits high, which Haman had made for Mordecai, [r] who had spoken good for the king, standeth in the house of Haman. Then the king said, [s] Hang him thereon.

10 So they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai. [t] Then was the king's wrath pacified.

CHAP. VIII.

Haman's estate is given to Esther; and Mordecai, as her near relation, is preferred in Haman's stead, 1, 2. Esther, with tears, entreats the king to reverse the decree against the Jews, 3—6. The king authorizes the Jews to defend themselves, and sends letters to that effect, throughout the provinces, 7—14. The honors conferred on Mordecai, and the joy of the Jews, 15—17.

ON that day did the king Ahasuerus [a] give the house of Haman the Jews' enemy, unto Esther the queen. And Mordecai [b] came before the king; for Esther had told what he was unto her.

2 And the king took off [c] his ring which he could not but increase his fear. When he thought himself in the fulness of his sufficiency, he is cast into a net by his own feet.

V. 7—10. 1. The king, in a great passion, retires to cool himself, and consider what was to be done, v. 7. Ashamed to send for his seven wise counsellors, to consult them about undoing what he had rashly done without their knowledge; he went to walk in the garden awhile, to compare in his thoughts what Esther had now informed him of, with what had formerly passed between him and Haman. And we may suppose him, 1. Vexed at himself; for they that do things with self-will, are likely to reflect on them afterward with self-reproach. 2. Vexed at Haman whom he had laid in his bosom, that he should be such a villain as to abuse his interest in him, to draw him to consent to so wicked a measure. Seeing himself betrayed by one he had caressed, he was full of indignation; yet would say nothing, till he had taken time for second thoughts. When angry, we should pause awhile, before we come to any resolution, as those that have a rule over our own spirits, and are governed by reason.

2. Haman becomes a humble petitioner to the queen for his life. He might now easily perceive his danger: for the wrath of a king, [so despotic a king,] is as the roaring of a lion, and as messengers of death. 1. How mean Haman looks, he falls at Esther's feet. They that are most haughty, insolent, and imperious, when in power and prosperity, are commonly the most abject and poor spirited, when the wheel turns upon them. Cowards, they say, are most cruel, and then consciousness of their cruelty makes them the more cowardly. 2. How great Esther looks; now her sworn enemy owns he lies at her mercy, and begs his life at her hand. Thus did God regard the low estate of his handmaiden, and scatter the proud in the imagination of their hearts, Luke 1: 48, 51. Compare that promise to the Philadelphian church, Rev. 3: 9. Give us of your oil; Father Abraham, send Lazarus; The upright shall have dominion in the morning.

3. The king returns yet more exasperated against Haman. The more he thinks of him, the worse he thinks of him, and of what he had done. It was but lately, every thing Haman said and did, even that which was most criminal, was taken well, and construed to his advantage; now, on the contrary, what he did, that was not only innocent, but a sign of repentance, is ill taken, and without color of reason, construed to his disadvantage. Not that the king thought he had any real intention of forcing the queen, but, having been musing on Haman's design to slay her, and finding him in this posture, he takes occasion from it thus to vent his passion against him, as a man that would not scruple at the greatest and most impudent wickedness.

4. Those about him were ready to be the instruments of his wrath, though lately they adored Haman: so little sure can proud men be of the interest they think they have. (1.) As soon as the king spake an angry word, they covered Haman's face, as a condemned man, not worthy any more either to see the king, or to be seen by him; they marked him for execution. Those that are hanged, commonly have their faces covered. Turba odit damnatos—The populace oppress the fallen. If Haman be going down, they all cry, 'Down with him.' (2.) One of those lately sent to Haman's house, to fetch him to the banquet, informed the king of the gallows Haman had prepared for Mordecai, v. 9. Now Mordecai is the favorite, the chamberlain applauds him; he spake good for the king, and, Haman being in disgrace, every thing is noticed that might make against him.

5. The sentence is short, Hang him thereon; and the execution speedy. So they hanged Haman, v. 10. [Comp. note, Ezra 7: 23.] See here, (1.) Pride brought down. He who expected every one to reverence him, is now to all a spectacle of ignominy! He who disdained that less than a nation should be sacrificed to his revenge, is now a sacrifice to justice! God resists the proud; and those whom He resists, will find Him irresistible. (2.) Persecution punished. Haman was, on many accounts, a wicked man, but his enmity to God's church was his most provoking crime. Ps. 28: 4. (3.) Mischief returned on the person that contrived it; the wicked is snared in the work of his own hands, Ps. 7: 15, 16. 9: 15, 16. Haman is justly hanged on the very gallows he had unjustly prepared for Mordecai. The Lord is known by such judgments. See Prov. 11: 8. 21: 18.

CHAP. VIII. V. 1—2. We left the plotter hanging, and are now to see what becomes of his plot. But lately we had Esther and Mordecai in tears and fears, but fasting and praying; let us see how to them arose light in darkness.

1. Esther is enriched with the traitor Haman's forfeited estate, in recompense for the fright and vexation he had created her, v. 1. Prov. 13: 22. Job 27: 17, 18. What Haman would have done mischief with, Esther will do good with; and estates are to be valued as they are used.

2. Mordecai is advanced, and (1.) Owned as the queen's cousin, which, till now, though Esther had been four years queen, for ought that appears, the king did not know; so humble, so modest was

j 1:12.
k Prov. 14:19. Is. 60:14. Rev. 3:9.
l 1 Sam. 20:7,9. 25:17. Ps. 112:10. Prov. 19:12. Dan. 3:19.
m 1:6. Is. 49:23.
* Heb. with me. n 6:12. Job 9:24. Is. 22:17.
o 1:10. Harbona.
p 6:14. 2 K. 9:32,33.
q 5:14. Job 27:20—23.
† Heb. tree.
r 2:21—23. 6:2.
s 9:25. 1 Sam. 17:51. Ps. 7:15,16. 9: 15,16. 35:8. 37:35,36. 73:19. Prov. 11:5,6. Dan. 6:7,24.
t Judg. 15:7. Ez. 5:13. Zech. 6:8.
a Job 27:16,17. Ps. 39:6. 49:6—13. Prov. 13:22. 28:8. Ec. 2:18,19. Luke 12:20.
b 1:14. 2:7,15.
c 3:10. Gen. 41:42. Is. 22:19—22. Luke 15:22.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The repeated promises, even of weak, mutable, and selfish men, encourage us to make our requests to them with great expectation of success: much more then should the exceedingly great and precious promises of the unchangeable God, embolden us to present many and large petitions to Him, in behalf of ourselves and others, and with the full assurance of receiving far more than we ask.—If the love of life inspire such earnest and pathetic pleadings, with those 'who can only kill the body;' how fervent and importunate should our continual prayers be to 'Him, who is able to destroy both body and soul in hell!' And how affectionately should we pray for the eternal salvation of our relatives, friends, and neighbors, and all around us! Men often commit crimes without remorse, which, when described in their nature and consequences by proper language, or pointed out to them in the conduct of others, appear most horrible and atrocious: and when they find, on reflection, the nature and effects of their own heedless conduct, they are filled with anguish and remorse. (2 Sam. 12: 1—14. Ps. 51: 1—6.) Yet alas! their indignation frequently falls exclusively on their tempters or accomplices, instead of producing unreserved self-condemnation and abhorrence.

SCOTT.

Verses 9, 10.

Hang . . . So they hanged.] Xenophon states, that execution was immediate in Persia; note, Ezra, 7:26. Then was the king's wrath pacified.] This intimates, that the spirit of that age considered punishments too much in the light of a gratification of revenge; a feeling which seems to have been rather stronger than the sense of justice, and it probably is so now in the east. ED.

(9.) Haman had doubtless been greatly envied for his prosperity, and hated for his insolence, in the midst of all the homage which was paid him. But now that the king's mind was evidently alienated from him, the courtiers were glad to please him and the queen, by concurring in Haman's downfal. SCOTT.

(10.) 'In this wonderful deliverance, the contrivance, or suiting of those ordinary agents appointed by God, is more admirable, than if the same end had been effected by means truly miraculous.' Dr. Jackson in Patrick. ID.

NOTES.

CHAP. VIII. V. 1, 2. Some of Esther's attendants were acquainted with Mordecai's relation to her; (Note, 4:4.) and the king knew that he was of Jewish extraction. (6:10.) The ring, with the royal sig-had taken from Haman, and gave it unto Mordecai. And [d] Esther set Mordecai over the house of Haman.

3 ¶ And Esther spake yet again before the king, and [e] fell down at his feet, and * besought him with tears, to put away [f] the mischief of Haman the Agagite, and his device that he had devised against the Jews.

4 Then the king [g] held out the golden sceptre towards Esther. So Esther arose, and stood before the king,

5 And said, If it please the king, [h] and if I have found favor in his sight, and the thing seem right before the king, and [i] I be pleasing in his eyes, let it be written to reverse the † letters devised by Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, ‡ which he wrote to destroy the Jews, which are in all the king's provinces.

6 For [k] how can I § endure to see [l] the evil that shall come unto my people? or how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred?

7 Then the king Ahasuerus said unto Esther the queen, and to Mordecai the Jew, [m] Behold, I have given Esther the house of Haman, and [n] him they have hanged upon the gallows, because he laid his hand upon the Jews.

8 Write ye also for the Jews, as it liketh you, [o] in the king's name, and seal it with the king's ring: for the writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, [p] may no man reverse.

9 Then were [q] the king's scribes called at that time in the third month, (that is, the month Sivan,) on the three and twentieth day thereof; and it was written, according to all that Mordecai commanded, unto the Jews, [r] and to the lieutenants, and the deputies and rulers of the provinces, which are from India unto Ethiopia, an hundred twenty and seven provinces, unto every province according to the writing thereof, and unto every people after their language, and to the Jews according to their writing, * and according to their language.

10 And he wrote [t] in the king Ahasuerus's name, and sealed it with the king's ring; and sent letters [u] by posts on horseback, and riders on mules, camels, and [x] young dromedaries;

11 Wherein the king granted the Jews which were in every city [y] to gather themselves together, and to stand for their life, to destroy, to slay, and to cause to perish, all the power of the people and province that would assault them, both little ones and women, [z] and to take the spoil of them for a prey;

12 Upon [a] one day, in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus, name- d 2 Sam. 9:7—10. Ec. 2:18,19—26. 5: 13,14.

e 1 Sam. 25:24. 2 K. 4:27.
* Heb. she wept and besought him. Is. 38:3. Hos. 12:4. Heb. 5:7.
f 3:8—15. 7:4.
g 4:11. 5:2.
h 7:3. Ex. 33:13,16. 1 Sam. 20:29.
i 2:4,17.
† Heb. device. 3:12,13.
‡ Or, who wrote.
k Gen. 44:34. Jer. 4:19. 9:1. Luke 19:41,42. Rom. 9:2,3. 10:1.
§ Heb. be able that I may see.
l 7:4. Neh. 2:3.
m 1. Prov. 13:22.
n 7:10. Gal. 3:13.
o 3:12. 1 K. 21:8.
p 5. 1:19. Dan. 6:8,12—15. 2 Tim. 2:19. Heb. 6:17,18.
q 3:12.
r 1:1,22. 3:12,13. Dan. 6:1.
s 1:22. 3:12. 2 K. 18:26. Dan. 4:1. 1 Cor. 14:9—11.
t 1 K. 21:8. Ec. 8:4. Dan. 4:1.
u 3:13,15. 2 Chr. 30:6. Job 9:25. Jer. 51:21. x Is. 66:6. 66:20. Jer. 2:23.
y 9:2—16.
z 5:2:13. 9:10,15,16. Is. 10:6.
a 9:1. Ex. 15:9,10. Judg. 1:6,7.

---

ter, seems to have continued with Haman, as denoting the high offices he bore under the king, till he was deposed and condemned. (Notes, 3:10, 11. Gen. 41:41—43. Is. 22:20—25. Jer. 22:24—27.) Set Mordecai over. (2) (Notes, Job 27:13—23, vv. 16, 17. Prov. 13:22. 28:8. Ec. 2:24—26.) SCOTT.

Verses 3—6.

It may be supposed, that Ahasuerus hesitated in this perplexing case; as not knowing how to extricate himself with credit from so great a difficulty, and as reluctant to proclaim to all the world the folly, into which he had been seduced. But Esther, with great discretion, avoided every intimation that the king himself had issued the decree, and expressed herself as if it had been not only Haman's device, but altogether his work, even as if the edict had been forged by him. Her plea, and the expressions used in urging it, are peculiarly pathetic and emphatical, and suited to excite the deepest and most tender sympathy; as well as to show her fervent affection for her people, as the people of God. ID.

Verse 8.

While the king had legal authority to put the evil counsellor to death, to confiscate his estate, and to prefer his most hated enemy to his high offices, so that no objection seems to have been advanced by his nobles and counsellors; he had not the legal power to reverse the obnoxious decree! (2:1. 3:10, 11.)—'Thus he chose to fill his realm with blood, rather than revoke a rash decree.' Patrick. ID.

Verse 9.

(1, 2. 3:12—15.) Probably Ethiopia, or the S. of Egypt, is intended. SCOTT.

Verse 10.

These letters were sent by runners, (2 Chr. 30:6—9, v. 6.) and by horsemen. The words for the other animals, on which some of the messengers rode, are unusual, and learned men are by no means agreed about the meaning of them. Probably they were derived from the Persian language, or from that of some of the eastern nations. SCOTT.

The equine race are peculiarly hardy in Persia, especially the mules, which, however, spite of their incredible power of endurance, often fall a sacrifice to their miserable roads. Camels, Dromedaries.] 'The native country of the genus, camel, is said to extend from Mauritania to China, within a zone of 900 or 1000 miles in breadth. The common camel with two humps is found only in the N. part of this region, and exclusively, from the ancient Bactria (Turkestan) to China. The dromedary, or single-hump camel, is found throughout the entire length of this zone, on its southern side as far as Africa and India; it cannot, like the camel, support all vicissitudes of climate. Camels used for speed alone, can travel 60 to 90 miles a day.' Encyc. Am. Some have been known, it is said, to travel 150 to 400 miles in 24 hours. They can travel, say Buffon, &c. 9 or 10 days, with one hour's rest daily, and be fed with one ball of paste, carrying their own and their riders' food and water. ED.

ly, [b] upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar.

13 The copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was * published unto all people, and that the Jews should be ready against that day, to [c] avenge themselves on their enemies.

14 So the posts that rode upon mules and camels went out, [d] being hastened and pressed on by the king's commandment. And the decree was given at [e] Shushan the palace.

15 ¶ And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in [f] royal apparel of † blue and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple: and [g] the city of Shushan rejoiced and was glad.

16 The [h] Jews had [i] light, and gladness, and joy, and honor.

17 And in every province, and in every city, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, the Jews had joy and gladness, [k] a feast and a good day. And [l] many of the people of the land became Jews; [m] for the fear of the Jews fell upon them.

CHAP. IX.

On the day appointed, the Jews, aided by the rulers, slay their enemies; and among the rest five hundred men in Shushan, and Haman's ten sons, 1—10. The king hearing this, at Esther's request, allows the Jews in Shushan to stand against their enemies on the day following, when three hundred more are slain; and he causes Haman's sons to be hanged on the gallows erected by Haman, 11—15. The Jews throughout the provinces slay seventy-five thousand men, 15. They rejoice with feasting on the two following days, 17—19. These days are appointed by Esther and Mordecai as an annual festival, in commemoration of this deliverance, and called the feast of Purim, 20—32.

NOW [a] in the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar, on the thirteenth day of the same, when the king's commandment and his decree drew near to be put in execution, in the day that the enemies of the Jews [b] hoped to have power over them;

b 3:13—15.
* Heb. revealed.
c Judg. 16:28. Ps. 37:14,15. 68:23. 92: 10,11. 149:6—9. Luke 18:7. Rev. 6:10. 19:2. d 1 Sam. 21:8. Ec. 9:10.
e 1:2. 2:3. 3:15. Neh. 1:1. Dan. 8:2.
f 5:1. 6:8,11. Gen. 41:42. Matt. 6: 29. 11:8. Luke 16:19.
† Or, violet. 1:6.
g 3:15. Prov. 29:2.
h 4:1—3,10. Ps. 30:5—11.
i 9:17. Ps. 18:28. 97:11. Prov. 4:18, 19. Is. 30:29. 35:10. k 9:17,19,22. 1 Sam. 25:8. Neh. 8:10. l Ps. 18:43. Zech. 8:20—23.
m Gen. 35:5. Ex. 15:16. Deut. 2:25. 11:25.
a 3:7,13. 8:12.
b Acts 12:11.

V. 15—17. But a few days ago, we had Mordecai in sackcloth, and all the Jews in sorrow; here is a blessed change, Mordecai in purple, the Jews in joy. See Ps. 30: 5, 11, 12.

1. Mordecai in purple, v. 15. The royal apparel either belonged to his place, or the king appointed it him as a favorite. His robes were rich, his coronet was of gold. These are things not worth noticing, but as marks of the king's favor, and that the fruit of God's favor to his church. It is well with a land, when the ensigns of dignity are made the ornaments of serious piety. Shushan was sensible of its advantage in his preferment, and therefore rejoiced and was glad, promising itself better times now so good a man was in power. When the wicked perish, there is shouting: when the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice.

2. The Jews in joy, v. 16, 17. if they had not been threatened and in distress, they had not had occasion for this extraordinary joy. Therefore are God's people sometimes made to sow in tears, that they may reap in so much the more joy.

One good effect of this deliverance, was, that many of the people of the land were proselyted to the Jewish religion, renounced idolatry, and worshipped the true God only. The holy cheerfulness of those that profess religion, is a great ornament to their profession, and will invite and encourage others to be religious. The reason here given why so many became Jews, is, for fear of the Jews. Haman's fate warned them of the Jews' power, and when they observed how wonderfully Divine Providence had owned them, and wrought for them in this critical juncture, they thought them great, and those happy that were among them; therefore they came over to them, as was foretold, Zech. 8: 23. Comp. Deut. 33: 29. When the church prospers, many will come in to it, that will be shy of it when it is in trouble.

CHAP. IX. V. 1—19. We left two royal edicts in force, one appointing, that all the Jews should be killed; another empowering them, on the day appointed for it, to draw the sword in defence. Their enemies resolved not to lose their advantages by the first edict, in hopes to overpower them by numbers; the Jews relied on the goodness of their God, and justice of their cause, and resolved to make their utmost efforts against their enemies. The day comes, at length; and here we are told, what a glorious day it was to the Jews, and the two days following; and what a memorable day it was made to posterity, by an annual feast, in commemoration. In the decisive battle here fought, neither side was surprised, for both had notice of

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Many, who most prosper in the world, would have little alacrity in their pursuits, or joy in their possessions, if they could foresee to whom their riches would devolve, and what use would be made of them. [Note, Ex. 20: 17. latter part.]—If we would affect others, we should study to get our own hearts suitably impressed; and, in many cases, we may be more importunate in asking favors for our friends and brethren, and for the poor, than we ought to be for ourselves.—Every regulation in society, however apparently reasonable and beneficial, which does not advert to the fallen nature of man, will, on trial, be found unsuitable to his real condition, and inconsistent with his best interests.—External decorations are insignificant in the judgment of the wise and pious: yet they may properly distinguish those in authority; and, while they procure the [necessary respect for government and its officers] from the multitudes, who look no further, they should remind them of the duties to which their dignities call them. SCOTT.

Verse 15.

A great crown, &c.] 'Not like that of the kings, but such a coronet as was worn by the peers of the realm.' Patrick. [Comp. cuts, Ezra, 2:69. and Esth. 6:4—11.] Perhaps it was one of the insignia of the chief minister under the king. SCOTT.

In royal, &c.] Heb. belebosh malekoih tekeleth vahur veâtereth zahâb gedolah vethakerik buts veargaman In veste regni hyacinthi et candoris, [Chal. melotina, sheepskin,] et diademate auri magno et amictu byssi et purpuræ. Walton's Polyglott. Fulgebat vestibus regiis, hyacinthinis videlicet et aëreis, coronam auream portans in capite, et amictus serico patrio atque purpureo. Vulg. Basilikn stolēn, kai stephanon echōn chrysoun, kai diadema byssinon porphyroun. Sept. The Heb. for purple is tekeleth; is this the origin of the Khilat of the note, 6:8—11? The Vulg. above speaks of silk as well as byss; Procopius satisfies Heeren that the Greeks denominated Median, the dresses now called seric (or silken), of China silk. Luther's transl. speaks of the silken cords and curtains of the tabernacle, and the silk garments of Tyre. Authors speak also of ancient dresses, half silk only, perhaps these are here alluded to. See note and cut, 6:8—11. The purple byssine diadem,' of the Sept. perhaps alludes to the headdresses of this cut, and that, Ezra 2:69. ED.

(c though it was turned to the contrary, that the Jews had rule over them that hated them;)

2 The Jews[d] gathered themselves together in their cities, throughout all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, to lay hand on such [e] as sought their hurt: and no man could withstand them; for [f] the fear of them fell upon all people.

3 And all [g] the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants, and the deputies, and * officers of the king, helped the Jews; because [h] the fear of Mordecai fell upon them.

4 For Mordecai was great in the king's house, and [i] his fame went out throughout all the provinces: for this man Mordecai [k] waxed greater and greater.

5 Thus the Jews [l] smote all their enemies with [m] the stroke of the sword, and slaughter, and destruction, and did † what they would unto those that hated them.

6 And in [n] Shushan the palace, the Jews slew and destroyed five hundred men.

7 And Parshandatha, and Dalphon, and Aspatha,

8 And Poratha, and Adalia, and Aridatha,

9 And Parmashta, and Arisai, and Aridai, and Vajezatha,

10 The [o] ten sons of Haman the son of Hammedatha, the [p] enemy of the Jews, slew they; but [q] on the spoil laid they not their hand.

11 ¶ On that day, the number of those that were slain in Shushan the palace ‡ was brought before the king.

12 And the king said unto Esther the queen, The Jews have slain and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan the palace, and the ten sons of Haman; what have they done in the rest of the king's provinces? now [r] what is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: or what is thy request further? and it shall be done.

13 Then said Esther, If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews which are in Shushan to do to-morrow also * according unto this day's decree, and § let Haman's ten sons be hanged upon the gallows.

14 And the king commanded it so to be done: and the decree was given at Shushan; and they hanged Haman's ten sons.

15 For the Jews that were in Shushan, [t] gathered themselves together, on the fourteenth day also of the month Adar, and slew three hundred men at Shushan; [u] but on the prey they laid not their hand.

16 But the other Jews, that were in the king's provinces, gathered themselves together, and [x] stood for their lives, and had rest from their enemies, and slew of their foes seventy and five thousand; but they laid not their hands on the prey,

17 On the thirteenth day of the month Adar; and on the fourteenth day ‖ of the same rested they, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

18 But the Jews that were at Shushan assembled together [y] on the thirteenth day thereof, and on the fourteenth thereof; and on the fifteenth day of the same they rested, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

19 Therefore the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwalled towns, made the fourteenth day of the month Adar a day of [z] gladness and feasting, c Deut. 32:36. 2 Sam. 22:41. Ps. 30: 11. Is. 14:1,2. 60:14—16. Rev. 11:18.

d 19. 8:11.
e Deut. 2:30. Josh. 11:20. Is. 8:9.
f 8:17. Ex. 23:27. Josh. 2:9.
g 3:12. 8:9. Ezra 8:36. Dan. 3:2, 3. 6: 1,2.
* Heb. those which did the business that belonged to the king.
h 3:2—6. 8:15.
i Josh. 6:27. 1 Sam. 2:30. 1 Chr. 14: 17. Zeph. 3:19. Matt. 4:24.
k 2 Sam. 3:1. 1 Chr. 11:9. Is. 1:3. Prov. 4:18. Is. 9:7.
l Ps. 18:34—40.47,48. 20:7,8. 149:6—9. 2 Thes. 1:8.
m Jer. 18:21.
† Heb. according to their will.
n See on 3:15.
o 5:11. Ex. 20:5 Job 18:18,19. 27: 13—15. Ps. 21:10. 109:1-,13. p 3:1. 7:4,6. Ex. 17:16.
q 15,16. 8:11. Gen. 14:23. Rom. 12: 17. 1 Phil. 4:8.
‡ Heb. came.
r 5:6. 7:2.
s 8:11.
§ Heb. let men hang Haman's ten sons. 2 Sam. 21:6,9. Gal. 3:13.
t 2. 8:11. Ps. 118:7—12.
u 10,16. 1 Thes. 5:22. Heb. 13:5.
x 8:11. Lev. 26:7,8.
‖ Heb. in it.
y 1,11,13.
z 22. 8:17. Deut. 16:11,14. Neh. 8: 10—12. Ps. 118:11—16. Luke 11:41. Rev. 11:10.

NOTES.

CHAP. IX. V. 3, 4. (M. R.) SCOTT.

Verses 5—13.

There is no intimation, that the Jews injured any individual, who was not found in arms against them. (3:12—15. 8:11—13.) It is probable, Esther had learned from Mordecai, that Haman's retainers still formed a faction, not only dangerous to the Jews, but to the state; and were prepared to renew the attack on the next day. ID.

Verse 15.

(Notes, 3:1. Ex. 17:14—16.) SCOTT.

Verse 16.

75,000, &c.] All this large number lost their lives, through the pride and revenge of one wicked man, but by their own malice and enmity to the worshippers of JEHOVAH. It was one of the most necessary defensive wars, that ever any people or nation engaged in. ID.

and a good day, and of sending portions one to another.

20 And Mordecai [a] wrote these things; and sent letters unto all the Jews that were [b] in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, both nigh and far;

21 To establish this among them, that they should keep the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the same, yearly;

22 As [c] the days wherein the Jews rested from their enemies, and the month which was turned unto them [d] from sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day: that they should make them days of feasting and joy, and of [e] sending portions one to another, and gifts to the poor.

23 And the Jews undertook to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto them:

24 Because Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, [f] the enemy of all the Jews, had devised against the Jews to destroy them, and had cast [g] Pur, that is, the lot, to [*] consume them, and to destroy them;

25 But † when Esther came before the king, he commanded by letters, that his wicked device which he devised against the Jews, should [h] return upon his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows.

26 Wherefore [i] they called these days Purim, after the name of ‡ Pur. Therefore for all the words of this [j] letter, and of that which they had seen concerning this matter, and which had come unto them,

27 The Jews ordained, and took upon them, [k] and upon their seed, and upon [l] all such as joined themselves unto them, so as it should not § fail, that they would keep these two days, according to their writing, and according to their appointed time every year;

28 And that these days should be [m] remembered and kept throughout every generation, every family, every province, and every city; and that these days of Purim should not ‖ fail from among the Jews, nor [n] the memorial of them ¶ perish from their seed.

29 Then Esther the queen, [o] the daughter of Abihail, and Mordecai the Jew, wrote with all [] authority, to [p] confirm this second letter of Purim.

30 And he sent the letters unto all the Jews, to [q] the hundred twenty and seven provinces of the kingdom of Ahasuerus, with [r] words of peace and truth, a Ex. 17:14. Deut. 31:19—22. 1 Chr. 16:12. Ps. 124:1—3. 145:4—12. 2 Cor. 1:10,11.

b 1:1,22. 3:12. 8:9.
c 3:12,13. Ex. 13:3—8. Ps. 103:2. Is. 12:1,2. 14:3. d Is. 30:11. Matt. 5:4. John 16:20—22. e 19. Neh. 8:10,12. Luke 11:41. Acts 2:44—46. Gal. 2:10.
f 10. 5:5—15.
g 3:7.
* Heb. crush.
† Heb. when she came. 13,14. 7:5—10. 8:1—14.
h Ps. 7:16. 109:17,18. 140:9. 141:10. Matt. 21:44.
i Num. 16:40. Ez. 39:11. j That is, Lot.
‡ 20.
k Deut. 5:3. 29:14,15. Josh. 9:15. 1 Sam. 30:25. 2 Sam. 21:1,2. l 8:17. Is. 56:3,6. Zech. 2:11. 8:22.
§ Heb. pass.
m Ex. 12:17. Ps. 78:5—7. 103:2.
‖ Heb. pass.
n Ex. 13:8,9. Josh. 4:7. Zech. 6:14.
¶ Heb. be ended.
o 2:15.
 Heb. strength.
p 20. 8:10.
q 1:1. 8:9.
r Is. 39:8. Zech. 8:19.

cleared themselves of their enemies on the 13th of the month, and rested on the 14th, (v. 17.) making that a thanksgiving-day; v. 19. the Jews in Shushan, the royal city, took two days for their military execution, so they rested on the 15th, and made that their thanksgiving-day, v. 18. Both celebrated their festival the very day after they had gained their point. When we have received signal mercies, we ought to be quick in thankful returns to God, while the mercy is fresh, and its impressions most sensible.

V. 20—32. We have here Esther's and Mordecai's course, to spread the knowledge of this triumph among their people, and perpetuate the remembrance of it to posterity, for the honor of God, and the encouragement of his people to trust in Him at all times.

I. The history was written, and copies were dispersed among all the Jews in all the provinces, both nigh and far, v. 20. They all knew something of the story, (being by the first edict made sensible of their danger, and by the second of their deliverance,) but not how this amazing turn was given; Mordecai therefore wrote these things. And if this book be the same he wrote, as many think, I cannot but observe the difference between Mordecai's style and Nehemiah's; Nehemiah, at every turn, notices Divine Providence and the good hand of his God upon him; but Mordecai never so much as mentions the name of God in the whole story. Nehemiah wrote his book at Jerusalem, where religion was in fashion, and an air of it appeared in men's common conversation; Mordecai wrote his at Shushan the palace, where policy reigned more than piety, and he wrote according to the genius of the place. Even those that have the root of the matter in them, are apt to lose the savor of religion, and let their leaf wither, when they converse wholly with those that have little religion. Commend me to Nehemiah's way of writing, that I would imitate; and yet learn from Mordecai's, that men may be truly devout, though they do not abound in the shows and expressions of devotion, and therefore that we must not judge or despise our brethren. But because there is so little of the language of Canaan in this book, many think it was not written by Mordecai, but was an extract out of the journals of the kings of Persia, giving an account of the matter of fact, which the Jews themselves knew how to comment upon.

II. A yearly festival was instituted, that the children which should be born, might know this wonderful work God wrought for them, and declare it to their children, that they might set their hope in God, Ps. 78: 6, 7. It would honor God as the Protector of his people, and Israel as the care of Heaven, confirm the fidelity of God's covenant, be an invitation to strangers to come into the bonds of it, and encourage God's own people cheerfully to depend on Him, his wisdom, power, and goodness, in the greatest straits. Posterity would reap the benefit, and therefore ought to celebrate the memorial of this deliverance. This festival,

1. Was observed, every year, the 14th and 15th of the 12th month, just a month before the passover, v. 21. Thus the first and last month of the year kept in remembrance the days when God preserved them. They kept two days together as thanksgiving-days. Let us not be niggardly in returns of praise to Him, who bestows so liberally. The modern Jews observe the 13th day, the day appointed for their destruction, as a fasting-day, grounding it on v. 31. the matters of the fastings and their cry. But that refers to what was in the day of their distress, (ch. 4: 3, 16) which was not to be continued, when God had turned their fasts into joy and gladness, Zech. 8: 19. 2. It was called, The feast of Purim, (v. 26.) from Pur, a Persian word, which signifies a lot, because Haman had by lot determined this to be the time of the Jews' destruction, while the Lord, at whose disposal the lot is, had determined it to be the time of their triumph, Isa. 44: 25, 26. 3. It was not a divine institution, therefore it is not called a holy day, but a human appointment, by which it was made a good day, v. 19, 22. The Jews ordained it, and took it on themselves; (v. 27.) voluntarily undertook to do as they had begun, v. 23. Mordecai and Esther confirmed their resolve, that it might be the more binding to posterity, and come well recommended. They wrote With all authority; (v. 29.) as well they might, Esther being queen, and Mordecai prime minister. It is well, when those in authority use it to authorize what is good. Though they wrote with authority, they wrote also words of peace and truth, with tenderness; not imperious, not imposing, but in such language as the council at Jerusalem, (Acts 15: 29.) Such was the style of these letters, or such their salutation or valediction, Peace and truth be with you. 4. It was to be observed, by all the Jews and their seed, and by all such proselytes as joined them, v. 27. A concurrence in joys and praises is one branch of the communion of saints. 5. Why; that the memorial of the great things God had done for his church, might never perish from their seed, v. 28. Eccl. 3: 14. They would remember Haman's bad practices, v. 24. God's people may never be secure, while they have such malicious enemies, on whom they ought to have a jealous eye—Esther's good services, v. 25. Good deeds for God's Israel ought to be remembered, to encourage others. God will not forget them, therefore we must not.—Their own prayers, and the answers to them, v. 31. Call upon Me in time of trouble, and then offer to God thanksgiving. 6. How; as a day of cheerfulness, of feasting and joy, v. 22. Eccl. 10: 19. When God gives us cause to rejoice, why should we not express our joy? As a day of generosity; sending portions one to another in token of pleasantness and mutual respect; friends have their goods in common: and as a day of charity; sending gifts to the poor, Luke 14: 12, 13. They that have received mercy, must, in token of gratitude, show mercy; and there never wants occasion, the poor we have always. Thanksgiving and almsgiving should go together, that when we are rejoicing and blessing God, the heart of the poor may rejoice with us, and their loins bless us.

Verse 20.

'Mordecai wrote these things,' or the history contained in this book, as the words most obviously imply; and not merely the letters afterwards mentioned, as many understand it. SCOTT.

Verses 21—32.

It seems they afterwards grew negligent: and therefore a second letter was written, with all authority, by Esther and Mordecai, enjoining the observance—yet under the direction and according to the mind

31 To confirm these days of Purim in their times appointed, according as Mordecai the Jew, and Esther the queen, had enjoined them, and as they had decreed for * themselves, * and for their seed; the matters of the fastings and their cry.

32 And the decree of Esther confirmed these matters of Purim; and it was written in the book.

CHAP. X.

The greatness of Ahasuerus, and the advancement and usefulness of Mordecai, 1—3.

AND the king Ahasuerus [a] laid a tribute upon the land, and upon [b] the isles of the sea.

2 And [c] all the acts of his power, and of his might, and the declaration of the greatness of Mordecai, whereunto the king † advanced him, are they not written [d] in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Media and Persia?

3 For Mordecai the Jew was [e] next unto king Ahasuerus, and great

* Heb. their souls.
a 27.
t 4:3,16. Jon. 3:2—9.
a 1:1. 8:9. Luke 2:1.

b Gen. 10:5. Ps. 72:10. Is. 24:15. Dan. 11:18.
c 1 K. 11:41. 22:39.
† Heb. made him great. 8:15. 9:4. Ps. 18:35.
d 2:23. 6:1. 1 K. 14:19.
e Gen. 41:40. 1 Sam. 23:17. 2 Chr. 28:7.

CHAP. X. V. 1—3. This is but a part of a ch., the rest of it, beginning at v. 4. with 6 chs.

What was added to this, was much better. They always, at the feast, read the whole story over in the synagogue, each day, and put up three prayers to God; in which, (1.) they praise God respectively, for counting them worthy to attend this divine service; (2.) for the miraculous preservation of their ancestors; (3.) that they have lived to observe another festival in memory of it. So Patrick.

What it is since degenerated to, is much worse. Their own writers own, that this feast is commonly celebrated among them with gluttony, drunkenness, and excess of riot. Their Talmud says expressly, that, in the feast of Purim, a man should drink till he knows not the difference between, Cursed be Haman, and, Blessed be Mordecai. See what the corrupt and wicked nature of man often brings that to, which was at first well intended; here is a religious feast turned into a carnival, a perfect revel. Nothing more purifies the heart, and adorns religion, than holy joy; nothing more pollutes the heart, and reproaches religion, than carnal mirth and sensual pleasure. [Note, 2 Chr. 20: 3,4.] What is best becomes, when corrupted, the worst.

more, being found only in the Greek, is rejected as apocryphal. We are here told,

1. How great and powerful Ahasuerus was. Beside the usual customs the kings of Persia exacted, (Ezra 4: 13.) he laid an additional tribute, v. 1. Happy our land, that pays no tribute but what is laid upon it by its representatives, and those of its own choosing, and is not oppressed by an arbitrary power. Beside this instance of the grandeur of Ahasuerus, many more might be given, v. 2. but they are not thought fit to be recorded here in the sacred story, which is confined to the Jews, and relates the affairs of other nations only as they fell in with theirs, but they are written in the Persian chronicles, (v. 2.) long since lost or buried in oblivion, while the sacred writings will live till time shall be no more. Dan. 2: 44.

2. How great and good Mordecai was: it does one good to see virtue and piety thus in honor. Men of merit, often, by some means or other, are discovered and preferred at last. The declaration of the greatness to which the king advanced Mordecai, was written in the chronicles of the kingdom, as very memorable, and contributing to the great achievements of the king. But Mordecai was great too among the Jews (v. 3.) not only above them, more honorable, but with them, dear to, familiar with, and much respected by them. He

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The obstinate enemies and persecutors of the church are often left to act in the most infatuated manner; being urged on by malice, in opposition to the most evident dictates of prudence. (Ex. 14: 5—9, 21—23.) For the records of history show, that when the enemies of God's people have 'hoped to have power over them,' it has generally been 'turned to the contrary,' and they have gained the advantage 'over them that hated them.' Yet, neither observation, nor experience, nor demonstration, can subdue the enmity of the carnal mind, which seizes every opportunity of exerting itself: and even the protection of the ruling powers, if not very decisive, has generally been found insufficient to repress the spirit of persecution; though men commonly fear the displeasure of a king, or of powerful courtiers, far more than the wrath of Almighty God.—The aggressor is answerable for all the blood shed in unjust war; provided the advantages gained by those, who stand in their own defence in a good cause, be not pushed on with revenge and cruelty: and when whole nations are attacked on account of religion, they have as good a right to defend themselves, as when the assault is made on any other unrighteous pretext.—Prosperous sinners often bequeath their vices and enmities to their posterity; the effects of which remain, when their ill-gotten or abused affluence is dissipated: but children will never be ruined by the crimes of their parents, unless they imitate them. (Ex. 20: 5. Ez. 18: 2—4, 14—17.)—What dire effects to thousands may result from one malicious, or even incautious action! (3: 8—11.)—Alas! the best institutions are liable to be perverted by human depravity; and to degenerate, not only into a form, but into an occasion of sin. Holy joy in God is supplanted by sensual indulgence and carnal mirth: under pretence of celebrating great deliverances, [thanksgivings,] or even of commemorating the mysteries of redemption, professed Christians often behave, as if they were the devotees of Bacchus or of Momus; and, instead of 'a good day' and a feast unto the Lord, they, like the worshippers of the golden calf, 'sit down to eat and drink, and rise up to play!' (Ex. 32: 1. P. O. 1—14.) Nothing more deeply disgraces religion, or stupifies the conscience, than such abuses. May the Lord teach us to rejoice with that holy joy, which anticipates and prepares for the felicity of heaven! SCOTT.

of the Spirit of God. It was evidently proper to perpetuate the memory of so extraordinary a deliverance. Some think it was intended, that the 13th day should be observed as a day of fasting and prayer, as an introduction to the festival; and the Jews at present profess to observe it as such: but the decree does not admit of this construction. Finally, the decree was added to this history, that the institution might never be forgotten. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. X. V. 1—3. These vs. close the narrative, as it stands in the original Heb.; and are very improperly detached from the preceding ch.—This book is placed in our Bibles the last of the historical records of the Jews; though the events recorded by Nehemiah seem to have occurred subsequent to most, if not all, in this book. (Note, Neh. 2: 6.)—However, for above 400 years, i. e. till the coming of the Messiah, the scriptural narrative of that favored nation is suspended.—A compendious view of the most material events, as transmitted to us by other writers, is added, at the close of this book, in order to connect the Old Testament with the New.—It has been observed, that no pagan writer mentions any of the events of the book of Esther: but, in fact, little comparatively is known concerning the Persian kings, or the Medo-Persian empire except as connected with the history of Greece, and as recorded by Grecian historians: and it cannot be supposed, that the concerns of the Jews, as dispersed through the vast empire of Persia, would at all attract the attention of that proud people, who considered all nations, except themselves, as barbarians; and who peculiarly despised the Jews, as a bigoted and narrow-minded race; because they would not conform to any of their varied idolatries, or embrace any of their systems of philosophy. ID.

(1, 2.) Isles.] 'In the Ægean Sea, conquered by Darius Hystaspes.' USHER. Chronicles.] 'The Persians have ever taken more pains than almost any nation, to preserve their records in writing; yet their fate has been to be indebted for the stability of their fame to foreign historians; [Ezra, Nehemiah, the author of Esther, some of the later prophets, and Herodot. Ctesias, Xen. and Arrian.] The perplexity, occasioned by the difference in the names or titles of certain kings, has been removed by the labors of the learned; see EICHHORN, Rep. B. 15. their names, indeed, were only titles or surnames, of which Herod. gives a translation. Darius signified the mighty, Xerxes, the warlike, Artaxerxes, the great warrior. [Darius and Xerxes appear to be compound words [note and cut, end of Ezra], the first abbreviated from Dara (Lord) and Kshah (King): whence Æl. Lampr. calls Artaxerxes, 'a most powerful king, as well in fact, as in name.' GROTEFEND.] The sort of history the Persians possessed was closely connected with their polity, and a fruit of their despotic government, and of the almost idolatrous respect in which their kings were held. [Note, 3: 2.] Whatever their monarchs said or did was of course worthy of being recorded; and to this intent his person was usually surrounded (in public, at festivals, reviews, in battles) by scribes or secretaries, whose office it was to register all his words and actions. They wrote down from his mouth (according to the eastern custom) his commands and ordinances, which, being sealed with his signet, were immediately despatched. So the Mongol conquerors. Hyder Ali usually appeared in public surrounded by 40 such secretaries. Such was the origin of the Chronicles or Diaries of the Persians; styled by CTESIAS, diphtherai basilikai; and apparently written on leather or parchment. Such records would be rather a history of the court than of the empire; an idea confirmed by the fragments of Ctesias, and Esth. 6: 1, 2.' HEEREN.

To show the hopelessness of reconciling the Greek and Persian lists of the early kings of Persia, Fraser thus gives both. ED.

'Persian authorities.		'Greek authorities
1. Kei Kobad, founder of Kayanians,	120	1. Dejoces, [710, B. C.] reigned	53 yrs.
No corresponding prince in Pers. hist.		2. Phraortes,	22
2. Kei Kaoos,	150	3. Cyaxares,	40
No corresponding prince.		4. Astyages,	35
3. Kei Khoosroo,	60	5. Cyrus,	30
4. Lohrasp,	120	6. Cambyses,	7 5 m.
		7. Smerdis the Magian,	7 m.
5. Gushtasp,	60	8. Darius Hystaspes,	36
		9. Xerxes,	21
6. Ardeshir Diraz-dusht, (long handed)	112	10. Artaxerxes Longimanus,	49
7. Queen Homai,	32	No corresponding prince.
8. Darab I.		11. Darius Nothus,	19
		12. Artaxerxes Mnemon,	46
No corresponding prince,		13. Ochus,	21
Darab II.	9	14. Arses,	2
		15. Darius Codomanus,	6
	663		337

among the Jews, and [f] accepted of the multitude of his brethren, [g] seeking the wealth of his people, and speaking peace to all his seed.

[f] 3:2. Rom. 14:18.
[g] Neh. 2:10. Ps. 122:8,9. Rom. 9:2,3. 10:1.

was good, very good, for he did good; that made him truly great, and then his greatness gave him an opportunity of doing so much the more good. Doing good works is the best and chief thing expected from those that have wealth and power; but giving good words is also commendable, and makes the good deed the more acceptable. He did not side with any one party of his people against another, but was a common father to them all, recommended himself to the multitude of his brethren, not despising the crowd, and spake peace to all their seed, without distinction. Thus he made himself acceptable by humility and beneficence. Thanks be to God, such a government as this we are blessed with, seeks the welfare of our people, speaking peace to all their seed. God continue it long, very long! And grant us, under its happy protection and influence, to live quiet and peaceable lives, in godliness, honesty, and charity.

Comparative Chronology for a period of 1000 years B. C., principally after Hales.

EGYPT.	Hales.	Wilkinson.	The Heb. Monarchy extends fm. Egypt to Euphrates, under Solomon in the yr. 1000 B. C.	Hales	Usher
			Rehoboam succeeds Solomon in - - -	990	975
			Judah.
Sheshonk I. (Shishak) ascends throne.	988	978	Invasion of Shishak - - - - - - -		971
			Abijah succeeds his father - - - - -	973	958
			His victory over Jeroboam - - - - -		957
Osorkon I. (Zerah)		945	Asa succeeds his father - - - - - -	970	955
Battle with Asa		941	His covenant - - - - - - - - -		941
			War with Baasha - - - - - - - -		930
Takelothe		925
			Asa diseased in his feet - - - - - -		917
			Jehoshaphat succeeds his father - - -	925	914
Osorkon II.		908	He expels superstitious worship - - -		912
			Expedition against Ramoth Gilead - -		897
			A fleet equipped for Ophir - - - - -		896
			Elisha procures water for the armies - -		895
Sheshonk II.		890	Jehoram (assoc. with his father, 892) succ.	904	889
			Introduces idolatry; is smitten with disease		887
Other kings (?		to	Ahaziah succeeds his father - - - -	896	885
Tnephactus (?)		abt.	Slain by Jehu. Athaliah usurps the throne	895	884
			Joash anointed king and Athaliah slain	889	878
		880	He orders the temple to be repaired -		856
			Jehoiada dies, 842. Zechariah stoned -		840
			Amaziah succeeds his father - - - -	849	839
			Challenges Jehoash and is overcome -		826
Pehor-Bakhor (Bocchoris)	815	812	Slain; and an interregnum follows - -	820	810
			Azariah (Uzziah) succeeds his father -	809	810
Sabakoftep (So, of SS.)	769	773	Smitten with leprosy - - - - - - -		765
			Jotham succeeds his father - - - -	757	758
			Ahaz succeeds his father - - - - -	741	742
			Judah oppressed by Rezin and Pekah -		741
			Ahaz pays tribute to the king of Assyria		740
Shebek(?)	715	728	Hezekiah succeeds his father - - - -	725	727
			Diligently promotes reformation - - -		727
Tehrak (Tirhakah of SS.)
Sethos (of Herodotus) contemporary at Memphis.	713	714	Sennacherib, (son of Salm.) inv. Judah	715	713
			Hezekiah's sickness - - - - - - -		713
			Receives ambassadors from Babylon -		712
		to	Sennacherib besieges Jerusalem: his army destroyed - - - - - - - -	712	710
Stephinathis
Nechepsus
Necho I.
12 Nomarchs	673	690
Psamatik I.	658	664
Neco (Nechao II) Necho of SS.	619	610	2d Inv. of Judea and cap. of Manasseh	674
			3d Inv. by Holofernes (Assyrian)	640
Psamatik II.		604	Josiah defeated and slain by Necho	610
Psamatik III. (Hophra, SS.)	597	595	Kingdom of Judah continues till Nabokolassar, Boktanser or Nebuchadnezzar destroys Jerusalem - - - -	588	588
Ames Neitse (Amasis)	568	570
20,000 cities in Egypt
			Ilverodam (Evil-Merodach) r. 561. Nitocris the Mede succ. Belshazzar at Babylon, in Persia 8 yrs. (from 559) in Media 15
MEDO-PERSIAN EMPIRE (which comm. 551).
Cambyses conquers all Egypt	525	525	Cyrus proclaims liberty to the Jews - -	536
Egypt revolts	487	521	The temple finished - - - - - - -	515
Xerxes reconquers Egypt.	484	485	Ahasuerus (Artax. Long.) Stops the building of Jerusalem - - - - - -	163
			Esther made qn. 458 Ezra sent to Judea	457
Eg. conq. by Grks.	332		Haman's plot 450 Nehemiah reb. Jeru	445
Ptolemaic dyn. be.	323		About this time Ezra is supposed to have	444
Ends at Cleopatra's d. when Eg. bec. Rom. prov.	30		Nehemiah sent back to Jeru. ref. abuses	424
			Malachi flourished (420) or as some - -	397
Darab II. Darius Codomannus, (335) being conquered by Alexander, or Ascander, the Medo-Persian empire ends in the Macedo-Grecian - - - - -

Jeroboam revolts in - - - - - - - -	990	975
Israel.
The prophet of Bethel - - - - - -		974
Jeroboam overcome by Abijah - - - -		957
Nadab succeeds his father - - - -	968	954
Baasha succeeds his father, who is slain	966	953
Builds Ramah. Elah succeeds - - -	943	930
Murd'd by Zimri, whom Omri dethrones	942	929
Omri reigns jointly with Tibni till - -		925
Omri builds Samaria - - - - - - -		924
Ahab succeeds his father - - - - -	931	918
Elijah foretells famine, 910. His sacrifice		906
Syrians defeated - - - - - - - -		901
Ahaziah (assoc. with his father 898) succ.	909	897
Hurt by a fall and dies - - - - - -		896
Jehoram succeeds his brother - - - -	907	896
Elijah taken up to heaven - - - - -		896
Benhadad besieges Samaria - - - -		892
Jehoram wounded at Ramoth-Gilead -		884
Jehu slays him and reigns - - - - -	895	884
Jonah preaches at Nineveh (abt.) - -	800	962
Jehoahaz succeeds his father - - - -	867	856
Jehoash or Joash succeeds his father -	850	839
Jeroboam II. succeeds his father - - -	834	825
Dies, and an interregnum follows - -	793	784
Zachariah, his son, enth'd, then murd. by	771	773
Shallum killed in 1 m. by Menahem who r.	770	772
Pekahiah succeeds his father - - - -	760	761
Pekah murders and succeeds him - -	758	759
Part of Israel carried captive - - - -	740	740
Pekah slain by Hoshea, anarchy ensues	739	738
Hoshea begins to reign - - - - - -	728	730
Israel tributary to Salmanezer - - - -		728
Hoshea refuses the tribute, & Salmanezer besieges Samaria - - - - -	725	724
Samaria is taken, the 10 tribes carried cap., the kingdom of Is. exting'd while that of Judah remains 130 yrs. longer.	719	721
Sennacherib - - - 714 Invades Judah - - Esarhaddon Asaradin (or Sardanapalus I.) Revolt of Babylonians and Medes - - - - 1st Interregnum 704.
Aphronadius - 699.
Missesimordak - 692.
Babylon reduced by
Esarhaddon regains Babylon - - - - -	680
Ninus III. (succeeds to Assyrian empire) - -	667
Nabuchodonosor - - - - - - - -	658
Def. of Arphaxad (Phraortes the Mede.) - -	641
Sarac or Sardanapalus II. - - - - -	636
Nabopolassar (Babylonian) takes Assyrian capi-	606
sisted by the Medes, and destroys it, 17 or 19 cent. afzar succeeds Nabopolassar and reigns over the Babylonian Empire -		604
Subdues Elam or Persia (proper) - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -		596
ricassolassar, Neriglissar or Belshazzar 559. Cyaxares II. or Fraiborz, or Darius and appoints Nabonadius prefect there 553. Kai Chosru or Cyrus the Persian r. ... (from 551) in Babylon 7 yrs. (from his taking it in 536) thus founding the -		551
Conquers Egypt 535, (which first revolts 525.) Cambyses or Lohorasp - - - -		529
Smerdis Magus 521 r. 7 mos. Darius son of Hystaspes or Gushtasp - - - -		521
Xerxes 495. Artaxerxes Longimanus, (Ardshir diraz dest or Bahaman) - - -		464
Xerxes his son succ. and reigns 45 days; assass. by Sogdianus who reigns about 6 months killed by Ochus in 424 who takes the name of Darius Nothus
Darius Nothus succ. 423. Artaxerxes Mnemon - - - - - - - - - -		404
Ochus or Darab I., Arogus, or Arses succ. - - - - - - -		358

ASSYRIA and BABYLON.	Hales	Hales.
It is uncert. whether Herod'd Dayolon Semiramis reigned 42 yrs.	985	Pertiades
The Dynasty of Mithraeus or Ninus II. ends in - - 821.	956	Ophratæus
	935	Epecheres, or Ofratanes
		Acroganes or Acrazapes
	883
	841	Thonus Concolerus
	821	King of Nineveh
	790	Pul, or Belus II.
	770	1st inv. of Israel
	747	Tiglathpileser
	740	2d inv. of Israel.
	733
	726	Shalmanasser
	722	3d inv. of Israel.
	721
Mardok revolts from Assyria and writes to Hezekiah 710	711
	710
Arcianus - -	709
Belibus - -	702
Regibelus - -	693
2d Interregnum	688
the Assyrians	680
& resides there	680
Saosduchin, vry.	667
Chiniladon	647
Nabopolassar	625
tal Nineveh, as-	606
ter its found'n.	604

MACEDON, early more civilized than the Greeks, was a limited monarchy, or varying extent, the history commences with the Heraclidæ, K. of Argos, son of Amyntas (Ch. who reigned Grecce, destroyed by national dissensions, at the end of Cheronea in 338, and left his throne to his son Alexander the Great. 336 (Hales 356)

MEDES AND PERSIANS. Medes revolt from Assyria, (Interregnum,) 710. Dejoces or Arbaces 708. Phraortes or Artynes or Arphaxad 663. Cyaxares I. or Cyaxares II. or Kaikobad, or Ahasuerus, or Astyages, or Kaikous 634. Cyaxares II. 601. Cyaxares II. 596. Darius Hystaspes or Gushtasp 521. Xerxes 485. Artaxerxes Longimanus 464. Darius Nothus 423. Artaxerxes Mnemon 404. Darius Codomannus 336. Alexander the Great 331.

ROME founded by Romulus in 753. A limited monarchy, under 7 successive kings. The last, Tarquinius Superbus, expelled, Rome became a Republic in 510. Kings fully obtained 340. Gr. & Macedonian empire 146.

MACEDO-GRECIAN EMPIRE. Alexander the Grt. 331. Philip Aridæus 323. 1st Partition of provinces 323. Alexander Ægus 317. Seleucus Nicator. Era of Seleucidæ 312. 2d Div. of prov. 310. Final partit. of Emp. 301. of which Seleucus obt. all but Egypt. Lybia, Arabia, Cele Syria and Palestine, which 246 were Ptolemy's. Antiochus Soter, succ. 280. Antiochus Theos 261. Parthian revolt 251. Seleucus Callinicus 246. Ends (in more E. prov.) with the Parthian Empire, commencing with Arsaces 229, founder of a dyn. of Aschkanian kings, who end in Ardevan III. A. D. 225. Orodes k. B. C. 4. Seleucus Keraunus succ. his fath. 2:5. Antiochus the Gr. (his bro.) succ. 223. obt. poss. of Syr. & Pal. 198. Worsted by the Romans 190. Killed in Persia - - - - 188

ROMAN EMPIRE. Syria red. to Rom. prov. by Pompey the Grt. & Jews depend't on Rom. 63 Antipater r. in Jud. 47. Herod's access. 37. k. at Christ's birth 4

See for the period of Jewish History between the close of the sacred canon and the Christian era, the note at the end of Nehemiah.

THE PREFACE TO THE POETICAL BOOKS.

THE five books, Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and Solomon's Song, though of the same divine origin, design, and authority, yet, on some accounts, are very different from the rest of the sacred writings: such variety of methods has Infinite Wisdom seen fit to take, in conveying the light of divine revelation to men, that this heavenly food might have (as the Jews say of the manna) something in it agreeable to every palate, and suited to every constitution. If every eye be not thus opened, every mouth will be stopped, and such as perish in their ignorance will be left without excuse. Matt. 11:17.

I. The books of Scripture have hitherto been, mostly, very plain and easy narratives of matter of fact, which he that runs may read and understand; but here we are advanced to a higher form in God's school, and have books put into our hands, the study whereof requires a more close application of mind, greater intenseness of thought, and a diligent search, which yet the treasure hid in them, when found, will abundantly recompense. The same method is observable in the N. T. where we find the plain history of Christ and his gospel placed first in the Evangelists, and the Acts of the Apostles; then the mystery of both in the Epistles, which are more difficult to be understood; and, lastly, the prophecies of things to come, in the Apocalyptic visions.

This method, so exactly observed in both the Testaments, directs us in what order to proceed, both in studying the things of God, and in teaching them; and where can we expect a better method of divinity, and of preaching? Our Lord spake the word to the people as they were able to hear it, (Mark 4:33.) and had many things to say to his disciples which He did not, because as yet they could not bear them, John 16: 12, 13. And those whom Paul could not speak to as unto spiritual—though he blamed their backwardness, yet he accommodated himself to their weakness, and spake to them as unto babes in Christ, 1 Cor. 3:1, 2. Yet though we must never think to learn above our Bible, as long as we are in this world, we must still be getting forward in it: and then shall we know, if thus, by regular steps (Hos. 6:3.) we follow on to know, the Lord, and what the mind of the Lord is.

II. The divine philosophy, (if I may so call it,) in these books, (an account of the notions, sentiments, thoughts, affections of those who went before us) is not less needful than their acts, than the sacred history (we have hitherto had) was. Blessed be God for both.

III. The Jews make these books to be given by a divine inspiration somewhat different from that both of Moses and the prophets. They divided the books of the O. T. into the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings, which Epiphanius emphatically translates Things written, and these books are more commonly called among the Greeks Hagiographa, Holy Writings: the Jews attribute them to that distinct kind of inspiration which they call ruhhakodesh, The Holy Spirit. Moses they supposed to write by the Spirit, in a way above all the other prophets, for with him God spake mouth to mouth, even apparently; knew him, (Num. 12:8.) i. e. conversed with him face to face, Deut. 34:10. He was made partaker of divine revelation, (as Maimonides distinguishes, De Fund. Legis, c. 7.) per vigiliam—while awake,* whereas God manifested Himself to all the other prophets in a dream or vision: and he adds, that Moses understood the words of prophecy without any perturbation or astonishment of mind, whereas the other prophets commonly fainted and were troubled. But the writers of the Hagiographa, they suppose, to be inspired in a degree somewhat below that of the other prophets, and to receive divine revelation, not as they did, by dreams, and visions, and voices, but (as Maimonides describes it, More Nevochim—part 2. ch. 45.) they perceived some power to rise within them, and rest on them, which urged and enabled them to write or speak far above their own natural ability, in psalms or hymns, or in history, or in rules of good living, still enjoying the ordinary vigor and use of their senses. Let David himself describe it. The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and his word was in my tongue: the God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spake to me, 2 Sam. 23:2, 3. This gives such a magnificent account of the inspiration by which David wrote, that I see not why it should be made inferior to that of the other prophets, for David is expressly called a prophet, Acts 2:30.

But, since our hand is in with the Jewish masters, let us see what books they account Hagiographa. These five now before us come, without dispute, into this rank, and the book of the Lamentations is not unfitly added. Indeed, the Jews, when they would speak critically, reckon all the songs in the O. T. among the Hagiographa; for, though penned by prophets, and under the direction of the Holy Ghost, yet, because not the proper result of a prophetic vision, they were not strictly prophecy. As to the Historical Books, they distinguish (I think without a difference;) some they assign to the prophets, calling them the former prophets, namely, Josh. Judg. and the two books of Kings; but others they rank among the Hagiographa, as, Ruth, (which yet is but an appendix to Judg.) the two books of Chr. with Ezra, Neh. and Esth. which last the Rabbins greatly value, and think is to be had in equal esteem with the law of Moses itself, that it shall last as long as it lasts, and shall survive the writings of the prophets. And, lastly, they reckon the book of Daniel among the Hagiographa,† for which no reason can be given, since he was not inferior to any of the prophets in the gift of prophecy: and, therefore, the learned Mr. Smith thinks their placing it there was fortuitous, and by mistake.‡

Mr. Smith, in his Discourse, before quoted, though he supposes this kind of divine inspiration to be more placate and serene than that which was strictly called prophecy, not acting so much upon the imagination, but seating itself in the higher and purer faculties of the soul, yet shows that it manifested itself to be of a divine nature, not only as it always acted pious souls into strains of devotion, or moved them strangely to dictate matters of true piety and goodness, but as it came in abruptly on the minds of those holy men, and transported them from the temper of mind they were in before; so that they perceived themselves captivated by the power of some higher light than that which their own understanding commonly poured out upon them; and this, says he, was a kind of vital form to that light of divine and sanctified reason which they were perpetually possessed of, and that constant frame of holiness and goodness which dwelt in their hallowed minds.' We have reason to glorify that God of Israel who gave such power unto men, and has here transmitted to us the blessed products of that power.

IV. The style and composition of these books are different from those that go before, and those that follow. Our Savior divides the books of the O. T. into the Law, the Prophets, and the Psalms, (Luke 24:44.) and thereby teaches us to distinguish those books that are poetical, or metrical, from the Law and the Prophets; and such are all these that are now before us, except Ecclesiastes, which yet, having something restrained in its style, may well enough be reckoned among them. They are books in verse, according to the ancient rules of versifying, though not according to the Greek and Latin prosodies.

'The principal, and indeed the only characteristic of Hebrew poetry, which can now be traced, is parallelism, or such an arrangement of parts of a sentence, that things shall answer to things, and words to words, as if fitted by a kind of rule or measure. Such is the general strain of the Hebrew poetry, instances of which are found in almost every part of the O. T. particularly in Ps. and Prov. This explains why the English version, though in prose, retains in many parts so much of a poetical cast. For, being almost word for word after the original, the form and order of the sentences are preserved, and we plainly perceive a departure from the common style of prose.'

'This subject has been very fully examined by Lowth and Jebb, and a general view of it is given by T. H. Horne, from whom many of the preceding and following remarks are taken. [See also Boys's Key to Ps.] In this place only a brief outline can be stated. The poetical parallelism has been found reducible to the following species. (1.) Parallel lines gradational: see Ps. 1:1. 21:1, 2. 24:3, 4. (2.) Antithetic: Ps. 20:7, 8. 30:5. 37:10, 11. Prov. 10:1, 7. 11:24. 16:33. 29:26. (3.) Constructive: Ps. 19:7—17. 148:7, 13. Job 12:13—16. Each of the above species admits of many combinations. (4.) Parallel lines introverted: Prov. 25:15, 16. Ps. 135:15—18. The latter passage may be given as an illustrative specimen.

1. The idols of the heathen are silver and gold,
2. The work of men's hands;
3. They have mouths, but they speak not;
4. They have eyes, but they see not;
5. They have ears, but they hear not,
6. Neither is there any breath in their mouths.
7. They who make them are like unto them:
8. So are all they who put their trust in them.

'The reader will perceive the manner in which lines 1 and 8, 2 and 7, 3 and 6, 4 and 5, answer, or are parallel to each other.' HENRY abr

Sir W. Temple, in his Essay on Poetry, thinks it is generally agreed to have been the first sort of writing used in the world: [notes, Gen. 4:23, 24. Ex. 7:11. 1 Chr. 15:16, &c. latter part.] nay, that, in several nations, poetical compositions preceded the very invention or usage of letters. The Spaniards (he says) found in America many strains of poetry, and such as seemed to flow from a true poetic vein, before any letters were known in those regions. The same (says he) is probable of the Scythians and Grecians: the oracles of Apollo were delivered in verse; so were those of the sibyls. [The most ancient Hindoo and Persian books are rhythmical: so the Chinese, &c.] And Tacitus says, that the ancient Germans had no annals or records but what were in verse. Homer and Hesiod wrote their poems (the very Alcoran of the Pagan Dæmonology) many ages before the appearing of any of the Greek philosophers or historians; and, long before them, (if we may give credit to the antiquities of Greece,) even before the days of David, Orpheus and Linus were celebrated poets and musicians in Greece; and, at the same time, Carmenta, the mother of Evander, who was the first that introduced letters among the natives of Greece, was so called a carmine—from a song, because she delivered herself in verse. And in such veneration was this way of writing among the ancients, that their poets were called Vates—Prophets, and their muses were deified.

But, which is more certain and considerable, the most ancient composition [perhaps?] we meet with in Scripture, was the song of Moses at the Red Sea, (Ex. 15.) which we find before the very first mention of writing, for that occurs not until Ex. 17:14. when God bade Moses write a memorial of the war with Amalek. The first, and indeed the true and general end of writing, is, the help of memory; and poetry does in some measure answer that end, and even in the want of writing, much more with writing, helps to preserve the remembrance of ancient things. The book of the wars of the Lord, (Num. 21:14.) and the book of Jasher, (Josh. 10:13. 2 Sam. 1:18.) seem to have been both written in poetic measures.

Many sacred songs we meet with in the O. T. scattered both in the historical and prophetical books, penned on particular occasions, which, in the opinion of very competent judges, 'have in them as true and noble strains of poetry and picture as are met with in any other language whatsoever, in spite of all the disadvantages from translations into so different tongues and common prose;* nay, [from the superiority of a true religion,] are nobler examples of the true sublime style of poetry than any that can be found in the Pagan writers; the images are so strong, the thoughts so great, the expressions so divine, and the figures so admirably bold and moving, that the wonderful manner of these writers is quite inimitable.'† It is fit, that what is employed in the service of the sanctuary should be the best in its kind.

The books here put together are poetical. Job is an heroic poem;

* See Dis. on Proph. ch. II. † Hil. Megil. c. 2. § 11.

‡ Vid. Hottinger. Thesaur. Philol. lib. 2. cap. 1. § 3.

* Sir W. Temple, p. 329. ‡ Sir R. Blackmore's pref. to Job.

the book of Psalms, a collection of divine odes or lyrics; Solomon's Song, a pastoral and an epithalamium: they are poetical, and yet sacred and serious, grave and full of majesty. They have a poetic force and flame, without poetic fury and fiction, and strangely command and move the affections, without corrupting the imagination, or putting a cheat on it; and while they gratify the ear, they edify the mind, and profit the more by pleasing. It is, therefore, much to be lamented that so powerful an art, which was at first consecrated to the honor of God, and has been so often employed in his service, should be debauched, as it has been, and is at this day, into the service of his enemies; that his corn, and wine, and oil, should be prepared for Baal.

'When reading or interpreting Heb. poetry, we should especially remember the manners of the people, and the idioms of the language. As the sacred poets lived in the east, their ideas and manners are different from ours, and are not to be considered according to our modes of thinking. Without attending to these circumstances, the Heb. poetry cannot be correctly understood, nor its beauties duly felt and appreciated.' [See Bush's 'Illustrations of Scripture,' now publishing.] HENRY abr.

V. These books have in them the very sum and substance of religion, and what they contain is more fitted to our hand, and made ready for use, than any part of the O. T. [There is greater depth and apparent difficulty in them than in those which precede: but the instruction is in general more immediately prepared for use; and the real benefit of perusing the scriptural history, much depends on the degree of our previous acquaintance with the books before us. In like manner, we shall read the record of our Savior's miracles and discourses to edification, in proportion as we have understood the epistolary part of the N. T., which, though more difficult in many respects, conveys instruction in more direct and explicit terms. SCOTT.] The book of Job directs us what we are to believe concerning God; the book of Psalms, how we are to worship Him, pay our homage to Him, and maintain our communion with Him; and then the book of the Proverbs shows very particularly how we are to govern ourselves in every turn of human life: thus shall the man of God, by a due attendance to these lights, be perfect, thoroughly furnished for every good work. And these are placed according to their natural order, as well as the order of time; for very fitly are we first led into the knowledge of God, and then instructed how to worship Him, and to choose the things that please Him.

We have here much of natural religion, its principles, its precepts- much of God, his infinite perfections, his relations to man, and his government both of the world and of the church: here is much of Christ, who is the Spring, and Soul, and Centre, of revealed religion, and of whom both Job and David were eminent types, and had clear and happy prospects. We have here speculations to entertain the most contemplative, and discoveries to satisfy the most inquisitive, and increase the knowledge of the most knowing. Here is that also which, with a divine light, will bring into the soul the heat and influence of a divine fire, will kindle and inflame pious and devout affections, on which wings we may soar upward, until we enter into the holiest. We may here be in the mount with God, to behold his beauty; and when we come down from that mount, if we retain (as we ought) the impressions of our devotion on our spirits, and make conscience of doing that good which the Lord our God here requires of us, our faces shall shine before all with whom we converse, who shall take occasion thence to glorify our Father which is in heaven, Matt. 5:16.

Thus great, thus noble, thus truly excellent, is the subject, and thus capable of being improved, which gives me the more reason to be ashamed of the meanness of my performance, that the comment breathes so little of the life and spirit of the text. We often wonder at those that are not at all affected with the great things of God, and have no taste or relish of them, because they know little of them: but, perhaps, we have more reason to wonder at ourselves, that, conversing so frequently, so intimately, with them, we are not more affected with them, so as even to be wholly taken up with them, and in a continual transport of delight in their contemplation.

In the review of [my work,] I find many defects, and those who are critical, perhaps, will meet with some mistakes; but what is from God, I trust, shall be to Him, shall be graciously accepted by Him, according to what a man has, and not according to what he has not, and shall be of some use to his church; and what is from myself, (as said Augustin,) i. e. all the defects and errors, shall, I trust, be favorably passed by and pardoned. HENRY.

AN EXPOSITION,

WITH

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS, AND NOTES.

UPON THE BOOK OF JOB.

MANY copies of the Hebrew Bible place Job after Psalms, and some after Proverbs; whence perhaps some imagine it to be written by Isaiah, or some of the later prophets. But, as the subject appears much more ancient, so we have no reason to think but that the composition was, and that therefore it is most fitly placed first in this collection of divine morals: also, being doctrinal, it is proper to precede, and introduce, the book of Psalms, which is devotional, and of Proverbs, which is practical; for how shall we worship or obey a God whom we know not? We are sure,

I. That it is given by inspiration of God, though we are not certain who was the penman of it. The Jews, though no friends to Job, because a stranger to the commonwealth of Israel, yet always retained this book in their sacred canon. It is referred to by one apostle; (James, 5: 11.) and one passage (ch. 5: 13.) is quoted by another apostle, with the usual form of quoting Scripture, It is written, 1 Cor. 3: 19. [Comp. 1: 21. with 1 Tim. 6: 7. Job 2: 10. Ja. 5: 11. Job 5: 13. 1 Cor. 3: 19. Job 5: 17. Heb. 12: 5. Job 34: 19. Acts 10: 34.] Many of the ancients think this history was written by Moses in Midian, and delivered to his suffering brethren in Egypt, for their support and comfort under their burdens, and the encouragement of their hope that God would, in due time, deliver and enrich them, as He did this patient sufferer. [Some, perceiving a similarity between some parts of it, and passages in the Psalms and Proverbs, assign it a much later origin; but wise and pious persons will often, without copying each other, give the same instructions and opinions; and it is at least as probable that David and Solomon alluded to Job, as that the writer of that book alluded to their works. SCOTT.] Some conjecture it was written originally in Arabic, and afterwards translated into Hebrew, for the use of the Jewish church, by Solomon, (so M. Jurieu,) or some other inspired writer. [Perhaps Elihu wrote it in Arabic, and Moses rendered it into Heb. SCOTT.] It seems most probable to me, that Elihu was the penman of it, at least of the discourses, because (ch. 32: 15, 16.) he mingles the words of an historian with those of a disputant: but Moses perhaps wrote the first two chs. and the last, to give light to the discourses; for in them God is frequently called Jehovah, but not once in all the discourses, except ch. 12: 9. That name was but little known to the patriarchs before Moses, Ex. 6: 3. If Job wrote it himself, some of the Jewish writers themselves own him a prophet among the Gentiles; if Elihu, we find he had a spirit of prophecy which filled him with matter, and constrained him, ch. 32: 18.*

II. That it is, for substance, a true history. [Some have employed much pains, ingeniously but very unwarrantably, to interpret it as an allegory. There is no sufficient ground for questioning, whether the transactions relating to the world of spirits, actually, for substance, occurred; it is evident, that this could be known only by revelation: but, as the book records several supernatural visions, and a glorious appearance of God Himself; this creates no difficulty to those who consider it as true, and as a part of the sacred canon. SCOTT.] No doubt there was such a man as Job; the prophet Ezekiel (14: 14.) names him with Noah and Daniel. The narrative here of his prosperity and piety, his strange afflictions and exemplary patience, the substance of his conferences with his friends, and God's discourse with him out of the whirlwind, with his return, at length, to a very prosperous condition, no doubt, is exactly true, though the inspired penman is allowed the usual liberty of putting the matter of which Job and his friends discoursed, into his own words. [So Eds. Henry, abr., Scott, Rosenm. Dr. A. Clarke, Hewlett, Noyes, Good, &c.]

* 'Patrick takes it for granted, that the author was Job himself, and fixes the time before Israel came out of Egypt, which he infers from certain omissions: "though there be plain mention of the drowning of the old world, and the burning of Sodom, in this book, yet there is no allusion to the drowning of Pharaoh and other miraculous works which attended the deliverance from Egypt. Nor is there any notice taken of the revelation of God's will to Moses, when Elihu reckons up those ways whereby God was wont to discover Himself to man." Magee thinks the writer was Job, or some contemporary; so also do Schultens, Peters, Lowth, Hales and Townsend, [Note d. p. 11. vol. 1.] Horne, Sutcliffe. Poole favors the idea that the writer was Moses, [so Kennicott, and some of the Rabbinical writers,] the difference of style arguing nothing, as this book is poetical, and his other works merely historical; and for the Arabic words introduced, he pleads that Moses lived 40 years in Midian, a part of Arabia, where he must have learned the language. This opinion is defended by Dr. Mason Good, [see below,] favored by Michaelis and Dathe, and considered as the best supported by Boothroyd. Grotius ascribes the work to Solomon, from his extensive gifts and knowledge, and the occasional occurrence of Arabisms in the Proverbs that bear his name; [Greg, Nazianzen, Spanheim and Harduin, held this opinion; and Dr. A. Clarke thinks 'the arguments for it weightier than those in favor of Moses, but 'possibly neither wrote it, but rather some learned Idumean, well acquainted with the Jewish religion and writers:' see his pref. Rosenm. thinks it written by a Hebrew, referring to 40: 23. and many other passages, and remarks that Richter has disproved an Idumean author: and that Bernstein 'has proved that the language of the book does not approach so near to the nature and genius (naturam et indolem) of the Arabic, as to the Aramean or Chaldee; and shows that there is no ch. in which Chaldean forms of words, and meanings peculiar to the Chaldee usus loquendi, do not occur, so that a Chaldean color of the book readily presents itself to every eye.'] Henry thinks Elihu penned it, at least the discourses. [See above.] This opinion is evidently from Lightfoot. Among those who date it after the Egyptian bondage, and below the Mosaic age, are Le Clerc, Wesley, Warburton, Stock, [and Rosenm. who thinks we should 'not be far out of the way in placing it between Hezekiah's and Zedekiah's times.' 'The fact is,' says he, 'all those places, in which a concord is detected between Job, and the Psalms and Proverbs, are such as seem not to be express imitations copied from it, but rather argue a common speech, science, learning, education, mode of philosophising, in fine, the common opinions and notions of one and the same age.'] Wesley finds an allusion to the plagues of Egypt in 15: 20, &c.; Stock, in 34: 20. a reference to the destruction of Egypt's first-born; and Warburton [ascribes it to Ezra, and] conceives that 13: 24, 25. refers to Hezekiah's sickness and recovery.' Cond. Comm. Ed.

III. That it is very ancient, though we cannot fix the precise time of Job, or the writing. So many, so evident, are its hoary hairs, the marks of its antiquity, that we have reason to think it of equal date with the book of Genesis itself, and that holy Job was contemporary with Isaac and Jacob; though not co-heir with them of the promise of the earthly Canaan, yet a joint-expectant with them of the better country, i. e. the heavenly. [It is very likely that Job was, in his first prosperity, between the time when Joseph died, and the appearance of Moses in Pharaoh's court, as Israel's deliverer; and the language of God Himself, that 'there was none like him in all the earth,' seems to give probability to this opinion; for there is no other eminent character mentioned in Scripture as flourishing during that period. SCOTT.] Probably, he was of the posterity of Nahor, Abraham's brother, whose first-born was Uz, (Gen. 22: 21.) and in whose family religion was, for some ages, kept up, as appears, Gen. 31: 53. where God is called, not only the God of Abraham, but the God of Nahor. He lived before the age of man was shortened to 70 or 80, as it was in Moses' time; before sacrifices were confined to one altar; before the general apostasy of the nations from the knowledge and worship of the true God; and while yet there was no other idolatry known than the worship of the sun and moon, and that punished by the Judges, ch. 31: 26, 28. He lived while God was known by the name of God Almighty, more than by the name of Jehovah; for he is called Shaddai—the Almighty, above 30 times in this book: he lived while divine knowledge was conveyed, not by writing, but by tradition; for to that appeals are here made, ch. 8: 8. 21: 29. 15: 18. 5: 1. We have therefore reason to think he lived before Moses, because here is no mention at all of the deliverance of Israel out of Egypt, or the giving of the law. There is indeed one passage which might be made to allude to the drowning of Pharaoh, (ch. 26: 12.) He divideth the sea with his power, and by his understanding he smiteth through Rahab; which name Egypt is very frequently called by, in Scripture, as Ps. 87: 4. 89: 10. Isa. 11: 9. But that may as well refer to the proud waves of the sea. [These reasons, with several peculiarities of style and composition, sanction the opinion that it is the most ancient work extant. SCOTT.] We conclude therefore, we are here got back to the patriarchal age, [note, d. p. 11. vol. I.] and, beside its authority, receive this book with veneration for its antiquity.

IV. We are sure that it is of great use to every Christian, though many passages are hard to be understood. We cannot perhaps be confident of the true meaning of every Arabic word and phrase in it. It finds much work for the critics; but enough is plain, to make the whole profitable. [The first two chs. are prose; their style is very plain; and they form an introduction to the poetical part, which is in many places peculiarly figurative and sublime, and consequently more difficult to be interpreted. The latter part of the last ch. is a historical conclusion.—It cannot be clearly shown, that this book contains prophecies, properly so called; because the passages which might be adduced as prophetical, may also be considered as a profession of faith in the promised Redeemer, and concerning a future resurrection: but few parts of the O. T. declare more explicitly the grand outlines of revealed truth, and even of evangelical doctrine; so that they who speak of it, as consisting chiefly of natural religion, seem to have entirely mistaken its scope.—It opens with Job's piety and prosperity, Satan's charge of hypocrisy and selfishness against him, and permission to reduce him to the deepest distress, as a trial of his integrity. It proceeds to relate how his former friends, witnessing his unprecedented sufferings, were led to condemn him. This gave rise to a warm controversy, whether heavy afflictions prove any person, apparently pious, a hypocrite. In it, the principles of true religion were argued from by all as undoubted truths, and many excellent things spoken; but the whole had a sad mixture of human infirmity. When they could by no means agree, Elihu, who had heard the debate, with great modesty and solemnity interfered; and, censuring the others for groundlessly condemning Job, proceeded to reprove him for improper eagerness in justifying himself, by which he had reflected on the justice of God. While he was discoursing, the Lord Himself spake out of a whirlwind, and, by a discovery of his incomprehensible majesty and glory, made Job sensible of his presumption, and brought him to humble himself before Him as a vile and polluted sinner. This effected, He justified Job from the charge of hypocrisy, and condemned the conduct and language of his friends; and, having decided the controversy in favor of Job, appointed him to sacrifice and intercede in their behalf, that they might be forgiven. The whole closes with Job's deliverance, and redoubled prosperity, honor, and comfort.—It is a book full of caution and encouragement to the tempted and afflicted, and of warning to those who hastily judge their brethren. It throws great light on the doctrine of Providence, and on the agency and influence of evil spirits under the control of God. We see in Job an eminent type of the suffering and glorified Savior; and a pattern of the believer's 'passing through much tribulation into the kingdom of God.' In short, the whole is replete with most important instruction; and, among the rest, we are reminded of the ill-effects of acrimonious, religious dispute. These four pious men argued together, till, becoming angry, they censured and condemned each other, and uttered many things irreverent about the divine character and government; and, having lost their temper, would have also lost their labor, and have been more at variance than ever, if another method had not been taken of deciding the controversy. SCOTT.]

This noble poem presents to us, in very clear and lively characters, these five things among others:—I. A monument of primitive theology. The first and great principles of the light of nature, on which natural religion is founded, are here, in a warm, long, and learned dispute, not only taken for granted on all sides, but by common consent plainly laid down as eternal truths; illustrated and urged as affecting, commanding truths. Were ever the being of God, his glorious attributes and perfections, his unsearchable wisdom, irresistible power, inconceivable glory, inflexible justice, and his incontestable sovereignty, discoursed of with more clearness, fulness, reverence, and divine eloquence, than in this book? The creation of the world, and the government of it, are here admirably described, not as matters of nice speculation, but as laying most powerful obligations on us to fear and serve, to submit to, and trust in, our Creator, Owner, Lord, and Ruler. Moral good and evil, virtue and vice, were never drawn more to the life, (the beauty of the one and the deformity of the other,) than in this book; nor the inviolable rule of God's judgment more plainly laid down, That happy are the righteous, it shall be well with them; and wo to the wicked, it shall be ill with them. These are not questions of the schools, to keep the learned world in action, nor engines of state, to keep the unlearned world in awe; no, it appears by this book, that they are sacred truths of undoubted certainty, and which all the wise and sober part of mankind have in every age subscribed and submitted to. II. A specimen of Gentile piety. This great saint descended, not from Abraham, but Nahor; or, if from Abraham, not from Isaac, but from one of the sons of the concubines sent into the east country; (Gen. 25: 6.) or, if from Isaac, yet not from Jacob, but Esau; so that he was out of the pale of the covenant of peculiarity, no Israelite, no proselyte, and yet none like him for religion, nor such a favorite of Heaven on earth. It was a truth, therefore, before Peter perceived it, that, in every nation, he that fears God, and works righteousness, is accepted of Him, (Acts 10: 35.) There were children of God scattered abroad, (John 11: 52.) beside the incorporated children of the kingdom, Matt. 8: 11, 12. III. An exposition of the book of Providence, and a clear and satisfactory solution of many of its difficult and obscure passages. The prosperity of the wicked, and the afflictions of the righteous, have always been reckoned two as hard chapters as any in that book; but they are here expounded, and reconciled with the divine wisdom, purity, and goodness, by the end of these things. IV. A great example of patience, and close adherence to God, in the midst of the sorest calamities. Sir R. Blackmore's most ingenious pen, in his excellent preface to his paraphrase on this book, makes Job a hero proper for an epic poem; for, (says he,) 'He appears brave in distress, and valiant in affliction, maintains his virtue, and with that his character, under the most exasperating provocations that the malice of hell could invent, and thereby gives a most noble example of passive fortitude, a character no way inferior to that of the active hero,' &c. V. An illustrious type of Christ, the particulars of which we shall endeavor to notice as we go along. In general, Job was a great sufferer, was tempted and humbled, but in order to his greater glory. So Christ abased Himself, that we might be exalted. Patrick quotes Jerom more than once, speaking of Job as a type of Christ, who, for the joy set before Him, endured the cross, who was persecuted for a time by men and devils, and seemed forsaken of God too, but was raised up to be an intercessor even for his friends that had added affliction to his misery. When the apostle speaks of the patience of Job, he immediately notices the end of the Lord, i. e. of the Lord Jesus, (as some understand it,) typified by Job, James 5: 11

In this book we have, 1. The history of Job's sufferings, and his patience under them, (ch. 1: 2.) not without a mixture of human frailty, ch. 3. 2. A dispute between him and his friends on them, in which, the opponents were Eliphaz, Bildad, Zophar. The respondent was Job. 3. The moderators were, (1.) Elihu, ch. 32—37. (2.) God Himself, ch. 38—41. 4. The issue of all, in Job's honor and prosperity, ch. 42. On the whole, we learn, that many are the afflictions of the righteous, but that when the Lord delivers them out of all, the trial of their faith will be found to praise, and honor, and glory. HENRY.

ROSENMUELLER gives the following Synopsis :

I. Historical exordium, in prose, 1. 2. II. Triple dissertation, in verse, 3—41. (1.) The triple series of disputation between Job and his three visitors, 3—31. The speech of Job, in which he curses the day of his birth, 3. is succeeded by, (A.) The 1st colloquy, 4—14. [1.] with Eliphaz, 4—7. (a.) Speech of Eliphaz, 4. 5. (b.) Answer of Job, 6. 7. [2.] with Bildad, 8—10. (a.) Speech of Bildad, 8. (b.) Answer of Job, 9. 10. [3.] with Zophar, 11—14. (a.) Speech of Zophar, 11. (b.) Answer of Job, 12—14. (B.) The 2d colloquy, 15—21. [1.] with Eliphaz, 15—17. (a.) Speech of Eliphaz, 15. (b.) Answer of Job, 16. 17. [2.] with Bildad, 18. 19. (a.) Speech of Bildad, 18. (b.) Answer of Job, 19. [3.] with Zophar, 20. 21. (a.) Speech of Zophar, 20. (b.) Answer of Job, 21. (C.) The 3d colloquy, 22—31. [1.] with Eliphaz, 22—24. (a.) Speech of Eliphaz, 22. (b.) Speech of Job, 23—24. [2.] with Bildad, 25—31. (a.) Speech of Bildad, 25. (b.) Answer of Job, 26—31. (2.) The judgment of Elihu respecting the disputation, in a continuous speech, resumed at three intervals, 32—37. (3.) The speech of the Deity, which settles the controversy, 38—41. III. Historical conclusion, in prose, 42. ED.

"The ensuing poem is, in various respects, the most extraordinary composition of any age or country; and has an equal claim to the attention of the theologian, the scholar, the antiquary, and the zoologist,—to the man of taste, of genius, and of religion. Amidst the books of the Bible it stands alone (Lowth, Henry): and though its sacred character is sufficiently attested both by the Jewish and Christian Scriptures, it is isolated in its language, in its manner, and in its matter. Nothing can be purer than its morality, nothing sublimer than its philosophy; nothing simpler than its ritual, nothing more majestic than its creed. Its style is the most figurative imaginable; yet its plan is as regular, its argument as consecutive, as the most finished compositions of Greece or Rome: and its opening and its close are altogether unrivalled in magnificence. ['Its subject is, not the sanguinary exploits of half-civilized heroes, and the fierce contentions of rival deities, but, the providence of the one true God, and the duty of man. Its language is the natural effusion of a soul full of . . . true sympathy with all that is great, and amiable, and affecting, in the character and condition of man.'] It is full of elevation and grandeur; daring in its conceptions; splendid and forcible in its images; abrupt in its transitions; and, at the same time, occasionally interspersed with touches of the most exquisite and overwhelming tenderness. And, to sum up the whole, if the train of reasoning throughout this Dissertation be correct, it is the most ancient of all human records; the only book in existence from which we can derive anything like a systematic knowledge of pure, patriarchal religion;—and hence, that very book which gives completion to the Bible, by adding the dispensation of the earliest ages to those of the law and of the gospel, by which it was successively superseded.'

'Scene of the poem. Ishmael, or Ismael, (son of Hagar by Abraham,) according to the Arabs, (so accurate in their genealogies,) came into Arabia when it was possessed by two classes; an elder, of whose origin they know nothing certain, but suppose them to be descendants of Ham, few and of little consequence; and a later, much more powerful and numerous, descended from Kahtan, or Joktan, (Bible,) son of Heber, and 4th from Shem. He gave Yaman, or Happy Arabia, to his son Yaarab, and Hajaz, or Stony Arabia, to his son Joram. The Joramites became most powerful, and possessed themselves of Ismael's territory, about Hagar's well, while he was absent, probably, to bury his father. (Gen. 25: 9.) Ismael returned, and settled the dispute by marrying Valla, the daughter of Modad, chief of the Joramites; receiving the large territory as her dowry. By her he had the 'twelve princes,' Gen. 15: 12—18. His success induced all Abraham's sons, except Isaac, to follow him; hence we find their six names in the S. E. countries of Arabia, now constituting the province of Najd; as Midian, Shuah, Sheba, Seba or Saba, and Dedan. Hitherwards came also the two sons of Lot, Moab and Ammon; and Esau, Abraham's grandson, called also Edom, who, marrying a daughter of Ismael, at this time head of the entire country, fixed himself S. of the Dead Sea, driving away or extirpating the Horim, and giving the tract his own name, whence the Greek Idumea. Such is a very brief sketch of the history of the country which forms the scene of the present poem; a country, whose religion must now have been that of Abraham to a very considerable extent; and whose language, from the first not widely differing from that of Abrahaim, must have made a considerable approximation towards it from the successive tides of the Abrahamic race, which, either directly or collaterally, were perpetually pouring into different parts. The present state of Arabia, as well as its first establishment, is well-worthy attention. It offers a most extraordinary intermixture of barren sands, and fruitful and flowery landscape, whose sweet, exhilarating odors not unfrequently spread their fragrance along the whole line of the Arabian Gulf, from Babelmandel to Suez. It was perhaps earliest in possession of the most important arts and sciences, and especially those which relate to manufactures and commerce. It first cultivated poetry and eloquence with critical attention, and taught these refinements to Persia, as Persia afterwards taught them to other parts of Asia. The general habits, [rich and elegant] language, and even political forms of government which it possessed in the time of Ismael, it possesses, with little variation, in the present day. The natives even to the present hour are peculiarly sagacious, intelligent, and courageous: [of a more versatile and improvable genius than the Turks, from them alone, perhaps, are we to expect the regeneration of Western Asia, through European civilization.]'

'Bochart leads in the opinion that Uz was in Sandy Arabia; it is powerfully supported by Spanheim and the Univ. Hist. The general argument is as follows: Ptolemy has described a region, "Æsitæ," as situated in this very province, bounded by the Cauchabeni, who inhabited the S. bank of the Euphrates, on the N. and by the mountains of Chaldea on the E.; and the Sept. and the Greek writers generally, translate Uz by Ausitis. We find also, Ptolemy places in this same province, three districts, Sabe, Thema, an: Busitis, corresponding to the Sabæa, Teman and Buz of Job. Ch. 1. tells us too that the country was often infested by hordes of Chaldean bandits, whose mountains form the boundary line of Æsitæ and Chaldea. Whence it is conjectured that Æsitæ and Busitis were respectively peopled and named from Uz and Buz, two sons of Nahor, and consequently nephews of Abraham, the residence of whose father, Terah, was at Haran, or Charræ, on the opposite bank of the Euphrates, and necessarily therefore in the neighborhood of Æsitæ. Yet, this hypothesis can by no means be reconciled with the geography of the O. T. which is uniform in placing Uz, or the Ausitis of the Sept. in Stony Arabia, on the S. W. coast of the Dead Sea, in a line between Egypt and Philistia, surrounded by Kedar, Teman, and Midian, districts of Stony Arabia; and, as though to set every remaining doubt completely at rest, situated in Idumea, or the land of Edom or Esau, (of whose position there can be no question,) and comprising so large a part of it, that Idumea and Ausitis, or the land of Uz, and the land of Edom, were convertible terms, and equally employed to import the same region. Lam. 4: 21. Lowth thinks, the Chaldean hordes infested the whole region from Euphrates to Egypt. The characters of the poem were all Edomitic Arabs: as Job, of Uz, Eliphaz, of Teman, a district of as much repute as Uz; and, upon the joint testimony of Jeremiah, (49: 7, 20.) Ezekiel, (25: 13.) Amos, (1: 11, 12.) and Obadiah, (5: 8, 9.) a part, and principal part, of Idumea; Bildad of Shua, always mentioned with Sheba and Dedan, the first named from Joktan's brother, the last two from his sons, and all uniformly placed near Idumea; Zophar of Naama ("pleasantness") also stated by Joshua (15: 21, 41.) to have been in Idumea, and to have lain in a S. direction towards the coast of the Red Sea; and Elihu of Buz, occurring only once in the SS. (Jer. 25: 23.) but there named with Teman and Dedan, and hence, necessarily, like them, a border city upon Ausitis, Uz, or Idumea. . . .

'In few words, the country which forms the scenery of our poem, was almost as richly endowed with names as ancient Greece, and, in many respects, from causes not dissimilar. It was first called Horitis, as possessed and peopled by a leader named Hor, among whose descendants, the most distinguished was Seir, from whose era it was better known as "the land of Seir." He had many sons and grandsons; the most signalized of whom was Uz or Utz; and from him, and not from Uz the son of Nahor, it seems to have been called Ausitis or Uz. The family of Hor, Seir, or Uz, were at length, however, dispossessed by Esau, or Edom; who, already powerful on his entering Arabia, rendered himself still more so by a marriage with a daughter of Ismael: and the conquered territory was now called Idumea, or the land of Edom.'

'Scope and arrangement. The subject is, the trial and triumph of the integrity of Job, who was son of Zarah, and 5th in descent from Abraham by Esau, according to a brief chronological account at the end of the Gr. Arab. and Vulg. tr. supposed to be taken from an old Syrian version, and accredited by Aristeas, Philo, Polyhistor, and several ancient fathers, both of the Greek and Latin churches. If this be correct, he was nearly contemporary with Moses, who was 5th in descent from Abraham by Isaac. (See Calmet.) The general scope and moral, viz. that the troubles and afflictions of the good man are, for the most part, designed as tests of his virtue and integrity, out of which he will, at length, emerge with additional splendor and happiness, are common to eastern poets, and not uncommon to those of Greece. The Odyssey is such. But in various respects the poem of Job stands alone and unrivalled. In addition to every corporal suffering and privation possible for man to endure, it carries forward the trial, in a manner and to an extent never elsewhere attempted, into the keenest faculties and sensations of the mind; and mixes the bitterest taunts and accusations with the agonies of [abject poverty and destitution,] family bereavement and despair. The body of other poems consists chiefly of incidents; that of the present poem of colloquy or argument, [somewhat like the dialogues of Plato, &c. Hewlett.] in which the general train of reasoning is so well sustained, its matter so important, its language so ornamented, the doctrines it develops so sublime, its transitions from passion to passion, so varied and abrupt, that the want of incidents is not felt, and the attention is still riveted, as by enchantment. In other poems the supernatural agency is fictitious, and often incongruous: here the whole is solid reality, supported, in its grand outline, by the concurrent testimony of every other part of the Scriptures; an agency not obtrusively introduced, but demanded by the magnitude of the occasion; and as much more exalted and magnificent than every other kind of similar interference, as it is more veritable and solemn. The suffering hero is sublimely called forth to the performance of his part, in the presence of men and angels: [Heb 12:1. 1 Cor.4:9.] each becomes interested, and equally interested, in his conduct: the Almighty assents to the trial, and for a period withdraws his divine aid;—the malice of Satan is in its full career of activity: hell hopes, earth trembles, and every good spirit is suspended with awful anxiety. The wreck of his substance is in vain; the wreck of his family is in vain; the scalding sores of a corroding leprosy, [bathing him with their purulent issue,] are in vain; the artillery of insults, reproaches and railing, poured forth from the mouth of bosom friends, is in vain. Though at times put in some degree off his guard, the holy sufferer is never completely overpowered. He sustains the shock without yielding: he still holds fast his integrity. Thus terminates the trial of faith:—Satan is confounded; fidelity triumphs; and the Almighty, with a magnificence well worthy of the occasion, unveils his resplendent tribunal, and crowns the afflicted champion with his applause.'

'In the writer's present view of the subject, it is a regular Hebrew epic. [But Dr. A. Clarke will not allow the far superior genius of its author to be cramped and coldly measured by the formal rules of Aristotle; and Rosenm. remarks, 'it is not properly a drama, as Lowth observes, nor can we, with Ilgen, term it with more propriety an Epic, as Eichhorn has shown: but this need not detract from its merit, if judged unjustly by rules adapted to entirely different compositions, for truly in its kind it is most beautiful, accurate, regular, and perfect.'] Its present common division into chs. is most unfortunate. The natural division, and that of its author, was into six parts or books, viz. An opening or exordium, containing the introductory history and the decree concerning Job;—three distinct series of arguments, in each of which the speakers are regularly allotted their respective turns;—the summing up of the controversy; and the close or catastrophe; with its impressive corollary;—that God is supreme and must be bowed to and adored: his wisdom is incomprehensible, how vain then to arraign it: his power omnipotent, how absurd then to resist it: [his will of infinite obligation, how insane then to adopt any other rule of duty:] his goodness universal, how blind then to deny it.'

'Difficulty of a translation. The most perplexing Heb. compositions to be rendered into a foreign tongue, are the books of Job, Isaiah, Ezekiel and Hosea. All are highly figurative, fervid, and magnificent, and full of abrupt transitions; and it is not always easy to catch hold of their images, at first sight. The language of Job and Isaiah is more polished—that of Ezekiel and Hosea, more harsh, and elliptical. But there are, besides, words and even idioms peculiar to Job, and met with nowhere else in SS. Hence the real meaning has been found in many instances of very perplexed and doubtful interpretation; and its versions, sometimes given by mere guess, in a variety of places, are widely discordant. The Arabic has afforded the best key. The original text is unquestionably a mixture of Hebrew and Arabic, (and so Schultens.) Nor was the variegated tissue hence produced of inelegant appearance. Throughout almost the whole of Heb. history, Uz or Idumea was regarded by the Jews in the same light of elegance and accomplishment, as Greece was by the Romans; and Teman, the native city of Eliphaz, as the Athens of Arabia Petrea. (Jer. 49: 7. Obad. 9.)'

'Author and Era. [See above.] To Moses, in truth, more than to any one, it has been generally ascribed, in all nations, and perhaps in all ages: and if we apply to him the tests advanced above, [see Good's' Introd. Diss. Ed.], and which are fatal to all the preceding characters, we shall find that there is not a single one to which his history will not adapt itself. I have ventured to assert, that the writer must, in his style, have been equally master of the simple and of the sublime; (a complete master of style and language; a mastery unknown to every other kind of oriental composition. It is characteristic of him, that he uniformly suits his ornaments to the occasion; that, as though influenced by the rules of the best Greek critics, he seldom employs a figurative style, where the incident or the passion is capable of supporting itself, and reserves his boldest images and illustrations for cases that seem most to require them.*) That the author must also have been minutely and elaborately acquainted with the astronomy, natural history, and general science of his age; that he must have been a Hebrew by birth and native language, and an Arabian by long residence and local study; and finally, that he must have flourished, and composed the work, before the Egyptian Exody. Now it is obvious, that every one of these features is consummated in Moses, and in Moses alone; and that the whole of them gives us his complete lineaments and portraiture.—Instructed in all the learning of Egypt, it appears little doubtful that he composed it during some part of his 40 years' residence in Midian, a district of Idumea. As to perhaps the only plausible objection to this, that it abounds with the word Jehovah; it is highly probable, that he, Moses, was in possession of this name long before the promulgation of his poem; and the novelty as well as honor of the communication might have induced him at once to exchange whatever term he had antecedently employed for this new and consecrated term. The name is thus prophetically used 30 times in Gen.'

'Creed, doctrines and ritual. If Moses then is the author, and the date be thus fixed as before the exodus, this book immediately becomes a DEPOSITORY OF PATRIARCHAL RELIGION, the best and fullest depository in the world, and drawn up by that very pen most competent to do it justice. It will then appear, that the chief doctrines of the patriarchal religion, as collected from different parts of the poem, were as follows:—(1.) The creation of the world by one supreme and eternal Intelligence, 38—41. (2.) Its regulation by his perpetual and superintending providence, 1: 9, 21. 2: 10. 5: 8—27. 9: 4—13. and almost every ensuing ch. (3.) The intentions of his providence carried into effect by the ministration of a heavenly hierarchy. 1: 6, 7. 3: 18, 19. 5: 1. 33: 22, 23. A doctrine much abused at various times and in various modes. (4.) The heavenly hierarchy, composed of various ranks and orders, [Coloss. 1: 16. Dan. 4: 17, &c.] possessing different names, dignities and offices: as obedim, servants; malakim, angels; melizim, intercessors; memitim, destinies or destroyers; alep, the chiliad or thousand; kedosim, sancti, the heavenly saints or hosts generally. 4: 18. 33: 22, 23. 5: 2. 15: 15. (5.) An apostasy, or defection, in some rank or order of these powers, (4: 18. 15: 15.) of which Satan seems to have been one, and perhaps chief. 1: 6—12. 2: 2—7. (6.) The good and evil powers or principles, equally formed by the Creator, and hence equally denominated "sons of God;" both employed by Him, in the administration of his providence; and both amenable to Him at stated courts, held for the purpose of receiving an account of their respective missions. 1: 6, 7. 2: 1. (7.) A day of future resurrection, judgment, and retribution, to all mankind. 14: 13, 14, 15. 19: 25—29. 21: 30. 31: 14. (8.) The propitiation of [or at-one-ment, reconcilement to] the Creator, in the case of human transgressions, by sacrifices, (1: 5. 42: 8.) and the mediation and intercession of a righteous person, 42: 8, 9.' J. M. Good.

* 'Yet, for want of attending to this distinction, Schultens, Lowth, Grey, [Rosenm.] and a few others have regarded the first part of this transcendent poem, as a mere prosaic preface to the rest, meant to be detached from it, and utterly destitute of metrical arrangement; an error from which Stock is altogether free.' Good.

B. C. 1550.

CHAP. I.

The uprightness, piety, prosperity, and numerous family of Job, and his religious concern for his children, 1—5. Satan, appearing before God, accuses Job, and obtains leave to try him, 6—12. Job, receiving successive accounts of calamities, which deprived him of all his substance, and all his children, mourns with humble resignation, and worships God, 13—22.

THERE was a man in the land of [a] Uz, whose name was [b] Job; and that man was [c] perfect and upright, and [d] one that feared God, and eschewed evil.

2 And there were born unto him [e] seven sons and three daughters.

3 His [*] substance also a Gen. 10:23. 22:21. Huz. 36:28. 1 Chr. 1:17. 42. Jer. 25:20. Lam. 4:21.

b Ez. 14:14, 20. Jam. 5:11.
c 8. 2:3. 23 11, 12. 31:1, &c. Gen. 6: 9. 17:1. 2 K. 20:3. 2 Chr. 31:20, 21. Luke 1:6. d Gen. 22:12. Prov. 8:13. 16:6. 1 Pet. 3:11.
e 42:13. Esth. 5:11. Ps. 107:38. 127: 3—5. 128:3.
* Or, cattle. Gen. 12:5. 13:6. 34:23. 2 Chr. 32:29.

CHAP. I. V. 1—3. Here begins the history of Job; of him we are here told,

I. He was Ish, (so the Heb.) a worthy man, [not a king, Scott.] a man of note and eminency, a magistrate, a man in authority. [The Sept. has Eugenes, noble—'much like a modern Emir of Arabia.'] Uz, where he resided, was in the E. of Arabia, toward Chaldea, near Euphrates, probably not far from Ur of the Chaldees. [But see Pref.] His name Job, or Jiob, [Arab. Ayoob,] some say, signifies one hated, as an enemy; others, one that grieves, or groans. Dr. Cave derives it from Jaab, to love, or desire, intimating his parents' joy in his birth.

II. He was a very good man, even in the judgment of God. He feared God, i. e. worshipped Him according to his will, and governed himself by the rules of the divine law He was sincere; perfect, not sinless; so he himself owns, ch. 9: 20. But, aiming at perfection, he was really as good as he seemed; his heart was sound, and his eye single. Sincerity is gospel-perfection; I know no religion without it. He was upright in his dealings both with God and man; faithful to his promises, steady in his counsels, true to every trust, and made conscience of all he said and did. See Isa. 33: 15. Though he was not of Israel, he was indeed an Israelite without guile. The fear of God reigning in his heart was the principle that governed his whole conversation, Neh. 5: 15. The fear of the Lord is to hate evil; (Prov. 8: 13.) and then, by the fear of the Lord men depart from evil, Prov. 16: 6.

III. He was very prosperous in the world, and made a considerable figure in his country: prosperous, yet pious. Though hard and rare, it is not impossible, for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven: by the grace of God, the temptations of worldly wealth are not insuperable. His piety was a friend to his prosperity; and his prosperity put a lustre on his piety, and gave him, who was so good, so much greater opportunity of doing good. The acts of his piety were grateful returns to God, for the instances of his prosperity; and in the abundance of the good things God gave him, he served God the more cheerfully.

1. He had a numerous family; was eminent for religion, yet not a recluse, but the father and master of a family. Children must be looked upon as blessings, for so they are, especially to good people, that will give them good instructions, and set them good examples, and put up good prayers for them. Job had many children, yet was neither oppressive nor uncharitable, but very liberal to the poor, ch. 31: 17, &c. Those that have great families to provide for ought to consider, that what is prudently given in [proper] alms is set out to the best interest, and put into the best fund for their children's benefit.

2. He had a good estate, v. 3. Riches are called substance, in conformity to the common form of speaking; otherwise, to the soul and another world, they are but shadows, Prov. 23: 5. Only in heavenly wisdom we inherit substance, Prov. 8: 21. In those days, when the earth was not fully peopled, (as now, in some of the plantations,) men

NOTES.

CHAP. I. V. 1. Uz seems to have been a district of Arabia, to the S. E. of Canaan; though some suppose, it was situated in Idumea, and that Job was descended from Esau. (M. R. a. [and Pref.]) Others think he descended from Abraham by Keturah; yet it seems more probable he was of the posterity of Huz, the son of Nahor. (Gen. 22:11.) He is supposed to have lived before any part of the Scriptures was written: but he was acquainted with the truths and will of God, by tradition and immediate revelation; and so he was not a stranger to revealed truth, as many seem to suppose. The religion of Job and his friends was evidently the same as that of the patriarchs. SCOTT.

was [f] seven thousand sheep, and three thousand camels, and five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred she asses, and a very great * household; so that this man was the [g] greatest of all the † men [h] of the east.

4 And his sons went and feasted in their houses, every one his day; and [i] sent and called for their three sisters, to eat and to drink with them.

5 And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about, that Job sent and [k] sanctified them, and [l] rose up early in the morning, and [m] offered burnt-offerings, [n] according to the number of them all: for Job said, [o] It may be that my sons have sinned, and [p] cursed God [q] in their hearts. [r] Thus did Job ‡ continually.

6 ¶ Now [s] there was a day when [t] the sons of God [u] came to pref 42:12. Gen. 12:16. Num. 31:32—34. Judg. 6:5. 1 Sam. 25:2. 2 K. 3:4. Prov. 10:22.

* Or, husbandry. 2 Chr. 26:10.
g 29:9,10,25.
† Heb. sons of the east. Judg. 6:3, 7: 12. 8:10. 1 K. 4:30.
h Gen. 25:6. 29:1. Num. 23:7.
i Ps. 133:1. Heb. 13:1. [2 Sam.13:24,25.]
k 41:25. Gen. 35:2,3. Ex. 19:10,14. 1 Sam. 16:5. Neh. 12:30. John 11:55.
l Gen. 22:3. Ps. 5:3. Ec. 9:10. m 42:8. Gen. 8:20. Ex. 18:12. 24:5. Lev. 1:3—6. n 1 K. 18:31. Acts 21:26.
o 2 Cor. 11:2.
p 11. 2:9. Lev. 24:10—16. 1 K. 21: 10,13.
q Gen. 6:5. Jer. 4:14. 17:9,10. Mark 7:21—23. Acts 8:22. 1 Cor. 4:5.
r 27:10.
‡ Heb. all the days. Luke 1:75. 13:7. Eph. 6:18.
s 2:1.
t 38:7. Dan. 3:25. Luke 3:38. u Ps. 103:20. Matt. 18:10.

might have land enough on easy terms, if they had but wherewithal to stock it; therefore Job's substance is described, not by acres of land, but by live stock and servants. His very great household involved great care and charge. See the vanity of this world; as goods are increased, they must be increased that tend, occupy, and eat them; and what good hast heir owner, save the beholding of them with his eyes? Eccl. 5: 11.

The men of the east were the richest in the world: those were rich indeed who were replenished more than the east, Isa. 2: 6. marg. Job was upright and honest, yet grew rich, nay, therefore grew rich; for honesty is the best policy, and piety and charity are ordinarily the surest ways of thriving. The account of Job's piety and prosperity comes before that of his great afflictions, to show that neither will secure from the common, or uncommon, calamities of human life. Piety will not secure us, as Job's mistaken friends thought, for all things come alike to all; prosperity will not, as a careless world thinks; (Isa. 47: 8.) I sit as a queen, and therefore shall see no sorrow.

V. 4—5. Here is a further account of Job's prosperity and piety.

I. His great comfort in his children is noticed, as an instance of his prosperity; our temporal comforts are borrowed, depend on others, and are as those about us are. Job himself mentions it as one of the greatest joys of his prosperous estate, that his children were about him, ch. 29: 5. They kept a circular feast at certain times, v. 4. It was a comfort to see his children grown up and settled in the world; probably married; to see them thriving, able to feast one another; in health; and especially to see them live in love and unity; with as much freedom, as if they had all in common; no shyness, no strait-handedness, no family-jars. Behold, how good and how pleasant this is! Ps. 133: 1. 5. How kind they were to their sisters, (v. 4.) who were so modest, they would not go to their feasts had they not been sent for. Those brothers that slight their sisters, care not for their company, and have no concern for their comfort, are ill-bred, ill-natured, and very unlike Job's sons. It seems by this, their feast was sober and decent; in their own houses, not in public houses, where they would be more exposed to temptations.

Job himself was, doubtless, invited, and would have been the most welcome guest at any of their tables; nor was it from any moroseness of temper, or want of natural affection, that he kept away, but he was old and dead to those things, like Barzillai, (2 Sam. 19: 35.) and considered that the young people would be more free and pleasant, if there were none but themselves. Yet he would not restrain his children from the diversion which he denied himself. Young people may be allowed a youthful liberty, provided they flee youthful lusts.

II. His great care about his children is noticed, as an instance of his piety: for that we are really, which we are relatively. Those are good, that especially do what they can for the good of their childrens' souls. Observe, (v. 5.)

1. He was jealous over them with a godly jealousy: so we ought to be over ourselves and such as are dear to us, as far as is necessary to our care and endeavor for their good. Job had given his children a good education, had comfort in them, and good hope concerning them; yet he said, 'It may be my sons have sinned in the days of their feasting, more than at other times; have been too merry, have taken too great a liberty in eating and drinking, and have cursed God in their hearts,' i. e. 'have entertained atheistical, profane thoughts in their minds, unworthy notions of God and his providence, and the exercises of religion.' When they were full, they were ready to deny God, and to say, Who is the Lord? ready (Prov. 30: 9.) to forget God, and to say, The power of our hand has gotten us this wealth, Deut. 8: 12, &c. Nothing alienates the mind more from God than the indulgence of the flesh.

2. As soon as the feasting was over, he sent and sanctified them; ordered them to examine their consciences, repent of what they had done amiss in their feasting; lay aside their vanity, and compose themselves for religious exercises. Parents cannot give grace to their children, (it is God that sanctifies,) but they ought, by seasonable admonitions and counsels, to further their sanctification. In baptism they were sanctified to God; let it be our desire and endeavor that they may be sanctified for Him.

3. He offered sacrifice for them, both to atone for the sins he feared, in their feasting days, and to implore mercy to pardon, and grace to prevent, the debauching of their minds, and corrupting of their manners, by that liberty, and to preserve their piety and purity.

Job, like Abraham, had a family-altar, on which, it is likely, he offered sacrifice daily; but, on this extraordinary occasion, he offered more sacrifices than usual, and with more solemnity, one for each child: the sight might humble them, and lead them to a Mediator. Parents should be particular in their addresses to God for the several branches of their family; 'For this child I prayed, according to its particular temper, genius, and condition;' to which the prayers, as well as endeavors, must be accommodated.

Lastly, Thus he did continually; (John 13: 10.) acts of repentance and faith must be often renewed, because we often repeat our transgressions. He that serves God uprightly will serve Him continually.

V. 6—12. Job was not only so rich and great, but withal so wise and good, with such an interest both in heaven and earth, that one would think the

Verse 3.

'The principal riches of the Bedoween Arabs continue to be estimated from their cattle. They rarely kill them, living chiefly on their milk and butter.' SHAW. Men of the E.] 'A general appellation for that mingled race who dwelt between Egypt and the Euphrates: called east, in respect to Egypt, where the Israelites learned the phrase.' [Inhabitants of Arabia Deserta. Rosenm.] MEDE.

Verse 4.

His day.] 'His "birth day," as was usual among those nations, (Gen. 40:20.) Grotius, so Schultens. Of all days, the Persians show the highest regard to their birthday. Herod.' COND. COMM.

Verse 5.

As Job had, no doubt, piously educated his children, and set them an excellent example and offered many prayers for and with them; we may suppose they were well affected to religion. Indeed, nothing is intimated to the disadvantage of their characters, and no feasting could be more inoffensive than theirs seems to have been. Yet while their pious father could not but behold their harmony and comfort with satisfaction; his knowledge of the human heart suggested a jealous fear, lest their cheerfulness should betray them into some levity or excess, some vain conversation, or some injurious thoughts of God, either tending to infidelity, to dislike of his holy worship and service, or to idolatrous love of worldly enjoyments. Thus he taught them, that even the secret unbelief, ingratitude, and rebellion of the heart, merited condemnation, and could only be expiated by the shedding of blood, and the offering of sacrifice, in repentance and humble faith. As he did this continually, we may thence understand his unremitting care of his family, the tenderness of his conscience, his knowledge of the fallen state of man, and the depravity of human nature; his entire dependence on the mercy of God in the way which He had appointed, and his believing regard to the promised Redeemer. Cursed.] 'Barak, as the Latin sacrare and imprecari, denotes what a man wishes or calls for, with an ardent mind, whether it be salvation or perdition.' Selden. SCOTT. 'So devote, or devoted, admits either a good or a bad sense.' GOOD. So among the vulgar, this very word bless is sometimes used for cursing, or rather reviling. ED. No mention is made in Job, of any other god, or gods, except the true God; or any other idolatry, but the worship of the sun and moon. The original has not the article, and must be rendered either GOD, or gods, not the gods; and the clause is exactly the same as is used of the true God, in the next ch. (2:9.) SCOTT.

And cursed.] 'Nor blessed.' GOOD. 'Though they blessed.' BOOTHR 'And renounced.' ROSENM.

Verse 6.

The holy angels no doubt are here meant by 'the sons of God;' because they love Him, and are beloved of Him, as his children. (M. R. t.—38:4—7.) Without determining any thing about the place or way, in which the evil spirit appeared before God, or associated with his angels; or whether the transactions of the invisible world be not described in language, adapted rather to our conceptions than to their real nature; we hence learn, that Job's extraordinary afflictions originated from the malice and agency of Satan, by divine permission for wise and holy purposes: and many truths, respecting the character and influence of the devil and his angels, are thus emphatically proposed to our attentive consideration. These apostate spirits are continually intruding into the company of the children of God on earth, especially when they meet in his ordinances, or approach his mercy-seat. And they would dare to intrude even into heaven, the habitation of God's holiness, if access were allowed them, to join the company of his holy angels: yet this would not in the least degree change their evil nature; for wherever they go, they are instigated by malice, and seeking to do mischief. But, as God is every where present, (though in heaven his glory is especially displayed,) all that is spoken on these subjects may be literally understood, without supposing that they are ever admitted into that holy place. (1 K. 22:19—23.)—'The sons of perdition came to set themselves against JEHOVAH, and the sent themselves before the LORD, and * Satan x came also † among them.

7 And the LORD said unto Satan, y Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, z From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

8 And the LORD said unto Satan, Hast thou ‡ considered a my servant Job, that there is b none like him in the earth, c a perfect and an d upright man, e one that feareth God, and f escheweth evil?

9 Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, g Doth Job fear God for nought?

10 Hast not thou made h an hedge about him, and about his house, and i about all that he hath on every side? k Thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his § substance is increased in the land:

11 But l put forth thine hand now, and m touch all that he hath, ‖ and he will n curse thee to thy face.

12 And the LORD said unto Satan, o Behold, all that he hath is in thy

* Heb. the adversary. 1 K. 22:19—23. 1 Chr. 21:1. Zech. 3:1. Rev. 12:9,10. x John 6:70.
† Heb. in the midst of them.
y 2:2. 2 K. 5:25.
z Zech. 1:10,11. 6:7. Matt. 12:43. 1 Pet. 5:8. Rev. 12:9,12—17. 20:8.
‡ Heb. set thy heart on. 2:3. 34:14. Ez. 40:4. a Num. 12:7,8. Ps. 89:20. Is. 42:1. b Num. 12:3. 1 K. 4:30,31. 2 K. 23:25. c t. 8:20. 9:22,23. Ps. 18:23. John 1:47.
d 12:4. 17:8,9. 23:11,12. Ps. 84:11.
e Neh. 5:15. Ps. 36:1. Prov. 8:13. Luke 23:39,40.
f Ps. 34:14. 37:27. Is. 1:16.
g 21. 2:10. 21:14,15. Mal. 1:10. Matt. 16:26. 1 Tim. 4:8. 6:6.
h Gen. 13:1. Deut. 33:27—29. 1 Sam. 25:16. Ps. 5:12. 80:12. Is. 5:2,5. Zech. 2:5,8. 1 Pet. 1:5.
i Gen. 39:5. Deut. 28:2—6. Ps. 71:21. Prov. 1—4. k 42:12. Gen. 26:12. 30:30. 49:25. Deut. 7:13,14. 33:11. Ps. 90:17. 107:38. Prov. 10:22.
§ Or, cattle. Gen. 30:43.
l 12. 2:5. Is. 5:25.
m 4:5. 19:21. Gen. 26:11. Ps. 105:15. Zech. 2:8.
‖ Heb. if he curse thee not. 21.
n 5 Note on 2:9.—Is 8:21. Mal. 3:13, 14. Rev. 16:9,11,21.
o 1 K. 22:22. Luke 8:32. 22:31,32. John 19:11. 2 Cor. 12:7.

mountain of his prosperity stood so strong, it could not be moved; but here we have a thick cloud gathering over his head, pregnant with a horrible tempest. We must never think ourselves secure from storms, while in this lower region.

Before we are told how his troubles surprised and seized him here in this visible world, we are here told how they were concerted in the world of spirits; that the devil having a great enmity to Job for his eminent piety, begged and obtained leave to torment him. It does not at all derogate from the credibility of Job's story in general, to allow that this discourse between God and Satan is parabolical, like that of Micaiah, (1 K. 22: 19, &c.) and an allegory designed to represent the malice of the devil against good men, and the divine restraint that malice is under. Only thus much further is intimated, that the affairs of this earth are very much the subject of the counsels of the unseen world. That world is dark to us, but we lie very open to it. Here is,

I. Satan among the sons of God, (v. 6.) an adversary (so Satan signifies) to God, to men, to all good. He thrust himself into an assembly of the sons of God, that came to present themselves before the Lord. This means, either, 1. A meeting of the saints on earth. Professors of religion, in the patriarchal age, were called sons of God; (Gen. 6: 2.) they had then their religious assemblies, and stated times for them. Or, 2. A meeting of the angels in heaven; they are the sons of God, ch. 38: 7. They came to give an account of their negotiations on earth, and to receive new instructions. Satan is here represented as coming among them, either summoned as a criminal, or connived at, for the present, though an intruder.

II. His examination, v. 7. The Lord knew very well whence he came, and with what design he came thither; but by calling him to an account, He would show him he was under check and control. It is possible a man may be a child of the devil, and yet be found in the assemblies of the sons of God in this world; may pass undiscovered by men, yet be challenged by the all-seeing God; Friend, how camest thou in hither? Comp. 2 Cor. 11: 13, 14. Or, The same question was perhaps put to the rest that presented themselves. We are accountable to God for all our haunts and ways.

III. His account of himself, and his tour. He could not pretend he had been doing any good, as the sons of God could, who presented themselves before the Lord; and he would not own he had been doing any hurt; but intimates he had kept himself within the bounds allotted him; for he is cast out into the earth, (Rev. 12: 9.) and not yet confined to his place of torment. While on earth, we are within his reach; and with so much subtlety, swiftness, and industry, does he penetrate all its corners, that we cannot be in any place secure from his temptations. Perhaps it is spoken proudly, as if he were indeed prince of this world, (Luke 4: 6.) and had now been in circuit through his own territories: or, fretfully; he could find no rest, but was a vagabond as Cain: or, carefully; 'I have been hard at work, going to and fro,' 'searching about in the earth;' (so some) really in quest of mischief. [The Heb. denotes intensity, busy employment, being in the hithpael conjugation.] He walks about, seeking whom he may devour. It concerns us therefore to be sober and vigilant.

IV. God's question to him concerning Job, v. 8. As when we meet one from a distant place, where we have a friend we dearly love, we are ready to ask, 'You have been in such a place; pray, did you see my friend there?' Observe, How honorably God speaks of Job; he is my servant. Good men are God's servants, and He is pleased [in infinite condescension] to reckon Himself honored in their services, and that they are to Him for a name and a praise, (Jer. 13: 11.) and a crown of glory, Isa. 62: 3. There is none, of all the princes and potentates of the earth, singly or together, of equal worth; none like him for uprightness and serious piety. Thus Christ, long after, held up the centurion and the woman of Canaan, both, like Job, strangers to that commonwealth. The saints glory in God. And He is pleased (as here) to glory in them. Who is like Israel among the people? 'How unlike Job art thou, Satan!' The holiness, and happiness of the saints are the shame and torment of the devil, and the devil's children. To answer the devil's seeming boast of the interest he had in this earth, (Zech. 1: 10, 11.) and to anticipate his accusations, perhaps, God says, 'Hast thou considered him? God knows all the malice of the devil and his instruments against his servants; and we have an Advocate ready to appear for us, even before we are accused.

V. The devil's base insinuation against Job; that he was mercenary in his religion, and therefore a hypocrite, v. 9. Those are like the devil, who cannot endure any body should be praised but themselves, but grudge at the just share of reputation others have, as Saul, (1 Sam. 18: 5, &c.) and the Pharisees, Matt. 21: 15. He could not accuse him of any thing bad, therefore charges him with by-ends in doing good. Had the half been true, that his angry friends, in the heat of dispute, charged Job with, (ch. 15: 4. 22: 5.) Satan would, no doubt, have brought it against him now; but he slily censures him as a hypocrite; not asserting it, but only asking, 'Is he not so?' This is the common way of slanderers, to suggest that, by way of query, which yet they have no reason to think is true; whisperers, backbiters! Note, It is not strange if those that are approved and accepted of God, be unjustly censured by the devil and his instruments; if they are otherwise unexceptionable, it is easy to charge them with hypocrisy, as Satan charged Job, and they have no way to clear themselves, but patiently to wait for the judgment of God. It was a great truth, Job did not fear God for nought; he got well by it, for godliness is great gain: but it was a falsehood that he would not have feared God, if he had not got this by it, as the event proved. Job's friends charged him with hypocrisy, because he was greatly afflicted; Satan, because he greatly prospered. It is no hard matter for those to calumniate that seek an occasion. It is not mercenary to look at the eternal recompense, in our obedience [Heb. 12: 2. 11: 26.]; but to aim at temporal advantages in our religion, and to make it subservient to that, is spiritual idolatry, worshipping the creature more than the Creator, and is likely to end in a fatal apostasy; men cannot long serve God and mammon.

VI. Satan's complaint of Job's prosperity, v. 10. God's peculiar people are taken under his special protection, they and all that belong to them; divine grace makes a hedge about their spiritual life, and divine providence about their natural life, so they are safe and easy. He had prospered him, not in idleness or injustice, (the devil could not accuse him of them,) but in the way of honest diligence; Thou hast blessed the work of his hands; without that blessing, be the hands ever so strong, ever so skilful, the work will not prosper; but with that, his substance is wonderfully increased in the Satan (enemy) also came among them.' Miss E. Smith. This most adventurous alteration, made on untenable grounds, even by the confession of Dr. Randolph the editor, contrary to the concurrent opinion of all preceding versions, critics, and expositors, shows the dangerous extent to which the sacred oracles may be altered, by an attachment to new notions, and a slight consideration of the subject.—The LXX read, 'The angels of God.' SCOTT.

Verse 8.

Satan seemed to advance a claim to the earth as if it had been all his own. The express attestation of God to Job's integrity and piety, as the most faithful servant He had at that time on earth, is sufficient to demonstrate, that he was not a self-righteous Pharisee before his afflictions; as some, from undue regard to system, have ventured to speak of him. SCOTT.

Verse 10.

An hedge, &c.] 'The same expression still implies protection, among the Hindoos.' ROBERTS. 'The Heb. skth implies "to fence with sharp spikes, palisades, or thorns."' GOOD.

Verse 11.

He will curse.] 'Will he indeed bless.' BOOTHR. ID.

Verse 12.

This permission was granted, not because Job had any special need of chastisement; but that his integrity, and the power of divine grace in him, might be manifested to Satan's confusion the real benefit of [o] power; [p] only upon himself put not forth thine hand. [q] So Satan went forth from the presence of the LORD.

[Practical Observations.]

13 ¶ And there was a day, [r] when his sons and his daughters were eating, and drinking wine, in their eldest brother's house:

14 And there came a [s] messenger unto Job, and said, The oxen were ploughing, and the asses feeding beside them;

15 And the [t] Sabeans fell upon them, and took them away; yea, they have slain the servants with the edge of the sword; [u] and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

16 While he was yet speaking, [v] there came also another, and said, † The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burnt up the sheep, and the servants, and [o] Heb. hand. Gen. 16:6. Jer. 38:5. John 3:35,36.

[p] 2:4—6. Is. 76:10. Is. 27:8. 1 Cor. 10:13.
[q] 2:7. Luke 8:33.
[r] 4. Prov. 27:1. Ec. 9:12. Luke 12: 19,20. 17:27—29. 21:34.
[s] 1 Sam. 4:17. 2 Sam. 15:13. Jer. 51: 31.
[t] Gen. 10:7,28. 25:3. Ps. 72:10. Is. 45:14. Ez. 23:42. Joel 3:8.
[u] 16,17,19. 1 Sam. 22:20,21.
[v] Gen. 19:24. Lev. 9:24. 1 K. 18:38. 2 K. 1:10,12,14. Amos 7:4. Rev. 13: 13.
† Or, A great fire. Ex. 9:23. 1 Sam. 14:15. Marg.

land: the blessing of the Lord makes rich; Satan himself owns it. He speaks of it with vexation; I see thou hast made a hedge about him, round about; as if he had walked it round, to see if he could spy ever a gap in it, for him to enter in at, to do him a mischief; but he was disappointed; it was a complete hedge.

VII. The proof Satan undertakes to give of the hypocrisy and mercenariness of Job's religion, 'Let it be put to this issue,' v. 11. 'Touch what he has, and it will appear what he is.' 'Let me perish, if he curse thee not.' So some supply the imprecation, which the devil himself modestly concealed; but the profane swearers of our age impudently and daringly speak out. Observe, 1. How slightly he speaks of the affliction, how spitefully of the impression it would make. The word translated curse is barac, ordinarily and originally signifying to bless; but cursing God is so impious, that the holy language would not admit the name: but that, where the sense requires it, it must be so understood, is plain from 1 K. 21: 10—13. where the word is used concerning the crime charged on Naboth, that he did blaspheme God and the king.

Now, If Job would renounce his religion, Satan had made out his own universal empire among men. God declared Job the best man then living: now, if Satan can prove him a hypocrite, it will follow that God had not one faithful servant among men, and that there was no such thing as true piety in the world. But it appeared, that the Lord knows them that are his, and is not deceived in any. If Job should retain his religion, Satan would have the satisfaction to see him sorely afflicted: he hates good men.

VIII. The permission to Satan to try Job. It is matter of wonder, God should give Satan such a permission to do his worst, as this; but He did it for his own glory, the honor of Job, [and perfecting of his moral character,] the explanation of Providence, and the encouragement of his afflicted people in all ages; to make a case, which, being adjudged, might be a useful precedent. See Luke 22: 34. and 1 Pet. 1: 7. But, it is matter of comfort that God has the devil in a chain, Rev. 20: 1. He could not afflict Job, without leave from God first asked and obtained, and then no further than he had leave; 'Only upon himself put not forth thine hand;' The devil has no power to debauch men, but what they give him themselves, nor power to afflict men, but what is given him from above.

Lastly, Satan departs, with a direct course, to fall on poor Job, who is carefully going on the way of his duty, and knows nothing of the matter. What passes between good and bad spirits concerning us, we are not aware.

V. 13—19. Here is a particular account of Job's troubles:

1. Satan brought them upon him the very day his children began their course of feasting, at their eldest brother's house, (v. 13.) that the trouble, coming now, might be the more grievous; The night of my pleasure has He turned into fear, Isa. 21: 4. They all come on him at once: that there might appear a more than ordinary displeasure of God against him in his troubles, and by that he might be exasperated against Divine Providence, as if it were resolved, right or wrong, to ruin him, and not give him time to speak for himself. That he might not have leisure to consider and recollect himself, and reason himself into a gracious submission, but might be overwhelmed and overpowered by a complication of calamities. If he have not room to pause a little, he will be apt to speak in haste, and then, if ever, he will curse his God. Note, The children of God are often in heaviness, through manifold temptations: deep calls to deep, waves and billows one upon the neck of another. Let one affliction therefore quicken and help us to prepare for another; for how deep soever we have drunk of the bitter cup, as long as we are in this world, we cannot be sure that we have drunk our share, and that it will finally pass from us. The detail of Job's losses answers to the foregoing inventory of his possessions, the numbers, probably, not being intended to be exact. [Though neglect is culpable, yet] all our prudence, care, and diligence, cannot secure us from afflictions, no not from those commonly owing to imprudence and negligence: yet it is some comfort under a trouble, if it found us in the way of our duty, and not in any by-path. The Sabeans were a sort of robbers, perhaps, that lived by spoil and plunder, [like many tribes of those countries now.] We have no reason to suspect that either Job or his servants had given them any provocation, but Satan put it into their hearts to make this inroad; to do it now, and so gained a double point, for he made both Job to suffer, and them to sin. When Satan has God's permission to do mischief, he will not want for mischievous men as instruments, for he is a spirit that works in the children of disobedience.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—12. 'In every nation, he that feareth God, and worketh righteousness, is accepted of Him.' (Acts 10: 34, 35.)—When the heart is upright and devoted to God, the general conduct will be holy, and He will be served with the whole man; for the genuine fear of his name will produce habitual hatred of sin, and watchfulness against it.—It is not evil in itself to rejoice in the bounty of Providence, yet every [abused] indulgence disposes us to unwatchfulness, and forgetfulness of God: and we seldom feast together in the most friendly and decent manner, without having cause to repent of some part of our conduct and conversation; or at least of the thoughts and temper of our hearts. All that of which we are thus conscious must be washed away in the atoning blood of Christ, or it will rise up against us in judgment at the last day.—Alas! how few nobles and rulers imitate Job, in this open profession of godliness, and this strict attention to religion in his family!—We should inquire, not only whither we go, and what company we keep; but also, what our intentions and dispositions are.—Those who are disposed to represent the most blameless professors of godliness, as hypocritical or mercenary; to put a bad construction on harmless or even good actions; and to insinuate some suspicion or objection, in order to detract from the commendations bestowed on pious and useful men; may easily know whose children they are, whose example they follow, and whose work they do.—Every believer serves God from love, gratitude, and zeal, and delights in his holy commandments. When called to it, he will part with every temporal possession for his sake: and it is impossible that he, who loves God above all things, should fail of being eternally happy in the enjoyment of Him. But untried faith is not much to be depended on; therefore Satan is often allowed to sift and prove the people of God, (23: 8—12. Luke 22: 31—34. Jam. 1: 2—4, 12. 1 Pet. 1: 6, 7. 4: 12—16.) He means to destroy, defile, or distress them: but the Lord intends to demonstrate the reality and power of his grace in them, for his own glory and their important good.—We bolt and bar, to keep out a few ruffians of our own species, who might come to plunder or murder us while we sleep; but there are legions of infernal spirits, whom we can by no means * exclude, and who are able in a moment to distract, torment, or destroy us. Blessed be the Lord, his power limits the operations of these malicious foes; and the protection He affords to ungodly men against their destructive rage, is a most wonderful instance of his patience and loving-kindness. Yet, as they generally disbelieve or disregard the being and agency of evil spirits, they are 'taken captive by them at their will,' and are hurried on in rebellion against God. But they who love the Lord are assured of protection.
SCOTT.

* Taken absolutely, this doctrine would be very pernicious, for it would throw the blame of evil thoughts entirely upon evil spirits; but Scott would doubtless agree with Henry, that a man's will may reject, retain, or expose him to, these bad suggestions, whencesoever arising, so that his choice herein determines his sinfulness. Ed.

Job, the edification of the church in future ages, and the glory of God in all these respects. SCOTT. In fine, for the happiness of the universe.
ED.

Verse 16.

We cannot determine, in what manner this and other effects were produced by Satan, who is 'the prince of the power of the air;' (Eph. 2:1, 2.) and, no doubt, able, when permitted, to cause any such phenomena. (Deut. 13:1—5.) It is generally agreed, that the tremendous appearances on Sinai were produced by the ministration of holy angels: and though fallen angels have lost their holy dispositions and moral powers, they retain their natural capacities; and doubtless could, if allowed, produce similar effects: at least, it is impossible to prove the contrary, seeing we cannot explain the manner, or ascertain the boundaries, of their operations. But they are absolutely in the Lord's hands, and can exercise their powers only by his permission; and this alone is the security of our bodies, minds, relatives, friends, and possessions.
SCOTT.

consumed then; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

17 While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, [x] The Chaldeans made out three bands, and [*] fell upon the camels, and have carried them away, yea, and slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and [y] I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

18 While he was yet speaking, [z] there came also another, and said, [a] Thy sons and thy daughters were [b] eating, and drinking wine, in their eldest brother's house:

19 And, behold, there came [c] a great wind † from the wilderness, and smote the four corners of the house, and [d] it fell upon the young men, and [e] they are dead; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

20 Then Job arose, and [f] rent his ‡ mantle, and shaved his head, and [g] fell down upon the ground, and worshipped;

21 And said, [h] Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: [i] the LORD gave, and [k] the LORD hath taken x Gen. 11:28. Is. 23:13. Hab. 1:6.

* Heb. rushed.
y 15. 2 Sam. 1:3.
z 6:2,3. 16:14. 19:9,10. 23:2. Is. 28:19. Jer. 51:31. Lam. 1:12. Amos 4:6—11. a 8:4. 27:14. Ps. 34:19. Ec. 9:2. b 2 Sam. 13:28.
c Jer. 4:11,12. Eph. 2:2.
† Heb. from aside, &c. d Judg. 16:30. 1 K. 20:30. Matt. 7: 27. Luke 13:1—5. Acts 28:4.
e Gen. 37:32,33. 42:36. 2 Sam. 18:33.
f Gen. 37:29,34. Ezra 9:3.
‡ Or, robe.
g Deut. 9:18. 2 Sam. 12:16—20. 2 Chr. 7:3. Matt. 26:39. 1 Pet. 5:5.
h Gen. 3:19. Ps. 49:17. Ec. 5:15. 12: 7. 1 Tim. 6:7.
i 2:10. Gen. 30:2. Ec. 5:19. Jam. 1: 17.
k Gen. 45:5. 2 Sam. 16:10. 1 K. 12:15. Ps. 39:9. Is. 42:24. 45:7. Amos 3: 6. Matt. 20:15. Acts 4:28.

2. Job was perhaps ready to reproach the Sabeans for their injustice and cruelty, when the next news he had was, that an extraordinary lightning, levelled directly against him, had cut off all his sheep and shepherds; not only killed but consumed them, at once, one shepherd only being left alive to bring him the news, v. 16. The devil, aiming to make him curse God and renounce his religion, managed this part very artfully. Having misrepresented Job to God as a false servant, in pursuance of his old design to set heaven and earth at variance, he here misrepresented God to Job as a hard Master, who would not protect those flocks out of which He had so many burnt-offerings: this would tempt Job to say, It is in vain to serve God. The messenger called the lightning the fire of God, (and innocently enough,) Job himself owns, (ch. 31: 23.) that destruction from God was a terror to him. How terrible then were the tidings of this destruction, immediately from the hand of God! There had not been the like since Sodom was burned.

3. The loss of the camels, and servants tending them, was by the Chaldeans, v. 17. If the fire of God which fell on Job's honest servants, had fallen on the Sabean and Chaldean robbers, God's judgments therein would have been, like the great mountains, evident and conspicuous; but when the way of the wicked prospers, and they carry off their booty, when just and good men are suddenly cut off, God's righteousness is like the great deep, the bottom of which we cannot find, Ps. 36: 6.

4. His dearest and most valuable possessions were his ten children; Their loss could not but go nearest him; therefore the devil reserved it for the last, that, if the other provocations failed, this might make him curse God. All died together, not one was left alive. David, though a wise and good man, was very much discomposed by the death of one son; how hard then did it bear on poor Job, who in one moment, was written childless! They died suddenly: without any warning: feasting and making merry: had they died praying, he might better have borne it; hoping death found them in a good frame. See how all things came alike to all. Job's children were constantly prayed for by their father, and lived in love one with another, and yet came to this untimely end. They were taken away when he had most need of them to comfort him under all his other losses. Such miserable comforters are all creatures; in God only we have a present help at all times.

V. 20—22. The devil had now done all he desired leave to do, to provoke Job to curse God; he had touched all he had, touched it with a witness; he whom the rising sun saw the richest of all the men in the east, before night was poor to a proverb. His pious deportment under his affliction, sufficiently proved the devil a liar, and Job an honest man.—He conducted himself,

I. Like a man; not stupid and senseless, like a stock or stone, not unnatural and unaffected at the death of his children and servants; no, (v. 20.) he arose, and rent his mantle, and shaved his head, the usual expressions of great sorrow, to show he was sensible of the hand of the Lord; yet he did not break out into any indecencies, nor discover any extravagant passion; he did not faint away, but arose, as a champion to the combat; very gravely, in conformity to the custom of the country, rent his mantle, his cloke, or outer garment; he did not passionately tear his hair, but deliberately shaved his head; by all which it appeared that he kept his temper, and bravely maintained the possession and repose of his own soul. The time when he began to show his feelings is observable; it was not till he heard of the death of his children, and then he arose, then he rent his mantle. A worldly, unbelieving heart would have said, 'Now the meat is gone, it is well the mouths are gone too; now there are no portions, it is well there are no children;' but Job knew better, for Jehovah-jireh, the Lord will provide. Some expositors, remembering it was usual with the Jews to rend their clothes when they heard blasphemy, conjecture that Job rent his in holy indignation at the blasphemous thoughts Satan now cast into his mind, tempting him to curse God.

II. Like a wise and good man, a perfect and upright man, that feared God, and eschewed the evil of sin more than that of outward trouble: humbling himself under the hand of God, as one that knew how to want as well as to abound. Hypocrites cry not when God binds them, Job 36: 13. Hereby he prepared himself to get good by the affliction; for how can we improve the grief we will not feel?

1. He composed himself with quieting considerations; he reasons from the common state of human life, which he describes with application to himself, v. 21. Paul refers to this of Job, 1 Tim. 6: 7. We come into the world naked; not only unarmed, but unclothed, helpless, shiftless, not so well covered and fenced as other creatures. The sin we are born in, makes us naked to our shame, in the eyes of the holy God. The body goes out of the world naked, though the sanctified soul goes clothed, 2 Cor. 5: 3. Death strips us of all our enjoyments; clothing can neither warm nor adorn a dead body. This consideration silenced Job, under all his losses. He was still his own man, but reduced to his first condition. No one can be so poor as he was when born.—Min. Felix. If we are impoverished, we are not wronged, nor much hurt, for we are but as we were born. He is but where he must have been at last, and is only unclothed, or unloaded rather, a little sooner than he expected.

2. He gave glory to God, and expressed himself on this occasion with a great veneration for the Divine Providence, and an awful submission to its disposals; we may well rejoice to find Job in this good frame, because this was the very thing on which the trial of his integrity was put, though he did not know it.

(1.) The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away. We must own the Divine Providence, in all our comforts—and in all our crosses. May not God do what He will with his own? See how he looks above instruments, to the First Cause; he does not say, 'The Lord gave, and the Sabeans and Chaldeans have taken away; God made me rich, and the devil has made me poor.' Seneca could argue thus, Abstulit, sed et dedit—He took

Verse 17.

The Chaldeans seem at this time an inconsiderable roving tribe; but afterwards became a powerful nation. (Is. 23:13. Hab. 1:5—7.) SCOTT.

'They inhabited each side of the Euphrates, near Babylon, their capital; and were also mixed with the wandering Arabs.' Dr. A. Clarke. Gesenius seeks their original seat in the mountains of Kurdistan, whose inhabitants, the Kurds, are robbers still. Xenophon says of the later Chaldeans, 'that they lived upon plunder, and not knowing agriculture, got their bread by force of arms.' GILL. Babylon, perhaps, was but an immense walled camp of robber nomades. See note on Nineveh, in Jon. ED.

Verses 18, 19.

When we have endeavored to conceive aright of Job's circumstances, comforts, and prospects, on the morning of this eventful day, and of the dreadful change which took place before evening; and when we realize, from experience and observation, the feelings of the human heart under trials comparatively trivial; we shall be able to form some faint idea of the immense load, at once laid on this eminent servant of God: and the strength of his faith and grace appears, in the manner he supported it. And though, afterwards, the still accumulating weight extorted some impatient expressions, which many have inconsiderately objected to the scriptural commendation of his patience; yet probably, no mere man ever suffered so much and so long, with equal resignation and constancy. SCOTT.

(19.) Great wind.] Bruce (in his Trav.) mentions such a sudden and powerful whirlwind. ED. 'So many calamities at once, seem to some fictitious, but there is nothing unlikely in a band of Sabeans attacking Job's property in one part, while Chaldeans attacked it in another, and a thunder-storm and wind combined, might, at the same time do the other mischief.' [The experience of some families too will corroborate the probability.] Young men.] Young folk, including the daughters. Broughton, in Cond. Comm. 'Young people.' BOOTHR.

Verse 20.

Shaved his head.] 'So the Jews and neighboring nations, Jer. 41: 5.' (HEWLETT,) and the Persians when Alexander died. Curtius. Thus the Egyptians lamented at the funeral of their Apis, and the Syrians mourned the death of Adonis. PARKHURST.

Verse 21.

The origin of all things from the earth, introduced, at a very early period of the world, the superstitious worship of the earth. Lucretius. The idea [of 'mother-earth,'] seems to have been common to all the east. BURDER.

away; [l] blessed be the name of the LORD.

22 [m] In all this Job sinned not, nor * charged God foolishly.

CHAP. II.

Satan again appears before God, and obtains permission still further to try Job, 1—8. He smites him with sore boils from head to foot, 7, 8. His wife moves him to curse God and die; but he rebukes her, 9, 10. Three of his friends visit him; and, overwhelmed with surprise and grief, they keep silence seven days, 11—13.

AGAIN [a] there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them, to present himself before the LORD.

2 And the LORD said unto Satan, [b] From whence comest thou? And Satan answered the LORD, and said, [c] From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

3 And the LORD said unto Satan, [d] Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and [e] an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil? and still he [f] holdeth fast his integrity, although [g] thou movedst me against him, to † destroy him, [h] without cause.

4 And Satan answered the LORD, and said, Skin for skin; yea, [i] all that a man hath will he give for his life:

5 But [j] put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and [k] he will curse thee to thy face.

6 And the LORD said unto Satan, [l] Behold, he is in thy hand; ‡ but [m] save his life.

away, but He also gave; and Epictetus excellently, (cap. 15.) 'When deprived of any comfort, suppose a child, or a part of thy estate, say not, I have lost it; but, I have restored it to the right owner. But thou wilt object, (says he) He is a bad man, that has robbed me; to which he answers, What is it to thee, by what hand He that gives remands what He gave?

(2.) He adores God in both. Afflictions must not divert us from, but quicken us to, the exercise of religion. He has still the same great and good thoughts of God as ever, and is as forward to speak them forth to his praise. Thus must we sing both of mercy and judgment, Ps. 101: 1. When comforts are removed, we must thank God, like Job here, that ever we had them, and had them so much longer than we deserved. Nay, he gave God thanks too, for good designed him by his afflictions, for gracious supports under them, and his believing hopes of a happy issue.

Lastly, Here is the honorable testimony the Holy Ghost gives to Job's constancy and good conduct under his afflictions, v. 22. Job did not attribute folly to God, nor in the least reflect on his wisdom. Discontent and impatience do, in effect, charge God with folly. They who not only keep their temper under crosses and provocations, but keep up good thoughts of God and sweet communion with Him, whether their praise be of men or no, it will be of God.

CHAP. II. V. 1—6. They that calumniate good people, will have their saying, though the evidence to the contrary be ever so plain and full. So Satan will have Job's cause called over again. The malicious, unreasonable importunity of that great persecutor is represented, (Rev. 12: 10.) by his accusing the saints before our God day and night, still repeating and urging what has been many a time answered: so did Satan here accuse Job day after day. Here is,

1. The court set, and the prosecutor, or accuser, making his appearance, (v. 1, 2.) as before, ch. 1: 6, 7. and to the question, Whence comest thou? he answers as before, From going to and fro; as if he had been doing no harm, though abusing that good man.

2. The Judge Himself as counsel for the accused, and pleading for him, v. 3. Holding fast his integrity is now added as a further achievement; instead of letting go his religion, and cursing God, he holds it faster than ever, as having now more than ordinary occasion for it; he is the same in adversity as in prosperity, and rather better, more hearty and lively in blessing God than ever, and takes root the faster for being thus shaken. Satan is condemned for his allegations; Thou, as an accuser, movedst Me against him. Or, 'Thou in vain movedst Me to destroy him, for I will never do that.'

1 Ii. 1 Sam. 3:18. 2 K. 20:19. Ps. 34:1. Is. 24:15. Eph. 5:20 1 Thes. 5:18.
m 2:10. Jam. 1:4,12. 1 Pet. 1:7.
* Or, attributed folly to God. 34:10, 18,19. 40:4—8. Rom. 9:20. a See on 1:6.—Is. 6:1,2. Luke 1:19. Heb. 1:14.
b Gen. 16:8.
c 1:7. John 14:30. 2 Cor. 4:4. 1 Pet. 5:8.
d See on 1:1,8.—9:20. Gen. 6:9. Ps. 37:37. Phil. 3:12. 1 Pet. 5:10.
e Prov. 11:3. 13:6. 14:2. 15:8. 16:17.
f 1:21,22. 13:15. 27:5,6. Jam. 1:12. 1 Pet. 1:7.
g 1:11.
† Heb. swallow him up. 2 Sam. 20:20.
h 9:17. John 9:3.
i Esth. 7:3,4. Is. 2:20,21. Jer. 41:3. Matt. 16:26. Acts 27:18,19. Phil. 3: 8—10. j 1:11. 19:21. 1 Chr. 21:17. Ps. 32: 3,4. 38:2—7. 39:10. k 9. 1:5,11. Lev. 24:15. Is. 8:21.
l See on 1:12.
‡ Or, only.
m 38:10,11. Ps. 65:7. Luke 8:29—33 22:31,32. 1 Cor. 10:13. Rev. 2:10 20:1,2,7.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 13—22. It is the delight of Satan and of all his servants to do mischief: and we see in the example before us, to what an extent they may be successful; and, though they are seldom allowed to proceed so far, we should be thankful they can go no farther, and should prepare for the worst. If, in all our troubles, we look to our gracious God, He will repress our murmurs, and support us under our afflictions.—May we, after the example of Job, learn, under our lighter trials, to repress every rebellious passion; to humble ourselves before God; to adore his wise and righteous sovereignty, and to praise Him for remaining mercies and prospects; and, by all our troubles, to get nearer to his mercy-seat; in communion with Him. And may the malice and power of these our enemies render more precious to us that gracious and condescending Savior, 'who came to destroy the works of the devil,' and who, in order to effect our salvation, was willing to suffer from that enemy, far more than Job suffered, or than we can possibly conceive. SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. II. V. 4, 5. Satan construed Job's holy resignation into an evidence of his insensibility. Nothing could be more unreasonable and malignant: it illustrates the subtlety of that enemy, who was able plausibly to put a bad construction on Job's most unexceptionable conduct, and to impute to the basest principles, what sprang from the noblest, of which the human heart is susceptible. SCOTT.

(4.) Skin for skin.] 'Skin after skin.' Parkhurst. 'In plain English, "property for person." Good. 'Skins obtained by hunting were an early and valuable article of barter. The traffickers, however, would give many as a tribute [notes, 1 K. 10:22, 23, &c.] to one party of men to defend them from the attacks of another. Hence, skin after skin, as might be demanded, would a man give, or even all, in an extreme case, to preserve his life.' Good. Bib. Research. Cond. Comm. ED.

Verse 6.

' Life,] Heb. nfsh: note, Gen. 2:7, latter part. It also means 'soul,' but 'life' is preferable here. Gill. Good. Dr. A. Clarke. ID.

7 So [n] went Satan forth from the presence of the LORD, and smote Job with [o] sore boils, [p] from the sole of his foot to his crown.

8 And he [q] took him a potsherd to scrape himself withal: and [r] he sat down among the ashes.

[Practical Observations.]

9 ¶ Then said [s] his wife unto him, Dost thou still [t] retain thine integrity? [u] curse God, and die.

10 But he said unto her, [x] Thou speakest [y] as one of the foolish

n 1 K. 22:22.
o 30:17,—19,30. Ex. 9:9—11. Deut. 28: 27,35. Rev. 16:11. p Is. 1:6. 3:17.
q 19:14—17. Ps. 38:5,7. Luke 16:20,21. r 42:6. 2 Sam. 13:19. Is. 61:3. Ez. 27:30. Jon. 3:6. Matt. 11:21. s Gen. 3:6,12. 1 K. 11:4.
t 3. 21:14,15. 2 K. 6:33. Mark 3:14.
u 5. 1:11.
x Gen. 3:17. 2 Sam. 19:22. Matt. 16: 23.
y 2 Sam. 6:20,21. 13:13. 24:10. 2 Chr. 16:9. Prov. 9:6,13. Matt. 25:2.

put Christ into his agony in the garden. He had permission to touch his bone and his flesh, without exception of his life, because by dying He was to do what Job could not do; destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil.

V. 7—10. His own children, the devil first tempts and draws to sin, and afterwards torments; but this child of God he first tormented, and then tempted. He aimed to make Job curse God; here is the artful course he took, to give him both the provocation and the suggestion; the old serpent is here playing the same game against Job, that he played against our first parents; (Gen. 3.) aiming to seduce him from his allegiance, and rob him of his integrity.

I. He provokes him with sore boils, making him a burden to himself, v. 7, 8. an evil inflammation, so some; an erysipelas, perhaps, in a higher degree. One boil, when gathering, is torment enough, and gives abundance of pain and uneasiness: what a condition was Job then in, that had boils all over him, and those of as raging a heat as the devil could make them, as it were, set on fire of hell! The small-pox is very grievous and painful, and would be much more terrible, but that the extremity of it ordinarily lasts but a few days; how grievous then was Job's disease, with ulcers all over, making him sick at heart, putting him to exquisite torture, and spreading over him so, that he could lay himself no way for any ease. If exercised with sore and grievous distempers, let us think that God has sometimes dealt thus with the best of his saints and servants. We know not how much Satan may have a hand (by divine permission) in the diseases of the children of men, and especially the children of God; what infections that prince of the air may spread, what inflammations may come from that fiery serpent. We read of one whom Satan had bound many years, Luke 13: 16. Should God suffer that roaring lion to have his will, how miserable would he soon make us!

His strange management of himself, in this distemper, v. 8. Instead of healing salves, he took a piece of a broken pitcher, to scrape himself withal: a very sad pass. When sick and sore, a man may bear it the better, if well tended: even Lazarus had some ease from the tongues of the dogs; but poor Job has no help. Nothing is done to his sores but what he does with his own hands. His children and servants are all dead, his wife unkind, ch. 19: 17. He has not wherewithal to fee a physician, or surgeon; and, most sad of all, none of those he had formerly been kind to had so much sense of honor and gratitude as to minister to him in his distress; either because the disease was loathsome and noisome, or because they apprehended it to be infectious. Thus it was in the former days, as it will be in the last days; men were lovers of their own selves, unthankful, and without natural affection. There are no soft rags, no ointment, no keeping clean, no healing plasters, no opiates; all that he does to remove the fetid matter, or allay the irritation, is to scrape his sores; a remedy one would think as bad as the disease: and he has nothing to do this with but an instrument that would rather

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—8. Holy angels are not more unwearied in serving God and doing good, than evil spirits are in rebellion and mischief.—As Satan persists in accusing God's people, notwithstanding the evidences they give of piety and integrity: so will his servants on earth persist in slandering them, in defiance of demonstration itself. (John 3: 37—47.) The piety of believers is called hypocrisy; their self-denial, affectation; their liberality, ostentation; their resignation, want of natural affection; their meekness, want of spirit; and their contempt of worldly pleasure, and dislike to trifling and profane company, are ascribed to want of taste, and to a morose, unsociable disposition. But the Lord will vindicate the character of his servants; and He delights in their constancy and submission amidst trials and temptations, because they glorify the power of his grace. He will therefore, at some times, without any other peculiar cause, give their enemies permission to prove them in various ways. (Gen. 50: 20. Is. 10: 7. Hab. 1: 12—17. Rom. 8: 35—39. 1 Pet. 4: 12—16.)—Men are indeed naturally selfish, and prone to disregard all others in comparison of themselves, their own ease, interest, or indulgence. Hence it is evident we all need an inward and gracious change, that we may learn to love God [with our whole hearts] and our neighbor as we ought. And as men will give all they have to save their lives; we should argue, that it is true wisdom to part with our property, liberty, country, nay, our very lives, to secure our souls. But to infer, that all are alike mercenary, and that the most excellent actions of pious persons spring from the same carnal and selfish principles, as the most atrocious crimes of the profane; manifests the malice of Satan himself, tends to render the vilest characters contented in their wickedness, subserves the cause of infidelity, and insinuates that all religion is pretence and imposture. To confute such accusations by stubborn facts, the Lord is pleased to give leave to malice, to exert her utmost power, in putting this matter to the trial; in the midst of afflictions and persecutions, He enables the believer to retain his integrity; and, while the men of the world give up honor, conscience, and their souls, to save their lives, the servant of God renounces all, and even lays down his life, rather than disobey and dishonor his Lord. Thus, in innumerable instances, have the patient and constant sufferings of godly men confounded persecutors; and demonstrated an essential difference between those, who are only 'born of the flesh,' and those who 'are born again of the Spirit.' —When most healthy and vigorous, we should remember to what loathsome diseases and decay our bodies are liable; and instead of being vain of them, or bestowing pains in decorating or pampering them; let us seek for the incorruptible ornaments and unfading beauties of holiness.—When in great pain and sickness, deserted, insulted, destitute of necessaries or convenient attendance, or laboring under a complication of every distress; we should meditate on the sufferings of Job, his patience, the love of God to him, and his happy deliverance: and also look to the suffering Savior, comparing our light afflictions with his unknown sufferings, 'lest we be wearied and faint in our minds.' (Heb. 12: 2, 3. Jam. 5: 7—11.) SCOTT.

Verses 7, 8.

No doubt the disease Satan inflicted on Job, was as painful and loathsome as it could be made.—Perhaps, when any of the boils began to die away, the itching became as intolerable.—By this improper treatment, his disease was probably increased and prolonged, and one kind of misery alternately exchanged for another. SCOTT.

(7.) Sore boils.] 'Ulcerous sores.' Boothr. Supposed to be the elephantiasis, or black leprosy of the Arabs; (Good. Boothr.) rendering the skin like that of the elephant, uneven and wrinkled, with many furrows. Hales. 'In the beginning of elephantiasis, an intolerable itching is felt throughout, so that a person cannot possibly keep his hands and nails from scratching. See Aretæus.' When it attains a certain height it is incurable. Michaelis. [Note, Dent. 28:34.] Clarke queries, if, from its symptoms, it was not the small-pox. Respectable people in the east have the greatest dread of boils and cutaneous diseases. Roberts. COND. COMM.

(8.) Potsherd.] 'Or, earthern vessel.' Rosenm. When all vessels were of the potter's forming, [and the Egyptians had an immense variety in this kind,] and before metal vessels were much in use, the dust heaps must have abounded with potsherds. Good. Any one who has rambled over the ruins of ancient cities will recollect how often fragments of pottery, and that in great abundance, are mixed with the soil. Ashes.] Gill remarks, that ashes are a drier and an abstersive of ulcers. 'Job sat among the ashes of the hearth, deemed a sacred place among the ancients.' Hewlett. Homer makes the shipwrecked Ulysses to sit "upon the hearth in the midst of the ashes." In transl. "dunghill" the Sept. intended a rubbish pile, an ignoble and unclean spot, as Job rendered the place where he sat such, by the loathsome products of his putrid disease.' Rosenm. ED.

Verse 9.

When Satan deprived Job of his children, he reserved his wife to be his tempter; perhaps knowing her to be a woman of an impatient spirit, who had great influence with her husband. She had shared the same afflictions with him; yet it is probable that she was full of hard and rebellious thoughts, though she did not openly give vent to them. But when this additional calamity oppressed Job, she was driven to despair of help, and to upbraid him as preposterous in adhering to his religion, seeing God rewarded his fidelity and resignation, with nothing but one dire calamity after another. The meaning of his wife's advice has been much disputed, for the Hebrew word signifies both to bless and to curse. (1:5.) But her counsel was evidently suggested by Satan, who spake by her, as he had spoken by the serpent to Eve, and by Eve to Adam: and it was therefore coincident with his temptation: (Notes and P. O. Gen. 3:1—6.) and both her preface and Job's answer prove, that it was desperate, and not pious, advice she gave. It is probable, therefore, that our translation gives the true sense: and that Job's wife, being herself driven desperate, instigated him to despair and blasphemy, to 'curse God,' though he should die for so doing; or even in order to provoke the Lord thus to terminate his sufferings; or as an introduction to suicide, to which Satan no doubt would tempt him.—It is well known, that the Gentiles, under great calamities, frequently vented their rage by curses against the gods, whom at other times they worshipped. SCOTT. 'So now in the east.' ROBERTS.

Verse 10.

Considering Job's situation, nothing can be more admirable than this reply. He reproved his wife with firmness, yet with temper; and nei-ish women speaketh. What? [z] shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? [a] In all this did not Job sin with his lips.

11 ¶ Now when Job's three [b] friends heard of all this evil that was come upon him, they came every one from his own place; Eliphaz the [c] Temanite, and Bildad the [d] Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite: for they had made an appointment together to come [e] to mourn with him, and to [f] comfort him.

12 And when they lifted up their eyes afar off, and [g] knew him not, [h] they lifted up their voice and wept; and [i] they rent every one his mantle, and [k] sprinkled dust upon their heads toward heaven.

13 So [l] they sat down with him upon the ground [m] seven days z 1:1—3,10,21. 2 Sam. 1—23. Lam. 3:33—41. John 18:11. Rom. 12:12. Heb. 12:9—11. Jam. 5:10,11. a 1:22. Ps. 39:1. 59:12. Matt. 12:34—37. Jam. 3:2. b 6:14. 16:20. 19:19,21. 42:7. Prov. 17:17. 18:24. 27:10. c 2:11. 15:1. Gen. 36:11,15. Jer. 49:7.

d 8:1. 18:1. Gen. 25:2. 1 Chr. 1:32.
e 42:11. Gen. 37:35. Is. 51:19. John 11:19. Rom. 12:15. 1 Cor. 12:26. Heb. 13:3.
f 13:4. 13:2.
g 19:14. Ruth 1:19—21. Lam. 4:7,8.
n Gen. 27:34. Judg. 2:4. 1 Sam. 11:4. 30:4. 2 Sam. 13:36. Esth. 4:1.
i 1:20.
k Neh. 9:1. Lam. 2:10. Ez. 27:30. Rev. 18:19. l Ezra 9:3. Neh. 1:4. Is. 3:26. 47:1. m Gen. 1:5,8.

rake into his wounds, and add to his pain, than give him any ease. People that are sick and sore, have need to be under the discipline and direction of others, for they are often but bad managers of themselves.

Instead of reposing in a bed, he sat down among the ashes. Probably he had a bed left him; for we do not find his house was burnt or plundered; but he chose to sit in the ashes, either as weary of his bed, or he would put himself into the place and posture of a penitent, ch. 42: 6. Isa. 58: 5. Jon. 3: 6. Thus did he humble himself under the mighty hand of God, and bring his mind to his condition. If God lay him among the ashes, there he will contentedly sit down: a humble spirit becomes low circumstances, and will help to reconcile us to them. The Sept. reads, He sat down on a dunghill without the city; (which is commonly said, in mentioning this story;) but the original says no more than that he sat in the midst of the ashes, which he might do in his own house.

II. Satan urges him, by the persuasions of his own wife, to curse God, v. 9. The Jews (who covet much to be wise above what is written) say Job's wife was Dinah, Jacob's daughter: so the Chaldee paraphrase. It is not likely she was; however, she was to him like Michal to David, a scoffer at his piety. She was spared to him, when the rest of his comforts were taken away, for this purpose, to be a troubler and tempter to him. If Satan leaves any thing he has permission to take away, it is with a design of mischief. It is policy to send his temptations by the hand of those that are dear to us, as he tempted Adam by Eve, and Christ by Peter. We must therefore carefully watch, that we be not drawn to say or do a wrong thing by the influence, interest, or entreaty, of any, no not those for whose opinion and favor we have ever so great a value. Observe how strong this temptation was:

1. She banters Job for his constancy in his religion, v. 9. Art thou so tame and sheepish, as thus to truckle to a God, who seems to take a pleasure in making thee miserable?

'Dost thou not see that thy devotion 's vain? Incorrigibly pious! Can't thy God Reform thy stupid virtue with his rod?'—(Blackmore.) Thus Satan still endeavors to draw men from God, as he did our first parents, by suggesting hard thoughts of Him, as one that envies the happiness, and delights in the misery, of his creatures, than which nothing is more false. Another artifice he uses, is, to drive men from their religion, by scoffs and reproaches for adherence to it: with much more reason may we retort it upon the scoffers, 'Are you such fools as still to retain your impiety, when you might bless God, and live?'

2. She urges him to renounce his religion, to blaspheme God, set Him at defiance, and dare Him to do his worst: 'End thy troubles by ending thy life; better die once than be always dying thus; thou mayest now despair of help from thy God, even curse Him, and hang thyself.' These are two of the blackest and most horrid of all Satan's temptations, yet such as good men have sometimes been violently assaulted with: nothing is more contrary to natural conscience than blaspheming God, nor to natural sense than self-murder; therefore the suggestion of either of these may well be suspected to come immediately from Satan. Lord, lead us not into such, not into any, temptation, but deliver us from the evil one.

III. He bravely resists and overcomes the temptation, v. 10. He soon gave her an answer, (for Satan spared him the use of his tongue, in hopes he would curse God with it,) which showed his constant resolution to cleave to God, to keep his good thoughts of Him, and not to let go his integrity.

1. In other cases, Job reasoned with his wife with great mildness, even when she was unkind, ch. 19: 17. But when she persuaded him to curse God, he was much displeased. He does not call her a fool, and an atheist, nor break out into any indecent expressions of his displeasure, as the sick and sore are apt to do, and think they may be excused; but he shows her the evil of what she said, that she spake the language of the infidels and idolaters, who, when hardly bestead, fret themselves, and curse their king and their God, Isa. 8: 21. We have reason to suppose, in such a pious household, Job's wife had been well-affected to religion, but now all their estate and comfort were gone, she could not bear the loss with Job's temper; but that she should go about to infect his mind with her wretched distemper, was a great provocation, and he could not forbear resentment. Note, (1.) Those are angry and sin not, who are angry only at sin, taking a temptation as the greatest affront; who cannot bear the evil, Rev. 2: 2. When Peter was a Satan to Christ, He told him plainly, Thou art an offence to Me. (2.) If those whom we think wise and good, at any time speak what is foolish and bad, we ought to reprove them faithfully, and show them the evil of what they say, that we suffer not sin upon them. (3.) Temptations to curse God ought to be rejected with the greatest abhorrence, and not so much as parleyed with: whoever persuades us to that, must be looked upon as our enemy. Job did not curse God, and then think to come off with Adam's excuse, The woman Thou gavest, persuaded me, (Gen. 3: 12.) a tacit reflection on God, his ordinance, and providence; no, if thou scornest, cursest, thou alone shalt bear it.

2. How he reasoned against the temptation; Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil also? Those whom we reprove, we must endeavor to convince; no hard matter; [for it is a reason why we should still hold fast our integrity, that we are stripped of every thing else.] He considers, that though good and evil are contraries, yet they do not come from contrary causes, but both from the hand of God; (Is. 45: 7. Lam. 3: 38.) and therefore that in both we must have our eye to Him, with thankfulness for the good He sends, and without fretfulness at the [seeming] evil. Observe the force of his argument:

(1.) What he argues for; not only the bearing, but the receiving, of evil aright. Shall we not receive evil? i. e. expect to receive it? and set ourselves to receive it aright? The word signifies to receive as a gift, and denotes a pious affection and disposition of soul under our afflictions, neither despising them nor fainting under them, accounting them gifts; (Phil. 1: 29.) accepting them as punishments of our iniquity; (Lev. 26: 41.) acquiescing in the will of God in them; and accommodating ourselves to them, as those that know how to want as well as how to abound, Phil. 4: 12 When the heart is humbled, and weaned, by humbling, weaning providences, then we receive correction, (Zech. 3: 2.) and take up our cross.

(2.) What he argues from; the reception of so much good from God. Note, The consideration of the mercies we receive from God, both past and present, should make us receive our afflictions with a suitable disposition of spirit. If we have so much that pleases us, why not be content with what pleases God? Afflictions [give play to the higher, better, un-selfish sympathies, and sentiments,] serve as foils to our comforts, to make them the more valued, and as allays to make them the less dangerous, to keep the balance even, and to prevent our being lifted up [in self-dependence, contempt of others, and forgetfulness of our dependence on God] above measure; 2 Cor. 12: 7. If we receive so much good for the body, shall we not receive some good for the soul? i. e. some afflictions, by which we partake of God's holiness; (Heb. 12: 10.) something which, by saddening the countenance, makes the heart better? Let murmuring, therefore, as well as boasting, be for ever excluded.

IV. Thus, in a good measure, Job still held fast his integrity; and Satan's design against him was defeated: in the midst of all these grievances, he did not speak a word amiss; and we have no reason to think but he also preserved a good temper of mind, so that though there might be some stir-ther the anguish of his mind, nor the baseness of her suggestion, dictated any opprobrious language.—Thus far he most honorably stood the trial, and appeared the brightest in the furnace of affliction: and the testimony here borne to his conduct, shows that he did not speak the language of passion, as many seem to think; but that of soberness and piety.—It is not said, what reception his reply met with: but the temptation was repulsed, and the tempter baffled; and we read little more of his wife. (19:17.) SCOTT.

---

(10.) 'In all parts of the east, women are spoken of as "foolish."' ROBERTS.

Verse 11.

These friends the Sept. calls kings, but no evidence can be adduced that they were so. Their intentions were humane, friendly, and pious; yet, by their mistake of his case, they not only greatly increased his anguish; but unintentionally concurred with Satan, in tempting him to despair, and to blasphemy, as its never failing effect. SCOTT.

Verses 12, 13.

Job seems to have been at this time in the open air; it should not, however, be concluded from the language here used, that he and his friends remained together in the same place, all the time preceding and seven nights, and [n] none spake a word unto him: for they saw that his grief was very great.

CHAP. III.

Job vehemently curses the day of his birth, 1—10. He complains, because he died not from the womb; and expatiates on the quietness of the grave, 11—19. He longs for present death, and bemoans his misery, 20—26.

[a] AFTER this [b] opened Job his mouth, and [c] cursed his day.

n 4:2. Ps. 77:4.
a 1:22. 2:10.
b 35:16. Ps. 39:2,3. 106:33.
c 3. 1:11. 2:5,9. Jer. 20:14,15.

perhaps made ballads on him: but his friends endeavored to comfort him; a friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adversity. Three are here named, v. 11. We shall meet with a fourth after, who, it should seem, was present at the whole conference, whether as a friend of Job, or only as an auditor, does not appear: these three are said to be his friends, his intimate acquaintances, as David and Solomon each had one in their court, called the king's friend. They were eminently wise and good, as appears by their discourses; very old, of great reputation for knowledge, and much deference was paid to their judgment, ch. 32: 6. Probably they were men of figure in their country—princes, or heads of houses. Now observe,

I. Job, in his prosperity, had contracted a friendship with them: if his equals, yet he had not that jealousy of them, or, if his inferiors, yet not that disdain, which was any hinderance to an intimate converse and correspondence. Much of the comfort of this life lies in acquaintance and friendship with the prudent and virtuous; and he that has a few such friends, ought to value them highly. Job's three friends are all supposed to be of the posterity of Abraham, which, for some descents, even in the families shut out from the covenant of peculiarity, retained some good fruits of that pious education the father of the faithful gave those under his charge. Eliphaz descended from Teman, the grandson of Esau; (Gen. 36: 11.) Bildad (it is probable) from Shuah, Abraham's son by Keturah; Gen. 25: 2. Zophar is thought by some to be the same with Zepho, a descendant from Esau, Gen. 36: 11. The preserving of so much wisdom and piety among strangers to the covenants of promise, was a happy presage of God's grace to the Gentiles, when the partition wall should, in the latter days, be taken down. Esau was rejected; yet many that came from him inherited some of the best blessings.

II. They continued their friendship with Job in his adversity, when most of his friends had forsaken him, ch. 19: 14. Two ways they showed it. 1. By their kind visit in his affliction, to mourn with him, and to comfort him, v. 11. Visiting the afflicted, in their sorrow, is made a branch of pure religion and undefiled; (Jam. 1: 27.) and, if done from a good principle, will be abundantly recompensed shortly, Matt. 25: 36. It contributes to the improvement, (1.) Of our own graces; many a good lesson is to be learned from the troubles of others. (2.) Of their comforts; by respecting, we encourage them, and some good word may be spoken, which may help to make them easy. Job's friends came, not to satisfy their curiosity with an account of his troubles, and the strangeness of the circumstances of them; much less, as David's false friends, to make invidious remarks on him, (Ps. 41: 6—8.) but to mourn with him, to mingle their tears with his, and so to comfort him. It is much more pleasant to visit those in affliction, to whom comfort belongs, than those to whom we must first speak conviction.

V. 11—13. Here is the kind visit Job's three friends made him in his affliction. The news of it spread into all parts; he being an eminent man, both for greatness and goodness, and the circumstances of his troubles being very uncommon. Some, who were his enemies, triumphed in his calamities; (ch. 16: 10.—19: 18.—30: 1, &c.) rings and risings of corruption in his heart, yet grace got the upper hand; the abundance of his heart was for God, produced good things, and suppressed the evil; if he thought any evil, yet he laid his hand on his mouth, (Prov. 30: 32.) stifled the evil thought, and let it go no further; by which it appeared, not only that he had true grace, but that it was strong, and victorious; in short, that he had not forfeited the character of a perfect and upright man; for so he appears to be, who, in the midst of such temptation, offends not in word, Jam. 3: 2. Ps. 17: 3.

Concerning these visitants, observe, [1.] They were not sent for, (ch. 6: 22.) whence Mr. Caryl observes, that it is good manners to be an unbidden guest at the house of mourning, and, in comforting our friends, to prevent their invitations. [2.] They made an appointment to come. Good people should make appointments among themselves for doing good, so exciting and obliging, assisting and encouraging one another in it. For the carrying on of any pious design, let hand join in hand. [3.] They came with a design (we have reason to think sincere) to comfort him, yet proved miserable comforters, through unskilful management of his case. Many that aim well, by mistake, come short of their aim.

2. By tender sympathy with and concern for him; when they saw him at some distance, he was so disfigured and deformed, that they knew him not, v. 12. His face was foul with weeping, (ch. 16: 16.) like Jerusalem's Nazarites, once ruddy as the rubies, but now blacker than a coal, Lam. 4: 7, 8. What a change will a sore disease, or, without that, oppressing care and grief, make in the countenance, in a little time! Is this Naomi? So, Is this Job? God fit us for such changes!

Observing him thus miserably altered, they did not leave him, in fright or loathing, but expressed so much the more tenderness.

(1.) Coming to mourn with him, they vented their undissembled grief in all the then usual expressions of that passion; they wept aloud; the sight of them, (as is usual,) revived Job's grief, and he wept afresh, which fetched floods of tears from their eyes. They rent their clothes, and sprinkled dust on their heads, as men that would strip themselves, and abase themselves, with their friend that was stripped and abased.

(2.) Coming to comfort him, they sat down with him on the ground, for so he received visits; and they, not in compliment to him, but in true compassion, put themselves into the same humble and uneasy place and posture. They had many a time, it is likely, sitten with him on his couches, and at his table, in his prosperity, and were therefore willing to share in his grief and poverty, because they had shared his joy and plenty. It was not a modish, short visit they made him, just to look on him and be gone; but, as those that could have no enjoyment of themselves, if they had returned to their place, while their friend was in so much misery, they resolved to stay with him till they saw him mend or end, and therefore took lodgings near him, though he was not now able to entertain them as he had done, and they must therefore bear their own charges. Every day, for seven days together, at the hours he admitted company, they came and sat with him, as his companions in tribulation.

They sat with him, but none spake a word to him, only all attended to his particular narratives

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 9—13. The temporal comforts reserved to us, when others are removed, often prove sources of severest anguish. The enemy knows how to suit his temptations to our circumstances; we should consider, not who proposes, but what is proposed to us. (Matt. 16: 21—23. P. O. 21—28.)—No temptation is so dangerous to the afflicted, as that to despair. When induced to regard God as an irreconcilable enemy, the heart naturally rises in enmity, and vents this in blasphemy; every mean of grace is neglected, any crime ventured on with eagerness, and suicide may close the horrid career. Let us then 'watch and pray.' (1 Sam. 28: 12—25. 31: 3—6. Matt. 27: 3—5. 2 Cor. 2: 5—11.)—We ought not to judge of the Lord's love to us, by outward events or present feelings, but should rest our hopes on his holy Word; and consider every hard thought of God, as a 'fiery dart' of the enemy, which must be 'quenched' without a moment's delay, by whatever means excited. If one who has appeared to be a pious Christian, should once, under urgent distresses, drop a hint which tends to despair; we should remind him, whose work he is doing, and whose language he speaks.—Did we duly remember our sins, we should not wonder, that, amidst many blessings, we had also heavy afflictions: but rather say, 'It is of the LORD's mercies we are not consumed;' and receive the severest of them with thankfulness as well as patience: and thus they would become our richest gain.—Those friends who crush the afflicted believer with hard censures and suspicions are as real tempters, as those who persuade him to blasphemy and apostasy.—It is an indispensable duty of the Christian, to visit and comfort his afflicted brethren, as he has opportunity; for it is equally useful to him, as to them: and the greatest as well as the meanest should attend on it, without shrinking from inconveniences, or disagreeables. But alas! we often prove miserable comforters of each other, augmenting instead of alleviating grief. So that our whole dependence for consolation, must be placed on God. SCOTT.

their debate, and during its continuance. At proper seasons they came, and sat by him. Probably, they suspected his unprecedented calamities were judgments for some enormous crimes, he had veiled under a hypocritical profession of religion: but they did not choose to augment his grief, by abruptly making this charge; yet could not use the ordinary topics of consolation. Perhaps they conferred on the subject, and agreed to observe his conduct, and take an opportunity of speaking, as circumstances might appear. Perhaps also Job suspected the cause of their silence; and his anguish on that account, might give Satan an occasion of tempting him to use the passionate language recorded in the ensuing ch. which confirmed his friends in their harsh suspicions, and gave rise to the subsequent debate. SCOTT.

(13.) 'Seven days was the usual time of mourning. Gen. 1:10. 1 Sam. 13. Ezek. 3:15.' GILL. 'Mourners are silent, for hours together, during the same length of time, except when obliged to speak.' ROBERTS.

NOTES.

CHAP. III. V. 1. Here the style of the book is changed to poetry,

2 And Job * spake, and said,

3 [d] Let the day perish wherein I was born, and the night in which it was said, There is a man-child conceived.

4 Let that day be * darkness; let not [r] God regard it from above, neither let the light shine upon it.

5 Let darkness and [s] the shadow of death † stain it; [h] let a cloud dwell upon it; ‡ let the blackness of the day terrify it.

6 As for that night, let darkness seize upon it: § let it not be joined unto the days of the year; let it not come into the number of the months.

7 Lo, let that night be [i] solitary; let no joyful voice come therein.

8 Let them curse it that curse the day, [k] who are ready to raise up ‖ their mourning.

9 Let the stars of the twilight thereof be dark; let it look [l] for light, but have none; neither let it see ¶ the dawning of the day:

10 Because [m] it shut

* Heb. answered.
d 10:18,19. Jer. 15:10. 20:14,15.
e Ex. 10:22,23. Joel 2:2. Am. 5:18. Matt. 27:45 Acts 27:20. Rev. 16:10.
† Deut. 11:12.
g 10:21,22. 18:18. 24:17. 28:3. 38: 17. Ps. 23:4. 44:19. 107:10,14. Is. 9:2. Jer. 2:6. 13:16. Am. 5:8. Matt. 4:16. Luke 1:79. † Or, challenge.
h Deut. 4:11. Ex. 30:3. 34:12. Joel 2:2. Heb. 12:18
‡ Or, let them terrify it, as those who have a bitter day. Jer. 4:28. Am. 8:10.
§ Or, let it not rejoice among the days.
i Is. 13:20—22. 24:8. Jer. 7:34. Rev. 18:22,23 k 2 Chr. 35:25. Jer. 9:17,18. Am. 5: 16. Matt. 11:17. Mark 5:38.
‖ Or, a leviathan. 41:1,10.
l 30:26. Jer. 8:15. 13:16.
¶ Heb. the eye-lids of the morning. 41: 18.
m 10:18,19. Gen. 20:18. 29:31,32. 1 Sam. 1:5. Ec. 6:3—5. Jer. 20:17,18.

of his troubles. They were silent, as men astonished and amazed. Our lighter griefs have a voice; the more oppressive, are mute; or, according to Sir R. Blackmore, 'to show a reverence due to such prodigious wo.' They spake not a word to him, whatever they said one to another, by way of instruction, for the improvement of the present providence. They said nothing to that purport to which afterward they said much—nothing to grieve him; (ch. 4: 2.) because they saw his grief was very great already. There is a time to keep silence, when either the wicked is before us, and by speaking we may harden them, (Ps. 39: 1.) or when by speaking we may offend the generation of God's children, Ps. 73: 15. Their not entering on the following solemn discourses till the seventh day, may perhaps intimate it was the sabbath, which, doubtless, was observed in the patriarchal age, and to that day they adjourned the intended conference, because, probably, then company resorted, as usual, to Job's house, to join him in his devotions, who might be edified by the discourse. Or rather, by their silence so long, they would intimate, that what they afterwards said was well considered and digested, and the result of many thoughts. The heart of the wise studies to answer. We should think twice before we speak once, especially in such a case as this; think long, and we shall be the better able to speak short, and to the purpose.

CHAP. III. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, says the apostle James. So we have, and of his impatience too. We wondered a man should be so patient as he was, ch. 1. and 2. but we wonder also, a good man should be so impatient as he is here in this ch. where we find him cursing his day, and in passion complaining that he was born, that he did not die as soon as he was born, that his life was now continued in misery. In this, it must be owned Job sinned with his lips, and it is written, not for our imitation, but our admonition, that he who thinks he stands, may take heed lest he fall.

V. 1—10. Long was Job's heart hot within him; at length, he spake, but not such a good word as David after a long pause, Lord, make me to know my end, Ps. 39: 3, 4. So long (like Ezekiel, 3: 15, 16.) Job and his friends sat thinking, but said nothing; they were afraid of speaking what they thought, lest they should grieve him, and he durst not vent his thoughts, lest he should offend them. They came to comfort him, but, finding his afflictions very extraordinary, they began to think comfort did not belong to him, suspecting him to be a hypocrite, therefore they said nothing. But losers think they may have leave to speak, therefore Job gives vent first to his thoughts. Unless they had been better, it had been well if he had kept them to himself.

In short, he cursed his day, the day of his birth, and could not think or speak of his own birth without regret and vexation. Whereas men usually observe the annual return of their birth-day with rejoicing, [note, 1: 4.] he looked upon it as the unhappiest day of the year, because the unhappiest of his life, being the inlet to all his wo. Now,

I. This was bad enough. The extremity of his trouble and the discomposure of spirits may excuse, in part, but can by no means justify him. Now he has forgotten the good he was born to, the lean kine have eaten up the fat ones, and he is filled with thoughts of the evil only. Jeremiah himself expressed his [perception] of his calamities, in language not much unlike, Jer. 15: 10, 20: 14. Job, in prosperity, had doubtless many a time blessed God for the day of his birth, reckoning it happy; yet now he brands it with all possible marks of infamy. When we consider the iniquity in which we were conceived and born, we have reason enough to reflect with sorrow and shame on the day of our birth, and to say that the day of our death, by which we are freed from sin, (Rom. 6: 7.) is far better, Eccl. 7: 1. But to curse the day of our birth, because then we entered on the calamitous scene of life, is to quarrel with the God of nature, to despise the dignity of our being, [with its inconceivable privileges,] and to indulge a passion which our own calm, sober thoughts will make us ashamed of. Certainly there is no condition of life a man can be in in this world, but he may, in it, (if it be not his own fault,) so honor God, and work out his own salvation, and make sure a happiness for himself in a better world, that he will have no reason at all to wish he had never been born, but great reason to say he had his being to good purpose. Yet it must be owned, if there were not another life after this, and divine consolations to support us in the prospects of it, so many are the sorrows and troubles of this, we might sometimes be tempted to say, we were made in vain, (Ps. 89: 47.) and to wish we had never been. There are those in hell, who, with good reason, wish they had never been born, as Judas, Matt. 26: 24. But, on this side hell, there can be no reason for so vain and ungrateful a wish: [and few there are but find in life quite as much happiness as misery; but the diseased mind looks only on the dark side.] It was Job's folly and weakness to curse his day; but good men have sometimes failed in the exercise of those graces they have been most eminent for, that we may understand, when they are said to be perfect, it is meant that they were upright, not sinless. Lastly, Let us observe it, to the honor of the spiritual life above the natural, that, though many have cursed the day of their first birth, never any cursed the day of their new birth, nor wished they never had had grace, and the Spirit of grace given them; those are the most excellent gifts, above life and being itself, and which will never be a burden.

II. Yet it was not so bad as Satan promised himself: Job cursed his day, but not his God; was weary of his life, but not of his religion; he will which is adorned by bold figures, according to the genius of the east. For seven days Job's friends had come, and sat by him, without either speaking consolation to him, or mentioning their suspicions: but doubtless their distant and reserved behavior increased his inward anguish. At the same time, we may suppose, Satan assaulted his mind with all possible temptations, to fill him with hard thoughts of God, as if He were severe, unjust, and his enemy; to shake his confidence and hope; and, by filling him with horror and dismay, to urge him to 'curse God to his face.' His permission seems to have extended to this, as well as to the torturing of his body; provided he did not kill him, or deprive him of reason.—In this, Job was an especial type of Christ, whose inward sufferings, both in the garden and on the cross, are generally allowed to have been far the most dreadful, and in a great degree occasioned by the assaults of the devil in that hour of darkness: (Matt. 26:36—39. Luke 22:39—53.) and when Job's trial was come to its extremity, we may conclude, that he was deprived of all comfortable sense of God's favor, and filled with dread of his wrath. Unless we bring these inward trials into the account, we shall not readily comprehend the change which took place in his conduct, from the entire resignation of the preceding chs. to the impatience which appears here, and in the subsequent part of the book. But this consideration solves the difficulty: Job's inward conflict and anguish, added to all his outward sufferings, caused in-dwelling sin to work powerfully, and at length it burst forth in many improper expressions. He had long repressed the thoughts of his heart: but at last 'he opened his mouth;' not, (as that expression generally imports,) to utter wise instructions, deliberately and gravely, but bitter execrations on the day of his birth. For he vainly hoped to ease his mind, by giving vent to the fire which burned within.—The experienced believer, however, knows that a few drops of this bitter cup are more dreadful than the sharpest afflictions, under which he is preserved from inward temptation, and favored with the sweet sense of the love and presence of God. He will not therefore be much surprised, to find that Job proved himself 'a man of like passions' with others, and prone to folly and impatience; but will rejoice that Satan was disappointed, and could not prove him a hypocrite: for though he cursed the day of his birth, he did not curse his God. (1:9—11.) SCOTT.

---

Verses 2—10.

The wildness, absurdity, and impossibility of these wishes, denote the tempest of his soul: but such exclamations, being the language of passion, cannot be measured by the standard of reason. During inward darkness and temptation, Satan so stirs up the corruption of the heart, that the plainest truths and promises are forgotten; former and present mercies are disregarded; future prospects are clouded; and the soul verges to despondency and blasphemy. Yet it is held back by the counteracting efficacy of divine grace, which subsists and operates, though it does not decidedly prevail; and thus the more dreadful effects are prevented, and in time the soul recovers its composure. [The man tempted, and helped, is accountable for the conscious choice he wills in either case. ED.] (Gal. 5:16—18.)—Doubtless, Job was afterwards heartily ashamed of this: now, in the full enjoyment of unchangeable felicity, does he wish he had never been born? ID.

(3.) A man child born!] 'This event is proclaimed three times by the midwife, in the public street among the Hindoos.' ROBERTS. 'Conceived in this v. should be taken in the sense of born.' Dr. A. CLARKE. 'The night which shouted.' Good: this, joined with Roberts's illustration, is very striking, the night being poetically personified as performing the proclamation of the midwife. Cond. Comm.' ED.

not up the doors of my mother's womb, nor [n] hid sorrow from mine eyes.

11 ¶ Why [o] died I not from the womb? why did I not give up the ghost [p] when I came out of the belly?

12 Why did [q] the knees prevent me? or why the breasts that I should suck?

13 For now should I have lain still, and been quiet: I should have slept; [r] then had I been at rest,

14 With [s] kings and counsellors of the earth, which [t] built desolate places for themselves;

15 Or with princes that had gold, who [u] filled their houses with silver:

16 Or as [x] an hidden untimely birth, I had not been; as infants which never saw light.

17 There [y] the wicked cease from troubling; and there * the weary be [z] at rest.

18 There the prisoners rest together; [a] they hear not the voice of the oppressor.

19 [b] The small and great are there; [c] and the servant is free from his master.

n 6:2,3. 10:1. 23:2. Ec. 11:10.
o Ps. 58:3. Jer. 15:10. Hos. 9:14.
p Ps. 22:9,10. 71:6. 139:13—16. Is. 46 3.
q Gen. 30:3. 50:23. Is. 66:12. Ez. 16: 4,5.
r Ec. 6:3—5. 9:10.
s 30:23. 1 K. 2:10. 11:43. Pa. 49:6—10,14. 89:48. Ec. 8:8. Is. 14:10—16. Ez. 27:18—32. t 15:28. Is. 5:8. Ez. 26:20.
u 22:25. 27:16. Num. 22:18. 1 K. 10: 27. Is. 2:7. Zeph. 1:18. Zech. 9:3.
x Ps. 58:8. 1 Cor. 15:8.
y 14:13. Ps. 55:5—8. Matt. 10:28. Luke 12:4. 2 Thes. 1:6,7. 2 Pet. 2:8.
* Heb. wearied in strength.
z Is. 57:1,2. Heb. 4:9,11. Rev. 14:13.
a Ex. 5:6—8,15—19. Judg. 4:3. Is. 14:3,4. b 30:2,3. Ps. 49:2,6—10. Ec. 8:8. 41: 5,7. Luke 16:22,23. Heb. 9:27.
c Ps. 49:14—20.

never let that go. The dispute was not, whether Job had his infirmities; was subject to like passions as we; (that was granted;) but whether he was a hypocrite, and secretly hated God, and, if provoked, would show it: the trial proved he was no such man. Nay, all this may consist with his being a pattern of patience; for though he did thus speak unadvisedly with his lips, yet, both before and after, he expressed great submission and resignation to the holy will of God, and repented of his impatience; he condemned himself for it, and therefore God did not condemn him; nor must we, but watch the more carefully over ourselves, lest we thus sin.

The particular expressions Job used, in cursing his day, are full of poetical fancy, flame, and rapture; and create as much difficulty to the critics as the thing itself does to the divines: we need not be particular on them.

1. He wished earth might forget, heaven frown upon, that day. The Father and Fountain of light appointed the greater light to rule the day, and less lights the night; but let that want the benefit of both. Let the gloominess of the day represent Job's condition, whose sun went down at noon. Let it be a melancholy night, solitary, and not merry with music or dancing; (v. 7.) 'let it be a long night, and not see the eye-lids of the morning,' (v. 9.) 'which bring joy with them.'

2. That all curses might follow it, v. 8. 'Whatever day any curse, let them bestow one curse on my birth-day; particularly those that make it their trade to raise up mourning at funerals, with their ditties of lamentation. Let them that curse the day of others' death, in the same breath curse the day of my birth.' Or, those who are so fierce and daring as to raise up the Leviathan, the word here; who, being about to strike the whale or crocodile, curse it with the bitterest curse they can invent, to weaken, and so master it. Probably some such custom might there be used, to which our divine poet alludes. Let it be as odious as the day wherein men bewail the greatest misfortune, or the time wherein they see the most dreadful apparitions: so Patrick, I suppose, taking the Leviathan here to signify the devil, as others do, who understand it of the curses used by conjurers in raising the devil, or when they have raised a devil that they cannot lay.

But why Job's quarrel with this day and night? Because it shut not up his mother's womb, v. 10. See the folly and madness of a passionate discontent, and how absurdly and extravagantly it talks, when the reins are laid on the neck of it. Is this Job, so much admired for wisdom, that unto him men gave ear, and kept silence at his counsel, and after his words spake not again? ch. 29: 21, 22. Surely his wisdom failed him. How vain to wish he had never been born, when it is impossible to make what has been, not to have been. And why so liberal of his curses on a day and a night, that could not be hurt, or made ever the worse, for his curses; why so very barbarous to his own mother, as to wish what would have caused her a miserable death? And how he despised the goodness of God, in giving him a being, such a being, so far above any other creatures in the world! How foolish it was to wish his eyes had never seen the light, that so they might not have seen sorrow, which yet he might hope to see through, and beyond which he might see joy! Did Job believe and hope in his flesh to see God at the latter day; (ch. 19: 26.) and yet would he wish he never had had a being capable of such a bliss, only because, for the present, he had sorrow in the flesh? God, by his grace, arm us against this foolish and hurtful lust of impatience!

V. 11—19. Job, perhaps reflecting on himself for his folly in wishing he had never been born, thinks to mend it, with another, little better, that he had died as soon as born, which he enlarges on in these vs. When our Savior would set forth a very calamitous state of things, he seems to allow such a saying, Blessed are the barren, the wombs that never bare; (Luke 23: 29.) but blessing the barren womb is one thing, and cursing the fruitful womb is another! It is good to make the best of afflictions, but not good to make the worst of mercies. Our rule is, Bless, and curse not.

Life is often put for all good, and death for all evil; yet Job here very absurdly complains of life and its supports, and covets death and the grave. Surely Satan was deceived in Job, when he applied that maxim to him, All that a man hath will he give for his life; for never any man valued life at a lower rate.

I. He is ungratefully angry it was not taken from him as soon as given, v. 11, 12. See how weak and helpless man is when he comes into the world. Natural affection is put into parents' hearts by the God of nature; hence the blessings of the breast attended those of the womb.

See the evil of impatience, fretfulness, and discontent; they are unreasonable, absurd, impious, ungrateful; a slighting and undervaluing of God's favor. How much soever life is imbittered, we must say, 'It was of the Lord's mercies we died not from the womb.' Hatred of life contradicts the common sense and sentiments of mankind, and our own at another time. Let discontented people declaim ever so much against life, they will be loath to part with it when it comes to the point. When the old man in the fable, tired with his burden, threw it down with discontent, and called for death, and death came, and asked what he would have, he answered, 'Nothing, but help me up with my burden.'

II. He passionately applauds death and the grave, and seems quite in love with them. To desire to die, to be with Christ, free from sin, and clothed upon with our house from heaven, is the effect and evidence of grace; but to desire to die, only to be quiet in the grave, and delivered from the troubles of life, savors of corruption. Job's considerations here may be of good use to reconcile us to death when it comes, but they ought not to be used as a pretence to quarrel with life while it is continued, or to make us uneasy under its burdens. It is wisdom and duty to make the best of that which is, be it living or dying, and so to live to the Lord, and die to the Lord, and to be his in both, Rom. 14: 8.

Job here frets himself with thinking, that, had he but died as soon as born,

1. His condition would have been as good as that of the best: (v. 14.) kings and counsellors of the earth, whose pomp, power, and policy, cannot secure from the grave, nor distinguish theirs from common dust. Some, by desolate places, understand the sepulchres or monuments kings prepared for

(4, 5.) Regard.] 'Unclose is the primary sense of the Heb. Terrify.] Let thunder clouds make it frightful.' Boothr. 'Let the blasts o' noon-tide terrify it.' Good. 'Let pestilential vapors,' &c. Coccejus. Blackness.] 'Lit. "black blasts," or "witherings" of the severest kinds of the pestilential simoom [which creates strange darkness, the rarefied air refusing perhaps to refract light,], which sweeps, at noonday, over the deserts of Arabia, producing, on the bodies it destroys, a most extraordinary blackness of corruption.' GOOD.

(7, 8.) Solitary.] 'The Arabs met to converse at night, and among the easterns it was a season of festivity. It was an ancient custom to mark days as lucky or unlucky, according to their events. Mournful dirges were composed and rehearsed, with loud lamentations, (by persons employed for this,) on such unlucky days. To rouse Leviathan is represented, 12:8—10, as inevitable destruction, and it was natural to lament those who so miserably perished on a disastrous day Mr. SCOTT. The crocodile, in Upper Egypt, often devours women fetching water from the river, and children playing, or swimming near. So Hasselquist.' COND. COMM.

Verses 11—19.

The event to himself, and to the church, through successive ages, fully resolves his questions, and shows for what important purposes he was preserved. But, for the moment, he thought of nothing but relief from anguish; though, in more lucid intervals, he expressed a faith and hope concerning the eternal world. (14:7—12. 19.25—27.) SCOTT.

(12.) Prevent, or anticipate (so prevent formerly meant.) 'The longing, anxious desire of the yearning mother to nurse her unborn darling, has never been so happily expressed elsewhere.' Good. ED.

(14, 15.) There were desolate cities, of the new world, and perhaps of the old, even in the time of Job. If costly tombs are meant, many are still seen scattered in the solitudes of India, Persia, &c. As to the ancient magnificence of such tombs, long before the time of Job, see Wilkinson's 'Thebes, &c.' 'Cyrus's tomb had a gold coffin, and near it a couch, with gold-covered feet; on this were Babylonian carpets, costly Median and Bab. garments; chains, cimeters, gold ear-rings, and precious stones. [Comp. note, Is. 22: 23—25. The pyramids too were doubtless already built.] The treatment of the dead accords with a nation's ideas of the state after death. Zoroastrism taught a resurrection, and universal restoration, and the final triumph of the Good over the Evil principle. The intermediate state of the soul was a prolongation of the present life; so the dead were preserved, as destined to rise in glory; and the monarch's grave was a residence: each had his sepulchral treasury.' HEEREN. ED.

20 [d] Wherefore is [e] light given to him that is in misery, and life unto [f] the bitter in soul?

21 [g] Which * long for death, but it cometh not; and [h] dig for it more than for hid treasures:

22 Which rejoice exceedingly, and are glad when they can find the grave?

23 Why is light given to a man [i] whose way is hid, and whom God hath [k] hedged in?

24 For [l] my sighing cometh before † I eat, and [m] my roarings are poured out like the waters.

25 For ‡ the thing which I greatly feared is come upon me, and [n] that which I was afraid of is come unto me.

26 I was not in safety, neither had I rest, neither was I quiet; [o] yet trouble came.

d 6:9. 7:15,16.
e 16. 33:28,30.
f 7:15,16. 1 Sam. 1:10. 2 K. 4:27. Prov. 31:6.
g Num. 11:15. 1 K. 19:4. Jon. 4:3,8. Rev. 9:6.
* Heb. wait.
h Prov. 2:4. Is. 49:24.
i 13:14. 19:8. Is. 31:8. Lam. 3:7,9. Hos. 2:6.
k 7:19. Ps. 80:5. 102:9.
† Heb. my meat.
l Ps. 22:1,2. 32:3. 38:8. Is. 59:11. Lam. 3:8.
‡ Heb. I feared a fear and it came upon me.
n 1:5. 31:23.
o 7:9. Ps. 143:11.

themselves in their life-time; as Shebna (Isa. 22: 16.) hewed him out a sepulchre; and by the gold and the silver they understand the treasures which, they say, it was usual to deposit in the graves of great men. Such arts have been used to preserve their dignity, but death is, and will be, an irresistible leveller; it mingles sceptres with spades. In the grave, a hidden untimely birth, (v. 16. a child that either never saw light, or but just opened its eyes, peeped into the world, and, not liking it, closed them again, and hastened out,) lies as soft and easy, as high and safe, as kings, and counsellors, and princes that had gold.

2. His condition would have been much better, v. 13. 'Now sleep departeth from mine eyes, and I am restless.' Good Christians can now give a better account of the gain of death; 'Then should I have been present with the Lord, have seen his glory face to face, and no longer through a glass darkly;' but all poor Job dreamed of, was rest and quietness, out of the fear of evil tidings, out of the feeling of sore boils. Had he kept his temper, as in the two chs. foregoing, entirely resigned to God's holy will, his soul, at least, might have dwelt at ease, Ps. 25: 13.

Observe how finely he describes the repose of the grave; which (provided the soul be at rest in God) may aid our triumph over it. 1. Those who are now troubled, will there be out of the reach of trouble, v. 17. Herod vexed the church, but ceased when he became a prey for worms. Had Job been at rest in his grave, he had had no disturbance from Sabeans, Chaldeans, or enemies. 2. Those that now toil, will there see the period of their toils; the weary rest: heaven is more than a rest to the souls of the saints, but the grave is a rest to their bodies; theirs is a weary pilgrimage; they are weary with sin and the world, their services, sufferings, and expectations; but in the grave they rest from all their labors, Rev. 14:13. Isa. 57:2. There, believers sleep in Jesus. 3. Those who are here enslaved, are there at liberty: death is their discharge, v. 18. No more insulted and trampled on, menaced and terrified, by cruel task-masters, they hear not the voice of the oppressor. Here doomed to perpetual servitude, able to call nothing their own, no not their own bodies, there no longer under command or control; a good reason why those that have power should use it moderately, and those in subjection bear it patiently, yet a little while. 4. Those that were at a vast distance from all others, there are on a level, v. 19. The small and great are there the same, all one, alike free among the dead. The tedious pomp and state, which attend the great, are at an end there; all the inconveniences of a poor and low condition are likewise over; death and the grave know no difference.

V. 20—26. When men are set on quarrelling, there is no end of it; the corrupt heart will carry on the humor: Job having cursed the day of his birth, here courts the day of his death.

1. He thinks it hard, in general, that miserable lives should be prolonged, v. 20—22. Why doth He give light? So the original: he means God, yet does not name Him, though the devil had said, 'He will curse Thee to thy face;' but he tacitly reflects on the Divine Providence as unjust and unkind, in continuing life, when its comforts are removed. Life is called light, because pleasant and serviceable for walking and working. It is said to be given; for if not daily renewed by a fresh gift, it would be lost. Such is the vanity of human life, that it sometimes becomes a vexation of spirit; and so alterable is the property of death, that, though dreadful to nature, it may become even desirable to nature itself. He speaks of those here, who have outlived their comforts and usefulness, are burdened with age and infirmities, with pain or sickness, poverty or disgrace. The continuance and period of life must be according to God's will, not according to ours. It seems supposed here, that then the thought of men's being their own executioners was not so much as entertained or suggested, else those who longed for it needed not dig for it, but might soon come at it, as Seneca tells them. If the miseries of this life can prevail, contrary to nature, to make death itself desirable, shall not much more the hopes and prospects of a better life, to which death is our passage, make it so, and set us quite above the fear of it? It may be a sin to long for death, but I am sure it is no sin to long for heaven.

2. He thinks himself, in particular, hardly dealt with, not to be eased of his pain and misery by death, when he could not get ease any other way. But let it be our great and constant care to get ready for another world, and then let us leave it to God to order the circumstances of our removal thither; and this with such an indifferency, that if He should refer it to us, we would refer it to Him again. Grace teaches us, in the midst of life's

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

There is an essential difference between the true believer, and every hypocrite; and the former will not finally apostatize or despair: yet under urgent troubles and temptations, the evil of the heart frequently bursts forth in very culpable words and actions. None but the Savior ever endured the extremity of anguish and temptation, without any abatement of his love, mixture of sin, or indications of impatience.—The pious reader will doubtless recollect seasons when, under afflictions comparatively light, his heart has risen into the same kind of peevishness, ingratitude, rebellion, and despondency, which Job discovered.—The habit of wishing is altogether foolish and sinful. Wishes which respect the past, can only express our impatience: and, if the object of our desires at the present, or for the future, be lawful, we should make it the subject of our prayers; if not, we should silence ourselves and the tempter, by saying, 'It is written, Thou shalt not covet.'—When our passions overpower reason, the soul becomes as a ship in a violent storm, without compass, rudder, or pilot; and, if it be possible, we ought to cast anchor till the storm subsides. Profound silence, interrupted only by ejaculations, should be observed: as we can in such a case do no good, but must get harm, by either speaking or acting; though we shall naturally be very earnest in both.—This present life may be made very tolerable, if we accommodate ourselves to our circumstances, and attend to our duty: and we are under a dispensation of mercy, and may hope for the favor of God and eternal felicity, whatever our former lives have been, if now willing to accept of Christ, as our Savior from wrath and sin. By 'diligence to make our calling and election sure,' we may obtain good evidence that we are 'born of God:' and his children are heirs of everlasting glory.—But what a day, or rather what an eternal night, will that be which awaits impenitent sinners! 'From this destruction, good Lord, deliver us!'—If, in this accepted time and day of salvation, we in good earnest seek and serve God, we may regard the formation of our bodies, the gift of our immortal souls, the care of our infancy and childhood, and all the Lord's protection and long-suffering ever since, as in order to our everlasting happiness. Nay, as far as we trust and obey the Lord Jesus, we here find rest to our souls; though 'in the world we have tribulation.' It is indeed far 'better to depart, and to be with Him:' but we must not undervalue life, though spent in sufferings; seeing they will work our good at last, and some way or other subserve his glory, and the good of our brethren. Let us then learn to keep the eternal world more constantly in view; that we may not be much disconcerted about temporal things.—And should any take up these pages, who are longing for death, and tempted to suicide; let them compare their present sufferings, not with the quiet of the grave, but with the scriptural declarations of the state of the damned; which must be the lot of all, who die in rebellion and despair, by deliberate murder. (Note, Ex. 20:13, conclusion.) Let them remember that this desperation is the suggestion of the 'old liar' and 'murderer from the beginning:' the very object aimed at, in respect of Job. Let them stop their ears to his suggestions, and hearken to the Savior's inviting voice: let them come to Him with their burdens and sorrows; and they shall find rest, and learn to bless God for temporal life, as the mean of eternal salvation. SCOTT.

Verses 20—23.

The tempter seems to have kept the thought of the eternal world from his mind. SCOTT.

Verses 24—26.

His former expectation of trials, and preparation for them, should have comforted his sufferings: but, through the power of Satan and the prevalence of corruption, this seemed an aggravation of his misery. (27:7—10.) I was not, &c. (26) Rendered by some interrogatively; 'Was I not in safety? had I not rest? was I not quiet? yet trouble came.'—This is very pathetic. SCOTT.

CHAP. IV.

Eliphaz reproves Job for impatience, and want of confidence in God, 1—6. He states that divine judgments come not on the righteous, but on the wicked, 7—11. He relates his vision, confirming this doctrine, 12—21.

THEN [a] Eliphaz the Temanite [b] answered and said,

2 If we assay * to commune with thee, [c] wilt thou be grieved? but who can † withhold himself from speaking?

3 Behold, [d] thou hast instructed many, and [e] thou hast strengthened the weak hands.

4 Thy words have [f] upholden him that was falling, and thou hast strengthened the ‡ feeble knees.

5 But now [g] it is come upon thee, and [h] thou faintest; [i] it toucheth thee, and thou art troubled.

6 Is not this [j] thy fear, [k] thy confidence, [l] thy hope, and [m] the uprightness of thy ways?

a 2:11. 15:1. 22:1. 42:9.
b 3:1,2. 6:1. 8:1.
* Heb. a word
c 2 Cor. 2:4—6. 7:8—10.
† Heb. refrain from words. 32:18—20. Jer. 6:11. 20:9. Acts 4:20.
d Gen. 18:19. Prov. 10:21. 15:7. 16: 21. Is. 50:4. Eph. 4:29. Col. 4:6. e Is. 35:3. Deut. 3:28. Ezra 6:22. Ez. 13:22. Luke 22:32,43.
f Ps. 145:14. Prov. 12:18. 16:23,24. 2 Cor. 1:7. 7:6. 1 Thes 5:14.
‡ Heb. bowing knees. Is. 35:3,4. Dan. 5:6. Heb. 12:12.
g 3:5,26.
h Prov. 24:10. 2 Cor. 4:1,16. Heb. 12: 3,5.
i 1:11. 2:5. 19:21.
j 1:1,9,10. 2 K. 20:3.
k 13:15. Prov. 3:6. 14:26.
l 17:15. 1 Pet. 1:13,17.
m 1:8. 16:17. 23:11,12. 27:5,6. 29: 14—17. 31:1, &c.

7 Remember, I pray thee, [n] who ever perished, being innocent? or [o] where were the righteous cut off?

8 Even as I have seen, [p] they that plow iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same.

9 By the blast of God they perish, and by the breath of his nostrils are they consumed.

10 The roaring of the lion, and the voice of the fierce lion, and the teeth of the young lions, are broken.

11 The old lion perisheth for lack of prey, and the stout lion's whelps are scattered abroad.

12 Now a thing was secretly brought to me, and mine ear received a little thereof.

13 In thoughts from the visions of the night, when deep sleep falleth on men, 14 Fear came upon me, and trembling, which made all my bones to shake.

15 Then a spirit passed before my face; the hair of my flesh stood up:

16 It stood still, but I could not discern the form thereof: an image was before mine eyes, there was silence, and I heard a voice, saying,

17 Shall mortal man be more just than God? shall a man be more pure than his Maker?

18 Behold, he put no trust in his servants; and his angels he charged with folly:

19 How much less in them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust, which are crushed before the moth?

20 They are destroyed from morning to evening: they perish [q] forever without any regarding it.

21 Doth not their excellency which is in them go away? they die, even without wisdom.

n 8:20. 22:5. Ps. 37:25. Prov. 10:30. Is. 33:15,16. Matt. 25:34—46.
o Ps. 37:35,36. 73:18—20.
p Ps. 7:14—16. 9:15,16. 10:2. 35:8. 57:6. Prov. 22:8. Hos. 8:7. 10:12,13. Gal. 6:7,8.
q Ps. 49:7—9. Is. 40:23,24.

greatest comforts, to be willing to die, and, in the midst of its greatest crosses, to be willing to live.

Job, to excuse himself, pleads the little satisfaction he had in life, (v. 24.) and no prospect of bettering his condition, v. 23. Our Master was acquainted with grief, and we must expect to be so too. What made his grief now the more grievous, was, he was not conscious of any great negligence or security in his prosperity, (then he was never easy, v. 25, 26.) which might provoke God thus to chastise him. He had not been negligent of his affairs, but kept up such a fear of trouble as was necessary to maintain his guard: he was afraid for his children, when feasting, lest they should offend God; (ch. 1: 5.) afraid for his servants, lest they should offend his neighbours; he took all care of his own health, managed himself and his affairs with all possible precaution; yet all would not do. He had not been secure, nor indulged in ease and softness, trusted in his wealth, or flattered himself with hopes of the perpetuity of his mirth; yet trouble came, to convince and remind him of the vanity of the world, which yet he had not forgotten when at ease. Thus his way was hid, for he knew not wherefore God contended with him. Now this consideration, instead of aggravating his grief, might rather serve to alleviate it: nothing will make trouble easy so much as the testimony of our consciences, that, in some measure, we did our duty in prosperity: and an expectation of trouble will make it sit the lighter when it comes. The less it is a surprise, the less it is a terror.

CHAP. IV. V. 1—6. Job having warmly vented his passion, and so broken the ice, his friends come gravely to give their judgment on his case; which perhaps they had communicated to one another apart, and found they were all agreed, that Job's afflictions certainly proved him to have been a hypocrite; but they did not attack Job with this high charge, till by the expressions of his discontent and impatience, in which they thought he reflected on God Himself, he had confirmed them in the bad opinion they had before conceived of his character. The dispute begins, and soon becomes fierce. The question is, whether Job was an honest man or no?—the same as was in dispute between God and Satan in the first two chs. Satan had yielded it, and durst not pretend his cursing his day was a constructive cursing of his God; but Job's friends will needs have it, that, if honest, he would not have been thus afflicted, therefore urge him to confess himself a hypocrite in his profession of religion: 'No,' says Job, 'that I will never do; I have offended God, but my heart, notwithstanding, has been upright with Him.' Eliphaz, the senior, it is likely, or of the best quality, begins with him in this chapter. In these verses,

I. Eliphaz excuses the trouble his discourse is about to give Job, v. 2. Observe, how he speaks, 1. With modesty of himself and his own attempt. He will not undertake the management of the cause alone, but very humbly joins his friends with him; he will not promise much, but begs leave to try if he can propose any thing that may be pertinent, and suit Job's case. In difficult matters, it becomes us to pretend no further. Many excellent discourses have gone under the modest title of Essays. 2. With what tenderness of Job, and his present condition; 'Wilt thou be grieved? Wilt thou take it ill? lay it to heart as thine affliction, or to our charge as our fault, if we deal plainly and faithfully? We ought to be afraid of grieving any, especially those that are already in grief, lest we add affliction to the afflicted, as David's enemies, Ps. 69: 26. We should show ourselves backward to say what we foresee will be grievous, though ever so necessary. God Himself afflicts, though justly, yet not willingly, Lam. 3: 33. 3. With what assurance of the truth and pertinency of what he was about to say. Surely a pious zeal for God and Job, laid him under this necessity: 'Who can forbear speaking in vindication of God's honor, in love to thy soul?' It is foolish pity not to reprove our friends, even in affliction, for what they say or do amiss, only for fear of offending. Whether men take it well or ill, we must with wisdom and meekness do our duty, and discharge a good conscience.

II. He charges Job, 1. With weakness and faint-heartedness: for this charge there was too much ground, v. 3—5. And here,

(1.) He notices Job's former serviceableness to the comfort of others. He owns Job had instructed many, not only his own children and servants, but many others, his neighbors and friends, as many as fell within the sphere of his activity: though a great man, he did not think it below him. Oh that his example were imitated by our great men! It is our duty to strengthen others, as there is occasion, by saying to the fearful of heart, Be strong, Isa. 35: 3, 4. The expressions seem borrowed thence. They who have abundance of spiritual riches, should abound in spiritual charity. A good word, well and wisely spoken, may do more good than perhaps we think of.

But why mention this here? 1. Perhaps that the intended reproof might be the more passable. Just commendation is a good preface to a just reprehension, will help to remove prejudices, and show the reproof comes not from ill-will. Paul praised the Corinthians before he chid them, 1 Cor. 11: 2. 2. As a reason why Job might justly expect to be comforted; and yet, if conviction was necessary to comfort, they must be excused if they applied to that first: the Comforter shall reprove, John 16: 8. 3. Perhaps, in pity, lamenting, that, through the extremity of his affliction, he could not apply to himself those comforts he had formerly administered to others. It is easier to give good counsel than to take it; to preach meekness and patience than to practice them. 4. Most think he mentions it as an aggravation of his present discontent, as if he had said, why, 'Is not this an evidence of thine hypocrisy, that thou hast prescribed that medicine to others, which thou wilt not now take thyself.' Rom. 2: 21. 'Physician, heal thyself.' They who have rebuked others, must expect to hear of it, if they themselves become obnoxious to rebuke.

(2.) He upbraids his present low-spiritedness, v 5. Here, 1. He makes too light of Job's afflictions; 'It touches thee.' The very word Satan himself had used, ch. 1: 11.—2: 5. Had Eliphaz felt but the one half of Job's afflictions, he would have said, 'It smites me, it wounds me;' but he makes them a mere trifle. 2. He makes too much of Job's feelings, and aggravates them; 'Thou faintest, or art beside thyself; thou ravest, and knowest not what thou sayest.' Men in deep distress must have grains of allowance, and a favorable construction put on what they say: when we make the worst of every word, we do not as we would be done by.

2. As to his general character before this affliction, he charges him with wickedness and false-heartedness; a charge utterly groundless and unjust. How unkindly he banters, and upbraids him with the great profession of religion he had made, as if it were all now proved a sham, v. 6. 'Hadst thou been sincere, God would not thus have afflicted thee, nor wouldest thou have behaved thus under the affliction.' This was the very thing Satan aimed at, to prove Job a hypocrite, and disprove the character God had given of him: when he could not himself do this, then he endeavored, by Job's friends, to do it, and to persuade Job himself to confess himself a hypocrite: thus would he have triumphed. But, by God's grace, Job was enabled to hold fast his integrity, and would not bear false witness against himself. Note, Those that pass rash and uncharitable censures on their brethren, and condemn them for hypocrites, do Satan's work, and serve his interest, more than they are aware. I know not how it comes to pass

NOTES.

CHAP. IV. V. 1. Satan undertook to prove Job a hypocrite by afflicting him; and his friends concluded him one, because he was afflicted, and showed impatience. This we must keep continually in mind, to understand clearly the ensuing debate. (Luke 13:1—5.) SCOTT.

Verses 3—6.

It seems Job had possessed a singular talent of giving seasonable counsel and encouragement, as circumstances required: and he had assiduously improved his talent; thus becoming a blessing to many. (29:7—17. Prov. 10:20, 21. 15:4. 7. 23. 25:11. 12. Is. 35:3, 4.) This Eliphaz allowed: and, along with due commendation, he might very properly have given Job a plain, but gentle reproof, for his present impatience, and for seeming to abandon all hope. But his application of it was too harsh; and more suited to dishearten, and even exasperate, one in Job's situation, than to convince and humble him. And in the question Eliphaz proposes: 'Is not this thy fear, &c.?' he appears to give Job the idea, that he considered his former reputation as unmerited: seeing he had now cast off all reverence of God, and hope in his mercy.—Some indeed think, Eliphaz only meant to expostulate with him on the inconsistency of his conduct; and to exhort him to reduce to practice the counsel, he had given others, &c.: but the language employed, and the subsequent speeches of him and his friends, by no means favor this interpretation. SCOTT.

7 Remember, I pray thee, [n] who ever perished, being innocent? or where were the righteous cut off?

8 Even as I have seen [o] they that plough iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same.

9 By [p] the blast of God they perish, and * by the breath of his nostrils are they consumed.

10 The roaring of the lion, and the voice of the fierce lion, and [q] the t eth of the young lions are broken.

11 The [r] old lion [s] perisheth for lack of prey, and [t] the stout lion's whelps are scattered abroad.

[Practical Observations.]

12 ¶ Now [u] a thing was † secretly brought to me, and mine ear received [x] a little thereof.

13 In [y] thoughts from the visions of the night, when [z] deep sleep falleth on men, 14 [a] Fear ‡ came upon me, and trembling, which made § all my ones to shake.

15 Then [b] a spirit passed before my face: [c] the hair of my flesh stood up:

n 9:22,23. Ps. 37:25. Ec. 7:15. 9:1,2. Acts 28:4. 2 Pet. 2:9.
o Ps. 7:14—16. Prov. 22:8. Jer. 4:18. Hos. 8:7. 10:12,13. 2 Cor. 9:6. Gal. 6:7,8. p Ex. 15:8,10. 2 K. 19:7. Ps. 18:15.
* That is, by his anger. 15:30. Is. 11: 4. 30:33. 2 Thes. 2:8. Rev. 2:16.
q 29:17. Ps. 3:7. 57:4. 58:6. Prov. 30:14.
r 38:39. Gen. 49:9. Num. 23:24. 24: 9. Ps. 7:2. Jer. 4:7. Hos. 11:10. 2 Tim. 4:17.
s Ps. 34:10.
t 1.19. 8:3,4. 27:14,15.
u Ps. 62:11.
† Heb. by stealth.
x 1 Cor. 13:12.
y 33:14—16. Gen. 20:3. 28:12. 31:24. 46:2. Num. 12:6. 22:19,20. Dan. 2:19,28,29. 4:5.
z Gen. 2:21. 15:12. Dan. 8:18. 10:9.
a 7:14. Ps. 119:120. Is. 6:5. Dan. 10:11. Hab. 3:16. Luke 1:12,29. Rev. 1:17.
‡ Heb. met me.
§ Heb. the multitude of. 33:19.
b Ps. 104:4. Matt. 14:26. Luke 24:37—39. Heb. 1:7,14.
c 14. 13:3. 21:3,4. Dan. 5:6.

that this v. is differently read in several editions of our common Eng. Bibles; the original, and all the ancient versions, put thy hope before the uprightness of thy ways. So the Geneva, and most editions of the last translation; but I find one of the first, in 1612, has it, Is not this thy fear, thy confidence, the uprightness of thy ways, and thy hope? Both the Assembly's Annotations, and Mr. Poole's, have that reading; and an edition in 1660 reads it, 'Is not thy fear thy confidence, and the uprightness of thy ways thy hope? Does it not appear now, that all thy religion was only in hope and confidence that thou shouldest grow rich by it? Was it not all mercenary?' The very thing Satan suggested. Is not thy religion thy hope, and thy right ways thy confidence? So Mr. Broughton. Or, 'Was it not? Didst thou not think that would have been thy protection? But thou art deceived.' Or, 'Would it not have been so? If it had been sincere, would it not have kept thee from this despair?' True, if thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength, thy grace, is small; (Prov. 24: 10.) but it does not therefore follow thou hast no grace, no strength at all. A man's character is not to be taken from a single act.

V. 6—12. Eliphaz here advances another argument to prove Job a hypocrite, not only his impatience under his afflictions, but even his afflictions themselves, being so very great and extraordinary, and no prospect of his deliverance. To strengthen this argument, he lays down two principles, plausible enough:

I. That good men were never thus ruined: for proof, he appeals to Job's own observation, v. 7. If we understand it of a final and eternal destruction, his principle is true; but if of any temporal calamity, it is not. The righteous perish; (Isa. 57: 1.) There is one event both to the righteous and to the wicked, (Eccl. 9: 2.) both in life and death; the great and certain difference is after death. Even before Job's time, did not righteous Abel perish being innocent; and was not he cut off in the beginning of his days? Was not righteous Lot burnt out of house and harbor, and forced to retire to a melancholy cave? Was not righteous Jacob, a Syrian, ready to perish? Deut. 26: 5. Similar instances, no doubt, there were, not on record.

II. That wicked men were often thus ruined: for the proof of this, he vouches his own observation; v. 8, 9. 'We have daily instances; therefore, since thou dost thus perish, we have reason to think that, whatever thy profession of religion, thou hast but ploughed iniquity, and sown wickedness.

1. He speaks of sinners in general, politic, busy sinners, they plough iniquity; they that plough, plough in hope; but what is the issue? The harvest will be a heap in the day of grief and desperate sorrow, Isa. 17: 11. Some, by iniquity and wickedness, understand wrong and injury to others; they who plough and sow them, shall reap the same, i. e. be paid in their own coin. They who are troublesome, shall be troubled, 2 Thess. 1: 6. Josh. 7: 25.—&c.

He further describes their destruction; v. 9. The projects they take so much pains in, are defeated, Ps. 129: 3, 4. They themselves are destroyed, the just punishment of their iniquity. They perish, i. e. are destroyed utterly; they are consumed, i. e. destroyed gradually; and this, by the blast and breath of God, i. e. (1.) By his wrath: sinners are called vessels of wrath, and his breath is said to kindle Tophet, Isa. 30: 33. Who knows the power of his anger? Ps. 90: 11. (2.) By his Word; He speaks, and it is done, easily and effectually. The Spirit of God, in the Word, consumes sinners; with that He slays them, Hos. 6: 5. Saying and doing are not two things with God. The man of sin is said to be consumed with the breath of Christ's mouth, 2 Thess. 2: 8. Comp. Isa. 11: 4. Rev. 19: 21. Some think, he refers to the wind which blew the house down on Job's children, as if they were therefore sinners above all men, because they suffered such things, Luke 13: 2

2. He speaks particularly of tyrants and cruel oppressors, under the similitude of lions, v. 10, 11 The Heb. has five several names for lions, and they are all here used to set forth the terrible, tearing power, fierceness, and cruelty, of proud oppressors. Perhaps Eliphaz intended to reflect on Job, as if he, being the greatest of all the men of the east, had got his estate by spoil, and used his power in oppressing his neighbors; but now, his power and estate were gone, and his family scattered: if so, it was pity that a man whom God praised, should be thus abused.

V. 12—21. Eliphaz here relates a vision for Job's conviction. Some think, Eliphaz had it since he came to Job; others, that he had it formerly. God in this way often communicated Himself to men, in those first ages of the world, ch. 33: 15. Probably, God sent Eliphaz this messenger and message, when in an unquiet, discontented frame, to calm him. Note, As we should comfort others with that wherewith we have been comforted, (2 Cor. 1: 4.) so we should endeavor to convince others with that which has been powerful to convince us.

I. God's people had not then any written Word to quote, therefore God sometimes notified to them even common truths, by the extraordinary ways of revelation. We have (thanks be to God) a more sure Word than even visions and voices, 2 Pet. 1: 19.

1. The message was brought secretly; some of the sweetest communion gracious souls have with God, is in secret. God has ways of bringing conviction, counsel, and comfort, to his people, unobserved by the world, by private whispers, as powerfully and effectually as by the public ministry. His secret is with them, Ps. 25: 14. 2. He received a little thereof, v. 12. We know little, in comparison with what is to be known, and with what we shall know in heaven, 1 Cor. 13: 12. See his humility and modesty. He pretends not to have understood it fully, but something of it he perceived. 3. When we are communing with our own hearts, and are still, (Ps. 4: 4.) is a proper time for the Holy Spirit to commune with us. Eliphaz was ready to receive this vision, and probably, like David, was meditating on God in the night-watches. We should hear more from God, if we thought more of Him; yet some are surprised with convictions in the night, ch. 33: 14, 15. 4. It was prefaced with terrors, v. 14. It should seem, before he either heard or saw any thing, he was seized with this trembling; a holy awe and reverence of God and his majesty being on his spirit, he was thereby prepared for a divine visit.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—11. We ought not needlessly to grieve the afflicted; yet, if we wisely love them, we cannot refrain from speaking what we judge conducive to the good of their souls. In attempting this, however, we should aim to unite tenderness with faithfulness. It requires much heavenly wisdom, to instruct, encourage, and reprove those, who are tempted and perplexed, who have fallen into sins or sufferings, and who are ready to faint, or turn aside, or yield to despondency, through disappointments and discouraging trials. It behooves us therefore to watch and pray, that we may not by our conduct defeat the effect of our instructions, and expose ourselves and the truths of God to reproach and contempt.—Our most dangerous mistakes are occasioned by our deducing false inferences from undeniable truth. It is certain that none ever perished being innocent; but equally true that many righteous men are heavily afflicted, and suddenly cut off. It is therefore as absurd to judge of a man's character by his outward circumstances, as to decide on it from one single action, contrary to the general tenor of his life. SCOTT.

Verses 7—11.

Most expositors suppose, Eliphaz intended, in this passage, to bring a direct charge of hypocrisy and iniquity against Job; which he had only insinuated in the preceding vs. Some however think, he did not mean to decide on his character, though his language was harsh, and implied strong suspicions; but to show him, that, if he was not wicked, he had no occasion to despond, as the innocent and righteous were never left to perish; and indeed the counsel he afterwards gives, favors this interpretation. (5:8, 17, 18.)—By 'innocent,' and 'righteous,' Eliphaz meant believers, godly men, in opposition to the profane or hypocritical.—It is indeed often seen 'that they who plough iniquity and sow wickedness,' (i. e. who labor to be rich and great by fraud, oppression, and iniquity,) meet a recompense in this world. But it is not always so; nor are they the only persons who meet with grievous calamities in this life. SCOTT.

16 It stood still, but I could not discern the form thereof: an image was before mine eyes;
* there was silence, and I heard a voice, saying,

17 [d] Shall mortal man be more just than God?
[e] shall a man be more pure than his Maker?

18 Behold, [f] he put no trust in his servants;
† and his angels he charged with folly:

19 How much less in them that [g] dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust, which are [h] crushed before the moth!

20 They are ‡ destroyed [i] from morning to evening: [k] they perish for ever [l] without any regarding it.

21 Doth not their [m] excellency, which is in them, go away? they [n] die, even without wisdom.

* Or, I heard a still voice. 1 K. 19:12.
d 8:3. 9:2. 35:2. 40:8. Gen. 18:25. Ps. 143:2. 145:17. Ec. 7:20. Jer. 12:1. Rom. 2:5. 3:4—7. 9:20. 11: 33.
e 9:30,31. 14:4. 15:14. 25:4. Jer. 17: 9. Mark 7:20—23. Rev. 4:8.
f 15:15,16. 25:5,6. Ps. 103:20,21. 104: 4. Is. 6:2,3.
† Or, nor in his angels in whom he put light. 2 Pet. 2:4. Jude 6.
g 10:9. 13:12. 33:6. Gen. 2:7. 3:19. 18:27. Ec. 12:7. 2 Cor. 5:1.
h 13:28. 14:2. Ps. 39:11. 90:5—7. 103:15,16. 146:4. 1 Pet. 1:24.
‡ Heb. beaten in pieces. 2 Chr. 15:8, marg.
i Is. 38:12,13.
k 14:14. 15:22. Ps. 39:13. 92:7.
l 18:17. 20:7. 2 Chr. 21:20. Ps. 37: 36. Prov. 10:7.
m Ps. 39:5,11. 49:14. Is. 14:16. Luke 16:22,23. Jam. 1:11. n 36:12. Ps. 49:20. Luke 12:20.

Whom God intends to honor, He first humbles, and will have us all to serve Him with holy fear, and to rejoice with trembling. Consider,

II. The messenger; one of the good angels, employed not only as ministers of God's providence, but sometimes of his word. Of this apparition, we are here told, (v. 15, 16.) 1. It was real, and not a dream, not a fancy. If some have been so knavish as to impose false visions on others, and some so foolish as to be themselves imposed on, it does not, therefore, follow that there have been no apparitions of spirits, both good and bad. 2. It was indistinct, and somewhat confused. His conscience was to be awakened and informed, not his curiosity gratified. We are not capable of knowing much of spirits, nor is it fit we should; all in good time; we must shortly remove to their world, and shall then be better acquainted with them. 3. It put him into great consternation. Ever since man sinned, it has been terrible to him to receive an express from Heaven, as conscious he can expect no good tidings thence; apparitions, therefore, even of good spirits, have always made deep impressions of fear, even on good men. Well is it for us, that God sends us his messages, not by spirits, but by men like ourselves, whose terror shall not make us afraid! See Dan. 7: 28.—10: 8, 9.

III. The message itself; before it was delivered, there was profound silence, v. 16. When we are to speak either from God, or to Him, it becomes us to address ourselves to it with a solemn pause. It was in a still small voice, and this was it, (v. 17.) 'Shall mortal man be more just than God, the immortal God? Shall a man be thought to be, or pretend to be, more pure than his Maker? Away with such a thought!' 1. Some think Eliphaz aims hereby to prove Job's great afflictions a certain evidence of his being a wicked man; a man would be thought unjust and very impure, if he should thus punish a servant, unless he had been guilty of some very great crime. 2. I rather think it only a reproof of Job's murmuring; 'Shall a man pretend to be more just and pure than God? More truly to understand, and more strictly to observe, the rules of equity? Shall Enosh, mortal, miserable, man, be so insolent; nay, shall Geber, the strongest and most eminent man—man at his best estate, pretend to compare with God, or stand in competition with Him?" It is most impious and absurd to think so. Those that quarrel and find fault with the directions of the divine law, the dispensations of the divine grace, [the constitution of nature,] or the disposals of the Divine Providence, make themselves more just and pure than God; and they who thus reprove God, let them answer it. Shall the clay contend with the potter? See Ps. 94: 9, 10.

IV. The comment Eliphaz makes on this, for so it seems to be; yet some take all the following vs. to be spoken in vision. It comes all to one.

1. He shows how little the angels themselves are in comparison with God, v. 18. Some give this sense, 'So mutable is even their nature, that God would not trust angels with their own integrity; else they would all, as some did, have left their first estate; but He saw it necessary to give them supernatural grace to confirm them.' If the world were left to their government, every thing would not be done for the best, as now. They are intelligences, but finite. Though not chargeable with iniquity, yet with imprudence. This last clause is variously rendered. I think it would bear this reading, repeating the negation, which is very common. He will put no trust in his saints. Nor will He glory in his angels, or make his boast of them, as if their praises or services added any thing to Him: it is his glory, that He is infinitely happy without them.

2. Thence he infers how much less man is, less to be trusted, or gloried in!

(1.) In his life, man is very mean, v. 19. True, angels are spirits, and the souls of men are spirits; but angels are pure and free, the souls of men housed; the body is a cloud, a clog to the soul, its cage, its prison; a house of clay, mean and mouldering; an earthen vessel, soon broken; not a house of cedar, or of ivory, but of clay—soon in ruins, if not kept in constant repair. Angels are fixed; but the very foundation of man's house of clay, is in the dust. Man was made, so he is maintained out of the earth. We stand but on the dust; some have a higher heap of dust to stand on than others, but still it is the earth that stays us up, and will shortly swallow us up. Angels are immortal, but man is soon crushed, crushed like a moth between one's fingers, as easily, as quickly. A little thing will do it; he is crushed before the face of the moth, so the word is. Any lingering distemper, which consumes like a moth, he can no more resist than an acute distemper, which comes roaring upon him like a lion. See Hos. 5: 12, 14. Is such a creature to be trusted in, or can any service be expected from him, by that God who puts no trust in angels themselves?

(2.) In his death, he appears yet more despicable, and unfit to be trusted, v. 20, 21. dying daily, continually wasting; from morning to evening, death is still working in us, like a mole digging our grave at each remove, and we so continually lie exposed, that we are killed all the day long: life lasts perhaps but from morning to evening. In death, all men's excellency passes away; beauty, strength, learning, their wisdom cannot save them; they die without

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 12—21. The knowledge of divine truth is of such vast importance, that no terror could counterbalance the advantage of it; and they who lay aside their Bibles, or forsake the preaching of the Gospel, because these make them tremble at the prospect of their guilt and danger, seem to think it better to feel, than to fear, the wrath of God.—Retirement is favorable to our intercourse with Heaven: and though we must now judge of every thing by the Scriptures; yet if a dream suggest a profitable hint, we should receive it with gratitude. Assuredly, were our hearts more holy, both our waking and sleeping thoughts would be more pure and heavenly.—Revelation from God is not intended to satisfy curiosity, but to excite our attention to those truths and duties, which before we knew not, or neglected. Among other important lessons, we are peculiarly concerned to understand the scriptural declarations of the infinite majesty, wisdom, justice, and goodness of God; of the comparative ignorance, meanness, and weakness of the most exalted creatures; and of the guilt, pollution, folly, and frailty of fallen man; the shortness of his continuance here, and the future consequences of his conduct in this world. But for want of this knowledge, how daringly do men impeach the wisdom, justice, and goodness of God! How do they object, murmur, justify themselves, quarrel with Providence, and reject, or explain away, the truths and precepts of revelation; as if they were more wise, righteous, and holy than their Maker! Yet it would be presumption in an arch-angel, to deem himself competent to decide on the propriety of God's unfathomable counsels, or to comprehend his vast designs; much more to find fault with his dispensations, and to dictate what it is right for Him to do. How awful then is the pride and presumption of man! How great the patience of God!—But let us leave the infidel and the proud reasoner to dispute against their Maker, and the men of the world to heap up their treasures; and let us consider, what we are, where we are, and whither we are going; and let us act accordingly. SCOTT.

Verses 17—21.

These vs. seem to contain the precise words of the spirit, who appeared to Eliphaz.—Some render it, 'just before God:' but that idea is differently expressed in the original. (9:2. 25:4. Heb.—32:2—5.)—And, as this supposition would be blasphemy, it must be allowed, even when we cannot perceive it, that every one deserves all that he does or shall suffer, on earth or in hell. It is therefore evidently very wrong to complain under afflictions, as if we were unjustly dealt with; or to justify our whole conduct before God, who has condemned us as sinners: and on this ground Eliphaz might fairly have reproved Job's impatience; and exhorted him to submit to the justice of God, and to hope in his mercy, under his sufferings.—The vision was full of instruction; but the use Eliphaz seemed disposed to make of it was contrary to its leading design. Instead of condemning Job because of his sufferings, he should have inferred, that he and his friends were incompetent to decide on the case, or to understand the deep designs of God in this mysterious dispensation. SCOTT.

He put no trust, &c. (18) 'If not in his servants He will confide, and not even to his angels He will ascribe praise: how much less, &c.' Ev. Mag. Dec. 1809, p. 498. As the word rendered folly, differently pointed, is generally translated praise, perhaps this might be supported. ID.

(19.) Of clay.] 'In the E. many houses are built of mud dried in the sun.' Parkh. Note, 24:16. ED.

(21.) Their excellency, &c. 'Their fluttering round is over with them.' GOOD.

CHAP. V.

Eliphaz proceeds to show the close connection between wickedness and misery, and that man is born to trouble, 1—7. He recommends seeking to God in affliction, by declaring his power and wonderful works, 8—16. He speaks of the benefit of correction; and the privileges of those who duly improve it, 17—27.

CALL now, if there be any that will answer thee; [a] and to which of [b] the saints wilt thou * turn?

2 For [c] wrath killeth [d] the foolish man, [e] and † envy slayeth the [f] silly one.

3 I have seen the foolish [g] taking root: but suddenly I [h] cursed his habitation.

4 His [i] children are far from safety, and [k] they are crushed in the gate, [l] neither is there any to deliver them.

5 Whose [m] harvest the hungry eateth up, and taketh it even out of [n] the thorns, and [o] the robber [p] swalloweth up their substance.

6 Although ‡ afflic-

a 15:8—10,15. Is. 41:1,21—23. Heb. 12:1. b 4:18. 15:15. Deut. 33:2,3. Ps. 16:3. 103:16. Eph. 1:1.
* Or, look.
c 18:4. Jon. 4:9.
d Ps. 14:1. 75:4. 92:6. 94:8. 107:17. Prov. 1:22,23. 8:5. Ec. 7:9.
e Gen. 30:1. 1 Sam. 18:8,9.
† Or, indignation. Rom. 2:8.
f Hos. 7:11. 2 Tim. 3:6.
g 27:8. Ps. 37:35,36. 73:3—9,18—20. 92:7. Jer. 12:1—3.
h Deut. 27:15,&c. Ps. 69:25. Acts 1: 20. i 4:10,11. 8:4. 18:16—19. 27:14. Ex. 20:5. Ps. 103:9—15. 119:155. k 1:19. Luke 13:4,5.
l 19:7. Ps. 7:2. 50:22.
m Deut. 28:33,51. Judg. 6:3—6. Is. 62:8.
n Judg. 6:11. 2 Chr. 33:11.
o 1:15,17. 12:6. 18:9. Hos. 8:7. p 2:3. marg. 20:15. Jer. 51:34,44. Lam. 2:5,16.
‡ Or, iniquity.

it, or for want of it. It is so common, no body heeds, or notices it. The deaths of others are much the subject of common talk, but little the subject of serious thought.

Some think the eternal damnation of sinners is here spoken of, as well as their temporal death. They are destroyed, or broken to pieces, by death, from morning to evening; and if they repent not, they perish for ever, so some read it, v. 20. They die the second death, for want of wisdom to lay hold on eternal life. Shall such a mean, weak, foolish, sinful, dying, creature as this, pretend to be more just than God, and more pure than his Maker? No, instead of quarrelling with his afflictions, let him wonder that he is out of hell.

CHAP. V. V. 1—5. Eliphaz, in the foregoing ch. for making good his charge against Job, had vouched a word from Heaven, sent him in a vision. In this, he appeals to those that bear record on earth, to the saints, the faithful witnesses of God's truths, in all ages; and he concludes in somewhat a better humor than he began.

So well assured is Eliphaz of the goodness of his own cause, that he moves Job himself to choose the arbitrators, v. 1. i. e. If there be any that suffer as thou sufferest, any real saint reduced to such extremity as thou art. 'Any that say as thou sayest: curses his day as thou dost?' Or, will any of the saints justify thee in these heats or passions, or say these are the spots of God's children? Observe, 1. Good people are called saints, even in the O. T. therefore I know not why we should, in common speaking, appropriate the title to those only of the N. T. Aaron is expressly called the saint of the Lord. 2. All saints will choose saints for their friends, and converse with them; for their judges, and consult with them. See Ps. 119: 79. The saints shall judge the world, 1 Cor. 6: 1, 2. Every one chooses some sort of people or other to whom he studies to recommend himself, and whose sentiments are to him the test of honor and dishonor. 3. Some truths are so plain, and so universally known and believed, that one may venture to appeal to any of the saints concerning them. However there are some things, about which they unhappily differ, there are many more, and more considerable, in which they are agreed; as the evil of sin, the vanity of the world, the worth of the soul, the necessity of a holy life, and the like. Though they do not all live up, as they should, to their belief of these truths, yet they are all ready to bear their testimony to them. Eliphaz maintains, and doubts not that the saints concur with him,

I. That the sin of sinners directly tends to their own ruin, v. 2. 'So it is with thee.' Or, it may mean: 'If men are ruined and undone, it is always of their own folly.' Many understand it of God's wrath.

II. Their prosperity is short, their destruction certain, v. 3—5. He seems here to parallel Job's case with the common case of the wicked. He foresaw their ruin with an eye of faith. They who believe God's Word, can see a curse in the house of the wicked, (Prov. 3: 33.) though ever so finely and firmly built, and ever so full of all good things, Zech. 5: 4. In these particulars, (v. 4.) he very invidiously reflects on Job's calamities. This is commonly understood of the destruction of the families of wicked men, by the execution of justice on them to oblige them to restore what they have ill-gotten. The hungry robbers, the Sabeans and Chaldeans, ran away with, and swallowed Job's estate; and this, says he, I have often observed in others.

V. 6—16. Eliphaz, having touched Job in a very tender part, in mentioning both the loss of his estate and children, as the just punishment of his sin, not to drive him to despair, begins to encourage him, and accosts him gently, (Gal. 6: 20.) as if to atone for his hard words.

1. He reminds him, that no affliction comes by chance, nor second causes, v. 6. out of the ground as grass, or, of course, at certain seasons, as natural productions, by a chain of second causes. Some read it, Sin comes not forth of the dust, nor iniquity out of the ground. If men be bad, they must not lay the blame on the soil, the climate, or the stars, but on themselves. We must not attribute our afflictions to fortune, for they are from God, nor our sins to fate, for they are from ourselves; so that, whatever trouble we are in, we must own God sends it on us, and we procure it to ourselves; the former is a reason why we should be very patient, the latter why we should be very penitent, when afflicted.

2. He reminds him, that trouble and affliction we have all reason to expect. Man is born to trouble; (v. 7.) not as man, (had he kept his innocency, he had been born to pleasure,) but as sinful man, as born of a woman, (ch. 14: 1.) who was in the transgression; in sin, and therefore to trouble. In our fallen state, it is become natural to sin, and the natural consequence of that, is affliction, Rom. 5: 12. Such is the frailty of our bodies, the vanity of all our enjoyments, that our troubles also thence arise as naturally as the sparks fly upward; so many are they, so thick and so fast does one follow another. Man is born to labor, so the marg. sentenced to eat his bread in the sweat of his face, which should inure him to hardness, and make him bear his afflictions the better.

NOTES.

CHAP. V. V. 1. Call now, &c.] Eliphaz here challenges Job to refute his arguments, or the doctrine of his vision, by the example or opinion of any of the saints and servants of God.—'Nay, if an angel should appear to thee, (says Eliphaz,) as one did to me, thou wouldst have no other information but this.' Patrick. SCOTT.

Verse 2.

The wrath and jealousy, or indignation of God, bring destruction on foolish and wicked men, and not on the righteous. (Prov. 27: 4. Jam. 3: 13—16.) Or perhaps Eliphaz, perceiving Job to be greatly agitated by his discourse, intimated that his wrath, envy, and fretfulness, would only increase his torment and shorten his days; as they often produced these effects on foolish and wicked men. ID.

Envy.] (Qeneah), Indignation. (marg.) This word is rendered jealousy; Num. 5:14, &c. 25:11. Prov. 6:34. and in most other places:—envy; Prov. 14:30. 27:4. Ec. 4 4. marg. &c. and zeal; Num. 25:11. marg. 2 Kings 19:31. Is. 59:17,&c.—The LXX usually render it by zelos, tr. in the N. T. by various words; and among the rest by indignation; Acts 5:17. m. Heb. 10:27. and jealousy; 2 Cor. 11:2. ID.

Verses 3—5.

In these vs. an allusion was evidently made to Job's former prosperity. But the most notorious wickedness does not prove, that temporal calamities will befall the perpetrator: and the application certainly was unfair and severe. (12:6—10. 24:2—20.) ID.

(4.) The gate.] 'Where was held the court of judicature, (Deut. 25:7. Ruth 4:1,9. 2 Sam. 15:2, &c.) Taylor. In the place of judgment, justice took hold of them. Wilson. This insinuates that his children had been culprits. Wil.' Cond. Comm. When we consider the reckless disregard of life in the populous kingdoms of oriental despots, the tumultuous crowds that attend these, like swarms of insignificant insects, either when returning to their cities in triumph, or on ordinary occasions; may not this be understood as if he had said, 'His children become of the vilest of the people, exposed to every ill, and of such little account that they are crushed to death in the crowded gate, [2 K. 7:11.] and no one is interested for them. They become friendless outcasts, reckless paupers!' ED.

(5.) The hungry.] 'The wild starveling.' Good. 'A manifest allusion to the [lean] half-starved Arabs, always ready for plunder.' Parkhurst. COND. COMM. Even the thorns.] 'Grains, weeds, thistles and all, in their rapacity.' Dr. A. Clarke. Thus it depicts equally the slothfulness of the owner, and the hurry of the Bedouin. Such instances of plucking up roots and grain together, and separating them at leisure, when out of the reach of pursuit, it is believed, still occur. Others, as Henry, Scott, &c. think it refers to robbery, in spite of all care to fence in their crops. Robber.] 'Tsammim, Rather, the thirsty, as is plain from their gulping down, or swallowing up; opposed to the hungry, or half-starved, in the preceding clause. These shall drink down their wine and oil, here termed cheylam [substance], their strength or power, for obvious reasons. Of the Ishmaelites here alluded to, who have thus lived for thousands of years, Volney gives this striking account. "These men are smaller, (about 5 ft. or 5 ft. 2 in. high,) leaner, and blacker than any of the Bedoweens yet discovered. Their wasted legs had only tendons without calves. Their belly was shrunk to their back. They are in general small, lean, and swarthy; and more so in the bosom of the desert, than on the borders of the more cultivated country. They seldom have more than 6 oz. of food for the whole day; 6 or 7 dates, soaked in melted butter, and a little milk or curd, serve a man for 24 hours: and he seems happy when he can add a small portion of coarse flour or a little rice. Their camels, also, their chief support, are remarkably meagre, living on the scantiest fare. Nature has given this animal a small head without ears, at the end of a long neck without flesh. She has taken from its legs and thighs every muscle not immediately requisite for motion; and in short has bestowed on its withered body only the vessels necessary to connect its frame together. She has furnished it with a strong jaw to grind the hardest aliments; and, lest it should consume too much, has straitened its stomach, and obliged it to chew the cud." Such is the description of the Bedouin and his camel by M. Volney, who, while he denies the true God, finds out a deity which he calls Nature, whose works evince the highest providence, wisdom, and design!' DR. A. CLARKE.

Verses 6, 7.

These vs. may be rendered, 'For affliction cometh not forth of the tion cometh not forth of the dust, neither [q] doth trouble [r] spring out of the ground;

7 Yet [s] man is born unto * trouble, as † the sparks fly upward.

8 I would [t] seek unto God, and [u] unto God would I commit my cause:

9 Which [x] doeth great things and ‡ unsearchable; [y] marvellous things § without number:

10 Who [z] giveth rain upon the earth, and sendeth waters upon the ‖ fields:

11 To [a] set up on high those that be low; that [b] those which mourn may be [c] exalted to safety.

12 He [d] disappointeth the devices of the crafty, so that [e] their hands cannot perform ¶ their enterprise.

13 He [f] taketh the wise in their own craftiness; and the counsel [g] of the froward is carried headlong.

14 They  meet [h] with darkness in the daytime, and grope in the noon-day as in the night.

15 But [i] he saveth the poor from the sword, from their mouth, and from the hand of the mighty.

16 So [k] the poor hath hope, and [l] iniquity stoppeth her mouth.

17 Behold, [m] happy is the man whom God correcteth: therefore despise not thou the chastening of the Almighty:

3. He directs him how to behave himself; (v. 8.) I would seek unto God; surely I would: so the original. He gives a tacit reproof to Job for not seeking to God, but quarrelling with Him. It is easy to say what we would do, but perhaps it will be found not so easy to do as we say. We should give to others no counsel that we would not take ourselves, if in their case. We must by prayer fetch in mercy and grace from God; seek to Him as a Father and Friend, though He contend with us, as one who alone is able to support and succor. They that would seek so as to speed, must refer themselves to God.

4. He encourages him thus to seek God; as a God of almighty power and sovereign dominion. By this consideration, Eliphaz intends, also, to convince Job of his fault and folly in quarrelling with God. We must not pretend to pass a judgment on his works, for they are above our inquiries; nor strive with our Maker, for He is able to crush us in a moment.

He gives some instances of God's dominion and power: speaks of his giving rain, which, because a common, we are apt to look upon as a little thing; but not if we duly consider both how it is produced, and what is produced by it. He frustrates the proud and politic, v. 12—14. A supreme Power manages and overrules men who think themselves free and absolute, and fulfils its own purposes in despite of their projects. How were the plots of Ahithophel, Sanballat, and Haman, baffled! The confederates of Syria and Ephraim against Judah, of Gebal, and Ammon, and Amalek, against God's Israel, the kings of the earth, and the princes, against the Lord and against his anointed, broken! What enemies, too, have designed for the Church's ruin, has often turned to their own, v. 13. Ps. 7: 15, 16. 9: 15, 16. This is quoted (1 Cor. 3: 16.) to show how the learned men of the heathen were befooled by their own vain philosophy. God exalts the humble, v. 11. (Ps. 12: 5. Is. 33: 16. Ezek. 9. 4.) He delivers the oppressed, v. 15. Tongue, hand, sword, and all of the crafty are at work to ruin the poor; but God takes under his especial protection those who, being poor, and unable to help themselves, being his poor, and devoted to his praise, have committed themselves to Him: for He can tie the tongue, and wither the hand, that are against them.

The effect of this is, (v. 16.) 1. That weak and timorous saints are comforted: for it is God's glory to send help to the helpless, and hope to the hopeless. 2. Daring, threatening sinners are confounded; iniquity stops her mouth, surprised at the strangeness of the deliverance, ashamed of its enmity against the evident favorites of Heaven, mortified at the disappointment, and compelled to acknowledge the justice of God's proceedings, having nothing to object. Those that domineered over God's poor, frightened, menaced, and falsely accused them, will not have a word to say against them when God appears for them. See Ps. 76: 8, 9. Is. 26: 11. Mic. 7: 16.

V. 17—27. Here, Eliphaz, in concluding, gives Job (what he himself knew not how to take) a comfortable prospect of the issue of his afflictions, would he but recover his temper, and accommodate himself to them. Observe,

I. His seasonable caution and exhortation, (v. 17.) Call it a chastening from the father's love, for the child's good: from the Almighty, (to contend with or resist whom, is madness, to submit to whom, is duty,) from the All-sufficient (Shaddai, so the Heb.) to those who trust in Him. Despise not; a copious word in the Heb. 1. 'Be not averse. Let grace conquer nature's antipathy to suffering, and reconcile thyself to God's will in it.' We need, and deserve, therefore ought not to think it strange, or hard, if we feel, the rod. 2. 'Think not ill of it, put it not from thee, (as hurtful, or, at least, not useful,) because not now joyous but grievous.' Never must we scorn to stoop to God, but reckon that He really magnifies man, when He thus visits and tries him, ch. 8: 17, 18. 3. 'Disregard it not, as a chance, or from second causes, but greatly notice it as God's voice, and a messenger from Heaven.' More is implied than is expressed. 'Revcrence his chastening; have an humble, awful regard to his correcting hand, Am. 3: 8. Submit to the chastening, and study to answer the call, the end of it, then thou reverencest it.' When God, by an affliction, draws upon us for some of the effects He has entrusted to us, we must honor his bill by accepting it, endorsing it, resigning Him his own when He calls for it.

II. His encouragement; to accommodate himself to, and receive evil from God, and not despise it, as a gift not worth accepting. Of affliction thus borne, q 34:29. Deut. 32:27. 1 Sam. 6:9. Ps. 90:7,8. Is. 45:7. Lam. 3:38,39. Am. 3:6.

r Hos. 10:4. Heb. 12:15. s 14:1. Gen. 3:17—19. Ps. 90:8,9. 1 Cor. 10:13.
* Or, labor. Ec. 1:3. 2:22. 5:15—17.
† Heb. the sons of the burning coal lift up to fly.
t 8:5. 22:21,27. Gen. 32:7—12. 2 Chr. 33:12,13. Ps. 50:15. 77:1,2. 116:3, 4. Jon. 2:1—7.
u Ps. 37:5. 2 Tim. 1:12. 1 Pet. 2:23. 4:19.
x 9:10. 11:7—9. 37:5. Ps. 72:18. 86: 10. 145:3. Rom. 11:33.
‡ Heb. and there is no search. Is. 40: 28. Eph. 3:8.
§ Heb. till there be no number. Ps. 40:5. 139:18.
y 26:5—14.
z 28:26. Ps. 65:9—11. 147:8. Jer. 5: 24. 10:13. 14:22. 51:16. Am. 4:7. Acts 14:17.
‖ Heb. out places. 33:26—28.
a 1 Sam. 2:7,8. Ps. 91:14. 107:41. 113: 7,8. Ez. 17:24. Luke 1:52,53.
b Luke 6:21. Jam. 1:9. 4:6—10. 1 Pet. 5:10. c Deut. 33:27—29. 1 Pet. 1:3—5.
d 12:16,17. Neh. 4:15. Ps. 33:10,11. Prov. 21:30. Is. 8:10. 19:3,11—14.
e Ps. 21:11. 76:5. Is. 37:36. Acts 12: 11. 23:12,&c.
¶ Or, any thing.
f 2 Sam. 15:31,34. 17:23. Esth. 6:4—11. 7:10. 9:25. Ps. 7:15,16. 9:15, 16. 35:7,8. 141:10. Luke 1:51. 1 Cor. 1:19,20,27. 3:19,20.
g Ps. 18:26. Prov. 3:34. 8:13.
 Or, run into.
h 12:25. Deut. 28:29. Prov. 4:19. Is. 59:10. Am. 8:9.
i Ps. 10:14,17,18. 35:10. 72:4,12,13. 107:41. 109:31. 140:12.
k 1 Sam. 2:8. Ps. 9:18. Is. 14:32. Zech. 9:12. Luke 4:18.
l Ex. 11:7. Ps. 63:11. 107:42. Rom. 3:19.
m Ps. 94:12. Prov. 3:11,12. Jer. 31:18 —20. Heb. 12:5—11. Jam. 1:12. 5: 11. Rev. 3:19.

---

dust; . . . Although man be born to trouble.'—Man is born to labor and sorrow, as certainly, and from as natural a cause, as the sparks of fire mount upward; [by the 'laws of gravity;'] yet the measure and duration of them result neither from chance, nor necessity, nor second causes; but from the wise and righteous appointment of God. This is a certain truth: but it does not follow that heavy afflictions are a proof of great wickedness: for the future world is the state of retributions; and afflictions in this world in general are merciful corrections, and not the effects of vindictive wrath. (17. 2 Pet. 2:4—9.) SCOTT.

This dispute is still rife. Job's friends seem, in general, to contend that all evil, or suffering, is (like the pain of a burn, for not avoiding contact with fire, &c.) a natural and necessary consequence of disobedience to natural or revealed laws; and, as such, is only the punishment of sin, or disobedience to them. Job seems to think that, (if not objectless, or their purpose undiscernible,) afflictions are all but a discipline directly inflicted without man's agency, by God, to bring into exercise the higher sentiments of man's nature. The truth seems to be, that all afflictions may be classed under one of these two divisions: and we are cautioned, by the result of the dispute, not to judge the afflicted; for that belongs to God. Let us rather see to it that all afflictions better us. ED.

(7.) Sons of the burning coal lift up to fly, marg.] How full of life, truth, and picturesque beauty is this phrase! The sparks leap straight up from the live coal, like birds or insects from their nest, and like them, having gained the air, put forth their wings, as it were, and mount upward in devious flights. But most, as the Syr. Arab. Gr. vers. Good, Mich. Rosenm. &c. understand 'sons of the eagle.' ID.

Verses 8—11.

The manner, in which the water is conveyed, originally from the briny ocean, and distilled in small drops fit for use all over the earth, and the effects thus produced, are worthy of our highest admiration and most ardent gratitude. (36:22—33. 37:1—13. Gen. 1:9. Ps. 65: 9—13.) SCOTT. From how much delight do those shut themselves out, who choose to remain ignorant of the wonders of God in nature! ED.

(10.) Fields.] 'The Heb. generally signifies streets, and may here mean regular plantations laid out in ridges or plots. [See the pictures of eastern tillage.] Thus the verse would refer both to cultivated and uncultivated grounds.' Dr. A. CLARKE. Good tr. 'valleys,' perhaps the 'wadys,' or beds of summer torrents, which form in that region quite regular furrowings, in the bottoms of which they run. The effect of showers in the E. is, suddenly to restore vegetation, and with it plenty, (11.) as the poor feed chiefly on succulent vegetables. ID.

Verses 12—16.

(M. R.—Notes, Esth. 5:13,14. 6: 7: 1 Cor. 3:18—23.) As such interpositions accorded to the ordinary method of Providence, Job might with confidence expect deliverance, if he ceased his rebellious murmurs, and humbled himself before God. SCOTT.

(13.) 'Taking by a toil or snaring net.' Good. Like a sly, prowling beast, entrapped as he steals upon his prey. Carried headlong.] 'Dashed to pieces, as a criminal is thrown down a precipice.' GILL. Note, 2 Chr. 25:12. Both underhand and highhanded wickedness are punished, secretly or openly, quietly or terribly. ED.

Verse 17.

To take vengeance on a criminal, for a warning to others, and to correct an offender for his own good, are very distinct things, which Eliphaz had not before expressly distinguished. Job's extraordinary calamities had led Eliphaz to speak, as if he had been visited in judg-

18 For [n] he maketh sore, and bindeth up; he woundeth, and his hands make whole.

19 He shall [o] deliver thee in six troubles: yea, in seven there shall [p] no evil touch thee.

20 In [q] famine he shall [r] redeem thee from death: and [s] in war from the * power of the sword.

21 Thou shalt [t] be hid † from the scourge of the tongue: [u] neither shalt thou be afraid of destruction when it cometh.

22 At destruction and famine thou shalt [x] laugh: neither shalt thou be [y] afraid of the beasts of the earth.

23 For [z] thou shalt be in league with the stones of the field; and [a] the beasts of the field shall be at peace with thee.

24 And [b] thou shalt know that ‡ thy tabernacle shall be in peace; and [c] thou shalt visit thy habitation, and shalt not § sin.

25 Thou shalt know also that [d] thy seed shall be ‖ great, and thine offspring [e] as the grass of the earth.

26 Thou shalt come to thy grave [f] in a full age, like as a shock of corn ¶ cometh in in his season.

27 Lo this, [g] we have searched it, so it is; hear it, and know thou it  for thy good.

CHAP. VI.

Job shows that his sufferings were very great, and his complaint natural, 1—7. He prays for death, as the only comfort which he could hope for, 8—13. He reproves his friends, as unkind and unfaithful, 14—30.

BUT Job [a] answered and said,

2 Oh, that my grief

n Deut. 32:39. 1 Sam. 2:6,7. Ps. 147:3. Is. 30:26. Hos. 6:1.
o Ps. 34:19. 91:3—7. Prov. 24:16. 2 Cor. 1:8—10. 2 Pet. 2:9. p Ps. 91:7—10.
q Gen. 45:7—11. 1 K. 17:6,9,14,15. Ps. 33:19. 34:9,10. 37:19. Prov. 10:3. Is. 33:16. Hab. 3:17,18.
r Ps. 49:7,15. 103:4. Hos. 13:14. s Ps. 27:3. 91:5. 144:10. Matt. 24:6.
* Heb. hands.
t Ps. 31:20. 53:1. 57:4. Prov. 12:18. Is. 54:17. Jer. 18:18. Jam. 3:5—8.
† Or, when the tongue scourgeth.
u Ps. 91:5—7.
x 2 K. 19:21.
y Is. 35:9. Ez. 34:25.
z Ps. 91:12,13. Hos. 2:18. Rom. 8: 38,39. a Lev. 26:6. Ez. 14:15,16. Dan. 6:22.
b 18:6,15,21. 21:7—9. 1 Sam. 30:3. Is. 4:5,6.
‡ Or, peace is thy tabernacle. Ps. 25: 13. marg.
c Deut. 28:6. Ps. 91:10. 121:7,8.
§ Or, err. Ps. 107:4,40.
d 42:13—16. Gen. 15:5. Lev. 26:9. Deut. 28:4. Is. 112:2. 127:3—5. 128: 3—6.
‖ Or, much.
e Ps. 72:16.
f 42:16,17. Gen. 15:15. 25:8. Ps. 91: 16. Prov. 9:11. 10:27.
¶ Heb. ascendeth.
g 8:8—10. 13:2. 15:9,10,17. 32:11,12.
 Heb. for thyself. 22:2. Deut. 10:13.
a 4:1.

1. Its nature would be altered: though looking like misery, it would really be bliss. Happy he whom God correcteth, if he duly improve it. A good man is happy though he be afflicted; for whatever he has lost, he has not lost his enjoyment of God, nor title to heaven; nay, he is happy, because afflicted; correction is an evidence of his sonship, a mean of his sanctification; it mortifies his corruptions, weans his heart from the world, draws him nearer to God, brings him to his Bible, to his knees, works him for, and so is working for him, a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. [Note, 7:1.] Happy therefore is the man whom God correcteth, Jam. 1:12.

2. Its issue and consequence would be very good, v. 18. The skilful, tender surgeon binds up the wounds he had occasion to make. When God makes sore by the rebukes of his providence, He binds up by the consolations of his Spirit. He never (as Mr. Caryl observes) makes a wound too great, too deep, for his own cure. The wicked go unhealed, (Hos. 5:14.) not so the humble and penitent, Hos. 6:1.

This is general, but in the following vs. he directly applies to Job many precious promises, would he but humble himself. Though they had no Bibles, that we know of, yet Eliphaz had sufficient warrant to give Job these assurances, from the general discoveries God had made of his good will to his people. And though, in every thing Job's friends said, they were not directed by the Spirit of God, (for they spake both of God and Job, some things that were not right,) yet the general doctrines they laid down spake the pious sense of the patriarchal age; and as Paul quoted v. 13. for canonical scripture, and as the command, v. 17. is, no doubt, binding on us, so these promises here may and must be received and applied as divine. Let us therefore give diligence to make sure our interest in these promises, and then view their particulars, and take the comfort of them.

(1.) Deliverances shall be repeated as troubles recur, for the sixth, yea for the seventh time, [i. e. an indefinite number of times,] 2 Tim. 3:11. Ps 34:19. Former deliverances are earnests of, not, as among men, excuses from, further deliverances; Prov. 19:19. (2.) Being kept from sin, God's children are kept from the evil of every trouble; (Ps. 91:10. 1 John, 5:18.) v. 20, 21, 22. (3.) Our covenant with God, too, is a covenant with all the creatures, that they shall do us no hurt, but be ready to serve us and do us good, v. 23. Comp Hos. 2:18. (4.) Peace and family piety shall make their houses, whether tent, cottage, or palace, (i. e. every kind of habitation,) comfortable, fixed, quiet, and discreetly governed. (5.) Grace is promised, to manage the concerns of peaceful, numerous, and prosperous families, after a godly sort, so as not to sin. They shall call their servants to account without passion, pride, covetousness, worldliness, or the like; shall look into their affairs without discontent at what is, or distrust of what shall be. Family piety crowns family peace and prosperity. The greatest blessing, both in our employments, and in our enjoyments, is, to be kept from sin in them. Their death shall be seasonable. It is well our times are in God's hand, for He will take care that those who are his die in the best time: however their death may seem untimely.

In the last v. he recommends those promises to Job, as faithful sayings, of the truth of which he might be confident. Know it for thyself, so the word is; with application to thyself, and thy own case; what we thus hear and know is for our good, as we are nourished by the meat which we digest.

CHAP. VI. V. 1—7. Eliphaz concluded his discourse with an air of assurance; very confident nothing could be objected to it. But Job is not convinced; still he justifies himself in his complaints, and condemns him for the weakness of his arguing. It must be owned, Job spake much that was reasonable, but with a mixture of passion and human infirmity. And in this, as indeed in most contests, there was fault on both sides. Eliphaz, in beginning his discourse, had been very sharp on Job,

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

It is generally dangerous to deviate from the sentiments and practices of the saints of God, and it is very discouraging to be constrained to act contrary to their judgment. But at last the Word of God is our all-sufficient rule, and not the sentiments of any number of fallible men: so that, in fact, they have sometimes been found right, who seemed not only to have all the world, but almost all the church, against them.—We must not rashly represent every gust of passion or agitation of spirit under trials, reproaches, and temptations, as an evidence of a malevolent disposition: for we should not choose to have our own infirmities treated with such severity; and we might reasonably expect that others would not.—We may predict the final ruin of wicked men, as exposed to the awful curse of God, even in the zenith of their prosperity, when all around are congratulating and envying them. Yet a man's wickedness must be very notorious, to authorize us to interpret his afflictions, or those of his posterity, into divine judgments upon him. Too often the great Author of all our comforts, and the manner in which they are conveyed to us, are alike unnoticed, because they are received as things of course.—Those who are perverse and ungodly, proud of their abilities and sagacity, are generally made to feel, or to expose, their own folly and impotency. Idolaters and atheistical philosophers of old, skeptics, infidels, and materialists of modern days, are awful proofs of these truths: and so are politic persecutors and oppressors of the church, in every age. SCOTT.

---

ment: but here he indulged a hope, that he was corrected of God for his good; and if so, he was a happy man, and ought not to despond under his afflictions. SCOTT.

Verses 18, 19.

Eliphaz next showed the benefits, which would result from a proper behavior under afflictions, and mentioned the happiness of God's people, in language similar to that used in other parts of the O. T. (M. R.—Note, Lev. 26: 1—2.) Six troubles, and seven, denote many, one succeeding another. (Prov. 6:16. Ec. 11:2.) ID.

Verse 23.

Stones.] 'Tribes': all noxious animals. GOOD. Others refer it to being protected in travelling with their thin sandals, in the stony ways and wildernesses of those parts, Deut. 8.4. or from the serpents which infest them. ED.

Verse 24.

The word rendered 'sin,' may mean wander, or be disappointed: and perhaps the v. may imply, that when the believer goes from home, [as was usual with the banded caravans of merchants in those countries of violence,] he may commit himself and family to the care of God, assured that no tempests, fires, or robbers shall come near his habitation; and that he shall be brought back in peace, without losing his way, or being disappointed at his return, by finding his family ruined, or murdered, or fallen into calamity. (M. R.) SCOTT.

Verses 25—27.

These principles are indeed good general rules, but they admit of many exceptions. [Note, v. 6, 7.] Job's friends spoke general truths according to the light of that dispensation; but they erred in their application of them. The Holy Spirit has recorded that debate, as infallibly true in point of matter of fact: but we must decide from the general tenor of the Scripture, whether they maintained right principles, and deduced legitimate consequences; and whether their arguments were or were not conclusive. (42:7—9.) ID.

NOTES.

CHAP. VI. V. 1—4. (M. R.)—Doubtless, this was the effect of Satan's temptations, who endeavored, by every horrible impression on Job's imagination, to drive him to curse God, or blaspheme, as he had were [b] thoroughly weighed, and my calamity * laid in the balances together!

3 For now it would be [c] heavier than the sand of the sea; therefore † my words [d] are swallowed up.

4 For [e] the arrows of the Almighty are within me, the poison whereof [f] drinketh up my spirit: [g] the terrors of God do set themselves in array against me.

5 Doth the wild ass bray ‡ when he hath grass? or [h] loweth the ox over his fodder?

6 Can [i] that which is unsavory be eaten without salt? or is there any [k] taste in the white of an egg?

7 The things that my soul refused to touch are [l] as my sorrowful meat.

8 Oh, that I might have my request, and that God would grant me § the thing that I long for!

9 Even [m] that it would please God to destroy me: [n] that he would let loose his hand, and cut me off!

10 Then [o] should I yet have comfort; yea, [p] I would harden myself in sorrow: [q] let him not spare me; for I

b 4:5. 23:2.
* Heb. lifted up.
c Prov. 27:3. Matt. 11:28.
† That is, I want words to express my grief. Ps. 77:4. d 37:19,20. Ps. 40:5.
e 16:12—14. Deut. 32:23,42. Ps. 7:13. 18:14. 21:12. 38:2. 45:5. Lam. 3: 12,13.
f Deut. 32:24. Ps. 143:7. Prov. 18:14. Mark 14:33,34. 15:34.
g 9:17. 30:15. 31:23. Ps. 88:15,16. 2 Cor. 5:11.
‡ Heb. at grass. Ps. 104:14.
h Ps. 42:1. Jer. 14:6. Joel 1:18—20. i 25. 16:2. Lev. 2:13. Luke 14:34. Col. 4:6. k 30. 12:11. 34:3. Ps. 119:103. Heb. 6:4,5.
l 1 K. 17:12. 22:27. Ps. 102:9. Ez. 4:14,16. 12:18,19. Dan. 10:3.
§ Heb. my expectation. 11—13. 17:14 —16. Ps. 119:81. m 3:20—22. 7:15,16. 14:13. Num. 11: 14,15. 1 K. 19:4. Jon. 4:3,8. Rev. 9:6 n 19:21. Ps. 32:4. Is. 38:10—13.
o 3:22. 21:33.
p 9:4.
q Deut. 29:20. Rom. 8:32. 2 Pet. 2:4,5.

yet Job gave him no interruption, but heard him through patiently: they that would impartially judge of a discourse, must hear it out, and take it entire. His reply, speaks very feelingly.

I. He represents his calamity, in general, as much heavier than either he had expressed, or they apprehended it, v. 2, 3. He could not fully describe it, they would not fully apprehend it, or, at least, not own that they did; therefore he would gladly appeal to a third person, who had just weights and just balances with which to weigh his grief and calamity, with an impartial hand; for, whatever his grief was, his calamity was heavier than the sand of the sea; it was complicated, aggravated, every grievance weighty, and altogether numerous as the sand: Therefore, (says he) my words are swallowed up; i. e. my expressions are broken and bitter; my speech not eloquent; but, in these circumstances, my words are, as I am, quite swallowed up. Now, 1. He hereby complains, that his friends undertook to administer spiritual physic to him, before they thoroughly understood his case. Those who are at ease themselves, seldom rightly weigh the afflictions of the afflicted; every one feels most from his own burden, few, from other people's. 2. He excuses the passionate expressions he had used when he cursed his day. He could not himself justify all he had said, yet his friends should not thus violently condemn it, for really the case was extraordinary; and that might be connived at in such a man of sorrows, which would be not in any common grief. 3. He bespeaks their charitable and compassionate sympathy, and hopes, by representing the greatness of his calamity, to bring them to a better temper toward him. To those that are pained, it is some ease to be pitied.

II. He complains of the trouble and terror of mind he was in, as the sorest part of his calamity, v. 4. Herein he was a type of Christ, who, in his sufferings, complained most of the sufferings of his soul, John 12: 27. Matt. 26: 37, 38. Matt. 27: 46. It was not so much his troubles themselves, his poverty, disgrace, and bodily pain; but, what cut Job to the heart, was, to think the God he loved, and served, had brought all this upon him, and laid him under these marks of his displeasure. Note, Trouble of mind is the sorest trouble: a wounded spirit who can bear? We may well submit to any affliction God may lay upon us, as long as He continues us the use of reason, and peace of conscience; but if, in either, we be disturbed, our case is indeed very pitiable. The way to prevent God's fiery darts of trouble, is, with the shield of faith, to quench Satan's fiery darts of temptation. Observe, he calls them the arrows of the Almighty; He [alone] can with his arrows reach the soul. The poison or heat of them is said to drink up his spirit, because it disturbed his reason, shook his resolution, exhausted his vigor, and threatened his life; therefore his passionate expressions, though they could not be justified, yet might be excused. He that used to be encouraged with the consolations of God, not only wanted those, but was amazed with the terrors of God.

III. He reflects on his friends for their severe censures, and unskilful management. 1. Their reproofs were causeless. He complained, now, but never used to complain when in prosperity, as fretful, unquiet spirits do: he did not bray when he had grass, nor low over his fodder, v. 5. But now, deprived of all his comforts, he must not have the sense of an ox or a wild ass, not to give some vent to his grief: forced to eat unsavory meats; so poor, he had not a grain of salt to relish them, nor to give a little taste to the white of an egg, now his choicest dish, v. 6. Even what once he would have scorned to touch, now he was glad of, and it was his sorrowful meat, v. 7. Note, It is wisdom not to use ourselves or our children to be nice and dainty about meat and drink, because we know not how we or they may be reduced, nor how that which we now disdain may be made acceptable by necessity. 2. Their comforting was sapless and insipid; (so some;) in itself, tasteless as the white of an egg, and, when applied to him, loathsome and burdensome as the most sorrowful meat. I am sorry he should say thus of what Eliphaz had excellently well said, ch. 5: 8, &c. But peevish spirits are too apt thus to abuse their comforters.

V. 8—13. Ungoverned passion often grows more violent when it meets with some rebuke and check. Job had been courting death, as the happy period of his miseries, ch. 3. For this, Eliphaz had gravely reproved him: but he, instead of unsaying it, says it here again with more vehemence than before; it is as ill said as almost any thing in all his discourses, and is recorded for our admonition, not our imitation.

1. He still more passionately desires to die, as if it were not possible he should ever see good days again in this world, or, by the exercise of grace and devotion, make even these days of affliction good days: he could see no end of his trouble but death, and had not patience to wait the time appointed for that, v. 8. 9. Observe, Job did not offer to destroy himself, nor to take away his own life; only he begged it would please God to destroy him. Seneca's Morals, which recommend self-murder as the lawful redress of insupportable grievances, were not then known, nor will ever be entertained by any that have the least regard to the law of God and nature. What looked ill in Job's wish, looked worse in his prayer; for we ought not to ask any thing of God but what we can ask in faith, and we cannot ask any thing in faith, but what is agreeable to his will. Passionate prayers are the worst of passionate expressions; for we should lift up pure hands without wrath. See, (1.) The vanity of human life. Let grace make us willing to part with it, whenever God calls; for it may so happen, that even sense may make us desirous to part with it before He calls. (2.) The hope the righteous have in their death. If Job had not had a good conscience, he could not have spoken with this assurance of comfort on the other side death.

2. He passionately challenges death to do its worst. In prospect of dying at last, he would make nothing of dying pangs. 'I would harden myself in sorrow.' We should soften ourselves in sorrow, that we may receive its good impressions, and, by sadness, our hearts, being made tender, may be made better; but, if we harden ourselves, we provoke God to proceed in his controversy; for when He judgeth, He will overcome. What presumption, too, thus to dare the Almighty! v. 10. It is bad indeed with us when we are weary of sparing mercy. Let us rather say, with David, O spare me a little.

3. He grounds his comfort on the testimony of his conscience, that he had been faithful and firm to his profession of religion, and in some degrees useful and serviceable to the glory of God in his declared that he would, if fully tried; while the Lord was pleased to favor the trial, by withholding from him all sensible comfort, and leaving him in darkness and dismay. SCOTT.

---

(4.) Arrows.] 'The art of poisoning arrows was very ancient in Arabia.' Burder. 'They appear to have had the power of producing thirst.' Script. Illustr. They are said to drink, by a bold figure, as the sword is said to eat, or devour. 'This is terribly sublime. The arrows of the Almighty are represented as loaded with fiery, unquenchable poison, and a thirst for the vital spirit. They have pierced the bowels of the wretched sufferer, and, incapable of being drawn out, remain within him.' Good. ED.

Verses 5—7.

In these vs. Job intimated, that his friends, being free from trouble and temptation, did nothing more, in being contented, than the wild ass or the ox does, when at ease and plentifully fed; and he was no more to be censured for his groans and complaints, than the wild ass for his braying, or the ox for lowing, when destitute of food. And indeed the discourse of Eliphaz had so little of the savor of wisdom and kindness, and was so unsuitable for the occasion, that it was impossible he should relish it: yet this, as 'sorrowful meat' was all he had to feed his soul upon, under his affliction and depression; though at any time he should have entirely disregarded it.—Some think he meant, that it was as natural to expect encouraging words under heavy trials, as it is to ask for salt to eat with the white of an egg; whereas the discourse of Eliphaz tended to render his trials more burdensome than they were before. It is plain, however, that he rejected and undervalued his good advice; because of the injurious reflections on his character, with which it was introduced. (5:2—7.) SCOTT.

(6.) 'Doth what hath nothing of seasoning, of an irritating power, produce pungency or irritation? I too should be quiet, if I had nothing provocative or acrimonious.' Good. Dr. A. CLARKE.

Verses 8—13.

Alas! Job knew not what he said; for who, during a single hour, could endure the wrath of the Almighty, if He spared not, but let loose his hand against him?—Relief from lingering misery was Job's great object; yet he evidently thought of a future world, when he declared

[p] have not concealed the words of [q] the Holy One.

11 [t] What is my strength, that I should hope? and what is mine end, that I should prolong my life?

12 Is my strength the strength of stones? or is my flesh * of brass?

13 [u] Is not my help in me? [x] and is wisdom driven quite from me?

14 To [y] him that † is afflicted pity should be showed from his friend; but [z] he forsaketh the fear of the Almighty.

15 ¶ [a] My brethren have dealt deceitfully as a brook, and [b] as the stream of brooks they pass away;

16 Which are blackish by reason of the ice, and wherein the snow is hid:

17 What time they wax warm, they ‡ vanish; § when it is hot, they are consumed out of their place.

18 The paths of their way are turned aside; they go to nothing, and perish.

19 The troops of [c] Tema looked, the companies of [d] Sheba waited for them.

20 They * were confounded, because they had hoped: they came thither, and were ashamed.

21 For now ‖ ye [f] are ¶ nothing; [g] ye see my casting down, and are afraid.

22 Did I say, [h] Bring unto me? or, Give a reward for me of your substance?

r 23:12. Ps. 37:30. 40:9,10. 71:17,18. 119:13. Acts 20:20,27.
s Lev. 19:2. 1 Sam. 2:2. Is. 30:11,12. 57:15. Hos. 11:9. Hab. 1:12. 3:3. Rev. 3:7. 4:8.
t 7:5—7. 10:20. 13:25,28. 17:1,14—16. Ps. 39:5. 90:5—10. 102:23. 103: 14—16.
* Heb. brazen. 40:18. 41:24. u 19:28. 2 Cor. 1:12. Gal. 6:4.
x 12:2,3. 13:2.
y 4:3,4. 16:5. 19:21. Prov. 17:17. Rom. 12:15. 1 Cor. 12:26. 2 Cor. 11:29. Gal. 6:2. Heb. 13:3.
† Heb. melteth.
z Gen. 20:11. Ps. 36:1—3. Luke 23:40. a 19:19. Ps. 38:11. 41:9. 55:12—14. 88:18. Jer. 9:4,5. 30:14. Mic. 7:5,6. John 13:18. 16:32.
b Jer. 15:18. Jude 12.
‡ Heb. are cut off.
§ Heb. in the heat thereof they are extinguished. 1 K. 17:7.

generation, v. 10. Observe, 1. Job had the words of the Holy One committed to him. The people of God were, at that time, blessed with divine revelation. 2. It was his comfort, he had not concealed them, not from himself, no, nor from others, but had been ready, on all occasions, to communicate his knowledge for their good. Those, and those only, may promise themselves comfort in death, who are good, and do good, while they live.

4. He justifies this extreme desire of death, from his deplorable condition, v. 11, 12. Eliphaz, in the close of his discourse, had put him in hopes he should yet see a good issue of his troubles; but poor Job puts these cordials away from him, abandons himself to despair, and very ingenuously, yet perversely, argues against these encouragements. Disconsolate spirits will reason strangely against themselves. All things considered, we have no reason to count on the long continuance of life. Those who, through grace, are ready for another world, cannot see much to invite their stay in this, or to make them fond of it. We may wish to prolong life, in subserviency to our chief end; but, otherwise, why desire to tarry here? The longer life is, the more grievous its burdens, (Eccl. 12: 1.) and the less pleasant its delights, 2 Sam. 19: 34, 35. We have already seen the best, but are not sure we have seen the worst of this world.

5. He obviates the suspicion of his being delirious, v. 13. Is not my help in me? i. e. 'Have I not the use of my reason, with which, I thank God, I can help myself, though you do not help me? No, I am not mad, most noble Eliphaz, but speak the words of truth and soberness.' Those who have grace, the evidence of it, and have it in exercise, have wisdom in them, which will be their help in the worst times.

V. 14—21. Eliphaz had been very severe, and his companions had intimated their concurrence: their unkindness therein poor Job here complains of, as an aggravation of his calamity, and a further excuse of his desire to die; for what satisfaction could he ever expect in this world, when those that should be his comforters, thus proved his tormentors?

I. His expectation was grounded on the common principles of humanity, v. 14. Note, 1. Compassion is a debt owing to those in affliction. The least those at ease can do for those in anguish, is, to pity them, and sympathize with and comfort them; and do all they can to help and relieve them: this well becomes the members of the same body, who should feel for the grievances of their fellow members, not knowing how soon the same may be their own. 2. Inhumanity is impiety and irreligion. He that withholds compassion from his friend, forsakes the fear of the Almighty. So the Chal. How dwells the love of God in that man? 1 John 3: 17. Surely those have no fear of God's rod, who have no compassion for those that feel it. See Jam. 1: 27. 3. Troubles are the trials of friendship. A man afflicted, will see who are his friends indeed, and who but pretenders; for a brother is born for adversity, Prov. 12: 17.—18: 24.

II. He shows how wretchedly his expectations from them, were disappointed, v. 15. They came by appointment, with great ceremony, to mourn with, and comfort him; (ch. 3: 11.) but, instead, they most barbarously fall on him with their reproaches and censures, condemn him as a hypocrite, insult over his calamities, and pour vinegar, instead of oil, into his wounds; thus they dealt deceitfully with him. Note, 1. It is fraud and deceit not only to violate engagements to friends, but to frustrate their just expectations from us, especially those we have raised. 2. It is our wisdom to cease from man; we cannot expect too little from the creature, nor too much from the Creator. It is no new thing even for brethren to deal deceitfully; (Jer. 9: 4, 5. Mic. 7: 5.) let us therefore put our confidence in the Rock of ages, not in broken reeds; in the Fountain of Life, not in broken cisterns. God will outdo our hopes as much as men come short of them.

The failing of brooks in summer is a very elegant similitude, v. 15—20. They make a great show, when swelled by the melting of the ice and snow, which makes them blackish or muddy, but in summer they are dry, v. 16. and weary, thirsty travellers look for them in vain, v. 19. as the caravans of the merchants of those countries, whose road lay through the deserts of Arabia. Where we have met with relief and comfort, we are apt to expect it again; and yet it does not follow: but they who make God their confidence have help in the time of need, Heb. 4: 16. Now ye are nothing.

It were well for us, if we had always such convictions of the vanity of the creature, and its insufficiency to make us happy, as we have sometimes had, or shall have, on a sick-bed, a death-bed, or in trouble of conscience. You are nothing, not what you have been, what you should be, what you pretend to be, what I thought you would have been. When you saw me in my elevation, you caressed me; but, now you see me in my dejection, you are shy of me, afraid of showing yourselves kind, lest I should take boldness thence, to beg something of you, or to borrow;' (comp. v. 22.) Perhaps they were afraid of catching his distemper, or of coming within smell of its noisomeness. It is not good, either out of pride or niceness, for love of our [feelings,] purses, or bodies, to be shy of those in distress.

V. 22—30. Poor Job goes on here to upbraid his friends with their unkindness, and hard usage. If they would but think impartially, and speak as they thought, they could not but own,

I. That though necessitous, yet he was not craving, nor burdensome to his friends. Those whose troubles serve them to beg by, are commonly less pitied than the silent poor. Job would be glad to see his friends, but he did not say, Bring unto me, (v. 22.) or, Deliver me, v. 23. Note, A good man, when troubled himself, is afraid of being troublesome to his friends. Paul worked with his hands, that he might not be burdensome to any. Job's not asking their help, did not excuse them from offering it when needed, and in their power to give; but it much aggravated their unkindness, when he desired no more from them than a good look, and a good word, and yet could not obtain them. It often happens that from man, even when we expect little, we have less, but from God, even when we expect much, we have more, Eph. 3: 20.

II. That though he differed in opinion from them, yet he was not obstinate, but ready to yield to conviction, v. 24, 25. Note, 1. Fair reasoning has a commanding power, and it is a wonder if men are not conquered by it; but railing and foul language is impotent and foolish, and no wonder men are exasperated and hardened by it. 2. It is the undoubted character of every honest man, that he is truly desirous to have his mistakes rectified, and to be made to understand wherein he has erred: and that right words, when they appear so to him, though contrary to his former sentiments, are both forcible and acceptable.

III. That though he had been indeed in a fault, yet they ought not to have given him such hard usage, v. 26, 27. 'Do you imagine, or contrive c Gen. 25:15. Is. 21:14. Jer. 25:23. d Gen. 10:7. 25:3. 1 K. 10:1. Ps. 72: 10. Ez. 27:22,23.

e Jer. 14:3,4. 17:13. Rom. 5:5. 9:33.
‖ Or, ye are like to them. Heb. to it. 15. 13:4.
f Ps. 62:9. Is. 2:22. Jer. 17:5,6.
¶ Heb. not.
g 2:11—13. Ps. 38:11. Prov. 19:7. Jer. 51:9. Matt. 26:31,56. 2 Tim. 4:16. Rev. 18:9,10,17,18. h 42:11. 1 Sam. 12:3. Acts 20:33.

---

that 'he had not concealed the words of the Holy One.' He meant, that he was no hypocrite; but as he had professed the words of the Holy God, so he had believed and obeyed them, as the avowed and real rule of his conduct. He seems, however, to have spoken too much in a way of self-justification, and despondency; and not simply, as stating the ground of his desire to leave this world, and go to a better. SCOTT.

(10.) I have not, &c.] 'I dispute not the decrees.' Heath. 'I would not resist the commands.' Good. COND. COMM.

Verse 14.

Some understand the v. as Job's representation of his friends' behavior to him; in which sense it may be rendered, 'They say of him that is afflicted more than his neighbor, He hath forsaken mercy, and the fear of the Almighty.' (Note, 4:3—6.) SCOTT.

Verse 18.

'The paths of their course are diminished; They ascend into vapor and perish.' BOOTHR.

23 Or, Deliver me from the enemy's hand? or, [i] Redeem me from the hand of the mighty?

24 [k] Teach me, and [l] I will hold my tongue: and [m] cause me to understand wherein I have erred.

25 How [n] forcible are right words! but [o] what doth your arguing reprove?

26 Do ye imagine to [p] reprove words, and the speeches of [q] one that is desperate, which are [r] as wind?

27 Yea, ye * overwhelm [s] the fatherless, and [t] ye dig a pit for your friend.

28 Now therefore, be content: look upon me: for it is † evident unto you, [u] if I lie.

29 [x] Return, I pray you, let it not be iniquity; yea, return again, [y] my righteousness is ‡ in it.

30 Is there [z] iniquity in my tongue? [a] cannot my § taste discern perverse things?

CHAP. VII.

Job excuses his desire of death, by representing the vanity, misery, and uselessness of his life, 1—6. He expostulates with God, in a mixture of complaints and petitions; and concludes with confessing that he had sinned, and asking forgiveness before his death, 7—21.

IS [a] there not ‖ an appointed time to man upon earth? are not his days also [b] like the days of an hireling?

2 As a servant ¶ earnestly desireth [c] the shadow, and as [d] an hireling looketh for the reward of his work:

3 So am I made to possess [e] months of vanity, and wearisome nights are appointed to me.

4 When I lie down, I say, [f] When shall I arise, and  the night be gone? and I am full of [g] tossings to and fro, unto the dawning of the day.

with a great deal of art,' (so the word signifies,) 'to reprove words, some passionate expressions of mine in this desperate condition, as if they were certain indications of reigning impiety and atheism? A little candor and charity would excuse them, and put a better construction on them. Shall a man's spiritual state be judged of by some rash and hasty words, a surprising trouble extorts from him?' Two things aggravated their unkind treatment. 1. They took advantage of his weakness, and helpless condition; Ye overwhelm the fatherless, a proverbial expression, bespeaking that which is most barbarous and inhuman. Job, being a childless father, thought himself as much exposed to injury as a fatherless child, Ps. 127: 5. Let those who overwhelm and overpower them that on any account may be looked upon as fatherless, know that therein they not only put off the compassions of man, but fight against the compassions of God, who is, and will be, a Father of the fatherless, and a Helper of the helpless. 2. 'You dig a pit for your friend; not only are unkind to your friend, but, under color of friendship, insnare me.' When they came to see and sit with him, he thought he might speak his mind freely, and that the more bitter his complaints, the more they would endeavor to comfort him. This made him take greater liberty than otherwise he would. David, though he smothered his resentments when the wicked were before him, it is likely, would have vented them, had none been by but friends, Ps. 39: 1. But this freedom of speech, which their professions of concern made him use, had exposed him to their censures, so they might be said to dig a pit for him, [alluding to the method of slightly covering a pit, and placing a bait upon it to entrap beasts, whose weight the covering will not bear; and so they fall in, are disabled, and thus buried in destruction.] Thus, when our hearts are hot within us, what is ill done we are apt to misrepresent, as if done designedly.

IV. That in the main, he was in the right, and his afflictions, though very extraordinary, did not prove him a hypocrite, or a wicked man. 'What do you see in me, that bespeaks me either a mad man, or a wicked man? Nay, look in my face, and you may discern there the indications of a patient and submissive spirit, for all this: that though I have cursed my day, I do not curse my God.' Or rather, 'Look on my ulcers and sore boils, and by them it will be evident to you that I do not lie;' i. e. 'that I do not complain without cause.' 'You hear what I have to say; Is there iniquity in my tongue? That iniquity you charge me with? Have I blasphemed God, or renounced Him? Are not my present arguings right? Do not you perceive, by what I say, that I can discern perverse things? I can discover your fallacies and mistakes, and if I were myself in an error, I could perceive it. Whatever you think of me, I know what I say.' 'Return, I pray you, (v. 29.) consider the thing over again, without prejudice and partiality, and let not the result be iniquity, let it not be an unrighteous sentence; and you will find my righteousness is in it,' i. e. 'I am in the right in this matter; and though I cannot keep my temper as I should, I keep my integrity, and have not said, or done, or suffered, any thing which will prove me other than an honest man.'

CHAP. VII. V. 1—6. Job, in this ch. goes on to express the bitter sense he had of his calamities, and to justify himself in his desire of death. Why should he not wish for the period of life, which would be the period of his miseries? To enforce this reason, he argues,

I. From the general condition of man, v. 1. 'Every man must die shortly, and every man has some reason (more or less) to desire to die shortly; therefore, why impute it to me as so heinous a crime, that I wish to die shortly?' Or thus: 'Pray mistake not my desires of death, as if I thought the time appointed of God could be anticipated; no, but in such language as this, I take the liberty to express my present uneasiness.' We are not to think we are governed by the blind fate of the Stoics, or blind fortune of the Epicureans, but by the wise, holy, and sovereign counsel of God.

1. Man's life is a warfare, and as the days of a hireling. We are in this world, (1.) As soldiers, exposed to hardship, and in the midst of enemies, we must serve and be under command; and, when our warfare is accomplished, we must be disbanded, dismissed with either shame or honor, according to what we have done in the body. (2.) As day-laborers, that have the work of the day to do in its day, and must make up their account at night.

i 5:20. Lev. 25:48. Neh. 5:8. Ps. 49: 7,8,15. 107:2. Jer. 15:21. k 5:27. 32:11,15,16. 33:1,31—33. 34: 32. Ps. 32:8. Prov. 9:9. 25:12. Jam. 1:19.
l Ps. 39:1,2. Jam. 3:2.
m 10:2. Ps. 19:12.
n 4:4. 16:5. Prov. 12:18. 16:21—24. 18:21. 25:11. Ec. 12:10,11.
o 13:5. 15:3,4. 21:34. 24:25. 32:3.
p 2:10. 3:3,&c. 4:3,4. 34:3—9. 38: 2. 40:5,8. 42:3,7. Matt. 12:37.
q 4:9. 10:1.
r 8:2. Hos. 12:1. Eph. 4:14.
* Heb. cause to fall upon.
s 22:9. 24:3,9. 23:12. 31:17,21. Ex. 22:22—24. Ps. 82:3. Prov. 23:10,11. Ez. 22:7. Mal. 3:5. Jam. 1:27. t Ps. 7:15. 57:6. Jer. 18:20,22.
† Heb. before your face.
u 11:3. 13:4.
x 17:10. Mal. 3:18.
y 27:4—6.
‡ That is, in this matter.
z 33:8—12. 42:3—6.
a 6. 12:11. 34:3. Heb. 5:14.
§ Heb. palate.
a 14:5,13,14. Ps. 39:4. Is. 38:5. John 11:9,10.
‖ Or, a warfare. Ec. 8:8.
b 14:6. Lev. 25:50. Deut. 15:18. Is. 21:16. Matt. 26:1—15.
¶ Heb. gapeth after. Ps. 119:131. 143: 6.
c Jer. 6:4.
d Lev. 19:13. Deut. 24:15. Mal. 3:5. Jam. 5:4.
e 29:2. Ps. 39:5. Ec. 1:14.
f 13,14. 30:17. Deut. 28:67. Ps. 6:6. 77:4. 130:6.
 Heb. the evening be measured.
g Ps. 109:23. Is. 54:11.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

In deciding on the conduct of those who seem impatient, we should carefully consider the number and aggravations of their distresses, which often appear to the sufferer even greater than his heaviest complaints, and beyond the power of words to express. A heart, wounded with the fear or sense of the wrath of God, assaulted with grievous temptations, filled with horror, and verging to despair, is far more dreadful and intolerable, than any external afflictions: yet, these 'pains of hell' have often taken hold of the most beloved servants of God. (2 Sam. 22: 5, 6. Ps. 116: 3.) Mere spectators cannot estimate trials of this kind; and few pious men have sufficient wisdom, experience, and tenderness, to deal properly with those, who are thus deserted, oppressed, and overwhelmed.—What then did the Savior endure in the garden and on the cross! and what will sinners, who neglect so great salvation, for ever endure in the regions of darkness and despair!—Furious passions are peculiarly culpable when they dictate prayers; for men seldom wish or pray for death, except when they are in a rebellious frame of spirit. Surely we may find something more excellent to request of God, than to be delivered from present suffering.—Most of us are apt to be too impatient, when we hear men argue inconclusively, especially when their discourse bears hard on our sentiments and conduct. It is, however, still more unbecoming to retaliate on reprovers, and to charge them with malice, when perhaps they spoke from genuine love. SCOTT.

NOTES.

Verse 23.

Redeem.] 'Ransom or take back by force my cattle.' GILL.

Verse 26.

'Do ye imagine to reprove mere words, [have ye no facts, Gill.]? the speeches of one desperate (like me) are as wind, i. e. quite uncontrollable.' HEWLETT.

Verse 28.

'"Look in my face, and you will soon see I am innocent," says a Hindoo.' ROBERTS.

CHAP. VII. V. 1—6. Spent, &c. (6) 'Finished for want of thread.' E. Smith.—The original will admit this translation, and several critics have adopted it as keeping up the simile. SCOTT.

(1.) Warfare: marg.] God has so constituted us with relation to the universe, that our happiness consists in the activity of certain desires and impulses He has endowed us with; which are brought into play by the 'scene of things' into which our mortal birth introduces us. How aptly is this constant call to exertion, which thus disciplines

5 My [h] flesh is clothed with worms and clods of dust; my skin is broken, and become [i] loathsome.

6 My days are [k] swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent [l] without hope.

7 Oh, [m] remember that [n] my life is wind: mine eye shall * no more see good.

8 The [o] eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more: [p] thine eyes are upon me, and † I am not.

9 As [q] the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away; so [r] he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more.

10 He [s] shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more.

11 Therefore [t] I will not refrain my mouth: I will speak in [u] the anguish of my spirit; I will complain in [x] the bitterness of my soul.

12 Am [y] I a sea, or [z] a whale, that thou settest a watch over me?

13 When I say, [a] My bed shall comfort me, my couch shall ease my complaint;

14 Then [b] thou scarest me with dreams, and terrifiest me through visions:

15 So that my soul chooseth strangling, and death rather than my ‡ life.

16 [d] I loath it; I would not live alway: [e] let me alone; for [f] my days are vanity.

h 2:7,8. 17:14. 19:26. 24:20. 30:18, 19. Ps. 38:5—7. Is. 1:6. 14:11. Acts 12:23.
i 9:31. Is. 66:24. Ez. 20:43.
k 9:25. 16:22. 17:11. Ps. 90:5,6. 102: 11. 103:15,16. 144:4. Is. 38:12,13. 40:6,7. Jam. 1:11. 4:14. 1 Pet. 1:24.
l 6:11. 17:15. Prov. 14:32. Jer. 2: 25. Eph. 2:12. 1 Pet. 1:13.
m 10:9. Neh. 1:8. Ps. 74:18,22. 89:47, 50. Jer. 15:15.
n Ps. 78:39. Jam. 4:14.
* Heb. not return to see, that is, to enjoy. 10:21,22.
o 20:9. Ps. 37:36.
p 13:27. 14:3. Ps. 39:11. 90:8,9.
† That is, I can live no longer. 21.
q 37:11.
r 10:21. 14:10—14. 16:22. 2 Sam. 12:23. 14:14. Ps. 39:13. Is. 38:11.
s 8:18. 20:9. Ps. 103:16.
t 6:26. 10:1. 13:13. 16:6. 21:3. Ps. 39:3. 40:9.
u Gen. 42:21. 2 K. 4:27,28. Matt. 26: 37,38. Luke 22:44. 2 Cor. 2:4. x 21:25. 1 Sam. 1:10. Is. 38:15,17. y 17. 38:6—11. Lam. 3:7.
z 41:1,&c.
a 3,4. 9:27,28. Ps. 6:6. 77:4.
b Gen. 40:5—7. 41:8. Judg. 7:13,14. Dan. 2:1. Matt. 27:19. c 2 Sam. 17:23. Matt. 27:5.
‡ Heb. bones.
d 3:6—22. 6:9. 10:1. Gen. 27:46.
e 1 K. 19:4. Jon. 4:3,8.
e 10:20. 14:6. Ps. 39:10,13.
f Ps. 78:39. 144:4. Ec. 6:11,12.

II. From his own condition. He had as much reason, he thought, to wish for death, as a poor servant or hireling, tired with his work, has to wish for the shadows of the evening, when he shall receive his penny, and go to rest, v. 2. No pleasure more grateful, more relishing, to the luxurious, than rest to the laborers; Eccl. 5: 12. nor can any rich man take so much satisfaction in the return of his rent-days, as the hireling in his day's wages. Hear his complaint:

1. His days were useless, and had been so a great while; he was wholly taken off from business, and utterly unfit for it. He was in no capacity of doing good, or of spending his day to any purpose; this he calls possessing months of vanity, v. 3. It very much increases the affliction of sickness and age, to a good man, that he is thereby forced from his usefulness. But when we are disabled to work for God, if we will but sit still quietly for Him, it is all one; we shall be accepted.

2. His nights were restless, v. 3, 4. Be the toil, or trouble what it will, sleep is the parenthesis of our sorrows: but poor Job could not gain this relief. His nights were wearisome; (v. 4.) it is but a resemblance of a fretful, discontented spirit, that is ever shifting, but never easy. This made him dread the night, and desire the dawn, as much as the servant desires the night. But these were appointed, v. 3. Whatever is, at any time, grievous to us, it is good to see it appointed for us, that we may acquiesce in the event, not only as unavoidable, because appointed, but as, therefore, designed for some holy end.

3. His body was noisome, v. 5. See what vile bodies we have, and what little reason we have to pamper them, or be proud of them.

4. His life was hastening apace towards a period, v. 6. He found himself declining fast, v. 6. It is applicable to man's life in general; our days are like a weaver's shuttle, thrown from one side of the web to the other, in the twinkling of an eye, until, at length, it is quite exhausted of the thread it carried; and then we cut off, like a weaver, our life, Isa. 38: 12. Time hastens on apace, its motion cannot be stopped; when past, it cannot be recalled. While living, we are sowing, (Gal. 6: 8.) so we are weaving; every day, like the shuttle, leaves a thread behind it; many weave the spider's web, which will fail them, ch. 8: 14. If we are weaving to ourselves holy garments and robes of righteousness, we shall have the benefit of them when our work comes to be reviewed; and every man shall reap as he sowed, and wear as he wove.

V. 7—16. Job, observing, perhaps, that his friends, though they would not interrupt him, yet began to grow weary, and not to heed much what he said, here turns to God, and speaks to Him. If men will not hear us, God will; if men cannot help us, He can; his arm is not shortened, nor his ear heavy. Yet there is a great mixture of passion and corruption in what Job here says: but if God be not extreme to mark what his people say amiss, let us also make the best of it. Job is here begging of God either to ease or end him. He represents himself to God,

I. As a dying man. He recommends himself to God as an object of his pity and compassion, with this consideration, that he was a very weak, frail creature, his abode in this world short and uncertain, his removal out of it sure and speedy, and his return to it again impossible, and never to be expected; that his life was wind, as the lives of all men are, noisy perhaps, and blustering, like the wind, but vain and empty, soon gone, and, when gone, past recall. God had compassion on Israel, remembering that they were but flesh, a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again, Ps. 78: 38, 39. Observe,

1. Dying is here illustrated by the blotting out and scattering of a cloud. It is consumed, and vanisheth away, is resolved into air, and never knits again: other clouds arise, but the same cloud never returns: so a new generation of the children of men is raised up, but the former generation is quite consumed, and vanishes away. Glorified saints shall return no more to the cares, and burdens, and sorrows, of their house; nor damned sinners to the gaieties and pleasures of theirs. It concerns us to secure a better place when we die, for this will no more own us.

2. His passionate inference. From these premises he might have drawn a better conclusion than this, v. 11. Holy David, when he had been meditating on the frailty of human life, made a contrary use of it; I was dumb, and opened not my mouth: but Job seems as if he could not die in peace, till he had vented his passion. When we have but a few breaths to draw, we should rather spend them in the holy, gracious breathings of faith and prayer, than die complaining and quarrelling.

II. As a distempered man, sorely and grievously distempered, both in body and mind. In this, he is very peevish, as if God dealt hardly with him, and laid on him more than was meet. 'Am I a raging sea, that must be kept within bounds, or an unruly whale, that must be restrained by force? Am I so strong, so boisterous, that there needs no less than all these mighty bonds of affliction to tame me, and keep me within compass?' v. 12. We are very apt, when in affliction, to complain of God and his providence, as if He laid more restraint on us than there is occasion for; whereas we are never in heaviness but when there is need, or beyond the just measure.

1. He could not rest. Note, God can, when He pleases, meet us with terror there, where we promise ourselves ease and repose; nay, He can make us a terror to ourselves, and, as we have often contracted guilt, by the rovings of an unsanctified fancy, He can likewise, by the power of our own imagination, create as much grief, and so make that our punishment which has often been our sin. In Job's dreams, though they might and developes our powers, called a warfare! How great is the wisdom of God, which has so aptly adjusted the universe to us, and us to the universe! How great the goodness of God, which has opened before us this path to endless happiness, in an endless progress towards that perfection with which He is perfect! ED.

---

(2.) 'The easterns measure time very correctly by the length of their shadow. Thus the laborer desires the shadow which indicates the time for leaving work.' ROBERTS.

(4.) 'Aretæus and Celsus, two medical writers of antiquity, mention disturbing dreams as attendant on the elephantiasis.' ROSENM.

Clothed, &c.] 'Probably, literally true, insects having deposited their eggs in his ulcers, from his being exposed to the open air.' Dr. A. Clarke. Loathsome.] 'The elephantiasis is so noisome, that it might well pass for the corruption of the human body on this side the grave.' MAUNDRELL.

Verses 7—11.

In the middle of this discourse with his friends, Job seems to have lifted up his thoughts to God, and mingled some actings of faith and hope with his fretfulness and despondency.—This (10) does not by any means imply a denial of a future state, or the resurrection of the dead; but it merely describes the condition of mankind respecting this present life. (Ec. 1:4—11.) [It does not deny a resurrection to life, but to the same life. Caryl.]—If he had poured out his soul before God, that indeed would have abated the anguish of his spirit; but his expostulations only increased his vexation, and seemed to reflect on the divine justice and goodness. SCOTT.

Verse 12.

Sea.] 'Yam: originally tempest, tumult, violence; hence it applies to the sea, or any ferocious or powerful monster, [and the Egyptians personified the sea under the monster Typhon.] Reiske, with great propriety, renders wild buffaloes. I render "a savage beast," for it is clear, yam implies it from Gen. 36:24. A "watch," or "keeper," is only spoken as to wild beasts.' GOOD. But Ramses the Great diked out the sea from many hundred towns of Egypt, and doubtless there was a superintendant of the dikes, lest the sea should break in. The Nile is still called 'El Bahr,' 'the ocean.' 'In almost every instance, except the present, tanim (whale) is rendered dragon in our established version, (Job 30:29, &c.) which is the common name for a spiral, voluminous monster of any kind, and so Reiske tr.' GOOD. Perhaps this text may receive illustration from the note, 41:7. the hunters watching for the hippopotamus, (as whalemen do for the whale after he is struck,) till he rises to the surface of the water, to spear him. ED.

17 [g] What is man, that thou shouldest [h] magnify him? and that thou shouldest [i] set thine heart upon him?

18 And that thou shouldest [k] visit him every morning, and [l] try him every moment?

19 [m] How long wilt thou not depart from me, nor let me alone, till I swallow down my spittle?

20 I [n] have sinned: what shall I do unto thee, [o] O thou Preserver of men? [p] why hast thou set me as a mark against thee, so that [q] I am a burden to myself?

21 And [r] why dost thou not pardon my transgression, and [s] take away mine iniquity? for now shall I [t] sleep in the dust; and thou shalt seek me [u] in the morning, [x] but I shall not be.

CHAP. VIII.

Bildad blames Job for reflecting on the justice of God, 1—3. He intimates that his children had been cast off for their sins; yet encourages Job to seek unto God, 4—7. He appeals to the ancients, to prove the certain doom of hypocrites, 8—19. He applies the argument to the case of Job, 20—22.

THEN answered [a] Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

g Ps. 8:4. 144:3. Heb. 2:6.
h 12. 1 Sam. 24:14.
i 34:14,15.
k Ex. 20:5. 32:34. Is. 26:14. 33:12,13.
l Gen. 22:1. Deut. 8:16. Jer. 9:7. Dan. 12:10. Zech. 13:9. 1 Pet. 1:7.
m 9:18. Ps. 6:3. 13:1—3. 94:3. Rev. 6:10.
n 9:29—31. 13:26. 14:16,17. 22:5. 31: 33. 33:9,27.
o Neh. 9:6. Ps. 36:6. p 12. 6:4. 16:12—14. Ps. 21:12. Lam. 3:12.
q 11. 3:24.
r 10:14. 13:23,24. Is. 64:9. Lam. 3: 42—44. 5:20—22.
s 2 Sam. 24:10. Hos. 14:2. John 1:29. Tit. 2:14. 1 John 3:5.
t 3:13. 17:14. 21:32,33. Ec. 12:7. Is. 26:19. Dan. 12:2.
u 18.
x Ps. 37:36.
a 2:11.

partly arise from his distemper, [see note, v. 4.] yet we have reason to think Satan had a hand in them; but Job looked up to God, who permitted Satan to do this, and mistook Satan's representations for the terrors of God setting themselves in array against him. We have reason to pray to God, that our dreams may neither defile nor disquiet us, neither tempt us to sin, nor torment us with fear; that He who keeps Israel, and neither slumbers nor sleeps, may keep us when we slumber and sleep; that the devil may not then do us a mischief, either as an insinuating serpent, or as a roaring lion; and to bless God if we lie down and our sleep is sweet.

2. He covets to rest in his grave, v. 15, 16. (1.) Sick of life, he hated the thoughts of it. Note, A good man would not (if he might) live always in this world, no, not though it smile on him, because it is a world of sin and temptation, and he has a better world in prospect. (2.) He was fond of death, and pleased himself with the thoughts of it: his soul (his judgment, he thought, but really it was his passion) chose strangling and death rather; any death rather than such a life. This was Job's infirmity; for life is our opportunity of glorifying God, and getting ready for heaven. [Note, v. 1.]

V. 17—21. Job here reasons with God concerning his dealings,

I. With man in general, v. 17, 18. This was either, 1. As a passionate reflection on the divine justice; as if the great God did diminish and disparage Himself, in contending with man. But we mistake God, and the nature of his providence, if we think it any lessening to Him, to notice the meanest of his creatures. Or, 2. As a pious admiration of the condescensions of divine grace, like that, Ps. 8: 4.—144: 3. That such a worm of the earth as man is, should be the darling and favorite of Heaven, is what we have reason for ever to admire.

II. With him in particular. Observe, 1. The complaint of his afflictions, which he here aggravates, and (as we are all too apt to do) makes the worst of, in three expressions; that he was the butt to God's arrows, a burden to himself, and had no intermission of his griefs. How much delight soever we take in ourselves, God can, when He pleases, make us burdens to ourselves. What comfort can we take in ourselves, if God appear against us as an enemy, and we have not comfort in Him? It should seem, Job's distemper lay much in his throat, and almost choked him, v. 19. He complains, (ch. 30: 18.) that it bound him about like the collar of his coat. 'Lord,' says he, 'wilt not thou give some respite, some breathing time?' ch. 9: 18.

2. The concern he is in about his sins. (1.) The best men have sin to complain of, and the better they are, the more they will complain of it. God had said of him, that he was a perfect and an upright man; yet he says of himself, I have sinned. Those may be upright who yet are not sinless; and those who are sincerely penitent are accepted, through a Mediator, as evangelically perfect. Job maintained, against his friends, that he was not a hypocrite, not a wicked man; and yet owns to his God, that he had sinned. If kept from gross acts of sin, it does not follow that we are innocent. His calling God the Observer, or Preserver, of men, may be looked upon as designed for an aggravation of his sin; 'Though God has had his eye on me, on me for good, yet I have sinned against Him.' When in affliction, it is seasonable to confess sin, as its procuring cause. Penitent confessions would drown and silence passionate complaints.

(2.) He seriously inquires how he might make his peace with God; 'What shall I do unto Thee, having done so much against Thee?' Convinced of sin, we cannot but conclude something must be done, to prevent the fatal consequences of it. And, if truly sensible of the danger we have run ourselves into, we shall be willing to do any thing; to take a pardon on any terms; and therefore shall be inquisitive as to what we shall do (Mic. 6: 6, 7.) to God, not to satisfy the demands of his justice, (that is done only by the Mediator,) but to qualify ourselves for the tokens of his favor, according to the tenor of the gospel covenant. 'Thou art the Savior of men; be my Savior, for I cast myself on thy mercy.'

(3.) He earnestly begs for the forgiveness of his sins, v. 21. The heat of his spirit, as, on the one hand, it made his complaints the more bitter, so, on the other hand, it made his prayers the more lively and importunate. Surely he means more than barely the removing of his outward trouble, and is herein earnest for the return of God's favor, which he complained of the want of, ch. 6: 4. 'Lord, pardon my sins, and give me the comfort of that pardon, and then I can easily bear my afflictions,' Matt. 9: 2. Isa. 33: 24. When the mercy of God pardons the transgression that is committed by us, the grace of God takes away the iniquity that reigns in us. Wherever God removes the guilt of sin, He breaks the power of sin.

(4.) To enforce his prayer for pardon, he pleads the prospect he had of dying quickly; 'For now shall I sleep in the dust: when it will be too late. If my sins be not pardoned while I live, I am lost and undone for ever.' Note, The consideration of this, that we must shortly die, and perhaps may die suddenly, should make us all very solicitous to get our sins pardoned, and our iniquity taken away.

CHAP. VIII. Job's friends are like Job's messengers; those followed one another close with evil tidings, these with harsh censures: both, unawares, served Satan's design; those to drive him from his integrity, these to drive him from the comfort of it. Eliphaz did not reply to what Job had said in answer to him, but left it to Bildad, whom he knew to be of the same mind with himself in this affair. Those are not the wisest

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The appointed term of our lives is known to God, but uncertain to us: while it continues, we have a warfare to accomplish, and a work to do; and our eternal state will be decided accordingly as we acquit ourselves. The believer, by the grace of God, 'fights the good fight of faith,' and performs his appointed service; then rests from his labors, and receives the conqueror's crown, as a gracious recompense from the hand of his merciful Savior.—When conflicting with sore temptations, and burdened with weighty afflictions, we may properly long after the promised rest, and welcome the shadows of the evening, the assaults of sickness, the inroads of old age, and the prospects of dissolution: yet, like valiant soldiers, or patient laborers, we should be willing to endure fatigue and hardship a little longer, and not impatiently desire release from suffering.—But how wretched is sinful man without the knowledge of a Savior! Accumulated miseries may render life intolerable, and fears of future vengeance make the thought of death unspeakably tremendous; or, being hardened in infidelity or despair, a poor sinner may be tempted to plunge himself from temporal into eternal misery. God's condescension and compassion to such worthless worms are infinite: He could crush us in a moment, and we all deserve it; but He visits and chastens us for our good, to exercise and prove our graces, to subdue our iniquities, and to restrain us from sin: and his mercies are far more numerous than the stripes of his correcting rod. —The Lord is our constant Observer; but He is also the gracious Savior of all who trust in Him. SCOTT.

Verses 17—19.

It is difficult to expound the language of one, who spoke the dictates of passion, rather than of reason, and whose soul was engaged in a continued conflict between temptation and divine grace; which alternately prevailed, and reciprocally defeated the effects of each other. (Gal. 5:16—18.) SCOTT.

(19.) Swallow my spittle.] 'Still an Arab proverb, (Durell,) and the Spaniards have the same, probably from the Moors. Poole.' Cond: Comm. 'It imports "I have not time to breathe."' BOOTHR.

Verses 20, 21.

These concluding verses contain a very singular intermixture of faith and unbelief; and this renders it the more difficult to explain them. SCOTT.

(20.) 'Here are exquisite breaks. The afflicted subject of the poem can scarcely refrain from expostulating with the Almighty, and occasionally in a strain too bold and familiar. In v. 17. he suddenly becomes sensible of it, and abruptly breaks off with a rushing conviction of his own insignificance. He again relapses, in v. 19. to the same train of unbecoming expostulation; and here he checks himself with a sudden sense of impropriety.' GOOD.

Preserver.] Rather, Observer, as the connection requires. So Rosenm. Hewlett, and Good. ED.

2 [b] How long wilt thou speak these things? and how long shall [c] the words of thy mouth be like a strong wind?

3 [d] Doth God pervert judgment? or doth [e] the Almighty pervert justice?

4 If thy children have sinned against him, and [f] he have cast them away * for their transgressions;

5 If [g] thou wouldest seek unto God betimes, and make thy supplication to the Almighty;

6 If [h] thou wert pure and upright; surely now [i] he would awake for thee, and [k] make the habitation of thy righteousness prosperous.

7 Though [l] thy beginning was small, yet [m] thy latter end should greatly increase.

8 For [n] inquire, I pray thee, of the former age, and prepare thyself to the search of their fathers:

9 (For [o] we are but of yesterday, and know † nothing, because our days upon earth are a shadow:)

10 [p] Shall not they teach thee, and tell thee, and [q] utter words out of their heart?

11 Can the rush grow up without mire? [r] can the flag grow without water?

12 Whilst it is * yet

b 11:2,3. 16:3. 18:2. 19:2,3. Ex. 10:3,7. Prov. 1:22.
c 6:9,26. 7:11. 15:2. 1 K. 19:11. d 4:17. 9:2. 10:3. 19:7. 34:5,17—19. 40:8. Gen. 18:25. Deut. 32:4. 2 Chr. 19:7. Ez. 18:25. 33:17,20. Dan. 9:14. Rom. 2:5. 3:4—6.
e 21:15,20. 34:10—12. 35:13. 40:2. Ps. 99:4. Rev. 15:3. 16:7.
f 1:5,18,19. 5:4. 18:16—19. Gen. 13:13. 19:13—25.
* Heb. in the hand of.
g 5:8. 11:13. 22:21—23. 2 Chr. 33:12,13. Is. 55:6,7. Matt. 7:7,8. Heb. 3:7,8. Jam. 4:7—10. h 1:8. 4:6,7. 11:14,15. 16:17. Ps. 25:8. Prov. 15:8. Is. 1:15—19. 1 Tim. 2:8. 1 John 3:19,22.
i Ps. 44:23. 59:4,5. Is. 51:9.
k 22:23—30. Is. 3:10.
l 42:12,13. Prov. 4:18. Zech. 4:10. Matt. 13:12,31,32.
m Deut. 8:16. Prov. 19:20. Zech. 14:7. 2 Pet. 2:20. n 12:12. 15:10,18. 32:6,7. Deut. 4:32. 32:7. Ps. 44:1. 78:3,4. Is. 38:19. Rom. 15:4. 1 Cor. 10:11.
o 7:6. Gen. 47:9. 1 Chr. 29:15. Ps. 39:5. 90:4. 102:11. 144:4.
† Heb. not.
p 12:7,8. 32:7. Deut. 6:7. 11:19. Ps. 145:4. Hab. 1:4. 12:1.
q Prov. 15:23. 18:15. Matt. 12:35.
r Is. 19:5—7.
s Ps. 129:6,7. Jer. 17:6. Jam. 1:10,11. 1 Pet. 1:24.

of the company, but the weakest rather, who covet to have all the talk. 1 Cor. 14: 30, 31. Eliphaz had undertaken to show, that, because Job was sorely afflicted, he was certainly a wicked man; Bildad is much of the same mind, and will conclude Job a wicked man, unless God do speedily appear for his relief. Here,

V. 1—7. I. Bildad reproves Job for what he had said; (v. 2.) checks his passion, but perhaps, (as is too common,) with greater passion. We thought Job spake a great deal of good sense, and much to the purpose, and that he had reason and right on his side; but Bildad, like an eager, angry disputant, turns it all off with this, How long wilt thou speak these things? taking it for granted Eliphaz had said enough to silence him, and that therefore all he said was impertinent. Thus (as Caryl observes) reproofs are often grounded on mistakes. Men's meaning is not taken aright, and then they are gravely rebuked, as if they were evil-doers.

II. He justifies God in what He had done. This he had no occasion to do at this time, for Job did not condemn God, as he would have it thought he did: and this he might have done, without reflecting on Job's children, as he does here. Could not he be an advocate for God, but he must be an accuser of his brethren?

1. He is right in general, that God doth not pervert judgment, nor ever go contrary to any settled rule of justice, v. 3. Far be it from Him that He should, and from us that we should suspect Him. He is God, the Judge; and shall not the Judge of all the earth do right? Men pervert justice, sometimes, for fear of others; but the Almighty stands in awe of none. Men have respect to the favor of others; but the All-sufficient cannot be benefited by the favor of any. It is man's weakness and impotency, that he often is unjust; it is God's omnipotence, that He cannot be so.

2. Yet he is not fair and candid in the application, v. 4. Job readily owned God did not pervert judgment; yet it did not therefore follow, either that his children were cast-aways, or that they died for some great transgression. It is true, we and our children have sinned against God, and we ought to justify Him in all He brings on us and ours; but extraordinary afflictions are not always the punishment of extraordinary sins, but sometimes the trial of extraordinary graces; and, in our judgment of another's case, (unless the contrary appears,) we ought to take the more favorable side, as our Savior directs, Luke 13: 2, 4. Here Bildad missed it.

III. He puts Job in hope, that, if indeed upright, as he said, he should yet see a good issue of his troubles, v. 5—7. This may be taken as designed, either,

1. To prove Job a hypocrite, and wicked man, though not by the greatness, yet by the continuance, of his afflictions; in which Bildad was not in the right; for a good man may be afflicted for his trial, not only very sorely, but very long, and yet, if for life, it is, in comparison with eternity, but for a moment. But, since Bildad put it to this issue, God was pleased to join issue with him, and proved his servant Job an honest man, by Bildad's own argument; for, soon after, He blessed his latter end more than his beginning. Or,

2. To direct and encourage Job, that he might not thus despair; yet there might be hope, if he would take the right course. I am apt to think, Bildad here intended to condemn Job, yet would be thought to counsel and comfort him. (1.) He gives him good counsel, yet perhaps not expecting he would take it; the same Eliphaz had given him, (ch. 5: 8.) to seek unto God, and that betimes, that is, speedily and seriously, and not to be dilatory and trifling in his return and repentance. He advises him not to complain, but to petition, and to make his supplication to the Almighty with humility and faith; and to see that there was (what he feared had hitherto been wanting) sincerity in his heart, and honesty in his house. Ps. 66: 18. It is only the prayer of the upright, that is the acceptable and prevailing prayer, Prov. 15: 8. (2.) He gives him good hopes, he should yet again see good days, secretly suspecting, however, he was not qualified to see them.

V. 8—19. Bildad here discourses well of the sad catastrophe of hypocrites and evil-doers, and the fatal period of all their hopes and joys. He will not be so bold as to say, with Eliphaz, that none that were righteous were ever cut off thus; (ch. 4: 7.) yet he takes it for granted, God, in the course of his providence, does ordinarily bring wicked men, who seemed pious, and were prosperous, to shame and ruin in this world; and that, by making their prosperity short, He discovers their piety to be counterfeit. Whether this will certainly prove, that all who are thus ruined must be concluded to have been hypocrites, he will not say, but rather suspects and thinks the application is easy.

I. He proves this truth, of the certain destruction of all the hopes and joys of hypocrites, by an appeal to antiquity, and the concurring sentiment and observation of all wise and good men. It is an undoubted truth, if we take in the other world. Blessed be God, now that we have the Word of God in writing, and are directed to search that, we need not inquire of the former age, nor prepare ourselves to the search of their fathers; for, though we ourselves are but of yesterday, the word of God in the Scripture is as nigh us as them; (Rom. 10: 8.) and it is the most sure word of prophecy, to which we must take heed. If we study and keep God's precepts, we may by them understand more than the ancients, Ps. 119: 99, 100. though we do not live so long as they of the former age, to make observations on the methods of Providence. Note, 1. For the right understanding of Divine Providence, and the difficulties of it, it will be of use to compare the observations and experiences of former ages with the events of our own day; and, in order thereunto, to consult history, especially the sacred history, which is the most ancient, infallibly true, and written designedly for our learning. 2. They that would fetch knowledge from the former ages, must search diligently, prepare for the search, and take pains in the search. 3. Those words are most likely to reach the hearts of learners, that come from the hearts of teachers, v. 10. They shall teach thee best, that utter words out of their heart, that speak by experience, and not by rote, of spiritual and divine things.

Patrick suggests, that Bildad has a particular respect to the rewards which the blessings of God secured to the posterity of faithful Abraham, his ancestor, who hitherto, and long after, continued in his religion; he refers also to the judicial extirpation of those eastern people, neighbors to Job, (in whose country they were settled,) for their wickedness: whence he infers, that it is God's usual way to prosper the just, and root out the wicked, though for awhile they flourish.

II. He illustrates this truth by similitudes. The hopes and joys of hypocrites are here compared,

1. To a rush or flag, v. 11—13. The hypocrite cannot gain his hope without some false, rotten ground or other, out of which to raise it, and with which to support it and keep it alive, any more than the rush can grow without mire, v. 11—15. He grounds it on his worldly prosperity, the plausible profession he makes of religion, the good opinion of his neighbors, and his own good conceit of himself, which are no solid foundation on which to build his confidence. It is all but

NOTES.

CHAP. VIII. V. 4—7. Perhaps Bildad intended to distinguish between the case of Job, and that of his children, in order to show there was yet hope for him, though not for them: but many think he designed to warn him, by the example of sudden vengeance thus set before him. (Notes, 1:5, 13, 18, 19. 4:7—11. 5:3—5.)—(Notes, 5:8—16. 22:21—30.) SCOTT.

(4.) For.] Heb. In the hand of, marg. 'In the very act or practice of.' GOOD.

Verses 8—10.

It has been observed, that Job and his friends actually possessed all that superiority of knowledge on every useful subject, especially on things relating to true religion, which has been groundlessly ascribed to the Egyptians, and others: and that they traced this knowledge back to the tradition of the fathers, or patriarchs; i. e. to traditional revelation. SCOTT.

Verses 11, 19.

It seems to have been Bildad's design, in this passage, to represent, in his greenness, and not cut down, it withereth before any other herb.

13 So are the paths of all [t] that forget God; and [u] the hypocrite's hope shall perish:

14 Whose hope shall be cut off, and whose trust shall be a spider's [*] web.

15 He shall lean upon his house, but [x] it shall not stand: he shall hold it fast, but it shall not endure.

16 He is [y] green before the sun, and [z] his branch shooteth forth in his garden.

17 His [a] roots are wrapped about the heap, and seeth the place of stones.

18 If [b] he destroy him from his place, then it shall deny him, saying, I have not seen thee.

19 Behold, [c] this is the joy of his way, and [d] out of the earth shall others grow.

20 Behold, [e] God will not cast away a perfect man, neither will he † help the evil doers:

21 Till [f] he fill thy mouth with laughing, and thy lips with ‡ rejoicing.

22 They that hate thee shall be [g] clothed with shame; and the dwelling place of the wicked shall § come to nought.

t Deut. 6:12. 8:11,14,19. Ps. 9:17. 10: 4. 50:22. Is. 51:13.

u 11:20. 13:16. 15:34. 20:5. 27:8—10. 36:13. Prov. 12:7. Is. 33:14. Lam. 3:18. Matt. 24:51. Luke 12: 1,2.

* Heb. house. Is. 59:5,6.

x 18:14. 27:18. Ps. 52:5—7. 112:10. Prov. 10:28. Matt. 7:24—27. Luke 6:47—49.

mire and water; and the hope that grows out of it, is but rush and flag. It may look green and gay for a while, (the rush out-grows the grass,) but it is light, and hollow, and empty, and good for nothing. It is green for show, but of no use. It withers presently, before any other herb, v. 12. even while in its greenness. The best state of hypocrites and evil-doers borders on withering; even when it is green, it is going. So are the paths of all that forget God, v. 13. Note, Forgetfulness of God is at the bottom of men's hypocrisy, and of the vain hopes they flatter and deceive themselves with in their hypocrisy. Men would not be hypocrites, if they did not forget that the God with whom they have to do searches the heart, and requires truth there; that He is a Spirit, and has his eye on our spirits. Hypocrites could have no hope, if they did not forget that God is righteous, and will not be mocked with the torn and the lame.

2. To a spider's web, or a spider's house, marg. a cob-web, v. 14, 15. The hope of the hypocrite is woven out of his own bowels, it is the creature of his own fancy, and arises merely from a conceit of his own merit and sufficiency. There is a great difference between the work of the bee and that of the spider; a diligent Christian, like the laborious bee, fetches in all his comfort from the heavenly dews of God's Word; but the hypocrite, like the subtle spider, weaves his out of a false hypothesis of his own, concerning God, as if He were altogether such a one as himself. He is very fond of it, as the spider of her web; pleases himself with it, wraps himself in it, calls it his house, leans upon it, and holds it fast. It is said of the spider, that she takes hold with her hands, and is in king's palaces, Prov. 30: 28. So does a carnal worldling hug himself in the fulness and firmness of his outward prosperity; he prides himself in that house as his palace, and fortifies himself in it as his castle, and makes use of it as the spider of her web, to insnare those he has a mind to prey upon. So does a formal professor; he flatters himself in his own eyes, doubts not of his salvation, is secure of heaven, and cheats the world with his vain confidences. But his hope will easily and certainly be swept away, as the cob-web with the besom, when God shall come to purge his house. Thus his hope will be cut off, his web, that refuge of lies, swept away, and he crushed in it.

3. To a flourishing and well-rooted tree. The secure and prosperous sinner may think himself wronged when compared to a rush and a flag, he thinks he has a better root; 'We will allow him his conceit,' (says Bildad,) 'give him all advantage, yet bring him in suddenly cut off.' See the tree fixed, and taking deep root, in a garden-soil, protected by a garden wall, never likely to be overthrown by stormy winds, for his roots are interwoven with the stones, v. 17. it grows in firm ground, not as the rush, in mire and water. But see this tree felled and forgotten notwithstanding; destroyed from his place, (v. 18.) and so entirely extirpated, that there shall remain no sign or token where it grew; the very place shall say, I have not seen thee; and the standers-by shall say the same, I sought him, but he could not be found, Ps. 37: 36. Mal. 4: 1. This is the joy, i. e. the end and conclusion, of the wicked man's way, (v. 19.) this is that which all his joy comes to—The way of the ungodly shall perish. But shall he not leave a family behind him to enjoy what he has? No, out of the earth, (not out of his roots,) shall others grow, that are nothing akin to him, and shall fill up his place, and rule over that for which he labored. Others, namely, of the same spirit and disposition, shall grow up in his place, and be quite as secure, not warned by his fall. The way of worldlings is their folly, yet there is a race of those that approve their sayings, Ps. 49: 13.

V. 20—22. Bildad here, in the close of his discourse, sums up what he had to say, in a few words, setting before Job life and death, the blessing and the curse; assuring him, that as he was, so he should fare, and therefore they might conclude, that as he fared, so he was.

1. On the one hand, if he were a perfect, upright man, God would not cast him away, v. 20. Though the sun of the righteous set under a cloud, yet it shall rise again clear, never more to be clouded. It is true, also, that the enemies of the saints will be clothed with shame, when they see them crowned with honor. But it does not therefore follow, that, if Job were not perfectly restored to his former prosperity, he forfeited the character of a perfect man.

2. On the other hand, if a wicked man, and an evil doer, God would not help him, but leave him to y 21:7—15. Ps. 37:35,36. 73:3—12.

z 5:3.

a 18:16. 29:19. Is. 5:24. 40:24. Jer. 12:1,2. Mark 11:20. Jude 12.

b 7:10. 20:9. Ps. 37:10,36. 73:18,19. 92:7.

c 20:5. Matt. 13:20,21.

d 1 Sam. 2:8. Ps. 75:7. 113:7. Ez. 17:24.

e 4:7. 9:22. Ps. 37:24,37.

† Heb. take the ungodly by the hand. Is. 45:1.

f Gen. 21:6. Ps. 126:2,6. Luke 6:21.

‡ Heb. shouting for joy. Ezra 3:11—13. Neh. 12:43. Ps. 32:11. 98:4. 100: 1. Is. 65:13,14.

g Ps. 35:26. 109:29. 132:18. 1 Pet. 5:5.

§ Heb. not be. 18. 7:21.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Even in religious controversies, it is common for men to treat each other with acrimony, and their opponents with contempt; to overlook what is evidently good; to make the worst of what is apparently faulty; and to charge horrible consequences on very inoffensive tenets.—There is a way, which some have, of bringing odium on the sentiments of those who oppose them, by attempting to show that they impute injustice, cruelty, or tyranny to the Almighty, which is calculated to shock every pious mind. Truth needs not, and error ought not, to be thus defended. We are not competent to judge in most cases, what it becomes the universal and everlasting Sovereign to do. We should believe assuredly that He is just, wise, and good, in those dispensations which exceed our comprehension; and wait for the 'day of the revelation of his righteous judgment' to the assembled world. Nay, even when doctrines may evidently be proved inconsistent with the divine perfections, as well as with Scripture, it becomes us to treat such subjects with great reverence, modesty, and caution. On every occasion, waving all topics foreign to the subject, we should exhort the afflicted to 'seek the LORD,' without delay, by earnest prayer; and we should encourage them with the prospect of returning comfort from his power and mercy.—We should, indeed, diligently inquire into the sentiments of wise men in other ages; but all human authority, whether of ancient fathers or modern reasoners, must be submitted to the decision of the sacred oracles. SCOTT.

---

by various similitudes, the apparent piety, and the fading prosperity, of the hypocrite; and to insinuate, that this was applicable to the case of Job. In general, the hypocrite's religion, and the ungodly man's prosperity, having no firm support, are precarious and of short duration: yet, as to this present world, every general rule admits of many exceptions; and the illustrations adduced were wholly inapplicable to the case of Job. SCOTT.

(11.) Rush.] Gama. 'The Egyptian flag papyrus.' [Note and cut, Ex. 2:3.] Dr. A. Clarke. 'The paper reed.' Good. Boothr. Sept. Flag.] Achu. 'A species of reed growing near the Nile.' Parkhurst. COND. COMM.

(17.) Wrapped.] 'A metaphor of a flourishing tree, the root firmly twined in the stones.' Dr. A. Clarke. 'With a bed of stones (a stony soil) shall he grapple, Utterly shall it drink him up from his place.' Good. Others, differently; but all unsatisfactorily. Perhaps it refers to encircling a tree with a heap (gal) of stones, to support the earth about it, or defend it, or to a mode of planting like ours, with stones about the roots, either large ones, at the surface of the soil, to shade the roots and steady the young tree; or small stones just below the surface, and above the roots, to let the moisture down upon them, and prevent its stay in the upper layer of the soil, to be evaporated: these stones also keep the soil open. Some trees, as the olive, grow best in a rocky soil. The phrase needs illustration. Rosenm. refers it to a prosperity soon checked; as a tree, that, penetrating through good earth in which it flourished, on extending its roots, for the greater nourishment its rapid growth requires, strikes upon a stony soil and starves quickly. ED.

Verses 20—22.

(1:1. John 1:47—51.) Bildad seems to have formed in his mind a fixed rule of Providence concerning this. Yet there was a fallacy in his reasoning, and that of his friends, arising from their not distinguishing between the present state of trial and discipline, and the future state of retributions. Hence they concluded, that Job denied the justice of God and the advantages of piety; because he maintained that, in this world, wicked men often prospered, and godly men were afflicted. SCOTT.

CHAP. IX.

Job acknowledges and celebrates God's justice, wisdom, power, and wonderful works, 1—13. He disclaims all attempts to justify himself, 14—21; but insists, that a man's innocency should not be judged of, by what befalls him in this world, 22—24. He alleges his sufferings, but will not presume to dispute with the Author of them, 25—35.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 I know it is so of a truth: but [a] how should man be just * with God?

3 If [b] he will contend with him, [c] he cannot answer him one of a thousand.

4 He is [d] wise in heart, and mighty in strength: [e] who hath hardened himself against him, and hath prospered?

5 Which [f] removeth the mountains, and they know not; [g] which overturneth them in his anger;

6 Which [h] shaketh the earth out of her place, and [i] the pillars thereof tremble;

7 Which [k] commandeth the sun, and it riseth not, and [l] sealeth up the stars;

8 Which [m] alone spreadeth out the heavens, and [n] treadeth upon the † waves of the sea:

9 Which [o] maketh ‡ Arcturus, Orion, and Pleiades, and [p] the chambers of the south;

10 Which doeth [q] great things past finding out; yea, and [r] wonders without number.

11 Lo, [s] he goeth by me, and I see him not: he passeth on also, but I perceive him not.

12 Behold [t] he taketh away, who can § hinder him? who will say unto him, [u] What doest thou?

13 If God will not withdraw his anger, [x] the ‖ proud helpers do stoop under him.

perish in his present distresses, v. 20, 22. Here, also, it is true God will not help the evil-doers; they throw themselves out of his protection, and forfeit his favor; He will not take the ungodly by the hand, (so the marg.) have fellowship and communion with them: lend them his hand to pull them out of the miseries, the eternal miseries, into which they have plunged themselves; they will then stretch out their hand to Him for help, but it is too late. Sin brings ruin on persons and families. Yet to argue, (as Bildad, I doubt, slily does,) that because Job's family was sunk, and he himself, at present, seemed helpless, therefore he certainly was an ungodly, wicked man, was neither just nor charitable, as long as there appeared no other evidence of his wickedness and ungodliness. Let us judge nothing before the time, but wait till the secrets of all hearts shall be made manifest; and the present difficulties of Providence be solved, to universal and everlasting satisfaction, when the mystery of God shall be finished.

CHAP. IX. V. 1—13. In this, and the following chapter, we have Job's answer to Bildad's discourse, wherein he speaks honorably of God, humbly of himself, and feelingly of his troubles; but not one word by way of reflection on his friends, or their unkindness to him, nor in direct reply to what Bildad had said. He wisely keeps to the merits of the cause, and makes no remarks on the person that managed it, nor seeks occasion against him. Job makes no answer to Bildad's rebuke to him for talking so much, though it had been easy to retort it on himself; but his principle, that God never perverts judgment, Job agrees to, v. 2. Note, We should not slight, much less resist, a truth, though produced by an adversary, and urged against us, but receive it in the light and love of it, though it have been misapplied. Some understand this as a passionate complaint of God's strictness and severity; and it cannot be denied there are in this ch. some peevish expressions, which seem to speak such language as that. But I take this rather as a pious confession of man's sinfulness, and his own in particular, that if God should deal with any of us according to the desert of our iniquities, we were certainly undone.

I. He lays this down for a truth, that man is an infinitely unequal match for his Maker, either in dispute or combat: yet wicked men harden themselves against God, dispute his wisdom, disobey his laws, are impenitent for their sins, and incorrigible under their afflictions; they reject the offers of his grace, and resist the strivings of his Spirit; they make nothing of his threatenings, and make head against his interest in the world; but they are only treasuring up for themselves wrath. They that roll this stone, will find it return on them.

II. The devil promised himself that Job, in the day of his affliction, would curse God, and speak ill of Him, but, instead of that, he sets himself to honor God, and to speak highly of Him As much pained as he is, and as much taken up with his own miseries, when he has occasion to mention the wisdom and power of God, he forgets his complaints, dwells with delight, and expatiates with a flood of eloquence, on that noble, useful subject.

Evidences of the wisdom and power of God he fetches,

1. From the kingdom of nature. (1.) It is sufficient to say, Job here speaks of what God can do, in the kingdom of nature; but if we must understand it of what He has done in fact, all these vs. may perhaps be applied to Noah's flood, when the mountains of the earth were shaken, and the sun and stars were darkened. The world that now is, we believe to be reserved for that fire which will consume the mountains, and melt the earth with its fervent heat, and which will turn the sun into darkness. As long as God pleases, He preserves the settled course and order of nature; and this is a continued creation. He Himself, alone, spreads out the heaven, v. 8. i. e. keeps them spread out; otherwise they would roll together like a scroll of parchment. He treads upon the waves of the sea; i. e. suppresses them and keeps them under, that they return not to deluge the earth; (Ps. 104:9.) which is given as a reason why we should all fear God, and stand in awe of Him, Jer. 5:22. Ps. 93:4.—65:7. He makes the constellations; three are named for all the rest, v. 9. i. e. not only those stars which we see and give names to, but those also in the other hemisphere, about the antarctic pole, which never come in our sight, called here the chambers of the south, are under the divine a 4:17. 14:3,4. 25:4. 32:2. 33:9. 34:5. 1 K. 8:46. Ps. 130:3. 143:2. Rom. 3:20.

---

* Or, before.
b 20,32,33. 10:2. 23:3—7. 31:35—37. 33:13. 34:14,15. 40:2. Is. 57:15,16. Rom. 9:20. c Ps. 19:12. 40:12. 1 John 1:8. 3:20.
d 19. 36:5. Ps. 104:24. 136:5. Dan. 2:20. 4:34—37. Rom. 11:33. Eph. 1:8,19. 3:10,20. Jude 24,25. e 8:10. 15:23—27. 40:9. Ex. 9:14—17. 14:17,18. Prov. 28:14. 29:1. Dan. 5:20—30. 1 Cor. 10:22.
f 28:9. Ps. 46:2. 68:8. 114:6. Is. 40:12. Hab. 3:6,10. Zech. 4:7. Matt. 21:21. 1 Cor. 13:2. Rev. 6:14. 11:13.
g Nah. 1:5,6. Zech. 14:4,5. Matt. 27:51. Luke 21:11. Rev. 16:18—20.
h Is. 2:19,21. 13:13,14. 24:1,19,20. Hag. 2:6,21. Heb. 12:26. Rev. 20:11.
i 26:11. 38:4—7. 1 Sam. 2:8. Ps. 75:3. 114:7. Jer. 4:24. Joel 2:10. k Ex. 10:21,22. Dan. 4:35. Am. 4:13. 8:9. Matt. 24:29.
l 37:7. 38:12—15,19,20. Is. 13:10. Ez. 32:7. Luke 21:25,26. m 37:18. Gen. 1:6,7. Ps. 33:6. 104:2,3. Is. 40:22. 42:5. 44:24. Jer. 10:11. Zech. 12:1. n 38:11. Ps. 93:3,4. Matt. 14:25—30. John 6:19.
† Heb. heights.
o 38:31,32. Gen. 1:16. Ps. 147:4. Am 5:8.
‡ Heb. Ash, Cecil, and Cimah.
p Ps. 104:3,13. Acts 28:13.
q 5:9. 26:12—14. 37:23. Ps. 71:15 72:18. Ec. 3:11. Is. 40:26—28. Rom. 11:33. Eph. 3:20.
r Ex. 15:11. Ps. 136:4. Dan. 4:2,3. s 23:8,9. 35:14. Ps. 77:19. 1 Tim. 6:16.
t 23:13. 54:29. Dan. 4:35. Eph. 1:11.
§ Heb. turn him away? 11:10.
u 33:13. Is. 45:9. Jer. 18:6. Matt. 11:26. 20:15. Rom. 9:18—20. 11:34.
x 26:12. 40:9—11. Is. 30:7. 31:2,3. Jam. 4:6,7.
‖ Heb. helpers of pride, or, strength.

NOTES.

CHAP. IX. V. 4—13. No allusion appears to be made, in this passage, to the miraculous displays of the divine power recorded in Scripture, except it be to the convulsions of the deluge.—'The chambers of the south,' may mean those stars, seen in the S. hemisphere, but not in the N. or those which only appear in the S. at certain seasons of the year. (38:31—41. Am. 5:7—9.) SCOTT.

(9.) Arcturus, Orion, Pleiades.] Ash, Kesyl, Kymah. Sept. pleiades, hesperos, arktouros: but in 38:31. they render Kymah by pleiades, Kesyl by orion, and Aysh by hesperos. Thus they had no exact ideas of the Heb. words. Vulg. Arcturus, Orion, Hyades. ASIL.] 'The constellation of "the Great bear." [And so Mich.] Niebuhr remarks, that not only the Sanaensian Jews, and those of Bagdad, but also the Arabs of the Persian Gulf, call the great bear asch.' ROSENM. Ash in Arabic means a bier, or sarcophagus, and the 4 stars in the 'bear' are resembled, by the Arabs, to a bier, and the 3 of the tail of the bear are figured as the children of the deceased following the funeral. Arcturus rises in the beginning of Sept. at which time the year commenced with all ancient nations. Bochart, Mich. Rosenm. KESYL.] The Heb. may denote the unsettled state of the weather, and the great changes which, in all climates, were supposed to attend this constellation. Hewlett. KYMAH, (the Pleiades, the 7 stars.) The Heb. is supposed to convey the idea of the genial heat which warms and ripens the fruits of the earth, and hence is rendered Pleiades. These constellations introduced autumn, winter, and spring, appearing then above the horizon. Gill, Hewlett, Cond. Comm. 'Homer mentions as famous, Pleiades, Hyades, Orion, and Arktos; and Virgil, Arcturus, Hyades, Triones and Orion.' Rosenm. Hales makes 'Chimah and Chesil, (Taurus and Scorpio) to be the cardinal constellations of spring and autumn, in Job's time. Their principal stars are Aldebaran, the bull's eye, and Antares, the scorpion's heart.' From their place he calculates the time of Job. 'The earth's equatorial diam. is 37 miles larger than its polar diam. or axis. As more matter is accumulated all round the equatorial parts of the earth than elsewhere, the sun and moon, when on either side of the equator, by attracting this redundant matter, which forms, as it were, a ring or belt round the earth, bring the equator sooner under them, in every return towards it, than if there was no such accumulation; and produce a retrogression of its intersections with the plane of the ecliptic (of 1° in 71½ yrs.) similar to, but much slower than, the retrogression of the moon's nodes. See Newton, and Hutton's Dict. From this "Precession of the Equinoxes," or shifting of the equinoctial points backwards, and with these all the signs of the ecliptic, it follows, that those stars, which, in the infancy of Grecian astronomy, were in Aries are now found in Taurus, in Gemini, &c. In consequence of which, the stars that rose or set at particular seasons of the year, in the times of Job, Hesiod, &c. no longer correspond to those particular seasons at present. The difference of ancient and modern longitudes, if known, will easily give the difference of times. [By this Hales thinks to confirm his calculations, that] Job lived B. C. 2337; or, 818 yrs. after the deluge; 184 years before the birth of Abraham; 474 yrs. before Jacob settled in Egypt; and 689 yrs. before the exodus.' Hales. See more, Introd. p. 11. vol. I. Chambers of the S.] 'As the stars of the S. hemisphere never appear to our sight, Job speaks of chaderey teman, penetralia Austri, (inmost recesses of the S.) as if those stars withdrew from sight, to their chambers or secret recesses.' ROSENM. ED.

14 [y] How much less [z] shall I answer him, and [a] choose out my words to reason with him?

15 Whom, [b] though I were righteous, yet would I not answer, but [c] I would make supplication to [d] my Judge.

16 If [e] I had called, and he had answered me; yet [f] would I not believe that he had hearkened unto my voice.

17 For [g] he breaketh me with a tempest, and [h] multiplieth my wounds [i] without cause.

18 He [k] will not suffer me to take my breath, but [l] filleth me with bitterness.

19 If I speak of strength, lo, [m] he is strong: and if of judgment, [n] who shall set me a time to plead?

20 If I [o] justify myself, [p] mine own mouth shall condemn me: if I say, [q] I am perfect, [r] it shall also prove me perverse.

21 Though I were perfect, yet [s] would I not know my soul: [t] I would despise my life.

22 This is one thing, therefore I said it, [u] He destroyeth the perfect and the wicked.

23 If [x] the scourge

y 4:19. 25:6. 1 K. 8:27.
z 11:4,5.
a 23:4,7. 33:5.
b 10:15. 1 Cor. 4:4.
c 5:8. 8:5. 10:2. 22:27. 34:31,32. 1 K. 8:38,39. 2 Chr. 33:13. Jer. 31:9. Dan. 9:3,18.
d 23:7. 1 Pet. 2:23.
e Ps. 18:6. 66:18—20. 116:1,2.
f 29:24. Ex. 6:9. Judg. 6:13. Ps. 126: 1. Luke 24:41. Acts 12:14—16. g 18:14. Ps. 29:5. 42:7. 83:15. Is. 28:17. Jer. 23:19. Ez. 13:13. Matt. 7:27. 12:20.
h 1:14—19. 2:7,13.
i 2:3. 16:17. 34:6. Ps. 25:3. John 9:3. 15:25. k 7:19. Ps. 39:13. 88:7,15—18. Lam. 3:3,8.
l 3:20. Lam. 3:15,19. Heb. 12:11. m See on 4—36:17—19. 40:9,10. Ps. 62:11. Matt. 6:13. 1 Cor. 1:25. 1:22.
n 32,33. 31:35. 33:5—7.
o 2. 4:17. 32:1,2. Ps. 130:3. 143:2. Luke 10:29. 16:15. p 15:5,6. 34:35. 35:16. Prov. 1:19. Is. 6:5. Matt. 12:36,37. Jam. 3:2.
q 1:1. Phil. 3:12—15.
r 33:3—13. Prov. 17:20. 1 Tim. 6:5. s Ps. 139:23,24. Prov. 28:26. Jer. 17: 9,10. 1 Cor. 4:4. 1 John 2:20.
t 7,15,16,21.
u Ec. 9:1,2. Ez. 21:3,4. Luke 13:2—4.
x 1.13—19. 2.7.

direction and dominion. How wise is He then, and how mighty!

2. Consider what God does in the kingdom of providence, that special providence which is conversant about the affairs of men; the government of the world; and you will say, He is wise in heart, and mighty in strength. Job here says v. 10. the same Eliphaz had said; (ch. 5: 9.) in the original, the very same words, not declining to speak after him, though now his antagonist.

3. He acts invisibly and undiscerned, (v. 11.) with an incontestable sovereignty, (v. 12.) and an irresistible power, v. 13. The operations of second causes [God's natural laws, as Doddridge calls them, Ed.] are commonly obvious to sense, but God doeth all about us, and yet we see Him not, Acts 17: 23. Our finite understandings cannot comprehend the measures He takes. We are incompetent judges of God's proceedings. Their meaning we know not now; it will be time enough to know hereafter; when it will appear, that what seemed now to be done by prerogative, was done in infinite wisdom, and for the best.

V. 14—21. What Job had said of man's utter inability to contend with God, he here applies to himself, and, in effect, despairs of gaining his favor; which (some think) arises from the hard thoughts he had of God, as One who, having set Himself against him, right or wrong, would be too hard for him. I rather think it arises from his sense of the imperfection of his own righteousness; and his dark and cloudy apprehensions, at present, of God's displeasure against him.

1. He dares not dispute with God, v. 14. If the potter make the clay into a vessel of dishonor, or break in pieces the vessel he has made, shall the clay or the broken vessel reason with him?

2. He dares not insist on his own justification before God. Though he vindicated his own integrity to his friends, and would not yield that he was a hypocrite and a wicked man, as they suggested, yet he would never plead it as his righteousness before God. I will never venture on the covenant of innocency, nor think to come off by virtue of that. He will, therefore, only make supplication to his Judge, i. e. cast himself on God's mercy. He had no reason to think there was any thing in his prayers to recommend them to the divine acceptance, or to fetch in an answer of peace; but it must be attributed purely to the grace and compassion of God, who answers before we call, and not because we call, and gives gracious answers to our prayers, but not for our prayers, v. 16. He did it purely for his own name's sake. Patrick expounds it; 'If I had made supplication, and He had granted my desire, I would not think my prayer had done the business.' Not for your sakes, be it known to you.

His present miseries, which God had brought him into, notwithstanding his integrity, gave him too sensible a conviction, that, in the ordering and disposing of men's outward condition in this world, God acts by sovereignty; and though He never doeth wrong to any, yet the best do not always fare best, nor the worst, worst, in this life, because He reserves the full and exact distribution of rewards and punishments for the future state. Job was not conscious of any extraordinary guilt, and yet fell under extraordinary afflictions, v. 17, 18. Every man must expect a cross daily, and to taste sometimes of the bitter cup; but poor Job's troubles came so thick upon him, that he had no breathing time; and he presumes to say, that all this was without cause, without any great provocation given. We have made the best of what Job said hitherto, though contrary to the judgment of many good interpreters; but here, no doubt, he spake unadvisedly; he reflected on God's goodness, in saying he was not suffered to take his breath, while yet he had such good use of his reason and speech to be able to talk thus; and on his justice, in saying that it was without cause. Yet it is true, that, as, on the one hand, there are many who are chargeable with more sin than the common infirmities of the human nature, and yet feel no more sorrow than that of the common calamities of human life; so, on the other hand, there are many who feel more than the common calamities of human life, and yet are conscious of no more than the common infirmities of human nature.

He was in no capacity at all to make his part good by arms, or arguments (v. 19.); and he knew so much of himself, he durst not stand a trial, v. 20, 21. A good man, who knows the deceitfulness of his own heart, and is jealous over it with a godly jealousy, and has often discovered that amiss there, which had long lain undiscovered, is suspicious of more evil in himself than he is really conscious of, and therefore will by no means think of justifying himself before God. If we say, 'We have no sin,' we not only deceive ourselves, but we affront God, for we sin in saying so, and give the lie to the Scripture, which has concluded all under sin. In short, it is folly to contend with God; and our wisdom, as well as duty, to submit to Him, and throw ourselves at his feet.

V. 22—24. Here Job touches briefly on the main point now in dispute between him and his friends. They maintained, that those who are righteous and good always prosper in this world, and none but the wicked are in misery and distress; he asserted, on the contrary, that it is a common thing for the wicked to prosper, and the righteous to be greatly afflicted: this is the one thing, the chief thing, wherein he and his friends differed; and they had not proved their assertion; therefore he abides by his; 'I said it, and say it again, that all things come alike to all.' * Now it must be owned,

1. That there is very much truth in what Job here means; that temporal judgments fall both on good and bad, and the destroying angel seldom distinguishes. In the judgment of Sodom, indeed, (called the vengeance of eternal fire, Jude 7:) far be it from God to slay the righteous with the wicked, and that the righteous should be as the wicked; but in judgments merely temporal, the righteous have their share, and sometimes the greatest share. The sword devours one as well as another, Josiah as well as Ahab. Thus God destroys the perfect and the wicked, involves them both in the same common ruin; good and bad were sent together into Babylon, Jer. 24: 5, 9. If the scourge slay suddenly, and sweep down all before it, God will be well pleased to see how the same scourge, which is the perdition of the wicked, is the trial of the innocent, and of their faith, which will be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, 1 Pet. 1: 7. Ps. 66: 10. To show their constant and their God-like mind, Not by afflictions broken, but refined. (Blackmore.) Let this reconcile God's children to their

* Here let it be again remarked, that there is impropriety, on the one hand, in denying a disciplining, special Providence, and supposing every thing to be left to take place according to natural laws, fixed by God, and this 'nature,' or these laws to be left to itself, or themselves; and, on the other hand, in superstitiously expecting a miraculous delivery from the influence of God's physical or organic laws, when a pious person chooses to neglect to discover, or attend to, such laws of his constitution. God is all in all, yet in mercy to us He has constituted us with faculties which can discover our relations to the universe; and as our every action, and our existence itself, depends on that conviction of reason, that 'like causes produce like effects,' God does not break his established order of our experience, lest our reason become useless, and we bewildered in ignorance, superstition, misery and despair. Miracles are the exception, but perhaps only to our finite experience and comprehension. Notes, Ex. 4: 11. Lev. 26: 1, 2.—&c. Ed.

Verses 14—21.

Job did not know his own soul, as his heart-searching Judge did: therefore he would despise his own life; and submit to any sentence, rather than contend with the Majesty of heaven. (1 Cor. 4:3—5.)—There is in this passage a great deal of truth, as well as sound reasoning, and honorable thoughts of God; yet there is also a considerable tincture of unbelief and despondency.—Some hope in the divine mercy seems implied; but that attribute is not mentioned, and Job was only just supported from sinking into despair. Those who know something of Satan's dark temptations, when the soul is filled with horrible thoughts of God, which tend to subvert the foundations of hope, will, from their own distressing experience, better understand Job's meaning, than from any unexperienced commentator. Had they at such times been urged to speak, their discourse would have contained a similar conflict between hard and honorable thoughts of God; between gloomy despondency and feeble hope; rebellious murmurs and a desire to submit, conscious that it was their duty so to do. (Jer. 20:10—18.)—Without cause. (17) Notes, 1—3. Ps. 25:2, 3. Scott.

(16.) If I called, &c.] '"Should I summon and He make answer?" The terms in this and the two preceding vs. are forensic, referring to processes at the gate or court of justice.' Good. Note, p. 662. vol. I. on Jewish judicial procedure. Ed.

Verses 22—24.

Job may be understood to speak figuratively of the scourge, as laughing at distinctions in the characters of the sufferers.—Who can maintain, that this is a state of exact retribution? (12:6—10. 21:7—slay suddenly, [y] he will laugh at the trial of the innocent.

24 The [z] earth is given into the hand of the wicked: [a] he covereth the faces of the judges thereof; [b] if not, where, and who is he?

25 ¶ Now my days are [c] swifter than a post: [d] they flee away, they see no good.

26 They are passed away as the * swift ships: [e] as the eagle that hasteth to the prey.

27 If I say, [f] I will forget my complaint, I will leave off my heaviness, and comfort myself;

28 I am [g] afraid of all my sorrows, [h] I know that thou wilt not hold me innocent.

29 If I [i] be wicked, why then labor I in vain?

30 If [k] I wash myself with snow-water, and make my hands never so clean;

31 Yet [l] shalt thou plunge me in the ditch, and [m] mine own clothes shall † abhor me.

32 For he is [n] not a man, as I am, that I should answer him, and y 4:7. 8:20. 2 Sam. 24:15,17. Ps. 44: 22. Ez. 14:19—21. 21:13. Heb. 11: 36,37.

z 12:6—10. 21:7—15. Ps. 17:14. 73: 3—7. Jer. 12:1,2. Dan. 4:17. 5:18—21. 7:7,&c. Hab. 1:14—17. a 2 Sam. 15:30. 19:4. Esth. 6:12. 7: 8. Jer. 14:4.
b 24:25. 32:2.
c 7:6,7. Esth. 8:14.
d Ps. 39:5,11. 89:47. 90:9,10. Jam. 4:14.
* Heb. ships of desire, or, ships of Ebeh.
e 39:27—30. 2 Sam. 1:23. Prov. 23:5. Jer. 4:13. Lam. 4:19. Hab. 1:8.
f 7:13. Ps. 77:2,3. Jer. 8:18.
g 21:6. Ps. 88:15,16. 119:120.
h 2,20,21. 14:16,17. Ex. 20:7. Ps. 130: 3.
i 22. 10:7,14—17. 21:16,17,27. 22:5, &c. Ps. 73:13. Jer. 2:35.
k Ps. 26:6. Prov. 28:13. Is. 1:16—18. Jer. 2:22. 4:14. Rom. 10:3. 1 John 1:8.
l 20. 15:6.
m Is. 59:6. 64:6. Phil. 3:8,9.
† Or, make me to be abhorred.
n 33:12. 35:5—7. Num. 23:19. 1 Sam. 16 7. Ec. 6:10. Is. 45:9. Jer. 49:19. Rom. 9:20. 1 John 3:20.

troubles; they are but trials, designed for their honor and benefit; and, if God be pleased with them, let not them be displeased; if He laugh at the trial of the innocent, knowing how glorious the issue of it will be, at destruction and famine let them also laugh, (ch. 5: 22.) and triumph over them, saying, O death, where is thy sting!

On the other hand, the wicked are so far from being made the marks of God's judgments, that the earth is given into their hand, v. 24. in the original, it is singular; the devil, that wicked one, is called the god of this world, and boasts that into his hands it is delivered, Luke 4: 6. Or, into the hand of a wicked man, meaning (so Patrick and the Assemb. Ann.) some noted tyrant then living in those parts, whose great wickedness and great prosperity were well known both to Job and his friends. [See notes, end of Gen. and Ezra, the phrases of the Egyptian monuments, and cuts, Gen. 47: 1, &c. and note, * p. 747, vol. 1.] The wicked have the earth given them, but the righteous have heaven given them. God, in his providence, advances wicked men, while He covers the faces of those who are fit to be judges, wise, good, and qualified for government, and buries them alive in obscurity; perhaps suffers them to be run down, condemned, and their faces covered as criminals, by those wicked ones into whose hand the earth is given. We daily see this is done; if it be not God that doeth it, where and who is he that doeth it? To whom can it be ascribed but to Him that rules in the kingdoms of men, and gives them to whom He will? Dan. 4: 32.

2. Yet there is too much passion here. The manner of expression is peevish: when he meant that God afflicts, he ought not to have said, He destroys both the perfect and the wicked: when he meant that God pleases Himself with the trial of the innocent, he ought not to have said, He laughs at it, for He doth not afflict willingly. When the spirit is heated, either with dispute or with discontent, we have need to set a watch before the door of our lips, that we may observe decorum in speaking of divine things.

V. 25—35. Job here grows more and more querulous; and they that indulge a complaining humor, know not to what indecencies, nay, to what impieties, it will hurry them. When in trouble, we are allowed to complain to God, as the Psalmist, often, but must by no means complain of God, as Job here.

I. His complaint here of the passing away of the days of his prosperity is proper, v. 25, 26. See here, 1. The swift motion of time, it stays for no man. What little need have we of pastimes, * and what great need to redeem time, when time runs out, runs on so fast towards eternity, which comes as the time goes! 2. How vain the enjoyments of time, which we may be quite deprived of while yet time continues! Our days may be longer than the sun-shine of our prosperity; and when that is gone, it is as if it had not been. The remembrance of having done our duty will be pleasing afterward; so will not the remembrance of our having got great worldly wealth, when it is all lost and gone. They flee away, past recall; they see no good, and leave none behind them.

* Except to recreate us for renewed activity in duty. Ed.

II. His complaint of his present uneasiness is excusable, v. 27, 28. 1. It should seem, he did his endeavor to quiet and compose himself, as his friends advised him. But, 2. He found he could not do it. It is easier, in such a case, to know what we should do than to do it; to know what temper we should be in than to get into that temper, and keep in it. It is easy to preach patience to those that are in trouble, and to tell them they must forget their complaints, and comfort themselves; but it is not so soon done as said. Fear and sorrow are tyrannizing things, not easily brought into the subjection they ought to be kept in to religion and right reason.

III. But his complaint of God, as implacable and inexorable, was by no means to be excused. It was the language of his corruption. He knew better; and, at another time, would have been far from harboring any such hard thoughts of God. Good men do not always speak like themselves; but God considers their frame, and the strength of their temptations; gives them leave afterward to unsay it by repentance, and will not lay it to their charge. Job seems to speak here,

1. As if he despaired of obtaining from God any relief or redress of his grievances, though he should produce ever so good proofs of his integrity. 'I know Thou wilt not hold me innocent; why then do I labor in vain to clear myself, and maintain my own integrity?' v. 29. It is to no purpose to speak in a cause that is already pre-judged. The most innocent in such a case must be adjudged guilty, though the evidence be ever so plain for them: but it is not so in our dealings with God, who is the Patron of oppressed innocency, and to whom it was never in vain to commit a righteous cause.

Nay, he not only despairs of relief, but expects that his endeavor to clear himself would render him yet more obnoxious, v. 30, 31. He saw his afflictions coming from God; those were the things that blackened him in the eye of his friends, and, on that score, he complained of them, and of the continuance of them, as the ruin, not only of his comfort, but of his reputation. Yet these words are capable of a good construction. If we be ever so industrious to justify ourselves before men, and to preserve our credit with them, if we keep our hands ever so clean from the pollutions of gross sin, which fall under the eye of the world; yet God, who knows our hearts, can charge us with so much secret sin as will for ever take off all our pretensions to purity and innocency, and make us see ourselves odious in the sight of the holy God. Paul, while a Pharisee, made his hands very clean; but when the commandment came, and discovered to him his heart-sins, made him know lust, that plunged him in the ditch.

2. As if he despaired of so much as a fair hearing with God. (1.) He complains he was not on even terms with God, v. 32. The consideration of this should keep us very low, and very silent, before God. Let us always eye Him as infinitely above us. (2.) There was no arbitrator or umpire between him and God, v. 33. This complaint that there was not, is, in effect, a wish that there were, and so the LXX read it; O that there were a mediator between us! Job would gladly refer the matter, but no creature was capable of

---

22. Ps. 17:13—15. 73:1—14. Jer. 12:1—4. Mal. 3:13—18.) SCOTT.

(24.) Covereth the face, &c.] 'Gives up to judicial blindness. Is. 29·10. Gill. Scott. The "judges" being here in contrast with the wicked, i. e. a tyrannical ruler, must mean good governors, who administer justice impartially. Of these good rulers, he says, God "covereth their faces," i. e. treats them as condemned malefactors, overwhelming them in calamities, disgrace, and ruin; Job himself being one example. (See 2 Sam. 15:30. Esth. 7:8. Jer. 14:3. Is. 22:17. Mic. 3:7. Mark 14:65.) Mr. Scott.' COND. COMM.

Verses 25—35.

Here Job again renewed his complaints, with the same incoherency and conflict of contending passions as before. He regarded his life, as having suddenly come to a wretched end. All his efforts to rise superior to the tumult of his passions were unavailing. If indeed he were a wicked man, it would be labor in vain to vindicate his character: for when he had done all in his power for that purpose, God would detect his secret iniquities; and thus thrust him as it were into the mire, till his very garments rendered him abhorred. Nay, though he were not a wicked man, yet the discovery of all his former sins, and of the defects of his present obedience, would show him to be 'as an unclean thing, and his righteousness as filthy rags.' (Is. 64:6—8.) SCOTT.

(26.) Swift ships.] '"Ships of desire," that are earnestly looked for and crowd all sail for their destined port. Peters. "Pirate ships," or, "ships of enmity" which are not loaded, and so move swiftly Broughton. [The ancient ships of war had their bows armed with a spear-shaped cut-water, as it were, and endeavored by hard rowing to bear down swiftly upon the opposing ship, strike through its planks, and thus cause it to sink, or bear it under by superior weight. Piracy from the earliest ages, was common to the Mediterranean, and the Persian and Arabic Gulfs, as it is now.] "Ships of Ebeh," a river in Arabia, whose rapid streams hurried the ships along. Pag. Mont. Vat. "Ships of reeds," which being light are very swift. So Mich Schultens, Parkh. Mr. Scott, Stock. "Ships with spread sails;" ships of papyrus may, however, be meant. Good. 'Inflated ships." Dr. A. Clarke.' COND. COMM. The proas of Polynesia are rowed with exceeding swiftness; and the Indians of Lake Superior will out-paddle a steamboat, in their canoes. The present light and very swift Turkish or Greek caïques, are still built on the model seen in some of the oldest monuments of the world. All these illustrations confirm the rendering of our version, 'swift ships.' ED.

(33,34.) Day's-man.] Beyneyno mokiach. 'A reprover, arguer, or umpire.' Dr. A. CLARKE. [Comp. note, v. 16. and p. 662. vol. 1. on Jewish [o] we should come together in judgment.

33 Neither [p] is there any * day's-man betwixt us, that [q] might lay his hand upon us both.

34 Let him take his rod away from me, and [r] let not his fear terrify me:

35 Then would I speak, and not fear him; † but it is not so with me.

CHAP. X.

Job entreats God to show on what account he contended with him; and pleads for compassion as from his Creator, 1—13. He states that his sins were strictly marked and rigorously punished, 14—17. He repines, that he had ever been born, or had not died immediately after; and craves respite from pain to prepare for death, 18—22.

MY [s] soul ‡ is weary of my life; [b] I will leave my complaint upon myself; [c] I will speak in the bitterness of my soul.

2 I will say unto God, [d] Do not condemn me: show me wherefore thou contendest with me.

3 Is it [f] good unto thee that thou shouldest

13:18—23. 23:3—7. Ps. 143:2. p 19. 1 Sam. 2:25. 1 John 2:1,2.
* Heb. one that should argue, or, umpire.
q 1 K. 3:16, &c.
r 13:11,20—22. 23:15. 31:23. 33:7. 37:1. Ps. 39:10. 90:11.
† Heb. but I am not so with myself. 29:2, &c. s 3:20—23. 6:8,9. 7:15,16,20. 9:21. 14:13. Num. 11:15. 1 K. 19:4. Jon. 4:3,8.
‡ Or, cut off while I live.
b 7:11. 19:4. 21:2—4.
c 15,16. 6:2—4,26. 7:11. 16:6—16. Ps. 32:3—5. Is. 38:15,17.
d Ps. 6:1—4. 25:7. 38:1—8. 109:21. 143:2.
e 8:5,6. 34:31,32. Ps. 139:23,24. Lam. 3:40—42. 1 Cor. 11:31,32.
f 34:5—7,18,19. 35:7—9,17,18. 40:2,8. Lam. 3:2—18.

being a referee, therefore he must even refer it still to God Himself, and resolve to acquiesce in his judgment. Our Lord Jesus is the blessed Days-man, who has mediated between Heaven and earth, has laid his hand on us both; to Him the Father has committed all judgment, and we must: but this matter was not then brought to so clear a light as it is now by the Gospel, which leaves no room for such a complaint as this. (3.) The terrors of God, which set themselves in array against him, put him into such confusion, that he knew not how to address himself to God with the confidence he was formerly wont to approach Him with, v. 34, 35. He means, not so much his outward afflictions, as the load which lay on his spirit from the apprehensions of God's wrath.

From all this let us take occasion, 1. To stand in awe of God, and to fear the power of his wrath. If good men have been put into such consternation by it, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear? 2. To pity those that are wounded in spirit, and pray earnestly for them, because in that condition they know not how to pray for themselves. 3. Carefully to keep up good thoughts of God in our minds, for hard thoughts of Him are the inlets of much mischief. 4. To bless God we are not in such a disconsolate condition as poor Job was here in, but that we walk in the light of the Lord; let us rejoice therein, but with trembling.

CHAP. X. V. 1—7. Job owns here, that he was full of confusion; (5: 15.) and as he was, so was his discourse: he knew not what to say, and sometimes, perhaps, scarcely what he said. Here is,

I. A passionate resolution to persist in his complaint, v. 1. Being daunted with the dread of God's majesty, so that he could not plead his cause with Him, he resolves to give himself some ease by giving vent to his feelings. Through the weakness of grace, he went contrary to the dictates even of nature itself. We should act more like men, did we act more like saints: faith and patience would keep us from being weary of our lives, (and cruel to them, as some read it,) even then when Providence has made them most wearisome to us; for that is to be weary of God's correction. Job, being weary of his life, and having ease no other way, resolves to complain. Job's corruption speaks here, yet grace puts in a word: 1. He will complain, but he will leave his complaint on himself: he would not impeach God; and though he knew not particularly the ground of God's controversy with him, and the cause of action, yet, in the general, he would suppose it to be in himself, and willingly bear all the blame. 2. He will speak, but it shall be the bitterness of his soul, not his settled judgment. If I speak amiss, it is not I, but sin that dwells in me, not my soul, but its bitterness.

II. A humble petition to God. He will speak, but the first word shall be a prayer, and, as I am willing to understand it, a good prayer, v. 2. 1: That he might be delivered from the sting of his afflictions, which is sin. It is the comfort of those who are in Christ Jesus, that, though afflicted, they are not condemned; nay, they are chastened of the Lord, that they may not be condemned with the world. This, therefore, we should deprecate above any thing, when in affliction. 2. That he might be made acquainted with the true cause of his afflictions, and that is sin too; Lord, show me wherefore Thou contendest with me. When God afflicts us, He contends with us; when He contends with us, there is always a reason. He is never angry without a cause, though we are; and it is desirable to know what the reason is, that we may repent of, mortify, and forsake, the sin for which God has a controversy with us: in inquiring it out, let conscience do its office, and deal faithfully with us, as Gen. 42: 21.

III. A peevish expostulation with God. Now he speaks in the bitterness of his soul indeed, not without some ill-natured reflections on the righteousness of his God.

1. He thinks it unbecoming the goodness of God, and the mercifulness of his nature, to deal so hardly with his creature, as to lay on him more than he can bear, v. 3. No, certainly not; what He approves not in men, (Lam. 3: 34—36.) He will not do Himself. 'Lord, what is the meaning of this? Such is thy nature, this cannot be a pleasure to Thee; and such thy name, it cannot be an honor to Thee; why then dealest Thou thus with me? What profit is there in my blood?' Far be it from Job to think God did him wrong, but he is quite at a loss how to reconcile his providences with his justice, as good men have often been, and must wait until the day shall declare it. Let us, therefore, now harbor no hard thoughts of God, because we shall then see there was no cause for them.

2. He thinks it unbecoming the infinite knowledge of God, to put a prisoner thus on the rack, as it were, by torture, to extort a confession from him, v. 4—6. (1.) He is sure God does not discover things, nor judge of them, as men do; He has not eyes of flesh, (v. 4.) for He is a Spirit. Nor is He short-sighted, like man, so He is not short-lived, v. 5. 'Are thy days as the days of man, few and evil?' Men grow wiser by experience, and more knowing by daily observation; but it is not so with God. (2.) He therefore thinks

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The justice, wisdom, truth, and goodness of God, must be taken for granted, whatever sentiments we defend or oppose.—But how can those, who despise the favor and defy the vengeance of the Almighty, expect to prosper, or to escape final misery? Yet they are no less infatuated, who proudly attempt to justify themselves before that God, who possesses infinite purity and justice, and who knows us far better than we know ourselves.—We should be very careful not to be offended, either by the tribulations with which we meet, or the prosperity of the wicked: they have their short-lived pleasures, we our transient sorrows.—When, through Satan's influence on the mind, the Lord appears as an enemy; when his power and justice are more distinguishable than his mercy; and when a sense of his displeasure, and slavish fears of condemnation preponderate; the soul, even of a believer, is filled with inexpressible confusion, and verges to melancholy and despair. We may be thankful, if we have not known these waves and billows of dire temptations; yet, [if we have not,] we shall scarcely know how to sympathize with those that are conflicting with them, or to make proper allowances for them. But, poor tempest-tossed soul, consider Job, and notice that others have passed this dreadful gulf before thee: and though they could not believe that God would hear or deliver them any more; yet He rebuked the storm, and brought them to the desired haven. And look to Jesus, who, though free from sin, once 'suffered being tempted, that He might be able to succor those who are tempted.' 'Resist then the devil, steadfast in the faith;' give not place to hard thoughts of God, or desperate conclusions about thyself; repress as much as possible every passionate wish or expression, which arises in thy mind. Come to Him, who invites 'the weary and heavy laden;' and has promised 'in nowise to cast out those who come,' but 'to give rest to their souls:' plead guilty; cast thyself on unmerited mercy, as if this were thy first approach to a forgiving God, without deciding any thing about thy former experience or character: acknowledge that thy sufferings are less than thy sins have deserved: cry for repentance, for faith, for patience, for inward support; and wait thus at mercy's gate. There can indeed be no superior, who as umpire, can lay his hand on both parties: yet remember that there is an appointed Mediator, 'an Advocate with the Father,' who 'is able to save to the uttermost all who come to God by Him; seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them.' SCOTT.

---

judicial procedure.] Lay his hand.] 'His control.' Rod.] Shebet. Supremacy.' GOOD. 'Job might mean the appalling sight of God's majesty on his judgment seat.' Dr. A. Clarke. See notes, as above. ED.

NOTES.

CHAP. X. V. 1, 2. The vehemence of Job's passions, excited by his exquisite sufferings, here again broke through his better purposes; perhaps, 'his soul being weary of life,' he wished to bring some sudden judgment on himself, which might at once end his days. SCOTT.

Verse 3.

It may be supposed, Job was at a loss, what to think of the divine dispensations towards him. He could not conceive God would oppress his creatures, by punishing them without cause; yet he was not able to understand, how these things could consist with the goodness and mercy of God; and he supposed, that his remarkable afflictions would tend to encourage the counsels and practices of wicked men, who often argue that there is no advantage in religion, and therefore seek [the shallow] happiness of an ungodly life. (21:7—16.) SCOTT.

oppress, that thou shouldest [g] despise [h] the * work of thine hands, and [i] shine upon the counsel of the wicked?

4 Hast thou eyes of flesh? or [k] seest thou as man seeth?

5 Are [l] thy days as the days of man? are thy years as man's days,

6 That [m] thou inquirest after mine iniquity, and searchest after my sin?

7 † Thou [n] knowest that I am not wicked; [o] and there is none that can deliver out of thine hand.

8 Thine [p] hands ‡ have made me and fashioned me together round about: [q] yet thou dost destroy me.

9 [r] Remember, I beseech thee, that [s] thou hast made me as the clay; and wilt thou bring me [t] into dust again?

10 Hast thou not [u] poured me out as milk, and curdled me like cheese?

11 Thou hast [x] clothed me with skin and flesh, and hast § fenced me with bones and sinews.

12 Thou hast granted me [y] life and favor, and thy visitation hath preserved my spirit.

13 And these things hast thou [z] hid in thine heart: [*] I know that this is with thee.

14 If I sin, [b] then thou markest me, and [c] thou wilt not acquit me from mine iniquity.

15 If [d] I be wicked, wo unto me; and [e] if I be righteous, yet will I not lift up my head. [f] I am full of confusion; therefore [g] see thou mine affliction;

16 For it increaseth: [h] thou huntest me as a fierce lion; and again thou showest thyself [i] marvellous upon me.

17 Thou renewest thy ‖ witnesses against me, and increasest thy indignation upon me; [k] changes and [l] war are against me.

it strange, God should thus prolong his torture, neither bring him to a trial, nor grant him a release: as if He must take time to inquire after his iniquity, and use means to search after his sin, v. 6. Not as if Job thought God did thus torment him, to find occasion against him; but his dealings with him had such an aspect, which was dishonorable to God, and would tempt men to think Him a hard master. 'Now, Lord, if Thou wilt not consult my comfort, consult thine own honor; do something for thy great name, and do not disgrace the throne of thy glory,' Jer. 14: 21.

3. He thinks it looked like an abuse of his omnipotence, to keep a poor prisoner in custody, whom He knew to be innocent, only because there was none that could deliver him out of his hand, v. 7. Thou knowest that I am not wicked. He had already owned himself a sinner, and guilty before God, but he here stands to it, that he was not wicked, not devoted to sin, not an enemy to God, not a dissembler in his religion, that he had not wickedly departed from his God, Ps. 18: 21. Here see, (1.) What ought to quiet us under our troubles; that it is to no purpose to contend with Omnipotence. (2.) What will abundantly comfort us, if we are able to appeal to God, as Job here, 'Lord, thou knowest that I am not wicked. I cannot say I am not wanting, or weak; but, through grace, I can say, I am not wicked: thou knowest I am not, for Thou knowest I love Thee.'

V. 8—13. In these vs. we may observe,

1. How Job eyes God as his Creator and Preserver, and describes his dependence on Him as the Author and Upholder of his being. This is one of the first things we are all concerned to know and consider:

(1.) That God made us: He, and not our parents, who were only the instruments of his power and providence in our production, v. 8. The soul also, which animates the body, is his gift. He notices both here. [1.] The body is made as the clay, v. 9. according to the skill and will of the potter. We must not be proud of our bodies, because the matter is from the earth, yet not dishonor our bodies, because the mould and shape are from the Divine Wisdom. The formation of human bodies in the womb is described by an elegant similitude, v. 10. The admirable structure of human bodies is an illustrious instance of the wisdom, power, and goodness, of the Creator. [See the 'Bridgewater Treatises.'] What pity is it, that these bodies should be instruments of unrighteousness, which are capable of being temples of the Holy Ghost! [2.] The soul is the life, the man, the gift of God; Thou hast granted me life. The Father of spirits made us living souls, and endued us with reason; gave us life, a great favor. Now Job was in a better mind than when he quarrelled with life as a burden, asking, Why died I not from the womb? Or, by life and favor, may be meant life and all its comforts.

(2.) That God maintains us in being. 'Thy visitation has preserved my spirit, kept me alive, [continued and upheld the laws of my being,] and blessed me with all the necessary supports of life, and the daily supplies it needs and craves.'

2. He pleads this with God, v. 9. Remember, Thou hast made me. 'Therefore Thou hast a perfect knowledge of me, (Ps. 139: 1—13.) needest not to examine me by scourging, nor put me on the rack to discover what is in me.' 'Thou hast made me, as the clay, by an act of sovereignty; and wilt Thou, by a like act of sovereignty, unmake me again?' It is a plea the saints have often used in prayer, Isa. 64: 8. Ps. 119: 73. So here, v. 8, 9. If we plead this with ourselves as an inducement to duty, we may plead it with God as an argument for mercy, Thou hast made me, new make me; I am thine, save me. Job knew not how to reconcile God's former favors and his present frowns, but concludes, (v. 13.) 'both are according to the counsel of his own will, and, therefore, undoubtedly consistent, however they seem.' When God thus strangely changes his way, it is not with us, or in our reach, to assign the cause, but I know that this is with Thee.

V. 14—22. I. Here are Job's passionate complaints, in which, though he cannot be justified, he may be excused. If we think it looks ill in him, let it be a warning to us to keep our temper better.

1. He complains, that God took all advantages against him; (v. 14.) 'If I do but take one false step, misplace a word, or cast a look awry, I shall be sure to hear of it.' If God should thus mark iniquities, we are undone; but He does not, though we sin, God does not deal in extremity with us; nor as Job asserts, prosecute those advantages to the utmost; 'Thou wilt not acquit me.' 'If I be wicked, wo to me; though prosperous, and living in pleasure, yet wo to me.' Some especially have reason to dread double woes if wicked; 'I that have knowledge, have made a great profession of religion, been so often under strong convictions, and made so many fair promises; I that was born of such good parents, blessed with a good education, have lived in good families, and long enjoyed the means of grace, If I be wicked, a thousand woes to me.' If he be righteous, yet he dares not lift up his head; dares not answer as before, ch. 9: 15. he is full of confusion: almost distracted, Ps. 88: 15.

2. He complains, that God did not only punish him for every failure, but in a high degree, v. 16, 17. His affliction was, (1.) Grievous, very grievous, marvellous, exceeding marvellous. God was not only strange to him, but showed Himself marvellous upon him, by bringing him into uncommon troubles, and so making him a prodigy, a wonder unto many. What made his afflictions most griev-

---

g Ps. 69:33.
h 14:15. 34:19. Ps. 138:8. Is. 64:8. 1 Pet. 4:19.
* Heb. labor.
i 8:20. Jer. 12:1—3. k 9:32. 1 Sam. 16:7. Luke 16:15. Rev. 1:14.
l Ps. 90:2—4. 102:12,24—27. Heb. 1:12. 2 Pet. 3:8.
m 14—17. Ps. 44:21. Jer. 2:34. Zeph. 1:12. 1 Cor. 4:5.
† Heb. It is upon thy knowledge.
n 23:10. 31:6,14,35. 42:7. Ps. 1:6. 7: 3,8,9. 17:3. 26:1—5. 139:1,2,21—24. John 21:17. 2 Cor. 1:12. 1 Thes. 2:10.
o 23:13,14. Deut. 32:39. Ps. 50:22. Dan. 3:15. Hos. 2:10. John 10:28—30. p Ps. 119:73. Is. 43:7.
‡ Heb. took pains about me.
q 3. Gen. 6:6,7. Jer. 18:3—10.
r 7:7. Ps. 25:6,7,18. 89:47. 106:4.
s Gen. 2:7. 3:19. Is. 45:9. 64:8.
t 17:14. Ps. 22:15. 90:3. Ec. 12:7.
u Ps. 139:14—16.
x 2 Cor. 5:2,3.
§ Heb. hedged. 40:17,18. Ez. 37:4—8. Eph. 4:16.
y Gen. 19:19. Matt. 6:25. Acts 17:25, 28. z 23:9. Ec. 8:6,7. Is. 45:15. Rom. 11: 33.
a 23:13. Deut. 32:39. Is. 45:7. 46:9—11. Lam. 3:37. Eph. 3:11. b 13:26,27. 14:16,17. Ps. 130:3. 139:1.
c 7:21. Ex. 34:7. Num. 14:18.
d 7. 9:29. 27:7. Ps. 9:17. Is. 3:11. Mal. 3:18. Rom. 2:8,9.
e 9:15,20,21. Is. 64:5,6. Luke 17:10.
f 21:6. 23:15.
g Ex. 3:7. Ps. 25:18. 119:153. Lam. 1:20. 5:1,&c. h Is. 38:13. Lam. 3:10. Hos. 13:7,8. Am. 3:8.
i Num. 16:29,30. Deut. 28:59.
‖ That is, plagues. 16:8. Ruth 1:21. k Ps. 55:19. Jer. 48:11. Zeph. 1:12.
l 15:11—16. 19:6—11.

Verses 8—13.

In these vs. Job expostulates with God, as if He had created him only for misery. SCOTT.

(10.) 'Roberts gives an entirely new view of this text; he observes, that the Hindoos pour milk on their heads after performing funeral obsequies, and that, in allusion to this, if a father rejects a profligate son, he says, "I have poured milk on my head, I have done with him." This may, then, strongly and simply signify, "hast thou not finally abandoned me?" Commentators had far better have suppressed their censurable remarks on this passage, of which Roberts seems to have the most natural meaning, than to have printed them, even wrapped up in Latin. With respect to the allusion to curdled cheese, [note, 1 Sam. 17: 18.] he informs us, this is also used on funeral occasions.' COND. COMM.

Verses 14—17.

The gloom, unbelief, and hard thoughts of God, which are here discernible, ought to be ascribed as much to Satan's temptations, and Job's inward anguish of soul, as to his outward trials and remaining depravity.—The words rendered, 'I am full of confusion,' (15) may be translated, 'Oh, be satisfied with my confusion,' or 'disgrace.' SCOTT.

(16, 17.) Thou hurtest, &c.] 'For, up-rousing, as a ravenous lion, dost Thou spring upon me.' Good. Lions were used by the Egyptians to hunt with. See the sculptures on their monuments. Note, 41:7. Good thinks v. 17. an allusion to the chase of wild beasts, the hunters enclosing them in a ring, and attacking them with spears, javelins, and arrows, and thinks the word for 'witnesses' may be rendered 'weapons.' ED.

18 Wherefore then [m] hast thou brought me forth out of the womb? Oh, that I had [n] given up the ghost, and no eye had seen me!

19 I should have been [o] as though I had not been; I should have been carried from the womb to the grave.

20 Are not [p] my days few? [q] cease then, and let me alone, that I may take comfort a little,

21 Before [r] I go whence I shall not return, even to [s] the land of darkness and [t] the shadow of death;

22 A land of darkness, as darkness itself; and of the shadow of death, without any order, and where the light is as darkness.

CHAP. XI.

Zophar sharply rebukes Job for justifying himself, and earnestly desires that God would answer him, 1—6. He shows that God is unsearchable, and man ignorant and presumptuous, 7—12. He reminds Job that repentance is the only way of recovering comfort and prosperity, 13—20.

THEN answered [a] Zophar the Naamathite, and said,

2 Should not [b] the multitude of words be answered? and should a man * full of talk be justified?

3 Should [c] thy † lies make men hold their peace? and, when thou m 3:10,11. Jer. 15:10. 20:14—18. Matt. 26:24.

n 11:20. 14:10.
o Ps. 88:8.
p 7:6,7,16. 8:9. 9:25,26. 14:1. Ps. 39:5. 103:15,16.
q 7:17—21. 13:21. Ps. 39:13.
r 7:8—10. 14:10—14. 2 Sam. 12:23. 14:14. Is. 38:11.
s 3:5. Ps. 88:6,11,12.
t See on 3:5.—Ps. 23:4. Jer. 2:6.
a See on 2:11. 20:1.
b 16:3. 18:2. Ps. 140:11. Prov. 10: 19. Acts 17:18. Jam. 1:19.
* Heb. of lips.
c 13:4. 15:2,3. 24:25.
† Or, devices.

ous, was, he felt God's indignation in them. They were God's witnesses against him, tokens of his displeasure. (2.) It was growing still worse and worse. This he insists much on. As long as we are in this world, we must expect that perhaps the sorest and sharpest trials may be reserved for the last. God usually shows Himself kind to his people; if at any time otherwise, it is his strange work, and in it He shows Himself marvellous.

3. He complains, that ever he was born to all this misery, v. 18, 19. 'We may charitably suppose,' (says Mr. Caryl,) 'that what troubled Job was, he was in a condition which (as he conceived) hindered the main end of life, to glorify God. He was quite out of tune for praising God. Nay, he feared lest his troubles should give occasion to his enemies to blaspheme. A godly man thinks he lives to no purpose, if he do not live to the praise and glory of God.' But, if that were his meaning, it was grounded on a mistake, for we may glorify the Lord in the fires. But this use we may make of it, not to be over-fond of life, since the case has been sometimes, even with wise and good men, that they have complained of it. Why dread giving up the ghost? Why inordinately lament the death of our children in infancy, when perhaps we ourselves may sometimes wish it had been our own lot?

II. Job's humble requests,

1. That God would see his affliction, (v. 15.) and take it into his compassionate consideration. Thus David, Ps. 25: 18. Thus we should, in our troubles, refer ourselves to God, and may comfort ourselves with this, that He knows our souls in adversity.

2. That God would grant him some ease. Those that are not duly thankful for constant ease, should think how welcome one hour's ease would be, if they were in constant pain. His plea fastens on the goodness of God's nature, the consideration of which is very comfortable to an afflicted spirit. And if we would use this as a plea with God for mercy, we should use it as a plea with ourselves. 'Are not my days few?' should quicken us to duty, that we be ready for the days of eternity, which shall be many. Death and its darkness were very near, and would be very long, v. 21, 22. Thus David pleads, (Ps. 13: 3.) 'Lest I sleep the sleep of death, and then it will be too late to expect relief; for, Wilt thou show wonders to the dead? (Ps. 88: 10.) Let me have a little comfort before I die, that I may take leave of this world calmly, and not in such confusion as I am now in.' Thus earnest should we be for grace; Lord, renew me in the inward man; Lord, sanctify me before I die, for then it will never be done.' In speaking of the state of the dead, he heaps up expressions here of the same import, to show that he has as dreadful apprehensions of death and the grave as other men naturally have, so that it was only his extreme misery, that made him wish for it. Come and let us look a little into the grave. There is no order there; it is perpetual night, and no succession of day. All there lie on the same level, prince and peasant, the servant is there free from his master, ch. 3: 19. No order is observed in bringing people to the grave, not the eldest first, not the richest, not the poorest, yet every one in the order appointed by the God of life. There is no light there, no knowledge, no comfort, no joy, no praising God, no working out our salvation, and therefore no light: therefore, let us walk and work while we have the light with us. The grave being a land of darkness, our friends that are gone thither, we reckon removed into darkness, Ps. 88: 18. But the dust of the bodies of the saints, though scattered, and mingled with other dust, will none of it be lost, for God's eye is upon every particle of it, and it shall be forthcoming in the great day.

CHAP. XI. V. 1—6. Poor Job's wounds were yet bleeding, but none of his friends bring him any oil, any balm; Zophar, the third, pours into them as much vinegar as the two former. It is sad to see what intemperate passions even wise and good men are sometimes betrayed into by the heat of disputation; of which Zophar here is an instance. Eliphaz began with a very modest preface, ch. 4: 2. Bildad was a little more rough upon Job, ch. 8: 2. But Zophar falls on him without mercy, and gives him very bad language. Is this the way to comfort Job? No, nor to convince him neither. Does this become one that appears as an advocate for God and his justice? They that engage in controversy will find it very hard to keep their temper; all their wisdom, caution, and resolution, will be little enough to keep them from such indecencies as Zophar's. We have read and considered Job's discourses in the foregoing chs. and have found them full of good sense, and much to the purpose; that his principles are right, his reasonings strong, many of his expressions weighty and very considerable, and that what there is in them of heat and passion, a little candor and charity will excuse and overlook; yet Zophar here,

1. Invidiously represents him as otherwise than he was, v. 2, 3. only that he might, with apparent justice, chastise him. He represents him, (1.) As a man that never considered what he said, but uttered what came uppermost, only to make a noise, hoping by that mean to carry his cause, and run down his reprovers. Should not the multitude of words be answered? Truly, sometimes it is no great matter whether it be or no; silence perhaps is the best confutation of impertinence, and puts the greatest contempt upon it: Answer not a fool according to his folly. But, if it be answered, let reason and grace answer it, not pride and passion. Should a man full of talk, Marg. a man of lips, i. e. all tongue, be justified? as, in effect, he is, if he be not reproved. No, for in the multitude of words there wanteth not sin. No, he shall not be accepted with God, or any wise men, for much speaking, Matt. 6: 7. (2.) As a man that made no conscience of what he said, a liar, that hoped, by the impudence of lies, to silence his adversaries; a mocker, one that bantered all mankind, knew how to put false colors on any thing, and was not ashamed to impose

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

In every affliction we should examine, 'wherefore God contendeth with us;' assured, that He has good and wise reasons for his conduct: and when we do not readily perceive his meaning, we ought most earnestly to entreat Him to show it to us; that we may repent of our sins, fall in with the designs of his corrections, reap the benefit of them, and escape final condemnation.—We ought not for a moment to suppose that He punishes without cause, or that his sovereignty resembles the arbitrary will of selfish and wicked men. Such thoughts originate from Satan, brooding on the enmity of our carnal hearts; and they commonly mingle with our discontent and impatience. Yet all the miseries of man arise from his own voluntary wickedness: and, whatever may be hid in the decrees and counsels of God, most certain it is, that none shall eventually perish, but the finally impenitent: and our Creator (being in Christ become our Redeemer also) will 'not destroy the work of his own hands' in any humble believer; but will renew him unto holiness, that he may enjoy eternal life. But Satan plunges the tempted soul into one abyss after another. Yet if true grace possesses the heart, it will glimmer forth a little in their darkest hours; some feeble actings of faith and hope will be discernible; and they will be restrained from the desperate language and behavior of an ungodly man, in similar circumstances. —But if anguish of mind on earth may render the gloomy grave a desirable refuge; what will be the condition of those who shall be condemned to the blackness of darkness for ever! There, unrestrained enmity, unmingled wrath, and absolute despair, eternally reign: light only serves to show their misery, and knowledge to augment their anguish. SCOTT.

Verses 18—22.

Job here, more directly than before, expostulated with God for giving him his being, and for not cutting him off by death in the womb, or as soon as born. (Notes, 3:) The description that follows, seems to be only intended for the grave, and not to relate to the invisible world.—Coherency, or exactness, in the discourse of one who spoke 'in the bitterness of his spirit,' was not to be expected; yet it is evident, Job believed that there would be a future state, and had some hope of happiness in it, though now exceedingly clouded and discouraged. But he here described the state of dead bodies in the grave, as darkness and disorder: and he used many repetitions; meaning in general that they know nothing of the vicissitudes of day and night, or of the orders established among the living; and that men are cited thither, and arranged there, without respect to age, rank, or character. SCOTT.

[d] mockest, shall no man [e] make thee ashamed?

4 For thou hast said, [f] My doctrine is pure, and [g] I am clean in thine eyes.

5 But, [h] Oh, that God would speak, and open his lips against thee;

6 And that he would [i] show thee the secrets of wisdom, that they are double to that which is! Know therefore that [k] God exacteth of thee less than thine iniquity deserveth.

7 Canst [l] thou by searching find out God? canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?

8 It is * as [m] high as heaven; what canst thou do? [n] deeper than hell; what canst thou know?

9 The measure thereof is [o] longer than the earth, and broader than the sea.

10 If [p] he † cut off, and [q] shut up, or gather together, then who can ‡ hinder him?

11 For [r] he knoweth vain men: [s] he seeth wickedness also; will he not then consider it?

12 [t] For § vain man [u] would be wise, though [x] man be born like [y] a wild ass's colt.

13 If thou [z] prepare thine heart, and [a] stretch out thine hands toward him:

14 If [b] iniquity be in thine hand, [c] put it far away, and [d] let no wickedness dwell in thy tabernacles.

15 For then shalt thou [e] lift up thy face without spot; yea, [f] thou shalt be steadfast, and shalt not fear:

16 Because [g] thou shalt forget thy misery, and remember it [h] as on every one that talked with him. Eliphaz and Bildad had answered him, and said what they could to make him ashamed; this was, therefore, no instance of Zophar's generosity: here were three matched against one.

2. He charges Job with saying what he had not said, v. 4. Job had expressed himself unwarily, yet it did not therefore follow but that his doctrine was true; but he charges him with saying, I am clean in thine eyes. Job had, indeed, said, Thou knowest that I am not wicked; (ch. 10: 7.) but he had also said, I have sinned, and never pretended to a spotless perfection. He maintained he was not a hypocrite, as they charged him; but to infer thence that he would not own himself a sinner, was unfair. We ought to put the best construction on words and actions that they will bear; but contenders are tempted to put the worst.

3. So very confident is he that Job is in the wrong, that nothing will serve him but that God must immediately appear, to silence and condemn him. We are commonly ready with too much assurance to interest God in our quarrels, and to conclude that if He would but speak, He would take our part, and speak for us, as Zophar here; whereas, when God did speak, it was for Job against his friends. We ought indeed to leave all controversies to be determined by the judgment of God, which we are sure is according to truth; but they are not always in the right, who are most forward to appeal to that judgment, and prejudge it against their antagonists.

Zophar despairs to convince Job himself, therefore desires God would convince him of two things, which it is good for every one of us duly to consider, and under all our afflictions, cheerfully to confess. (1.) The unsearchable depth of God's counsels. What we know of God, is nothing to what we cannot know, Eph. 3: 9. God knows a great deal more evil of us than we do of ourselves; so some understand it. When God gave David a sight and sense of sin, he said, that He had in the hidden part made him to know wisdom, Ps. 51: 6. (2.) The unexceptionable justice of his proceedings. When the debt of duty is not paid, it is justice to insist on the debt of punishment. Whatever punishment is inflicted on us in this world, we must own it is less than our iniquities deserve; and therefore, instead of complaining of our troubles, be thankful we are out of hell, Lam. 3: 39. Ps. 103: 10.

V. 7—12. Zophar here speaks very good things concerning God, his greatness and glory, and concerning man, his vanity and folly: these two compared together, and duly considered, will have a powerful influence on our submission to all the dispensations of the Divine Providence.

I. See here that God is an incomprehensible Being, infinite and immense, whose nature and perfection, our finite understandings cannot possibly form any adequate conceptions of, and whose counsels and actings we cannot, therefore, without the greatest presumption, pass a judgment upon. We may by searching find God, (Acts 17:27.) but we cannot find Him out, in aught He is pleased to conceal. The ages of his eternity cannot be numbered, nor the spaces of his immensity measured: the depths of his wisdom cannot be fathomed, nor the reaches of his power bounded: the brightness of his glory can never be described, nor an inventory be made of the treasures of his goodness.

God is a sovereign Lord; (v. 10.) a strict and just Observer of men, v. 11. If He cut off by death, (Marg. If He make a change, for death is a change; if He make a change in nations, in families, in the posture of our affairs,) if He shut up in prison, or in the net of affliction; (Ps. 66: 11.) if He seize any creature, as a hunter his prey, He will gather it, (so Patrick,) and who shall force Him to restore? Or, if He gather together, as tares for the fire, or, if He gather to Himself man's spirit and breath, (ch. 34: 14.) who can hinder?

II. See here what man is; and let him be humbled, v. 12. God sees this concerning vain man, that he would be thought wise, though born like a wild ass's colt, so sottish and foolish, unteachable and untameable; a wilful, ungovernable creature. An ass's colt may be made good for something, but the wild ass's colt will never be reclaimed, nor regards the crying of the driver. See Job 39: 5—7. Man thinks himself as much at liberty, and his own master, as the wild ass's colt does, that is used to the wilderness, (Jer. 2. 24.) eager to gratify his own [blind] appetites and passions. Yet he is a proud creature, and self-conceited. He would be wise, values himself on the honor of wisdom, though he will not submit himself to the laws of wisdom; [nor learn, nor wisely govern himself by those laws, whose operations upon him he knows he cannot resist.] He reaches after forbidden wisdom, and, like his first parents, aiming to be wise above what is written, loses the tree of life for the tree of [vain] knowledge. Now, is such a creature fit to contend with God, or call Him to an account? Did we but better know God and ourselves, we should better know how to conduct ourselves toward God.

V. 13—20. Zophar, as the others, here end 12:4. 13:9. 17:2. 34:7. Ps. 35:16. Jer. 15:17. Jude 18. e Ps. 83:18. 2 Thes. 3:14. Tit. 2:8.

f 1 Pet. 3:15.
g 6:29,30. 7:20. 9:2,3. 10:7. 14:4. 34:5,6. 35:2.
h 23:3—7. 31:35. 33:6—13. 38:1,2. 40:1—5,8. 42:7.
i 15:8,11. 28:28. Deut. 29:29. Ps. 25:14. Dan. 2:28,47. Matt. 13:35. Rom. 16:25,26. 1 Cor. 2:9—11. Eph. 3:5. k Ezra 9:13. Ps. 103:10. 106:43—46. Lam. 3:22.
l 5:9. 26:14. 37:23. Ps. 77:19. 145: 3. Ec. 3:11. Is. 40:28. Matt. 11: 27. Rom. 11:33. 1 Cor. 2:10,16. Eph. 3:8.
* Heb. the heights of heaven.
m 22:12. 35:5. 2 Chr. 6:18. Ps. 103: 11. 148:13. Prov. 25:2,3. Is. 55:9.
n 26:6. Ps. 139:6—8. Am. 9:2. Eph. 3:18,19.
o 28:24,25. Ps. 65:5—8. 139:9,10. p 5:18. 9:4,12,13. 12:14. 34:29. Is. 14:27. Dan. 4:35.
† Or, make a change.
q 33:8. Deut. 32:30. Ps. 31:8. Rev. 3:7.
† Heb. turn him away?
r Ps. 94:11. Jer. 17:9,10. John 2:24, 25. Heb. 4:13. Rev. 2:23.
s 22:13,14. Ps. 10:11,14. 35:22. Ec. 5:8. Hos. 7:2. Hab. 1:13. Heb. 4: 13. t Ps. 62:9,10. 73:22. 92:6. Ec. 3:18. Rom. 1:22. Jam. 2:20.
§ Heb. empty.
u 5:13. 12:2,3. 28:28. Prov. 30:2—4. Rom. 12:16. 1 Cor. 3:18—20. Jam. 3:13—17. x 15:14. Ps. 51:5. Eph. 2:3.
y 6:5. 39:5—8. Jer. 2:24.
z 5:8. 8:5,6. 22:21,22. 1 Sam. 7:3. 2 Chr. 12:14. 19:3. Ps. 78:8. Luke 12:47.
a Ps. 68:31. 88:9. 143:6.
b 4:7,8. 22:5. Is. 1:15. c 22:23. 34:32. Ez. 18:30,31. Jam. 4:8.
d Ps. 101:2,3. Zech. 5:3,4.
e 10:15. 22:26. Gen. 4:5,6. Ps. 119: 6,7. 2 Cor. 1:12. 1 Tim. 2:8. 1 John 2:28. 3:19—22.
f Ps. 27:1,2. 46:1,2. 112:6—8. Prov. 14:26. 28:1.
g Gen. 41:51. Prov. 31:7. Ec. 5:20. Is. 54:4. 65:16. John 16:21. Rev. 7. 14—17. h 6:15. Gen. 9:11. Is. 12:1,2. 54:9.

NOTES.

Chap. XI. V. 4. Doctrine.] 'Here used for 'discourse.' Rosenm.

Verses 7—12.

This important truth, [that the nature of God is unsearchable,] instead of militating against Job's doctrine, condemned the rashness of his friends, who inferred his guilt from his calamities, as if they had found out the secrets of the divine wisdom to perfection, whereas they had not the least conception of the real reason of his unprecedented sufferings! (4:17—21.) The closing v. is variously interpreted, and does not necessarily imply all that is suggested by our version of it; but may literally be rendered, 'That empty man may become considerate: though man be born as the colt of a wild ass.' 'But a vain man (a fool) will become wise, when the wild ass's colt is born a man.' E. Smith. Scott.

(8.) Hell.] 'The secret or unseen world.' Parkhurst. Job's ideas of the world of the dead have a strong Egyptian cast. See Champollion. The ideas of the ancients on this mysterious subject, present a striking similarity. Notes v. 14, and 3:14. 11:10. 'If He seize, and bind one in chains, and bring to judgment, who then can reply to Him?' Boothr. Ed.

(12.) 'Will He then accept the hollow-hearted person? Or shall the wild ass colt assume the man? A proverbial expression, denoting extreme contumacy and ferocity.' [Note, 39:5—8.] Good.

Verses 13—20.

Here Zophar, after the example of Eliphaz and Bildad, exhorted Job to repentance, and gave him great encouragement, yet mixed with irritating insinuations. (5:17—27. 8:20—22.) There was, however, no certain ground on which to conclude, that Job's deepest repentance and the Lord's most gracious forgiveness, must be followed by outward prosperity; nor any reason to regard him as a hypocrite, if he died in his present calamitous condition. Scott.

(14.) Tabernacles.] 'Tabernacles, or tents, were the earliest dwellings, but houses were still so called after the erecting of those more durable habitations. It is certain Job lived in a city, (29:7.)' Mr. Scott, in Cond. Comm. 'The inhabitants of Egypt,' says Diodorus, 'little value the short time of this present life; but put a high esteem on the name and reputation of a virtuous life after death; and they call the houses of the living, Inns; because they stay in them but a little while; but the sepulchres of the dead they call Everlasting habitations, because they abide in the graves to infinite generations. [Comp.

waters that pass away:

17 And thine [i] age shall * be clearer than the noon-day; [k] thou shalt shine forth, thou shalt be as the morning.

18 And thou shalt be secure, [l] because there is hope; yea, thou shalt dig about thee, and [m] thou shalt take thy rest in safety.

19 Also thou shalt lie down, and none shall make thee afraid; yea, [n] many shall † make suit unto thee.

20 But [o] the eyes of the wicked shall fail, and ‡ they shall not escape, and [p] their hope shall be as § the giving up of the ghost.

CHAP. XII.

Job retorts on his friends, censures their pretensions to superior knowledge, and complains of their unkindness, 1—5. He shows that God often permits the wicked to prosper in this world, 6—11. He discourses on the perfections and works of God, 12—25.

AND Job answered and said,

2 No doubt but [q] ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you.

3 But [b] I have ‖ understanding as well as you: ¶ I am not inferior i 42:11—17. Ps. 37:6. 92:14. 112:4. Prov. 4:18. Is. 58:8—10. Mic. 7:8, 9. Zech. 14:6, 7. Mal. 4:2. Luke 2:26—32.

* Heb. arise above the noon-day.

k 1 Chr. 29:10, &c. Hos. 6:3.

l 6:11. 7:8. 22:27—29. Is. 43:5. Prov. 14:32. Rom. 5:3—5. Col. 1:27.

m Lev. 26:6. Ps. 3:5. 4:8. Prov. 3:24—26.

n 42:8, 9. Gen. 26:26—31. Ps. 45:12. Prov. 19:6. Is. 60:14. Rev. 3:9.

† Heb. entreat thy face.

o 31:16. Lev. 26:16. Deut. 28:65. Ps. 69:3. Lam. 4:17.

‡ Heb. flight shall perish from them.

p Am. 2:14. 5:19, 20. 9:1—3. Heb. 2:3.

q 8:13, 14. 27:8. Prov. 10:24. 20:20. Luke 16:23—26.

§ Or, a puff of breath.

a 6:24, 25. 8:8—10. 11:2, 3, 6, 12. 15:2, 10. 17:4. 20:3. 32:7—13. Prov. 28:11. Is. 5:21. 1 Cor. 4:10. 6:5.

b 13:2—5. Prov. 26:4. 2 Cor. 11:5, 21—23.

‖ Heb. an heart.

¶ Heb. I fall not lower than you.

courages Job to hope for better times, if he would but come to a better temper.

I. He gives him good counsel, (v. 13, 14.) as Eliphaz did, (ch. 5: 8.) and Bildad, (ch. 8: 5.) would have him repent, and return to God. Observe the steps of that return; 1. He must get his mind changed; prepare (establish, so the word is) his heart; there the work of conversion and reformation must begin. The heart is then prepared to seek God, when fully resolved to make a business of, and go through with it. 2. He must stretch out his hand to God, pray to Him with earnestness and importunity, striving in prayer, and with expectation to receive mercy and grace. To give the hand to the Lord, signifies to yield ourselves to Him, and to covenant with Him, 2 Chr. 30: 8. Job had prayed, but Zophar would have him pray in a better manner, not as an appellant, but as a humble supplicant. 3. 'If there be any sin, thou dost yet live in the practice of, v. 14. forsake it with detestation and a holy indignation, steadfastly resolving never to return to it, nor have any thing to do with it,' Ezek. 18: 31. Hos. 14: 9. Isa. 20: 22. Luke 19: 8. Is. 33: 15. The guilt of sin is not removed, if the gain of sin be not restored. 4. He must do his utmost to reform his family too, v. 14. He suspected Job's great household had been ill governed, and that the ruin of his family was the punishment of its wickedness.

II. He assures him of comfort, if he took this counsel, v. 15, &c. Perhaps Zophar insinuates that, unless God did speedily make this change in his condition, he and his friends would be confirmed in their opinion of him as a hypocrite and a dissembler with God: a great truth, however, is conveyed, That the work of righteousness will be peace, and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance for ever, Is. 32: 17.

Those that sincerely turn to God, may expect,

1. A holy confidence toward God: if our hearts condemn us not for hypocrisy and impenitency, 1 John 3: 21. We may draw near in full assurance of faith, when, through the blood of Christ, we are sprinkled from an evil conscience, Heb. 10: 22. Some understand this of the clearing up of his credit before men, Ps. 37: 6. If we make our peace with God, we may with cheerfulness look our friends in the face. 2. A holy composedness in themselves, Ps. 112: 7. 3. A comfortable reflection on their past troubles, v. 16. Job had endeavored to forget his complaint, (ch. 9: 27.) but found he could not; but here Zophar puts him in a way to forget it: let him by faith and prayer bring his griefs and cares to God, and leave them with Him, and then he shall forget them. Where sin sits heavy, affliction sits light, Isa. 33: 24. 4. A comfortable prospect of their future peace. Lastly, Zophar concludes with a brief account of the doom of wicked people, v. 20. It should seem, he suspected Job would not take his counsel, and here tells him what would then come of it, setting death as well as life before him.

CHAP. XII. V. 1—5. In this and the two following chs. we have Job's answer to Zophar's discourse. In which, as before, he first reasons with his friends, (see ch. 13: 19.) and then turns and directs his expostulations to God, from thence to the end of his discourse. In this ch. he addresses himself to his friends. The reproofs he here gives them, whether just or no, were very sharp, and may serve for a rebuke to all the proud and scornful, and an exposing of their folly.

I. He upbraids their conceitedness of their own wisdom, in comparison with him; than which nothing is more weak and unbecoming, nor better deserves ridicule, as here.

1. He represents them as claiming the monopoly of wisdom, v. 2. He speaks ironically, 'No doubt, you are the people, &c. fit to dictate to all mankind; as if nobody could discern between truth and falsehood, good and evil, but you only; and you three must be the people, the majority, to have the vote.' It is a very foolish, sinful thing for any to think themselves wiser than all mankind besides, or to speak and act confidently and imperiously, as if they thought so. 'You not only think there are none, but that there will be none, as wise as you, and therefore all the world must be fools when you are gone.' It is folly to think there will be any irreparable loss when we are gone, or that we can be ill-spared, since God has the residue of the Spirit, and can raise up others more fit to do his work. When wise and good men die, it is a comfort to think that wisdom and goodness shall not die with them. Some think Job here reflects on Zophar's comparing him (as he thought) and others to the wild ass's colt, ch. 11: 12. 'Yes,' says he, 'we must be asses, you are the only men.'

2. He does himself the justice to put in his claim as a sharer in the gifts of wisdom, v. 3. He says not this, to magnify himself. You have but said plain truths; these are common themes, of which many can talk as excellently as either you or I. This consideration may justly keep us from being proud of our knowledge, and when tempted to be harsh in censuring those we differ from and dispute with, we ought to consider that they also have a capacity of, and a right of judging, for themselves; nay, that they may be in the right, and we in the wrong; and therefore we ought not to judge or despise them, (Rom. 14: 3.) nor pretend to be masters, (Jam. 3: 1.) while all we are brethren, Matt. 23: 8. It is a very reasonable allowance to be made to all we converse with, all we contend with, that they are rational creatures as well as we.

II. He complains of the great contempt with which they had treated him, v. 4. I cannot say there was cause for this charge; we are apt to call reproofs reproaches, and to think ourselves mocked when but advised and admonished; this peevishness is our folly, and a great wrong to ourselves and to our friends. Yet there was a color for this charge; they came to comfort, but vexed him; gave him counsels and encouragements, but with

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Nothing is more unbecoming, or more common, than acrimony and reviling in religious controversy. Opposition stirs up pride and resentment in the hearts even of godly men, [especially with persons accustomed to speak without contradiction:] the credit of the victory insensibly becomes the object; and an opponent must be represented as a dangerous and wicked man, that he may without censure be exposed to ridicule or hatred. Those who accuse others of falsehood and deceit, are commonly the first to transgress: and men often shame themselves, by their invectives and misrepresentations, in attempting to put others to shame; or they manifest their own pride, when they would represent the sentiments of others as mockery of the truth. Such as maintain error are often most ready to appeal to God, and to express a high confidence that they are pleading his cause: and in the eagerness of dispute, the most important truths will be adduced in support of those very principles of which they are subversive. Yet we should endeavor to profit by truth, though we disapprove of the spirit with which it is maintained.—We ought often to meditate on the incomprehensible perfections and works of God, that we may be made sensible of our own meanness, ignorance, and vileness: but the secrets of his wisdom infinitely exceed our narrow capacities. (26:14. 28:23—28. Deut. 29:29.) In this abyss our thoughts and reasonings are swallowed up: the height, and depth, and length, and breadth of all his attributes pass knowledge: and our province is to believe, adore, and love. SCOTT.

---

note, 3:14.] Therefore they are not very curious in the building of their houses; but in beautifying their sepulchres, they leave nothing undone [that the excess of magnificence can suggest.' Booth, in] YOUNG. Hierog. Lit. ED.

(18.) Dig.] 'Where thou diggest in safety, thou shalt rest.' Boothr. Henry refers the phrase to security from intrenchments. 'The allusion is to the digging of wells or springs.' Heath. Boothr. 'Dig a fountain for thy habitation. Wil. Thou shalt dig thy sepulchre, and calmly lie down. Mich.' Cond. Comm. Possibly there is allusion to habitations dug in the calcareous, sandy rock, which were very common among the Horites, &c. of those regions, and other troglodytes, of Egypt, &c. ED.

(19.) Make suit.] 'Court thy friendship. (as Gen. 21:22. 26:28.) Grotius. This, with the preceding v. beautifully alludes to a peaceable encampment. The flocks resting on a verdant pasture, the shepherds having pitched their tents around them, and near springing wells. Here all repose, secure from wild beasts and thievish Arabs. Mr. Scott.' COND. COMM.

to you: yea, * who knoweth not such things as these?

4 I am as [c] one mocked of his neighbor, [d] who calleth upon God, and he answereth him; [e] the just upright man is laughed to scorn.

5 He that is [f] ready to slip with his feet, is as [g] a lamp despised in the thought [h] of him that is at ease.

6 ¶ The [i] tabernacles of robbers prosper, and they that provoke God are secure; into whose hand God bringeth abundantly.

7 But [k] ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee:

8 Or speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee; and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee.

9 [l] Who knoweth not in all these, that [m] the hand of the LORD hath wrought this?

10 In [n] whose hand is the † soul of every living thing, and [o] the breath of all ‡ mankind.

[Practical Observations.]

11 Doth [p] not the ear

* Heb. with whom are not such as these. 6:6,7. 28:2,3.

c 11:3. 15:10. 17:2,6. 21:3. 30:1. Ps. 22:7,8. 35:16. Matt. 27:29,30,41,42. Heb. 11:36.

d 13:20. Ps. 91:15. Jer. 33:3. Mic. 7:7.

e Prov. 14:2. Mark 5:40. Luke 16:14. Acts 17:32.

f Deut. 32:35. Ps. 17:5. 94:18. Jer. 13:16.

g 18:5. Prov. 13:9. 20:20. Matt. 25:8.

h 6:5. 16:4. Ps. 123:3,4. Am. 6:1—6. Luke 12:19. 16:19,20.

i 9:24. 21:7—15. Ps. 17:14. 37:1,35. 73:11,12. 92:7. Jer. 5:27,28.

k 21:29,30. Prov. 6:6. Is. 1:3. Jer. 8:7. Rom. 8:20—22.

l 3. Acts 19:35.

m 22:18. Deut. 8:17,18. 1 Sam. 2:7. Jer. 27:5,6. Dan. 4:17. 5:18. Rom. 11:36. Jam. 2:5—7.

n Num. 16:22. Dan. 5:23. Acts 17:25, 28.

† Or, life.

o 27:3. 34:14,15. Gen. 2:7. 6:17. Ps. 104:29. 146:3,4.

‡ Heb. flesh of man. John 3:6.

p 34:3. 1 Cor. 10:15. Phil. 1:10. Marg. Heb. 5:14. 1 Pet. 2:3.

no great opinion that either would take effect. Nothing is more grievous to those in adversity, than to be trodden on, and insulted over; and on this head they are too apt to be suspicious.

Observe, 1. What aggravated this grievance, was, they were his neighbors, friends, companions, so the word signifies; and professors of religion, such as called upon God, and said, He answered them; for some understand that of the persons mocking. Comp. Jam. 3: 9.

2. What supported him under it. (1.) He had a God to appeal to; for some unders and those words of the person mocked, that he calls upon God, and He answers him; so it agrees with ch. 16: 20. My friends scorn me, but mine eye poureth out tears to God. (2.) His case was not singular, but very common: The just, upright man is laughed to scorn; his justice and piety are derided as foolish things, with which silly people needlessly hamper themselves. By most he is laughed at for any little weakness, without any consideration of his justice and uprightness, which is so much his honor. Note, This was of old the lot of honest, good people; we are not therefore to think it strange, (1 Pet. 4: 12.) no, nor hard, if it be our lot; so persecuted they not only the prophets, but even the saints of the patriarchal age, Matt. 5: 12. And can we expect to fare better?

3. He suspected the cause to be this; they were themselves rich and at ease, therefore they despised him who was fallen into poverty, v. 5. It is the way of the world, we see it daily; they that prosper are praised, but of them that are going down it is said, 'Down with them.' Even the just, upright man, that is as a burning and a shining light, if he enter into temptation, (Ps. 73: 2.) or come under a cloud, is looked upon with contempt. See here, (1.) The common fault of those in prosperity; being full and easy and merry themselves, they look scornfully on those in want, pain, and sorrow; overlook them, take no notice of them, and study to forget them. See Ps. 123: 4. The chief butler drinks wine in bowls, but makes nothing of the afflictions of Joseph. Wealth without grace often makes men [thus selfish,] thus haughty, thus careless of their poor neighbors. (2.) The common fate of those that fall into adversity. Poverty eclipses all their lustre; though they are lamps, yet, if taken out of golden candlesticks, and put, like Gideon's, into earthen pitchers, nobody values them as formerly, but they that live at ease despise them, [so far are men unlike God!]

V. 6—11. Job's friends all went on this principle, that wicked people cannot prosper long in this world, but some remarkable judgment or other will suddenly light on them. Zophar had concluded with it, that the eyes of the wicked shall fail, ch. 11: 20. This principle Job here opposes, and maintains, that God, in disposing men's outward affairs, acts as a Sovereign, reserving the exact distribution of rewards and punishments for the future state.

I. He asserts it as an undoubted truth, that wicked people may, and often do, prosper long in this world, v. 6. Perhaps he refers to the Sabeans and Chaldeans: one observation built on matter of fact is worth twenty notions framed by an hypothesis. Or, more generally, he refers to all proud oppressors and robbers and pirates God brings plentifully to them; we cannot therefore judge of men's piety by their plenty, nor of what they have in their heart by what they have in their hand.

II. He appeals even to the inferior creatures for proof; (v. 7, 8.) many a good lesson we may learn from them; but what are they here to teach us?

1. That the tabernacles of robbers prosper; so some. For, (1.) Even among the brute creatures, the greater devour the less, and the stronger prey on the weaker, and men are as the fishes of the sea, Hab. 1: 14. Had sin not entered, we may suppose there had been no such disorder among the creatures. (2.) These creatures are serviceable to wicked men, and so declare their prosperity: the whole creation groans under the burden of their tyranny, Rom. 8: 20, 22. Note, All the creatures wicked men abuse, by making them the food and fuel of their lusts, will witness against them, another day, Jam. 5: 3, 4.

2. We may from them learn the wisdom, power, and goodness, of God, and that sovereign dominion of his, into which plain and self-evident truth all these difficult dispensations must be resolved. Zophar had made a vast mystery of it, ch. 11: 7. 'So far from that,' (says Job,) 'what we are concerned to know, we may learn even from the inferior creatures; for who knows not from all these, (v. 9.) that there is a wise providence which guides and governs all these things by rules we are neither acquainted with, nor competent judges of?'

III. He resolves all into the absolute propriety which God has in all creatures, v. 10. All derive their being from Him, owe their being to Him, depend on Him for its support, lie at his mercy, are under his direction and dominion, and entirely at his disposal, and at his summons must resign their lives. All souls are his; and may He not do what He will with his own? The name Jehovah is used here, (v. 9.) and it is the only time that we meet with it in all the discourses between Job and his friends; for God was, in that age, more known by the name of Shaddai, the Almighty.

V. 11. may be taken either as the conclusion to the foregoing discourse, or the preface to what follows. The mind of man has as good a faculty of discerning between truth and error, when duly stated, as the palate has of discerning between what is sweet and what is bitter. He therefore demands from his friends a liberty to judge for himself of what they had said; and desires them to use the same liberty in judging of what he had said; nay, he seems to appeal to any man's impartial judgment in this controversy.

V. 12—25. This is a noble discourse of Job's concerning the wisdom, power, and sovereignty, of God, in ordering and disposing of all the affairs of the children of men, according to the counsel of his own will, which none dares gainsay, or can resist. Out of their controversy, both he and his friends spake admirably well; but in that, we sometimes scarcely know what to make of them. It were well if wise and good men, that differ in their apprehensions about less things, would see it to be for their honor and comfort, and the edi-

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—10. Reviling, raillery, and boasting, commonly prove infectious: and when we over-rate ourselves, and court admiration, others will be disposed to undervalue us, and treat us with contempt.—We have all a right to judge for ourselves, being endued with understanding as well as others: and we should neither claim superiority over them, nor in this respect yield it to them; for we are cautioned by our Lord on both sides, when he says, 'Call no man father upon earth; . . . neither be ye called masters:' but in other matters our rule is, 'in honor to prefer others,' and to 'sit down in the lowest place;' and it is seldom wise or becoming to deviate from it. (Matt. 23:8—10. Luke 14:7—11.)—The most pious and conscientious men have generally been treated with contempt by worldly persons, and sometimes by their brethren.—Worldly prosperity is of small value in the sight of God. He has superior blessings for his children. Every creature preaches the goodness of God, and the ungrateful abuse of man; and testifies that this is a state of probation, and not of retribution.

SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XII. V. 6—10. The animal tribes generally subserve the pride, luxury, and indulgence of ungodly men. (Rom. 8:18—23.) Yet this is not to be ascribed to fortune, or chance: but the Lord orders these things as He pleases; seeing the life and breath of man, and of every creature, are entirely at his disposal. SCOTT.

(7.) 'With the Hindoos, he who refuses instruction, and will not be convinced, is told to ask the cattle.' ROBERTS.

Verses 11, 12.

Job probably thought, that the distinguishing faculty of his friends must be obtuse, or vitiated by prejudice; otherwise they could never reject truths so obvious as those which he had stated to them. Indeed, aged men, who have had long opportunity of observation, are supposed to be wiser than others. SCOTT.

(12.) With the ancient is wisdom.] 'Men who have lived in those primitive times, when the great facts of nature were recent, the creatry words? and the * mouth taste his meat?

12 With [q] the ancient is wisdom; and in length of days, understanding.

13 With † him is [r] wisdom and strength, he hath [s] counsel and understanding.

14 Behold, [t] he breaketh down, and it cannot be built again: [u] he shutteth ‡ up a man, and there can be no opening.

15 Behold, [x] he withholdeth the waters, and they dry up: also [y] he sendeth them out, and they overturn the earth.

16 With [z] him is strength and wisdom: [a] the deceived and the deceiver are his.

17 He [b] leadeth counsellors away spoiled, and maketh the judges fools.

18 He [c] looseth the bond of kings, and girdeth their loins with a girdle.

19 He [d] leadeth princes away spoiled, and overthroweth the mighty.

20 He removeth away § the speech of the trusty, and [e] taketh away the understanding of the aged.

21 He [f] poureth contempt upon princes, and ‖ weakeneth the strength of the mighty.

22 He [g] discovereth deep things out of darkness, and [h] bringeth out to light the shadow of death.

23 He [i] increaseth the nations, and destroyeth them: he enlargeth the nations, and ¶ straiteneth them again.

24 He [k] taketh away the heart of the chief of the people of the earth, [l] and causeth them to wander in a wilderness where there is no way.

25 They [m] grope in the dark without light, and he [n] maketh them to  stagger like a drunken man.

* Heb. palate. 6:30.
q 8:8. 15:10.
† That is, God. 32:6—9.
r 16. 9:4. 28:20—28. 36:5. Ps. 147:5. Prov. 2:6,7. Jer. 10:12. Dan. 2:20. Luke 21:15. 1 Cor. 1:24. Col. 2:3. Jam. 1:5. s Prov. 8:14. Is. 40:13,14. 46:10. Rom. 11:34. Eph. 1:8,11.
t 9:12,13. 11:10. Is. 14:23. Jer. 51:58,64. Mal. 1:4. u 16:11. 1 Sam. 17:46. 24:18. 26:8. Marg. Is. 22:22. Rom. 11:32. Marg.
‡ Heb. upon.
x 10. Gen. 8:1,2. 1 K. 8:35,36. 17:1. Jer. 14:22. Nah. 1:4. Luke 4:25. Jam. 5:17,18. Rev. 11:6.
y Gen. 6:13,17. 7:23. Ps. 104:7—9. Am. 5:8.
z 13. Matt. 6:13.
a 1 K. 22:22,23. Ez. 14:9.
b 2 Sam. 15:31. Is. 19:12—14. 1 Cor. 1:19,20. c 2 Chr. 33:11—14. Jer. 52:31—34. Dan. 2:21. Rev. 19:16. d Josh. 10:24,42. 1 Sam. 17:45,46. Is. 37:36—38. 45:1. Rev. 17:14. 19:19—21.
§ Heb. the lip of the faithful. Prov. 10:21. 12:19,22.
e 24. 17:4. 32:9. 39:17.
f Ex. 8:2,16,24. 1 K. 21:23,24. 2 K. 9:26,34—37. Ps. 107:40. Is. 23:9. 24:21,22. 37:38. Dan. 4:32,33. Matt. 2:12,13. Acts 12:23.
‖ Or, looseth the girdle of the strong. Is. 5:27. 11:5. 22:21. Eph. 6:10,14.
g 11:6. 28:20—23. 2 K. 6:12. Ps. 44:21. 139:12. Dan. 2:22. Matt. 10:26. 1 Cor. 2:10. 4:5.
h 3:5. 24:17. 34:22. Am. 5:8. Luke 1:79.
i Ex. 1:7,20. Is. 9:3. 26:15. 27:6. 51:2. 60:22. Jer. 30:19. 33:22. Zech. 10:8.
¶ Heb. leadeth in. k 20. 17:4. Is. 6:9,10. 19:1. Hos. 7:11.
l Ps. 107:4,40.
m 5:14. Gen. 19:11. Is. 59:10. Acts 13:11. 1 John 2:11.
n Ps. 107:27. Is. 19:14. 24:20.
 Heb. wander.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 11—25. The faculties of our souls were originally formed, as capable of discerning truth and falsehood, as our bodily senses are of discriminating their objects.*—Observation and experience should teach us wisdom. But, through the effects produced on the powers of the mind by the fall of man, [and the consequent degeneracy of the race,] connected with our prejudices, and the influence of our passions [and propensities], we draw wrong conclusions, make a perverse choice, and often wander farther from God, and true wisdom, as our years increase. Yet when, being renewed by the Holy Spirit, we begin to use our faculties aright [so that those may have rule which ought; Ed.]; we receive wisdom from the Fountain-head by faith and prayer; we learn useful lessons from all we see and experience; and acquire a spiritual taste, which savors truth and holiness, and is of use every hour of our lives. (Heb. 5: 11—14.) May we seek more and more to have 'the eyes of our understanding thus enlightened,' and 'our senses exercised, by reason of use, to discern both good and evil!' and it is a main point of wisdom to set God always before us, to observe his working in every thing, and to feel our own absolute dependence on Him. May this be our choice, our conduct, and our felicity! SCOTT.

* The innate impulses of our nature, as the sense of ought, and ought not, the impulse to reverence, believe, benefit, love, oppose, &c. are and doubtless ever were, blind. The phrase 'faculties of our souls,' used by Dr. Scott, is obscure, if his remark be not erroneous. Our perceptive faculties know, our reflective faculties compare and reason. These properly used give us truth; absolute truth as far as we are concerned, for they are constituted, in reference to the universe, by the same God who constituted the universe. And, farther, in view of Henry's and Scott's exposition of this ch. it may be remarked, that the ground of our accountability to God, is, our endowment from Him with a sense of right and wrong, an impulse which asks, 'ought I?' Were creation (and not the manner of creation) the sole ground of moral accountability, trees and all created things would be morally accountable. See, also, Wayland. Ed.

tion, fall, flood, confusion of tongues, migration of families, and consequent settlement of nations, had much knowledge from these facts; and their length of days, the many hundreds of years to which they lived, gave them such an opportunity of accumulating wisdom by experience, that they are deservedly considered as oracles.'

Dr. A. CLARKE.

Verses 13—25.

The transition from the foregoing v. to this subsequent discourse seems as follows. The consideration, that 'length of days' among men, was supposed to increase wisdom and understanding, led Job to think of the everlasting GOD, whose wisdom and knowledge are infinite: and thus, without mentioning Him, he proceeded to expatiate on his perfections and dispensations; showing that he believed the same general truths as his friends did, and could discourse on them with [vastly more] cogency and fluency. (5:8—16. 11:7—12.) These important truths were suited to convince the over-confident disputants, that they had gone out of their depth, in attempting to assign the Lord's reason for afflicting Job, when "his judgments are unsearchable." (Rom. 11:33—36.) SCOTT.

(16.) With Him is strength and wisdom.] 'Strength and sufficiency. Strength or power springing from an exhaustless and infinite source of potency. In v. 13. the expression for wisdom and strength is chocmeh u-geburah, intelligence and fortitude, or strength in action; the wisdom ever guiding the exertions of power; but here is strength or power in essence; and an eternal potentiality. With Him is every excellence, in potentiâ and in esse. He borrows nothing, He derives nothing. As He is self-sufficient, so He is self-existent.' Dr. A. CLARKE.

(18.) Looseth the bond.] 'That with which they bind their subjects.' Gill. 'Dissolves their authority.' Stock. A girdle.] 'A cord or chain tied about the waist of captives, Ps. 49:8. Mr. Scott.' Cond. Comm. Comp. cuts, 2 K. 17:6. 1 K. 10:18, 19. Diodorus remarks, that the ancient Egyptians wore a girdle in their mourning: note, Ex. 12 30. ED.

(13—22.) 'The entire passage has a reference to the machinery of a regular and political government; and that its general drift is to imprint on the mind of the hearer the important doctrine, that the whole of the constituent principles of such a government, its officers and institutions; its monarchs and princes; its privy counsellors, judges, and ministers of state, [its priests,] chieftains, public orators, and assembly of elders: its nobles, or men of hereditary rank; and its stout, robust peasantry, (as we should now express it;) nay, the deep, designing, [selfish] villains, that plot in secret its destruction; that the nations themselves, and the heads or sovereigns of the nations; are all and equally in the hands of the Almighty; that with Him human pomp is poverty, human excellence turpitude, human judgment error, human wisdom folly, human dignities contempt, human strength weakness.' Good. O God of wisdom, impress this truth, of our nation's dependence on Thee, deeply upon the heart of every one in authority in these United States! ED.

(23.) He increaseth the nations.] 'Good. tr. "He letteth the nations grow licentious." Pride, fulness of bread, with extensive trade and commerce, produce luxury; and this is ever accompanied with profligacy of manners. When, then, the cup of this iniquity is full, God destroys the nation, by bringing, or permitting to come, against it, a nation less pampered, more necessitous, and inured to toil.'

Dr. A. CLARKE.

(24.) Dr. A. Clarke considers this as a plain allusion to the wanderings of Israel in the deserts of Arabia, and to nothing else. But in the frequent wonder-seeking enterprises of warlike despots, utterly ignorant of geography, such as a Nimrod, a Semiramis, a Ramses, a Chedorlaomer, &c. in those early ages, instances might occur of a self-styled 'conqueror of the world' perishing, with his starving myriads, in the trackless wastes of Asia and Africa. Leaders of powerful colonies, in those colonizing ages, might thus have perished more than once: and a tradition, or recollection of some such instance might be present to the patriarch Job. ED.

CHAP. XIII.

Job, confident of his knowledge, appeals to God; disdainfully and peevishly reproves his friends, for pleading against him, with false reasonings and partiality; and warns them to fear the judgment of God, 1—12. In extreme suffering, and expecting death, he professes confidence that God would justify him, 13—19. He craves respite, and desires to know his sins, and why God dealt so rigorously with him, 20—28.

LO, [a] mine eye hath seen all this, [b] mine ear hath heard and understood it.

2 What [c] ye know, the same do I know also: I am not inferior unto you.

3 Surely [d] I would speak to the Almighty, and [e] I desire to reason with God.

4 But [f] ye are forgers of lies, ye are all [g] physicians of no value.

5 Oh, [h] that ye would altogether hold your peace! [i] and it should be your wisdom.

6 Hear [k] now my reasoning, and hearken to the pleadings of my lips.

7 Will ye [l] speak wickedly for God? and talk deceitfully for him?

8 Will ye [m] accept his person? will ye contend for God?

9 Is it good that he should [n] search you out? or [o] as one man mocketh another, do ye so mock him?

10 He will surely [p] reprove you, if ye do secretly accept persons.

11 Shall [q] not his excellency make you afraid? and [r] his dread fall upon you?

12 Your [s] remembrances are like unto [t] ashes, your bodies [u] to bodies of clay.

13 * Hold your peace, [x] let me alone, that I may speak, [y] and let come on me what will.

14 Wherefore do [z] I take my flesh in my teeth, [a] and put my life in mine hand?

a 5:9—11. 12:9,&c. 42:3—6.
b 4:12. 5:27. 8:8—10. 15:17,18. Ps. 78:3,4. 1 John 1:3.
c 12:3. 15:8,9. 34:35. 35:16. 37:2. 40:4,5. 42:7. 1 Cor. 8:1,2. 2 Cor. 11:4,5,16—18. 12:11.
d 22. 9:34,35. 11:5. 23:3—7. 31:35.
e 9:3,14,15. Is. 1:18—20. 41:21. Jer. 12:1,2. marg.
f 4:7—11. 5:1—5. 8:3,4. 18:5,&c. 21: 27—34. 22:6,&c. Ex. 20:16. Ps. 119:69.
g 16:2. Jer. 6:14. 8:22. 30:13. 46:11. Ez. 34:4. Hos. 5:13. Mark 2:17. 5: 26.
h 13. 11:3. 16:3. 18:2. 19:2. 21:2, 3. 32:1.
i Prov. 17:28. Ec. 5:3. Am. 5:13. Jam. 1:19.
k 21:2,3. 33:1—3. 34:2. Judg. 9:7. Prov. 8:6,7.
l 4:7. 11:2—4. 17:5. 36:4. John 16: 2. Rom. 3:5—8. m 32:21. 34:19. Ex. 23:2,3. Prov. 24: 23. Mal. 2:9. Marg.
n 34:35. Ps. 44:21. 139:23. Jer. 17:10. o 17:2. Is. 28:22. Gal. 6:7,8. p 42:7,8. Ps. 50:21,22. 82:2. Jam. 2:9.
q Ps. 119:120. Jer. 5:22. 10:10. Matt. 10:28. Rev. 15:3,4.
r 21. Ex. 15:16. Is. 8:13.
s 18:17. Ex. 17:14. Ps. 34:16. 109: 12. 109:15. Prov. 10:7. Is. 26:14.
t Gen. 17:27.
u 4:19. Gen. 2:7. 2 Cor. 5:1.
* Heb. Be silent from me.
x See on 5. 7:11. 10:1. 21:3.
y 6:9,10. 7:15,16.
z 18:4. Ec. 4:5. Is. 9:20. 49:26. a Judg. 12:3. 1 Sam. 19:5. 28:21. Ps 119:109.

justice was served; and in both the deceived and the deceiver were at his disposal. See Ezek. 14: 9. God would not suffer the sin of the deceiver, nor the misery of the deceived, if He knew not how to set bounds to both, and bring glory to Himself out of both. Hallelujah, the Lord God omnipotent thus reigns; and it is well He does, for otherwise there is so little wisdom, and so little honesty, in the world, that it had all been in confusion and ruin long ago.

II. He next descends to the particular instances of the wisdom and power of God in the revolutions of states and kingdoms. Some think he refers to the extirpation of those powerful nations, the Rephaim, the Zuzim, the Emim, and the Horites, (mentioned Gen. 14: 5, 6. Deut. ii. 10. 20.) in which, perhaps, it was particularly noticed, how strangely they were infatuated and enfeebled; if so, it is designed to show, that, whenever the like is done in the affairs of nations, it is God that doeth it, and we must therein observe his sovereign dominion, even over those that think themselves most powerful, politic, and absolute. Let all therefore avoid pride, and humbly depend on God for the continuance of their abilities. Comp. that of Eliphaz, ch. 5: 12, &c.

Thus are the revolutions of kingdoms wonderfully brought about by an overruling Providence. Heaven and earth are shaken, but the Lord sits King for ever, and with Him we look for a kingdom that cannot be shaken.

CHAP. XIII. V. 1—12. Job now applies what he had said in the foregoing ch. and now we have him not in so good a temper as then: he here warmly expresses his feelings under the unkindness of his friends.

1. They compelled him, as the Corinthians did Paul, to commend himself and his own knowledge, yet not in a way of self-applause, but of self-justification, v. 1, 2. All he had said before, his eye had seen confirmed by many instances, and his ear had heard seconded by many authorities, and he well understood it, and what use to make of it. Happy they, who do not only see and hear, but understand, the greatness, glory, and sovereignty of God. This, he thought, would justify what he had said before, (ch. 12: 3.) which he repeats here, v. 2. Those who enter into disputation, enter into temptation to magnify themselves, and vilify their brethren, more than is fit, and therefore ought to watch and pray against the workings of pride.

2. He turns from them to God, v. 3. The prince himself will perhaps give audience to a poor petitioner with more mildness, patience, and condescension, than the servants. See here, What confidence they have toward God, whose hearts condemn them not of reigning hypocrisy: they can, with humble boldness, appear before Him and appeal to Him. What comfort they have in God, whose neighbors unjustly condemn them: if they may not speak to them with any hopes of a fair hearing, yet they may speak to the Almighty, they have easy access to Him, and shall find acceptance with Him.

3. He condemns them for their unjust and uncharitable treatment of him, v. 4. They falsely accused, basely deceived him; undertook his cure, and knew not how to prescribe. Thus, to broken hearts and wounded consciences, all creatures, without Christ, are physicians of no value, on which one may spend all, and be never the better, but rather grow worse, Mark 5: 26.

4. He begs they would be silent, and give him a patient hearing, v. 5, 6. They pleaded they could not forbear speaking; (ch. 4: 2.—11: 2, 3.) but he tells them, they had more consulted their own reputation, had they enjoined themselves silence. Silence is an evidence of wisdom, and a mean of it, as it gives time to think and hear. Perhaps, though they did not interrupt his discourse, they seemed careless, and did not much heed what he said; he therefore begs they would not only hear, but hearken, v. 6. Note, We should be very willing and glad to hear what those have to say for themselves, of whom, on any account, we are tempted to have hard thoughts. Many a man, if he could but be fairly heard, would be fairly acquitted, even in the consciences of those that run him down.

5. He endeavors to convince them of the wrong they did to God's honor, while they pretended to plead for Him, v. 7, 8. 'He is a God, and can plead for Himself; (Judg. 6: 31.) and if you were for ever silent, the heavens would declare his righteousness. Your principles are false, and your arguings fallacious; and will it excuse you, to say, It is for God?' No, a good intention will not justify, much less sanctify, a bad word or action. God's truth needs not our lie, nor God's cause either our sinful policies, or our sinful passions. The wrath of man works not the righteousness of God, nor may we do evil, that good may come, Rom. 3: 7, 8. Pious frauds (as they call them) are impious cheats; and devout persecutions horrid profanations of the name of God, as theirs who hated their brethren, and cast them out, saying, Let the Lord be glorified, Is. 66: 5. John 16: 2.

6. He endeavors to possess them with a fear of God's judgment, and so to bring them to a better temper. Be not deceived, God is not mocked. That they might not think thus to jest with God, and affront Him, he would have them consider both God and themselves, and then they would find themselves unable to enter into judgment with Him, v. 9—12. And these considerations should also be a reason, why we should not despise and trample on our brethren. Patrick gives another sense of v. 12. 'Your remonstrances on God's behalf are no better than dust, and the arguments you accumulate, but like so many heaps of dirt.'

V. 13—22. Job here takes fast hold of his integrity, as one resolved not to let it be wrested from him: his firmness in this is commendable, and his warmness excusable.

1. He entreats his friends, and all the company, to let him alone, and not interrupt him in what he was about to say, (v. 13.) but diligently to hearken to it, v. 17. He would have his own protestation to be decisive, for none but God and himself knew his heart.

2. He resolves to adhere to the testimony of his own conscience; and though his friends called it obstinacy, that should not shake his constancy, v. 13. Note, Those that have the assurance of their uprightness, may cheerfully welcome every event. He resolves (v. 15.) he will maintain his own ways; he will never part with the satisfaction he had in having walked uprightly with God; he

NOTES.

CHAP. XIII. V. 1, 2. With manifest self-preference, Job here declared, that the discoveries of God's providential dealings with men, which he had stated, were the result of his own exact and careful observation; and that he understood these matters at least as well as his friends did, and therefore he did not want their instructions. (12:2, 3.) SCOTT.

Verses 3—6.

An improper boldness is discernible in the discourses of Job, for which Elihu afterward justly reproved him: (33:8—13. 34:5—9. yet he did not mean to justify himself before God, but only to obtain from Him a verdict in his favor against his friends, who treated him as a hypocrite; accusing him of crimes which he had never committed, and arguing from false principles, respecting the divine government of the world. SCOTT.

(7.) 'Cannot God be righteous, unless I be wicked?' PATRICK.

Verses 13, 14.

Perhaps Job's friends seemed about to interrupt him; or showed apprehensions, that divine judgment would come on him for so pertinaciously attesting his innocence. 'Well,' says he, 'keep silence, let 15 Though [b] he slay me, yet will I trust in him: [c] but I will * maintain mine own ways before him.

16 He also shall be [d] my Salvation: [e] for an hypocrite shall not come before him.

17 Hear [f] diligently my speech and my declaration with your ears.

18 Behold now, [g] I have ordered my cause; [h] I know that I shall be justified.

19 Who is he [i] that will plead with me? for now, [k] if I hold my tongue, I shall give up the ghost.

20 Only [l] do not two things unto me: then will I not [m] hide myself from thee.

21 [n] Withdraw thine hand far from me: and [o] let not thy dread make me afraid.

22 Then [p] call thou, and I will answer: or let me speak, and answer thou me.

23 How [q] many are mine iniquities and sins? [r] make me to know my transgression and my sin.

24 Wherefore [s] hidest thou thy face, and [t] holdest me for thine enemy?

25 Wilt thou [u] break

b 18. 19:25—28. 23:10. Ps. 23:4. Prov. 14:32. Rom. 8:38,39.
c 10:7. 16:17,21. 23:4—7. 31:35—37. 40:2,4,5,8. 1 John 3:20.
* Heb. prove, or argue. d Ex. 15:2. Ps. 27:1. 62:6,7. 118:14, 21. Is. 12:2. Jer. 3:23. Acts 13:47.
e 8:13. 27:8—10. 36:13. Is. 33:14.
f 6. 33:1.
g 10:21. 23:4. 40:7.
h 9:2,3,20. 40:7,8. Is. 43:26. Rom. 8:33,34. 2 Cor. 1:12.
i 19:5. 33:5—7,32. Is. 50:7,8.
k 13. 7:11. Jer. 20.9.
l 9:34,35.
m Gen. 3:8—10. Ps. 139:12. Rev. 6: 15,16.
n 10:20. 22:15—17.
o 11. See on 33:7. Ps. 119:120.
p 9:32. 33:3. 40:4,5. 42:3—6.
q 22:5. Ps. 44:20,21.
r 35:8,9. Ps. 139:23,24.
s 10:2. 29:2,3. Deut. 32:20. Ps. 10: 1. 13:1. 44:24. 77:6—9. 88:14.
t 19:9. 19:11. 30:21. 31:35. 33:10. 1 Sam. 28:16. Lam. 2:5. 2 Thes. 3: 15.
u 14:3. 1 Sam. 24:14. Is. 17:13. Matt. 12:20.

could not justify every word he had spoken, yet, in the general, his ways were good, and he would maintain it; and why not, since that was his great support under his present exercises, as it was Hezekiah's, Remember how I have walked before Thee!

3. He complains he was ready, not only to rend his clothes, but even to tear his flesh, through the greatness of his affliction, v. 14. and he not wicked; no marvel then he was in such confusion. 'Why do I stifle and smother the protestations of my innocency?' When a man with great difficulty keeps in what he would say, he bites his lips: 'Now,' says he, 'why may not I take liberty to speak, since I do but vex myself, add to my torment, and endanger my life, by refraining?' Note, It would vex the most patient man, when he has lost every thing else, to be denied the comfort (if he deserves it) of a good conscience and a good name.

4. He comforts himself in God, and still keeps hold of his confidence in Him. Observe, he depends on God for the same we hope through Christ. (1.) Justification; (v. 18.) I have ordered my cause, and, on the whole matter, I know I shall be justified. They whose hearts are upright with God, in walking not after the flesh, but after the Spirit, may be sure that through Christ there shall be no condemnation to them, but that, whoever lays any thing to their charge, they shall be justified. (2.) Salvation, v. 16. He means it not of temporal salvation, he had little expectation of that, but, of his eternal salvation, he was very confident. And the reason why he depended on God for salvation, is, Because a hypocrite shall not come before Him. He knew himself not to be a hypocrite, and that none but hypocrites are rejected of God, therefore he concluded he should not be rejected. Sincerity is our evangelical perfection, nothing will ruin us but the want of that.

His is a high expression of faith, v. 15. and what we should all labor to come up to; to trust in God, though He slay us. That is, we must be well pleased with God as a Friend, even then when He seems to come forth against us as an Enemy, ch. 23: 8—10. We must believe that all shall work for good to us, even then when all seems to make against us, Jer. 24: 5. We must persevere in the way of duty, though it cost all that is dear, even life itself, Heb. 11: 35. We must depend on the performance of the promise, when all the ways leading to it are shut up, Rom. 4: 18. We must rejoice in God, when we have nothing else to rejoice in, and cleave to Him, yea, though we cannot for the present find comfort in Him. In a dying hour, we must derive from Him living comforts; and this is to trust in Him, though He slay us.

5. He wishes to argue the case even with God Himself, if he might but settle the preliminaries of the treaty, v. 20—22. nor will he dread the issue, but under two provisos, I. That his body might not be tortured with this exquisite pain, v. 21. When we are to converse with God, we have need to be as free as possible from every thing that may make us uneasy. 2. That his mind might not be terrified with the tremendous majesty of God. Moses himself trembled before God, so did Isaiah and Habakkuk: O God, Thou art terrible even in thy holy places. If put into such a consternation of spirit, together with his bodily affliction, Job must drop the cause, and can make nothing of it. See what a folly it is, for men to put off their repentance and conversion to a sick-bed, and a death-bed! How can even a good man, much less a bad man, reason with God, so as to be justified before Him, when on the rack of pain, and under the terror of death? At such a time, it is very bad to have the great work to do, but very comfortable to have it done, as Job, who, if he might but have a little breathing time, was ready either, To hear God speaking to Him by his word, and answer; Call Thou, and I will answer; or, To speak to Him by prayer, and expect an answer; Let me speak, and answer Thou me, v. 22. Comp. this with ch. 9: 34, 35. where he speaks to the same purport. In short, the badness of his case was at present such a damp on him, as he could not get over; otherwise he was well assured of the goodness of his cause, and doubted not to have the comfort of it at last, when the present cloud was over. With such holy boldness may the upright come to the throne of grace, not doubting but to find mercy there.

V. 23—28. Here,

I. Job inquires after his sins. This may be taken, either, 1. As a passionate complaint, that he was punished, and yet not told his faults. Or, 2. As a prudent appeal to God from the censures of his friends; as knowing his sins would then appear not so many, nor so mighty, as his friends suspected. Or, 3. As a pious request, like that Elihu directed him to; ch. 34: 32. That which I see not, teach Thou me. Note, A true penitent is willing to know the worst of himself; and we should all desire to know our transgressions, that we may be particular in confessing them, and on our guard against them for the future.

II. He bitterly complains of God's withdrawings from him, v. 24. This must be meant of something more than his outward afflictions; as that the favors of the Almighty were suspended; and his terrors inflicted and impressed upon him; God hid his face; held him for his enemy; shot his arrows at him, (ch. 6: 4.) and set him as a mark, ch. 7: 20. Note, The holy God sometimes denies his favors, and discovers his terrors, to the best and dearest of his saints and servants in this world. This case occurs, not only in the production, but sometimes in the progress, of the divine life; evidences for heaven are eclipsed, sensible communions interrupted, dread of divine wrath impressed, and the returns of comfort, for the present, despaired of, Ps. 77: 7—9. 88: 7, 15, 16. These are grievous burdens to a gracious soul, that values God's loving-kindness as better than life, Prov. 18: 14. A wounded spirit who can bear? Job, by asking here, Why hidest Thou thy face? teaches us, that when, at any time, we are under the sense of God's withdrawings, we are concerned to inquire into the reason of them; what is the sin for which He corrects us; and what the good He designs us. Job's sufferings were typical of the sufferings of Christ, from whom not only men hid their faces, (Is. 53: 3.) but God hid his. Witness the darkness which surrounded Him on the cross, when He cried out, My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me? If this were done to these green trees, what shall be done to the dry? They will for ever be forsaken.

III. He humbly pleads with God his own utter me speak, and I will risk all consequences; for my anguish is so excessive, that I could even gnaw my own flesh: and, as I am not conscious of any great crime for which I am thus punished, I would even venture my life to have this matter cleared up.' (6:8—13. 7:7—11.) SCOTT.

Verse 15.

Though he slay, &c.] 'The identical expression is used by an affectionate Hindoo servant when his master beats him; or wife, when beaten by her husband.' ROBERTS.

Verses 15—19.

The first clause in this passage may be properly rendered as an interrogation, 'Lo, He will slay me, shall not I trust?' or, 'though He should slay me, shall not I trust?' Our version is formed from a change in the text, on the authority of the Jewish writers, which in this case seems not at all necessary. Job's friends had intimated, that the return of his prosperity would evince his former integrity, and his present repentance: (5:18—27. 8:20—22. 11:13—20.) but he, conscious that he had walked uprightly before God, and having an assured belief of his faithfulness and mercy, would confide in Him as his Salvation, even though He slew him; and would maintain before Him, that he had not been a wicked dissembler, though he well knew that no hypocrite could escape. From the charge of hypocrisy he knew that God would justify him, and he challenged their proofs. He had lost all, except his character, the testimony of his conscience, and his hope in God, which they endeavored to rend from him; and it would be death to him, not to vindicate himself from their cruel aspersions. —'For now, I shall be silent, and expire.' SCOTT.

(19.) With me.] 'Lit. "at my side," i. e. as an opponent "plead against me."' GOOD.

Verses 20, 23.

Probably Job intended this merely as an appeal to God, that it was not hypocrisy, or gross oppression which had brought his present calamities upon him; yet the address was querulous and passionate, and when the Lord actually spake, Job found he could not answer Him. (40:1—5. 42:1—6.)—'O God, I cannot accuse myself of wilful wickedness against Thee: but if there be any secret iniquity that I am not privy to, do Thou make it known to me, and convince me of it.' Bp. Hall.—10:1, 2. Ps. 139:23, 24.) SCOTT.

Verses 24—28.

(2:7, 8. 30:15—31. Num. 12:11—13.)—In these complaints we discern the effects of strong temptations, and remaining depravity: yet a leaf driven to and fro? and wilt thou pursue the dry stubble?

26 For thou [x] writest bitter things against me, and [y] makest me to possess the iniquities of my youth.

27 Thou [z] puttest my feet also in the stocks, [a] and [*] lookest narrowly unto all my paths; thou [b] settest a print upon the [†] heels of my feet.

28 And [c] he, as a rotten thing, consumeth, [d] as a garment that is moth-eaten.

CHAP. XIV.

Job pleads with God for relief, because of the shortness and misery of life, and the sinfulness of human nature, 1—6. Viewing death as destructive to all earthly hopes, he yet desires to be hid in the grave, and determines to wait the time appointed for his change, 7—15. He complains that God dealt severely with him; and shows that all things on earth, and men especially, are subject to corruption, 16—22.

MAN that is [a] born of a woman is [‡] of [b] few days, and [c] full of trouble.

2 He cometh forth [d] like a flower, and is cut down: he [e] fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not.

3 And [f] dost thou open thine eyes upon such an one, and [g] bringest me into judgment with thee?

4 § Who [h] can bring [i] a clean thing out of an unclean? not one.

x 33:11. 2 Chr. 16:10—12. Prov. 7:22. Acts 16:24.
y 20:11. Ps. 25:7. Prov. 5:11—13. Jer. 31:19. John 5:5,14. z 13:27. Job 33:11. 2 Chr. 16:10—12. Prov. 7:22. Acts 16:24.
a 10:6. 14:16,17. 16:9.
* Heb. observest.
b 2:7.
† Heb. roots.
c 30:17—19,29,30. Num. 12:12.
d 4:19. Ps. 39:11. Hos. 5:12.
a 15:14. 25:4. Ps. 51:5. Matt. 11:11.
‡ Heb. short of days.
b 7:1,6. 9:25. Gen. 47:9. Ps. 39:5. c 5:7. See on Ec. 2:17,23.
d Ps. 90:5—7. 92:7,12. 103:15,16. Is. 40:6—8. Jam. 1:10,11. 1 Pet. 1:24. e 8:9. 9:25,26. 1 Chr. 29:15. Ps. 102: 11. 144:4. Ec. 8:13.
f 7:17,18. 13:25. Ps. 144:3.
g 9:19,20,32. 13:27. Ps. 143:2. Rom. 3:19.
h Heb. Who will give?
i 15:14—16. 25:4—6. Gen. 5:3. Ps. 51:5. John 3:6. Rom. 5:12. 8:3,8. Eph. 2:3.
i Luke 1:35.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

It is very difficult for man to possess superior talents, without some appearance of ostentation and self-preference: yet to be 'clothed with humility' confers a peculiar gracefulness on wisdom, knowledge, and every shining quality.—When the conscience is wounded, and the heart dismayed with the fear of wrath, the prevalence of sin, the force of temptation, or the weight of affliction, we should apply to the Physician of our souls; whose knowledge, power, and love are infinite, who never rejects any sincere application, and who never leaves any case uncured. Though sinners, yet, 'if our heart condemn us not' of hypocrisy, we may have humble confidence before Him. (1 John 3: 18—24.)—Sometimes the greatest comfort we can afford the afflicted, consists in patiently attending to their complaints.—God will surely reprove hypocritical offenders: and a due attention to his holy excellency would fill with terror of his vergeance, all who ignorantly hope for his favor in any unhallowed attempts to serve Him.—Old age often possesses the iniquities of youth, by bodily diseases, ruined circumstances, bad habits, a guilty conscience, or rebellious children: and it is a mercy, if final condemnation be escaped.—Seeking first eternal salvation, let us bear our present trials without a murmur; let us often humble ourselves anew for sins long since committed and repented of, and look forward to death as the period of all our sorrows. And let young persons beware of indulging themselves in sin; for even in this world they may so possess the iniquities of their youth, as to have months of sorrow for moments of pleasure. (John 5:10—14. P. O. 1—14.) Their wisdom and duty therefore consist in remembering their Creator in their early days, that they may have assured hope and sweet peace of conscience, as the solace of their declining years. (Ec. 12:1.) SCOTT.

---

in this ch. Job expresses a regard to God in every thing; shows lively exercises of faith, hope, and confidence in Him; and gives many evidences of a sound judgment and a tender conscience. SCOTT.

(27.) Stocks.] Bsd. 'Clogs.' Good. 'Clog.' Boothr. Roberts give the cut of stocks now used in the E. The Egyptians used stocks like a the cut (a); the two halves were locked together; see Wilkinson. ED. Settest a print.] 'A brand of ownership, perhaps.' Good. 'The fetters upon me leave their marks.' Caryl. The allusion may be to the bastinado, a very ancient punishment, on the soles of the feet. Parkhurst. Gill. Job may refer to tumors in the feet, common in the elephantiasis. Mich.' [Hewlett suggests 'a brand, of the letters of his crime.'] COND. COMM.

(28.) Good unites this v. with the next ch. 'Well may he dissolve as corruption, The moth-worm feeding upon him as a garment, Man, the produce of woman, Few of days, and full of trouble.' ED.

NOTES.

CHAP. XIV. V. 4. In the whole course of nature, the progeny partakes of the propensities and qualities of the creature, from which it sprang. For 'who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? Not one.' Or, how could it be possible for his conduct to be sinless, when his heart was by nature polluted and unclean? In either sense, this

5 Seeing [j] his days are determined, [k] the number of his months are with thee, [l] thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass;

6 [m] Turn from him, that he may [*] rest, till he shall accomplish, [n] as an hireling, his day.

7 For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, [o] that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease.

8 Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof [p] die in the ground;

9 Yet through the scent of water it will bud, [q] and bring forth boughs like a plant.

10 But man dieth, and [†] wasteth away: yea, [r] man giveth up the ghost, and [s] where is he?

11 As the waters fail from the sea, and [t] the flood decayeth and drieth up:

12 So [u] man lieth down, and riseth not: [v] till the heavens be no more, they shall not [x] awake, nor be raised out of their sleep

13 Oh, that thou wouldest [y] hide me in the grave, that thou wouldest keep me se-j 14. 7:1. 12:10. Ps. 39:4. Dan. 5: 26,30. 9:24. 11:36. Luke 12:20. Acts 17:26. Heb. 9:27.

k 21:21.
l 22:13,14. Ps. 104:9,29. Dan. 4:35. Rev. 1:18. 3:7.
m 7:16,19. 10:20. Ps. 39:13.
* Heb. cease.
n 7:1,2. Matt. 20:1—8.
o 14. 19:10. Is. 11:1. 27:6. Dan. 4: 15,23—25. p Is. 26:19. John 12:24. 1 Cor. 15:36.
q Ez. 17:3—10,22—24. 19:10,11. Rom. 11:17—24.
† Heb. is weakened, or, cut off.
r 3:11. 10:18. 11:20. 17:13—16. Gen. 49:33. Matt. 27:50. Acts 5:10. s 12. 7:7—10. 19:26. Prov. 14:32. Luke 16:22,23.
t 6:15—18. Jer. 15:18.
u 10:21,22. 30:23. Ec. 3:19—21. 12:5.
v 19:25—27. Ps. 102:26. Is. 51:6. 65: 17. 66:22. Matt. 24:35. Acts 3:21. 2 Pet. 3:7,10—13. Rev. 20:11. 21:1. x 3:13. 7:21. Is. 26:19. Dan. 12:2. John 11:11—13. Eph. 5:14. 1 Thes. 4:14,15 y 3:17—19. Is. 57:1,2.

life. it is computed, not by months or years, but by days, for we cannot be sure of any day but that it may be our last, 1 Cor. 7: 31.

4. Of the calamitous state of human life; during its few days, man is not only troubled, but full of trouble, either toiling or fretting, grieving or fearing; no day passes without some vexation, some hurry, some disorder or other. Yet since man's days are so full of trouble, it is well they are few, that the soul's imprisonment in the body, and banishment from the Lord, are not perpetual, are not long. When we come to heaven, our days will be many, and perfectly free from trouble, and, in the meantime, faith, hope, and love, balance the present grievances.

5. Of the sinfulness of human life, arising from the sinfulness of the human nature. So some understand that question, v. 4. A clean performance from an unclean principle? Note, Actual transgressions are the natural product of habitual corruption; which is therefore called original sin, because it is the original of all our sins. This, holy Job here laments, as all that are sanctified do, running up the streams to the fountain; (Ps. 51: 5.) and some think he intends it as a plea with God for compassion; 'Lord, be not extreme to mark my sins of human frailty and infirmity, for Thou knowest my weakness; O remember that I am flesh.' The Chaldee paraphrase has an observable reading of this v. Who can make a man clean, that is polluted with sin? Cannot one? that is, God. Or who but God, Who is one, and will spare him?

6. Of the settled period of human life, v. 5. It is certain, God's providence has the ordering of the period of our lives, the laws of nature depend on Him; in Him we live and move, diseases are his servants, He kills and makes alive, nothing comes to pass by chance, no not the execution done by a bow drawn at a venture; it is therefore certain, God's prescience has determined it before, for known unto God are all his works. Whatever He does, He determined, yet with a regard partly to the settled course of nature, (the end and the means are determined together,) and to the settled rules of moral government, punishing evil, and rewarding good, in this life; we are no more governed by the Stoic's blind fate, than by the Epicurean's blind fortune. The bounds God has fixed, we cannot pass, for his counsels are unalterable, his foresight being infallible.

These considerations Job here urges as reasons, why God should not be so strict in taking cognizance of him, and of his slips, and failings, v. 8. and why He should not be so severe in his dealings with him, v. 6. 'Turn from afflicting a poor creature thus, and let him rest awhile. Let it suffice that my life, at best, is as the day of a hireling, a day of toil and labor; I am content to accomplish that, and will make the best of the common hardships of human life; but let me not feel those uncommon tortures, let not my life be as the day of a malefactor, all execution-day.'

V. 7—15. We have seen what Job has to say concerning life, let us now see what he has to say concerning death, which his thoughts were now very much conversant with. It is not unseasonable, when in health, to think of dying; but it is an inexcusable incogitancy, if, when already taken into the custody of death's messengers, we look upon it as a thing at a distance. Here Job shows,

I. That death is a removal for ever out of this world. This he had spoken of before, (ch. 7: 9, 10.) now he mentions it again: though it be a truth that needs not be proved, yet it needs to be much considered, that it may be duly improved.

1. A man cut down by death, will not revive again, as a tree cut down. What hope there is of a tree, he shows very elegantly, v. 7—9. The vegetable life is a cheap and easy thing, the scent of water will recover it; the animal life, in some insects and fowls, is so, the heat of the sun retrieves it; but the rational soul, when once retired, is too great, too noble, a thing to be recalled by any of the powers of nature; it is out of the reach of sun or rain, and cannot be restored but by the immediate operations of Omnipotence itself, v. 10. Two words are here used for man. Geber, a mighty man, though mighty, dies; Adam, a man of the earth, because earthy, gives up the ghost. He is not where he was; but, Is he nowhere? So some read it. Yes, he is somewhere; and it is a very awful consideration to think where they are that have given up the ghost, and where we shall be, when we give it up. It is gone to return no more to this world.

2. A man laid down in the grave will not rise up again, v. 11, 12. like the waters of a land-flood, which spread far, and make a great show, but are shallow, and, when cut off from the sea or river, whose overflowing caused them, soon dry up. The waters of life soon exhale, and disappear; the body, like some of those waters, is buried in the earth; the soul, like others of them, is drawn upward, to mingle with the waters above the firmament. Sir R. Blackmore makes this also to be a dissimilitude; if the waters decay and be dried up in the summer, yet they will return again in the winter; but it is not so with the life of man.

II. That yet man will return to life in another world, at the end of time, when the heavens are no more. The resurrection of the dead was, doubtless, an article of Job's creed, as appears, ch. 19: 26. and to that, it should seem, he has an eye here; where, in the belief of that, we have three things.

1. An humble petition for a hiding-place in the grave, v. 13. It was not only in a passionate weariness of this life, that he wished to die, but in a pious assurance of a better life, to which, at length, he should arise. God hides men in the grave, as we hide our treasure in a place of secrecy and safety. Yet, as long as the bodies of the saints lie in the grave, so long there are some remains of that wrath which they were by nature children of; it will be wholly past only when the body is raised; then death, the last enemy, will be totally destroyed. The bodies of the saints shall not be forgotten in the grave. How we may get through the darkness of this world, we cannot tell; but if we can but get well to the grave, we may with an eye of faith look through the darkness of that, as Job here, and see better days on the other side it, in a better world.

2. A holy resolution patiently to attend the will of God both in his death and in his resurrection, v. 14. Job's friends proving miserable comforters, he set himself to be the more his own comforter. I think it cannot be meant of his return to a prosperous condition in this world. His friends indeed flattered him with the hopes of that, but he himself all along despaired of it. Comforts founded on uncertainties, at best, must needs be uncertain comforts; therefore, no doubt, something more forms a decisive testimony, that Job understood and believed the doctrine of original sin: and though he did not apply it, in so humble and pious a manner, as David afterwards did; (Ps. 51:5, 6.) yet he seems to have intended it as a plea, why the Lord should not deal with him according to his own works, but according to his promised mercy and grace. SCOTT.

---

Verses 7—12.

All these expressions imply Job's belief of that great doctrine [the resurrection of the dead]; though both ancient and modern Sadducees have contrived to misunderstand him. Why else should he speak of death as 'sleep,' and mention a period to it when he shall awake, even 'when the heavens are no more?' (M. R. u—x.)—Either Job meant by these considerations to comfort himself with the hope of having soon and for ever done with this wretched world; or he used them as a plea, why God should grant him respite from trouble to prepare for death, the consequences of which are irreversible ID.

(9.) Scent.] 'A fine metaphor: the water acts on the perishing tree, as strong odors, musk, attar of roses, ammonia, &c. act on a fainting or swooning person.' Dr. A. Clarke. The effect of simple moisture in the E. in at once reviving vegetation, however parched up, has been before alluded to: (note 1 K.18:5.) and irrigation has ever been and still is the most important agricultural labor of W. Asia; and its countries are flourishing or desolate, almost according to the attention war allows to be paid to this. It may be further remarked, that physiologists can discover no other nourishment to be taken from the earth by the roots of plants, than simple water. ED.

Verses 13—15.

Job here earnestly prayed, that God would speedily terminate his sorrows, and set a time when He would release him; or at present dismiss him, till the appointed period of the resurrection, and the general judgment, and then remember him in mercy.—The change, or renovation, which shall take place, at the resurrection, seems principally intended. (Phil. 3.20, 21.)—Wait till, &c. (14) 'I will wait, till I shall exist again.' Sept. SCOTT.

(14.) Appointed time.] 'Warfare, Mont. Mich. Schultens. Boothr. [note, 7:1.] The Heb. words are expressive of the time a soldier remains cret, [z] until thy wrath be passed, that thou wouldest [a] appoint me a set time, and [b] remember me!

14 If a man die, [c] shall he live again? [d] all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till [e] my change come.

15 Thou [f] shalt call, and I will answer thee: [g] thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands.

16 For now [h] thou numberest my steps: dost thou not watch over my sin?

17 My transgression is [i] sealed up in a bag, and thou sewest up mine iniquity.

18 And surely [k] the mountain falling * cometh to nought, and [l] the rock is removed out of his place.

19 The waters wear the stones: thou † washest away the things which grow out of the dust of the earth; and thou [m] destroyest the hope of man.

20 Thou [n] prevailest for ever against him, and he passeth: thou [o] changest his countenance, and sendest him away.

21 His sons come to honor, and [p] he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them.

22 But [q] his flesh upon him shall have pain, and [r] his soul within him shall mourn.

CHAP. XV.

Eliphaz sharply reproves Job, as arrogant and impious, 1—13. He declares God's holiness and man's sinfulness, 14—16. He appeals to observation and tradition, in proof that the wicked are miserable in this world, 17—35.

THEN answered [s] Eliphaz the Temanite, and said,

z Is. 12:1. 26:20,21.
a Mark 13:32. Acts 1:7. 17:31.
b Gen. 8:1. Ps. 106:4. Luke 23:42.
c 19:25,26. Ez. 37:1—14. Matt. 22: 29—32. John 5:28,29. Acts 26:8. 1 Cor. 15:42—44. Rev. 20:13. d 5. 7:1. 42:16. Ps. 27:14. 40:1,2. Lam. 3:25,26. Jam. 5:7,8.
e 1 Cor. 15:51,52. Phil. 3:21.
f 13:22. Ps. 50:4,5. 1 Thes. 4:17. 1 John 2:28.
g 7:21. 10:3,8. Ps. 138:8. 1 Pet. 4:19.
h 10:6,14. 13:27. 31:4. 33:11. 34:21. Ps. 56:8. 139:1—4. Prov. 5:21. Jer. 32:19.
i 21:19. Deut. 32:34. Hos. 13:12.
k Ps. 102:25,26. Is. 40:12. 41:15,16. 54:10. 64:1. Jer. 4:24. Rev. 6:14. 8:8. 20:11.
* Heb. fadeth.
l 18:4. Matt. 27:51.
† Heb. overflowest. Gen. 6:17. 7:21—23.
m 19:10. 27:8. Ps. 30:6,7. Ez. 37:11. Luke 12:19,20.
n Ec. 8:8.
o 14. 2:12. Lam. 4:8.
p 1 Sam. 4:20. Ps. 39:6. Ec. 2:18,19. 9:5. Is. 39:7,8. 63:16.
q 19:20,22,26. 33:19—21.
r Prov. 14:32. Luke 16:23,24.
s 2:11. 4:1. 22:1. 42:7,9.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

It is very useful, seriously to reflect on the shortness and uncertainty of human life; on the vanity and vexation of all human enjoyments; and on the fading nature of all worldly splendor, which has neither substance nor continuance: that we may cease to expect happiness from earthly objects, and learn to 'lay up our treasure in heaven.' But it is still more interesting to advert properly to the cause and the remedy of these evils. 'By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men.' We receive our nature through this corrupted channel, and all the powers of our soul are contaminated by it: for who can produce a holy offspring from an unholy stock? The almighty power of God, indeed, once formed the holy, human nature of the Savior, in the womb of a sinful woman; but that was above, and contrary to, the established order of nature, that He might appear 'in the likeness of sinful flesh,' and yet be without sin. All else are conceived and shapen in iniquity; and we all early manifest an aversion to God and his holy service, and our actual transgressions soon be come numerous. So that, unless we be 'born of the Spirit,' no spiritually good thing dwell sin us, or can proceed from us: and even the little good of the regenerate is greatly defiled. We should therefore learn to abase ourselves before God, as abominable and polluted creatures: we should cease from all dependence on our own works; deprecate the strictness and severity of the divine judgment; and cast ourselves wholly on the mercy of our God, according to the new covenant of grace, through the mediation of our Divine Surety: and we should daily seek the renewing of the Holy Spirit, and look forward to heaven as the only place of perfect holiness and felicity. —As the number of our days and months is appointed, whatever then we find to do, let us do it heartily and immediately. (Ec. 9:10.) SCOTT.

on duty, and his dismission from it. Heath. Till my change, &c.] Till my time to be relieved. Boothr.' COND. COMM.

(17.) Sealed up in a bag.] 'An allusion to the custom [extant in England in 1820,] of collecting evidence of state transgressions, sealing them up in a bag, and presenting them to judges and officers of state to be examined, in order to trials and judgment. Some suppose the allusion is to money sealed up in bags; which is common in the E.' Dr. A. Clarke. So pearls, money, and perhaps other things are observed, on the ancient monuments of Egypt, done up in bags sealed doubtless. ED.

Verses 18, 19.

The mountain falling cometh to nought, &c.] An allusion to the vast operations of God's 'laws of nature.' Mountains were once evidently more precipitous than now, and the constant efforts (as it were) of gravitation, assisted by the atmosphere &c. overcome the cohesion of their hardest rocks, which fall upon the plain; thus, in the lapse of ages, abrading them to pyramidal shapes, or smoothing them to gently rounded hills, soon clothed with grass and wood; water rolls these disjointed stones together and reduces them to sand, with which it fills the valleys. Successive tribes of vegetation, rising and decaying, at length fit the soil for the sustenance of man: whose abodes may be suddenly swept away by the same waters; when the river rises with irresistible power far above its accustomed banks. Or, Job may allude to 'the flood.' Good, Boothr. Tindal, &c. understand, 'as their overflowings sweep the soil from the land.' The alluvion brought down by the stream, and deposited on one side of the river, is again washed away to be dropped elsewhere. ED.

Verse 22.

'Stock tr. thus, both to the spirit and letter: "But over him his flesh shall grieve, and over him his breath shall mourn," and adds, "In the daring spirit of oriental poetry, the flesh, or body, and the breath, are made conscious beings; the former lamenting its putrefaction in the grave, the latter mourning over the mouldering clay, which it once enlivened."' Dr. A. CLARKE.

NOTES.

CHAP. XV. V. 1—13. 'Truly thou makest void fear,' (i. e. the fear of God;) and diminishest meditation (or, worship) 'before Him.' SCOTT.

(2.) Belly.] 'Beten: any part of the cavity of the body, whether

CHAP. XV. Perhaps Job thought, if he had not convinced, he had, at least, silenced, his friends;

2 Should [b] a wise man utter * vain knowledge, and [c] fill his belly with the east wind?

3 Should [d] he reason with unprofitable talk? or with speeches wherewith he can do no good?

4 Yea, [e] thou † castest off fear, and [f] restrainest ‡ prayer before God.

5 For thy mouth § uttereth thine iniquity, and [g] thou choosest the tongue of the crafty.

6 Thine [h] own mouth condemneth thee, and not I: yea, [i] thine own lips testify against thee.

7 Art thou [j] the first man that was born? [k] or wast thou made before the hills?

8 Hast thou heard [l] the secret of God? and dost [m] thou restrain wisdom to thyself?

9 What [n] knowest thou, that we know not? what understandest thou, which is not in us?

10 With us are both [o] the grey-headed, and very aged men, much elder than thy father.

11 Are [p] the consolations of God small with thee? [q] is there any secret thing with thee?

12 Why doth [r] thine heart carry thee away? and what do [s] thy eyes wink at,

13 That thou [t] turn-

b 11:2,3. 13:2. Jam. 3:13.
* Heb. knowledge of wind. 6:26. 8:2. c Hos. 12:1.
d 13:4,5. 16:2,3. 26:1—3. Mal. 3:13—15. Matt. 12:36,37. Col. 4:6. 1 Tim. 6:4,5.
e 4:5,6. 6:14. Ps. 36:1—3. Zeph. 1:6.
† Heb. makest void. Ps. 119:126. Rom. 3:31. Gal. 2:21.
f 5:8. 27:10 1 Chr. 10:13,14. Hos. 7:14. Am. 6:10. Luke 18:1.
‡ Or, speech.
§ Heb. teacheth. 9:22—24. 12:6. Mark 7:21,22. Luke 6:45. Jam. 1:26. g Ps. 50:19,20. 52:2—4. 64:3. 120:2, 3. Jer. 9:3—5,8. Jam. 3:5—8.
h 9:20. Ps. 64:8. Matt. 12:37. 26:65. Luke 19:22. 33:8—12. 34:5—9. 35:2,3. 40:8. 42:3.
i 10. 12:12. Gen. 4:1.
k 34:3,&c. Ps. 90:2. Prov. 8:22—25.
l 11:6. Deut. 29:29. Ps. 25:14. Prov. 3:32. Jer. 23:18. Am. 3:7. Matt. 11:25 13:11,35. John 15:15. Rom. 11:34. 16:25,26. 1 Cor. 2:9—11,16.
m 12:2. 13:5,6.
n 13:2. 26:3,4. 2 Cor. 10:7. 11:5,21—30.
o 8:8—10. 12:20. 32:6,7. Deut. 32:7. Prov. 16:31. p 5:8—26. 11 13—19. 2 Cor. 1:3—5. 7:6.
q 8. 13:2. 1 K. 22:24.
r Ec. 11:9. Mark 7:21,22. Acts 5:3,4. 8:22. Jam. 1:14,15. s 17:2 Ps. 35:19. Prov. 6:13.
t 25—27. 9:4. Rom. 8:7,8.

but, in this ch. they begin a second attack, each charging him afresh, with as much vehemence as before.

V. 1—14. Several great crimes Eliphaz here charges Job with, only because he would not own himself a hypocrite.

I. He charges him with folly and absurdity, v. 2, 3. Bildad began thus, (ch. 8: 2.) and Zophar, ch. 11: 2, 3. It is common for angry disputants thus to represent one another's reasonings as impertinent and ridiculous, more than there is cause, forgetting the doom of him that calls his brother Raca, and Thou fool. It is true, unprofitable talk is evil talk: we must give an account, in the great day, not only for wicked, but for idle words. Speeches, therefore, which do no good, were better unspoken. Vain knowledge and unprofitable talk ought to be reproved and checked, especially in a wise man, whom it worst becomes, and who does most hurt by the bad example.

II. With impiety and irreligion, v. 4. See what religion is summed up in—fearing God, and praying to Him; the former the most needful principle, the latter the most needful practice. Surely those have no reverence of God's majesty, no dread of his wrath, no care about their souls and eternity, who make no applications to God for his grace. Those who are prayerless, are fearless and graceless. When the fear of God is cast off, all sin is let in, and a door open to all manner of profaneness. It is especially bad with those who have had some fear of God, but have now cast it off; have been frequent in prayer, but now restrain it. How are they fallen! How is their first love lost! It denotes a kind of force put on themselves. The fear of God would cleave to them, but they throw it off; prayer would be uttered, but they restrain it, and, in both, baffle their convictions. Those who either omit prayer, or straiten and abridge themselves in it, quenching the spirit of adoption, and denying themselves the liberty they might take in the duty, restrain prayer: this is bad enough, but it is worse to restrain others from prayer, to prohibit and discourage prayer, as Darius, Dan. 6: 7.

Now Eliphaz charges this on Job, either, 1. As his own practice. He thought Job talked of God with such liberty, as if he had been his equal, and charged Him so vehemently with hard usage, and challenged Him so often to a fair trial, that he had quite thrown off all religious regard to Him. This charge was utterly false, yet wanted not some color. We ought not only to take care to keep up prayer and the fear of God, but never to drop any unwary expressions, which may give occasion to those who seek to question our sincerity and constancy in religion. Or, 2. As what others would infer from his doctrine. 'If this be true,' (thinks Eliphaz,) 'that a man may be thus sorely afflicted, and yet be a good man, then farewell all religion, farewell prayer and the fear of God. Who will be honest, if the tabernacles of robbers prosper? (ch. 12: 6.) If there be no forgiveness with God, (ch. 7: 21.) who will fear Him? If He laugh at the trial of the innocent, (ch. 9: 23.) if He be so difficult of access, (ch. 9: 32.) who will pray to Him?' Note, It is an injustice, which even wise and good men are too often guilty of, in the heat of disputation, to charge on their adversaries those consequences of their opinions, which are not fairly drawn from them, and which really they abhor. This is not doing as we would be done by.

Upon this strained inuendo, Eliphaz grounds that high charge of impiety, v. 5. 'Thou teachest, so the word is, others the same hard thoughts of God and religion.' It is bad to break even the least commandment, but worse to teach men so, Matt. 5: 19. If we ever thought evil, let us suppress the evil thought, (Prov. 30: 32.) and by no means utter it, that is publishing it with allowance, to the dishonor of God, and the damage of others. Observe, When men have cast off fear and prayer, their mouths utter iniquity. They that cease to do good, soon learn to do evil. But, thou choosest the tongue of the crafty, i. e. 'Thou utterest thine iniquity with some show of piety, mixing some good with the bad, as tradesmen, to help off their wares.' The mouth of iniquity could not do so much mischief as it does, without the tongue of the crafty. Rom. 16: 18. The tongue of the crafty speaks with design and deliberation; therefore they that use it may be said to choose it, as that which will serve their purpose better than the tongue of the upright: but it will be found, at last, that honesty is the best policy.

Eliphaz, in his first discourse, had proceeded against Job on mere surmise; (ch. 4: 6, 7.) but now he has got proof against him from his own discourses, v. 6. But he should have considered that he and his fellows had provoked him to say that which now they took advantage off; and that was not fair. Those are most effectually condemned, that are condemned by themselves, Tit. 3: 11. Luke 19: 22. Many a man needs no more to sink him, than for his own tongue to fall on him.

III. With intolerable arrogancy and self-conceitedness. Job's demand (ch. 12: 3.) was just, and reasonable, and modest; but see how they seek occasion against him, as if he pretended to be wiser than any man. Because he will not grant to them, they will have it thought he claims to himself, the monopoly of wisdom, v. 7—9. What knowest thou that we know not? How natural such replies in the heat of argument! But how simple they look afterward, on the review! As opposing the stream of antiquity, v. 10. We have the fathers on our side; all the ancient doctors of the church. A thing soon said, but not so soon proved; and, when proved, truth is not so soon discovered and proved by it, as most people imagine. David preferred right scripture-knowledge before that of antiquity, Ps. 119: 100.

IV. With a contempt of the counsels and comforts of his friends, v. 11. It is true, they had said some very good things, but, in their application to Job, they were miserable comforters. We are apt to think that great and considerable, which we ourselves say, when others perhaps, with good reason, think it small and trifling. Paul found that those who seemed to be somewhat, yet, in conference, added nothing to him. He represents this as a slight put on divine consolations in general. It is a great affront to God, and an evidence of a degenerate, depraved mind, to disesteem and undervalue spiritual delights. 'What!' (says Eliphaz,) 'is there any secret thing with thee? Hast thou some cordial to support thyself with, that nobody else knows any thing of?' Or, 'Is there some secret sin harbored and indulged in thy bosom, which hinders the operation of divine comforts?' None disesteem divine comforts but those that secretly affect the world and the flesh.

V. With opposition to God Himself, and to religion, v. 12, 13. 'Why doth thine heart carry thee away into such indecent, irreligious, expressions?' Every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust. There is a violence, an ungovernable impetus, in the turnings of the soul; the corrupt heart carries men away, as it were, by force, against their convictions. 'What is it that thine eyes wink at? What have we said, that deserves to be thus slighted? Nay, that thou turnest thy spirit against God?' But, They that forsake God will soon break out in open enmity to Him. It is the character of the wicked, that they set their mouth against the heavens, (Ps. 73: 9.) which is a certain indication, that the spirit is turned against God. Eliphaz wanted candor and the region of the thorax or abdomen.' Dr. A. Clarke. 'The E. wind, qadim, is not only vehement, but also deadly to fruits and herbs; see Am. 4: 9. Is. 27: 8.' Rosenm. 'It is a very stormy wind in the Levant (or E. Mediterranean), supposed to be the same as that called by the Greeks euroclydon, the east storm; Acts 27: 14.' Dr. A. Clarke.

---

Verse 11.

This verse is variously rendered: 'the sense as expressed in the Vulg. or in our own version, or Coverdale's, is plain enough. Hast thou been so unfaithful to God, that He has withdrawn his consolations? And is there any bosom sin thou wilt not give up, that has thus provoked thy Maker.' Dr. A. Clarke, whom see. 'He inveighs against Job, because he had made so little of his friends' consolations, which he arrogantly calls consolations of God, referring specially to that oracle, 4: 17—21. whose words he presently (v. 14, 15, 16.) repeats.' Rosenm. who tr. the last clause, 'et verbum lenissime tecum habitum, sc. facisne parvi?' Ed.

est thy spirit against God, [u] and lettest such words go out of thy mouth?

14 What [x] is man, that he should be clean? and he which is born of a woman, that he should be righteous?

15 Behold, [y] he putteth no trust in his saints; yea, the heavens are not clean in his sight.

16 How much more [z] abominable and filthy is man, which [a] drinketh iniquity like water.

[Practical Observations.]

17 ¶ I will show thee, [b] hear me; and that which I have seen I will declare;

18 Which wise men have told [c] from their fathers, and have not hid it:

19 Unto [d] whom alone the earth was given, and no stranger passed among them.

20 The wicked man [e] travaileth with pain all his days, and [f] the number of years is hidden to the oppressor.

21 A [g] dreadful sound is in his ears: [h] in prosperity [h] the destroyer shall come upon him.

22 He [i] believeth not that he shall return out u 10:3. 12:6. Ps. 34:13. Jam. 1:23. 3:2—5. x 9:2. 14:4. 25:4—6. 1 K. 8:46. 2 Chr. 6:36. Ps. 51:5. Prov. 20:9. Ec. 7:20,29. John 3:6 Rom. 7:18. Gal. 3:22. Eph. 2:2,3. 1 John 1:8—10.

y See on 4:18.—25:5 Is. 6:2—5.
z 4:19. 42:5. Ps. 14:1—3. Rom. 1:28—30. 3:9—19. Tit. 3:3. a 34:7. Prov. 19:28.
b 5:27. 13:5,6. 33:1. 34:2. 36:2. c 12. 8:8. Ps. 71:18. 78:3—6. Is. 38:19.
d Gen. 10:25,32. Joel 3:17.
e Rom 8:22.
f Ps. 90:3,4. Luke 12:19—21. Jam. 5:1—5.
g Heb. sound of fears. 18:11. Gen. 3:9,10. Lev. 26:36. 2 K. 7:6. Prov. 1:25,27.
h 18:5—19. 20:5—7,22—24. 1 Sam. 25:38—33. Ps. 73:18—20. 92:7. Acts 12:21—23. 1 Thes. 5:3.
i 1 Cor. 10:10. Rev. 9:11.
i 5:11. 9:13. 2 K. 6:33. Is. 8:21,22. Matt. 27:5.

charity, else he would not have put such a harsh construction on the speeches of one of such a settled reputation for piety, and now in temptation. This was, in effect, to give the cause on Satan's side

VI. With justifying himself so far, as even to deny his share in the common corruption of the human nature, v. 14. What is man, that he should be clean? i. e. pretend to be so, or that any should expect to find him so. Man, in his fallen state, cannot pretend to be clean and righteous before God, either to acquit himself to God's justice, or recommend himself to his favor. He is therefore to be adjudged unclean and unrighteous, because born of a woman, from whom he derives a corrupt nature, which is both his guilt and his pollution.* With these plain truths Eliphaz thinks to convince Job, whereas he had just now said the same, ch. 14: 4. But does it therefore follow, that Job is a hypocrite, and a wicked man, which is all that he denied? By no means. Though man, as born of a woman, is not clean, yet, as born again of the Spirit, he is. Further to evince this, he here shows,

That the brightest creatures are imperfect and impure before God, v. 15. Man much more so, v. 16. If saints are not to be trusted, much less sinners. If the heavens are not pure, which are as God made them, much less man, who is degenerated. Nay, he is abominable and filthy in the sight of God, and, if ever he repent, he is so in his own sight, and therefore abhors himself. Sin is an abominable thing; such is the filthiness of man, that he drinks iniquity as greedily, and with as much pleasure, as a man drinks water when thirsty. It is his constant drink; it is natural to sinners to commit iniquity. It gratifies, but does not satisfy, the appetites of the old man. It is like water to a man in a dropsy. The more men sin, the more they would sin.

V. 17—35. Eliphaz, having reproved Job for his answers, here comes to maintain his own thesis, on which he built his censure of Job. His opinion is, That those who are wicked are certainly miserable; whence he would infer, that those who are miserable are certainly wicked, and that therefore Job was so. Observe,

I. His solemn preface to this discourse, in which he bespeaks Job's attention; which he had little reason to expect, he having given so little heed to, and put so little value on, what Job had said, v. 17. 'I will show thee what is worth hearing, and not reason, as thou, with unprofitable talk.' Thus apt are men, when they condemn the reasonings of others, to commend their own. He promises to teach him, 1. From his own experience and observation. It is good to notice the providences of God, from which many a good lesson may be learned. Good observations which we have found benefit by ourselves, we should be ready to communicate for the benefit of others: and we may then speak boldly, when we declare what we have seen. 2. From the wisdom of the ancients, v. 18. Note, Mode n wisdom and learning are very much derived from ancient: what we have learned from our ancestors, we must transmit to our posterity. See Ps. 78: 3—6. If the thread of the knowledge of many ages be cut off by the carelessness of one, and nothing be done to preserve it pure and entire, all that succeed, fare the worse. The authorities Eliphaz vouched, were authorities indeed, men of rank and figure, v. 19. The dictates of wisdom come with advantage from persons in places of dignity and power, as Solomon; yet there is a wisdom which none of the princes of this world knew.

II. The discourse itself. He here aims to show,

1. That those who are wise and good, do ordinarily prosper in this world. This he only hints at, v. 19. That those of whose mind he was, were such as had the earth given to them, and them only; they enjoyed it entirely and peaceably, and no stranger passed among them, either to share with them, or to give disturbance to them. Job had said, The earth is given into the hand of the wicked, ch 9: 24. 'No,' says Eliphaz, 'it is given into the hands of the saints, and runs along with their faith: they are not robbed and plundered by strangers and enemies, as thou by the Sabeans and Chaldeans.' But because many of God's people have remarkably prospered in this world, as Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, it does not therefore follow, that those who are crossed and impoverished, as Job, are not God's people.

2. That wicked people, and particularly oppressors, and tyrannizing rulers, are subject to continual terrors, live very uncomfortably, and perish very miserably. On this head he enlarges, showing that even they who impiously dare God's judgments, yet cannot but dread them, and will feel them at last. He speaks in the singular number, the wicked man, meaning, as some think, Nimrod, or perhaps Chedorlaomer, or some such mighty hunter before the Lord. I fear he meant Job himself, whom he expressly charges both with the tyranny, and with the timorousness, here described, ch. 22: 9, 10. Here he thinks the application easy, and that Job might, in this description, as in a glass, see his own face. Now,

(1.) It is the prodigious madness of presumptuous sinners, that they enter the lists with Omnipotence, v. 25. That is generally taken for a further description of the sinner's daring presumption, v. 26. He runs upon Him, upon God Himself, in a direct opposition to Him, to his precepts and providences, even on his neck, as a desperate combatant, when he finds himself an unequal match for his adversary, flies in his face, though, at the same time, he falls on his sword's point, or the sharp spike of his buckler.

* Man's liability to sin, (arising through the operation, after Adam's transgression, of the physical laws of God, from the degeneracy of his natural parentage,) is not his guilt. The circumstances of a man's birth may be the cause or reason of guilt, according to the choice he himself wills between good and evil presented to him. Further, this corrupt liability, the consequence, (in God's course of nature,) of Adamic descent, may, in a certain sense, be called 'imputation of Adam's sin:' but to speak of the 'guilt of being born of a woman,' is not proper, as to speak of the 'sin or guilt' of being born on the western instead of the eastern continent. Modern divines therefore use the term 'constituted sinners.' 'They [our first parents] being the root of all mankind, the guilt of this sin was imputed, and the same death in sin and corrupted nature conveyed to all their posterity, descending from them by ordinary generation.' Conf. of Faith, of U. S. Presb. Ch. It is a lamentable fact, that the human race are born with greater tendency to evil than to good: but blessed be the God of justice and goodness, that He has provided for our fallen nature another covenant than that of innocency, whereby all may return to Him, through Christ, the second Adam. 'See Essay on Native Depravity,' by Dr. Woods. Ed.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—16. It is easier to answer, than to convince, an opponent: yet when arguments fail, contempt and railing generally most abound; for far more are capable of slander and declamation, than of reasoning with cogency and temper.—'The wisdom which is from above,' teaches us to consider the tendency and effect of our knowledge, and renders us careful not to satisfy ourselves, or amuse others, with unprofitable notions, empty words, or delusive arguments.—Men's own mouths often proclaim their iniquity; and even betray the secret hypocrisy of their hearts: yet we should carefully distinguish between the language of infirmity and temptation, and that of deliberate impiety.—We should watch and pray against an indecent and self-sufficient spirit; and that we may not misrepresent men's words, nor accuse them without evidence. In the worst estate of man on earth, he has many unmerited comforts from God.—But, alas! 'what is man that he should be clean,' or righteous! Indeed, pious men in every age, and nation, who have differed and engaged in controversy in other things, have unanimously agreed, that our fallen nature is abominable and polluted, delighting in iniquity, and drinking it down with greediness. SCOTT.

Verses 14—16.

(4:17—21. 9:1—3, 14—21. 14:1—6.)—It is evident, man naturally craves sinful indulgences with a greedy appetite.—This text forms a conclusive proof, that these disputants were deeply convinced of the doctrine of original sin, and the total depravity of human nature, as far as man is left to his own innate propensities. But that doctrine could not fairly be made to bear on the point at issue; because Job did not attempt to justify himself from the charge of sinfulness, but merely from that of hypocrisy, or gross wickedness. SCOTT.

Verses 17—35.

Eliphaz here again labored to confirm his position, that the righteous prosper, and the wicked are miserable, in this world. He stated, that this was not merely his own opinion, but a tradition received from their fathers: and one which wise men had always approved and of darkness, [k] and he is waited for of the sword.

23 He [l] wandereth abroad for bread, saying, Where is it? he knoweth that [m] the day of darkness is ready at his hand.

24 Trouble and [n] anguish shall make him afraid; they shall prevail against him, [o] as a king ready to the battle.

25 For [p] he stretcheth out his hand against God, and [q] strengtheneth himself against the Almighty.

26 He [r] runneth upon him, [s] even on his neck, upon the thick bosses of his bucklers:

27 Because he covereth his face with his fatness, and maketh collops of fat on his flanks.

28 And he dwelleth in [u] desolate cities, and in houses which no man inhabiteth, [x] which are ready to become heaps.

29 He shall not be rich, [y] neither shall his substance continue, neither shall he prolong the perfection thereof upon the earth.

30 He shall not [z] de-

k 20:21,25.
l 3:3,4. Gen. 4:12. Ps. 59:15. 109:10. Lam. 5:6,9. Heb. 11:37,38.
m 18:5,6,18. Ec. 11:8. Joel 2:2. Am. 5:20. Zeph. 1:15. Heb. 10:27. n 5:2—4. Ps. 119:143. Prov. 1:27. Is 13:8. Matt. 26:37,38. Rom. 2:9.
o Prov. 6:11. 24:34.
p Lev. 26:23. Ps. 73:9,11. Dan. 5:23. Mal. 3:13. Acts 9:5. 12:1,23.
q 9:4. 40:9—11. Ex. 5:2,3. 9:17. 1 Sam. 4:7—9. 6:6. Is. 52:7. Is. 8:9,10. 10:12—14. 41:4—7.
r 2 Chr. 28:22. 33:13—17.
s 16:12. Gen. 49:8. Ps. 18:40.
t Deut. 32:15. Is. 17:10. 73:7. 78:31. Is. 6:10. Jer. 5:28 u 3:14 13:15. Is. 5:8—10. Mic. 7:13.
x Jer. 9:11. 25:18. 51:37. Mic. 3:12.
y 20:22—28. 21:7—20. 27:16,17. Is. 43:16,17. Luke 12:19—21. 16:2,19—24. Jam. 1:11. 5:1—3. z 22. 18:21,22. 18:5 5,18. Matt. 8:12 22:13. 2 Pet. 2:17. Jude 13.

(2.) He wraps himself in security and sensuality, v. 27. This signifies both the pampering of his flesh, and hardening his heart thereby against the the judgments of God. Note, To gratify the appetites to the full, turns to the damage of the soul and its interests. They that fill themselves with wine and strong drink, abandon all that is serious, and flatter themselves with hopes that to-morrow shall be as this day. Wo to them that are thus at ease in Zion, Luke 12: 19.

(3.) He enriches himself with the spoils of all about him, v. 28. dwells in cities he himself desolated, Isa. 5: 8. Proud and cruel men take a strange pleasure in ruins, when they are of their own making, Ps. 9: 6. Those that aim to engross the world to themselves, and grasp at all, lose the comfort of all, and make themselves miserable in the midst of all. This tyrant, we are told, v. 35. gains his point, and makes himself master of cities that have all the marks of antiquity upon them, by malice and falsehood, the two chief ingredients of his wickedness, who was a liar and a murderer from the beginning.

(4.) Let us see now what is the miserable condition of this wicked man, both in spiritual and temporal judgments. His inward peace is continually disturbed. He who knows what is in men, tells us, that a wicked man has so little comfort and satisfaction in his own breast, that he is rather to be pitied than envied. His own conscience accuses him, v. 20. He is continually uneasy at the thought of the cruelties he has been guilty of, and the blood in which he has imbued his hands; his sins stare him in the face at every turn. He is vexed at the uncertainty of the continuance of his wealth and power; the number of years is hidden to the oppressor. He is under a certain fearful expectation of judgment and fiery indignation, which keeps him in continual terror and consternation, so that he dwells with Cain in the land of Nod, or commotion, and is made like Pashur, Magor-missabib—A terror round about, Jer. 20: 3, 4. A dreadful sound is in his ears, v. 21. He knows that God is angry with him, and that all the world hates him; he has done nothing to make his peace with either, therefore he thinks that every one who meets him will slay him. Fear came in, at first, with sin, (Gen. 3: 10.) and still attends it. Even in prosperity, he is apprehensive the destroyer will come upon him, Ezek. 32: 25. This is further set forth, v. 22. that he is, in his own apprehension, waited for of the sword, Rev. 13: 10. Again, (v. 23.) He knows, the day of darkness (or the night of darkness rather) is ready at his hand, and cannot be put off. This day of darkness is something beyond death; it is that day of the Lord which, to all wicked people, will be darkness and not light, and in which they will be doomed to utter, endless darkness. Some wicked people, though they seem secure, have already received the sentence of death, eternal death, within themselves, and plainly see hell gaping for them. No marvel that it follows, (v. 24.) Trouble and anguish (that inward tribulation and anguish of soul spoken of, Rom. 2: 8, 9. which is the effect of God's indignation and wrath fastening on the conscience) shall make him afraid of worse to come. What is the hell before him, if this be the hell within him? And though he would fain shake off his fears, drink, and jest them away, they shall overpower him, as a king ready to the battle, with forces too strong to be resisted. He that would keep his peace, let him keep a good conscience.

If in trouble, he despairs of getting out, v. 22. It is the misery of damned sinners, that they know they shall never return out of that utter darkness, nor pass the gulf there fixed.

He perplexes himself with continual care, especially if Providence ever so little frown on him, v. 23. Such a dread has he of poverty, and such a waste does he discern on his estate, that he is already, in his own imagination, wandering abroad for bread, going a-begging for a meal's meat, and saying, Where is it? Luke 12: 17. Perhaps he pretends fear of wanting, as an excuse of his covetous practices; justly may he be brought to this extremity at last. How should they find mercy, who never showed mercy?

(5.) His outward prosperity will soon come to an end, and all his confidence, and comfort, with it. How can he prosper, when God runs upon him? So some understand v. 26. See how God's judgments cross this worldly, wicked man, in all his cares, desires, and projects, and so complete his misery. He is in care, [1.] To get, but he shall not be rich, v. 29. His own covetous mind keeps him from being truly rich. He is not rich, that has not enough; and he has not enough, that does not think he has. It is contentment only that is great gain. Providence remarkably keeps some from being rich, defeating their enterprises, breaking their measures, and keeping them always behind-hand. Many that get much by fraud and injustice, yet do not grow rich; it goes as it comes, it is got by one sin, and spent on another. [2.] To keep what he has got, but in vain, his substance shall not continue. God blasts it. Some have themselves lived to see the ruin of those estates which have been raised by oppression; it goes, however, with a curse to those who succeed. Ill-gotten property will scarcely be enjoyed by the third generation. [3.] To leave what he has got and kept, to his children after him; but the branches of his family shall perish, in whom he hoped to have lived and flourished, and to have had the reputation of making them all great men, v. 32, 33. They shall die in the beginning of their days, and never come to maturity. Many a man's family is ruined by his iniquity. [4.] To enjoy it a great while himself; but in that also he is crossed. 1. He may perhaps be taken from it, v. 30. By the breath of God's mouth; Isa. 30: 33. or, by his word; He speaks, and it is done immediately—he shall go away, and leave his wealth taught; and they especially, whose exclusive authority and prosperity were the reward of their singular piety.—Many important truths were contained in this discourse: but, as far as it related to temporal prosperity or adversity, it admitted of numerous exceptions; and it implied an invidious application to the case of Job.—Thus Eliphaz inadvertently took the part of Satan. (1:9—11. 4:1.) Scott.

(17—30.) 'Bildad had quoted half a dozen lines of the ancient poetry, that were in the proverbial style. Eliphaz is going to cite a much larger number of the descriptive kind, and in a sublimer strain. He prefaces the citation with observing, 1st. that the facts alleged in these vs. were verified by his own experience; "that which I have seen I will declare." 2dly. that these vs. contain the observations of the wise in very ancient ages; and had been carefully conveyed down by oral tradition to the present times; "which wise men have told from their fathers and have not hid it:" and 3dly. that these traditional vs. had been preserved pure and perfect, by means of the peculiar circumstances of the persons, through whose hands they had passed: for no foreign colony had intermixed with them; "unto whom alone the land was given." Neither had their land ever been conquered; "and no stranger came upon them;" characters, which determine the country spoken of to be Arabia Felix; and consequently the cited poem to be an Arabian poem. We have then the pleasure of reading a piece of poetry, (v. 20—30.) that was the production of Arabia Felix; more ancient perhaps than the old Canaanitish song quoted by Moses, and no less admirable for its sublimity than venerable for its age.'

Scott, in Hewlett.

(26.) Runneth upon, &c.] Vulg. and Arab. 'erecto collo, et pingui cervice.' Alluding to the rushing of bulls, rams, or cocks together in fighting, when the nerves and muscles of the neck are swelled and strengthened in the excitement of rage. Some nations of Africa are said thus to rush upon an enemy, with their heads down. Bosses.] Gabbey. Mont. 'Thickness of the umbones or bosses.' Chal. 'Hardness of the umbo or boss.' Sept. 'Thickness of the back (nōtou).' Wilkinson describes shields 'covered with bulls, hides, and bound with metal borders, and studded with pins,' as seen on the ancient Egyptian monuments. Note, 2 Chr. 33.7. Shields with the umbo, centron, or spike, are given in Vegetius, as in use among the Romans. Dr. A. Clarke speaks of the highland target as such: and a cut is here given (from Raffles) of the Javanese round shield; like some in Vegetius. One of brass, with studs, pins and a 5 in. iron spike was dug up in Wales. Ed.

Rosenm. renders this v. 'runs upon him with his neck. (sciliget, erect, i. e. proudly,) with the greatest insolence. Ps. 75:6. For he who enters a combat with his neck erect, vaunts himself strong and fearless, with infatuated confidence, as one who makes nothing of his adversary. Cicero has 'tantis cervicibus,' ('so great necks.') With the thickness of the backs of his shields, with his thick shields, rushes with great impetus upon God; as if he thought he could conquer Him by the strength of his arms. "The backs of shields" are the prominences in their centre, thicker than the other parts. Schultens quotes an Arabic proverb, similar; "he turns to him the back of the shield," i. e. bears himself as a most obstinate adversary. By "arms" here is signified, wealth, power, and all the supports, by which the impious are borne up, as if, relying on and sustained by these, they could never be overthrown.' Rosenm. Id.

(28.) Dwelleth, &c.] As an exile amid ruins, perhaps, such as he part out of darkness; [a] the flame shall dry up his branches, and [b] by the breath of his mouth shall he go away.

31 Let [c] not him that is deceived [d] trust in vanity: for [e] vanity shall be his recompense.

32 It shall be [#] accomplished before his time, [f] and his branch shall not be green.

33 He shall [g] shake off his unripe grape as the vine, [h] and shall cast off his flower as the olive.

34 For [i] the congregation of hypocrites shall be desolate, and fire shall consume [k] the tabernacles of bribery.

35 They [l] conceive mischief and bring forth † vanity, and their belly prepareth deceit.

CHAP. XVI.

Job reproves his friends, for their conduct towards him; and shows how he would have acted, if they had been afflicted as he was, 1—5 He pathetically describes his heavy and varied sorrows, 6—16. As a dying man, he appeals to God to attest his integrity, 17—22.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 I have [a] heard many such things: ‡ miserable comforters are ye all.

3 Shall § vain words have an end? or [b] what emboldeneth thee that thou answerest?

4 I also could speak as ye do; [c] if your soul were in my soul's stead, I could heap [d] up words against you, and [e] shake mine head at you.

5 But [f] I would strengthen you with my mouth, and the moving of my lips should assuage your grief.

6 ¶ Though I speak, [g] my grief is not assuaged: and though I forbear, ‖ what am I eased?

7 But now [h] he hath made me weary: thou [i] hast made desolate all my company.

8 And thou hast filled me with wrinkles, which [k] is a witness against me: and [l] my leanness rising up in me beareth witness to my face.

9 He [m] teareth me in his wrath, who hateth me: [n] he gnasheth upon me with his teeth; [o] mine enemy sharpeneth his eyes upon me.

10 They have [p] gaped

a 20:26. Is. 30:33. Ez. 15:4—7. 20; 47,48. Matt. 25:41. Mark 9:43—49. 2 Thes. 1:8,9.
b 4:9. Is. 11:4. Rev. 19:15. c 12:16. Is. 44:20. Gal. 6:3,7. Eph. 5:6. d Ps. 62:10. Is. 59:4. Jon. 2:8.
e 4:8. Prov. 22:8. Is. 17:10,11. Hos. 8:7. Gal. 6:8.
* Or, cut off. 22:16. Ps. 55:23. Ec. 7:17.
f 8:16—19. 14:7—9. 18:16,17. Ps. 52: 5—8. Is. 27:11. Ez. 17:8—10. Hos. 9:16. 14:5—7. John 15:6.
g Is. 33:9. Rev. 6:13.
h Deut. 28:39,40.
i 8:13. 20:5. 27:8. 36:13. Is. 33:14, 15. Matt. 24:51.
k 11:14. 12:6. 22:5—9. 29:12—17. 1 Sam. 3:3. 12:3. Mic. 7:3.
l Ps. 7:14. Is. 59:4,5. Jam. 1:15.
† Or, iniquity.
a 6:6,25. 11:2,3. 13:5. 19:2,3. 26:2, 3. Jam. 1:19.
‡ Or, troublesome. 13:4 Is. 65:5,6. 1 Sil. 1:16.
§ Heb. words of wind. 6:26. 8:2. 15: 2. b 20:3. 32:3—6. Matt. 22:46 Tit. 1: 11. 2:8. c 6:2—5,14. Matt. 7:12. Rom 12:15. 1 Cor. 12:26.
d 11:2. 35:16. Prov. 10:19. Ec. 10:14.
e 2 K. 19:21. Ps. 22:7. 44:14 109:25 Jer. 18:16. Lam. 2:15. Matt. 27:39, 40.
f 4:3,4. 6:14. 29:25. Ps. 27:13. Prov 27:9,17. Is. 35:3,4. 1 Thes. 5:14.
g 10:1. Ps. 77:1—9. 88:15—18.
‖ Heb. what goeth from me?
h 3:17. 7:3,16. 10:1. Ps. 6:6,7. Prov 3:11,12. Is. 50:4. Mic. 6:3.
i 1:15—19. 29:5,&c.
k 10:17. Ruth 1:21.
l Ps. 106:15. Is. 10:16. 24:16.
m 10:16,17. 18:4. Ps. 50:22. Lam 3: 10. Hos. 5:14.
n Ps. 35:16. 37:12. Lam 2:16.
o 13:24,27. 19:11. Mic. 7:8. p Ps. 22:13,16,17. 35:21. Luke 23:35, 36.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 17—35. We should not despise the wisdom and experience of pious persons in former ages, or the result of their observation: but neither authority, reputation, antiquity, nor greatness, renders men infallible.—The Word of God evinces, that sinners are and will be miserable, in proportion to their crimes, unless they repent and obtain forgiveness. Yet the most wicked may sometimes live long in outward prosperity, and die without any remarkable catastrophe. (Ps. 73:4—9.) On the other hand, the righteous may be destitute, afflicted, and tormented, even until death: yet they shall be supported, comforted, and delivered; and the perfection of their felicity shall be prolonged for ever. But let us apply these truths to our own hearts and consciences, examine our own state and character by them, and cease uncandidly to judge and condemn our brethren. SCOTT.

himself had caused. Comp. the case of Marius, amid the ruins of Carthage. 'Ancient and modern history afford abundance of examples to illustrate this fate of tyrants.' Dr. A. CLARKE.

NOTES.

CHAP. XVI. V. 1—3. If we consider the speech of Eliphaz abstractedly, Job undervalued it: but as it related to the matter in debate, he must be allowed to have had some reason for what he said. SCOTT.

CHAP. XVI. V. 1—5. This ch. begins Job's reply to the discourse of Eliphaz in the foregoing ch. who had represented Job's discourses as idle, unprofitable, and nothing to the purpose; and Job here gives his the same character. Those who are free in passing such censures, must expect to have them retorted; yet, it will only stir up men's passions, and will never convince their judgments, nor set truth in a clear light.

Job here reproves Eliphaz, for needless repetitions, v. 2. unskilful applications—endless impertinence, v. 3.—causeless obstinacy, and the violation of the sacred laws of friendship; this is a cutting reproof, and very affecting, v. 4, 5. It is natural to sufferers to think what they would do, if the tables were turned; but perhaps our hearts may deceive us. We find it easier to discern the reasonableness and importance of a command, when we have occasion to claim the benefit, than when we have occasion to do the duty of it. See the duty we owe our brethren in affliction. 1. We should say and do all we can to encourage their confidence in God, and to support their sinking spirits. Faith and patience are the strength of the afflicted. 2. To assuage their grief, the causes of their grief, if possible, or, however, their sensibility to those causes. Good words cost nothing, but may be of good service to those in sorrow, not only as it is some comfort to see their friends concerned for them, but as they may be so reminded of what, through the prevalency of grief, was forgotten.

V. 6—16. Job's complaint is here as bitter as any where in all his discourses, and he is at a stand whether to smother it or to give it vent. Sometimes the one, and sometimes the other, is a relief to the afflicted, according as the temper or the circumstances are; but Job found help by neither, v. 6. If he complained, he was censured as passionate; if not, as sullen. If he maintained his integrity, that was his crime; if he made no answer to their accusations, his silence was taken for a confession of his guilt. Here is a doleful representation of Job's grievances. O what reason have we to bless God, that we are not making such complaints! He complains,

1. That his family was scattered, v. 7. 'He hath made me weary, of speaking, of forbearing, of my friends, of life itself:' his company was his children and servants, and the good people, that used to meet at his house for religious worship, now they were scattered, and he spent his sabbaths in silence and solitude. He had company indeed, but would rather have been without, for they seemed to triumph in his desolation.

2. That his body was worn away, with diseases and pains, to a perfect skeleton, v. 8. His wrinkles and his leanness were witnesses against him, witnesses of God's displeasure, and such as his friends produced against him to prove him a wicked man. Or, 'They are witnesses for me, that my com-

Verses 4, 5.

A very pathetic turn is here given to the discourse. (4:8—6.) SCOTT.

Verses 6—16.

These vs. contain most grievous complaints, and many harsh expressions, which may easily be accounted for, but cannot be justified. —It is not certain, whether he intended this (9) of the severity, with upon me with their mouth; [q] they have smitten me upon the cheek reproachfully; [r] they have gathered themselves together against me.

11 God hath * delivered me [s] to the ungodly, and [t] turned me over into the hands of the wicked.

12 I was [u] at ease, but he hath [x] broken me asunder: he hath also taken me [y] by my neck, and [z] shaken me to pieces, and [a] set me up for his mark.

13 His [b] archers compass me round about; [c] he cleaveth my reins asunder, and [d] doth not spare; he [e] poureth out my gall upon the ground.

14 He [f] breaketh me with breach upon breach, [g] he runneth upon me like a giant.

15 I have [h] sowed sackcloth upon my skin, and [i] defiled my horn in the dust.

16 My [j] face is foul with weeping, and [k] on mine eye-lids is the shadow of death.

17 Not [l] for any injustice in mine hands:

q 1 K. 22:24. 2 Chr. 18:23. Is. 50:6. Lam. 3:30. Mic. 5:1. Matt. 26:67. John 18:22. Acts 23:2. 2 Cor. 11:20.
r Ps. 35:15. 94:21. Acts 4: 27.
* Heb. shut me up. 1 Sam. 24:18. marg. Ps. 31:8. Rom. 11:32. marg.
s 1:13—19. 2:7. Ps. 7:14. John 19: 16. 2 Cor. 12:7.
t Ps. 27:12.
u 12:3. 3:26. 29:3,18,19.
x 4:10. Ps. 44:19. Lam. 3:4. Matt. 21:44.
y 15:26. Rom. 16:4.
z Lam. 3:11. Ez. 29:7.
a 7:12,20. Lam. 3:12.
b 6:4. Gen. 49:23. Ps. 7:12,13. c 19:27. Lam. 3:13.
d 6:10. Deut. 29:20. Ez. 5:11. Rom. 8:32. 2 Pet. 2:5.
e 20:25. Lam. 2:11.
f Lam. 3:3—5.
g Judg. 15 8.
h 1 K. 21:27. Is. 22:12.
i 30:19. 1 Sam 2:10. Ps. 7:5. 75:5,10.
j Ps. 6:6,7. 31:9. 32:3. 69:3. 102: 3—5,9. Is. 52:14. Lam. 1:16. k 17:7. Ps. 116:3. Jon. 2: Mark 14: 34. l 11:14. 15:20,34. 21:27,28. 22:5—9. 27:6,7. 29:12—17. 31:1,&c. Ps. 7: 3—5. 44:17—21.

plaint is not causeless,' or, 'witnesses to me, that I must die shortly.'

3. That his enemy was a terror, threatened, frightened him, looked stern upon him, and gave all the indications of rage against him, v. 9. This enemy is either, (1.) Eliphaz; who showed himself very much exasperated, and perhaps had expressed himself with these marks of indignation here; and very barbarously both he and the rest used him. Or, (2.) Satan; who perhaps, by divine permission, terrified him with apparitions, as (some think) he terrified our Savior, which put Him into his agonies in the garden; and thus he aimed to make him curse God. It is not improbable he means this enemy. Or, (3.) God Himself: if we understand it of Him, the expressions are indeed as rash as any Job used. God hates none of his creatures; but Job's melancholy did thus represent to him the terrors of the Almighty: and nothing can be more grievous to a good man, than to apprehend God to be his enemy!

4. That all about him were abusive, v. 10. They came upon him as if to swallow him alive, so terrible were their threats, and so scornful their conduct. They offered him all the indignities they could invent, and even smote him on the cheek; and herein many were confederate, they gathered themselves together against him, even the abjects. Herein Job was a type of Christ, as many of the ancients make him: these very expressions are used in the predictions of his sufferings, Ps. 22: 13. They gaped upon me with their mouths; and, Mic. 5: 1. They shall smite the Judge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek, which was literally fulfilled, Matt. 25: 67.

5. That God delivered him into their hands, v. 11. They could have had no power, if it had not been given them from above; he therefore looks beyond them to God, who gave them their commission, as David did when Shimei cursed him; but he thinks it strange, and almost thinks it hard, that those should have power against him who were God's enemies as much as his. God sometimes makes use of wicked men as his sword to one another, Ps. 17: 13. and his rod to his own children, Isa. 10: 5. Herein also Job was a type of Christ, who was delivered into wicked hands, to be crucified and slain, by the determinate counsel and fore-knowledge of God, Acts 2: 23.

6. That God further took him into his own hands too, into which it is a fearful thing to fall, v. 12. 'I was at ease, not fretting and uneasy, as some in the midst of prosperity, who thereby provoke God to strip them; yet He has broken me asunder, put me on the rack of pain, and torn me limb from limb.' God, in afflicting him, had seemed as if He were furious, partial, and cruel; his wrath as relentless as his power was resistless; as if He were unreasonable and insatiable in his executions, v. 13, 14. Note, Even good men, when in great and extraordinary troubles, have much ado not to entertain hard thoughts of God.

7. Some can lessen their troubles by concealing them, holding their heads as high, and putting as good a face on, as ever; but not so Job; he received their impressions, and, as one truly penitent, and patient, humbled himself under the mighty hand of God, v. 15, 16. Sackcloth he thought good enough for such a defiled, distempered body. Those are fond indeed of gay clothing, that will not be weaned from it by sickness and old age, and, as Job was, v. 8. by wrinkles and leanness. He sewed on the sackcloth, as one that resolved to continue his humiliation as long as the affliction continued. He insisted not on any points of honor, but humbled himself under humbling providences; defiled his horn in the dust, and refused the respect that used to be paid to his dignity, power, and eminency. Note, When God brings down our condition, that should bring down our spirits. Better lay the horn in the dust, than lift it up in contradiction to the designs of Providence, and have it broken at last. Eliphaz had represented Job as high, haughty, unhumbled under his affliction; 'No,' says Job, 'I know better things; the dust is now the fittest place for me.' He banished mirth as utterly unseasonable, v. 16. He had not only wept away all his beauty, but almost wept his eyes out. In this also, he was a type of Christ, who was a man of sorrows, and much in tears, and pronounced those blessed that mourn, for they shall be comforted.

V. 17—22. Job's condition was very deplorable; but he here tells us what he had to comfort him.

1. The testimony of his conscience, that he had never allowed himself in any gross sin, v. 17. He had kept a conscience void of offence, (1.) Toward men. 'Not for any injustice in my hands, any wealth I have unjustly got or kept.' Eliphaz had represented him as a tyrant and an oppressor; 'No,' says he, 'I never did any wrong to any man, but always despised the gain of oppression.' (2.) Toward God. Also my prayer is pure, Isa. 1: 15. Eliphaz had charged him with hypocrisy in religion, but he specifies prayer, the great act of religion, and professes that in that he was pure, though not from all infirmity, yet from reigning and allowed guile.

This assertion of his own integrity he backs with a solemn imprecation of shame and confusion to himself, if it were not true, v. 18. If there were any impurity in his prayers, he wishes they might not be accepted. Let my cry have no place. He was willing to be judged by that rule, If I regard iniquity in my heart, God will not hear me. There is another probable sense of these words, that he, as it were, lays his death on his friends, whose harsh censures broke his heart, and charges his blood on them, begging God that its cry might have no place to lie hid, but might come up and be heard by Him that makes inquisition for blood.

2. He could appeal to God's omniscience, v. 19. The witness in our own bosoms will stand us in little stead, if we have not a witness in heaven for us too, for God is greater than our hearts, and we are not to be our own judges; this, therefore, is Job's triumph, My Witness is in heaven. It is an unspeakable comfort to a good man, when under the censure of his brethren, that there is a God, who knows his integrity, and will clear it up sooner or later. See John 5: 31, 37.

3. He might unbosom himself to God, v. 20, 21. Even tears, when sanctified to God, give ease to troubled spirits; and, if men slight our grief, this may comfort us, that God regards them.

m 1 K. 21:27. Is. 22:12.
n 30:19. 1 Sam 2:10. Ps. 7:5. 75:5,10.
o Ps. 6:6,7. 31:9. 32:3. 69:3. 102: 3—5,9. Is. 52:14. Lam. 1:16. p 17:7. Ps. 116:3. Jon. 2: Mark 14: 34.

which Eliphaz had treated him; or whether he meant Satan, who doubtless assaulted him with every horrid and terrifying temptation to drive him to despair; or whether he thus spoke of God, as become his enemy. (M. R. m—o.) (Notes, 1:16—22. 2:7—13. 6:1—4. 10:14—17. 13:24—28.) SCOTT.

(8.) Wrinkles.] Note, Deut. 28:34. (35.) Jerome and others, tr. the word for assembly, by 'joints.' ED.

(10.) 'Here is another living picture of eastern manners. See the exasperated man; he opens his mouth like a wild beast, shows his teeth, then suddenly snaps them together. Again, he pretends to make another snatch, and growls like a tiger. Should he not dare to come near, he moves his hand, as if striking you on the cheek, and says, "I will beat thy kannan, i. e. cheek, thou low-caste fellow."' Roberts, who also notes the expressions, v. 3, 9. 15:7, 16, &c. ID.

(12.) He hath also, &c.] 'This is a favorite way of showing contempt or superiority in the E. and is finished by thrusting the face on the ground.' ROBERTS.

(13.) Gall.] 'I. e. destroying with grievous tortures. As when men have taken and killed a wild beast, they open it, take out the gall and pour it with loathing on the ground.' Henry. The Iliad contains a similar figure. ED.

(14.) The metaphor is from the siege of a city: Note, 2 Chr. 26: 10. ID.

(15.) Horn.] The emblem of power, dignity, and other excellences ered, or defiled my head with dust.' Egyptian monuments, as seizing a vanquished enemy, by a horn-like ornament on the cap, (cut, 1 K. 10: 18, 19,) to slay him. ED.

Verses 17—22.

My friends scorn me. (20) The word (mlts) is rendered an inter notes, and cuts, Ex. 34:29. 17:10. 1 Sam. 2:1. and Ps. 92:10. Job here connects it with prosperity. The cut is from '3 weeks in Palestine.' It is observed to be still in use among the Druses' women of Mt. Lebanon, and is called a tantour. Good, unacquainted with the above illustrations, understands rolled my turban, and supposes turbans were high turbinated caps, (cut, 2 K. 17:6.) of muslin, wound in a spiral wreath: and that these were afterwards reduced to their present shape, i.e. a spiral, truncated cone. The Sept. has, strength; Chal. glory. Syr. and Arab. 'cov-also [m] my prayer is pure.

18 [n] O earth, [o] cover not thou my blood, and [p] let my cry have no place.

19 Also now, behold, [q] my witness is in heaven, and my record is [*] on high.

20 My friends [†] scorn me; but mine eye [r] poureth out tears unto God.

21 Oh, that one might [s] plead for a man with God, as a man pleadeth for his [‡] neighbor!

22 When § a few years are come, then I shall go the way [t] whence I shall not return.

CHAP. XVII.

Job continues his complaints: and shows that his sufferings would astonish the righteous, but not discourage them, 1—10. His hope is not in life, but in death, 11—16.

MY [‖] breath is [a] corrupt, [b] my days are extinct, [c] the graves are ready for me.

2 Are there not [d] mockers with me? and doth not mine eye [¶] continue in their [e] provocation?

3 Lay down now, [f] put me in a surety with thee: who is he that will [g] strike hands with me?

4 For [h] thou hast hid their heart from understanding; therefore shalt thou not exalt them.

If he could but now have the same freedom at God's bar, that men commonly have at the bar of the civil magistrate, he doubted not but to carry his cause, for the Judge Himself was a witness to his integrity. The language of this wish is, that (Isa. 50: 7, 8.) I know that I shall not be ashamed, for He is near that justifies me. Some give a gospel-sense of this v. and the original will very well bear it: and He will plead (i. e. there is one that will plead) for man with God, even the Son of Man, with his friend, or neighbor: and on this we must bottom all our hopes of acceptance with God.

4. Such confidence had he toward God, that he could take pleasure in thinking of the approach of death, when he should be determined to his everlasting state; as one that doubted not but it would be well with him then, v. 22.

CHAP. XVII. V. 1—9. Job's discourse here is somewhat broken, and he passes suddenly from one thing to another, as is usual with men in trouble: but we may reduce what is said to three heads.

I. His deplorable condition, which he describes, to aggravate the great unkindness of his friends, and justify his complaints. He was,

1. A dying man, v. 1. He had said, (ch. 16: 22.) 'When a few years are come.' But 'Why do I talk of years to come? Alas! I am just now ready.' By graves, he means the sepulchres of his fathers, to which he must be gathered: Wherever we go, there is but a step between us and the grave. Whatever is unready, that is ready; it is a bed soon made. If the graves be ready for us, it concerns us to be ready for the graves. The graves for me, so it runs; denoting not only his expectation, but his desire of death.

2. Despised, v. 6. 'He,' (Eliphaz, so some, or rather God, whom he all along acknowledges to be the Author of his calamities) 'has made me a by-word of the people; aforetime, or, to men's faces, publicly, I was as a tabret, that whoever chose might play on;' now they made ballads of him; his name became a proverb; it is so still, As poor as Job. It is common for those who are honored in wealth, to be despised in poverty.

3. A man of sorrows, v. 7. He wept so much, he had almost lost his sight; vexed so much, he had fretted all his flesh away, and was become nothing but skin and bones, 'the shadow of a man.'

II. The ill use his friends made of his miseries; they trampled on him, insulted over, and condemned him as a hypocrite. Hard usage!

1. With their foul censures, and fair promises, as flattery, designed to vex him the more. All this he calls their provocation, v. 2. They did what they could to provoke him, and then condemned him for his resentment of it; but he thinks himself excusable when his eye continued thus in their provocation; it never ceased, and he could never look off it.

2. This was a sign God had hid their heart from understanding, v. 4. Wisdom is a gift God grants to some, and withholds from others, grants at some times, and withholds at others. Those who are void of compassion, are so far void of understanding. It would be a lasting reproach and diminution to them; Therefore shalt Thou not exalt them. Those are certainly kept back from honor, whose hearts are hid from understanding. When God infatuates, He will abase. Surely they who discover so little acquaintance with the methods of Providence, shall not have the honor of deciding this controversy! That is reserved for a man of better sense, and temper, as Elihu afterward appeared to be. It would entail a curse on their families, v. 5. He that thus violates the sacred laws of 5 He [i] that speaketh flattery to his friends, even [j] the eyes of his children shall fail.

6 He hath made me also [k] a by-word of the people, and [] aforetime I was [l] as a tabret.

m 8:5,6. Prov. 15:8. 1 Tim. 2:8.
n Jer. 22:29.
o Gen. 4:11. Neh. 4:5. Is. 26:21. Ez. 24:7.
p 27:9. Ps. 66:18,19. Is. 1:15. 58:9, 10. Jam. 4:3,4.
q 1 Sam. 12:5. Rom. 1:9. 9:1. 2 Cor. 1:23. 11:31. 1 Thes. 2:10.
* Heb. in the high places. 25:2. Ps. 113:5.
† Heb. are my scorners. 4. 12:4,5. 17: 2.
r Ps. 109:4. 142:2. Hos. 12:4,5. Luke 6:11,12. Heb. 5:7. s 9:34,35. 13:3,22. 23:3—7. 31:35. 40: 1—5. Ec. 6:10. Is. 45:9.
‡ Or, friend.
§ Heb. years of number. 14:5,14.
t 7:9,10. 14:10.
‖ Or, spirit is spent.
a 19:17.
b 6:11. 42:16. Is. 57:16.
c 13,14. Ps. 88:3—5. Is. 38:10—14
d 12:4. 13:9. 16:20. 21:3. Ps. 35 14—16. Matt. 27:39—44.
¶ Heb. lodge. Ps. 25:13. 91:1. marg.
e 1 Sam. 1:6,7.
f 9:33. Gen. 43:9. 44:32. Prov. 11: 15. 20:16. Heb. 7:22.
g Prov. 6:1. 11:15. marg. 17:18. 22: 26.
h 2 Sam. 15.31. 17:14. 2 Chr. 25:16. Is. 19:14. Matt. 11:25. 13:11. Rom. 11:8. 1 Cor. 1:20.
i 32:21,22. Ps. 12:2,3. Prov. 20:19. 29:5. 1 Thes. 2:5.
j Ex. 20:5. Deut. 28:65. 1 K. 11:12. Lam. 4:17. k 30.9. 1 K. 9:7. Ps. 44:14.
 Or, before them.
l Gen. 31:27. Is. 5.12.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

We are all very incompetent judges of our own performances; while the speaker is partial, the hearer is often prejudiced; and both parties should watch over themselves, if they would amicably settle controversies, profitably conduct conversation, or even preach and hear the Word of God in a becoming manner.—We are not suitably affected with the sufferings of others, because we 'do not love our neighbor as ourselves.'—The prosperous are commonly troublesome comforters of the afflicted; sympathy and tenderness of spirit are seldom learned, except in the school of tribulation; and the experienced believer, who can make allowances for the anguish of disease, and the force of temptation, and recollects what topics have proved consolatory to himself, best 'knows how to speak a word in season to the weary,' which may strengthen his faith and hope, and assuage his grief.—In great distress, when we can get no relief, we are apt to yield to repining: and, as the believer may then be tempted even to think hardly of God's dealings with him; he may well be borne with, if he speak peevishly and harshly of his fellow creatures.—The consideration of the variety of complicated miseries that a godly man may endure, from the frown and correction of God, the rage and malice of Satan, and the ingratitude and cruelty of men, in his conscience, reputation, connections, soul, and body, should teach us to prepare for trials, and excite our gratitude for our many mercies; while it should warn the sinner to 'flee from the wrath to come.'—How weary and desolate will the wicked be in the eternal world! There they will be the mark of all the arrows of divine vengeance, and incessant weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth, will be their dreadful employment!—But should not the same reflection lead the believer to Gethsemane and Golgotha? SCOTT.

---

preter; Gen 42:23. Job 33:23. And the plural is translated ambassadors; 2 Chr. 32:31. and interpreters; Is. 43:27. marg. and it occurs nowhere else, except in this place. Hence many think it may signify a mediator.—Thus the passage may be rendered, 'My Mediator is my Friend; my eye poureth out tears unto God. And one is pleading for man to God; and the Son of Man for his neighbor.' By a trivial change of the vowel points, the singular number may be admitted; and thus the sentiment expressed may be considered as an additional proof of Job's faith in a Redeemer. (Notes, 19:23—27. 33:19—26.) SCOTT.

NOTES.

CHAP. XVII. V. 1, 2. The nature and violence of Job's disease rendered it painful to him, and offensive to others, when he drew his breath. (M.) ID.

Verses 3—7.

Again Job entreated the Lord, to give him some assurance, that He would soon try his cause, or appoint some impartial judge, to whom he could confidently refer the decision; (16:17—22. 23:3—7. 33:1—7.) for his friends, being judicially infatuated, would never be honored in such a service. He supposed that their former professions of affection for him were mere flattery; or that their doctrine flattered the prosperous, as if they were the favorites of Heaven: or, he assured them, that though he desired fair treatment from them, he did not wish them to flatter him; being sensible that God abhorred flattery, and that those who aimed to advance themselves by it, would heap up disappointment and misery for their children. (29:18—25. 30:1—14. Ez. 33:30—33.) SCOTT.

(3.) 'Lay down, (a pledge, "arrabon," understood,) pledge Thyself to me, i. e. a pledge being deposited, promise for thyself that Thou wilt abide by those things which shall be adjudged or decided in this suit, pending between me and Thee, that Thou wilt not conduct Thyself as a judge, using thy majesty, but as a litigator. But who is there, who will clap hands together with me, to wit, will oblige himself by placing his hand in mine, i. e. who will stipulate with me, and, covenanting by striking hands together, promise for Thee? be surety or answer for Thee? In stipulations and agreements, the striking together of hands was very common, whence that phrase is used for striking a bargain, covenanting, promising, pledging, &c. in Prov. 6:1. 11:15. 17:18. 22:26. Job here treats with God with too great boldness.' ROSENM. Put me, &c.] 'Stake me against Thyself.' GOOD. 'These are law terms, and allude to the custom of a person's giving bail, for his appearance at court on the day of trial.' Scott. in Hewlett. ED.

(6.) And aforetime, &c.] '"And I am become a thing to be spit upon

7 Mine [m] eye also is dim by reason of sorrow, and all my [*] members are [n] as a shadow.

8 Upright men shall be [o] astonied at this, and the innocent shall [p] stir up himself against the hypocrite

9 The righteous also shall [q] hold on his way, and he that hath [r] clean hands shall [†] be stronger and stronger.

10 But as for you all, [s] do ye return, and come now: [t] for I cannot find one wise man among you.

11 ¶ My [u] days are past, [x] my purposes are broken off, even the [‡] thoughts of my heart.

12 They [y] change the night into day: the light is [§] short because of darkness.

13 [z] If I wait, [a] the grave is mine house: [b] I have made my bed in the darkness.

14 I have [‖] said to [c] corruption, Thou art my father: [d] to the worm, Thou art my mother, and my sister.

15 And where is now [e] my hope? as for my m 16:16. Ps. 6:7. 31:9,10. Lam. 5:17.

* Or, thoughts. 11.
n Ps. 109:23,24. Ec. 6:12.
o Is. 73:12—15. Ec. 5:8. Hab. 1:13. Rom. 11:33. p 34:30. Acts 13:46.
q Prov. 4:18. Is. 35:8—10. 1 Pet. 1:5. 1 John 2:19.
r Gen. 20:5. Ps. 24:4. 26:6. 73:13. Is. 1:15,16. Mark 7:2.
† Heb. add strength. Is. 40:29—31. 2 Cor. 12:9,10. s 6:29. Mal. 3:18.
t 4. 15:9. 32:9. 42:7. 1 Cor. 1:20. 6:5.
u 7:6. 9:25,26. Is. 38:10.
x Ec. 9:10. Is. 8:10. Lam. 3:37. Rom. 1:13. 2 Cor. 1:15—17. Jam. 4:13—15.
‡ Heb. possessions.
y 7:3,4,13,14. 24:14—16. Deut. 28:67.
§ Heb. near.
z 14:14. Ps. 27:14. Lam. 3:25,26.
a See on 1.—10:21,22. 30:23.
b Ps. 139:8. Is. 57:2.
‖ Heb. cried, or, called.
c 21:32,33. Ps. 16:10. 49:9. Acts 2:27—31. 13:34—37. 1 Cor. 15:42,53,54.
d 19:26. 24:20. Is. 14:11.
e 4:6. 6:11. 13:15. 19:10.

friendship, forfeits the benefit of it, not only for himself, but for his posterity. They shall, like me, look in vain. Those that wrong their neighbors, may, in the end, wrong their own children more than they are aware of.

3. He appeals from them to God, v. 3. Lay down now, put me in a surety with Thee, i. e. 'Let me be assured God will take the hearing and determining of the cause into his own hands, and I desire no more.' Thus they whose hearts condemn them not, have confidence toward God. Some make Job here to glance at the mediation of Christ, for he speaks of a Surety with God, without whom he durst not appear before God, nor try his cause at his bar. Our English annotations give this reading of the verse: 'Appoint, I pray Thee, my Surety with Thee, namely, Christ, who is with Thee in heaven, and has undertaken to be my Surety: and who is he then that will strike upon mine hand?' i. e. 'Who dares then contend with me? Who shall lay any thing to my charge?' Rom. 8: 32, 33. Christ is the Surety of the better testament, (Heb. 7: 22.) a Surety of God's appointing; and if He undertake for us, we need not fear what can be done against us.

III. The good use the righteous should make of Job's afflictions from God, from his enemies, and from his friends, v. 8, 9. Observe here,

1. How the saints are described, as men, honest, and sincere, that act from a steady principle, with a single eye; innocent, not perfectly so; but innocence is what they aim at, and press toward: sincerity is evangelical innocency, and the upright are said to be innocent from the great transgression, Ps. 19: 13. They are the righteous, who walk in the way of righteousness; clean from the gross pollutions of sin, and, when spotted with infirmities, washed with innocency.

2. How they should be affected: every one would speak of him and his case; and what use will good people make of it? (1.) They will wonder that such a remarkable saint should be such a remarkable sufferer, so useful a man laid aside in the midst of his usefulness. Upright men, though satisfied, that God is wise and holy in all He does, cannot but be astonished at such dispensations; paradoxes not to be unfolded till the mystery of God shall be finished. (2.) What was Paul's care, (1 Thess. 3: 3.) was Job's, that no good man should be moved either from his holiness, or his comfort, by these afflictions, that none should, for the sake hereof, think the worse of the ways or work of God. And what was Paul's comfort, was his too, that the brethren of the Lord would wax confident by his bonds. They would hereby be animated,

[1.] To oppose sin, and to confront the pernicious inferences of evil men, as, That God has forsaken the earth, That it is in vain to serve Him; and the like. Note, The boldness of the attacks of profane people on religion, should sharpen the courage and resolution of its friends and advocates. It is time to stir, when proclamation is made in the gate of the camp, Who is on the Lord's side? When vice is daring, it is no time for virtue, through fear, to hide itself.

[2.] To persevere. The righteous, instead of drawing back, or so much as starting back, at this frightful spectacle, or standing still to deliberate whether he should proceed or no, (allude to 2 Sam. 2: 23.) shall, with so much the more constancy and resolution, hold on his way, and press forward. Acts 20: 24. Those who keep their eye on heaven as their end, will keep their feet in the paths of religion as their way, whatever its difficulties and discouragements.

[3.] In order thereunto, to grow in grace. [Note, 7: 1.] He will also grow stronger and stronger, and, by the sight of other good men's trials, and the experience of his own, he will be made more vigorous and lively in duty, more warm and affectionate, resolute and undaunted: the worse others are, the better he will be. The blustering wind makes the traveller gather his cloak the closer about him, and gird it the faster. The truly wise and good, will be continually growing wiser and better. Proficiency in religion is a good sign of sincerity in it.

V. 10—16. Job's friends had pretended to comfort him with the hopes of his return to a prosperous estate again; now he here shows,

I. That it was their folly to talk so, v. 10. 'Return, and come now, be convinced that you are in an error, and let me persuade you to be of my mind; for I cannot find any wise man among you, that knows how to explain the difficulties of God's providence, or how to apply the consolations of his promises.' Those do not wisely attempt to comfort the afflicted, who draw their comforts from the possibility of their recovery and enlargement in this world; for, though not to be despaired of, it is, at the best, uncertain, and if it should fail, as perhaps it may, the comfort built upon it will fail too. It is therefore our wisdom to comfort ourselves, and others, in distress, with that which will not fail, the promise of God, his love and grace, and a well-grounded hope of eternal life.

II. That it would be much more his folly to heed them; for,

1. All his measures were already broken, and he was full of confusion, v. 11, 12. He owns he had, in his prosperity, often pleased himself both with projects of what he should do, and prospects of what he should enjoy; but now that he looked upon his days as past, and drawing towards a period, all those purposes were broken off, and those expectations dashed. Note, The period of our days will be the period of all our contrivances and hopes for this world; but if, with full purpose of heart, we cleave to the Lord, death will not break off that purpose.

Job, being thus put upon new counsels, was under a constant uneasiness, v. 12. Some, in their vanity and riot, turn night into day and day into night; but Job did so, through trouble and anguish of spirit, which was a hinderance both to the repose of the night, and to the entertainments of the day. Deut. 28: 67. See what reason we have to be thankful, for the health and ease which enable us to welcome both the shadows of the evening and the light of the morning.

---

in the face." The word tophet [tr. tabret in our vers.] is from the Arab. taphapha, he is detested in spitting upon, and saying, "tuffa." i. e. phy! For the Arabs are wont, when they see or hear any thing base from another, to spit, pronouncing as it were this word tuffa, i. e. phy! and contracting their brows to curse the person. Thus the Heb. and Arab. phrase agrees with that Aramaic phrase Raca, Matt. 5:22. which comes from the verb rqq, to spit, and means sputatilicum, a thing to be spit upon. Some render tophet, a drum, or tabret, and explain it by the French phrase, "Je suis mené au tambourin," used to express that one is a laughing-stock. But the word lepanim (in the face) never means openly, publicly.' ROSENM.

Verses 8, 9.

Upright believers, in different parts and ages of the world, would hear how this conscientious servant of God had been afflicted, and how his friends had treated him; at which they would be greatly astonished. But this would excite them to distinguish themselves from hypocrites, and set themselves against them; especially against such as condemned others merely because they were afflicted. And when God should make known Job's real character, and the reason of his extraordinary trials; his example would be an adjudged case, that no adversity could prove a man to be wicked, or an object of divine wrath. This would be a great encouragement to the righteous, to hold on their way, in the midst of difficulties, reproaches, and suspicions; nay, to grow stronger in faith under those very trials, which detected and turned aside the hypocrite. Some explain the passage, as a wish, 'Let the upright, &c.' but, in fact, these have been the effects of Job's sufferings in numberless instances: and this was one grand design for which they were permitted. 'Ye have heard of the patience of Job; and have seen the end of the Lord, that the Lord is very pitiful and of tender mercy.' (Jam. 5:11.)—Here a glimpse of divine light, and a lively exercise of faith and hope, broke forth in the midst of the despondency of Job's discourse. (19:23—27. 23:8—12.) SCOTT.

Verses 11, 12.

The old translation seems here to be both more literal and intelligible. 'My days are past, my enterprises are broken, and the thoughts of my heart have changed the night for the day, and the light that approached, for darkness.'—All the purposes which Job had formed, however wise, pious, or benevolent, were, as he supposed, finally come to nothing, as his days were past. (Ps. 146:3,4. Ec. 9:10.) And now the thoughts which possessed his heart turned the night into day, by preventing his rest. Yet when the light approached, it was turned into darkness by the gloom of his disquieted mind.—'My thoughts will not let me sleep in the night, nor enjoy pleasure in the day.' Patrick. (Notes, 7:1—6, 13, 14.) ID.

Verses 13—16.

Whenever Job thought of waiting, in hope of his sufferings being terminated, that thought was associated with the idea of lodging in the dark and silent grave. His disease, and his daily reflections, familiarized his mind to corruption and the worms; and he was induced to claim kindred with them, through the present loathsomeness of his hope, who shall see it?

16 They shall go down to [f] the bars of the pit, when our [g] rest together is in the dust.

CHAP. XVIII.

Bildad sharply reproves Job for presumption and impatience, 1—4. He enlarges on the miseries of the wicked, 5—21.

THEN answered [a] Bildad the Shuhite, and said,
2 How [b] long will it be ere ye make an end of words? [c] mark, and afterwards we will speak.
3 Wherefore [d] are we counted as beasts, and reputed vile in your sight?
4 He [e] teareth [*] himself in his anger: [f] shall the earth be forsaken for thee? and shall [g] the rock be removed out of his place?
5 Yea, [h] the light of the wicked shall be put out, and the [i] spark of his fire shall not shine.
6 The light shall be dark in his tabernacle, and his [†] candle shall be put out with him.

f 18:13,14. 33:18—28. Ps. 88:4—6. 143: 7. Is. 38:17,18. Jon. 2:6.
g 3:17—19. Ez. 37:11. 2 Cor. 1:9.
a 2:11. 8:1. 25:1. 42:7—9.
b 8:2. 11:2. 13:5,6. 16:2,3. c 13:5,6,17. 21:2. 33:1. Prov. 18:13. Jam. 1:19.
d 12:7,8. 17:4,10. Ps. 73:22. Ec. 3: 18. Rom. 12:16.
e 5:2. 13:14. 16:9. Jon. 4:9. Mark 9:18. Luke 9:39.
* Heb. his soul.
f 4:18. Ez. 9:9.
g 14:18. Is. 54:10. Matt. 24:35.
h 20:5. Prov. 4:19. 13:9. 20:20. 24:20.
i Is. 50:11.
† Or, lamp. 21:17. marg. Ps. 18:28. Rev. 18:23.

2. All his expectations from this world would very shortly be buried in the grave with him; so that it was a jest for him to think of such mighty things as they had flattered him with the hopes of; (ch. 5: 19.—8: 21.—11: 17.) 'Alas, you do but make a fool of me.'

(1.) He saw himself just dropping into the grave. A convenient house, an easy bed, and agreeable relations, are some of those things which we take satisfaction in in this world: Job expected not any of these above ground; all he felt, and all he had in view, was unpleasing and disagreeable, but under ground he expected them, v. 13, 14. Note, In all our prosperity, it is good to keep death in prospect. The grave is a house; to the wicked a prison-house; (ch. 24: 19, 20.) to the godly Bethabara, a passage-house in their way home. We must every one of us shortly remove to this house, and it is our wisdom to provide accordingly. We are all of us near akin to corruption and worms. It is, therefore, good to make ourselves familiar with them, by conversing much with them in our thoughts and meditations, which would very much help us [to rise] above the inordinate love of life and fear of death.

(2.) He saw all his hopes from this world dropping into the grave with him, v. 15, 16. He is not hopeless, but his hope is not there where they would have it be. What is his hope, he will tell us, ch. 19: 25. 'But as for the hopes you would buoy me up with, they shall go down with me to the bars of the pit; you are dying men, and cannot make good your promises, I am a dying man, and cannot enjoy the good you promise. Since, therefore, our rest will be together in the dust, let us all lay aside the thoughts of this world, and set our hearts upon another.' Job and his friends could not agree now, but they will both be quiet in the grave; the dust of that will shortly stop their mouths, and put an end to the controversy. Let the foresight of this cool the heat of all disputers.

CHAP. XVIII. In this ch. Bildad makes a second assault on Job. In his first discourse, (ch. 8.) he had given him encouragement to hope that all should yet be well with him. But here, there is not a word of that; he is grown more peevish, and so far from being convinced by Job's reasonings, he is but more exasperated: he seems, all along, to have an eye to Job's complaints of the miserable condition he was in, that he was in the dark, bewildered, ensnared, terrified, and hastening out of the world. 'This,' says Bildad, 'is the condition of a wicked man; therefore, thou art one.'

